Grigorian is an exciting Alvaro; no other tenor today, and few in the past, could fulfil the demands of the part as easily as he does:the confident spinto thrust in the voice is just right. He effortlessly rises to the generosity of phrase the role calls for and fills the many elegiac phrases with the feeling of melancholy they need. Only Bergonzi for Gardelli surpasses him by virtue of more idiomatic Italian and a finer line, but the superiority is slight and Bergonzi doesn't have to contend with the added music of 1862.

Grigorian finds a worthy adversary in Putilin's Carlo. Putilin need fear no comparisons even with the admirable Cappuccilli for Gardelli. Although, like his predecessors and coevals in the role, he is shy of following Verdi's dynamic markings, in other respects his refulgent baritone is just the instrument for Carlo and he breathes the right fire in his implacable hatred of his imagined enemy Alvaro. Borodina easily encompasses the high-lying (for a mezzo) demands of Preziosilla and sounds the right seductive and martial notes for her role. The one disappointment is the singing of the veteran Kit, who sounds grey and woolly, with no real centre to his tone. As the humorous element in Verdi's mix, Zastavny seems at first a shade faceless, but as his part progresses, one begins to admire the fact that it is being sung truly, not guyed, which makes his sermon seem a proper successor to the monologues of Rigoletto and Macbeth, albeit in a comic vein. The minor parts are well done. Excellent recording.

La forza del destino H
Maria Caniglia sop Leonora; Galliano Masini ten Don Alvaro; Carlo Tagliabue bar Don Carlo; Tancredi Pasero bass Padre Guardiano; Ebe Stignani mez Preziosilla; Saturno Meletti bar Fra Melitone; Ernesto Dominici bass Marquis of Calatrava; Giuseppe Nessi ten Trabuco; Liana Avogadro mez Curra;
Italian Broadcasting Authority Chorus and Orchestra / Gino Marinuzzi
Naxos Historical mono ② 8 110206/7 Ⓢ
(154 minutes: ADD). Notes included
Recorded 1941

This is a fascinating, unmissable set both in historic and musical terms. Marinuzzi, a Toscanini coeval at La Scala, was chosen as conductor, and it is his only complete recording of an opera. The recording took place in May 1941 and was issued on 78rpm discs by Cetra. After the war Parlophone, which was then in charge of Cetra recordings in Britain, issued – in desultory fashion – a few separate discs. Sadly the whole version has never had the currency its great merits deserve, not at least as the first complete set (bar one traditionally cut scene) of the work and one with an entirely Italian cast. Now we have it to enjoy at super-budget price and in admirable transfers from original Cetra pressings, by Ward Marston.

For the recording Marinuzzi had assembled a vintage cast of Italian singers of the day. Caniglia herself rightly considered her Leonora here as one of her finest recordings: one can hear why in her committed, vibrant and often very sensitive singing: she even attempts some of the refined pianissimos that graced the reading of this role by her near-contemporary, Zinka Milanov. It is a performance imbued with spiritual yearning – exactly what's wanted. By her side Masini's Alvaro is obviously a man of action with his blade-like, spinto tenor and sense of desperation at Alvaro's plight. If he is occasionally too lachrymose that is only a sign of his empathy with his role. As Alvaro's implacable antagonist, Don Carlo, Tagliabue provides dependable tone and an authentically styled interpretation of a kind seldom heard today. The pair's final and fatal encounter is one of the score's and the set's highlights.

Stignani, in her absolute prime, is a formidable Preziosilla, full in tone and clear in her passagework, exemplary in every way. Marston has made the recording as amenable as is possible. In any case it would be worth suffering much worse sound than this for such a satisfying traversal on all sides of this inspired score.

La forza del destino H
Stella Roman sop Leonora; Frederick Jagel ten Don Alvaro; Lawrence Tibbett bar Don Carlo; Ezio Pinza bass Padre Guardiano; Irra Petina mez Preziosilla; Salvatore Baccaloni bass Melitone; Louis d 'Angelo bass Marquese; Thelma Votipka mez Curra; Alessio de Paolis ten Trabuco; Lorenzo Alvary bass Mayor; John Gurney bass Surgeon; Metropolitan Opera Chorus and Orchestra, New York / Bruno Walter
Naxos Historical mono ③ 8 110038/40 Ⓢ
(168 minutes: AAD). Recorded live in 1943

There has never been quite so electrifying a Forza as Walter's vital, brilliantly executed reading, which encapsulates the essence of the forthcoming drama. It confirms what few may know today, that Walter was a superb interpreter of Verdi. Yet this was the first time he had conducted Forza, so his lithe, finely honed reading is all the more remarkable. The other revelation is the Leonora of Stella Roman, a greatly underrated soprano brought to the Met in 1941, who yields few points to such notable interpreters of the part as Ponselle, Milanov and Tebaldi. They apart, you would go far to hear a Leonora so well equipped for the role, and so committed to it, one who uses her warm, generous voice to unerring effect in projecting the woman's dire predicament.

Padre Guardiano appears in the guise of Pinza, none better, and sounding, one uncertain high E apart, secure, concerned and authoritative. Jagel as Don Alvaro passes easily the test of the taxing aria of sad recollection at the start of Act 3. Tibbett as Don Carlo compels attention at every entry with his distinctive timbre and faultless style, but truth to tell the glorious tone had dulled since his great days in the 1930s and at times he sounds stretched by the part. Both his arias suffer cuts. Carlo's second (of three) duets with Alvaro is also excised as was then the custom, and strettas throughout are foreshortened. Baccaloni enjoys himself hugely as Melitone and obviously relishes his encounters with his superior, the Padre Guardiano, the two Italians revelling in the text. Petina is a lively but lightweight Preziosilla.

The sound is a bit crackly and restricted but good enough to enjoy an absorbing account of the score. This vivid version has much to commend it at the price.

Additional recommendations
La forza del destino
Price Leonora Domingo Don Alvaro Milnes Don Carlo John Alldis Choir; London Symphony Orchestra /Levine
RCA ③ 74321 39502-2 (171 minutes: DDD:10/87). Ⓜ
Notes, text and translation included

A well-cast set and a strong recommendation. Leontyne Price followers will be tempted no doubt, but note she is past her prime here. The recording is uncut.

Callas Leonora Tucker Don Alvaro Tagliabue H
Don Carlo Chorus and Orchestra of La Scala, Milan /Serafin
EMI ③ 556323-2 (164 minutes: ADD:10/87). Ⓕ
Notes, text and translation included

Callas is superb as Leonora and, Tagliabue aside, the rest of the cast turn in fine performances. Serafin does, however, make some cuts.

I Lombardi alla prima crociata

June Anderson sop Giselda; Luciano Pavarotti ten Oronte; Samuel Ramey bass Pagano; Richard Leech ten Arvino; Ildebrando d 'Arcangelo bass Pirro; Yanni Yannissis bass Acciano; Jane Shaulis mez Sofia; Anthony Dean Griffey ten Prior; Patricia Racette mez Viclinda; Chorus and Orchestra of the Metropolitan Opera, New York /James Levine
Decca ② 455 287-2DHO2 (129 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Notes, text and translation included. Recorded 1996

Pavarotti appeared in the Metropolitan Opera production of I Lombardi in 1993 and this recording is the delayed result. He is in good voice and sings Oronte's aria with fine legato , binding the decorative turns of the cabaletta beautifully into the vocal line and throwing in a respectable top C to show us he still can. I Lombardi is a viscerally exciting opera. The first complete recording, conducted by Lamberto Gardelli (Philips), set a good benchmark in 1972, but that need not deter us from welcoming this lively newcomer. The Met Opera Orchestra plays with splendid precision and, as Turks and Crusaders, women of the harem and virgins, the Met Chorus has a high old time on both sides of I Lombardi's war-zone. Levine himself has improved beyond recognition as a Verdian; this studio recording is well paced and has a good sense of theatre. Everything is swift and crisp on the surface.

The best role goes to the soprano Giselda, specially tailored for the delicate skills of Erminia Frezzolini. Among the current crop of Verdi sopranos, June Anderson is probably as plausible a modern Frezzolini as any. There is some lovely, pure-toned singing in her big scene at the end of Act 2 and her coloratura is shining bright, both in this cabaletta and later in 'In fondo all' alma'. Samuel Ramey makes a relatively lightweight Pagano, who alone decorates his second verses. In the second tenor role Richard Leech holds his own, although his voice does not take well to the microphone. Ildebrando d'Arcangelo proudly represents the younger generation of Italian singers in the small role of Pirro, and Patricia Racette sings brightly as Viclinda.

Gardelli's crusading first recording has a rough Italianate vigour that lovers of early Verdi will enjoy, but Levine and his forces more than hold their ground with pace and brilliance, and a bright, modern recording with on balance a better cast and the voices well forward.

Luisa Miller

Montserrat Caballé sop Luisa; Luciano Pavarotti ten Rodolfo; Sherrill Milnes bar Miller; Bonaldo Giaiotti bass Count Walter; Anna Reynolds mez Federica; Richard Van Allan bass Wurm; Annette Celine mez Laura; Fernando Pavarotti ten Peasant; London Opera Chorus;National Philharmonic Orchestra / Peter Maag
Double Decca ② 473 365-2 (144 minutes: ADD) Ⓜ
Notes, text and translation included
Recorded 1970s ●

This transitional work shows Verdi enhancing his skills and refining is musical style. The plot, based on a Schiller drama, involves the tragedy and death of Luisa and her beloved Rodolfo brought about by the evil Wurm, apt predecessor of Verdi 's Iago. The title-role could not find a more appealing interpreter than Caballé, who spins a fine line and is highly responsive to Luisa's sad situation. She is partnered by Pavarotti at the height of his powers as Rodolfo. He excels in 'Quando le sere al lacido', the work's most famous aria. As Luisa's equivocal father, Miller, Milnes gives one of is best performances on disc and Van Allan is a properly snarling Wurm.

Maag, an underrated conductor, directs a strong, well-proportioned performance. He gives the impression of being in love with this opera and he goes right to the heart of the score, finding its seriousness as well as its fire. The last act is specially fine, containing what are regarded as among the gramophone classics, the two duets of Luisa, first with her father, then with Rodolfo. The production is unobtrusively effective in creation of atmosphere and is spaciously recorded.

Additional recommendation
Luisa Miller
Ricciarelli Luisa Domingo Rodolfo Chorus and Orchestra of the Royal Opera House, Covent Garden /Maazel
DG ② 459 481-2GTA2 (133 minutes: ADD: 5/88^{R}) Ⓜ
Notes, text and translation included

Finely sung performances, and a close rival to Decca's set, though Maazel's handling of the score is rather prosaic by comparison with Maag's.

Macbeth

Piero Cappuccilli bar Macbeth; Shirley Verrett mez Lady Macbeth; Nicolai Ghiaurov bass Banquo; Plácido Domingo ten Macduff; Antonio Savastano ten Malcolm; Carlo Zardo bass Doctòr; Giovanni Foiani bass Servant; Sergio Fontana bass Herald; Alfredo Mariotti bass Assassin; Stefania Malagú mez Lady-in-waiting; Chorus and Orchestra of La Scala, Milan /Claudio Abbado
DG The Originals ② 449 732-2GOR2 (154 minutes: ADD). Notes, text and translation included. Ⓜ
Recorded 1976 ●

Verdi's lifelong admiration for Shakespeare resulted in only three operas based on his plays. Macbeth, the first, originally written in 1847, was extensively revised in 1865. Without losing the direct force of the original, Verdi added greater depth to is first ideas. Once derided as being un-Shakespearian, it is now recognised as a masterpiece for its psychological penetration as much as for its subtle melodic inspiration.

Abbado captures perfectly the atmosphere of dark deeds and personal ambition leading to tragedy, projected by Verdi, and his reading holds the opera's disparate elements in the score under firm control, catching its interior tensions. He is well supported by his Scala forces. Shirley Verrett may not be ideally incisive or Italianate in accent as Lady Macbeth, but she peers into the character's soul most convincingly. As ever, truly inspired by Abbado, Cappuccilli is a suitably daunted and introverted Macbeth who sings a secure and unwavering legato. Domingo's upright Macduff and Ghiaurov's doom-laden Banquo are both admirable in their respective roles.

Additional recommendation

Macbeth 🅷

Mascherini Macbeth Callas Lady Macbeth Tajo Banquo Chorus and Orchestra of La Scala, Milan /de Sabata

EMI mono ② 566447-2 (139 minutes: ADD: 1/94) Ⓜ

Notes, text and translation included. Live recording

Callas's portrayal of Lady Macbeth is definitive and Victor de Sabata's conducting electrifying. However, the rest of the cast are not up to much, and the recorded sound is poor. A set for Callas fans only.

Nabucco

Tito Gobbi bar Nabucco; Bruno Prevedi ten Ismaele; Carlo Cava bass Zaccaria; Elena Suliotis sop Abigaille; Dora Carral sop Fenena; Anna d'Auria sop Anna; Giovanni Foiani bass High Priest of Baal; Walter Krautler ten Abdallo
Vienna Opera Orchestra; Vienna State Opera Chorus / Lamberto Gardelli

Decca ② 417 407-2DH2 (121 minutes: ADD) Ⓕ

Notes, text and translation included.

Recorded 1965. ●

The years have hardly lessened the excitement of listening to this vigorous, closely-knit performance. One realises why we were all amazed by Suliotis's account of the role of Abigaille. Her singing seizes you by the throat through its raw depiction of malice and through its youthful, uninhibited power. With the benefit of hindsight one can ear how a voice treated so carelessly and unstintingly could not last long, and so it was to be; but we should be glad for the brightness of the meteor while it flashed all too briefly through the operatic firmament. As an interpretation, her Abigaille seems a little coarse set beside the refinements shown by Scotto for Muti on EMI. However, Suliotis can manage by nature what Scotto has to conjure up by art, and she is certainly a subtler artist than Dimitrova on the wayward Sinopoli/DG version.

Gobbi, nearing the end of his illustrious career in 1965, remains the most convincing interpreter on record of the crazed king. The voice may have become a shade hard and uningratiating, but his use of Italian and his colouring of his tone, finally his pathos, are certainly not rivalled by Cappuccilli (Sinopoli). Carlo Cava exudes implacable fury as old Zaccaria, but he is inclined to go through his tone at forte . Prevedi is more than adequate as Ismaele, Carral less than adequate as Fenena (here DG score with Valentini Terrani).

One of the main assets of the Decca remains Gardelli's prompt, unfussy, and yet thrillingly delivered interpretation, clearly conveyed to his excellent Viennese forces. It is much more steadily and convincingly paced than Sinopoli's reading. The recording is forward and has plenty of presence, but it now sounds a little boxy beside the greater spaciousness of the DG. But the panache of the Decca enterprise silences criticism (except when the minute cuts in Nabucco's part are conceived). It is a pleasure to hear the bold inspiration of Verdi's first triumph conveyed with such conviction.

Listen to the Act 1 finale and you are sure to be won over to the set as an entity.

Otello

Plácido Domingo ten Otello; Cheryl Studer sop Desdemona; Sergei Leiferkus bar Iago; Ramón Vargas ten Cassio; Michael Schade ten Roderigo; Denyce Graves mez Emilia; Ildebrando d'Arcangelo bass Lodovico; Giacomo Prestia bass Montano; Philippe Duminy bass Herald;
Hauts-de-Seine Maîtrise; Chorus and Orchestra of the Opéra-Bastille, Paris / Myung-Whun Chung

DG ② 439 805-2GH2 (132 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ

Notes, text and translation included

Recorded 1993 ●●

Just as Othello is a difficult play to bring off in the theatre, so Otello is a difficult opera to bring off out of it. For some years now, Domingo has been, on stage, the greatest Otello of our age. On record, though, he has had less success. Leiferkus and Domingo have worked closely together in the theatre; and it shows in scene after scene –nowhere more so than in the crucial sequence in Act 2 where Otello so rapidly ingests Iago's lethal poison. By bringing into the recording studio the feel and experience of a stage performance – meticulous study subtly modified by the improvised charge of the moment – both singers help defy the jinx that so often afflicts Otello on record. The skill of Leiferkus's performance is rooted in voice and technique: clear diction, a very disciplined rhythmic sense and a mastery of all ornament down to the most mordant of mordents. Above all, he is always there (usually stage right in this recording), steely-voiced, rabbiting on obsessively. We even hear his crucial interventions in the great Act 3 concertato.

Domingo is in superb voice; the sound seems golden as never before. Yet at the same time, it is a voice that is being more astutely deployed. To take that cruellest of all challenges to a studio-bound Otello, the great Act 3 soliloquy 'Dio! mi potevi', Domingo's performance is now simpler, more inward, more intense. It helps that his voice has darkened, winning back some of its russet baritonal colourings.

Chung's conducting is almost disarmingly vital. Verdi's scoring is more Gallic than Germanic. The score sounds very brilliant in the hands of the excellent Opéra-Bastille orchestra, and, in Act 4, very beautiful. Maybe Chung is wary of the emotional depths and, occasionally, the rhythmic infrastructure is muddled and unclear. And yet, the freshness is all gain. He is already a master of the big ensemble and the line of an act. Tension rarely slackens. On the rare occasions when it does, the mixing and matching of takes is probably to blame.

Studer's is a carefully drawn portrait of a chaste and sober-suited lady. Perhaps Verdi had a sweeter-voiced singer in mind for this paragon of 'goodness, resignation, and self-sacrifice' (Verdi's words, not Shakespeare's). Studer's oboe tones keep us at a certain distance, yet you will look in vain for a better Desdemona. What's more, Studer is a singer who can single-mindedly focus the drama afresh, as she does more than once in Act 3. DG 's recording is clear and unfussy and satisfyingly varied; Studer, in particular, is much helped by the beautifully open acoustic the engineers provide for the closing act. This is undoubtedly the best Otello on record since the early 1960s. It also happens to be the first time on disc that a great Otello at the height of his powers has been successfully caught in the context of a recording that can itself be generally considered worthy of the event, musically and technically.

Otello

Giuseppe Giacomini ten Otello; Dame Margaret Price sop Desdemona; Matteo Manuguerra bar Iago; Dino di Domenico ten Cassio; Alain Gabriel ten Roderigo; Martine Mahé mez Emilia; Luigi Roni bass Lodovico; Vincent le Texier bass-bar Montano; Anton Kúrñava bass Herald; Slovak Philharmonic Chorus; Les Petits Chanteurs de Bordeaux; Orchestre National de Bordeaux Aquitaine / Alain Lombard

Forlane ② UCD216774/75 (128 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ

Notes, text and translation included

Recorded live in 1991 ●

On the evidence of this Otello, and much else, Giacomini is more viscerally exciting than any of the famous Three. Certainly no tenor in this role since Del Monaco in his prime had the elemental, almost frightening power evinced by Giacomini's reading, but his talents go well beyond the possession of a real tenore robusto. His dark, louring tone and agonised delivery of the text exactly match the passion and jealousy of the Moor, alternately achingly sorrowful as he imagines his wife's infidelities, and fierily tormented as he rants and raves at her supposed wrongdoing. There is much to study in this searing interpretation, which is on a par with Vinay's for Toscanini and sung in the same dark-grained, tormented fashion.

Giacomini's overwhelming portrayal is worthily supported. Dame Margaret Price provides rounded, cleanly produced tone, even if there are a few signs of wear, and her interpretation – in response to a real occasion – is emotionally compelling. In the Act 3 duet, she brings to the passage beginning 'Mi guarda!' and the line 'E son io l'innocente' the depth of Desdemona's heart-stricken soul as she tries to defend herself against Otello's accusations, and her Act 4 scene is shaped and executed with the expected sense of impending doom.

Matteo Manuguerra, an experienced and sympathetic Verdian, was already in his mid-sixties when this performance took place and there are times when his voice has to be husbanded, but he shows much intelligence in portraying the subtlety of Iago's evil. The smaller roles are decently if not exceptionally cast.

Alain Lombard keeps the performance consistently on the boil. He handles the public scenes, most notably the Act 3 ensemble (given uncut), with the urgency and large scale they call for. His chorus and orchestra, while not quite in the highest class, perform with keen awareness of the score's pithy quality. This set may not entirely challenge the hegemony of the 1947 Toscanini and Serafin sets, but it is histrionically exciting, largely because of the live ambience and there is a straightforward honesty about it that has eluded more glamorous recordings. Stage noise is seldom in evidence. The recording is at times over-resonant, but catches the excitement of the occasion. With Giacomini giving such an authentically vivid account of the title-role, most Verdians will want to own this set.

Additional recommendations

Otello

Domingo Otello Scotto Desdemona Milnes Iago National Philharmonic Orchestra; Ambrosian Opera Chorus / Levine Ⓜ

RCA ② 74321 39501-2 (134 minutes: ADD: 3/86^{R}) ●

For some this is the finest of Domingo's several recorded Otellos. Also, Scotto's Desdemona is one of the most moving on disc. At mid price this set is a real winner.

Vickers Otello Rysanek Desdemona Gobbi Iago Rome Opera Chorus and Orchestra / Serafin

RCA ② 09026 63180-2 (144 minutes: ADD: 11/88^{R}) Ⓜ

Tito Gobbi 's Iago remains irreplaceable (except possibly for Giuseppe Valdengo's for Toscanini), and Jon Vickers is a superb Otello, more metallic and heroic than Domingo though not necessarily more sensitive.

Rigoletto

Leonard Warren bar Rigoletto; Bidú Sayão sop Gilda; Jussi Björling ten Duke; Norman Cordon bass Sparafucile; Martha Lipton contr Maddalena; William Hargrave bass Monterone; Thelma Altman sop Giovanna; Richard Manning ten Borsa; George Cehanovsky bar Marullo; Maxine Stellman mez Countess Ceprano; John Baker bass Count Ceprano; Metropolitan Opera Chorus and Orchestra, New York /Cesare Sodero H 💰

Naxos Historical ② 8 110051/2 (116 minutes: ADD)Ⓢ

Recorded live in 1945 ●●

This performance marked the return of Björling to the Met after a wartime break of four years spent mostly in his native Sweden. And what a return it was: at 34 he was at the absolute peak of his powers and sings a Duke of Mantua imbued with supreme confidence and tremendous brio – just try the start of the Quartet. He and the house clearly revel in his display of tenor strength, yet that power is always tempered by innate artistry. If not a subtle interpreter, he is always a thoughtful one, and never indulges himself or his audience.

Similarly, Warren was, at the time, at the zenith of his career. Vocally he is in total command of the role and the house. His reading, although slightly extroverted in some areas, evinces a firm tone, a secure line and many shades of colour. He is at is very best in his two duets with Gilda (sadly and heinously cut about) and no wonder, given the beautiful, plangent singing of Sayão, whose 'Caro nome' is so delicately phrased, touching and keenly articulated. 'Tutte le feste' is still better, prompting Paul Jackson (who in general is unjustifiably hard on the performance in Saturday Afternoons at the old Met, Duckworth:1992) to comment that Sayão's 'lovely, pliant, fully rounded tones are immediately affecting'. Indeed, in spite of the merits of the two male principals, it is her truly memorable interpretation that makes this set essential listening.

All round, there are few recordings that match this one for vocal distinction – perhaps only the Serafin-Callas-Gobbi on EMI and the Giulini-Cotrubas-Cappuccilli on DG. They are much more expensive but, of course, boast superior sound (there are moments of distortion here, though not too many). Björling and Warren both made later studio sets, but neither matches his live contribution here, off the stage.

The final virtue of this absorbing experience is the conducting of the little-known Sodero. His moderate – but never sluggish – tempos allow for almost ideal articulation on all sides, and his insistence on letting us hear the score so clearly makes one regret even more all those excisions then common in the opera house and the studios. This is a set worth £10 or so of any Verdian's money.

Rigoletto 🄷

Tito Gobbi bar Rigoletto; Maria Callas sop Gilda; Giuseppe di Stefano ten Duke; Nicola Zaccaria bass Sparafucile; Adriana Lazzarini mez Maddalena; Plinio Clabassi bass Monterone; Giuse Gerbino mez Giovanna; Renato Ercolani ten Borsa; William Dickie bar Marullo; Elvira Galassi sop Countess Ceprano; Carlo Forti bass Count Ceprano; Chorus and Orchestra of La Scala, Milan /Tullio Serafin

EMI mono ② 556327-2 (118 minutes: ADD) Ⓕ
Notes, text and translation included
Recorded 1955 ●●

That one recording should continue to hold sway over many other attractive comers after 45 years is simply a tribute to Callas, Gobbi, Serafin and Walter Legge. Whatever the merits of its successors, and they are many, no Rigoletto has surpassed Gobbi in tonal variety, line, projection of character and understanding of what Rigoletto is about; no Gilda has come anywhere near Callas in meaningful phrasing – listen to 'Caro nome' or 'Tutte le feste' on any other set if you are disbelieving – nor achieved such a careful differentiation of timbre before and after her seduction; no conductor matches Serafin in judging tempo and instrumental detail on a nicety; nor benefited from a chorus and orchestra bred in the tradition of La Scala; no producer has equalled Legge in recording voices rather than the space round them. And di Stefano? Well, he may not be so stylish a Duke as some others, but the 'face' he gives his singing, and the sheer physical presence he conveys, not to mention his forward diction, are also unique in this opera.

Nothing in this world is perfect, and so there are some small drawbacks here. Serafin sadly makes small cuts in the first Gilda-Rigoletto duet and omits entirely the Duke's cabaletta as used to be practice in the theatre. Gobbi could be said not to have quite the weight of voice ideally called for by a Verdi baritone role. Finally, the recording, although immeasurably improved from previous issues of the set, still has one or two places of distortion obviously present on the original tape. In every other way, this remains the classic performance on record, and one that should be on the shelf of every self-respecting Verdi collector.

Simon Boccanegra

Piero Cappuccilli bar Simon Boccanegra; Mirella Freni sop Amelia; José Carreras ten Gabriele; Nicolai Ghiaurov bass Fiesco; José van Dam bass-bar Paolo; Giovanni Foiani bass Pietro; Antonio Savastano ten Captain; Maria Fausta Gallamini sop Maid; Chorus and Orchestra of La Scala, Milan / Claudio Abbado

DG The Originals ② 449 752-2GOR2 Ⓜ
(136 minutes: ADD). Notes, text and translation included. Recorded 1977 ●●

This famous recording has become a gramophone classic, a performance in the studio after a series of performances at La Scala in the Strehler staging. The close, slightly claustro- phobic recording exactly mirrors the mood of nefarious activities and intrigues following Boccanegra's rise to be Doge of Genoa, he and his lovely daughter victims of the dark deeds round them. In his plebeian being, clement exercise of authority and warm, fatherly love, Simon Boccanegra is made for Cappuccilli, who, under Abbado's tutelage, sings it not only con amore but with exemplary, delicately tinted tone and unbelievably long-breathed phrasing. As his daughter Amelia, Freni was just entering er quasi-spinto phase and expands her lyric voice easily into the greater demands of this more dra- matic role. Similarly heavier duties had not yet tarnished the youthful ardour and sap in the tone of the 30-year-old Carreras. As the implacable Fiesco, Ghiaurov exudes vengeful command, and van Dam evil machinations as the villain Paolo. Over all presides Abbado in what remains one of his greatest recordings, alert to every facet of the wondrous score, timing every scene, in an opera tricky to pace, to near-perfec- tion, and in sum bringing theatrical drama into the home. This set should now be an essential adornment to any reputable collection of Verdi.

Simon Boccanegra H

Tito Gobbi bar Simon Boccanegra; Victoria de los Angeles sop Amelia; Giuseppe Campora ten Gabriele; Boris Christoff bass Fiesco; Walter Monachesi bar Paolo; Paolo Dari bar Pietro; Paolo Caroli ten Captain; Silvia Bertona mez Maid; Chorus and Orchestra of the Rome Opera House / Gabriele Santini

EMI Références mono ② 567483-2 Ⓜ

(119 minutes: ADD). Notes, text and translations included. Recorded 1957 ●

Although the sound of this version, even in its refurbished state, is indifferent, as it was even for the standards of its day, it simply cannot be overlooked because it preserves two interpretations that are now of historic importance – Gobbi's Boccanegra and Christoff's Fiesco, the brothers-in-law (in real life) rivalling each other in projecting dramatic conviction. Even with Cappuccilli's superb reading in mind (he recorded Boccanegra both for Gavazzeni and Abbado), Gobbi's still remains definitive. Through his sensitive diction and fine gradations of tone he portrays unforgettably the Doge's changes of character, so unerringly delineated by Verdi himself, from unruly pirate to commanding Doge to loving father and, after the poisoning, to tragic hero. The weary acceptance and sad accents of the final scene match those of Cappuccilli in his equally moving interpretations, especially that on the Abbado set. Gobbi at the time was at the height of his vocal powers so that the often high tessitura bothers him little, though it is certainly true that Cappuccilli has still greater resources to call on.

Christoff may not have quite the vocal amplitude of Ghiaurov (DG), but his reading has more vocal character. His pungent, crisply articulated singing is ideally suited to the proud, implacable patrician Fiesco. His singing shades into deeply felt remorse in the final, conciliatory meeting with Boccanegra.

De los Angeles is an Amelia very much in the mould of Ricciarelli (RCA), vulnerable in character, gentle and elegiac in voice with just a suggestion of strain in the highest register. Los Angeles's tone is actually clearer, more girlish than that of either of her rivals, and she is more adept than either of them at suggesting passion for Gabriele and a daughter's love for her father through her sensitive painting of words. She is quite exquisite in the downward runs in the final ensemble. Campora makes a likeable, fiery Gabriele more in the mould of Carreras (DG) than Domingo (RCA). Monachesi is an imposing Paolo.

Neither Santini's conducting nor the playing of the Rome Opera Orchestra matches that of their La Scala counterparts (DG). Abbado's realisation of this work is unlikely to be surpassed, though Gavazzeni's reading has much to commend it. The voices in this mono recording are more fairly caught than the chorus and orchestra, but there is a persistent though hardly disturbing tape hiss. In sum, though, this is a set those interested in great recordings of Verdi operas must have (even if they may regret the needless cuts).

Stiffelio

José Carreras ten Stiffelio; Sylvia Sass sop Lina; Matteo Manuguerra bar Stankar; Wladimiro Ganzarolli bass Jorg; Ezio di Cesare ten Raffaele; Maria Venuti mez Dorotea; Thomas Moser ten Federico; Austrian Radio Chorus and Symphony Orchestra /Lamberto Gardelli

Philips ② 422 432-2PM2 (109 minutes: ADD). Ⓜ

Notes, text and translation included. Recorded 1979

Stiffelio's rediscovery in the late 1960s enabled this reassessment, fully discussed in Julian Budden's introduction to the set. The drama has greater unity. Stiffelio himself is almost a dry run for Otello, a man of generous instincts who is forced into a ruinous situation. As a whole the score is, as Budden suggests, the most unjustly neglected of Verdi's operas. Had it not been suppressed by the censors, and then unsatisfactorily revised, it would surely have a regular part in the repertory because the story and its handling are both far superior to what preceded them in the Verdi canon.

The title-role is a gift for an accomplished tenor: Carreras catches the moral fervour and uncertainties of the part with is open-hearted, spontaneous performance. As Lina, who is torn between steadfastness and vulnerability, Sylvia Sass also offers a rewarding performance, alternating delicacy with fiery strength, although technically she isn't always as secure as one might ideally wish. Manuguerra is appropriately venomous as Stankar but his voice hasn't any particular distinction, tending to sound nasal, nor has his reading much in the way of individuality, but he is never less than adequate. Gardelli here adds another vital performance to his long series of Verdi readings. But any reservations pale before the importance of the work in hand to all Verdians, and enough is achieved to prove its worth. Besides, it is an essential purchase for Carreras enthusiasts.

La traviata

Maria Callas sop Violetta Valéry; Alfredo Kraus H ten Alfredo Germont; Mario Sereni bar Giorgio Germont; Laura Zanini mez Flora Bervoix; Piero De Palma ten Gastone; Alvaro Malta bar Baron Douphol; Maria Cristina de Castro sop Annina; Alessandro Maddalena bass Doctor Grenvil; Vito

Susca bass Marquis D'Obigny; Manuel Leitao ten Messenger; Chorus and Orchestra of the Teatro Nacional de San Carlos, Lisbon /Franco Ghione
EMI mono ② 556330-2 (123 minutes: ADD) Ⓜ
Recorded live in 1958 ●●

Callas caught live is preferable to Callas recorded in the studio and Violetta was perhaps her supreme role. The former Covent Garden producer Ande Anderson pointedly commented that, whereas other sopranos made you cry in the final act of Traviata, Callas also made you cry in the second, and one hears here what he meant as Callas's Violetta comes to the stark realisation that she is going to have to give up her one and only true beloved seemingly for ever. The desperation that enters her voice at 'Non sapete' is surpassed only by the sorrow and emptiness in the lead-in to 'Dite alla giovine', then the fatalism of 'morro! la mia memoria', which John Steane in his note that accompanies this essential CD reissue describes as being sung with such 'fullness of heart and voice'.

The final act is almost unbearable in its poignancy of expression:the reading of the letter so natural in its feeling of emptiness, the realisation that the doctor is lying so truthful, the sense of sheer hollowness at what is possibly the whole opera's most moving moment, 'Ma se tornando …': 'If in returning you have not saved my life, then nothing can save it'. All this and so much else suggests that Callas more than anyone else understood what this role is truly about.

But there is more to it even than that. Alfredo Kraus's Alfredo as heard here is as appealing as any on record. His Schipa-like tone at that stage in his career, his refinement of phrasing, especially in the duets with Callas, and his elegant yet ardent manner are exactly what the role requires. Mario Sereni may not quite be in the class of his colleagues but his Germont père is securely, sincerely and often perceptively sung and more acutely characterised than in his account of the part with de los Angeles. Almost as important, contrary to what you may read in some earlier reviews, Franco Ghione is an expert, knowledgeable conductor of this score, yielding to his singers yet prompt and dramatic when need be, and able to draw singing string tone from his excellent orchestra in the two preludes. So are there any drawbacks? Yes indeed; the prompter is all too audible, the audience coughs intrusively, particularly during the recitative at the start of Act 3, and the score is extensively cut in the manner traditional to pre-authentic days. Nevertheless, if it's to be but one Traviata in your collection, it must be this one.

La traviata

Ileana Cotrubas sop Violetta; Plácido Domingo ten Alfredo; Sherrill Milnes bar Germont; Stefania Malagù mez Flora; Helena Jungwirth sop Annina; Walter Gullino ten Gastone; Bruno Grella bar Baron; Alfredo Giacomotti bass Marquis; Giovanni Foiani bass Doctor; Walter Gullino ten Giuseppe; Bavarian State Opera Chorus and Orchestra / Carlos Kleiber
DG ② 415 132-2GH2 (106 minutes: ADD) Ⓕ
Notes, text and translation included
Recorded 1977 ●

This performance is so compelling dramatically – and as a recording much more natural than most of its rivals – that it really should be a newcomer's first choice. Cotrubas's peculiarly plaintive, vibrating timbre and highly individual nuances seem to be perfectly fitted to the part. To those she adds more of a sense of involvement and spontaneity than any other on disc. In Act 2, if she does not have you close to tears, you must have a hard heart indeed. At 'Più non esiste', this Violetta leaves no doubt that all previous experience has been erased from her mind in Alfredo's arms. Then, the very precise articulation and observance of note values, so typical of the set as a whole, at 'non sapete' emphasises the sudden realisation that all she now lives for is to be taken from her, just as at 'Così alla misera' she feels the blow has fallen as she communes to herself, the tears held back on the accentuated word 'implacabil'. At 'Amami, Alfredo' the whole bottled-up sense of mortality and lost happiness breaks forth uncontrollably. A superb interpretation.

That first scene of Act 2 is the clue to any great reading of the role of Violetta. It is not undermined by the rest of Cotrubas's performance. 'Sempre libera', at Kleiber's fast pace, is nervously exciting as it should be, with firm attack from the singer. The exchanges with Annina and the Doctor in Act 3 could not be more touching, the dots over the semiquavers at 'ogni speranza è morta!' providing the dramatic effect Verdi intended for them. Kleiber gives the score a Toscanini-like sense of dramatic purpose and impending doom. You can hear that in the final allegro section of the Violetta-Germont duet, with note values, double dots and the like firmly observed. Much earlier in the score Kleiber and his excellent Munich players give the dance music chez Violetta a chilling emptiness.

Domingo gives Alfredo one of his best performances, singing with sensitivity and grace – note the real pianissimo at the end of the Act 1 duet with Violetta – and altogether following her and their conductor away from routine. Kleiber's volatile, incisive direction, sometimes in questionable tempos, has worn perhaps a little less well than the rest. But then you hear Cotrubas's heart-rending 'Amami, Alfredo' and inevitably lean towards this set.

La traviata (sung in English)

Valerie Masterson sop Violetta; John Brecknock ten Alfredo; Christian du Plessis bar Germont; Della Jones mez Flora; Shelagh Squires mez Annina; Geoffrey Pogson ten Gastone; John Gibbs bar Baron; Denis Dowling bar Marquis; Roderick Earle bass Doctor; Edward Byles ten Giuseppe; John Kitchiner bar Messenger; Chorus and Orchestra of English National Opera /Sir Charles Mackerras
Chandos/Peter Moores Foundation Opera in English Series ② CHAN3023 Ⓕ
(119 minutes: ADD). Text included. Recorded 1980 ●

Each new encounter with this increases both respect and affection – not just for the recording but for the opera itself. This is partly an effect of opera-in-English, at any rate in such a very human opera as Traviata, and Edmund Tracey's translation also improves on reacquaintance ('I wonder' used to seem a terrible substitute for 'E strano' but it now seems natural enough in context). It is also partly a testimony to the imaginative freshness with which all details of the performance have been approached. The choruses, which usually sound like so much well-rehearsed routine, are alive with intelligent responsiveness. Similarly, Mackerras does not allow the orchestra to take anything for granted.

Valerie Masterson's Violetta is infinitely touching, not only through her expressiveness but perhaps primarily because the music is so scrupulously sung. Her staccatos, triplets and arpeggios in the first duet are so cleanly placed; her gradations of tone in the great solo are so finely judged; her control of the soft high notes in the last Act's farewell is so clearly that of a singer who knows that, whatever the fashionable cant to the contrary, singing comes first. Sensitivity and study have added the rest, and the result is simply one of the most satisfying accounts of the role on record.

If there is a limitation it lies in the want of richer tonal resources, and this is true also of the Alfredo, John Brecknock. Christian du Plessis as the father sounds not quite so firm and even in his production; good, however, in rounding off the two verses of his famous song. Della Jones and Denis Dowling bring their minor roles to life, and indeed there is not much by way of weakness in the whole of this heart-warming production.

La traviata

Tiziana Fabriccini sop Violetta; Roberto Alagna ten Alfredo; Paolo Coni bar Germont; Nicoletta Curiel mez Flora; Antonella Trevisan mez Annina; Enrico Cossutta ten Gastone; Orazio Mori bar Baron; Enzo Capuano bass Marquis; Francesco Musinu bass Doctor; Ernesto Gavazzi ten Giuseppe; Ernesto Panariello bass Servant; Silvestro Sammaritano bass Messenger; Chorus and Orchestra of La Scala, Milan /Riccardo Muti

Sony Classical ② S2K52486 (136 minutes: DDD)

Notes, text and translation included Ⓕ

Recorded live in 1992 ◉

An exciting and eloquent reading on all sides, this version must now be rated with the established front-runners – but, as with some of those, most notably any of Callas's versions, it is not for the fainthearted, or for those who like their Violettas to have full, equally produced voices. Fabriccini is evidently not an Act 1 Violetta. But even without assured coloratura and with problems at the passagio, she is one who is going to hold our attention and move us. In Act 2 so much bespeaks not only complete identification with Violetta's predicament but also vocal acumen of an exceptional kind, often based on the seemingly lost art of portamento.

The final tragedy is still better, very much modelled on Callas. The voice, more settled now than anywhere in the performance, manages her role with long-breathed phrasing and pathetic accents, the result of a true understanding of Verdian style yet never self-conscious – this is great singing and interpretation.

The death is deeply moving. Alagna, in the role that brought him to attention, is just the Alfredo for this Violetta; youthfully ardent, with keen-edged tone, finely attuned to the legato essential in Verdi.

The recording is taken from four performances, given at La Scala, and is a theatrical view full of electricity, vitally executed by the forces of La Scala, as vital as any in the recorded history of the work. Don't miss it.

La traviata

Angela Gheorghiu sop Violetta; Frank Lopardo ten Alfredo; Leo Nucci bar Germont; Leah-Marian Jones mez Flora; Gillian Knight mez Annina; Robin Leggate ten Gaston; Richard Van Allan bass Baron; Roderick Earle bass Marquis; Mark Beesley bass Doctor; Neil Griffiths ten Giuseppe; Bryan Secombe bass Messenger; Rodney Gibson ten Servant; Chorus and Orchestra of the Royal Opera House, Covent Garden /Sir Georg Solti

Decca ② 448 119-2DHO2 (127 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ

Notes, text and translation included

Recorded live in 1994 ◉

For Angela Gheorghiu, Violetta was the right role at the right time. The whole drama is there in her voice, every expression in the eyes and beat of the heart reflected in the way she shapes and colours Verdi's vocal lines. Her quiet singing is particularly lovely, affording subtle variations of tenderness and inner anxiety. When she does choose to make a point with force, as in her sudden warmth of feeling towards Giorgio Germont at 'Qual figlia m'abbracciate' or her chilling cry of 'Morro!', accompanied by a loud thump on the table, her ideas always hit home. A few moments of vocal weakness are accentuated by the microphone, mainly a tendency to go sharp and some hardness at the top of the voice that was not troublesome in the theatre. Otherwise she is the most complete and moving Violetta we have had since her compatriot, Ileana Cotrubas.

These live performances were the first time that Sir Georg Solti, at the age of 82, had conducted a staged La traviata and he wanted two young singers who were also coming fresh to the opera. What was so spellbinding in the theatre was the touching intimacy they brought to their scenes together. Instead of the duets for Violetta and Alfredo turning into standard Italian operatic bawling, they became lovers' whispers. The effect comes across here in the cadenzas, where Gheorghiu and Frank Lopardo really seem to be listening to each other. Elsewhere, one is more aware than in the theatre that Lopardo's light tenor is far from being an idiomatic Italian voice. His idiosyncratic tone quality and un-Italian vowels can be problematical, as is some ungainly lifting up into notes. Leo Nucci, Decca's resident Verdi baritone at the time, makes a standard Giorgio Germont, not more, and apart from Leah-Marian Jones's energetic Flora, the smaller roles do not say a great deal for the Royal Opera's depth of casting.

Solti insisted that the opera be performed complete. But there is nothing studied about his conducting: the performance is fresh and alive from the first note to the last, the result of a lifetime's experience of how to pace a drama in the opera house . With the increasing number of live opera sets, a recommendation for La traviata is likely to be based on whether one is prepared to accept noises-off or not. Decca's recording is well balanced and vivid, dancing feet and banging doors included. Among the live sets, Giulini and Callas at La Scala in 1955 must be hors concours, but in rather awful sound. Muti's more recent La Scala set, in which he has to wrestle with Tiziana Fabbricini's wayward talents as Violetta, is the nearest comparison.

Additional recommendations

La traviata 🄷
Callas Violetta di Stefano Alfredo Bastianini Germont Chorus and Orchestra of La Scala, Milan /Giulini
EMI mono ② 566450-2
(124 minutes: ADD: recorded 1955) Ⓜ

Surely the most famous recording of Traviata, with Callas an incomparable Violetta. The big let down, though, is Bastianini's Germont and the poor recorded sound.

De los Angeles Violetta del Monte Alfredo Sereni Germont Rome Opera Chorus and Orchestra / Serafin 🄷
EMI Double Forte ② 573824-2 Ⓜ
(119 minutes: ADD: 12/85^{R})
Also available on HMV Classics HMVD5 728082-2 Ⓑ

At bargain price, don't miss this version. The Alfredo and Germont are both well portrayed, but de los Angeles's Violetta is quite unforgettable.

Il trovatore

Il trovatore 🄷
Maria Callas sop Leonora; Giuseppe di Stefano ten Manrico; Rolando Panerai bar Count di Luna; Fedora Barbieri mez Azucena; Nicola Zaccaria bass Ferrando; Luisa Villa mez Ines; Renato Ercolani ten Ruiz, Messenger; Giulio Mauri bass Old Gipsy; Chorus and Orchestra of La Scala, Milan / Herbert von Karajan
EMI ② 556333-2 (129 minutes: ADD). Notes, text and translation included. Recorded 1956 Ⓕ ●●

Callas and Karajan took the world by the ears in the 1950s with this Il trovatore. Leonora was one of Callas's finest stage roles, and this recording is wonderfully intense, with a dark concentrated loveliness of sound in the principal arias that puts one in mind of Muzio or Ponselle at their best. Walter Legge always managed to team Callas with the right conductor for the work in question. Often it was Serafin, but Karajan in Il trovatore is utterly compelling. This opera, like Beethoven's Seventh Symphony and Stravinsky's The Rite of Spring, is one of music's great essays in sustained rhythmic intensity; dramatically it deals powerfully in human archetypes. All this is realised by the young Karajan with that almost insolent mastery of score and orchestra which made him such a phenomenon at this period of is career. There are some cuts, but, equally, some welcome inclusions (such as the second verse of 'Di quella pira', sung by di Stefano with his own unique kind of slancio).

Although the EMI sound is very good, one or two climaxes suggest that in the heat of the moment, the engineer, Robert Beckett, let the needle run into the red and you might care to play the set in mono to restore that peculiar clarity and homogeneity of sound which are the mark of Legge's finest productions of the mono era. But whatever you do don't miss this set.

Il trovatore
Plácido Domingo ten Manrico; Leontyne Price sop Leonora; Sherrill Milnes bar Count di Luna; Fiorenza Cossotto mez Azucena; Bonaldo Giaiotti bass Ferrando; Elizabeth Bainbridge mez Ines; Ryland Davies ten Ruiz; Stanley Riley bass Old Gipsy; Neilson Taylor bar Messenger; Ambrosian Opera Chorus; New Philharmonia Orchestra / Zubin Mehta
RCA Red Seal ② 74321 39504-2 Ⓜ
(137 minutes: ADD) Notes, text and translation included. Recorded 1969 ●

There are details here which fully justify its inclusion and will be enough to tempt any collector's palette. The Leonora of Leontyne Price is the high point of the Mehta recording: her velvety, sensuous articulation of what is certainly an 'immenso, eterno amor' is entirely distinctive and dramatically astute. The New Philharmonia is a no less ardent protagonist. Mehta's pacing may be uneven, his accompanying breathless, but he draws robust playing in bold primary colours to which the recording gives vivid presence. The acoustic serves Manrico less well: he seems to be singing in the bath when we first overhear him. This, though, is a younger, simpler Domingo than the one we encounter elsewhere, and there are passages of wonderfully sustained intensity. Cossotto's Azucena is disappointing. All the vocal tricks and techniques are there, but it is very much a concert performance in which she, and therefore we, are never entirely engaged.

Il trovatore
Franco Corelli ten Manrico; Gabriella Tucci sop Leonora; Robert Merrill bar Count di Luna; Giulietta Simionato mez Azucena; Ferruccio Mazzoli bass Ferrando; Luciana Moneta mez Ines; Angelo Mercuriali ten Ruiz, Messenger; Mario Rinaudo bass Old Gipsy; Chorus and Orchestra of Rome Opera / Thomas Schippers
HMV Classics ② HMVD5 73413-2 Ⓑ
(123 minutes: ADD). Recorded 1964

In the 1950s and 1960s EMI made a series of what have become classics with Rome Opera forces that have Verdi in their blood. These two recordings, greeted with reservations then, now seem like manna from heaven in a world starved of true Verdian voices. Above all there is Corelli's truly spinto tenor, a thrilling sound in itself, and used, both as Radames (one of the most exciting on disc) and as Manrico, with far more sensitivity than is usually allowed for. Tucci is a Leonora in the Tebaldi mould, with a strong voice and natural phrasing. Simionato, a shade past her best, remains an affecting, idiomatic Azucena. Robert Merrill is a Verdi baritone of poise and style. Schippers conducts with verve.

Il trovatore

Plácido Domingo ten Manrico; Aprile Millo sop Leonora; Vladimir Chernov bar Count di Luna; Dolora Zajick mez Azucena; James Morris bass Ferrando; Sondra Kelly contr Ines; Anthony Laciura ten Ruiz; Glenn Bater bass Old Gipsy; Tim Willson ten Messenger; New York Metropolitan Opera Chorus and Orchestra /James Levine

Sony Classical ② S2K48070 (129 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ

Notes, text and translation included Recorded 1991

This is the most recommendable among modern versions of Trovatore, with a reading all-round that finely balances the lyrical and melodramatic elements in the score. Once Leonora appears, the reading takes on true Verdian style. This is a reading to please the ear and move the heart. Immediately this Leonora is confronted with Count di Luna, we ear the firm, vibrant, implacable tones of Chernov. His voice is in its absolute prime and he sings everything with the confident panache that suggests as much. Our upright hero is Domingo, aged a little since his earlier recordings of Manrico for Mehta (listed overleaf) and Giulini. The artistry and management of the voice are as rewarding as of old, and Domingo reserves his best for the last and greatest scene when both his sovereign phrasing – 'Riposa, o madre' sung in a single breath – and his involvement take on the aura of active participation. Manrico's feelings of love for his mother, momentary contempt for Leonora and eventual tragic pathos are firmly targeted: we hear once more the noble tenor we know and can listen to in sappier voice for Giulini.

As Azucena, Zajick gives an effective and strong-willed performance, wanting only the last ounce of character: she is also at her best in the final act. The Met chorus is no more than adequate on this occasion, but as ever the house's orchestra plays with the virtuosity it reserves for its musical director. Levine's reading is well timed, properly earthy yet refined in the many delicate touches Verdi evinces in arias and duets. Pavarotti's predominantly lyrical tenor (for Mehta on Decca) is not ideal for Manrico but he sings it with such unfailing musicality and sense of line that Pavarotti enthusiasts need not hesitate to acquire this version, confident that their hero's portrayal is set in suitable surroundings. However, the whole reading is not as well integrated as the Levine, and by a hair's breadth that is probably the better sung. Mehta's earlier, much-lauded recording for RCA remains very much in the frame.

Additional recommendation

Il trovatore

Price Leonora Corelli Manrico Simionato Azucena

DG mono ② 447 659-2GX2

(139 minutes: ADD: 9/95) Ⓜ

Leontyne Price, at the height of her powers, gives a vital performance, living every moment of her part, and Corelli is an exciting Manrico. The most compelling reason for hearing this set, though, is Giulietta Simionato's deeply felt, wondrously sung Azucena.

I vespri siciliani

Cheryl Studer sop Elena; Chris Merritt ten Arrigo; Giorgio Zancanaro bar Monforte; Ferruccio Furlanetto bass Procida; Gloria Banditelli contr Ninetta; Enzo Capuano bass De Bethune; Francesco Musinu bass Vaudemont; Ernesto Gavazzi ten Danieli; Paolo Barbacini ten Tebaldo; Marco Chingari bass Roberto; Ferrero Poggi ten Manfredo; Chorus and Orchestra of La Scala, Milan / Riccardo Muti

EMI ③ 754043-2 (199 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ

Notes, text and translation included

Recorded live in 1989-90

Vespri is one of the most difficult of Verdi's operas to bring off. Scribe's libretto, true to Parisian taste nurtured on Auber and Meyerbeer, is a somewhat superficial, broken-backed affair; Verdi's attempt to fulfil Parisian tastes, long ballet and all, isn't at all times convincing, yet for the most part the composer rose above the demands for show and grandeur to disclose the real feelings of his characters, none of whom is a particularly lovable creature. Andrew Porter, when reviewing Levine's RCA set on LP back in 1974, commented that the opera 'is a structure involving large ensembles, elaborate spectacle ...intricate and novel orchestral effects, a big ballet, and virtuoso singers pushed to the limits of their technique'.

Muti realises all these assets with unperturbed ease and easily overcomes any drawbacks, real or imagined. He rouses his forces, solo and concerted, with all his old gifts for energising rhythms and shaping a Verdian line. He yields where wanted to the needs of his singers, presses on when the drama or a dull page demands it, and draws the best out of what is generally considered Verdi's most telling ballet music. He is less impulsive, and more ready to take his time than Levine.

The set is graced by some superb singing – at least in the two most important and interesting roles, those of Elena and Monforte. Cheryl Studer confirmed her ebullient form in Attila as a lirico-spinto with full control of coloratura, thus placing her in the royal line of Ponselle, Callas, Sutherland and Caballé (the last two of whom encouraged Studer to undertake this kind of repertory). In her first appearance, as she instils the Sicilians with courage, 'Coraggio, su coraggio', she immediately shows her mettle with confident, inspiriting attack, the tone vibrant, the diction fiery. In the duet with Arrigo in Act 4, her long solo 'Arrigo! ah, parli ad un core', a passage made famous by Callas, she floats her tone most appealingly, the accents delicate, affecting. In the Bolero she rivals any of her predecessors in delicacy, a real smile in the voice, the phrasing long breathed, the col- oratura not quite perfect, but near it. Taken with her soaring contributions to the ensembles, this is great singing by any standards, past or present.

To find Zancanaro in equally impressive form is an added blessing. Monforte is the work's most interesting character, the French governor of Sicily, father of the Sicilian Arrigo, who is his sworn enemy. In his great scene at the start of Act 3, Zancanaro finds deeper strains of feeling than we have heard from him in any other role, and then sings the subtly written aria 'In braccio alle dovizie' with a refinement of line and variety of dynamics that enhance the strength of voice and clarity of diction we have always admired in his singing. He is just as eloquent in the ensuing duet with Arrigo, taken here by Chris Merritt, another singer inspired by the occasion or the work to surpass himself: Merritt delivers all his music with such conviction and such a belief in himself that past criticism of his voice is almost silenced. Which leaves, of the principals, Furlanetto. Heard to such advantage in Mozart and Rossini, he here sounds overparted. 'O tu Palermo' lacks the weight and authority of a Pinza, Pasero or Christoff but he improves immeasurably after that, pronouncing his anathemas on the French with a verve that compensates for any failings in vocal power.

Those who want their orchestras to be big and resonant may be disappointed by the confined sound heard here. However, the voices are, on the whole, caught well in a true theatre perspective. A few coughs and some applause will worry only those who must have complete silence.

The RCA set has much to commend it, most of all Domingo's full-flooded Arrigo, though he gives points to Merritt in Act 5. On balance this set is more convincingly cast and conducted. It won't please those who are longing to hear the piece in the original, but Verdi did approve of the Italian version and certainly would have approved of its vital execution here.

Johannes Verhulst

Dutch 1816-1891

GROVE Verhulst became a close friend of Schumann in Leipzig, where he conducted programmes of progressive music. Holding conducting posts in Rotterdam, The Hague and Amsterdam, he virtually controlled Dutch musical life until 1886. His compositions, strongly influenced by Schumann and Mendelssohn, include choral works, songs, overtures and piano pieces.

Mass, Op 20

Nienke Oostenrijk sop Margriet Van Reisen contr
Marcel Reijans ten Hubert Claessens bass
Netherlands Concert Choir; Hague Residentie Orchestra / Matthias Bamert
Chandos Ⓟ CHAN10020 (65 minutes: DDD)
Text and translation included. Recorded c2002

We read that Johannes Verhulst (1816-91) was a pupil of Mendelssohn, but that much is self-evident from this extended setting of the Mass. Composed in 1879 for the Golden Jubilee of the Netherlands' Foundation of the Promotion of Music, Verhulst's Mass was the longest sacred choral work written up to that time by a Dutch composer. Certainly with its wealth of charming melodies, elegant orchestral accompaniments and lavish writing for chorus, it gives us a fair idea of what Mendelssohn himself might have come up with had he ever written a Mass on this scale. The eighth in a series of discs exploring Dutch music of the past 200 years marking 2004's centenary of the Residentie Orchestra, it has to be said that the focus here is, both musically and so far as the recorded sound is concerned, very much on the 15-year-old 100-voice Netherlands Concert Choir. While they sing with great clarity and precision, there is a somewhat lightweight quality about their sound which undermines the climaxes, not least the potentially thrilling moment of resurrection described in the Credo. Nevertheless, Bamert's taut reading draws some particularly impressive dynamic control from them, especially in the highly-charged opening section of the Sanctus. It is left to the excellent quartet of soloists, however, to produce the most captivating music-making here. Supported by gracious obbligato solo cello and clarinet, their performance of the charming Benedictus is a moment of pure delight.

Tomás Luis de Victoria

Spanish 1548-1611

GROVE Victoria was a choirboy at Avil Cathedral; when his voice broke he was sent to the Jesuit Collegio Germanico, Rome (c1565), where he may have studied under Palestrina. He was a singer and organist at S Maria di Monserrato (1569-at least 1574) and from 1571 to 1576-7 he taught at the Collegio Germanico (maestro from 1575). He became a priest and joined the Oratory of S Filippo Neri. In the 1580s he returned to Spain as chaplain to Philip II's sister the Dowager Empress Maria, at the Descalzas Reales convent, Madrid, from 1587 until her death in 1603; he remained there as organist until his death, apart from a visit to Rome (1592-5), when he attended Palestrina's funeral. The greatest Spanish Renaissance composer, and among the greatest in Europe in his day, he wrote exclusively Latin sacred music. Most was printed in his lifetime; in 1600 a sumptuous collection of 32 of his most popular masses, Magnificats, psalms and motets appeared in Madrid. Though his output ranged widely through the liturgy, he is chiefly remembered for his masses and motets, which include well-known pieces (Missa Ave regina caelorum, Missa pro victoria, O magnum mysterium, O quam gloriosum, O vos omnes). Like Palestrina, he wrote in a serious, devotional style, often responding emotionally to the texts with dramatic word-painting. Some of his more poignant pieces are characterised by a religious, almost mystical fervour.

Masses

Missa Gaudeamus. Missa pro Victoria (both ed Dixon). Motets –Cum beatus Ignatius; Descendit angelus Domini; Doctor bonus amicus Dei Andreas; Ecce sacerdos magnus; Estote fortes in bello; Hic vir despiciens mundum; O decus apostolicum; Tu es Petrus; Veni, sponsa Christi (all ed Skinner)
The Cardinall's Musick /Andrew Carwood
ASV Gaudeamus CDGAU198 (78 minutes:DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included
Recorded 1998-99 ●●

There have been some fine recordings of Victoria's music in recent years, but none finer than this one at its best. The Cardinall's Musick has become known for its CDs of English renaissance polyphony, but its approach, which joint directors Andrew Carwood and David Skinner describe as 'open and soloistic', works extremely well here, too. The two contrasted Mass settings are given the same highly expressive treatment as the motets, which, sung one to a part, have a madrigalian quality bringing out beautifully the natural, unforced rhetoric of Victoria's idiom.

The Missa Gaudeamus, based on a Morales motet, is scored for six voices. Performed with only two singers on each part, it sounds as rich and dark as the strongest chocolate; the overall blend is superb, clear and strikingly well balanced. With only two female voices on the upper part, the polyphonic texture is not, as is so often the case, top-heavy; each strand carries equal weight, just as the densely contrapuntal writing demands. The final canonic Agnus Dei is sublime, and throughout – even in the longer movements – Carwood's sure-footed pacing allows the polyphony to ebb and flow like the swell of the sea.

The Missa pro Victoria, based on Janequin's chanson, La guerre, could hardly be more different in its forward-looking polychoral idiom. Here the writing is more condensed, more economical, but nevertheless highly dramatic. The ending of the Gloria is breath-taking, as is the magical opening of the Sanctus and the final 'dona nobis pacems' of the Agnus Dei. The clarion calls of the second Kyrie are equally striking. There are so many high spots on this disc that it is simply impossible to mention them all, and this is perhaps still more to the group's credit given that, as explained in the notes, a bout of flu among the singers cannot have made for the easiest of recording sessions.

Officium defunctorum (1605)
Gabrieli Consort /Paul McCreesh
Archiv Produktion 447 095-2AH (60 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Text and translation included. Recorded 1994 ●●

This is a remarkable recording. In some ways it is like a rediscovery, for here is an approach not too far from Pro Cantione Antiqua at its best and yet that group never recorded the work. The Gabrieli Consort adds chant to the Requiem Mass itself, thus creating more of a context for Victoria's magisterial work.

We have therefore the Epistle and preceding prayer, the Tract, Sequence, Gospel, Preface, Lord's Prayer and Postcommunion in addition to the polyphony; this also means, for example, that the Kyrie is sung nine-fold with alternating chant instead of simply three-fold only in polyphony. One may presume that the chant was taken from a suitable Spanish source by Luis Lozano Virumbrales, who is an expert in this field and the author of the insert-notes together with Paul McCreesh.

The performance itself is stately and imposing, with a tremendous homogeneity of sound: the use of an all-male choir, together with the added chant, lends it a tangibly monastic feel, though it would have been a fortunate monastery indeed that had falsettists of this quality. About the performance of the chant there are two points of interest: firstly, that it is doubled, like the polyphony, by a bajón, common Spanish practice at this period, and secondly, that McCreesh is not afraid to have the falsettists singing the chant too.

The pace of the polyphony often seems to be unhurried, but it never feels slow, and Westminster Cathedral Choir is of course faced with the hugely rever- berant acoustics of its home building. From the beginning the singing is involving and incarnate, but the real magic comes nearer the end: from the Agnus Dei onwards one feels that the Gabrieli Consort have really got the measure of the music and is allowing it to speak through them. The final great responsory, the 'Libera me', is performed with heart stopping power and conviction. McCreesh's approach shows how the Mass would have fitted into and complemented the liturgical frame-work without ever losing its own internal power and drama. A revelatory disc.

Additional recommendation
Officium defunctorum
Westminster Cathedral Choir /Hill
Hyperion CDA66250 (58 minutes: DDD: 9/87) Ⓕ
A stunning and at times breathtaking performance. An absolute must for any lover of Victoria's music.

Awards 1985

Missa O quam gloriosum.
Missa Ave maris stella. Motet –
O quam gloriosum
Westminster Cathedral Choir /
David Hill
Hyperion CDA66114
(57 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1983 ●●●

This is likely to become one of your most cherished discs. It is notable for its spacious depth of sound, volatile unpredictability of interpretation, and above all the soaring sostenuto of the boy trebles, with their forward and slightly nasal tone quality. With their magnificently controlled legato lines, the Westminster boys treat Victoria's music as though it were some vast plainchant, with a passion that excites and uplifts. The choir is recorded in the exceptionally resonant Westminster Cathedral, at a distance and with great atmosphere.

Ave maris stella is not one of Victoria's familiar Masses, quite simply because no music publisher has made it available to choirs in a good, cheap edition. To have it rescued from obscurity is laudable in itself, but to have it sung with such poise and sensitivity is an unexpected double treat. Unlike O quam gloriosum, this is a work that thrills with echoes of Victoria's Spanish upbringing, of Morales and his predecessors, even of Josquin Desprez, whose own Ave maris stella Mass was brought to the cathedrals of the Iberian peninsula earlier in the century. The plainchant melody, familiar to all of us through Monteverdi's setting in the 1610 Vespers, completely dominates Victoria's music, for it is placed most often in huge treble lines that wheel high above the general texture. Magnificent as the early parts of the work are, nothing quite matches the final five-part Agnus Dei, sung here with admirable support and exquisitely shaped by David Hill. Recommended without reservation.

Veni Sancte Spiritus. Dum complerentur. Missa Dum complerentur. Populе meus. Vexilla Regis. Veni Creator Spiritus. Pange lingua gloriosi. Lauda Sion
Westminster Cathedral Choir /James O'Donnell with Joseph Cullen org
Hyperion CDA66886 (70 minutes:DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included. Recorded 1996 ●●

Westminster Cathedral Choir here makes a special contribution to the music of Tomás Luis de Victoria. The Missa Dum complerentur, for Pentecost, is based on Victoria's own motet; he adds an extra voice in the parody Mass setting and draws much on the opening material of the motet as well as its distinctive 'Alleluia' sections which ring out like a peal of bells – especially in this excellent performance. Indeed, the motet is finely conceived, with Victoria characteristically responding to the imagery of the text with changes of texture and pacing within the essentially contrapuntal idiom: a true master.

The choir, with its full-bodied sound and well-sustained vocal lines, has, over long years of tradition in singing this particular part of the repertory, achieved an almost intuitive feel for the flow of the music, which is perhaps as near as we 'll ever get today to the authentic situation of professional church singers in Rome or the Spanish cathedrals in the 16th century. What we'll never know is whether the sonority – in particular the timbre of the boys' voices – resembles anything Victoria might have heard, that distinctive focus and intensity of tone well illustrated by the two Holy Week settings on the disc: the homophonic Popule meus and the hymn Vexilla Regis. This, and the two Pentecost hymns, are performed in alternatim with alternate verses in plainchant and polyphony. This is a superb and compelling disc that adds to our knowledge and appreciation of Victoria's art.

Heitor Villa-Lobos Brazilian 1887-1959

GROVE Villa-Lobos was taught to play the cello by his father, and in his teens he performed with popular musicians in the city. He then travelled widely, returning to Rio in his mid-20s for a few formal lessons. From 1923 to 1930 he was in Paris, where he wrote several works in his Chôros series, giving Brazilian impressions a luxuriant scoring: Messiaen and others were impressed. He returned to Brazil, where he did valuable work in reforming musical education. In 1945 he founded the Brazilian Academy of Music in Rio de Janeiro. Also during this period he produced the cycle of nine Bachianas brasileiras for diverse combinations (1930-45), marrying the spirit of Brazilian folk music with that of Bach; the two for eight cellos (one with soprano) have been especially successful. His gigantic output includes operas, 12 symphonies (1916-57), 17 string quartets (1915-57), numerous songs and much piano music.

Chôros No 11

Ralf Gothóni pf Finnish Radio Symphony Orchestra / Sakari Oramo
Ondine ODE916-2 (62 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1998 ●

Villa-Lobos wrote five piano concertos as well as other works for piano and orchestra with less concertante titles, such as Momoprecoce and the third of the Bachianas Brasileiras: in fact Chôros No 11 is the largest-scale of them all, though despite its ferociously demanding solo part it has been described rather as a 'mammoth concerto grosso'. If that term conjures up for you an image of a neat neo-classical work, forget it: this is Villa-Lobos in his usual excitably coloured, hyper-exuberant style, writing in a grandiose loose form that – since few of its vast proliferation of themes are developed – defies analysis but whose overall effect is strangely riveting. Every so often lyrical passages occur among the manic busyness, and the linked second movement, profligately overscored as it is, is really romantic, with three related but not identical melodic ideas (and a big cadenza). The finale, which begins with a fugato, is thematically more integrated than the rest (for a time, at least) and consequently could be considered the most successful movement.

The sound is vivid, Ralf Gothóni contributes prodigious feats of virtuosity and the Finnish orchestra displays total commitment to this quite extraordinary work.

Bachianas Brasileiras Nos 2, 4 &8

Bachianas Brasileiras Nos 2, 4 and 8
Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra /
Jesús López-Cobos
Telarc CD80393 (70 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1995 ●

If any parallels existed between Bach and Brazilian idioms, they were largely in Villa-Lobos's mind – even the Fugue in No 8 of these Bachianas Brasileiras is totally un-Bach-like; so anyone coming fresh to these exotically coloured, rather sprawling works should not be misled by false expectations. But fascinating, indeed haunting, in a highly individual way, they are. In view of the composer's sublime indifference to instrumental practicalities (as, for instance, the feasible length of a trombone glissando), his carelessness over detail in his scores, his Micawber- like trust that problems of balance he had created would be sorted out in performance, the chaotic state of the printed scores and orchestral parts of his music (littered as they are with wrong notes), and numerous misreadings in past performances, the only half-way reliable yardstick for conductors or critics is the composer's own recordings, made in the 1950s and now preserved in a six-CD box on EMI.

Compared to them, the present issue shows a number of differences. Chief of these is the warmer, more generalised sound, with less emphasis on clarity of detail. This works reasonably well in the Preludio of No 8, where concentration on the melodic line and the adoption of a slower tempo aid the movement's lyricism (likewise the more sentimental approach to the Aria of No 2). The Aria of No 8 is unquestionably more poetic and the Dansa of No 4 lighter; but in the most famous movement, the hilarious and ingenious 'Little train of the Caipira 'of No 2, the rasps near the start and the clatter of wheels on the track (evoked by the fiendishly difficult piano part) are far too subdued in favour of the 'big tune '.

López-Cobos deals persuasively with knotty questions of balance, such as in the middle section of No 3's Toccata, and brings to the fore the bell-like araponga bird's cry in No 4's Coral, but makes less of that movement's jungle screeches. He makes clear the thematic link between the sections of No 4's Aria, and seeks to overcome the repetitious pattern of its Preludio by taking a faster speed rather than by the wealth of tonal nuance the composer imself introduced. Perhaps such detailed comparisons are superfluous: enjoy, enjoy!

Amazonas

Gênesis. Erosño (Origem do rio Amazonas).
Amazonas. Dawn in a tropical forest
Czecho-Slovak Radio Symphony Orchestra,
Bratislava / Roberto Duarte
Marco Polo 8 223357 (62 minutes: DDD)
Recorded 1990 Ⓕ

Do not be deterred by the thought of an Eastern European orchestra playing unfamiliar Villa-Lobos. The Czecho-Slovak Radio Orchestra is clearly a very skilled and flexible body, and the conductor Roberto Duarte, a Brazilian authority on Villa-Lobos, has instilled South American colour and rhythmic vitality into his players quite brilliantly. The best of the four works is probably the earliest, Amazonas, which was written in 1917. Here, at the age of 30, Villa-Lobos's imagination was extraordinarily fertile, and this early evocation of Brazilian folklore, with its use of unusual instruments and strange orchestral timbres, is remarkably advanced for its date.

The short tone poem Dawn in a tropical forest is a late work dating from 1953, and this has a more lyrical, more classical style. The remaining two works also come from the last phase in Villa-Lobos's career, and have similar themes. Gênesis, written in 1954, is a large-scale symphonic poem and ballet which depicts its enormous subject with all the extravagant colour and use of complex rhythms that were the composer's trademark. Erosño, or The Origin of the Amazon is another ambitiously complex work. All four items are captured in faithful sound.

Solo Piano Works

As três Marias. Prole do bebê, Books I and II.
Rudepoêma
Marc-André Hamelin pf
Hyperion CDA67176 (64 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1999

Music for Children
Carnaval das crianças. Guia pratico, Volumes 1-6
Caio Pagano pf Glissando 779 009-2
(65 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 2000 ●

Here are two invaluable raids on Villa-Lobos's rich and exotic store of piano music. First and foremost is Marc-André Hamelin, whose transcendental sheen and facility bless everything he plays. He makes As três Marias ('The three stars') wink and scintillate with an inimitable verve before continuing with both books of Prole do bebê, registering the change from affection to savagery with an impeccable degree of mastery and insight. In Book 1 the tolling bells which are at the heart of the enchanting 'Caboclinha'ring out fortissimo and ben marcato, while the fleetness that Hamelin delivers in 'O Polichinello' leaves all others standing.

Yet such delectable charm is virtually erased by the increasingly astringent and percussive Book 2. Here the insect and animal world has graduated from innocence to experience with a vengeance. The 'Little Wooden Horse', eyes dilating and nostrils flaring, gallops away from danger and the paper cockroach sounds disillusioned with its lot. Red Riding Hood, too, would surely have fled in terror, not deceived for a moment, from Villa-Lobos's jaw-snapping, not- so-little 'Glass Wolf'. Finally, there is Rudepoêma, the composer's supposed masterpiece. Rubinstein was understandably disconcerted by a portrait of such roughness. Hoping for a more genial offering with which to delight his adoring public he quickly abandoned Rudepoêma. True, there are brief moments of bittersweet accessibility, but elsewhere the assault is relentless, and even Hamelin's superb and unflagging brio hardly reconciles you to the music's length and bombast. Hyperion's production is as immaculate as ever.

Caio Pagano's brilliant and more amiable recital is devoted to music for children and includes six of the 11 volumes entitled Guia pratico. Here one enters a magical world quite without the adult pain and nostalgia that colour Schumann's Kinderszenen and Debussy's Children's Corner. A nun waltzes as she gives a child a necklace and Garibaldi goes to Mass with a real spring in his step. Two doves sing of their love, safe from all possible harm, while a wandering troubadour presses his claims on a countess with much vehemence. A widow looking for a husband is no less eagle-eyed and determined, and virtually all these pieces, performed by Pagano with the liveliest of engagement, are so witty and touching that you are left longing for Volumes 7-11. Carnaval das crianças is a more ornate celebration of colour and brio, and even when you miss the percussion and off-beat drum strokes from the finale of the piano and orchestra version you can only delight in Pagano's relish, his crisp and stylish playing. He is excellently recorded.

Prole do bebê No 1. Cirandas. Hommage à Chopin
Sonia Rubinsky pf
Naxos 8 554489 (65 minutes: DDD) Ⓢ
Recorded 1994 ●

Villa-Lobos's claim that his music was 'the fruit of an immense, ardent and generous land' at once disarms familiar criticism of extravagance and formlessness. To regard such largesse through the blinkered eyes of someone exclusively nurtured on a more restrained and economical diet is unacceptable. There may be tares among the wheat but such strictures hardly apply to the music in this Vol 1 which com- mences with the enchanting Prole do bebê, Book 1 (the Second Book is a tougher, altogether more astringent and percussive experience, while a Third Book is sadly lost). Intimately associated with Artur Rubinstein (who rearranged Villa-Lobos's miniatures, omitting some and ending 'O Polichinelo' with an unmarked rip-roaring glissando), Prole do bebê is here played complete. Sonia Rubinsky makes light of a teasing rhythmic mix in 'Morenhina' (No 2) and in 'Caboclinha'(No 3) she relishes Villa-Lobos's audacity; his way of making his seductive melody and rhythm surface through a peal of church bells. Again, despite strong competition from Alma Petchersky on ASV in the no less delightful Cirandas, Rubinsky scores an unequivocal success, ideally attuned to the central and beguiling melody of 'Terezinha de Jesus' (No 1) with its forte e canto instruction, and allowing the fight between the carnation and the rose (No 4) to melt into a delicious love duet. Much celebrated in her native Brazil and also in America, Sonia Rubinsky is excellently recorded.

Bachianas Brasileiras No 5

Bachianas Brasileiras – Nos 4, 5, 7 and 9. Chôros No 10, 'Rasga o coração '
Renée Fleming sop BBC Singers; New World Symphony /Michael Tilson Thomas
RCA Red Seal 09026 68538-2 (78 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1996 ●

In his booklet-note, the commentator here calls Chôros No 10 the masterpiece of that quintessentially Brazilian series. It is certainly the most ambitious, with very large orchestral and choral forces in a complex mélange of urban street song (a popular schottisch by Medeiros), chattering native Indian chants and bird-song twitterings, of mysterious jungle atmosphere, compulsive ostinato rhythms and virtuoso orchestral effects. The present performance is excellent. The couplings here are illuminating, consisting as they do of more Villa-Lobos – four of his highly individual tributes to Bach's influence. By far the best known of the Bachianas Brasileiras is, of course, No 5, whose Aria demonstrates the composer's ability to spin a haunting long-flowing melody. Renée Fleming is the sweet-toned soloist with the cello section of this accomplished orchestra of young graduates from American conservatoires: warmly lyrical as she is, however, and brilliantly exact in the dartings of the Dansa, her words are not very distinct even in the slow-moving Aria.

By his deeply expressive shaping of No 4's Preludio Tilson Thomas avoids any satiety with its extreme monothematicism, and in the second movement secures coherent continuity despite the (rather loud) insistent interventions of the araponga bird's repeated note. He produces a beautifully poetic tranquillity in the brief Prelude of No 9 and complete lucidity and rhythmic buoyancy in its Fugue. If that is the most Bachian of the series, the much more substantial No 7 also has its moments of homage: its first movement has a fine breadth, and its finale is an impressive and serious-minded large-scale fugue that begins quietly and culminates in a grandiose blaze of sound; but the busy Toccata is characteristically and challengingly Brazilian, and the first part of its Giga (before it goes all Hollywood) is delightfully fresh in this invigorating performance.

Choral Works

Missa São Sebastião. Bendita sabedoria. Praesepe[a]. Cor dulce, cor amabile. Panis angelicus. Sub tuum praesidium. Ave Maria a 5. Ave Maria a 6. Pater noster. Magnificat-alleluia[b]
[a]Ansy Boothroyd, [b]Elizabeth McCormack mez

Corydon Singers and Orchestra /Matthew Best
Hyperion CDA66638 (77 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included. Recorded 1992-93

Asked to identify the composer of all these religious works except the Mass one would be most unlikely to think of Villa-Lobos. That larger-than-life exotic, that extravagantly experimental and boisterous figure, the composer of such chastely restrained music, the sweetly gentle Cor dulce, the controlled fervour of the Pater noster? Even the impressive and grandiose Magnificat-alleluia gives no hint of its country of origin. The one clue here might be that, of the two Ave Marias, the (earlier) five-part setting is in Portuguese. It is only the Mass that reveals all. Amid its austere style and purely diatonic, contrapuntal idiom the Sanctus suddenly seems to come from a different background: then one remembers that Sebastian is the patron saint of Rio de Janeiro; and looking into the score one finds that the liturgical heading of each movement is followed by a local one, the final Agnus Dei bearing the subtitle 'Sebastian, protector of Brazil'.

This programme, all of unaccompanied music except for the Magnificat-alleluia, should not be listened to as a continuity if some feeling of sameness is to be avoided: the Corydon Singers are most efficient in all they do, but the outstanding performance is of the Mass.

Antonio Vivaldi

Italian 1678-1741

GROVE Vivaldi was the son of a professional violinist who played at St Mark's and may have been involved in operatic management. Vivaldi was trained for the priesthood and ordained in 1703 but soon after his ordination ceased to say Mass; he claimed this was because of his unsure health (he is known to have suffered from chest complaints, possibly asthma or angina). In 1703 he was appointed maestro di violino at the Ospedale della Pietá, one of the Venetian girls' orphanages; he remained there until 1709, and held the post again, 1711-16; he then became maestro de' concerti. Later, when he was away from Venice, he retained his connection with the Pietà (at one period he sent two concertos by post each month). He became maestro di capella, 1735-8; even after then he supplied concertos and directed performances on special occasions. Vivaldi's reputation had begun to grow with his first publications: trio sonatas (probably 1703-5), violin sonatas (1709)and especially his 12 concertos L'estro armonico op. 3 (1711). These, containing some of his finest concertos, were issued in Amsterdam and widely circulated in northern Europe; this prompted visiting musicians to seek him out in Venice and in some cases commission works from him (notably for the Dresden court). Bach transcribed five op. 3 concertos for keyboard, and many German composers imitated his style. He published two further sets of sonatas and seven more of concertos, including 'La stravaganza' op 4 (c1712), Il cimento dell'armonia e dell'inventione (c1725, including 'The Four Seasons') and La cetra (1727).

It is in the concerto that Vivaldi's chief importance lies. He was the first composer to use ritornello form regularly in fast movements, and his use of it became a model; the same is true of his three-movement plan (fast-slow-fast). His methods of securing greater thematic unity were widely copied, especially the integration of solo and ritornello material; his vigorous rhythmic patterns, his violinistic figuration and his use of sequence were also much imitated. Of his c550 concertos, c350 are for solo instrument (more than 230 for violin); there are c40 double concertos, more than 30 for multiple soloists and nearly 60 for orchestra without solo, while more than 20 are chamber concertos for a small group of solo instruments without orchestra (the 'tutti ' element is provided by the instruments all playing together). Vivaldi was an enterprising orchestrator, writing several concertos for unusual combinations like viola d'amore and lute, or for ensembles including chalumeaux, clarinets, horns and other rarities. There are also many solo concertos for bassoon, cello, oboe and flute. Some of his concertos are programmatic, for example 'La tempesta di mare' ((the title of three concertos). Into this category also fall 'The Four Seasons', with their representation of seasonal activities and conditions accommodated within a standard ritornello form – these are described in the appended sonnets, which he may have written himself. Vivaldi was also much engaged in vocal music. He wrote a quantity of sacred works, chiefly for the Pietà girls, using a vigorous style in which the influence of the concerto is often marked. He was also involved in opera and spent much time travelling to promote his works. His earliest known opera was given in Vicenza in 1713; later he worked at theatres in Venice, Mantua (1718-20), Rome (probably 1723-5), possibly Vienna and Prague (around 1730), Ferrara (1737), Amsterdam (1738) and possibly Vienna during his last visit.

He was by most accounts a difficult man; in 1738 he was forbidden entry to Ferrara ostensibly because of his refusal to say Mass and his relationship with the singer Anna Giraud, a pupil of his with whom he travelled. More than 20 of his operas survive; those that have been revived include music of vitality and imagination as well as more routine items. But Vivaldi's importance lies above all in his concertos, for their boldness and originality and for their central place in the history of concerto form.

Wind Concertos

Bassoon Concertos –C, RV472; D minor, RV482; E minor, RV484; F, RV491; G, RV494; G minor, RV495; A minor, RV499
Klaus Thunemann bn I Musici
Philips 446 066-2PH (57 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1994 ◉

Vivaldi's distinctive individuality is in full flower in the rich invention which characterises the tut- tis of the fast movements of his bassoon concertos; and in the slow movements, as so often elsewhere, he proves himself a poet with the most delicate of sensibilities. In all of them, he seems to have been inspired by the colour and range of the instrument itself, exploring almost every possibility available to him in the bassoon of his day and, like Rameau in France, writing especially rewardingly for it in the tenor register. Thunemann, of course, plays an instrument of present-day manufacture, in keeping with the modern string instruments of I Musici; but e makes a very beautiful sound indeed.

To all but the most committed Vivaldians only one of the seven concertos here may seem at all familiar. That is the atmospheric Concerto in E minor (RV484), with its undulating first movement tutti s inspired, one might suspect, by Venetian waters. Thunemann instils life into every bar of his interpretation, performing dazzling feats of athleticism apparently with the utmost of ease, while at the same time giving thought to ornamentation. Not a note is either out of tune or misplaced and, in slow movements, many of which possess beguiling lyrical charm, Thunemann reveals himself as a musician of great sensitivity.

The Largo of the first concerto on the disc (RV491) his a striking example. Readers familiar with Vivaldi's sacred vocal music will recognise its derivation in part from a passage to be found both in his Magnificat (RV610) and his Kyrie (RV587). In the present context Vivaldi imbues an already arresting harmonic pattern with a drowsy, almost dreamlike fantasy in which the bassoon writing, treated here with an affecting improvisatory freedom, ranges widely with some striking intervals against sustained, softly modulating strings. It's a brief moment of magic.

Six Flute Concertos, Op 10
Patrick Gallois fl Orpheus Chamber Orchestra
DG 437 839-2GH (49 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1992 ●

Patrick Gallois is a player of agility and sensitivity, an intelligent artist who can make his metal flute speak with all the subtlety of varied articulation and tone colour that some of us had come to assume was only possible on the wooden Baroque instrument. These are deliciously light performances, in the best sense of the word; plenty of air allowed in, sparing and thoughtful use of vibrato, and above all an infectious bounce to the music-making in general. Gallois's sunny approach is matched by the excellent string players of the Orpheus Chamber Orchestra, whose stunning unanimity of ensemble, crispness of attack and sheer concentration-level once again make it hard to believe that they operate without a conductor. And both soloist and orchestra are equally responsive, too, to the uniquely tranquil beauties of the Vivaldian slow movement.

Flute Concertos, Op 10.
Flute Concerto in C minor, RV441
Nicolaus Esterházy Sinfonia / Béla Drahos fl
Naxos 8 553101 (59 minutes: DDD) Ⓢ
Recorded 1995 ●

Vivaldi's flute concertos have certainly not been neglected on disc, and there is a wide choice of 'authentic' and middle-of-the-road versions played on both tranverse flute and recorder; this present selection is in the MOR vein and faces numerous competitors. In the flute concertos Béla Drahos is a superb soloist, as smooth as silk and agile as a kitten, and whose flights of fanciful embellishment might have won Vivaldi's approval. The Esterházy Sinfonia sounds a little beefy at times in its opening statements, but in the presence of the soloist its touch is appropriately light, and the third Largo ('Il sonno '), of Op 10 No 2, 'La notte', is impressively hushed. The outer movements of the bonus concerto, R441, dance on the lightest of feet; the work was originally written for the recorder, but on whichever instrument it is played, you wonder why it has no other currently listed recording. This present one would carry a warm recommendation even if it were not at bargain price.

Double Concerto for Two Oboes and Strings in D Ⓟ
minor, RV535. Concertos for Multiple Instruments –
A, RV552, 'per eco in lontano '; D, RV562; F, RV568; F,
RV569; G minor, RV577, 'per l'orchestra di Dresda '
Philharmonia Baroque Orchestra /
Nicholas McGegan
Reference Recordings RRCD77 (72 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1996 ●

Here is Vivaldi-playing with a commendably light, athletic touch. It is so easy to make a meal out of his orchestral tuttis yet these performances inspire the music with expressive delicacy and rhythmic vitality. The programme is a colourful one of concertos for a variety of instruments, wind and strings, in various combinations. Apart from occasional instances of predictable passagework, present above all in some of the wind writing, this music is engaging on many different levels. Slow movements such as the wonderfully free violin fantasy of RV562 reveal the exhilarating flights of fancy of which Vivaldi was capable, while the profusion of alluring inflexions present in fast and slow movements alike makes strong appeal to the senses. Vivaldi was no stranger to the art of parody and, in the opening movement of RV568, we find him introducing sensuous, sighing quaver motifs present in the finale of the Concerto a due cori per la Santissima Assenzione di Maria Vergine (RV535). This kind of approach to Vivaldi's music greatly enlivens and refreshes its innate character. The disc is superbly recorded, allowing us to revel in every sonorous detail of solo and continuo playing alike.

Oboe Concertos –C, RV447; C, RV450; D, RV453; A minor, RV461; A minor, RV463. Concerto for Violin and Oboe in B flat, RV548
Douglas Boyd ob Marieke Blankestijn vn
Chamber Orchestra of Europe

DG 435 873-2GH (59 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1991 ●

Vivaldi wrote 17 solo oboe concertos, three for two oboes and another for oboe and violin. In this virtuoso programme the oboist, Douglas Boyd, has chosen five of the solo oboe concertos together with the more modestly conceived but no less captivating Concerto in B flat for oboe and violin. The oboe concertos have been selected discerningly, not only for their musical interest but also, it would seem, with an eye to their rarity value on the concert platform. Boyd, playing a modern oboe, gives fluent, sensitively shaped performances and is supported in a lively manner by the strings of the COE. Boyd is expressive in slow movements – they almost invariably possess considerable lyrical appeal – and athletic in faster ones; and he needs to be, for Vivaldi seldom showed mercy on his soloists. From among the many beautiful movements here the Larghetto of the Concerto in A minor (RV461) stands out and may be ranked among Vivaldi's happiest creations for the oboe. Fine recorded sound.

Recorder Concertos

Recorder Concertos[d] – in C minor, RV441[b]; in F, RV442[a]; in C, RV443[b]; in C, RV444[b]; in A minor, RV445[b]. Chamber Concerto in D, 'La Pastorella', RV95[bc]
[a]László Czidra, [b]László Kecskeméti recs
[c]Béla Horváth ob [c]István Hartenstein bn
[c]Tamás Zalay vn [c]György Eder vc [c]Borbála Dobozy hpd [d]Nicolaus Esterházy Sinfonia
Naxos 8 553829 (64 minutes: DDD) Ⓢ
Recorded c2002

This is claimed to be a recording of the 'complete' recorder concertos of Vivaldi (RV441-5) and as there is no other listed version of RV441 it has that field to itself. Such archival primacy would be of little significance if the performances were sub-standard – but here they are high quality on all counts.

Kecskeméti bears the bulk of the soloist's burden while Czidra appears only in RV442 (for treble recorder). Kecskeméti acquits himself on the same instrument with no less distinction in RV441 and, with no reflection on Czidra's manifest abilities, he could surely have made a clean sweep. It is Kecskeméti who has the greatest 'showcase' opportunities and he makes the most of them. His speed and clarity of articulation (as clean as a whistle, as it were) in the flanking movements are breathtaking and in some scale passages his sure-tongued choice of separate articulation gives life and variety – listen to the Allegro molto of RV443 and marvel! He adds embellishment where appropriate and in good taste. The basic five concertos alone would leave a disc somewhat under-filled and the choice of RV95, in which the recorder is featured, as a filler is a happy one. The Nicolaus Esterházy Sinfonia's contributions are happily light-footed. Excellent recording quality and bargain price are just extra reasons why this disc is a must-buy.

Vivaldi Recorder Concertos – in C minor, RV441; in G, RV443; in C, RV444 🅿
Sammartini Recorder Concerto in F
Telemann Suite in A minor, TWV55:a2
Pamela Thorby recs Sonnerie (Monica Huggett, Emilia Benjamin vns Katherine McGillivray va Alison McGillivray vc Sarah Groser vion Mathew Halls hpd/org)
Linn Records CKD183 (69 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded c2001 ●

Pamela Thorby's work with the Palladian Ensemble has alone been sufficient to establish her as a world class performer, and the reputation of Sonnerie has long been sky-high. Their coming together offers a delightful prospect and though, as any sports-person knows, teams assembled from star players do not always work happily, this one lives up to its promise. Their material has a familiar look but their delivery of it is of rare quality and fully justifies this journey along oft-trodden paths.

The music trips off Thorby's tongue with the utmost fluency, cleanly articulated, and without any trace of the distressing sagging or wavering of pitch on long notes that haunts too many otherwise laudable performances by some others. No less notable is her enhancing embellishment, particularly though not exclusively in the slow movements. Sonnerie provide the perfect substrate for Thorby's excursions: stylish, precise and ideally balanced in the Linn recording.

Throughout, one has the impression of a single mind in control of two 'hands', soloist and ripieno. This recording is sheer pleasure and comes highly recommended.

Cello Concertos

Cello Concertos – in D minor, RV407; in E flat, RV408; in F, RV411; in A minor, RV420; in A minor, RV421. Concerto for Multiple Instruments in C, RV561[ab]. Concerto for Violin, Cello and Strings, 'Il Proteo o sia il mondo al rovescio', RV544[a] 🅿
Ensemble Explorations
([a]Christine Busch, Dirk Vandaele vns Frans Vos va [b]Richte van der Meer vc Love Persson db Mike Fentross theo/gtr Attilio Cremonesi hpd/org) / Roel Dieltiens vc
Harmonia Mundi HMC90 1745 Ⓕ
(71 minutes: DDD) ●

Roel Dieltiens is a Baroque cellist par excellence and the modest size of Ensemble Explorations (seven players including continuo) suits these works admirably. Vivaldi poured some of his finest music into his numerous concertos for bassoon and cello, both dual-register instruments for which he had obvious affection – to which the affecting slow movements richly testify. Dieltiens' superb bow control and his natural empathy with style and emotional aura make these memorable musical experiences. His 'vocal' nuancing of volume and addition of exquisite embellishment comfortably reach the benchmark set by Pleeth and Bylsma in their 1977 recording of the G minor Double Concerto, RV531 (L'Oiseau Lyre). Listen to the Largo of the E flat Concerto, RV408, and prepare to tug a grateful forelock. These qualities enhance the quicker movements, albeit at a less intimate level.

The smaller ripieno is especially apt to the sonata-related concertos such as that in A minor, RV420, and in those in which it plays a more prominent role Ensemble Explorations provide ample weight to ensure contrast; their incisiveness, energy and audible enthusiasm are infectious. The quality of the recording per se calls for another tug of the forelock. A truly superb disc which will hold your attention from beginning to end.

Cello Concerto in A minor, RV422. 🅿
Violin Concerto in D minor, Op 4 No 8. String Concertos –C, RV117; E minor, RV134; G, RV151, 'Alla rustica'. Amor, hai vinto, RV683. Cessate, omai cessate, RV684
Sara Mingardo mez Francesca Vicari vn
Luigi Piovano vc Concerto Italiano /
Rinaldo Alessandrini hpd
Opus 111 OPS30-181 (60 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included. Recorded 1996 ●

This thoughtfully and attractively devised programme by Rinaldo Alessandrini and Concerto Italiano breaks up a sequence of five well contrasted concertos with two of Vivaldi's chamber cantatas. The two vocal pieces are both for alto with divided violins, viola and continuo; and their subject matter, dealt with in the customary pattern of two alternating recitatives and arias, concerns the efficacy of Cupid's arrows on those incredibly susceptible denizens of Arcadia. Sara Mingardo enlivens this music at every turn. Her voice is warm in tone, evenly projected and, in a pastoral setting where the cruel pangs of love are felt in almost every bar, appropriately anguished. The chamber cantatas are still among Vivaldi's better kept secrets and there is much that satisfies heart and mind alike. Of the five concertos three are concerti a quattro, or strings without soloist; in the solo concertos cellist Luigi Piovano and violinist Francesca Vicari, who also leads Concerto Italiano, are fluently stylish and technically assured. Like Alessandrini and his ensemble, they bring plenty of graceful gesture and effective articulation to the music. A most satisfying recital, both interpretively and for the window it opens on to the composer's widely ranging expressive vocabulary.

Cello Concertos – C minor, RV402; D minor, RV406; G, RV414. Sonatas – A minor, RV44; E flat, RV39; G minor, RV42 🅿
Christophe Coin vc Academy of Ancient Music /
Christopher Hogwood hpd
L'Oiseau-Lyre 433 052-2OH (67 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1990 ●

Christophe Coin's feeling for dance rhythms, his clear articulation and musical phrasing and his sharp ear for detail bring the concertos and sonatas alive in an infectious way. He is both firmly and imaginatively supported in the sonatas by a fine continuo group, and in the concertos by the strings of the Academy of Ancient Music. In the sonatas Christopher Hogwood varies the colour of the accompaniments by moving between harpsichord and organ, while cello and Baroque guitar add further variety and support. In the concertos, fast movements are characterised by vigorous, idiomatic passagework for the solo instrument punctuated by pulsating Vivaldian rhythms in the tuttis. In the slow movements, richly endowed with lyricism, the expressive intensity of the music is, on occasion, almost startling, revealing Vivaldi as a composer capable of far greater affective gestures than he is often given credit for. This music never fails to move the spirit.

Double and Triple Concertos
Two Cellos and Strings in G minor, RV531; Violin, Cello and Strings in F, RV544, 'Il Proteo ò sia il mondo rovescio'; Three Violins and Strings in F, RV551; Two Violins and Strings in A, RV552, 'Per eco in lontano'; Violin, Two Cellos and Strings in C, RV561; Two Violins, Two Cellos and Strings in D, RV564 Christophe Coin vc Il Giardino Armonico / Giovanni Antonini
Teldec Das Alte Werk 4509-94552-2 Ⓕ
(64 minutes:DDD). Recorded 1994 ●●●

This is a strong programme which almost unfailingly presents the Venetian composer in his most colourful clothing. Though Vivaldi often wrote imaginatively for pairs of wind instruments, his musical ideas were of necessity confined by their technical limitations. With violins and cellos, on the other hand, he was better able to extend his creative faculties, which resulted in music of more sustained interest. This is certainly true of the two concertos which he wrote for two violins, two cellos and strings, one of them (RV564) included here. Making an even rarer appearance on disc is a Concerto in F major for violin and cello (RV544), the least well known of three such works from Vivaldi's pen. Two versions of this concerto exist, the other (RV572) containing additional parts for pairs of flutes and oboes. Both carry the engaging title Il Proteo ò sia il mondo al rovescio. Infrequently performed, too, is a C major piece for violin, two cellos and strings (RV561), though the characteristically Vivaldian ritornello of the opening movement may recall other contexts in the minds of listeners. The three remaining works are fairly mainstream Vivaldi: the G minor Concerto for two cellos (RV531), the F major Concerto for three violins (RV551) and the A major Concerto for two violins, one of them functioning as an echo, the violine per eco in lontano (RV552). From this, readers will infer a pleasing variety of texture and, within the limits of a purely string programme, colour. Il Giardino Armonico has thought carefully about the latter, ringing the changes in the keyboard continuo between organ and harpsichord, and introducing a theorbo, too. But what makes this disc a real winner is the exhilarating character of the playing, both solo and ripieno. Playing of vitality and lyricism brings Vivaldi's music to life in a thrilling manner. Indeed, the integrity and musicianly character of these performances is in no small measure heightened by the presence of Christophe Coin. An outstanding issue.

Viola d'amore Concertos

Concerto for Viola d'amore, Lute and Strings in D minor, RV540. Chamber Concerto in G minor, RV107. Concerto for Cello and Strings in G, RV413. Concerto for Flute and Strings in G minor, 'La notte', RV439. Concerto for Oboe and Strings in D minor, RV454. Concerto for Two Horns and Strings in F, RV539. Concertos for Multiple Instruments – in D minor, RV566; in F,'Il Proteo ò sia il mondo rovescio ', RV572 P
Orchestra of the Age of Enlightenment
Linn Records CKD151 (74 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 2000 ●

It is a nice idea for the Orchestra of the Age of Enlightenment to record a disc of such varied Vivaldian fare. The young women of the orchestra which Vivaldi directed at the Ospedale della Pietà in Venice were as renowned for the range of instruments they could wield as for their virtuosity; so it seems neatly apposite that the OAE, so full of capable soloists itself, should use this music to celebrate its members' own star qualities. And the mixture is a wide one:three solo concertos; a rare Concerto for two horns; the deservedly popular Concerto for lute and viola d'amore, two concertos for typically extravagant Vivaldian multiple line-ups; and one of those chamber concertos in which all the players are soloists. The OAE play with great expertise and good taste throughout. Judging by the list in the booklet, they use a relatively large body of strings, but, although this is noticeable, there is no feeling of heaviness, and indeed the use of two double-basses gives the sound a substantial foundation which is at the same time deliciously light on its feet. There is a total of 16 soloists listed: among the highlights are David Watkin's habitually assured and intensely musical playing of the Cello Concerto; Lisa Beznosiuk, sensitive as ever in La notte (though struggling a bit against the string sound); Andrew Clark and Roger Montgomery, treading securely and confidently through the Concerto for two horns; Anthony Robson, a little under the note sometimes but showing good breath control and phrasing in the Oboe Concerto; and a fairy-light performance of the Concerto for lute and viola d'amore from Elizabeth Kenny and Catherine Mackintosh. The performances are all directorless, and there was the odd place where a guiding hand might have pepped things up (or stopped the theorbo from twiddling so much in the slow movement of the Cello Concerto), but in general this is a relaxed and convivial Vivaldi programme that one can simply sit back and enjoy.

Viola d'amore Concertos –D, RV392; D minor, RV393; D minor, RV394; D minor, RV395; A, RV396; A minor, RV397 Orchestra of the Age of Enlightenment / Catherine Mackintosh va d'amore P
Hyperion CDA66795 (67 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1995 ●●

John Evelyn (1620-1706) was beguiled and surprised by the sound of the viola d'amore, but he should hardly have been so by the fact that it was on that occasion 'played... by a German'; that was the nationality of most of the composers who wrote for it – Bach, Biber, Telemann and Mattheson. The instrument was distinguished by its wide compass, its use of sympathetic strings (not bowed but allowed to resonate), and the fact that it lent itself to playing 'the lyra way' (as with the bass viola da gamba), facilitating the use of multiple stopping and contrapuntal textures. Vivaldi was obviously no less attracted by it; six concertos are a lot for such an unusual instrument, and it is fair to say that they represent some of the most beguiling music he wrote. Mackintosh, on top form, acts her role with the utmost virtuosity, lovely tone, unimpeachable intonation, and fine style – with some elegant embroidery. The OAE is admirable, making this recording one to treasure.

'L'estro armonico', Op 3

L'estro armonico P
Europa Galante / Fabio Biondi vn
Virgin Classics Veritas ② 545315-2 Ⓕ
(100 minutes: DDD). Recorded 1997-98 ●●

No other set of Vivaldi's concertos contains the sheer variety on display in L'estro armonico. The catalogue has seldom been without a decent recording of these ceaselessly fascinating concertos, though none begins to approach this version in respect of fantasy and exuberance. Fabio Biondi and his Italian ensemble, Europa Galante, bring something entirely fresh and vital to oft-performed repertoire, illuminating well-trodden paths with affective articulation and eloquently voiced inflexions. Not all of their extravagant, Mediterranean gestures, perhaps, will find favour with listeners; indeed, some of Biondi's own embellishments can be a little inapposite. Tempos are well chosen, by and large, and ensemble is clear-textured and evenly balanced. The continuo group, which includes harpsichord, organ, archlute and Baroque guitar, makes an important contribution to the overall success.

This music is wonderful stuff, rejuvenating and immensely satisfying.

The Four Seasons, Op 8 Nos 1-4, and 5-12

Violin Concertos, Op 8 – Nos 1-4, ‘The Four Seasons’: No 1 in E, ‘Spring’, RV269; No 2 in G minor, ‘Summer’, RV315; No 3 in F, ‘Autumn’, RV293; No 4 in F minor, ‘Winter’, RV297; No 5 in E flat, RV253, ‘La tempesta di mare’; No 6 in C, RV180, ‘Il piacere’; No 7 in D minor, RV242; No 9 in D minor, RV236; No 10 in B flat, RV362, ‘La caccia’; No 11 in D, RV210; No 12 in C (two versions, RV178 and RV449)

The Four Seasons, Op 8 Nos 1-4 🅿
Violin Concertos in E flat, RV257; in B flat, RV376; in D, RV211
Giuliano Carmignola vn
Venice Baroque Orchestra / Andrea Marcon
Sony Classical SK51352 Ⓕ
(72 minutes: DDD) ●●

Vivaldi’s Four Seasons, like nature’s, come and go in their various moods and meteorological vicissitudes. We ’ve had ochre sunsets from Louis Kaufmann, Harnoncourt’s Breughel-style rusticity and the provocative Nigel Kennedy, to mention but a scant few. Giuliano Carmignola’s primary claim on our attentions (this is his second shot at the piece) is, aside from a delightfully woody-sounding Baroque instrument, a keen narrative flair. Furthermore, he knows the musical period, understands principles of embellishment and doesn’t hesitate to enrich his performances with added colour and with rhythmic thrust. ‘Spring’ arrives in rude high spirits, toying with birdsong (slowly at first then speeding up) and with thunder thrashing between violin desks. The violas’ ‘barking dog’ is worryingly prominent (that is if you don ’t like dogs)and the finale contrasts a swelling legato against sparkly solo passagework. The ‘impetuous weather ’of summer ’has power enough to keep the National Grid up and running, and the diverse winds of the multi-faceted opening Allegro of ‘Autumn’ and the way the harpsichord holds its own in the second and third movements are wonderful. The cruel weathers of ‘Winter’ inspire the expected bursts of virtuosity while the Largo’s raindrops unexpectedly seep through to the busy bass line (most versions don’t allow for the leak). Varieties of plucked continuo help fill out textures and Carmignola himself plays with immense brilliance. The three additional violin concertos are all said to be first recordings and reveal a rather different aspect of Vivaldi’s style. Generally speaking, they sound more formal than the Four Seasons, almost pre-classical in RV257’s opening Andante molto e quasi allegro and with sideways glances at Rameau in the opening of RV211 (which also includes a brief first-movement cadenza). Dance rhythms again predominate.

Great sound, by the way, full and forward and with every instrumental strand given its proper due. Thinking in terms only of the Four Seasons, good rivals are so plentiful that comparative discussion becomes less a question of ‘who gets it right’ than how you like your birds and storms. There are countless period-instrument options and almost as many that use modern instruments, but take heed of period performing practice. Up to now, the period favourites have been Il Giardino Armonico (reviewed below) and Harnoncourt’s Concentus Musicus Wien, and there’s no reason why this new version shouldn’t join their hallowed ranks.

The Four Seasons, Op 8 Nos 1-4; Op 8, Nos 8 and 9 🅿
Enrico Onofri vn Paolo Grazzi ob
Il Giardino Armonico / Giovanni Antonini
Teldec 4509-96158-2 (61 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1993 ●●

Il Giardino Armonico doesn’t do anything extraordinary; it is more a matter of its demonstration of what can be achieved with small forces – 5. 1. 2. 1 plus soloist and continuo. Here, small is flexible and it highlights the differences in colour achieved by varying the continuo – bassoon, cello, organ, harpsichord and theorbo, unobscured by the ripieno, all have their moments. Numbers of ‘chamber’ dimensions also favour unanimity of attack and changes of dynamics and pace, all vividly accomplished by IGA. The dog barks harshly in ‘Spring’ but without disturbing the shepherd’s peaceful dreams, and the chill of ‘Autumn’ in the Adagio molto is conveyed by the ethereal strings with the harpsichord firmly relegated to a supporting role. Onofri is as good a soloist as may be met in a long march, pitch-perfect, incisive but not ‘edgy’, and effortlessly alert to every nuance.

All the foregoing good things are also to be found in the other two concertos from Op 8, together with Grazzi’s liquid-toned and agile oboe play- ing in that in D minor, attractively supported in the Largo by theorbo and bassoon. A tasty addi- tion to any collection.

Violin Concertos, Op 8 – Nos 1-12 🅿
(from original manuscripts)
Europa Galante / Fabio Biondi vn
Virgin Veritas ② VMD5 61980-2 Ⓕ
(103 minutes: DDD) ●●

So excitingly packed with ideas are these readings that it is hard to believe that this is the same ensemble as on a recording of the same repertoire 10 years ago for Opus 11. The pictorial elements in the Seasons are thrillingly realised. The storms are violent, ‘Winter’ is bleak and frighteningly buffeting, in ‘Autumn’ the hunt canters in from afar; only the opening of ‘Summer’ disappoints, strangely lacking in the required dog-day torpor. To this are added Biondi’s now customary liberties with tempo, articulation, off-beat accents and larger-than-life violinistic effects, including some flying spiccato and col legno moments. Yet if interpretative freedom is much to the fore, there is at the same time a sense of iron directorial control amid all the high jinks which keeps things in order.

If you are wondering, ‘from the original manuscripts’ means that Fabio Biondi and Europa Galante are playing not from the 1725 printed edition of Vivaldi's Op 8, but from earlier surviving manuscript copies (not the composer's) which differ in certain details. The differences are easily missed, the most noticeable being the alternating (and rather more effective) upward scales in the storm section of 'Spring'. What is new is the extension of this revisionist thinking to include the other eight concertos in the set, for which manuscript collections in Dresden and Turin have duly been plundered.

Il Giardino Armonico offer a veritable fireworks display, but if your preference is for something a little more, well, English, you might be better off with the Academy of Ancient Music on L'Oiseau-Lyre, or The English Concert on CRD. However, if it is hot and cold running excitement you want, look no further than this thrilling new arrival.

The Four Seasons, Op 8 Nos 1-4 🅿
Oboe Concertos, Op 7 – No 1 in B flat, RV465; No 5 in F, RV285*a*
Andrew Manze vn Marcel Ponseele ob
Amsterdam Baroque Orchestra / Ton Koopman
Warner Elatus 0927-46726-2 (56 minutes: DDD) Ⓜ
Recorded 1993-94 ●

This is a splendid set, valid for a lifetime of pleasure. Little differences in attention to detail soon begin to show, first at 0'17"of the first movement of 'Spring', where the chords that are usually it hard are here given a happy little squeeze. Amsterdam Baroque (consisting here of 13 instrumentalists) play with the unanimity of one mind and body, with extreme changes of volume that never sound theatrically contrived, as concerned with the fate of every note as with the shaping of each phrase. Manze's bow breathes vocal life into his strings; in the slow movements many notes whisper their way into being, and his fortissimo whiplashes have raspfree edges. There are many delightful little personal touches – his slurred resolution of the sighing appoggiatura at 2'50 " in the third move- ment of 'Spring', and the way he nudges his way up the ladder of trills in the first movement of 'Autumn' are just two.

The remaining works come from Op 7, in the first of which (RV465) the oboe is the designated soloist; its transcribed role in No 5 (RV285*a*) accords with Baroque practice. Both are charming works with a high level of inspiration, played with no less affection than the Seasons.

Violin Concertos, Op 8 – Nos 1-6
(incl 'The Four Seasons') Mariana Sirbu vn I Musici
Philips 446 699-2PH (60 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1995 ●

Mariana Sirbu here joins the company of the many artists who have recorded The Four Seasons. Sirbu is no less incisive than any of the others and, particularly in the slow movements which she plays with little added adornment, her lines are fine and imaginatively nuanced. I Musici remain crisp and responsive, and a novel touch is their addition of a lute to the continuo; it is from time to time audible, providing the little fill-ins usually the prerogative of the harpsichord, as for example in the final Presto of 'Summer 'and the Adagio molto of 'Autumn', though in the latter its economical comments perhaps lack the icy edge of the harpsichord. The two other concertos from Op 8 (La tempesta di mare and Il piacere) are no less compellingly played. This may be counted among the very best middle-of-the-road versions of The Four Seasons, strongly recommended to first-time buyers. The well-balanced recording has brightness and life.

Violin Concertos, Op 8 – Nos 5-7, 9-11 and 12 🅿
(two versions)
Enrico Onofri vn Paolo Grazzi ob Il Giardino Armonico / Giovanni Antonini
Teldec Das Alte Werk 4509-94566-2 Ⓕ
(74 minutes: DDD). Recorded 1994-95 ●

In the completion disc of Il Giardino Armonico's Op 8, as two of the concertos exist in alternative forms, with oboe vice violin (RV236 = 454, RV178 = 449), they are given in both versions – with negligible differences in tempo. The virtues of Il Giardino Armonico are, if anything, even more vividly apparent in this recording. Onofri is once again spellbinding in his imaginative use of a varied continuo, here highlighted in the Adagio of RV362 (La caccia) played only by violin and theorbo. One complaint: if there is logic behind the order in which the concertos are presented, it is not apparent. The first volume has six concertos (61 minutes), Vol 2 has eight (74 minutes), whereas to place Nos 1-6 and RV454 on one disc, and Nos 7-12 and RV449 on the other would have created no apparent problem. One would, however, need a far more compelling reason not to make a beeline for the nearest CD store for these magical and finely recorded discs.

'La stravaganza', Op 4

Concertos for Violin and Strings, 'La stravaganza', Op 4 – No 1 in B flat, RV383 a; No 2 in E minor, RV279; No 3 in G, RV301; No 4 in A minor, RV357; No 5 in A, RV347; No 6 in G minor, RV316*a*
Andrew Watkinson vn City of London Sinfonia / Nicholas Kraemer
Naxos 8 553323 (52 minutes: DDD) Ⓢ
Recorded 1995

Violin Concertos, 'La stravaganza', Op 4 – No 7 in C, RV185; No 8 in D minor, RV249; No 9 in F, RV284; No 10 in C minor, RV196; No 11 in D minor, RV204; No 12 in G, RV298
Andrew Watkinson vn City of London Sinfonia / Nicholas Kraemer
Naxos 8 553324 (46 minutes: DDD) Ⓢ
Recorded 1995

La stravaganza is the second of the sets of concertos published during Vivaldi's lifetime. It was issued in about 1714 as the composer's Op 4 and, as with the greater number of his printed collections, contains 12 works. They are essentially violin concertos, although, to a much lesser extent than L'estro armonico, Vivaldi also provides on occasion solo parts for an additional violin or cello. These concertos have long been favourites, above all, perhaps, for the profusion of lyrically affecting slow movements, of which those belonging to Concertos Nos 1, 4, 5 and 12 are notably fine examples: in this music there is delicate nuance, poetic fantasy and sheer originality lying beneath the immediately recognisable hallmarks of the composer's outward style. Nicholas Kraemer is no stranger to this repertory having already recorded two of Vivaldi's other printed sets, Opp 8 and 9. Those, however, were with his period-instrument Raglan Baroque Players, whereas La stravaganza is played on instruments tuned to today's standard pitch. This, paradoxically, may be closer to the pitch which Vivaldi himself used rather than the lower Baroque pitch.

Listening to this music, so full of vitality, invention and expressive tenderness, leaves one feeling exhilarated. Andrew Watkinson plays with virtuosic flair, but senses the highly developed fantasy present in every one of the concertos. His embellishments are tasteful and restrained and his melodic line always clearly articulated. Tempos, for the most part, are effectively judged, though the almost unbearably beautiful Largo of the First Concerto, with its emotionally highly charged modulation towards the close, is perhaps a shade too slow.

The strings of the City of London Sinfonia sound tonally bright and unfailingly alert. Only in the Adagio of No 8 does the balance of the recording falter; the harpsichord's arpeggios (cf the Adagio molto of 'Autumn')might have been allowed a little more prominence.

---

12 Concertos for Violin and Strings, 🅿
'La stravaganza', Op 4
Arte dei Suonatori / Rachel Podger vn
Channel Classics ② CCS15958 Ⓕ
(103 minutes: DDD). Also available on SACD
CCSSA19503. Recorded c2002 ○○○

By the standards of the average Vivaldi violin concerto, the La stravaganza set is quite extravagant stuff, full of fantasy and experiment – novel sounds, ingenious textures, exploratory melodic lines, original types of figuration, unorthodox forms. It's heady music, and listening to its 12 concertos at a sitting, isn't a mode of listening one would recommend.

Still less so in performances as high in voltage as the present ones. There is a current trend in Baroque performance to get away from the coolness and objectivity which for a long time were supposed (on the whole, mistakenly) to be a part of performing practice of the time, but possibly the pendulum has swung a little wildly the other way. Perhaps here it is intended to reflect Vivaldi's own notorious freedom of performance. But anyone who has admired earlier recordings with period instruments may find these a little extravagant and hard-hitting. And they are not helped by the resonant acoustic of the church in Poland used for the recording, which produces a full and bright sound but a boomy bass and less clear a texture than might be ideal.

That said, however, these performances by Rachel Podger are crackling with vitality and executed with consistent brilliance as well as a kind of relish in virtuosity that catches the showy spirit, the self-conscious extravagance, of this particular set of works. There are plenty of movements here where her sheer digital dexterity is astonishing – for instance, the finale of No 6, with its scurrying figures, the second movement of No 7 or the finale of No 2 with its repetitive figures and leaping arpeggios. But perhaps even more enjoyable is the exquisitely fine detail of some of the slow movements. No 8 in D minor is perhaps the wildest concerto of the lot, with its extraordinary lines in the first movement, the passionate, mysterious outer sections in the second and the powerful and original figuration in the finale: that one has a performance to leave you breathless.

Another thing Podger is specially good at is the shaping of those numerous passages of Vivaldian sequences, which can be drearily predictable, but aren't so here because she knows just how to control the rhythmic tension and time the climax and resolution with logic and force. This set is certainly recommended as a fine example of a modern view of Baroque performance – and it sounds even better on SACD.

String / Violin Concertos

Concertos for Strings – G minor, RV531; D, RV564 🅿
Concertos for Recorder and Strings – A minor,
RV108; G, RV436. Trio Sonatas – D minor, 'La follia ',
RV63; C minor, RV83
Musica Alta Ripa
Dabringhaus und Grimm MDG309 0927-2 Ⓕ
(56 minutes:DDD). Recorded 1999 ●

None of the pieces is new to the catalogue, but the playing is of a calibre that might entice readers to consider these alternative versions. The two largest works are the Concerto for two cellos and strings in G minor, and another, in D major, for two violins, two cellos and strings. Both fare well in the hands of sensitive performers such as these, and especially enjoyable is the beautifully inflected playing of the two solo cellists in the G minor work.

Albert Brüggen is an excellent cellist, and here (alongside partner Juris Teichmanis) he fulfils expectation raised by previous discs. Vivaldi wrote two concertos for pairs of solo violins and cellos; the other is RV575 – and both are satisfying pieces with beguiling slow movements. Melodically, this one gives pride of place to a solo violin in its centrally placed Largo, but one should nevertheless be allowed to hear more of the solo cello than is granted by this performance. The rhythmic élan of the finale is quite exhilarating. The two remaining concertos feature a recorder. One, RV436, is scored for transverse flute with strings, though a descant recorder has been substituted here. The other, RV108, is a chamber concerto for treble recorder, two violins and continuo. The soloist in each is Danya Segal, who brings the music to life with fluency and unpretentious eloquence. An attractive menu is completed by two strongly contrasting sonatas which, in their quite different ways, demonstrate Vivaldi's craftsmanship and invention in the medium.

This disc makes rewarding listening. The pieces have been chosen with real discernment and are played with virtuosity and an effective understanding of style.

String Concertos – in C, RV110; in C, 'Ripieno', RV115; in C minor, RV118; in D minor, 'Madrigalesco', RV129; in E minor, RV134; in F, RV142; in G, RV145; in G, 'Alla rustica', RV151; in G minor, RV156; in A, 'Ripieno', RV158; in A minor, RV161; in B flat, RV166; in B flat, RV167
Collegium Musicum 90 / Simon Standage vn
Chandos Chaconne CHAN0687 Ⓕ
(62 minutes: DDD). Recorded c2002 ●

Like its predecessor, this set (Vol 3 of Collegium Musicum 90's survey of Vivaldi's string concertos) offers a varied selection of works which bears testament to their composer's untiring imagination. Vivaldi composed more than 40 of these sparky little miniatures, united by an (almost) uniform adoption of a three-movement format and by the lack anywhere of any kind of soloist; for this reason they are also sometimes known either as 'concertos for orchestra' or 'ripieno concertos'. None lasts longer than eight minutes, and most come in under five.

CM90 perform with accomplished ease, attempting nothing outrageous but maintaining a relaxed bonhomie and clear-cut eloquence entirely suited to the music's modest aspirations. Theirs is not the taut Vivaldi sound we have become used to hearing from other ensembles, but they have no difficulty serving up lyrical sweetness or joyous energy as required. Realistically and lucidly recorded, the disc leaves little to be desired.

String Concertos – D minor, RV129, 'Concerto madrigalesco'; E flat, RV130, 'Sonata al santo sepolcro'; C minor, RV202; G minor, RV517; B flat, RV547; C minor, RV761. Sinfonia in B minor, RV169, 'Sinfonia al santo sepolcro'. Double Concerto in G minor, RV517 Ⓟ
Adrian Chamorro vn Maurizio Naddeo vc
Europa Galante / Fabio Biondi vn
Opus 111 OP309004 (52 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1990 ●
Also available (coupled with RV281, 133, 541, 286, 511 and 531) on Opus 111 ② OP20009 Ⓜ

This invigorating programme contains both well-known and less well-known concertos by Vivaldi. The performances sparkle with life and possess an irresistible spontaneity. The Concertos for one and two violins (RV761 and RV202) are comparative rarities and are played with agility and insight by the soloist director Fabio Biondi and his alert and responsive ensemble. Biondi himself is capable of light and articulate bowing and has a natural feeling for graceful turns of phrase. Vivaldi's virtuoso writing occasionally finds chinks in his armour, but with enlightened music-making of this order it matters little. Everywhere Vivaldi's infectious rhythms are tautly controlled and the music interpreted with character and conviction. Perhaps the highlight of the disc is the Concerto in B flat for violin and cello. Outer movements are crisply articulated and played with almost startling energy while the poignant lyricism of the Andante is touchingly captured. A refreshing and illuminating disc; the recorded sound is clear and ideally resonant.

Dresden Concertos – D, RV213; D, RV219; D, RV224; D minor, RV240; E flat, RV260; A, RV344; B minor, RV388
Cristiano Rossi vn Accademia I Filarmonici / Alberto Martini
Naxos 8 554310 (67 minutes: DDD) Ⓢ
Recorded 1998

The Dresden link was forged by Vivaldi's friend and one-time pupil Johann Georg Pisendel. Pisendel visited Venice in 1716 when he appears to have struck up a warm friendship with Vivaldi, who dedicated several sonatas and concertos to him. The seven violin concertos on this disc have survived in manuscripts preserved in the Dresden Sächsische Landesbibliothek. Much of this music will be entirely new to most collectors. By and large these are pieces which do not wear their hearts on their sleeves. There are few extravagant flourishes and perhaps less than we might expect in the way of extrovert gesture. But there is no lack of brilliance in the solo violin writing – Pisendel's reputation as a virtuoso was hardly less than Vivaldi's –and, as ever, the music contains a profusion of effective rhythmic ideas. The solo violin parts are entrusted to Cristiano Rossi, who often, though not always, discovers the fantasy in Vivaldi's solo writing. The bowing is graceful and relaxed even if intonation is occasionally awry. The A major Concerto, RV344 affords a good instance of soloist and orchestra at their most persuasive. But the lyrically expressive violin melody against a dotted rhythm continuo of the Largo of RV224 is unquestionably the most alluring.

The more you hear this music, the more you are likely to be captivated by it. The recorded sound seems a little boxy and confined, but textures come through clearly all the same.

Violin Concertos – in C, RV177; in C, RV191; in D, RV222; in E minor RV273; in F RV295; in B flat RV375 Ⓟ
Giuliano Carmignola vn Venice Baroque Orchestra / Andrea Marcon hpd
Sony Classical SK89362 (75 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ

The point of this release is that these relatively unfamiliar violin concertos, probably composed in the 1730s, come from late in Vivaldi's career and therefore have a style of their own. Vivaldi stopped publishing his concertos after his Op 12 set of 1729, having come to the conclusion that he could make more money from selling them singly in manuscript to the many wealthy music lovers who visited Venice on the Grand Tour and preferred a work by Vivaldi to a Canaletto painting as their souvenir. The result is that today these concertos are virtually unknown, and so, too, is the notion of a late Vivaldi style. But it is there, and this disc demonstrates it well. Here, the regularity and succinctness of the better-known concertos are replaced by an altogether more discursive kind of inspiration, in which Vivaldi takes more time, thickens the textures, investigates a few more corners. There is less raw energy than before, but more grace and richness and still plenty of memorable moments. The performances are first-rate. Giuliano Carmignola, a relatively recent convert from the modern violin, is a highly accomplished soloist, able to negotiate Vivaldi's complex lines with great assurance and a wide variety of attacks and articulations, though always with the smoothness and easy elegance that one ought to expect from a pupil of Milstein and Szeryng. The Venice Baroque Orchestra are lithe and alert, and produce a marvellously full sound, with bass notes positively thundering out into the recording's ample acoustic.

Violin Concertos – in D minor, RV235; in E flat, RV251; in E flat, RV258; in F, RV296; in B minor, RV386; B minor, RV389 Giuliano Carmignola vn 🅿
Venice Baroque Orchestra / Andrea Marcon
Sony Classical SK87733 (72 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded c2002

A whole facet of Vivaldi's work has long been under-appreciated, which is a pity because compared to the pithy energy of the earlier published concertos these works are richer, more ruminative, perhaps simply more beautiful. The first movement of RV258 has a distinctly pre-Classical sound to it, while its second movement shows an operatic concentration of emotion. Yet the old violinist trickery is still there, even if it is more attuned to the overall tenor of the music. This may be the Red Priest with pipe and slippers, but he can still make the notes jump when the bow is in his hand.

As we have come to expect from this soloist and orchestra, these are performances of immense accomplishment and poise. Giuliano Carmignola is a silky player whom Vivaldi's most difficult violin-writing cannot perturb, but he is more than just a technician who can whizz through scales and arpeggios in his sleep; throughout, his playing displays a sweetly nourished tone and a fine poetic sense which is entirely in keeping with the music's relaxed beauty. The sensitively attentive strings of the Venice Baroque Orchestra, superbly recorded as ever, make the perfect match. Exquisite stuff.

Concertos for Multiple Instruments

Concerto for Multiple Instruments in C, RV557 🅿
Double Concertos – 2 Oboes in D minor, RV535; Oboe and Bassoon in G, RV545; 2 Trumpets in C, RV537; 2 Horns in F, RV538. Oboe Concerto in A minor, RV461. Bassoon Concerto in E minor, RV484
Ensemble Zefiro /Alfredo Bernardini
Astrée Naïve E8679 (64 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1998 ●●

Ensemble Zefiro is one of the most remarkable Baroque bands to emerge during the last decade or so, though we hear of it less often than it deserves. Its specialised front line is its battery of exceptionally gifted wind players, but the support troops of strings and continuo are no less worthy of commendation. In all technical and musical respects they think, breathe and act as one. Their dynamic range (from sotto voce whisper to as many *f*s as you regard as adding up to 'issimo') is put to vivid and impressive use, whether terraced in crescendos or diminuendos, or in the finely judged squeezing of notes. The Allegros are crisp, animated, joyously propulsive and full of Italian sunshine, and the eloquent music-making of the oboe and bassoon soloists effortlessly conceals Vivaldi's severe technical demands. It is perhaps the slow movements that make the deepest impression: how many times have we heard the same harmonic progressions but marvelled at Vivaldi's ability to invest them with constantly new charm and depth? There are appealing conversations in those of RV545 (oboe and bassoon), RV535 (two oboes), RV557 (two recorders, whose players are not among the declared personnel in the booklet!) and RV538 (two cellos). They are all marked by stylish embellishment, and the last was an irresistible reminder of the benchmark recording of the two-cello Concerto RV531 by Pleeth and Bylsma with the AAM (L'Oiseau Lyre). Nicholas Anderson has rightly described Alberto Grazzi as 'the poet of the bassoon'; in this recording we have a veritable eisteddfod. This is a faultless and marvellous recording.

Concertos[a] – D, 'L 'inquietudine', RV234; E, 'Il riposo, per il Santissimo Natale', RV270. Recorder Concerto No 2 in G minor, 'La notte', RV439[b]. Concerto for 2 Cellos in G minor, RV531[c]. Concertos for Multiple Instruments – A, 'Per eco in lontano', RV552; F, 'La tempesta di mare', RV570; B flat, 'Concerto funèbre', RV579 🅿
[b]Lorenzo Cavasanti rec [c]Maurizio Naddeo, [c]Antonio Fantinuoli vcs Europa Galante / Fabio Biondi[a] vn
Virgin Veritas VC5 45424-2 (64 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1999 ●

There's a real lickety-split opening to this colourful disc of Vivaldi concertos: the violin concerto L'inquietudine, not one of its composer's best-known, really earns its title with a restlessly virtuosic solo part, dispatched with taut, nervous energy by Fabio Biondi. In truth there's some scintillating music here, as well as performances which mix suitable inspiration with scrupulous but unfussy attention to detail. The nearest we get to well-trodden ground here are the vigorous La tempesta di mare and the fantastical La notte (played here in their later 'flute' revisions, but on recorder), and both are performed with tightly controlled virtuosity, and with plenty of surprises – the giant off-beat accents in both concertos' finales, for instance. Elsewhere we get a creamy account of the charming (but perhaps slightly long) Concerto per eco in lontano, a strong-boned concerto for two violins, and an exquisite, muted-string Christmas concerto entitled Il riposo. If the sombre Concerto funèbre for multiple soloists is a slight disappointment, it is only because Concerto Italiano (for Erato) have recently taken it to another level of dark theatricality. Overall, though, this is another disc to add to the growing pile of wonderfully refreshing and enlightening Vivaldi recordings to have come out of Italy in recent years.

Concertos for Multiple Instruments – C, 'Per la Solennità di S Lorenzo', RV556[b]; C, RV554; B flat, 'Concerto funèbre', RV579[b]. Concerto for Strings in E flat, 'Sonata al Santo Sepolcro', RV130[b]. Clarae stellae, RV625[a]. Stabat mater in F minor, RV621[ab]
[a]Sara Mingardo contr Concerto Italiano / Rinaldo Alessandrini [b]hpd
Opus 111 OP30367 (71 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included. Recorded 1999 ●

'Rediscover the feminine vocal world of the Red Priest in Venice' state the cover notes to this release. In fact, only two of the six pieces offered here are vocal, of which the star work, the Stabat mater, is one of the few by Vivaldi thought to have been written for a male alto. In both the motet Clarae stellae and the Stabat mater, Mingardo's singing is firm and richly coloured, moving easily through a range that includes the kind of rock-solid low notes that few male altos seem able to produce. In the Stabat mater, furthermore, she demonstrates exemplary control in some notably slow tempos. Where well-regarded recordings of the piece from Andreas Scholl and Robin Blaze have scored through sheer vocal beauty, Mingardo and Alessandrini present a dejectedly emotional and drawn-out reading which, without resorting to hysterics, reaches several levels deeper into the text. This is something quite special, and it's only a pity that the voice is somewhat recessed in the balance.

The instrumental pieces on the disc make a fascinating selection, ranging from two of Vivaldi's kaleidoscopic 'multi-instrument' concertos to the tiny Sonata al Santo Sepolcro, and all are performed crisply and with plenty of thoughtful and original detail by Alessandrini and his band. Most striking is the Concerto funèbre, a consolatory piece full of unusual instrumental colours – including parts for a chalumeau and three viole all'inglese (a 'lost' instrument substituted here by violas d'amore) – which in its introductory slow movement even manages to take on a rather Beethovenian hue. Elsewhere, the San Lorenzo Concerto sees gaily bubbling outer movements framing a memorable slow one in which a typically serene solo violin line is accompanied by a gently prodding C clarinet. It is an extraordinary sound, but only one of the many delights and surprises of this inspiriting disc, which is in almost all respects a most satisfying Vivaldi release.

Chamber Concertos

Chamber Concertos –D, RV93; D, RV94; 🄿
F, RV98, 'La tempesta di mare'; G minor, RV104, 'La notte'; G minor, RV107; A minor, RV108; F, RV442.
Trio Sonata in D minor, RV63 Il Giardino Armonico
Teldec 4509-91852-2 (67 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1990-92 ●

There are Baroque groups that are frankly dull and there are others on whom stylistic felicity sits naturally and gracefully. Il Giardino Armonico, an 11-strong group of young Italians, is one of the best. Italy, the birthplace of the Baroque, has been curiously slow in coming forward with a specialised unit such as this, but the wait has been worthwhile; Il Giardino Armonico is as Italian as the music itself – brightly coloured, individualistic, confident, stylish, arrestingly decorated, bubbling with enthusiasm and ...add your own adjectives. The only un-Italian thing about them is their collective unanimity! Set these performances against any others in the catalogue and, with no detriment to the others, the differences are likely to deal you a blow to the solar plexus. Any sneaking fear that such unbridled élan leads to a uniformly vigorous approach is unfounded; equally 'Italian' is their wide dynamic range, dramatically exploited in RV104 and RV63, and all calls for serenity are answered. The recording is bright and clear.

Trio Sonatas

12 Trio Sonatas for Two Violins and Continuo, Op 1. Sonata for Cello and Continuo in A minor, RV43. Trio Sonatas for Two Violins and Continuo – C, RV60; F, RV70; G minor, RV72. Trio Sonata for Violin, Cello and Continuo in C minor, RV83
Sonnerie (Emilia Benjamin, Monica Huggett vns Alison McGillivray vc Gary Cooper hpd) with William Carter gtr/lte/theorb
CPO ② CPO999 511-2 (143 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1997-98 ●

Good recordings of Vivaldi's Op 1 are hard to come by. The set lacks the distinctive imprint of what we understand and recognise as Vivaldian, yet the pieces have great charm if handled sensitively and imaginatively. These have long been virtuous features in Monica Huggett's playing: her gently inflected approach to the music, shared by the other members of Sonnerie, is a constant pleasure, and is heard to great advantage in the many beguiling slow movements. In addition to the Op 1 Trio Sonatas, Sonnerie plays two further trios, a Sonata for two violins, a Sonata for violin, cello and continuo and one of Vivaldi's nine cello sonatas. These miscellaneous additions to Sonnerie's programme are in all but one instance more immediately identifiable as products of Vivaldi's pen than the Op 1 pieces. The G minor Sonata hints at other of Vivaldi's chamber works, while the Sonata in F major (RV70), in its two-violin writing, brings to mind Vivaldi's double concertos. The writing is essentially unaccompanied, but in this performance a discreet plucked string instrument is included.

The Trio Sonata in C major (RV60) is the least Vivaldian of the appended group and its authenticity was questioned until fairly recently. Yet its spirited Allegro finale seems at times to foreshadow passages in the concertos of L'estro armonico (Op 3).

Alison McGillivray plays the Cello Sonata with a feeling for the music's declamatory content as well as for its lyrical properties. She ornaments freely but with restraint and her intonation is excellent. The remaining Sonata, for violin and cello (RV83), is a worthy companion piece to the better-known Sonata for treble recorder and bassoon (RV86). Even more than RV70, the supple, virtuoso dialogue for the treble and bass protagonists is concerto-like and is sustained with even balance and expressive sensibility by Huggett and McGillivray.

This is a first-rate release which comfortably outclasses any rival versions of Vivaldi's Op 1, as well as providing us with a rare opportunity of hearing several other uncommonly encountered pieces. Strongly recommended.

Cello Sonatas

Cello Sonatas – E flat, RV39; E minor, RV40; G minor, RV42; A minor, RV44; B flat, RV45; B flat, RV46 🅿
Pieter Wispelwey vc Florilegium Ensemble
(Elizabeth Kenny, William Carter ltes/theorboes/gtrs
Daniel Yeadon vc Neal Peres da Costa hpd/org)
Channel Classics CCS6294 (66 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1994 ●

Vivaldi wrote with great imagination for the cello, and the sonatas, like the concertos, are plentifully endowed with affecting melodies – the third movement of the E minor Sonata is a superb example –and virtuoso gestures. It would seem, on the strength of these pieces, that Vivaldi possessed a rare sensibility to the expressive cantabile possibilities in writing for the cello. Certainly, few Baroque composers other than Bach and perhaps Geminiani realised the instrument's solo potential better than he. Wispelwey is a sensitive player who draws a warm if at times under-assertive sound from his instrument. Fast movements are clearly articulated, slow ones lyrically played with some feeling for the poetry of the music. The performances are thoughtful and enlightened, with a continuo group that includes organ, harpsichord, cello, archlutes, theorboes and guitars in a variety of combinations. The quality of the recorded sound is fine.

Violin Sonatas

12 Violin Sonatas, 'Manchester Sonatas' 🅿
HMU90 7089: No 1 in C, RV3; No 2 in D minor, RV12; No 3 in G minor, RV757; No 4 in D, RV755; No 5 in B flat, RV759; No 6 in A, RV758 HMU90 7090: No 7 in C minor, RV6; No 8 in G, RV22; No 9 in E minor, RV17 a; No 10 in B minor, RV760; No 11 in E flat; RV756; No 12 in C, RV754
Romanesca (Andrew Manze vn Nigel North lte/theorbo/gtr John Toll hpd)
Harmonia Mundi ② HMX2907342/43 Ⓜ
(73 and 72 minutes: DDD). Recorded 1992 ●

Vivaldi is so well known for his concertos that we are apt to overlook his admittedly much smaller output of sonatas. This set of 12 for violin and continuo was discovered in Manchester's Central Music Library during the 1970s, though five of them exist in versions which have been known for much longer. It is probable that all of them date from the early to mid-1720s when Vivaldi assembled them to present to Cardinal Ottoboni on the occasion of his visit to Venice, the city of his birth, in 1726. The violinist Andrew Manze has an appealing rapport with this music and is expressive in his shaping of phrases. He reveals sensibility towards Vivaldi's pleasing melodic contours. Indeed, this is a quality in which these sonatas abound, not only in the varied Preludes with which each Sonata begins but also in the brisker, sometimes very brisk allemandes and correntes. He ornaments the music with an effective blend of fantasy and good taste and he dispenses with bowed continuo instruments, preferring the lighter textures provided by harpsichord, arch-lute, theorbo or guitar. This is music of great beauty and vitality which will delight most if not all lovers of the late Baroque; and it is sympathetically interpreted and warmly recorded.

Beatus vir in C, RV597

Dixit Dominus in D, RV595[ab]. Domine ad adiuvandum me, RV593[a]. Credidi propter quod, RV605. Beatus vir in B flat, RV598[ab]. Beatus vir in C, RV597[abc] [a]Susan Gritton, [b]Catrin Wyn-Davies sops [b]Catherine Denley mez [c]Charles Daniels ten [c]Neal Davies bass [c]Michael George bass 🅿
Choir of The King's Consort; The King's Consort / Robert King
Hyperion CDA66789 (70 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included. Recorded 1997

Here are two of Vivaldi's most extended and impressive psalm settings. These are the single-choir Dixit Dominus, RV595 (Psalm 110), and double-choir Beatus vir, RV597 (Psalm 112). Vivaldi set both psalms more than once, and King's programme also includes the single-movement Beatus vir, RV598, as well as the response, Domine ad adiuvandum me, RV593, and the conservatively styled Vesper psalm, Credidi propter quod, RV605. The King's Consort Choir make a lively and warm-textured contribution; the solo line-up is also strong; with Susan Gritton and Catrin Wyn-Davies providing an evenly matched, lightly articulated partnership in their two duets. Neal Davies and Michael George are splendidly robust in their vigorous 'Potens in terra' duet from Beatus vir (RV597). Catherine Denley gives an appropriately strongly inflected account of 'Judicabit in nationibus' but is intimate and tender in her beautiful 'De torrente in via bibet' (from Dixit). The remaining soloist, Charles Daniels, delivers the virtuoso 'Peccator videbit' (Beatus vir, RV597) with lightness and comfortable agility. Although consisting of only three movements, the G major Domine ad adiuvandum me, is easily on a level with the larger-scale pieces, its expressive warmth irresistible. This is a rewarding issue, spaciously recorded.

Chamber Cantatas

Cantatas – Alla caccia, alla caccia, RV670; Care selve amici prati, RV671; Elvira, anima mia, RV654.
Chamber Concertos – in F, RV97; in G minor, 'La notte', RV104; in G minor, RV105.
Laura Polverelli mez L'Astrée Ensemble
Opus 111 OP30358 (55 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included. Recorded c2001 ●

Whether Vivaldi wrote these cantatas for an exceptionally talented singer or just decided to give others a mischievously hard time is not known; the fact remains, they are tough assignments. If Polverelli finds them to be so, she gives no sign of it. She is a mezzo with a cloudless upper register and a full-throated lower one, a wide and subtly nuanced range of volume, supple and pitch-perfect. These three chamber cantatas deal with various unhappy aspects of love and she projects them without resort to 'grand-operatic' excess. These are performances to treasure.

The chamber concertos show Vivaldi at his most happily inventive. All those on this disc have alternative versions and if RV97 and 105 lack something of the verve of those by Giardino Armonico they are none the less infectious.

The recording is clear and very well balanced, and the vocal texts are given in three languages, including English. A thoroughly enjoyable disc.

Dixit Dominus in D, RV594

Magnificat in G minor, RV610[a]. Lauda Jerusalem 🅿
in E minor, RV609[b]. Kyrie in G minor, RV587[c]. Credo in E minor, RV591[d]. Dixit Dominus in D, RV594[e]
[abe]Susan Gritton, [abe]Lisa Milne sops [ae]Catherine Denley mez [ae]Lynton Atkinson ten [e]David Wilson-Johnson bar The King's Consort Choristers and Choir; The King's Consort / Robert King
Hyperion CDA66769 (63 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included. Recorded 1994

King's 'super-group' featuring choristers drawn from seven English cathedral and collegiate choirs sounds better than ever – technically reliable, with a good, full sound – and are a credit to King's vision in bringing them together. This volume has five typically uplifting works, three of which – Lauda Jerusalem, Dixit Dominus and the G minor Kyrie – offer the opulent sound of double choir and orchestra. Dixit Dominus is the most substantial, a colourful 23-minute sequence of varied solos and choruses, with trumpets, oboes and two organs all chipping in, most notably in an awe-inspiring depiction of the Day of Judgement. The other two are perhaps less striking, though Lauda Jerusalem is certainly charming in its two-soprano interchanges. Highlights of the single-chorus works include another exquisite soprano duet and a fiery 'Fecit potentiam' in the Magnificat, and an extraordinary 'Crucifixus' in the Credo which departs from the pain-wracked norm by seemingly depicting with lugubrious slow tread Christ's walk to Calvary. King manages very well in capturing the essence of Vivaldi's bold, sometimes disarmingly straightforward style. These tidy performances are driven with just the right amount of springy energy – neither too much nor too little – and are well recorded in the warm resonance of St Jude's Church, Hampstead in London.

Gloria in excelsis Deo, RV588

Gloria in excelsis Deo, RV588[abcd]
Laetatus sum, RV607[d]. Laudate pueri, RV601[b]. Vestro principi divino, RV633[c]. Jubilate, o amoeni chori, RV639[abcd]. [a]Susan Gritton, [b]Carolyn Sampson sops [c]Nathalie Stutzmann contr
[a]Charles Daniels ten
The King's Consort and [d]Choir / Robert King
Hyperion CDA66819 (69 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Notes, texts and translations included

Volume 6 of this series was a Gramophone Award nominee in 2001 and this one is just as good: it contains some very fine and largely unfamiliar music, in splendid performances. The principal work is the 'other' Gloria – that is, RV588, not the popular 589, which, however, by no means outshines it. This setting, in fact, begins particularly fascinatingly, as the choral climax to a short, introductory solo motet Jubilate, o amoeni chori; the motet elides, as it were, into the choral Gloria in an attractive and lively movement. Then follows a poetic, choral 'Et in terra pax', rich in texture and especially in harmony, and several further movements scarcely less appealing than their counterparts in RV589.

The disc starts a shade unpromisingly, with what seems rather a routine Laetatus sum, in solid block choral writing against orchestral figuration. But the Laudate pueri is quite another matter, a highly demanding solo motet which Carolyn Sampson sings with great precision and brilliance – Vivaldi often writes for the solo voice as if it has the agility of a violin, but this clearly doesn't disturb her. There is a lot of original and imaginative writing here.

The short motet Vestro principi divino was probably written for a weak contralto, in which case the use of Nathalie Stutzmann is an inspired piece of miscasting: she sings this entertaining piece with great power and accuracy, and goes on to do the motet introducing the Gloria in virtuoso fashion. The other soloists, Susan Gritton and Charles Daniels, have less to sing but do it with no less distinction. And Robert King directs his choir and orchestra with sensitive feeling for tempo, nuance and style. One could hardly ask for more.

Gloria in D, RV589

Gloria in D, RV589. Magnificat in G minor, RV611 🅿
Concerto for Strings in D minor, RV243.
Concerto for Oboe, Trumpet and Strings in D, RV563
Deborah York, Patrizia Biccire sops
Sara Mingardo contr Andrea Mioh ob
Gabriele Cassone tpt Akademia;
Concerto Italiano / Rinaldo Alessandrini
Opus 111 OP30195 (60 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included. Recorded 1997

Once you recover from the shock of hearing the opening chorus of Vivaldi's Gloria sung at what initially strikes you as a breakneck tempo, you will quickly begin to enter into the vital spirit of Alessandrini's performance. In fact it is not only this introductory movement that is thought-provoking but also the carefully considered tempos of several other sections of the work, some of them much slower than we have become used to. Alessandrini lays far greater emphasis than many of his rivals on the meaning of the Latin text. The two supplicatory sections, 'Domine Deus, Rex caelestis' and 'Domini Deus, Agnus Dei', are both sensitively handled with affective dynamic shading; in the first of them Alessandrini avails himself of Vivaldi's option for a violin solo rather than the more customarily heard oboe. The piece is lyrically sung by Deborah York with a beautifully sustained violin accompaniment. The soloist in the second of these movements, Sara Mingardo, also makes a favourable impression. The other sacred vocal work in this release is the latest of several adaptations Vivaldi made of a Magnificat which he had originally written for the Pietà. One of the principal differences between this version and the earlier ones lies in five effectively contrasted arias for named singers among the figlie di coro of the Pietà. In this performance the solos are distributed among three rather than five artists, but it hardly matters since each is sung with distinctive character and accomplished technique. Two concertos of contrasting aspect and instrumentation complete this very attractive programme. Both have been recorded previously, though, in the case of RV563 (sometimes encountered under the catalogue number RV781), not quite in the way it is performed here, with a natural trumpet and oboe as playful protagonists in the outer movements. In the slow movement the trumpet is tacet, the oboe assuming a solo role with scalewise passages of a somewhat vacuous character. Never mind, this is a rewarding issue above all, perhaps, for the expressive performance of the Magnificat.

Motets

Laudate pueri Dominum, RV600[a]. 🅿
Salve Regina, RV616[c]. Sanctorum meritis, RV620[a].
Sum in medio tempestatum, R632[b]. Cur sagittas, cur tela, RV637[c]
[a]Susan Gritton sop [b]Tuva Semmingsen mez
[c]Nathalie Stutzmann contr
The King's Consort / Robert King
Hyperion CDA66829 (68 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included. Recorded c2002

The best-known item here is the Salve Regina, a piece which has been recorded on several occasions before, usually by countertenors. Vivaldi intended it for a woman, however, and here Nathalie Stutzmann is given the chance to show off the depth and dark nobility of her contralto voice. She strikes a suitably reverential tone, one which King's orchestral accompaniment matches perfectly – the opening ritornelli of the first and last sections are both exquisitely done.

The psalm Laudate pueri presents 23 minutes of attractive music without really doing much to set the pulse racing, with Susan Gritton giving a customarily accomplished performance. More interesting are Cur sagittas, cur tela – which shows the soul maintaining stoical faith in the face of attack by 'the soldiers of hell' (with violins exuberantly chucking the arrows of the title), before enjoying the protected world of the believer – and the disc's star find, Sum in medio tempestatum. This is a bright, unashamedly operatic number, opening with a classic simile aria comparing the troubled soul to a storm-tossed ship, and going on to depict the safe haven which hoves into view when one has turned to Jesus. The vocal writing here is highly virtuosic, but is negotiated with stunning agility and lightness by mezzo Tuva Semmingsen.

Another well-executed Vivaldi disc, then, from King. The recorded sound is also just right.

In furore gustissimae irae, RV626. Longe mala, 🅿 umbrae, terrores, RV629. Clarae stellae, scintillate, RV625. Canta in prato, ride in monte, RV623. Filiae
mestae Jerusalem, RV638. Nulla in mundo pax,
RV630 Deborah York sop Catherine Denley mez
James Bowman counterten The King's Consort /
Robert King
Hyperion CDA66779 (69 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included. Recorded 1996 ●

This volume in Robert King's exploration of Vivaldi's sacred music offers five of his motets for solo voice and strings, together with RV623, one of the Introduzioni he composed to precede his liturgical choral pieces. As ever with Vivaldi, they are utterly beguiling pieces of music, impossible to dislike and easy to be beguiled by. Their Latin texts – which usually allow for two arias separated by a recitative and followed by an 'Alleluia '– are about as profound as the sonnets which accompany The Four Seasons, but they inspire in Vivaldi just the same kind of charmingly uncomplicated reaction. Nightingales, scenes of general Arcadian bliss, the storms of God's wrath and the touching sorrow of the mournful daughters of Jerusalem before the Cross – all bring forth what you might be tempted to call stock responses were it not for the fact that the music is always so instantly recognisable as being by Vivaldi. Vivaldi's singers must have been good to judge from these pieces, which show a brand of virtuosity more at home in the instrumental concerto than the aria. James Bowman and Catherine Denley are both on good form (the latter having a particularly taxing number to sing), but the star of the disc is Deborah York, yet another of the many outstanding young sopranos to have arrived on the scene in recent years. Her In furore iustissimae irae is a tour de force of vocal power and agility with a teasing little top C at the end of the first aria; while the deceptive beauties of Nulla in mundo pax sincera are artfully conjured by sly portamentos.

The string accompaniments throughout are buoyant but beefy, aided by an excellent recorded sound, and tempos seem well judged.

Salve regina in C minor, RV616

Salve regina in C minor, RV616. Introduzione al Miserere, RV641. Introduzione al Gloria, RV637. Salve regina in G minor, RV618. Concerto for Violin and Strings in C, RV581 ('Per la Santissima Assenzione di Maria Vergine') 🅿

Gérard Lesne counterten Fabio Biondi vn
Il Seminario Musicale
Virgin Classics Veritas 759232-2 Ⓕ
(77 minutes: DDD). Texts and translations included
Recorded 1991 ⊙

The principal works here are two settings of the Marian antiphon Salve regina, but the French countertenor Gérard Lesne follows this with an extended Introduzione to a Miserere, one of two by Vivaldi, and an Introduzione to a Gloria ; and by way of making up a programme, he divides the four vocal pieces into two groups inserting a Violin Concerto between them. The main bias of this music is contemplative, often deeply so, as is the case with the darkly expressive, sorrowful introduction to the Miserere non in pratis. Lesne approaches the music with style. Indeed, a stronger advocate for these affecting compositions is hard to imagine since he is technically almost faultless.

Then there is the Concerto in C major (in due cori), a splendid example of Vivaldi's skill in this medium, admirably played by the violinist Fabio Biondi with Lesne's own group Il Seminario Musicale. Vivaldi enthusiasts will require no further proof of this disc's merit, but readers in general should also find much to enjoy here, both in the singing and playing. The recorded sound is pleasantly resonant, serving the best interests of Lesne's voice and of the instruments too. A fine release.

Stabat mater in F minor, RV621

Stabat mater in F minor, RV621[c]. Confitebor tibi Domine, RV596[a]. Deus tuorum militum, RV612[b]. In turbato mare, RV627[d]. O qui coeli terraeque serenitas, RV631[d]. Non in pratis aut in hortis, RV641[e] 🅿 [d]Susan Gritton sop [abe]Jean Rigby mez [c]Robin Blaze counterten [ab]Charles Daniels ten [a]Neal Davies bass The King's Consort / Robert King
Hyperion CDA66799 (78 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included. Recorded 1998 ⊙

This release in Robert King's complete cycle of Vivaldi's church music mainly features works unconnected with the Ospedale della Pietà, including a motet written in Rome and the famous Stabat mater composed for a church in Brescia. All are for solo voice or voices and orchestra, and for the most part they all carry the typical Vivaldi trademarks: boisterous energy alongside a tender if angular lyricism; a vivid and excitable responsiveness to verbal imagery; and what the insert-notes describe as 'a shocking radicalism: a willingness to strip music down to its core and reconstitute it from these simplest elements'. The best works on this disc are the first three. In turbato mare is a rip-roaring 'simile' motet which makes use of the old operatic device of comparing a troubled soul to a storm-tossed ship finding peace in port. The noble Non in pratis aut in hortis is an introduzione, a short motet designed to precede a performance of a lost Miserere; since it ends on a half-close, it is followed here (with musical if not liturgical logic) by the Stabat mater. All are excellently sung; few recordings exist of the first two, but it is hard to imagine the ebulliently virtuosic Susan Gritton and the movingly firm-voiced Jean Rigby being significantly bettered. By contrast, the Stabat mater is well-trodden territory, but the warmly mellifluous Robin Blaze easily matches his rivals on disc. The King's Consort is a little raw in the string department, but in general it shows bright and lively form and is well served by an acoustic perfectly suited to the occasion. Under King's direction, too, they capture splendidly the spirit of this uncomplicated but atmospheric music.

Stabat mater, RV621. Domine ad adiuvandum me, RV593. Beatus vir, RV597. Magnificat, RV610[a] 🅿
Ex Cathedra Chamber Choir and Baroque Orchestra / Jeffrey Skidmore
ASV Gaudeamus CDGAU137 (70 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included. Recorded 1991

This is an interesting and mainly successful attempt to place a handful of Vivaldi's sacred pieces in a liturgical context. The most well-known work here is the Stabat mater for alto voice and strings, but the others deserve to be heard more often. Ex Cathedra Chamber Choir is a well-disciplined, youthful sounding ensemble whose contribution is first-rate. And it is from the choir that solo voices emerge as required, giving the performances a homogeneity of sound and intent. The instrumentalists, too, make a strong contribution and together with the voices project interpretations which are full of vitality.

There are, of course, rival versions on disc of all the music sung here, but on the strength of the thoughtful way it has been presented by the director of Ex Cathedra, Jeffrey Skidmore, this is perhaps the most affecting of them. Few will be disappointed, for example, by the gently inflected, poignant account of the Stabat mater by the countertenor Nigel Short. Hardly a detail has been overlooked, even to the extent of allowing the listener to hear a distant bell during the opening Versicle.

Stabat mater, RV621. Cessate, omai cessate, RV684. Filiae mestae Jerusalem, RV638. String Concertos –C, RV114; E flat, RV130, 'Sonata al Santo Sepolcro' P
Andreas Scholl counterten
Ensemble 415 / Chiara Banchini vn
Harmonia Mundi HMC90 1571 Ⓕ
(52 minutes: DDD). Texts and translations included
Recorded 1995 ●●●

Awards 1996

Here is a very attractively prepared menu whose main course is the Stabat mater for countertenor and strings. Hors-d'oeuvres and side-dishes consist of a ripieno concerto (RV114), a chamber cantata for countertenor and strings (RV684), a string sonata in E flat (RV130)and an introductory motet to a lost Miserere (RV638). Taken together, the pieces demonstrate something of Vivaldi's diverse style as a composer.

The chamber cantata, if closely related to the two sacred vocal items on the disc in respect of tonal colour, differs from them in character. Conforming with the standard Italian cantata pattern at the time of two pairs of alternating recitative and da capo aria Vivaldi enlivens his pastoral idyll with two particularly affecting arias, the first with a palpitating pizzicato violin, the second a virtuoso vocal tour de force illustrating the plight of the forsaken lover. Andreas Scholl brings the whole thing off superbly with only a moment's faulty intonation at the close of the first aria. Unlike settings of the Stabat mater by Pergolesi and others, Vivaldi used only the first 10 of the 20 stanzas of the poem. His deeply expressive setting of the poem will be familiar to many readers, but few will have heard such an affecting performance as Scholl achieves here. The lyrical prayer of human yearning for faith contained in the 'Fac ut ardeat' movement is tenderly sung and here, as throughout the programme, sympathetically supported by Ensemble 415 under Chiara Ban-chini's experienced direction.

Juditha triumphans, RV644

Juditha triumphans, RV645 P
Magdalena Kožená mezzo Anke Herrmann sop
Maria José Trullu, Marina Comparato, Tiziana Carraro mezs Coro di Camera Accademia Nazionale di Santa Cecilia; Academia Montis Regalis / Alessandro de Marchi
Opus 111 ② OP30314 (105 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Text and translation included ●●

Vivaldi's only surviving oratorio, Juditha triumphans (1716), with its strongly characterised roles and luxuriant orchestration, is a true Baroque masterpiece. Alessandro de Marchi has departed from other recent interpreters by daring to transpose the tenor and bass choral parts up an octave, as is widely believed was done by Vivaldi himself to accommodate the choir of the Ospedale della Pietà. The effect is breathtaking: the compressed, female choral textures positively gleam. From his superb cast of female soloists, de Marchi coaxes remarkable and dramatically convincing male vocal timbres. Maria José Trullu projects the various sides of Holofernes, who is depicted not merely as a monster but as capable of dignity and charm, even if ultimately incautious; she infuses her tone with a warmth and richness that countertenors might envy.

Magdalena Kožená, the Bethulian widow Judith, casts a spell on those who only hear her: as well as Holofernes. She sings with poise almost throughout, as she enters the enemy camp, meets and seduces Holofernes, reflects on the transitoriness of life and prays for peace and strength before murdering the sleeping Holofernes. Only then, as she carries out her heroic – if horrific – mission does she fully convey her emotion.

The instrumentation offers a veritable treasure trove of unusual and evocative instruments, even for the time: a pair of clarinets to characterise the dissolute Assyrian soldiers, recorders for 'nocturnal breezes' and a quartet of theorbos to depict the preparation of the feast. These and the more common obbligato and continuo instruments of the day are affectingly played by the musicians of the Academia Montis Regalis. At every turn there is ample evidence of the care de Marchi has lavished on this performance, and Robert King's by comparison seems less full-blooded and relatively static. Congratulations all round for an outstanding recording.

Opera Arias and Sinfonias

Opera Arias and Sinfonias:Griselda –Sinfonia; Ombre vane, ingiusti orrori; Agitata da due venti. Tito Manlio – Non ti lusinghi la crudeltade. Ottone in Villa – Sinfonia; Gelosia, tu già rendi l 'alma mia; L'ombre, l'aure, e ancora il rio^{a}. L'Atenaide – Ferma, Teodosio. Bajazet – Sinfonia. L'Incoronazione di Dario – Non mi lusinga vana speranza. P
Catone in Utica – Se mai senti spirarti sul volto; Se in campo armato

Emma Kirkby, ^{a}Liliana Mazzarri sops
The Brandenburg Consort / Roy Goodman
Hyperion CDA66745 (75 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included. Recorded 1994 ●

This is an entertaining programme. The arias have been chosen with discernment, thoughtfully grouped and effectively interspersed with three of Vivaldi's opera sinfonias. The formula proves so successful that it even occurs to you that this was maybe the happiest solution to reviving at least the more problematic of Vivaldi's operas. Emma Kirkby's voice is still maturing, filling out, and she is able to achieve an ever increasing variety of colour. Her 'Ombre vane, ingiusti orrori', a ravishing piece from Griselda (1735), is beautifully and effortlessly controlled, delicately shaded and rhythmically vital; and her feeling for apposite embellishment comes across with pleasing spontaneity and stylistic assurance. The voice is supported and highlighted by the sympathetic partnership of The Brandenburg Consort conducted by Roy Goodman. This disc will delight Vivaldi enthusiasts. Excellent recorded sound.

L'Olimpiade

L'Olimpiade, RV725 (ed Alessandrini)
Sara Mingardo contr Licida; Roberta Invernizzi sop Megacle; Sonia Prina mez Aristea; Marianna Kulikova mez Argene; Laura Giordano sop Aminta; Riccardo Novaro bar Clistene; Sergio Foresti bass Alcandro; Concerto Italiano / Rinaldo Alessandrini
Opus 111 ③ OP30316 Ⓕ
(175 minutes: DDD). Notes, libretto and translation included. Recorded c2002 ●●

More than 50 composers set Pietro Metastasio's libretto L'Olimpiade between 1733 and 1815, starting with Caldara and including along the way such names as Pergolesi, Galuppi, Cimarosa, Cherubini and Paisiello. The booklet note for this new recording suggests that Vivaldi was trying to take on the newly fashionable Neapolitan composers at their own game, not only by setting a poem by their favourite librettist, but also by adopting some of their musical mannerisms. Maybe so, but there can be few composers with a more deeply ingrained personal style than our friend the Red Priest, and it is an unmistakably Vivaldian flavour which is the strongest in this thoroughly agreeable work.

Despite the public context – the story is played out against the backdrop of the Olympic Games– this is a drama which focuses on the personal predicaments of the principal characters, each of whom faces an interesting conflict between head and heart somewhere along the line. This is more apparent from Metastasio's words than from Vivaldi's music, to be honest, but that is not to say that the composer has been unresponsive. The most effective and intimate moments occur in the recitatives, which are fluidly conversational and full of realistic interruptions, questions and exclamations, all of which Vivaldi handles with considerable (and, some might say, surprising) dramatic skill.

Rinaldo Alessandrini's direction is typically unfussy and to-the-point, ever alert to the music's dramatic intent but without imposing himself on it unduly. The finest vocal performances come from Sara Mingardo, Roberta Invernizzi and Sonia Prina, but in truth no one is a weak link. The recitatives are effectively done, the arias thrown off with dash and aplomb, and everyone sounds as if they believe in the work.

Ottone in Villa

Monica Groop mez Ottone; Nancy Argenta sop Caio Silio; Susan Gritton sop Cleonilla; Sophie Daneman sop Tullia; Mark Padmore ten Decio; Collegium Musicum 90 /Richard Hickox 🅿
Chandos Chaconne ② CHAN0614 (145 minutes: DDD). Notes, text and translation included Ⓕ
Recorded 1997

This, Vivaldi's very first opera, was premièred in Vicenza in 1713 and was an instant hit. The story is a relatively uncomplicated one by the standards of Baroque opera, of amatory pretences and misunderstandings: it has been admirably summarised by Eric Cross (who has edited the work) as a 'light-weight, amoral entertainment in which the flirtatious Cleonilla consistently has the upper hand, and gullible Emperor Ottone (a far from heroic figure) never discovers the truth about the way he has been deceived'. The score proceeds in a succession of secco recitatives (with just a very occasional accompagnato) and da capo arias – which the present cast ornament very stylishly. There are no duets or ensembles except for a perfunctory final chorus in which the characters merely sing in unison; but there is an abundance of tuneful arias, and when Vivaldi can be bothered to write proper accompaniments to them – he often merely has violins doubling the voice, plus a bass-line – he can provide interesting imitative counterpoint. Several arias employ only the upper strings without cello and bass except in ritornellos. The small Vicenza theatre could not afford star singers, so only limited opportunities were provided for vocal virtuosity; but the present cast makes the most of its opportunities, both in display and in meditative mood. It is not always easy to tell the three sopranos apart, but Susan Gritton well suggests the scheming minx Cleonilla; Nancy Argenta with her bright voice has the castrato role that includes several fine arias, and displays a messa di voce in an echo aria; and Sophie Daneman, in a breeches role, produces a wide range of colour. Monica Groop slightly undercharacterises Ottone except when roused to dismiss Rome's anxiety at his dalliance. It is quite a relief to ear one male voice, and Mark Padmore is excellent. Richard Hickox keeps a firm rhythmic hand on every- thing and delivers quite the best and neatest Vivaldi operatic recording yet.

Richard Wagner German 1813-1883

GROVE Wagner was the son either of the police actuary Friedrich Wagner, who died soon after his birth, or of his mother's friend the painter, actor and poet Ludwig Geyer, whom she married in August 1814. He went to school in Dresden and then Leipzig; at 15 he wrote a play, at 16 his first compositions. In 1831 he went to Leipzig University, also studying music with the Thomaskantor, CT Weinlig; a symphony was written and successfully performed in 1832. In 1833 he became chorus master at the Würzburg theatre and wrote the text and music of his first opera, Die Feen; this remained unheard, but his next, Das Liebesverbot, written in 1833, was staged in 1836. By then he had made his début as an opera conductor with a small company which, however, went bankrupt soon after performing his opera. He married the singer Minna Planer in 1836 and went with her to Königsberg, where he became musical director at the theatre, but he soon left and took a similar post in Riga, where he began his next opera, Rienzi, and did much conducting, especially of Beethoven. In 1839 they slipped away from creditors in Riga, by ship to London and then to Paris, where he was befriended by Meyerbeer and did hack-work for publishers and theatres. He also worked on the text and music of an opera on the 'Flying Dutchman' legend; but in 1842 Rienzi, a large-scale opera with a political theme set in imperial Rome, was accepted for Dresden and Wagner went there for its highly successful première. Its theme reflects something of Wagner's own politics (he was involved in the semi- revolutionary, intellectual 'Young Germany' movement). Die fliegende Holländer ('The Flying Dutchman'), given the next year, was less well received, though a much tauter musical drama, beginning to move away from the 'number opera' tradition and strong in its evocation of atmosphere, especially the supernatural and the raging seas (inspired by the stormy trip from Riga). Wagner was now appointed joint Kapellmeister at the Dresden court. The theme of redemption through a woman's love, in the Dutchman, recurs in Wagner's operas (and perhaps his life). In 1845 Tannhäuser was completed and performed and Lohengrin begun. In both Wagner moves towards a more continuous texture with semi-melodic narrative and a supporting orchestral fabric helping convey its sense. In 1848 he was caught up in the revolutionary fervour and the next year fled to Weimar (where Liszt helped him)and then Switzerland (there was also a spell in France); politically suspect, he was unable to enter Germany for 11 years. In Zürich, he wrote in 1850-51 his ferociously anti-semitic Jewishness in Music (some of it an attack on Meyerbeer) and his basic statement on musical theatre, Opera and Drama; he also began sketching the text and music of a series of operas on the Nordic and Germanic sagas. By 1853 the text for this four-night cycle (to be The Nibelung's Ring) was written, printed and read to friends – who included a generous patron, Otto Wesendonck, and his wife Mathilde, who loved him, wrote poems that he set, and inspired Tristan und Isolde – conceived in 1854 and completed five years later, by which time more than half of The Ring was written. In 1855 he conducted in London; tension with Minna led to his going to Paris in 1858-9. 1860 saw them both in Paris, where the next year he revived Tannhäuser in revised form for French taste, but it was literally shouted down, partly for political reasons. In 1862 he was allowed freely into Germany; that year he and the ill and childless Minna parted (she died in 1866). In 1863 he gave concerts in Vienna, Russia etc; the next year King Ludwig II invited him to settle in Bavaria, near Munich, discharging his debts and providing him with money. Wagner did not stay long in Bavaria, because of opposition at Ludwig's court, especially when it was known that he was having an affair with Cosima, the wife of the conductor Hans van Bülow (she was Liszt's daughter); Bülow (who condoned it) directed the Tristan première in 1865. Here Wagner, in depicting every shade of sexual love, developed a style richer and more chromatic than anyone had previously attempted, using dissonance and its urge for resolution in a continuing pattern to build up tension and a sense of profound yearning; Act 2 is virtually a continuous love duet, touching every emotion from the tenderest to the most passionately erotic. Before returning to the Ring, Wagner wrote, during the mid-1860s, The Mastersingers of Nuremberg: this is in a quite different vein, a comedy set in 16th-century Nuremberg, in which a noble poet-musician wins, through his victory in a music contest – a victory over pedants who stick to the foolish old rules – the hand of his beloved, fame and riches. (The analogy with Wagner's view of himself is obvious.) The music is less chromatic than that of Tristan, warm and good-humoured, often contrapuntal; unlike the mythological figures of his other operas the characters here have real humanity. The opera was given, under Bülow, in 1868; Wagner had been living at Tribschen, near Lucerne, ince 1866, and that year Cosima formally joined him; they had two children when in 1870 they married. The first two Ring operas, Das Rheingold and Die Walküre, were given in Munich, on Ludwig's insistence, in 1869 and 1870; Wagner, however, was anxious to have a special festival opera house for the complete cycle and spent much energy trying to raise money for it. Eventually, when he had almost despaired, Ludwig came to the rescue and in 1874 – the year the fourth opera, Götterdämmerung, was finished – provided the necessary support. The house was built at Bayreuth, designed by Wagner as the home for his concept of the Gesamtkunstwerk ('total art work '- an alliance of music, poetry, the visual arts, dance etc). The first festival, an artistic triumph but a financial disaster – was held there in 1876, when the complete Ring was given. The Ring is about 18 hours' music, held together by an immensely detailed network of themes, or leitmotifs, each of which has some allusive meaning: a character, a concept, an object etc. They change and develop as the ideas within the opera develop. They are heard in the orchestra, not merely as 'labels 'but carrying the action, sometimes informing the listener of connections of ideas or the thoughts of those on the stage. There are no 'numbers 'in the Ring; the musical texture is made up of narrative and dialogue, in which the orchestra partakes. The work is not merely a story about gods, humans and dwarfs but embodies reflections on every aspect of the human condition. It has been interpreted as socialist, fascist, Jungian, prophetic, as a parable about industrial society, and much more. In 1877 Wagner conducted in London, hoping to recoup Bayreuth losses; later in the year he began a new opera, Parsifal. He continued his musical and polemic writings, concentrating on 'racial purity'. He spent most of 1880 in Italy. Parsifal, a sacred festival drama, again treating redemption but through the acts of communion and renunciation on the stage, was given at the Bayreuth Festival in 1882. He went to Venice for the winter, and died there in February of the heart trouble that had been with him for some years. His body was returned by gondola and train for burial at Bayreuth. Wagner did more than any other composer to change music, and indeed to change art and thinking about it. His life and his music arouse passions like no other composer's. His works are hated as much as they are worshipped; but no-one denies their greatness.

Orchestral Excerpts from Operas

Lohengrin – Prelude. Tannhäuser – Overture 🄷
Siegfried Idyll. Götterdämmerung – Siegfried's Rhine Journey; Siegfried's Funeral March
Lucerne Festival Orchestra; Vienna Philharmonic Orchestra / Wilhelm Furtwängler
Testament mono SBT1141 (61 minutes: ADD) Ⓕ
Recorded late 1940s ●

This is, as they say, something else. The Lohengrin Act 1 Prelude opens the disc of studio recordings, the only item of five with the Lucerne Festival Orchestra. The way the Swiss brass crescendos on the upbeat to the climactic delivery of the hymn must rate as among the most elating of all Furtwängler moments. Why this and the Tannhäuser Overture have never been issued before remains a mystery, as probably do all the reasons why, in the latter piece, the Vienna Philharmonic sounds on fire for Furtwängler and on duty for, say, Knappertsbusch in 1953 (once available on a Decca LP). Siegfried's Rhine Journey evolves in one seamless sweep, barring the split-second but disconcerting rhythmic hiatus at the moment of take-off (4 ’51”). And mercifully, Furtwängler doesn 't tag on the trite concert ending (as did Reiner and Toscanini), giving a chance to wonder at the uniquely resonant low brass sounds of the VPO. Then on to the Funeral March, every dark sound fully charting the depths, every phrase carrying special import, and, as in the Siegfried Idyll, the occasional passage reminding us of standards of tuning of the day. The latter account, Furtwängler's only recording of the piece, engages rather than diverts and charms, with Vienna string-playing typically sweet and rapturous, and 'Siegfried, Hope of the World ' tensely built to an almost delirious climax. Depth, presence and a naturally achieved clarity characterise all these recordings, and 78 sources only occasionally make their presence felt.

Tannhäuser – Overture and Venusberg Music.
Die Meistersinger von Nürnberg – Prelude, Act 3.
Tristan und Isolde – Prelude and Liebestod
Berlin Philharmonic Orchestra / Herbert von Karajan DG Karajan
Gold 439 022-2GHS (50 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1984. Also available (plus Lohengrin Prelude/Flying Dutchman Oveture) on EMI DVD-Audio DVC4 92397-9) ●●

What is so special about Karajan's digital recordings that they are reissued at full price and, ungenerously in this case, with only their original programme? The answer might be another question: when, in modern times, have you heard from Berlin (or anywhere else) such long-drawn, ripe, intense, characterful, perfectly formed and supremely controlled Wagner playing? Not from some other sources with the Tannhäuser Overture, whose Pilgrims are less solemn and grand and whose revellers produce less of Karajan's joyous éclat. Moving on a few minutes, and the passage where Karajan's Venus succeeds in quelling the riot finds Karajan effecting a spellbinding sudden diminuendo (from 4’41”, track 2), leaving us with the enchanted eddying of the orchestra.

It must surely qualify as one of Karajan's 'greatest moments', had not the seemingly unstoppable tidal wave that preceded it already done so. The true keeper of Berlin's 'Wagner on record' latterly has been Daniel Barenboim. His Tristan Prelude (taken from the complete set, reviewed below) is more conventionally paced (i.e. faster) than Karajan's, with the phrasing just as steeply raked, and the balance and control, in some respects, even more accomplished. But the breadth of Karajan's conception is matched by his concentration (it never feels too slow), the playing is achingly intense, the whole superbly built, and the reserves of tone he is able to draw on for the climax seem limitless.

Tristan und Isolde – Love Music (arr Stokowski).
Die Walküre – Ride of the Valkyries; Wotan's Farewell and Magic Fire Music. Götterdämmerung – Siegfried's Death and Funeral March (both arr Gerhardt). Siegfried Idyll
National Philharmonic Orchestra / Charles Gerhardt
Chesky CD161 (78 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1985-95 ●

Charles Gerhardt opens with Stokowski's unashamedly indulgent synthesis of the themes from Tristan und Isolde, with the vocal parts seamlessly welded into the orchestration, beginning at the Introduction to Act 2, including the Love Music from the same act and the Liebestod. Gerhardt moves naturally from yearning and languishing to real passion, following Stokowski in using divided strings, employing 16 first violins, 10 second violins, 12 violas and 12 double-basses. The off-stage six-part hunting-horn episode (at 1'35") sounds glorious with the expansion to 10 horns weighted with a bass trombone, Wotan's infinitely touching Farewell to his daughter, Brünnhilde, in Die Walküre, and the following truly magical Fire Music. Even without the voices the tremendously committed string playing is very moving indeed, and the recording is superb. The Siegfried Idyll is also beautifully played and makes a flowing, gentle interlude. Gerhardt lets the tension slip a little in the middle but gathers the themes together magnetically in the involving closing section. He then begins Siegfried's Death and Funeral March earlier than Stokowski, at the moment when Hagen kills Siegfried. The result is very direct and powerful with fine brass playing. The Valkyries then ride, or rather gallop in at breakneck speed to finish the concert exuberantly. The recordings were made in Walthamstow (Tristan, 1985), All Saint's, Petersham (Die Walküre, 1994 – the best sound of all), Air Studios (Siegfried Idyll, 1995), and St John's, Smith Square (Götterdämmerung, 1990), and the Valkyries bring another clear, bright studio offering (1995).

This is a record for hi-fi buffs, and on really discerning equipment it is fascinating to compare the ways in which the five different engineers have coped with the widely varying ambience effects here, with their positioning of the microphone.

Introduction to The Ring

Der Ring des Nibelungen – spoken introduction with 193 musical examples
Deryck Cooke narr various singers; Vienna Philharmonic Orchestra / Sir Georg Solti
Decca The Classic Sound ② 443 581-2DCS2 (141 minutes: ADD). Booklet of musical illustrations included. Recorded 1967 Ⓜ

Deryck Cooke died, prematurely, in 1976 before he completed his comprehensive study on The Ring. Fortunately, in 1967, Decca had had the foresight to invite him to record this introduction to the cycle. In this he developed at length his ideas on its leitmotifs, using 193 examples, most of them taken from the Solti recording, and a few made specifically to illustrate a point Cooke was making.

Wagner, as he avers, described the motifs as 'melodic moments of feeling', not signposts or tags. He also adds that their psychological significance and development are of the essence in comprehending The Ring, and divides them into four groups – character, objects, events, emotions – then proceeds to describe, in simple, pungent language, how they are deployed throughout the work. His straightforward, unfussy method and delivery, so typical of a man quite without egotistical pretension, enhances one's understanding and, more important, enjoyment of this mighty work.

An essential adjunct to any cycle.

Wesendonk Lieder

Wesendonk Lieder. Tristan und Isolde – Prelude, Act 1; Mild und leise. Götterdämmerung – Dawn and Siegfried's Rhine Journey; Starke Scheite
Julia Varady sop Deutsches Symphony Orchestra, Berlin /Dietrich Fischer-Dieskau
Orfeo C467981A (71 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included. Recorded 1997 ●●

This is a truly riveting recital of Wagner from Varady (magnificent singing) and Fischer-Dieskau. Varady's reading of the Wesendonk Lieder is remarkable, enthralling. There is nothing here of the slow, wallowing approach often favoured today. The feeling of the words is one of very present emotions. Try the final section of 'Stehe still!' starting 'Die Lippe verstummt' or the emphasis on the single word 'Smaragd' in 'Im Treibhaus' or the whole of a most beautifully etched 'Träume'. She is helped here by Fischer-Dieskau's refusal to indulge the music.

There have been few such warmly and intelligently sung versions of the Immolation. Maybe on stage Brünnhilde might have been beyond Varady; here there's not a sign of strain as she rides the orchestra, sympathetically supported by her husband. But what makes it stand out from performances by possibly better-endowed sopranos is her deep understanding of the text: again and again, nowhere more so than at 'Ruhe, ruhe, du Gott', where Varady's vibrating lower register is so effective, you feel the tingle factor coming to the fore. In the more heroic final sections, this Brünnhilde is like a woman transfigured. And transfiguration is, of course, a feature of Varady's concentrated, urgent Liebestod, her complete absorption with the text as much as with the music an object-lesson in great Wagner singing. The players of Fischer-Dieskau's Berlin orchestra cover themselves in glory. The recording is exemplary.

Opera Duets

Love Duets
Siegfried – Act 3 scene 3.. Tristan und Isolde[a] – Act 2 scene 2 (concert version from 'O sink hernieder')
Deborah Voigt sop [a]Violeta Urmana mez
Plácido Domingo ten Royal Opera House Orchestra, Covent Garden / Antonio Pappano
EMI 557004-2 (57 minutes:DDD). Texts and translations included. Recorded 1999 and [a]2000 Ⓕ ●

It appears that in 1862, three years before Tristan and Isolde's première, Wagner hoped that the Schnorrs, his original Tristan and Isolde, would give part of the Love duet in a concert performance. This never took place, and nothing was known about the musical preparations Wagner made for the event until 1950; even then it seems the material remained unexamined, and certainly unused, until very recently. Omitting the first 15 minutes or so, the duet was to start at 'O sink hernieder' and continue to the end, including in it the interpolations of Brangäne. The question which forms in the listener's mind as the end approaches is how that is to be managed. This supreme expression of eroticism in music culminates in erotic catastrophe. It is hard to imagine a concert performance ending with the rude abruptness of the score, but worse to think of its possible closure (as in some early recordings) on a glib and alien major chord. However, without giving the game away, the solution constitutes a stroke of genius; it has that kind of simplicity and rightness that evokes a cry of 'But of course!', almost as though one had thought of it oneself – which assuredly one had not. Unfortunately the booklet-notes provide no information on the genesis of this ending. Amazing as it is to relate, Domingo's voice, after all these years and all this unsparing usage, is still the most beautiful – the most richly firm and even – that we have heard on recordings of this music. He is exact and lyrical in his reading of the music and is largely, if not invariably, imaginative and convincing in his dramatic commitment. Voigt impresses as being less successfully 'in character', especially as the Siegfried Brünnhilde, whose exaltation and wonder lack the majesty of her godly state as they do the excitement of her humanity. The fresh and vibrant tones are good to hear even so, as is the firm-voiced mezzo of Violeta Urmana's Brangäne. The Covent Garden orchestra play for Pappano with fine attentiveness and exhilaration, and it seems that he brings a renewing spirit to everything he touches.

Tannhäuser – Overture. Siegfried Idyll. Tristan und Isolde – Prelude and Liebestod
Jessye Norman sop Vienna Philharmonic Orchestra / Herbert von Karajan
DG 423 613-2GH (54 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Text and translation included. Recorded live in 1987

For the Wagner specialist who has a complete Tannhäuser and Tristan on the shelves, this disc involves some duplication. Even so, it is not hard to make room for such performances as are heard ere. For the non-specialist, the programme provides a good opportunity for a meeting halfway, the common ground between Master and general music-lover being the Siegfried Idyll. This offers 20 minutes of delight in the play of musical ideas, structured and yet impulsive, within a sustained mood of gentle affection. The orchestration is something of a miracle, and it can rarely have been heard to better advantage than in this recording, where the ever-changing textures are so clearly dis- played and where from every section of the orchestra the sound is of such great loveliness. It comes as a welcome contrast to the Tannhäuser Overture, with its big tunes and fortissimos, the whole orchestra surging in a frank simulation of physical passion. A further contrast is to follow in the Tristan Prelude, where again Karajan and his players are at their best in their feeling for texture and their control of pulse. Jessye Norman, singing the Liebestod with tenderness and vibrant opulence of tone, brings the recital to an end. There is scarcely a single reminder that it was recorded live.

Der fliegende Holländer

Der fliegende Holländer
Falk Struckmann bar Holländer;
Jane Eaglen sop Senta; Robert Holl bass Daland;
Peter Seiffert ten Erik; Felicity Palmer contr Mary;
Rolando Villazon ten Steersman; Berlin State Opera Chorus; Berlin Staatskapelle / Daniel Barenboim
Teldec ② 8573-88063-2 (135 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Notes, text and translation included
Recorded c2002 OO

Barenboim delivers a traversal of the storm-tossed score that, as far as his conducting is concerned, almost equals the best among previous readings. At once big-boned and intensely dramatic, it has a driving force, at rather faster speeds than many sets, that is commanding in its control of detail and structure. With his own Berlin State Opera forces offering faithful and acutely accented support – the chorus, so important here, in particularly fine form – this is a version that catches much of the theatrical excitement found on most of the recordings emanating from Bayreuth.

He chooses to perform the original Dresden version while incorporating the instrumental improvements Wagner made later in his career. He sometimes is so caught up with the drama that his groans become audible. Unfortunately, not all the singing attains a similar standard. Falk Struckmann is certainly a Dutchman to be reckoned alongside the most convincing portrayals on disc. His voice, reminiscent of Theo Adam's grainy, tense tone on the Klemperer set, matches all the role's appreciable demands. His monologue has all the anguish and poignancy one could wish for, with the text really made to tell, and his departure is properly desperate. Only at the beginning of the love duet, 'Wie aus der Ferne', does he miss something of the haunted quality called for, eschewing the hushed tones of the most convincing interpreters as this point. He may not have been inspired by Jane Eaglen's middling Senta – listen to Adam and Silja under Klemperer to hear just how arresting this music can sound.

Much of Eaglen's reading of her part has sensitivity and even inwardness, and she catches some of the girl's single-minded desperation. But in the part's more strenuous moments, especially in the higher registers of her voice, her singing sounds strained and unacceptably threadbare. As Daland, Robert Holl offers some sturdy singing but his tone has become sadly dulled and grey, particularly as compared with that of, say, Weber (Keilberth) or Talvela (Klemperer) in this role. As on the sure-footed Steinberg set, Seiffert is a more-than-capable Erik, but his voice isn't quite as pleasing to the ear as it was 10 years ago. The Steersman of Villazon, a new young Mexican tenor with a potentially glorious voice, and Felicity Palmer's vital Mary are both excellent.

Among modern sets, this is to be ranked above the Dohnányi (Decca) by virtue of its extra sense of the theatre. But Klemperer's more measured, grander reading (EMI Great Recordings of the Century), is far better cast all-round – particularly Silja as Senta. Still, if you can overlook some vocal vagaries, Barenboim's considered performance is a force to be reckoned with.

Der fliegende Holländer
Theo Adam bass-bar Holländer; Anja Silja sop Senta; Martti Talvela bass Daland; Ernst Kozub ten Erik; Annelies Burmeister mez Mary; Gerhard Unger ten Steuermann; BBC Chorus; New Philharmonia Orchestra / Otto Klemperer
EMI Great Recordings of the Century ② 567408-2 (152 minutes: ADD) Ⓜ
Notes, text and translation included
Recorded 1968 ◉

Klemperer's magisterial interpretation of this work was unavailable in any form for far too long so that its reissue was most welcome. As ever, Klemperer by and large justifies some moderate tempos by the way in which he sustains line and emphasises detail. Only once or twice – in the Spinning and Sailors' choruses – do you sense a lack of propulsion. Otherwise there is throughout a blazing intensity to the reading that brooks no denial. The storm and sea music in the Overture and thereafter is given stunning power, and the Dutchman's torture and passion is evoked in the orchestra. Indeed, the playing of the New Philharmonia is a bonus throughout. Klemperer catches as convincingly as anyone the elemental feeling of the work – the sense of the sea, basic passions and the interplay of character unerringly adumbrated.

There have been few baritones before or since Theo Adam who have sustained the line of the Dutchman so well and so intelligently reached the heart of the matter where the text is concerned. Silja's bright, sometimes piercing timbre isn't to everyone's taste, but hers is a most moving portrayal of trust and loyalty and love unto death, the interpretation of an outstanding singing-actress. Martti Talvela, singing magnificently and suggesting a formidable presence, is a bluff, burly Daland. Ernst Kozub's Erik has its clumsy moments, but one admires the shining tone. Gerhard Unger offers an ardent, cleanly articulated Sailor. Annelies Burmeister is a ripe Mary. The overall sound is a shade on the dry side but does not detract from the enjoyment.

Der fliegende Holländer
Robert Hale bass-bar Holländer; Hildegard Behrens sop Senta; Kurt Rydl bass Daland; Josef Protschka ten Erik; Iris Vermillion mez Mary; Uwe Heilmann ten Steuermann; Vienna State Opera Concert Choir; Vienna Philharmonic Orchestra / Christoph von Dohnányi
Decca ② 436 418-2DHO2 (145 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Notes, text and translation included. Recorded 1991

Singers, conductor, chorus, orchestra and engineers combine to make Dohnányi's set one of the most successful modern recordings of the work (just behind Barenboim's). With the Vienna Philharmonic responding to Dohnányi's precise and energising beat from start to finish the sea does really seem to course through the score as Wagner intended. Dohnányi emphasises the raw, even untutored sound of much of the orchestration, giving the wind and brass the prominence they deserve. Taut, springy rhythms abound from the Overture onwards. He opts for the three-act version and the full ending. Hale is an exemplary Dutchman and sings with great depth and understanding. This is evident throughout a masterly traversal of his long monologue, where the required torment in the tone is revealed to the full. Behrens captures Senta's single-minded passion and infatuation, singing the quieter passages with refined sensitivity, the forceful ones with fearless attack; and satisfaction extends to the lesser roles. The chorus is superb as sailors, ghost crew and townspeople, singing with firm tone and exact attack. Nothing here is left unconsidered, yet, amazingly, for the most part a real sense of the theatre is achieved throughout. For that we have to thank the Decca team. Balance, depth, perspectives all seem blessedly natural; undoctored and inevitable, so that one is able to take the sound picture for granted.

Additional recommendation
Der fliegende Holländer 🄷
Hotter Holländer; Varnay Senta; Glaz Mary; Haysward Steersman; Svanholm Erik; Nilsson Daland; Metropolitan Opera Chorus and Orchestra, New York / Reiner
Naxos Historical mono ② 8 110189/90 Ⓢ ◉
(128 minutes: ADD). Notes and synopsis included
Recorded live at the Met, New York in 1950

This performance marked the Met house début of Hans Hotter, and what a début! Varnay and Hotter seem to inspire each other to astonishing feats of musical and dramatic truth. Among historic recordings, this deserves a place up there with the Clemens Krauss. Those who want to hear Hotter in his prime will surely want this issue. The sound is excellent.

Götterdämmerung

Awards 2000

Astrid Varnay sop Brünnhilde; Bernd Aldenhoff ten Siegfried; Ludwig Weber bass Hagen; Heinrich Pflanzl bass Alberich; Hermann Uhde bar Gunther; Martha Mödl sop Gutrune, Third Norn; Elisabeth Höngen mez Waltraute; Elisabeth Schwarzkopf sop Woglinde; Hanna Ludwig sop Wellgunde; Hertha Töpper mez Flosshilde; Ruth Siewert mez First Norn; Ira Malaniuk mez Second Norn; Chorus and Orchestra of the Bayreuth Festival /Hans Knappertsbusch 🄷

Testament mono ⦿ ⑥ SBTLP6175; ④ SBT4175 Ⓕ
(281 minutes: ADD). Notes, text and translation included. Recorded live in 1951 ●●●

Testament awakened this sleeping Brünnhilde after half a century in Decca's vaults, held there because of an age-old dispute over rights between that company and EMI. This is a fitting memorial, alongside the exactly contemporaneous Parsifal (Teldec), to the phoenix-like reincarnation of Bayreuth post-war and to Wieland Wagner's genius as a producer and gatherer of all the talents to the Green Hill. The other hero of the occasion, as with Parsifal, is Knappertsbusch. From the first bars of the Prologue he takes us right into the work, as concerned as three notable Norns (Mödl the most arresting of the three when prophesying the conflagration to come) with the inevitability of the tragic events portrayed within. He then takes us from Stygian gloom to mountain-top ecstasy with a masterly touch few equal. There we meet Varnay's youthful, vibrant, womanly heroine. Beside her is Aldenhoff's not-so-lovely Siegfried, yet once you become accustomed to his aggrandising, extrovert moments you hear a Heldentenor in the old mould, alive to every word and communicating with his audience. Later, arriving at Gibichung Hall, you meet the most forthright, articulate Gunther in Uhde. His greeting to Siegfried, 'Begrüsse froh, O Held', makes one realise why Uhde is pre-eminent in this role. Beside him is Weber's louring, gloating, ambitious Hagen. What intelligence there is in every bar he sings (try 'Ein Weib weiss ich' or the whole of the Watch). As Gutrune, Mödl is not your usual sweet-toned milksop but a women not afraid to show her deep emotions. The great mezzo Höngen as Waltraute conveys with amazing immediacy Wotan's despair, and, with a shudder in her tone at 'Da brach sich sein Blick ', the tenderness of his thoughts on his beloved Brünnhilde, making one feel it to be the most moving moment in the whole Ring and consoling us for occasionally grainy tone.

Throughout Act 2, Knappertsbusch is trenchant in characterising the tremendous conflicts depicted therein. Weber rouses the vassals with vigorous enthusiasm. Varnay is tremendous in her denunciations of Siegfried, Aldenhoff as vivid in his replies. Such immediacy can only be found in the opera house – damn the momentary lapses in ensemble, the few distractions when scenery is being moved or the audience coughs. In Act 3 the Rhine Maidens, led by Schwarzkopf, are too backwardly placed, the sole blot on the sound picture. In Siegfried's Narration, Aldenhoff captures the vitality of his earlier exploits, supported by gloriously rippling strings, and sings a fulsome death-song. Knappertsbusch, eagerly supported by Bayreuth's hand-picked orchestra (all individually named in the accompanying booklet), unleashes all the tremendous import of the Funeral March. Finally Varnay carries all before her, in better voice than later at Bayreuth, in a visionary account of the Immolation that rightly crowns a noble interpretation of her role and the whole work. The recording is superior even to that of the 1951 Parsifal, with only a few passages of uncertain balance to fault it, supporting an experience nobody ought to miss.

Lohengrin

Jess Thomas ten Lohengrin; Elisabeth Grümmer sop Elsa; Christa Ludwig mez Ortrud; Dietrich Fischer-Dieskau bar Telramund; Gottlob Frick bass King Henry; Otto Wiener bass Herald; Vienna State Opera Chorus; Vienna Philharmonic Orchestra / Rudolf Kempe
EMI Great Recordings of the Century ③ Ⓜ
567415-2 (217 minutes: ADD)
Text and translation included
Recorded 1963?64? ●●

EMI's sound may have less presence and a narrower perspective than other versions, but neither the 'studio' ambience – the recording was made in the Theater an der Wien – nor the occasionally excessive prominence of the voices prevents Kempe's reading from projecting a strongly theatrical quality. However, it is the all-round excellence of the cast, plus the bonus of an uncut Act 3, which makes this the leading mid-price recommendation.

Jess Thomas combines ardour and anguish as well as any, and with Fischer-Dieskau a formidable (but never over-emphatic) antagonist, and Gottlob Frick a majestic King Henry, the drama of the opera's central conflict remains supremely immediate and powerful. As Elsa and Ortrud, Elisabeth Grümmer and Christa Ludwig are ideal opposites, the former radiant yet quite without the simpering overtones that afflict some Elsas, the latter as potent in seductive insinuation as in demonic ferocity. Not even Ludwig can surpass the visceral intensity of Astrid Varnay in the 1953 Bayreuth set under Keilberth, and Keilberth's Telramund and Elsa (Hermann Uhde and Eleanor Steber) are also outstanding: yet Wolfgang Windgassen's Lohengrin is not as distinguished, nor as distinctive, as Jess Thomas's here. Even more importantly, Keilberth's reading lacks the visionary quality that Kempe finds in the score. Ultimately, it is the power of that vision which raises this performance above its rivals.

Lohengrin
Paul Frey ten Lohengrin; Cheryl Studer sop Elsa; Gabriele Schnaut sop Ortrud; Ekkehard Wlaschiha bar Telramund; Manfred Schenk bass King Henry; Eike Wilm Schulte bar Herald; Bayreuth Festival Chorus and Orchestra / Peter Schneider
Philips ③ 434 602-2PH4 (212 minutes: DDD) Ⓜ
Notes, text and translation included. Recorded 1990

Schneider's is a splendidly absorbing performance of Lohengrin. This underrated conductor provides a straightforward, no-nonsense reading in the best Kapellmeister tradition, avoiding the extremes of tempo interpretation of some more highly-powered conductors. He obtains playing and singing of the highest calibre from the Bayreuth orchestra and chorus, sustains the long and sometimes tedious-seeming paragraphs of Acts 1 and 2 without ever allowing boredom to intervene, and brings extraordinary tension to such forward-looking scenes as Lohengrin's arrival, the Ortrud-Telramund dialogue and the psychologically intense duet for Elsa and Lohengrin in Act 3. Elsa was one of the roles with which Studer made her name on the international scene; she sings it here once more with refulgent tone, understanding of the text and comprehension of Elsa's dreamy then troubled personality. Particularly affecting is her desperate appeal to Lohengrin at the end of Act 2. Paul Frey is a sensitive, chivalrous Lohengrin, even if his voice hasn't quite the Heldentenor strength of some of his predecessors. Evil is reasonably well represented. Wlaschiha is a vital and nasty Telramund, keenly projecting the character's chip-on-the-shoulder malevolence of the words. Schnaut has an imposing, powerful soprano although more could have been made of the words than she achieves. Schenk is a well-routined King, Schulte a superb Herald. Incidentally, Schneider observes the traditional (Wagner's) cut just before Lohengrin's Farewell, although the passage is printed in full in the booklet. This set is well worth considering in a sparse recommendable field of available versions.

Lohengrin
James King ten Lohengrin; Gundula Janowitz sop Elsa; Gwyneth Jones sop Ortrud; Thomas Stewart bar Telramund; Karl Ridderbusch bass King Henry; Gerd Nienstedt bass Herald; Bavarian Radio Chorus and Symphony Orchestra / Rafael Kubelík
DG ③ 449 591-2GX3 (222 minutes: ADD). Notes, Ⓜ
text and translation included. Recorded 1971 ●

The attributes of Kubelík's Lohengrin have been underestimated. It will hold your interest from first to last, not least thanks to Kubelík's masterly overview. Not only does he successfully hold together all the disparate strands of the sprawling work, he also imparts to them a sense of inner excitement through his close attention to the small notes and phrases that so often delineate character in this score and through his vital control of the large ensembles. He is helped inestimably by the Bavarian Radio forces – gloriously singing strings, characterful winds, trenchant, involving chorus – of which he was, in 1971, a beloved chief. There's never a dull moment in his vivid, theatrical Lohengrin. The recording imparts a suitably spacious atmosphere to the piece but also places the principals up front where they should be except when distancing is required – as at Lohengrin's first appearance and at the moment when Elsa appears on the balcony to address the night breezes. Janowitz's Elsa is one of the set's major assets. Pure in tone, imaginative in phrasing, she catches the ear from her first entry, very much suggesting Elsa's vulnerability. Later she eloquently conveys her deep feelings in the love duet, followed by her voicing of all the doubts that beset her character. King's Lohengrin is more ordinary; today we would be grateful for such solid, musical and well-judged singing. Few if any Lohengrins can sing the passage starting 'Höchstes Vertraun' (third disc, track 5) with anything like King's true tone and powerful conviction. Though not as detailed or subtle in is colouring of the text as some, Thomas Stewart sings a sturdy Telramund, managing the high tessitura with consummate ease. Gwyneth Jones's portrayal, taken all-round, is reasonably convincing despite turning a vibrato that might flatteringly be called opulent into something more objectionable. Her Ortrud registers high on the scale of vicious malevolence in the part. The difficulty, as it always has been with this intelligent artist, is that the subtlety evinced in quiet passages is vitiated when the tone comes under pressure.

The chorus are nothing short of superb. So, this makes an irresistible bid for recommendation. It is well recorded, sounding wholly resplendent and as cogently conducted as any of its rivals.

Lohengrin
Peter Seiffert ten Lohengrin; Emily Magee sop Elsa; Deborah Polaski sop Ortrud; Falk Struckmann bar Telramund; René Pape bass King Henry; Roman Trekel bar Herald; Chorus of the Deutsche Oper, Berlin; Staatskapelle Berlin / Daniel Barenboim
Teldec ③ 3984-21484-2 (211 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Notes, texts and translations included
Recorded 1997

This recording is based on the cast with which Barenboim performed the opera at the Berlin State Opera in 1996, although the tenor taking the title-role is different. The chorus, so important in this work, sings with refinement, discipline and enthusiasm in its many roles while all departments of the orchestra play the score to the hilt. Barenboim himself manages to give an overriding unity to a work that can, in lesser hands, sprawl. That's particularly true as regards Act 2, which can test a listener's concentration; not here when the conductor so unerringly weaves the disparate elements into a coherent, forward-moving whole. He is also to be commended for playing Act 3 complete, restoring not only the theatre cuts often made in recording but also the second verse of Lohengrin's Grail narration, cut by Wagner before the first night. In the opera house it is sensibly omitted because it lengthens the act unduly. The only reservation concerns the famous Prelude to Act 3, which seems too brash and too fast. All the singers, with one exception, are regulars at the Berlin State Opera. The exception is Seiffert as Lohengrin, who in tone, phrasing and sheer lyrical ardour makes a near-ideal white knight. His Elsa is Emily Magee, her tone full and refulgent, her interpretation deeply felt. The one worry is that her voice is so much like that of Polaski that they are hard to tell apart in their long confrontation in Act 2. Polaski makes a splendidly forceful and articulate Ortrud, only very occasionally sounding taxed by heavier passages, most worryingly in her closing imprecations. Struckmann's Telramund isn't as tortured as Fischer-Dieskau's in Kempe's set, but these vital, involving interpretations have their own validity. Pape is a model King Henry, pouring out his concerns in golden tone. Trekel is a strong Herald. The set is enhanced by a perfectly balanced and warm recording.

Die Meistersinger von Nürnberg

Thomas Stewart bar Hans Sachs; Sándor Kónya ten Walther; Gundula Janowitz sop Eva; Franz Crass bass Pogner; Thomas Hemsley bar Beckmesser; Gerhard Unger ten David; Brigitte Fassbaender mez Magdalene; Kieth Engen bass Kothner; Horst Wilhelm ten Vogelgesang; Richard Kogel bass Nachtigall; Manfred Schmidt ten Zorn; Friedrich Lenz ten Eisslinger; Peter Baillie ten Moser; Anton Diakov bass Ortel; Karl Christian Kohn bass Schwartz; Dieter Slembeck bass Foltz; Raimund Grumbach bass Nightwatchman; Bavarian Radio Chorus and Symphony Orchestra / Rafael Kubelík

Calig ④ CAL50971/4 (272 minutes: ADD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1967 ◉◉

There could be no more fitting memorial to Kubelík than the appearance of this, probably the most all-round satisfying Meistersinger in the era of stereo. It was recorded in 1967 by Bavarian Radio to mark the work's centenary the following year. Kubelík conducts an unforced, loving interpretation, showing a gratifying grasp of overall structure. As a whole the reading has an unobtrusive cohesion achieved within flexible tempos and dynamics. Everything proceeds at an even, well-judged pace with just the right surge of emotion at the climaxes. All this is conveyed unerringly to his own Bavarian Radio Symphony forces.

Stewart's Sachs is certainly his most successful performance on disc. He offers a finely moulded, deeply considered reading that relies on firm, evenly produced, mostly warm tone to create a darkish, philosophical poet-cobbler. Kónya is simply the most winning Walther on any set, superseding Sawallisch's excellent Heppner by virtue of a greater ardour in his delivery. Kónya pours out consistently warm, clear tone, his tenor hovering ideally between the lyric and the heroic. Nor are there many better Evas than the young Janowitz, certainly none with a lovelier voice. Franz Crass, a less pompous Pogner than some, sings his part effortlessly, with noble feeling. Hemsley, though singing his first Beckmesser, evinces a close affinity with the Town Clerk's mean-mindedness, and his German is faultless. Unger is a paragon among Davids, so eager in his responses and finding just the right timbre for the role. His Magdalene, again perfect casting, is the young Fassbaender. With a characterful Kothner in Engen, the requirements for a near-ideal Meistersinger ensemble are in place. As the recording doesn't betray its age this would undoubtedly be the first choice among stereo versions.

Die Meistersinger von Nürnberg

Bernd Weikl bar Hans Sachs; Ben Heppner ten Walther; Cheryl Studer sop Eva; Kurt Moll bass Pogner; Siegfried Lorenz bar Beckmesser; Deon van der Walt ten David; Cornelia Kallisch contr Magdalene; Hans-Joachim Ketelsen bass Kothner; Michael Schade ten Vogelgesang; Hans Wilbrink bar Nachtigall; Ulrich Ress ten Zorn; Hermann Sapell bar Eisslinger; Roland Wagenführer ten Moser; Rainer Büse bass Ortel; Guido Götzen bass Schwarz; Friedmann Kunder bass Foltz; René Pape bass Nightwatchman; Bavarian State Opera Chorus; Bavarian State Orchestra / Wolfgang Sawallisch

EMI ④ 555142-2 (257 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Notes, text and translation included
Recorded 1993 ◉

Sawallisch's Meistersinger is very much a version for today – profoundly musical, as it was bound to be under him, sung with a consistent beauty of sound, and recorded truthfully and spaciously. Anybody coming to the work for the first time, and wanting a version backed by modern sound, will find it a sensible choice, a performance for the most part measuring up to the score's many demands on its interpreters. Sawallisch obtains singing and playing on the highest level of achievement, observant of detail, rich in texture, sure in pacing and – very important in this score – anxious to move forward where there is any danger of the music seeming over-extended, as in the recital of the tones and the Act 2 episode of Beckmesser's courting. Sawallisch's reading also catches the warmth that pervades the whole opera, yet is also successful in deftly projecting its comedy.

It must be said, however, that with Sawallisch the earth doesn't move, the spirit is seldom lifted as it should be. On the other hand, nobody is better than Sawallisch at characterising the disputes among the Masters in Act 1, or the pointed humour of the Act 2 Sachs-Beckmesser scene, and much else of that nature is unobtrusively right.

Where the recording itself is concerned, great care has been taken over the placing of the singers in relation to one another and the correct distancing of the voices where called for. The balance in relation to the orchestra seems just about ideal. Sawallisch takes an honoured place in the illustrious company of interpreters. His reading is full of thoughtful aperçus and natural flow, and displays a sensible overview of the score. Vocally it will satisfy all but those with the most demanding tastes in and/or long experience in Wagnerian interpretation.

Parsifal

Jess Thomas ten Parsifal; George London bass-bar Amfortas; Hans Hotter bass-bar Gurnemanz; Irene

Dalis mez Kundry; Gustav Neidlinger bass-bar Klingsor; Martti Talvela bass Titurel; Niels Møller ten First Knight; Gerd Nienstedt bass Second Knight; Sona Cervená mez First Squire; Sixth Flower Maiden; Ursula Boese mez Second Squire; Gerhard Stolze ten Third Squire; Georg Paskuda ten Fourth Squire; Rita Bartos, Gundula Janowitz, Anja Silja, Elsa-Margrete Gardelli, Dorothea Siebert sops Flower Maidens; Bayreuth Festival Chorus and Orchestra / Hans Knappertsbusch
Philips 50 Great Recordings ④ 464 756-2PM4 Ⓜ
(250 minutes: ADD). Notes, text and translation included. Recorded live in 1962 ●●●

This is not merely one of Philips's Great Recordings but also one of the greatest sets of all time. Every time one returns to it, its inspiration and distinction seem to have been enhanced. There have been many fine recordings of this great Eastertide opera, but none has so magnificently managed to capture the power, the spiritual grandeur, the human frailty and the almost unbearable beauty of the work as Hans Knappertsbusch. This live recording has a cast that has few equals. Hotter is superb, fleshing out Gurnemanz with a depth of insight that has never been surpassed. London's Amfortas captures the frightening sense of impotence and anguish with painful directness whilst Thomas's Parsifal grows as the performance progresses and is no mean achievement. Dalis may lack that final degree of sensuousness but she provides a fine interpretation nevertheless. Throughout the work, Knappertsbusch exercises a quite unequalled control over the proceedings; it is a fine testament to a great conductor. The Bayreuth acoustic is well reproduced, and all in all this record is a profound and moving experience.

Awards 1981

Parsifal
Peter Hofmann ten Parsifal; José van Dam bass-bar Amfortas; Kurt Moll bass Gurnemanz; Dunja Vejzovic mez Kundry; Siegmund Nimsgern bass Klingsor; Victor von Halem bass Titurel; Claes Hakon Ahnsjö ten First Knight; Kurt Rydl bass Second Knight; Marjon Lambriks, Anne Gjevang mezzos Heiner Hopfner ten Georg Tichy bass Squires; Barbara Hendricks, Janet Perry, Inga Nielsen sops Audrey Michael mez Doris Soffel, Rohângiz Yachmi Caucig contrs Flower Maidens; Hanna Schwarz mez Voice from above; Berlin Deutsche Opera Chorus; Berlin Philharmonic Orchestra / Herbert von Karajan
DG ④ 413 347-2GH4 (256 minutes: ADD) Ⓕ
Notes, text and translation included
Recorded 1979-80 ●●●

Karajan's Parsifal seems to grow in stature as an interpretation on each rehearing; on its CD transfer it appears to have acquired a new depth, in terms of sound, because of the greater range of the recording and the greater presence of both singers and orchestra. As in practically all cases, CD offers a more immediate experience. Karajan's reading, a trifle stodgy in Act 1, grows in intensity and feeling with the work itself, reaching an almost terrifying force in the Prelude to Act 3 which is sustained to the end of the opera. Moll's Gurnemanz is a deeply expressive, softly moulded performance of notable beauty. Vejzovic, carefully nurtured by Karajan, gives the performance of her life as Kundry. Hofmann's tone isn't at all times as steady as a Parsifal's should be, but he depicts the character's anguish and eventual serenity in his sincere, inward interpretation. Van Dam is a trifle too placid as Amfortas, but his singing exhibits admirable power and fine steadiness. Nimsgern is the epitome of malice as Klingsor. The choral singing doesn't have quite the confidence of the superb orchestral playing, which has both qualities of Keats's imagining of beauty and truth in abundance.

Das Rheingold

Das Rheingold
John Tomlinson bass Wotan; Linda Finnie mez Fricka; Graham Clark ten Loge; Helmut Pampuch ten Mime; Günter von Kannen bar Alberich; Eva Johansson sop Freia; Kurt Schreibmayer ten Froh; Bodo Brinkmann bar Donner; Birgitta Svendén mez Erda; Matthias Hölle bass Fasolt; Philip Kang bass Fafner; Hilde Leidland sop Woglinde; Annette Küttenbaum mez Wellgunde; Jane Turner mez Flosshilde; Bayreuth Festival Orchestra / Daniel Barenboim
Teldec ② 4509-91185-2 (149 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Notes, text and translation included
Recorded live in 1991 ●●

Die Walküre
Poul Elming ten Siegmund; Nadine Secunde sop Sieglinde; Anne Evans sop Brünnhilde; John Tomlinson bass Wotan; Linda Finnie mez Fricka, Siegrune; Matthias Hölle bass Hunding; Eva Johansson sop Gerhilde; Eva-Maria Bundschuh sop Helmwige; Ruth Floeren sop Ortlinde; Shirley Close mez Waltraute; Hebe Dijkstra mez Rossweisse; Birgitta Svendén mez Grimgerde; Hitomi Katagiri mez Schwertleite; Bayreuth Festival Orchestra / Daniel Barenboim
Teldec ④ 4509-91186-2 (233 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Notes, text and translation included
Recorded live in 1992 ●●

These are enthralling performances. Tomlinson's volatile Wotan is the most potent reading here. He manages to sing every word with insistent meaning and forceful declamation while maintaining a firm legato. His German is so idiomatic that he might have been speaking the language his whole life and he brings breadth and distinction of phrase to his solos at the close of both operas. Anne Evans as a single, important advantage over other recent Brünnhildes in that her voice is wholly free from wobble and she never makes an ugly sound. Hers is a light, girlish, honest portrayal, sung with unfailing musicality if not with the ultimate insights. Linda Finnie is an articulate, sharp-edged Fricka, and Graham Clark a sparky, incisive

Loge. Nadine Secunde's impassioned Sieglinde is matched by the vital, exciting Siegmund of Poul Elming, and Matthias Hölle as both Hunding and Fasolt is another of those black basses of which Germany seems to have an inexhaustible supply. The whole is magnificently conducted by Barenboim, a more expansive Wagnerian than Böhm. By 1991 he had the full measure of its many facets, bringing immense authority and power to building its huge climaxes, yet finding all the lightness of touch for the mercurial and/or diaphanous aspects of the score. He has the inestimable advantage of a Bayreuth orchestra at the peak of its form, surpassing – and this says much – even the Metropolitan orchestra for Levine. Similar qualities inform his interpretation of Die Walküre. Barenboim has now learnt how to match the epic stature of Wagner's mature works, how to pace them with an overview of the whole, and there is an incandescent, metaphysical feeling of a Furtwänglerian kind in is treatment of such passages as Wotan's anger and the Valkyrie ride. The orchestra is superb. It is backed by a recording of startling presence and depth, amply capturing the Bayreuth acoustic.

Rienzi

René Kollo ten Cola Rienzi; Siv Wennberg sop Irene; Janis Martin sop Adriano; Theo Adam bass Paolo Orsini; Nikolaus Hillebrand bass Steffano Colonna; Siegfried Vogel bass Raimondo; Peter Schreier ten Baroncelli; Günther Leib bass Cecco del Vecchio; Ingeborg Springer sop Messenger of Peace; Leipzig Radio Chorus; Dresden State Opera Chorus; Staatskapelle Dresden / Heinrich Hollreiser

EMI ③ 567131-2 (225 minutes: ADD) Ⓜ
Notes, text and translation included
Recorded 1974-76

Rienzi is grand opera with a vengeance. Political imperatives count for more than mere human feelings, and politics means ceremony as well as warfare: marches, ballet music and extended choruses are much in evidence in this work, while even the solo arias often have the rhetorical punch of political harangues. It could all be an enormous bore. Yet the young Wagner, basing his work on Bulwer Lytton's story of the tragic Roman tribune, did manage to move beyond mere tub-thumping into a degree of intensity that – for those with ears to hear – prefigures the mature genius to come. In the end, Rienzi himself is more than just a political animal, and the existential anguish of Tannhäuser, Tristan and even Amfortas can be found glimmering in the distance. This performance is not ideal in every respect, either musically, or as a recording. But its virtues outweigh its weaknesses by a considerable margin. Siv Wennberg was not in best voice at the time, but the other principals, notably René Kollo and Janis Martin, bring commendable stamina and conviction to their demanding roles. Above all Heinrich Hollreiser prevents the more routine material from sounding merely mechanical, and ensures that Rienzi has a truly Wagnerian sweep and fervour.

The Complete Ring Cycle

Das Rheingold H

George London bass-bar Wotan; Kirsten Flagstad sop Fricka; Set Svanholm ten Loge; Paul Kuen ten Mime; Gustav Neidlinger bass-bar Alberich; Claire Watson sop Freia; Waldemar Kmentt ten Froh; Eberhard Waechter bar Donner; Jean Madeira contr Erda; Walter Kreppel bass Fasolt; Kurt Böhme bass Fafner; Oda Balsborg sop Woglinde; Hetty Plümacher mez Wellgunde; Ira Malaniuk mez Flosshilde

Die Walküre H

James King ten Siegmund; Régine Crespin sop Sieglinde; Birgit Nilsson sop Brünnhilde; Hans Hotter bass-bar Wotan; Christa Ludwig mez Fricka; Gottlob Frick bass Hunding; Vera Schlosser sop Gerhilde; Berit Lindholm sop Helmwige; Helga Dernesch sop Ortlinde; Brigitte Fassbaender mez Waltraute; Claudia Hellmann sop Rossweisse; Vera Little contr Siegrune; Marilyn Tyler sop Grimgerde; Helen Watts contr Schwertleite

Siegfried H

Wolfgang Windgassen ten Siegfried; Hans Hotter bass-bar Wanderer; Birgit Nilsson sop Brünnhilde; Gerhard Stolze ten Mime; Gustav Neidlinger bass-bar Alberich; Marga Höffgen contr Erda; Kurt Böhme bass Fafner; Joan Sutherland sop Woodbird

Götterdämmerung H

Birgit Nilsson sop Brünnhilde; Wolfgang Windgassen ten Siegfried; Gottlob Frick bass Hagen; Gustav Neidlinger bass-bar Alberich; Dietrich Fischer-Dieskau bar Gunther; Claire Watson sop Gutrune; Christa Ludwig mez Waltraute; Gwyneth Jones sop Wellgunde; Lucia Popp sop Woglinde; Maureen Guy mez Flosshilde; Helen Watts contr First Norn; Grace Hoffman mez Second Norn; Anita Välkki sop Third Norn
Vienna State Opera Chorus; Vienna Philharmonic Orchestra / Georg Solti

Decca ⑭ 455 555-2DMO14 (876 minutes: ADD) Ⓜ
Notes, texts and translations included Recorded 1958-65. Also available separately OO

As perspectives on the Solti/Culshaw enterprise lengthen, and critical reactions are kept alert by the regular appearance of new, or newly issued, and very different recordings, it may seem increasingly ironic that of all conductors the ultra-theatrical Solti should have been denied a live performance. There are indeed episodes in this recording that convey more of the mechanics of the studio than of the electricity of the opera house – the opening of Die Walküre, Act 2, and the closing scenes of Siegfried and Götterdämmerung, for example. Yet, in general, dramatic impetus and atmosphere are strongly established and well sustained, sometimes more powerfully than is usually managed in the theatre. As just one example one would instance the superb control with which the intensity of Donner's summoning up of the thunder in Das Rheingold is maintained across Froh's greeting to the rainbow bridge into Wotan's own great salutation. At the majestic climax of this scene the power of feeling conveyed by George London's fine performance counts for more than any 'artificiality' in the way the voice is balanced against the orchestra.

Equally memorable in a totally different context is Solti's management of the long transition in Götterdämmerung between Hagen's Watch and the appearance of Waltraute. Nothing could be less mannered or unnatural than Solti's grasp of perspective and feeling for the life of each phrase in this music. On CD the clarity of instrumental detail is consistently remarkable, and while not all the singers sound as if they are constantly in danger of being overwhelmed there are some vital episodes, especially those involving Windgassen and Nilsson. Awareness of what these artists achieved in other recordings strengthens the suspicion that they may have been giving more than we actually get here. Windgassen is not allowed to dominate the sound picture in the way his part demands, and Nilsson can seem all-too relaxed within the comforting cocoon of the orchestral texture.

Factors like these, coupled with those distinctive Soltian confrontations between the hard-driven and the hammily protracted, have prevented the cycle from decisively seeing off its rivals over the years. It is nevertheless questionable whether any studio recording of The Ring could reasonably be expected to be more atmospheric, exciting or better performed than this one. The VPO is not merely prominent, but excellent, and such interpretations as Svanholm's Loge, Neidlinger's Alberich and Frick's Hagen remain very impressive.

Above all, there is Hotter, whose incomparably authoritative, unfailingly alert and responsive Wotan stands up well when compared to his earlier Bayreuth accounts. Nowhere is he more commanding than in Siegfried, Act 1, where one even welcomes Stolze's mannerisms as Mime for the sparks they strike off the great bass-baritone. Earlier in this act the interplay of equally balanced instruments and voices in relatively intimate conversational phrases displays the Culshaw concept at its most convincing. He would have been astonished to hear what his successors have achieved in renewing his production through digital remastering. One now realises how much of the original sound was lost on the old pressings. In comparison with the 1980 Janowski/RCA version, the approaches are so different they almost seem like different experiences. Culshaw was intent on creating a theatre on record with all the well-known stage effects; the rival version eschews all such manifestations. In general, Janowski presents a much more intimate view of the work than Solti's.

However many other *Ring*s you may have, though, you will need this one.

Das Rheingold
Theo Adam bass-bar Wotan; Annelies Burmeister mez Fricka; Wolfgang Windgassen ten Loge; Erwin Wohlfahrt ten Mime; Gustav Neidlinger bass-bar Alberich; Anja Silja sop Freia; Hermin Esser ten Froh; Gerd Nienstedt bass Donner; Vera Soukupová mez Erda; Martti Talvela bass Fasolt; Kurt Böhme bass Fafner; Dorothea Siebert sop Woglinde; Helga Dernesch sop Wellgunde; Ruth Hesse mez Flosshilde
Bayreuth Festival Chorus and Orchestra / Karl Böhm
Philips ② 412 475-2PH2 (137 minutes: ADD) Ⓕ
Notes, text and translation included
Recorded live in 1967 ○○○

Die Walküre
James King ten Siegmund; Leonie Rysanek sop Sieglinde; Birgit Nilsson sop Brünnhilde; Theo Adam bass-bar Wotan; Annelies Burmeister mez Fricka, Siegrune; Gerd Nienstedt bass Hunding; Danica Mastilović sop Gerhilde; Liane Synek sop Helmwige; Helga Dernesch sop Ortlinde; Gertraud Hopf mez Waltraute; Sona Cervená mez Rossweisse; Elisabeth Schärtel contr Grimgerde; Sieglinde Wagner contr Schwertleite; Bayreuth Festival Chorus and Orchestra /Karl Böhm
Philips ④ 412 478-2PH4 (210 minutes: ADD) Ⓕ
Notes, text and translation included
Recorded live in 1967 ○○○

Siegfried
Wolfgang Windgassen ten Siegfried; Theo Adam bass-bar Wanderer; Birgit Nilsson sop Brünnhilde; Erwin Wohlfahrt ten Mime; Gustav Neidlinger bass-bar Alberich; Vera Soukupová mez Erda; Kurt Böhme bass Fafner; Erika Köth sop Woodbird
Bayreuth Festival Orchestra /Karl Böhm
Philips ④ 412 483-2PH4 (223 minutes: ADD) Ⓕ
Notes, text and translation included
Recorded live in 1967 ○○○

Götterdämmerung
Birgit Nilsson sop Brünnhilde; Wolfgang Windgassen ten Siegfried; Josef Greindl bass Hagen; Gustav Neidlinger bass-bar Alberich; Thomas Stewart bar Gunther; Ludmila Dvořáková sop Gutrune; Martha Mödl mez Waltraute; Dorothea Siebert sop Woglinde; Helga Dernesch sop Wellgunde; Sieglinde Wagner contr Flosshilde; Marga Höffgen contr First Norn; Annelies Burmeister mez Second Norn; Anja Silja sop Third Norn Bayreuth Festival Chorus and Orchestra / Karl Böhm
Philips ④ 412 488-2PH4 (249 minutes: ADD) Ⓕ
Notes, text and translation included
Recorded live in 1967 ○○○

For every generation, Wagner's Ring presents a new challenge, yet certain musical performances have stood the test of time. One would recommend the recording made at Bayreuth in 1967 since, above all others, it represents a true and living account of a huge work as it was performed in the opera house for which it was largely conceived. Every artist who appears at Bayreuth seems to find an extra dedication in his or her comportment there, and on this occasion many of the singers and the conductor surpassed what they achieved elsewhere.

Böhm's reading is notable for its dramatic drive and inner tension. For the most part he also encompasses the metaphysical aspects of the score as well, and he procures playing of warmth and depth from the Bayreuth orchestra. Nilsson heads the cast as an unsurpassed Brünnhilde, wonderfully vivid in her characterisation and enunciation, tireless and gleaming in voice. Wolfgang Windgassen is equally committed and alert as her Siegfried and Theo Adam is an experienced, worldly-wise Wotan.

No Ring recording is perfect but this faithfully recorded version conveys the strength and force of the epic's meaning.

Das Rheingold[a]
Theo Adam bass-bar Wotan; Yvonne Minton mez Fricka; Peter Schreier ten Loge; Christian Vogel ten Mime; Siegmund Nimsgern bass-bar Alberich; Marita Napier sop Freia; Eberhard Büchner ten Froh; Karl-Heinz Stryczek bass Donner; Ortrun Wenkel contr Erda; Roland Bracht bass Fasolt; Matti Salminen bass Fafner; Lucia Popp sop Woglinde; Uta Priew mez Wellgunde; Hanna Schwarz contr Flosshilde

Die Walküre[b]
Siegfried Jerusalem ten Siegmund; Jessye Norman sop Sieglinde; Jeannine Altmeyer sop Brünnhilde; Theo Adam bass-bar Wotan; Yvonne Minton mez Fricka; Kurt Moll bass Hunding; Eva-Maria Bundschuh sop Gerhilde; Ruth Falcon sop Helmwige; Cheryl Studer sop Ortlinde; Ortrun Wenkel contr Waltraute; Uta Priew mez Rossweisse; Christel Borchers mez Siegrune; Kathleen Kuhlmann contr Grimgerde; Anne Gjevang contr Schwertleite

Siegfried[c]
René Kollo ten Siegfried; Theo Adam bass-bar Wanderer; Jeannine Altmeyer sop Brünnhilde; Peter Schreier ten Mime; Siegmund Nimsgern bass-bar Alberich; Ortrun Wenkel contr Erda; Norma Sharp sop Woodbird Matti Salminen bass Fafner

Götterdämmerung[d]
Jeannine Altmeyer sop Brünnhilde; René Kollo ten Siegfried; Matti Salminen bass Hagen; Siegmund Nimsgern bass-bar Alberich; Hans Günter Nöcker bar Gunther; Norma Sharp sop Gutrune; Ortrun Wenkel contr Waltraute; Uta Priew mez Wellgunde; Lucia Popp sop Woglinde; Hanna Schwarz contr Flosshilde; Anne Gjevang contr First Norn; Daphne Evangelatos mez Second Norn; Ruth Falcon sop Third Norn Men's Voices of the Leipzig State Opera; Dresden State Opera Chorus; Staatskapelle Dresden / Marek Janowski
RCA Red Seal ⑭ 74321 45417-2 Ⓑ
(839 minutes: DDD). Notes, texts and translations included. Recorded [a]1980, [b]1981, [c]1982, [d]1983 OO

Here's a true and desirable bargain. This, the first digitally recorded cycle to appear on CD, has always had a great deal to commend it, and at budget price it becomes even more attractive. One of its most telling assets is the actual recording, still the most natural, clear and most sensitively balanced available. Then it has the Dresden Staatskapelle playing with the utmost beauty from start to finish and with lean power when that's called for. Voices and players are in an ideal relationship. Which is not to say that such purple passages as the Magic Fire Music, Ride of the Valkyries, Rhine Journey and Funeral March want anything in visceral excitement. Janowski conducts a direct, dramatic interpretation, concerned throughout with forward movement. His clear-sighted conducting conveys theatrical excitement from start to finish without fuss or attempts at portentous readings. All this makes it an ideal introduction to the Ring for any young collector, who can later go on to more philosophically inclined interpretations. The casts are by and large excellent. Das Rheingold is dominated by three central performances – Nimsgern's vibrant, articulate Alberich, Schreier's wonderfully vital, strikingly intelligent and articulate Loge and Adam's experienced Wotan. But Fricka, Giants and Rhinemaidens are all well cast, and the whole performance grips one's attention from start to finish as the kaleidoscopic drama unfolds. Die Walküre introduces us to Norman's involving if not wholly idiomatic Sieglinde and, even better, the youthful Jerusalem's near-ideal Siegmund, forthright and sincere, not forgetting Moll's granite Hunding. Adam is so authoritative, so keen with the text, so inside his part that an occasional unsteadiness can be overlooked. With Altmeyer's Brünnhilde we come to the one drawback of the set. Though in this and the succeeding operas, we are thankful for such clear, clean and youthful tone, her reading is unformed and one-dimensional, lacking the essential insights of a Varnay or Behrens. In the title-role in Siegfried Kollo gives one of is most attractive portrayals on disc, full of thoughtful diction poised on clear-cut tone. Schreier misses nothing in his interpretation of the dissembling, wily Mime, Adam is at is very best as the wise, old Wanderer, and the smaller parts are well catered for. In Götterdämmerung, Salminen is a commanding, often subtle Hagen, though inclined to bark in his call, Nöcker a splendid Gunther. This set is particularly recommended to anyone wanting a reasonably priced introduction to the cycle. Even at a higher level, it has much going for it in comparison with supposedly more prestigious recordings.

The Complete Ring Cycle in English

The Valkyrie (sung in English)
Alberto Remedios ten Siegmund; Margaret Curphey sop Sieglinde; Rita Hunter sop Brünnhilde; Norman Bailey bar Wotan; Ann Howard contr Fricka; Clifford Grant bass Hunding; Katie Clarke sop Gerhilde; Anne Evans sop Helmwige; Ann Conoley sop Ortlinde; Elizabeth Connell sop Waltraute; Anne Collins contr Rossweisse; Sarah

Walker mez Siegrune; Shelagh Squires mez Grimgerde; Helen Attfield sop Schwertleite; English National Opera Orchestra / Reginald Goodall
Chandos Opera in English Series ④CHAN3038 Ⓕ
(249 minutes: ADD). Notes and English translation included. Recorded live in 1976 ●

Siegfried (sung in English)
Alberto Remedios ten Siegfried; Norman Bailey bass-bar Wanderer; Rita Hunter sop Brünnhilde ; Gregory Dempsey ten Mime; Derek Hammond-Stroud bar Alberich; Anne Collins contr Erda ; Clifford Grant bass Fafner ; Maurine London sop Woodbird; Sadler's Wells Opera Orchestra / Reginald Goodall
Chandos ④ CHAN3045 (279 minutes: ADD) Ⓕ
English text included. Recorded live in 1973 ●●

The Rhinegold (sung in English)
Norman Bailey bar Wotan; Katherine Pring mez Fricka; Emile Belcourt ten Loge; Gregory Dempsey ten Mime; Derek Hammond-Stroud bar Alberich; Lois McDonall sop Freia; Robert Ferguson ten Froh; Norman Welsby bar Donner; Anne Collins contr Erda; Robert Lloyd bass Fasolt; Clifford Grant bass Fafner; Valerie Masterson sop Woglinde; Shelagh Squires mez Wellgunde; Helen Attfield sop Flosshilde; English National Opera Orchestra / Reginald Goodall
Chandos Opera in English Series ③ CHAN3054 Ⓕ
(174 minutes: ADD). Notes and English text included. Recorded live in 1975 ●

Twilight of the Gods (sung in English)
Alberto Remedios ten Siegfried; Norman Welsby bar Gunther; Aage Haugland bass Hagen; Derek Hammond-Stroud bar Alberich; Rita Hunter sop Brünnhilde; Margaret Curphey sop Gutrune; Katherine Pring mez Waltraute; Anne Collins contr First Norn; Gillian Knight mez Second Norn; Anne Evans sop Third Norn; Valerie Masterson sop Woglinde; Shelagh Squires mez Wellgunde; Helen Attfield contr Flosshilde; English National Opera Orchestra and Chorus / Reginald Goodall
Chandos Opera in English CHAN3060 Ⓕ
(312 minutes: ADD). Notes and English text included Recorded live in 1977 ●

Valkyrie: There is something inevitable, even eternal about Goodall's long-breathed, full-toned, often ideally articulated reading. The ENO management's faith in him was handsomely repaid in his ability to convey his lifetime vision to is regular cast and eventually to his audiences. On paper, tempos may look unacceptably slow; in practice there are very few places – perhaps Siegmund's Spring song and Sieglinde's reply – where they seem too tardy. That is largely due to his ability to find the Hauptstimme for every paragraph of the music, indeed for a whole act and, perhaps even more, to his ability to persuade players and singers alike to sustain a long line. Listeners familiar only with the Solti cycle will hardly recognise this as the same work.

By 1976 all his singers were entirely inside their respective roles and so able to project a feeling of familiarity with their music that is evident in every bar. Like all the most satisfying sets of the Ring, it benefits enormously from being heard live in a theatre acoustic, and here no compromises have to be made, so superb are producer John Mordler's and his team's skills. You seem to be seated in centre stalls imbibing the performance. Rita Hunter bestrides the role of Brünnhilde in a confident manner achieved in relatively modern times only by Birgit Nilsson, whose bright tone and effortless top Hunter's so much resembles. She is also a thoughtful, very human interpreter of the role, keen with her words and investing them with the right import. By her side Bailey confirms that he is as excellent a Wotan as any since Hans Hotter. His reading of the taxing part is virtually tireless and his interpretation combines authority with fatherly concern. Remedios's Siegmund remains one of the most sweetly sung and appealing on disc. If Curphey is not quite in his class vocally, she offers a deeply felt and sympathetic Sieglinde. Ann Howard is, rightly, a termagant of a Fricka, with a touch of asperity in her tone. Clifford Grant is a sonorous, towering Hunding. The Valkyries, comprising many of the most promising female singers of the day (among them Elizabeth Connell and Anne Evans), acquit themselves very well. All the cast benefit from Andrew Porter's carefully wrought, very singable translation. Overall, then, a hearty welcome back to a great recording.

Siegfried: That Reginald Goodall idolised Klemperer and Knappertsbusch is evident in every aspect of this weighty, consistently thought-through interpretation; indeed it consoles us for the cycle Klemperer never recorded. The performance is also a reminder of what those then in charge of the ENO – Stephen Arlen, Lord Harewood and Edmund Tracey – had the sense to realise: that here was a unique opportunity to let a seasoned Wagnerian have his head in terms of the time and trouble to prepare a cycle in his own long time-scale. The results are there for all to hear in the total involvement of every member of the orchestra, the lyrical lines of the singers, the superb enunciation of the faultless translation.

Remedios's fresh, lyrical singing is a joy from start to finish; nobody since has equalled him as Siegfried. Dempsey's Mime is at once subtle, funny yet menacing. Those who so praise Tomlinson as Wotan/Wanderer cannot have heard Bailey's better sung, articulate and eloquent assumption, another reading not since surpassed. To crown the performance we have Rita Hunter's glorious Brünnhilde, so luminously and keenly sung, just about on a par with Nilsson in the role. All of them are wonderfully supported by Goodall and his players. Only in some of Siegfried's Act 1 forging and his struggle with Fafner might one ask for a shade more physical energy, but that's a small price to pay for such understanding of Wagnerian structure.

Rhinegold and Twilight of the Gods : After more than 25 years, these recordings remain gripping for reasons similar to those applying to the other sections of the English Ring reissued by Chandos. In spite of speeds that in other hands would seem often unreasonably slow, or to an extent because of them, Goodall's interpretation has an unerring sense of lyrical and dramatic concentration, every paragraph, phrase and bar carefully considered and executed with loving care by singers and players alike, all so closely coached by their veteran conductor. Above all there is the refined legato observed by all the singers. And the sense of real-life occasion, the theatre's acoustic clearly felt throughout. Andrew Porter's wonderfully lucid translation is given its full due by all the soloists, who once more sound an utterly convincing team. In Rhinegold the main honours are carried off by Emile Belcourt's plausible, witty and articulate Loge, Hammond-Stroud's imposing, strongly sung Alberich, Robert Lloyd's sympathetic Fasolt and Bailey's ever-authoritative Wotan. With a pleasing trio of Rhinemaidens headed by Masterson's gleaming Woglinde, Clifford Grant's gloomy, louring Fafner and Anne Collins's deep-throated Erda, the strength of the ENO roster at the time is there for all to hear. In Twilight, Hunter and Remedios excel themselves as a more heroic than tragic pair, their singing steady, keen with words and very much in character following so many performances, by 1977, of the complete cycle. The recently departed Aage Haugland offers a welcome souvenir of his career as a louring Hagen. Welsby uncovers the right touches of weak will for Gunther while Curphey is suitably alluring as sister Gutrune. Pring offers an appropriately urgent and strongly sung Waltraute. The Norns could hardly be more strongly cast. By and large, the playing of the ENO Orchestra is of an equally consistent nature, responding to Goodall's long-breathed conducting with playing of beauty and strength adding up to a formidable traversal of the score. The recording, masterminded by John Mordler, need not fear comparison with anything more recent. Indeed the absence of unwanted reverberation and excessive sound effects is most welcome. What we get is the music unvarnished and truthful, for which many thanks again to the foresight of the ENO directors of the day and to Peter Moores for providing the wherewithal to execute it. Anyone wanting the work in the vernacular, who hasn't already acquired it in its previous incarnations, need not hesitate.

Der Ring des Nibelungen –abridged 🄷
Sopranos – Florence Austral, Noel Eadie, Florence Easton, Tilly de Garmo, Nora Gruhn, Genia Guszalewicz, Frida Leider, Göta Ljüngberg, Elsie Suddaby, Louise Trenton
Mezzos – Evelyn Arden, Lydia Kindermann, Elfriede Marherr-Wagner, Maartje Offers, Maria Olczewska Contraltos – Emmi Leisner, Gladys Palmer, Nellie Walker Tenors – Waldemar Henke, Rudolf Laubenthal, Kennedy McKenna, Lauritz Melchior, Albert Reiss, Heinrich Tessmer, Walter Widdop Baritones – Howard Fry, Emil Schipper, Deszö Zádor Bass-baritones – Rudolf Bockelmann, Friedrich Schorr Basses – Ivar Andrésen, Frederick Collier, Arthur Fear, Eduard Habich, Emanuel List
Orchestras – Berlin State Opera, London Symphony, Vienna State Opera Conductors – Karl Alwin, John Barbirolli, Leo Blech, Albert Coates, Lawrance Collingwood, Robert Heger, Karl Muck
Pearl mono ⑦ GEMMCDS9137 (500 minutes) Ⓜ
Recorded 1926-32 ●

Here we have, in its entirety, what one might term the Old Testament of The Ring recordings, the discs made in the late 1920s and early 1930s in London and Berlin. The operas given the major share are Die Walküre and Siegfried. The four extracts from Das Rheingold are notable only for Friedrich Schorr's magisterial 'Abendlich strahlt'. Götterdämmerung suffers most from being reduced to brief extracts, although the passages have been well chosen to give a substantial flavour of the vast work. Coates and the slightly less admirable Blech share the conducting with a few incursions from Heger, the young Barbirolli and others. The playing, mostly by the LSO of the day and the Berlin State Opera Orchestra, is remarkable for its sweep, also for its care over detail, much of which has astonishing clarity considering the dates of the recordings. Coates is particularly successful in projecting the ardour of the Walküre love duet and the forging of the sword in Siegfried. His speeds are always on the swift side. Of course, the singing is the most treasurable aspect of the whole enterprise. Encountering Leider again one realises anew that few, if any, have equalled her combination of vocal security, close-knit line and phrasing, and that matching of feeling with a goddess's natural dignity. Her Brünnhilde is an assumption all aspiring heroic sopranos should closely study (but they don't!). Fledgling Heldentenors would be unwise to listen to Melchior, for they might be inclined to suicide. The sheer élan, strength and verbal acuity of his singing are, and will surely remain, unique. For these reasons alone he is unsurpassßable as Siegfried, a role that ideally suited his remarkable attributes. Schorr's Wotan is just as remarkable. Once again tone, technique and text are in perfect accord as his noble bass-baritone fills every passage grandly, movingly.

The sound is vivid throughout these seven (for the price of five), generously filled CDs. The voices are recorded more successfully than in most modern versions of these works, and their relationship with the orchestra is more natural than that favoured in studios today. This is a set no enquiring Wagnerian should be without.

Tannhäuser

Tannhäuser
Peter Seiffert ten Tannhäuser; Jane Eaglen sop Elisabeth; Thomas Hampson bar Wolfram; Waltraud Meier mez Venus; René Pape bass Hermann; Gunnar Gudbjörnsson ten Walther; Hanno Müller-

Brachmann bass-bar Biterolf; Stephan Rügamer ten Heinrich; Alfred Reiter bass Reinmar; Dorothea Röschmann sop Shepherd; Berlin State Opera Chorus; Berlin Staatskapelle / Daniel Barenboim
Teldec ③ 8573-88064-2 (195 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Notes, texts and translations included H

The new Teldec set must be one of the most opulent recordings made of any opera. The truly remarkable range, perspective and balance of the sound is most appropriate for a work conceived on the grandest scale, yet it retains its focus in the more intimate scenes. The achievement of Barenboim's Berlin chorus, so important in this opera, and orchestra could hardly be bettered. The results are, if nothing else, an audio treat, surpassing the DG version's rather hit-and-miss engineering and the now slightly dated feel of the Decca. Indeed it's Konwitschny's 40-year-old set (EMI) that comes closest to the Teldec in terms of sonic breadth.

Domingo recorded Tannhäuser for DG but shied away from it on stage. The title-role, as many tenors admit, is a real killer. Seiffert is probably its most telling exponent today, and proves the point in a performance that combines vocal assurance and emotional involvement to create a vivid portrait of the hero torn between sacred and profane love. The objects of Tannhäuser's attention are impressively portrayed by Waltraud Meier and Jane Eaglen. Meier makes the most of the bigger opportunities and brings her customary tense expression to bear on Venus's utterance while not quite effacing Christa Ludwig's voluptuous reading for Solti. Eaglen launches herself into the Hall of Song with a rather squally 'Dich teure Halle'; thereafter she sings with much of the inner feeling and prayerful dignity predicated by Wagner for his Elisabeth.

Hermann is a gift of a role for most German basses and René Pape takes his chances with his accustomed feeling for notes and text. Thomas Hampson delivers Wolfram's solos with the expected blend of mellifluous tone and verbal acuity, but his manner is a touch set apart and self-conscious, as if he has had to record these at separate sessions. One reservation about this Teldec set: Barenboim's penchant in meditative passages for very slow speeds. But he paces the Prelude, the huge ensemble at the end of Act 2 and all the Pilgrim's music with unerring skill.

It's unlikely that we shall ever hear a totally convincing account of what was, after all, Wagner's problem child among his mature works, but this new one has about as much going for it as any in recent times. If you want the Dresden version unaltered by later revisions, and there is something to be said for that choice, the Konwitschny has much to offer in terms of its conductor, sound and much of the solo work.

Tannhäuser (Paris version)
Plácido Domingo ten Tannhäuser; Cheryl Studer sop Elisabeth; Andreas Schmidt bar Wolfram; Agnes Baltsa mez Venus; Matti Salminen bass Hermann; William Pell ten Walther; Kurt Rydl bass Biterolf; Clemens Biber ten Heinrich; Oskar Hillebrandt bass Reinmar; Barbara Bonney sop Shepherd Boy; Chorus of the Royal Opera House, Covent Garden; Philharmonia Orchestra / Giuseppe Sinopoli
DG ③ 427 625-2GH3 (176 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Notes, text and translation included ●

Domingo's Tannhäuser is a success in almost every respect. He evokes the erotic passion of the Venusberg scene and brings to it just the right touch of nervous energy. This is boldly contrasted with the desperation and bitterness of the Rome Narration after the hero's fruitless visit to the Pope seeking forgiveness:Domingo's description of how Tannhäuser avoided every earthly delight on his pilgrimage is delivered with total conviction. In between he berates the slightly prissy attitude of his fellow knights on the Wartburg with the dangerous conceit of someone who knows a secret delight that they will never enjoy in their measured complacency. His tenor must be the steadiest and most resplendent ever to have tackled the part, although his German is far from idiomatic. Baltsa also has problems with her German, but she has the range and attack for an awkwardly lying part. It is obviously Sinopoli's concern throughout to bring out every last ounce of the drama in the piece, both in terms of orchestral detail and in his awareness in this opera of the longer line, often sustained by the upper strings. The Philharmonia's violins respond with their most eloquent playing. The kind of frisson Sinopoli offers is evident in the anticipatory excitement at the start of Act 2 and the iron control he maintains in the big ensemble later in the same act. Cheryl Studer's secure, beautiful voice has no difficulty coping with Sinopoli's deliberate tempos. She takes her part with total conviction, both vocal and interpretative, phrasing with constant intelligence. Andreas Schmidt is a mellifluous, concerned Wolfram, Salminen a rugged, characterful Landgrave and Barbara Bonney an ideally fresh Shepherd Boy.

The Covent Garden Chorus sings with consistent beauty of sound, and has been sensibly balanced with the orchestra. Domingo and Studer make this version a winner.

Tristan und Isolde

Lauritz Melchior ten Tristan; Kirsten Flagstad sop Isolde; Sabine Kalter contr Brangäne; Emanuel List bass King Marke; Herbert Janssen bar Kurwenal; Frank Sale ten Melot; Octave Dua ten Shepherd; Leslie Horsman bar Steersman; Roy Devereux ten Young Sailor; Royal Opera House Chorus, Covent Garden; London Philharmonic Orchestra / Fritz Reiner H
Naxos Historical mono ③ 8 110068/70 Ⓢ
(209 minutes: ADD). Recorded live in 1936 ●

This is an improved remastering by Ward Marston of a VAI set which received a warm welcome for preserving the rewarding partnership of Flagstad and Melchior, some would say unsurpassed in their respective roles and here on great form. The soprano, though at the start of her career in the part, is already a fully formed Isolde, and one marvels at Melchior, confirming his stature as the greatest Wagner tenor of all time. The rest of the cast are nothing special. Reiner, after a slow start, provides the right breadth and vitality to the work even when the playing leaves a little to be desired. The then-customary cuts are made in Acts 2 and 3. At super-bargain price (the VAI was at full price) this is an essential purchase for Wagnerians.

Tristan und Isolde
Wolfgang Windgassen ten Tristan; Birgit Nilsson sop Isolde; Christa Ludwig mez Brangäne; Martti Talvela bass King Marke; Eberhard Waechter bar Kurwenal; Claude Heater ten Melot; Erwin Wohlfahrt ten Shepherd; Gerd Nienstedt bass Helmsman; Peter Schreier ten Sailor; Bayreuth Festival Chorus and Orchestra /Karl Böhm
DG The Originals ③ 449 772-2GOR3 Ⓜ
(219 minutes: ADD). Notes, text and translation included. Recorded live in 1966 ●●●

Tristan und Isolde
Siegfried Jerusalem ten Tristan; Waltraud Meier mez Isolde; Marjana Lipovšek mez Brangäne; Matti Salminen bass King Marke; Falk Struckmann bar Kurwenal; Johan Botha ten Melot; Peter Maus ten Shepherd; Roman Trekel bar Helmsman; Uwe Heilmann ten Sailor; Berlin State Opera Chorus; Berlin Philharmonic Orchestra / Daniel Barenboim
Teldec ④ 4509-94568-2 (235 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Notes, text and translation included.
Recorded 1994 ●

Böhm's recording is a live Bayreuth performance of distinction, for on stage are the most admired Tristan and Isolde of their time, and in the pit the 72-year-old conductor directs a performance which is unflagging in its passion and energy. Böhm has a striking way in the Prelude and Liebestod of making the swell of passion seem like the movement of a great sea, sometimes with gentle motion, sometimes with the breaking of the mightiest of waves. Nilsson characterises strongly, and her voice with its cleaving-power can also soften beautifully. Windgassen's heroic performance in Act 3 is in some ways the crown of his achievements on record, even though the voice has dried and aged a little. Christa Ludwig is the ideal Brangäne, Waechter a suitably-forthright Kurwenal and Talvela an expressive, noble-voiced Marke. Orchestra and chorus are at their finest. Over several seasons of conducting the work at Bayreuth, Barenboim has by now thoroughly mastered the pacing and shaping of the score as a unified entity. Even more important, he has peered into the depths of both its construction and meaning, emerging with answers that satisfy on almost all counts, most tellingly so in the melancholic adumbration of Isolde's thoughts during her narration, in the sadly eloquent counterpoint of bass clarinet, lower strings and cor anglais underpinning King Marke's lament, and in the searingly tense support to Tristan's second hallucination. These are but the most salient moments in a reading that thoughtfully and unerringly reveals the inner parts of this astounding score. The obverse of this caring manner is a certain want of spontaneity, and a tendency to become a shade self-regarding. You occasionally miss the overwhelming force of Furtwängler's metaphysical account or the immediacy and excitement of Böhm's famous live Bayreuth reading, but the very mention of those conductors suggests that Barenboim can live in their world and survive the comparisons with his own perfectly valid interpretation. Besides, he has the most gloriously spacious yet well-focused recording so far of this opera and an orchestra not only familiar with his ways but ready to execute them in a disciplined and sensitive manner. The recording also takes account of spatial questions, in particular the placing of the horns offstage at the start of Act 2. Salminen delivers a classic account of Marke's anguished reproaches to Tristan, his singing at once sonorous, dignified and reaching to the heart, a reading on a par with that of his fellow countryman Talvela for Böhm. Meier's Isolde is a vitally wrought, verbally alert reading, which catches much of the venom of Act 1, the visceral excitement of Act 2, the lambent utterance of the Liebestod. Nothing she does is unmusical; everything is keenly intelligent, yet possibly her tone is too narrow for the role. Lipovšek's Brangäne tends to slide and swim in an ungainly fashion, sounding at times definitely overparted. Listening to Ludwig (Böhm) only serves to emphasise Lipovšek's deficiencies. Then it is often ard on the newer set to tell Isolde and Brangäne apart, so alike can be their timbre. As with his partner, Jerusalem sings his role with immaculate musicality; indeed he may be the most accurate Tristan on disc where note values are concerned, one also consistently attentive to dynamics and long-breathed phrasing. On the other hand, although he puts a deal of feeling into his interpretation, he hasn't quite the intensity of utterance of either Windgassen (Böhm) or, even more, Suthaus (Furtwängler). His actual timbre is dry and occasionally rasping: in vocal terms alone Suthaus is in a class of his own. Yet, even with reservations about the Isolde and Tristan, this is a version that will undoubtedly hold a high place in any survey of this work, for which one performance can never hope to tell the whole story.

Additional recommendation
Tristan und Isolde
Mödl Isolde Vinay Tristan Hotter Kurwenal
Weber King Mark
Bayreuth Festival Orchestra / Karajan
Urania ③ URN22.218 (231 minutes: ADD) Ⓜ
Recorded live in 1952

This set is a must – a reading far superior to Karajan's studio effort; in improved sound it houses psychological studies of the lovers from Mödl and Vinay both at the height of their vocal powers, and given ideal support from Karajan.

Sir William Walton

British 1902-1983

GROVE Walton was educated at Oxford, and was a member of the Sitwells circle from the beginning of the 1920s. His first important work was Façade, setting poems by Edith Sitwell for reciter and sextet and evidently modelled on Pierrot lunaire while looking more to Les Six in its wit and jazziness. The next works again showed Parisian connections: with Stravinsky and Honegger in the overture Portsmouth Point, with Prokofiev in the Viola Concerto. Then, without losing the vividness of his harmony and orchestration, he responded to the English Handelian tradition in Belshazzar's Feast and to Sibelius in his First Symphony, though here Elgar too is invoked, as in much of his later music. The Violin Concerto (1939) confirmed this homecoming. The next decade was comparatively unproductive, except in film music (Henry V, Hamlet). At the end of it he married and moved to Ischia, where all his later works were composed. These include the opera Troilus and Cressida, found theatrically effective if conservative in approach when given at Covent Garden in 1954, and his one-act opera The Bear, a parodistic Chekhovian extravaganza, given at Aldeburgh in 1967. Among the late orchestral works are a Cello Concerto, cooler and more serene than the earlier concertos, a Second Symphony and miscellaneous pieces including a finely-worked set of Hindemith Variations, which shows an improvisatory character typical of his late music.

Cello Concerto

Cello Concerto. Symphony No 1 in B minor
Lynn Harrell vc City of Birmingham Symphony Orchestra / Sir Simon Rattle
HMV Classics HMV5 74320-2 Ⓑ
(74 minutes: DDD). Recorded 1990-91 ●●

Simon Rattle's version of Walton's First Symphony is as intelligent and dynamic a traversal as one would expect from this talented figure. Texturally speaking, the inner workings of Walton's score are laid bare as never before, aided by what sounds like a meticulously prepared CBSO. Some may find a touch of contrivance about Rattle's control of dynamics in the scorching first movement, but there's absolutely no gainsaying the underlying tension or cumulative power of the whole. Under Rattle the Scherzo darts menacingly (the most convincing account of this music since the classic 1966 Previn account), while the slow movement is an unusually nervy, anxious affair. Certainly, the finale is superbly athletic and lithe, though by now one is beginning to register that EMI's sound is, for all its transparency and natural perspective, perhaps a little lightweight for such enormously red-blooded inspiration. Overall, though, Rattle's is a very strong account and his disc's claims are enhanced by the coupling, a wholly admirable performance of the same composer's luxuriant Cello Concerto. Here Rattle and Lynn Harrell form an inspired partnership, totally dedicated and achieving utter concentration throughout – no mean feat in this of all works which demand so much from both performers and listeners.

Cello Concerto[a] Violin Concerto[b]
[a]Tim Hugh vc [b]Dong-Suk Kang vn
English Northern Philharmonia / Paul Daniel
Naxos 8 554325 (60 minutes: DDD) Ⓢ
Recorded 1997 ●

Tim Hugh, outstanding in every way, gives a reading of the Concerto that is the most searching yet. More than direct rivals he finds a thoughtfulness, a sense of mystery, of inner meditation in Walton's great lyrical ideas – notably the main themes of the outer movements and the yearning melody of the central section of the second movement Scherzo. Most strikingly his pianissimos are more extreme. The openings of both the outer movements are more hushed than ever heard before on disc, with Hugh in inner intensity opting for broader speeds than usual. Not that he dawdles, as the overall timings of each movement make plain, and the bravura writing finds him equally concentrated, always sounding strong and spontaneous in the face of any technical challenges.

In the Violin Concerto Dong-Suk Kang plays immaculately with fresh, clean-cut tone, pure and true above the stave. If this is not quite so warmly Romantic an approach as that of Kyung-Wha Chung or Tasmin Little, there is nothing cold or unsympathetic about his reading, with the rubato in the Neapolitan second theme of the Scherzo delectably pointed. Many will also applaud the way that Kang opts for speeds rather faster and more flowing than have latterly been favoured. That follows the example of Heifetz as the original interpreter, and Kang similarly relishes the bravura writing, not least in diamond-sharp articulation in the Scherzo.

As in their previous Walton recordings, Paul Daniel and the English Northern Philharmonia play with equal flair and sympathy, so that the all-important syncopations always sound idiomatic. But though the recorded textures are commendably clear, the strings are too distantly balanced, lacking weight, so that moments where the violins are required to surge up warmly sound thin – hardly the fault of the players. An excellent coupling, though, with the Cello Concerto offering new depths of insight.

Viola Concerto in A minor

Viola Concerto in A minor. Symphony No 2.
Johannesburg Festival Overture
Lars Anders Tomter va
English Northern Philharmonia / Paul Daniel
Naxos 8 553402 (61 minutes: DDD) Ⓢ
Recorded 1995

This disc opens with one of the wittiest, most exuberant performances of the Johannesburg

Festival Overture: Daniel encourages the orchestra's virtuoso wind and brass soloists to point the jazz rhythms idiomatically, making the music sparkle. The Viola Concerto is just as delectably pointed, the whole performance magnetic. Tomter's tone, with its rapid flicker-vibrato, lacks the warmth of Kennedy's (reviewed below), but the vibrato is only obtrusive in that upper-middle register and his intonation is immaculate, his attack consistently clean, to match the crisp ensemble of the orchestra. Although he adopts relatively measured speeds both for the Scherzo and the jaunty opening theme of the finale, the rhythmic lift brings out the scherzando jollity of the latter all the more.

Daniel's keen observance of dynamic markings is again brought out in the stuttering fanfare theme of the Scherzo, with muted trumpets and trombones for once played pianissimo as marked. The close of the slow epilogue has never been recorded with such a profound hush as here, subsiding in darkness, and the recording team is to be complimented on getting such beautiful sound, clean with plenty of bloom. Paul Daniel adopts a relatively broad tempo in the Symphony's first movement, which makes less impact than in Andrew Litton's powerful Decca version, and the flowing tempo for the central slow movement makes for a lighter, less passionate result too. The finale, with its brassy first statement of the Passacaglia theme, brings fine dynamic contrasts, but again Litton and others produce a fatter, weightier sound, which on balance is preferable. Yet Daniel's view is a very valid one, to round off most convincingly an invaluable addition to the Walton discography.

Walton Viola Concerto[a] Bruch Violin and Viola Concerto in E minor, Op 88[b]. Romance, Op 85[c]
Kol Nidrei, Op 47[c]
Yuri Bashmet va [b]Viktor Tretyakov vn London Symphony Orchestra /[a]André Previn,
[bc]Neeme Järvi
RCA Red Seal 09026 63292-2 (64 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1994 and 1996 ◉◉

Presumably, this outstanding version of the Walton Viola Concerto from Yuri Bashmet, warm and intense, recorded in 1994, was held up for lack of a suitable coupling. Having the three Bruch works may seem odd, but with the passionate Bashmet the mixture works well. After all, both composers are at their most richly lyrical, and though in style they are worlds apart, the Bruch Double Concerto and the Walton Concerto date from successive decades, written respectively in 1911 and 1929. In the Walton, Bashmet adopts a very slow speed for the opening Andante, but is fast and incisive in the vigorous third subject, and the central Scherzo brings a dazzling display of virtuosity. In the finale, Bashmet finds plenty of fun in Walton's scherzando writing, but then draws out the epilogue at a very slow speed, beautifully sustained, not just by him but by Previn and the orchestra, the ideal accompanists.

The rarely-played Bruch Double Concerto is better known in the version for clarinet and viola. As performed here by Bashmet with his pure-toned violinist colleague, Viktor Tretyakov, it gains in sensuousness from having the solo instruments closely allied rather than sharply contrasted. It is amazing what a fund of melodic invention Bruch kept into his seventies, not just in this concerto but in the glorious Romance for viola and orchestra of 1912. Bashmet again gives a heartfelt performance, as he does of Kol Nidrei.

With Bashmet at his finest, and the LSO playing beautifully for both conductors, this is a disc to recommend to anyone with a taste for romantic viola music.

Violin Concerto

Violin Concerto. Sonata for Violin and Piano (orch. Palmer). Two Pieces (orch. Palmer)
Lydia Mordkovitch vn
London Philharmonic Orchestra /
Jan Latham-Koenig
Chandos CHAN9073 (69 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1991 ◉

Lydia Mordkovitch gives the most expansive account of the Walton concerto on disc, sustaining spacious speeds warmly and persuasively. The very opening finds her deeply meditative in the soaring melody of the first theme, yet her double-stopping in the bravura passages designed for Heifetz is irresistibly purposeful, never sounding too slow or laboured. Latham-Koenig may not have quite the spark that Previn brings to the orchestral writing in both the Chung (Decca) and Kennedy (EMI) versions, but he is keenly idiomatic both in his feeling for sharply syncopated rhythms and in flexible rubato for Walton's Romantic melodies. In the central Presto Scherzo, above all a virtuoso display piece, the speed is no slower than that chosen by most rivals, while the Spanish dance-rhythm of the first contrasting interlude could not sound more aptly slinky, whether from soloist or orchestra. The characteristically warm Chandos recording is a help, too.

The unique coupling makes this version particularly attractive to Walton devotees, since Christopher Palmer's arrangements of the Sonata and the two short pieces are full of Waltonian fingerprints. Recommended.

Sinfonia concertante

Walton Sinfonia concertante[a]. Façade – Suites Nos 1-3[a]. Siesta[b]. Portsmouth Point[a]
Arnold Popular Birthday[a]
Eric Parkin pf London Philharmonic Orchestra /
[a]Jan Latham-König, [b]Bryden Thomson
Chandos CHAN9148 (59 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1990-92

The Sinfonia concertante (1926-27), with its sharply memorable ideas in each movement and characteristically high voltage, has never had the attention it deserves, and that is all the more regrettable when there is such a dearth of attractive British piano concertos. The soloist, Eric Parkin, is perfectly attuned to the idiom, warmly melodic as well as jazzily syncopated. He points rhythms infectiously and shapes melodies persuasively, though the recording sets the piano a little backwardly, no doubt to reflect the idea that this is not a full concerto.

Jan Latham-König proves most understanding of the composer's 1920s idiom, giving the witty Façade movements just the degree of jazzy freedom they need. The Third Suite, devised and arranged by Christopher Palmer, draws on three apt movements from the Façade entertainment, ending riotously with the rag-music of 'something lies beyond the scene'. That is a first recording, as is Constant Lambert's arrangement of the Overture, Portsmouth Point. Siesta is given an aptly cool performance under Thomson, and the Popular Birthday is Malcolm Arnold's fragmentary linking of 'Happy Birthday to You' with the 'Popular Song 'from Façade, originally written for Walton's 70th birthday. The impact of some of the pieces, notably in Façade, would have been even sharper had the recording placed the orchestra a fraction closer.

Short Orchestral Works

Overtures – Johannesburg Festival; Portsmouth Point; Scapino. Capriccio burlesco. The First Shoot (orch Palmer). Granada Prelude. Prologo e Fantasia. Music for Children. Galop final (orch Palmer)
London Philharmonic Orchestra / Bryden Thomson
Chandos CHAN8968 Ⓕ
(70 minutes: DDD) ●

While enthusiasts for Walton's music may justifiably complain that there is not enough of it, they usually concede that what there is is readily available in good recorded performances. However, thanks to the dedicated and skilful work of Christopher Palmer, still more of it is now coming to light. How many people, one wonders, have ever heard The First Shoot, a miniature ballet written for a C B Cochran show in 1935, the Granada Prelude devised for that television company in the 1960s, or the Prologo e Fantasia, which was the composer's last work, written for Rostropovich and his National Symphony Orchestra of Washington. Such fresh and welcome goodies as these appear along with familiar material such as the splendidly open-air, nautical overture Portsmouth Point that Walton wrote nearly 40 years earlier, at the very start of his career. The Cochran piece, as orchestrated by Palmer, has five little sections that are delightfully jazzy in a way that recalls Façade, and one's only regret is that there's not more of it. All this music is in the excellent hands of Bryden Thomson and the LPO. The recording is richly toned, taking some edge off the composer's characteristically sharp scoring.

Spitfire Prelude and Fugue. Sinfonia concertante[a]. Variations on a Theme by Hindemith. March – The History of the English Speaking Peoples
[a]Peter Donohoe pf
English Northern Philharmonia / Paul Daniel
Naxos 8 553869 (53 minutes: DDD) Ⓢ
Recorded 1996 ●●

Naxos opts for the original version of the Sinfonia concertante rather than Walton's revision, with piano writing and orchestration slimmed down. Walton himself, before he died, suggested such a return. As soloist Peter Donohoe plays with power and flamboyance, brought home the more when the piano is very forwardly balanced, too much so for a work which does not aim to be a full concerto, leaving the orchestra a little pale behind. Even so, hopefully this account, broad in the first movement, flowing in the central Andante, will persuade others to take it up, young man's music built on striking, colourful ideas, used with crisp concision.

Paul Daniel is splendid at interpreting the jazzy syncopations with the right degree of freedom, and in the Spitfire Prelude and Fugue he adds to the impact by taking the big march tune faster than many, similarly demonstrating that The History of the English Speaking Peoples March, buried for rather too long, is a match for Walton's other ceremonial marches. Best of all is the performance of the Hindemith Variations, given here with winning panache. The strings of the English Northern Philharmonia may not be as weighty as in some rival versions, but the articulation is brilliant, and the complex textures are all the more transparent. The fire and energy of the performance has never been surpassed on disc.

Symphonies etc

Centenary Edition
Symphonies – No 1 in B flat minor[al]; No 2[bl] Violin Concerto[cl]. Viola Concerto[dl]. Cello Concerto[el]. Scapino[fl]. Facade Suites[gl] – No 1; No 2; Variations on a Theme by Hindemith[hl]. Coronation Te Deum[i]. Crown Imperial[jn]. Orb and Sceptre[k]. Belshazzar's Feast[ln]. Henry V – Suite[m] [n]Bryn Terfel bass-bar [c]Tasmin Little vn [d]Paul Neubauer va [e]Robert Cohen vc [i]Timothy Byram-Wigfield org [n]L'inviti; [in]Waynflete Singers; [i]Winchester Cathedral Choir; Bournemouth Symphony Orchestra and [n]Chorus / [l]Andrew Litton, [ik]David Hill
Decca ④ 470 508-2DC4 (298 minutes: DDD) Ⓜ
Recorded 1992-1996. [dgh]Also available separately as Decca 470 200-2 ●●Ⓡ

Decca's four-disc Walton Edition offers consistently fine versions of all of the composer's most important orchestral works, some of them unsurpassed, in full, brilliant sound. Andrew Litton, the conductor of all but two minor items, is central to the success of the whole. Like his compatriot, André Previn, he is idiomatic, with a natural feeling for the jazzy syncopations at the heart of so much of Walton's music.

Substantially, this brings together the three Litton discs previously issued but with important additions. The third disc was issued separately last year and contains outstanding versions, never previously released, of the Viola Concerto and Hindemith Variations plus the two Façade Suites. Where most latterday interpreters of the Viola Concerto have taken a very expansive view of the lyrical first movement, Paul Neubauer comes nearer than anyone else to the original interpreters on disc, Frederick Riddle and William Primrose, both with Walton conducting.

With Neubauer – his tone firm and precise, clean rather than fruity – the result is more persuasive than other modern versions, with no suspicion of expressive self-indulgence. The brisker passages are taken faster than is now usual; the impact is tauter and stronger without losing romantic warmth. He relaxes seductively for the hauntingly beautiful epilogue, using the widest dynamic range. Litton encourages wide contrasts in the orchestra, the big tuttis bringing an element of wildness in the brassy syncopations, the ensemble kept crisp and incisive. The Hindemith Variations also brings a taut and purposeful performance with contrasts in both dynamic and speed heightened to extremes. Façade is predictably fun, though there is some danger of the warm acoustic softening some of the sharpness of these witty parodies.

Two of the other discs remain the same as with their original release, with Tasmin Little's heartfelt reading of the Violin Concerto very well coupled with Litton's outstanding account of the Second Symphony, the finest digital version yet, as well as Scapino, while Robert Cohen's thoughtful reading of the Cello Concerto comes in a coupling with the First Symphony, richly recorded. Litton's powerful account of Belshazzar's Feast with Bryn Terfel brings fresh, cleanly focused choral sound set in an atmospheric acoustic which clearly lets you appreciate the terracing between the different groupings of voices. That aptly comes with the coronation music – and the Henry V Suite, with David Hill, chorus-master in Belshazzar, ably standing in for Litton in the Coronation Te Deum and Orb and Sceptre.

Symphony No 1

Symphony No 1. Partita 🏆
English Northern Philharmonia / Paul Daniel
Naxos 8 553180 (64 minutes:DDD) Ⓢ
Recorded 1994 ●●

Daniel demonstrates clearly here his natural affinity with Walton's music. In the sustained paragraphs of the First Symphony he knows unerringly how to build up tension to breaking point, before resolving it, and then building again – a quality vital above all in the first and third movements. He is freer than many in his use of rubato too, again often a question of building and resolving tension, as well as in the degree of elbow-room he allows for jazzy syncopations, always idiomatic. This symphony, with its heavy orchestration, would certainly have benefited from rather drier sound, but well-judged microphone balance allows ample detail through. Only occasionally do you feel a slight lack of body in high violin tone, a tiny reservation. Daniel's reading of the Partita brings out above all the work's joyfulness. It may not be quite as crisp in its ensemble as that of the dedicatees (Szell and the Cleveland Orchestra), but the degree of wildness, with dissonances underlined, proves a positive advantage in conveying enjoyment. In the slow movement Daniel at a relatively slow speed is markedly more expressive than those brilliant models, again a point which makes the performance more endearing.

Irrespective of price, this is a version of the much-recorded symphony that competes with the finest ever, and outshines most.

Symphony No 1 in B flat minor^{a}.
Violin Concerto^{b}. Viola Concerto^{c}.
Cello Concerto^{d}. Sinfonia concertante^{e}
^{b}Jascha Heifetz vn ^{c}Yuri Bashmet va ^{d}Gregor Piatigorsky vc ^{e}Kathryn Stott pf ^{ac}London Symphony Orchestra / ^{a}André Previn, ^{c}Neeme Järvi; ^{b}Philharmonia Orchestra / William Walton; ^{d}Boston Symphony Orchestra / Charles Munch; ^{e}Royal Philharmonic Orchestra / Vernon Handley
RCA Red Seal ^{b}mono ② 74321 92575-2 Ⓜ
(145 minutes: ADD/^{ce}DDD)
Recorded ^{a}1966, ^{c}1998, ^{d}1959, ^{b}1950
and ^{e}1989 ●●

RCA's two-disc collection includes the première recording of the Cello Concerto with Piatigorsky – who commissioned the work – and the Boston Symphony under Charles Munch. Here is a high-powered reading, given an upfront recording, commendably full and open for 1959. Similarly Heifetz, who commissioned the Violin Concerto, remains supreme as an interpreter of that work, urgent beyond any rival as well as passionate. Here he plays with the composer conducting the Philharmonia. The 1950 mono recording has been nicely opened up, putting more air around the sound, making the absence of stereo a minimal drawback. The other two concertante works come in digital versions: Kathryn Stott, originally for Conifer, adventurously going back to the original more elaborate version of the Sinfonia concertante, and Yuri Bashmet bringing his yearningly Slavonic temperament and masterly virtuosity to the Viola Concerto.

Bashmet's partners are the ideal combination of Previn and the LSO, and it is Previn's vintage version of the First Symphony with the LSO of an earlier generation that sets the seal on the whole package. Previn has never been matched, let alone surpassed. What is also remarkable is the clarity, definition and sense of presence of the 1966 recording, with the stereo spectrum more sharply focused than in the digital recordings.

Symphony No 2

Symphony No 2[c]. Variations on a Theme by Hindemith[d]. Partita[c]. Violin Concerto[b]. Johannesburg Festival Overture[e]. Capriccio burlesco[e]. Belshazzar's Feast[a]
[a]Walter Cassel bar [b]Zino Francescatti vn [a]Rutgers University Choir; [cd]Cleveland Orchestra / George Szell; [ab]Philadelphia Orchestra / Eugene Ormandy; [e]New York Philharmonic Orchestra / André Kostelanetz
Sony ② SB2K 89934 (143 minutes: ADD) Ⓑ
Recorded 1959-73

Sony's two-disc Essential Classics collection brings together major offerings from three previous Walton CDs, all of them American. Outstanding are the vintage Szell performances with the Cleveland Orchestra, in sheer brilliance never likely to be outshone. The composer himself was bowled over by Szell's 1961 Second Symphony, a work till then rather discounted, which drew an interpretation not just brilliant but passionate. In Szell's high-powered reading the Hindemith Variations, too, hang together superbly, and the Partita, a Cleveland commission, is scintillating from first to last.

André Kostelanetz turns the Capriccio burlesco into a sparkling comedy overture, a work he was the first to conduct, and the Johannesburg Festival Overture is made to sparkle too, arguably the finest of the Walton overtures. Both the Violin Concerto and Belshazzar's Feast are given expressive performances by Ormandy conducting the Philadelphia Orchestra. In the Concerto Zino Francescatti is powerful and passionate with his rapid, slightly nervy vibrato, while in Belshazzar choir and soloist are as committed as any British performers, even if their pronunciation of 'Isaiah' is pure American, the second syllable rhyming with 'day'. The sound is typically up-front sound and not as warm as it might be, albeit with plenty of atmosphere. Buy it for Szell's Second – an account Walton described as 'fantastic and stupendous'.

Façade

Walton Façade – An Entertainment[a]
Lambert Salome – Suite
[a]Eleanor Bron, [a]Richard Stilgoe spkrs
Nash Ensemble (Paul Watkins vc, Philippa Davies fl, Richard Hosford clar, John Wallace tpt, Martin Robertson [a]sax, Simon Lembrick perc) / David Lloyd-Jones
Hyperion CDA67239 (72 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts included. Recorded 2000 ●

The Façade entertainment – poems by Edith Sitwell to music by the then-unknown William Walton – was an amorphous creation, a collection of over 40 poems and settings built up over the years between 1922 and 1928.

Pamela Hunter in her disc on the Koch Discovery label did a marvellous job collecting all the surviving settings, adding recitations of the poems for which the music had been lost. The difference here is that, instead of being recited on the disc, the texts of those extra poems are printed in the booklet, with revealing comments. Also, David Lloyd-Jones has devised an order for the 34 items (including the opening fanfare) which is arguably the best yet, avoiding the anticlimactic effect of Façade 2 being separated. Eleanor Bron and Richard Stilgoe make an excellent pair of reciters, and the recording in a natural acoustic balances them well – not too close. They inflect the words more than Edith Sitwell and early interpreters did, but still keep a stylised manner, meticulously obeying the rhythms specified in the score. Not everyone will like the way Stilgoe adopts accents – Mummerset for 'Mariner Man' and 'Country Dance', Scots for 'Scotch Rhapsody', and something like southern-state American for the jazz rhythms of 'Old Sir Faulk' – but he is the most fluent Façade reciter on disc so far, with phenomenally clear articulation. Eleanor Bron is also meticulous over rhythm, in slower poems adopting a trance-like manner, which is effective and in-style.

Under David Lloyd-Jones the brilliant sextet of players from the Nash Ensemble could not be more idiomatic.

Walton Façade[c] 🅷
Britten Serenade, Op 31[a]. Folksongs[b] – The Bonny Earl o' Moray; Avenging and Bright; The Last Rose of Summer; Sally in our Alley
[abc]Peter Pears ten/spkr [c]Dame Edith Sitwell spkr [a]Dennis Brain hn [b]Benjamin Britten pf [a]Boyd Neel String Orchestra / Benjamin Britten; [c]English Opera Group Ensemble / Anthony Collins
Decca 468 801-2DM (74 minutes: ADD/DDD) Ⓜ
Recorded 1953-54 ●

This recording of Walton's Façade was a consummate technical and artistic miracle of Decca's mono era. Edith Sitwell and Pears deliver the engagingly preposterous words with bravura insouciance, Collins conducting the English Opera Group Ensemble with matching wit and flair, and even today the 1953 recording sounds almost like stereo.

It is coupled with one of the great highlights of the whole Britten discography, that first magical recording of the Serenade, with Pears in fresh, youthful voice and Dennis Brain's marvellous horn obbligatos, creating frisson-making echoes in Tennyson, dark melancholy in Blake, and rippling away exuberantly in Johnson's 'Hymn to Diana'. What playing! The transfer is faithful; but why didn't Decca remove the surface rustle and, above all the clicks?

Piano Quartet

Piano Quartet[a]. Violin Sonata[b]. Anon in love[c]. Passacaglia[d]. Façade – Valse[e]
[c]John Mark Ainsley ten [c]Craig Ogden gtr [a]Nash Ensemble ([b]Marianne Thorsen vn Lawrence Power va [d]Paul Watkins vc [be]Ian Brown pf)

Hyperion CDA67340 (76 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Text included. Recorded c2002 ●●

This excellent Hyperion issue brings together a wide-ranging group of Walton's chamber works, from his earliest major work, the Piano Quartet, originally written when he was 16, to his last instrumental piece, the Passacaglia, which he composed for Rostropovich when he was nearly 80. As a substantial bonus there is the little song-cycle for tenor and guitar, Anon in Love, as well as the two shorter pieces.

That gives an immediate advantage to this issue over the Chandos Walton Edition, and though some will prefer the weightier readings of those two major works on Chandos, the Nash versions are very winning; they are generally more volatile and spontaneous-sounding, no doubt reflecting the players' experience of performing them in concert.

Helped by a not quite so immediate recording, the extra lightness and clarity brings an element of fantasy into such a movement as the Scherzo of the Piano Quartet and an extra tenderness into the lovely slow movement. Nowhere else does Walton so enthusiastically use modal thematic material, starting with the mysterious opening theme, which the Nash players take very reflectively at a speed much slower than the movement's main tempo, Allegramente. It is an astonishingly confident work for so young a composer, with adventurous writing for the strings that belies the fact that Walton was no string-player.

The Violin Sonata, a more elusive work, long underestimated, is given an equally persuasive performance, with Marianne Thorsen, accompanied by Ian Brown, freely expressive. John Mark Ainsley is totally undaunted by the taxing vocal writing of Anon in Love, originally designed for Peter Pears. And Craig Ogden is an ideal accompanist, totally idiomatic, adding sparkle to the vigorous songs in this offbeat collection. Though Ian Brown gives a slightly sluggish account of Façade's 'Valse' – in the awkward piano transcription ascribed to Walton himself – cellist Paul Watkins crowns the disc with a fine reading of the solo Passacaglia.

String Quartets

Piano Quartet in D minor[a]. String Quartet in A minor
[a]Peter Donohoe pf Maggini Quartet (Laurence Jackson, David Angel vns Martin Outram va Michal Kaznowski vc)
Naxos 8 554646 (58 minutes: DDD) ⓢ
Recorded 1999 ●●

The Maggini Quartet give refined and powerful performances in this Naxos release. The opening of the 1947 String Quartet is presented in hushed intimacy, making the contrast all the greater when Walton's richly lyrical writing emerges in full power. There is a tender, wistful quality here, which culminates in a rapt, intense account of the slow movement, where the world of late Beethoven comes much closer than most interpreters have appreciated. The poignancy of those two longer movements is then set against the clean bite of the second movement Scherzo and the brief hectic finale, with their clear and transparent textures. With Peter Donohoe a powerful and incisive presence, and the Maggini Quartet again playing most persuasively, the early Piano Quartet – an astonishing achievement for a teenage composer – is also given a performance of high contrasts, enhanced by a refined recording which conveys genuine pianissimos that are free from highlighting. If, in the first three movements, the pentatonic writing gives little idea of the mature Walton to come, some characteristic rhythmic and other devices are already apparent. Even the pentatonicity suggests that the boy had been looking at the Howells Piano Quartet rather than any Vaughan Williams. It is in the finale that one gets the strongest Waltonian flavour in vigorously purposeful argument, though there the echoes are different, and Stravinsky's Petrushka is an obvious influence. The only reservation is that, refined as the recording is, the piano is rather too forwardly balanced.

String Quartets – 1922; A minor
Emperor Quartet (Martin Burgess, Clare Hayes vns Fiona Bonds va William Schofield vc) Ⓕ
Black Box BBM1035 (58 minutes: DDD) ●

The Emperor Quartet are very good indeed, and their account of the extraordinary First Quartet is especially convincing. Here we have the very young Walton under the influence of Bartók's first two quartets, flirting with Bergian rather than Schoenbergian atonality and having the admirable cheek to write a finale consisting of a slow and a fast fugue, the latter making clear reference to Beethoven's Grosse Fuge. But genuine Waltonian lyricism also emerges – and here the Emperor are more ardent and sweeter-toned than the Gabrieli (on Chandos) – alongside strong implications that if he had followed either of these 'wrong turnings' he would have become a pretty formidable member of Bartók's or Berg's 'school'.

Some of the evidence for that is in the rich palette of string colour that the Emperor draw from the central scherzo and in the far greater urgency they bring to the two fugues. In the A minor Quartet there is less to choose between the two groups, but the Emperor's rhythmic alertness and their relaxation into the 'serenade with guitar accompaniment' of the slow movement is especially winning. An excellent recording, too. You should hear the Emperor Quartet even if you aren't especially interested in Walton: they could persuade you otherwise.

Belshazzar's Feast

Belshazzar's Feast. Henry V. Crown Imperial
Bryn Terfel bass-bar Waynflete Singers; L'Inviti;

Bournemouth Symphony Chorus and Orchestra / Andrew Litton
Decca London 448 134-2LH (60 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Text included. Recorded 1995. Also available on the Walton Centenary Edition, Decca ④ 470 508-2DC4 (reviewed above) ●●

More than anyone since Previn, Litton thrillingly conveys the element of wildness in Walton's finest inspirations, notably in the works of the pre-war period. It is partly a question of his treatment of the jazzy syncopations which are such a vital element in Walton. Litton is not alone in treating them with a degree of idiomatic freedom – the composer himself as interpreter set the pattern – but as with Previn, Litton's affinity with the jazz element comes from inside, clearly reflecting his American background. Consistently he makes the music crackle with high-voltage electricity, and again he echoes Previn in the way he can screw tension up to the limit and beyond, resolving grinding dissonances on heart-warming concords.

The exceptionally full and vivid recording brings out the opulence as well as the sensuousness of Walton's orchestration, regularly enhancing Litton's expressive warmth as a Waltonian in the great Romantic melodies. Not only that, the bitingly dramatic contrasts of brass and percussion have never been more vivid, with the Bournemouth orchestra playing magnificently, not just with brilliance but with passionate commitment. Belshazzar's Feast was recorded in Winchester Cathedral and the problems for the engineers must have been daunting. However, thanks to brilliant balancing there is ample detail and fine focus in exceptionally incisive choral and orchestral sound. The great benefit is that this emerges as a performance on a bigger scale than its rivals, with the contrasts between full chorus and semichorus the more sharply established. The vividly dramatic soloist is Bryn Terfel, spine-chilling in his narration describing the writing on the wall.

In Crown Imperial a cathedral acoustic does bring some lack of clarity, but it is a stirring performance. Litton's years as Principal Conductor of the Bournemouth Symphony Orchestra could hardly have had a richer culmination on disc.

Belshazzar's Feast. Overtures – Portsmouth Point; Scapino. Improvisation on an Impromptu of Benjamin Britten
John Shirley-Quirk bar London Symphony Chorus and Orchestra /André Previn
EMI 764723-2 (68 minutes: ADD) Ⓜ
Text included. Recorded 1972. ●
Also available on EMI DVD-Audio DVC4 92402-9 (with Symphony No 2)

Previn's 1972 version of Belshazzar's Feast, recorded at the time of the composer's 70th birthday, is preferable to his 1986 version for ASV. The bite of the choral sound and the closer focus make the result far sharper and more dramatic, even though some of the speeds are more spacious. John Shirley-Quirk as soloist is also preferable to the less firm Benjamin Luxon, hav- ing more subtlety and refinement as well as a firmer voice The transfer is outstandingly good with fine bloom and plenty of weight. EMI also provides most generous couplings.

Belshazzar's Feast[a]. Coronation Te Deum. Gloria[b]
[b]Ameral Gunson contr [b]Neil Mackie ten [a]Gwynne Howell, [b]Stephen Roberts bars Bach Choir; Philharmonia Orchestra / Sir David Willcocks
Chandos CHAN8760 (62 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts included. Recorded 1989 ●

With Sir David Willcocks in charge of the choir which he has directed since 1960, one need have no fears that the composer's many near-impossible demands of the chorus in all three of these masterpieces will not be met with elegance and poise. There is as well, in Belshazzar, a predictably fine balance of the forces to ensure that as much detail as possible is heard from both chorus and orchestra, even when Walton is bombarding us from all corners of the universe with extra brass bands and all manner of clamorous percussion in praise of pagan gods. Such supremely musical concerns bring their own rewards in a work that can often seem vulgar. The revelation here is the sustained degree of dramatic thrust, exhilaration and what Herbert Howells called 'animal joy' in the proceedings. How marvellous, too, to hear the work paced and scaled to avoid the impression of reduced voltage after the big moments. Gwynne Howell is the magnificently steady, firm and dark toned baritone. The Gloria and Coronation Te Deum are informed with the same concerns: accuracy and professional polish are rarely allowed to hinder these vital contributions to the British choral tradition. The recording's cathedral-like acoustic is as ideal for the Te Deum's ethereal antiphonal effects, as it is for Belshazzar's glorious spectacle; and Chandos matches Willcocks's care for balance, bar by bar.

Belshazzar's Feast. Symphony No 1
Thomas Hampson bar Cleveland Orchestra Chorus; City of Birmingham Symphony Chorus and Orchestra / Sir Simon Rattle
EMI 556592-2 (78 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1990-97 ●

This is a winning coupling, with Walton's two searing masterpieces from the 1930s given electrifying performances under Rattle. This recording of the symphony first appeared coupled with the Cello Concerto (reviewed above). but Belshazzar's Feast is more recent, recorded with a combination of atmospheric warmth and clarity unmatched in any other version, another tribute to the acoustic of Symphony Hall, Birmingham. Rattle, with players he knows so well, combines expressive freedom with knife-edged precision of ensemble, and it is the same in Belshazzar's Feast. It is true that compared with Previn in his vintage version the opening sections are not quite so warmly expressive and have less elbow-room rhythmically. Also, with Previn the celebrations after the king's death have more jollity in them, where Rattle conveys a much more manic intensity entirely in keeping with the subject. Rattle's total timing is over three minutes shorter than those of either Previn or Litton. Not that there is any feeling of haste in Rattle's reading, just of extra tautness, with incisive playing and singing from both the orchestra and the massive chorus.

It was an inspired idea to bring in the Cleveland Orchestra Chorus alongside the Birmingham chorus. Though other versions have ample weight of choral sound, this one consistently scores in the terracing of sound, with dynamic shading wonderfully precise and with the semi-chorus magically distinct. As baritone soloist Thomas Hampson sings immaculately with warm tone and clear focus, and if the description of the writing on the wall is not quite as mysterious as it can be, that again reflects Rattle's tautness and urgency.

Belshazzar's Feast[b]. Viola Concerto[a]. Ⓗ
Facade – Suite No 1[c]; Suite No 2[d]
[b]Dennis Noble bar [a]Frederick Riddle va
[b]Huddersfield Choral Society; [a]London Symphony Orchestra; [b]Liverpool Philharmonic Orchestra; [cd]London Philharmonic Orchestra / William Walton
Pearl mono GEM0171 (76 minutes: ADD) Ⓜ
Recorded [b]1943, [c]1936, [d]1938 ●●

A fine CD transfer of Walton's own première recording of Belshazzar's Feast could not be more welcome, generously coupled with two other important first recordings of his. These first recordings in some ways have never been surpassed musically by the many alternative versions that have appeared since. That applies especially to the Belshazzar performance, made with lavish resources at the height of the war.

In every way it is one of the great recordings of the century (to use an EMI tag), with the recording made over two weekends in 1943, in sessions supervised by Walter Legge. The challenge of a work then regarded as difficult for an amateur choir was superbly taken, with Walton's conducting even more electric and impulsive than in his later stereo version, and with Dennis Noble unsurpassed as the baritone soloist.

The 'writing on the wall' sequence has never sounded more creepy than here, despite the limitations of mono sound, and the choral and brass sounds are full and immediate, with the words of the chorus commendably clear.

The Facade Suites in their orchestral form stand among the demonstration recordings of the period, while the première recording of the Viola Concerto just as strikingly makes its claims against any version recorded since. Even more than William Primrose in his subsequent recordings (one with Walton), Riddle brings expressive warmth as well as tautness. There is an outstanding CD transfer on Dutton – a fraction fuller-bodied than this with a little less hiss – but no one will be disappointed with the sound on Pearl.

Additional recommendation
Belshazzar's Feast
Coupling: Job
Terfel bass-bar; BBC Singers; BBC Symphony Orchestra / A Davis
Warner Apex 0927-44394-2 (78 minutes: DDD) Ⓑ

Bryn Terfel makes an electrifying soloist in Davis's recommendable version of Belshazzar, and brings the important solo utterances vividly before us. Walton's rarely performed ballet is equally fine.

Coronation Te Deum

Coronation Te Deum. A Litany: Drop, drop slow tears. Magnificat and Nunc Dimittis. Where does the uttered music go? Jubilate Deo. Henry V – Touch her soft lips and part; Passacaglia. Cantico del Sole. The Twelve.Set me as a seal upon thy heart. Antiphon. Missa Brevis
Christopher Whitton org St John's College Choir, Cambridge / Christopher Robinson
Naxos 8 555793 (66 minutes: DDD) Ⓢ
Recorded 2001 ●●

This latest addition to Naxos's English Church Music series is not just a first-rate bargain but provides a distinctive alternative to the Finzi Singers in the Chandos Walton Edition, in its use of boy trebles. The presence of boys' voices consistently brings extra freshness to the St John's Choir's performances, giving them the sort of bite one can imagine the composer having in mind, with Waltonian syncopations wonderfully idiomatic in their crisp articulation. Smaller in scale, with the organ set behind the choir, these more intimate readings also convey more clearly the impression of church performances, a clear advantage in the liturgical items above all, not just the delightful Missa brevis, but the Jubilate, and the Magnificat and Nunc dimittis. You might argue that this collegiate choir is on the small side for the big ceremonial Te Deum written for the Queen's Coronation in 1953, but there, more than ever, the freshness and bite make for extra clarity hard to achieve with bigger forces. With Robinson and the St John's Choir the words are not just sharply defined but are given life, with subtle rubato and fine shading of dynamic.

Coronation Te Deum[ab]. A Queen's Fanfare[b]
A Litany (three versions). The Twelve[a].
Set me as a seal upon thine heart. Magnificat and Nunc Dimittis[a]. Where does the uttered music go? Jubilate Deo[a]. Missa Brevis[a]. Cantico del sole. Make we joy now in this fest. King Herod and the cock. All this time. What cheer? Antiphon[ab]
[a]James Vivian org Polyphony;
[b]The Wallace Collection / Stephen Layton
Hyperion CDA67330 (77 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Notes and texts included. Recorded 2001 ●

This disc has important bonuses that all Walton devotees will value. The inclusion of The Wallace Collection brings an immediate advantage in the first choral item, the Coronation Te Deum, when the extra bite of brass adds greatly to the impact of a piece originally designed for very large forces in Westminster Abbey. Brass also adds to the impact of the final item, Antiphon, one of Walton's very last works, setting George Herbert's hymn Let all the world in every corner sing. The new disc also includes Walton's four carols, which makes this as comprehensive a collection of Walton's shorter choral pieces as could be imagined. As for the performances and recording, the professional group, Polyphony, with sopranos very boyish, have many of the advantages that the St John's Choir offer on Naxos in bright choral sound set in an ecclesiastical atmosphere. The acoustic of Hereford Cathedral is a little washy in places, and the balance of some of the solo voices is odd at times, yet the merits of these performances far outweigh any slight reservations, with the professional singers a degree more warmly expressive than the all-male St John's Choir.

The Bear

Della Jones mez Madame Popova; Alan Opie bar Smirnov; John Shirley-Quirk bar Luka; Northern Sinfonia /Richard Hickox

Chandos CHAN9245 (53 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ

Text included. Recorded 1993 ●

If Walton's sense of humour was firmly established from the start in Façade, his one-acter, The Bear, among his later works brings out very clearly how strong that quality remained throughout his life. In this Chekhov tale, Walton times the melodramatic moments marvellously – notably the climactic duel between the mourning widow and her husband's creditor (the bear of the title) – and Hickox brings that out most effectively. Walton also deftly heightens the farcical element by introducing dozens of parodies and tongue-in-cheek musical references, starting cheekily with echoes of Britten's Midsummer Night's Dream. Hickox brings out the richness of the piece as well as its wit, helped by the opulent Chandos recording, which still allows words to be heard clearly. The casting of the three characters is as near ideal as could be. Della Jones is commanding as the affronted widow, consistently relishing the melodrama like a young Edith Evans. Alan Opie as Smirnov, 'the bear' is clean-cut and incisive, powerfully bringing out the irate creditor's changing emotions, while John Shirley-Quirk, still rich and resonant, is very well cast as the old retainer, Luka.

Troilus and Cressida

Awards 1995

Judith Howarth sop Cressida; Arthur Davies ten Troilus; Clive Bayley bass Calkas; Nigel Robson ten Pandarus; Alan Opie bar Diomede; James Thornton bar Antenor; David Owen-Lewis bass Horaste; Yvonne Howard mez Evadne; Peter Bodenham ten Priest; Keith Mills ten Soldier; Bruce Budd bass First Watchman; Stephen Dowson bass Second Watchman; Brian Cookson ten Third Watchman; Chorus of Opera North; English Northern Philharmonia / Richard Hickox

Chandos ② CHAN9370/1 (133 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ

Notes and text included. Recorded 1995 ●●●

Troilus and Cressida is here powerfully presented as an opera for the central repertory, traditional in its red-blooded treatment of a big classical subject. Few if any operas since Puccini's have such a rich store of instantly memorable tunes as Troilus and Cressida. Walton wrote the piece in the wake of the first great operatic success of his rival, Benjamin Britten. What more natural than for Walton, by this time no longer an enfant terrible of British music but an Establishment figure, to turn his back on operas devoted like Britten's to offbeat subjects and to go back to an older operatic tradition using a classical love story, based on Chaucer (not Shakespeare). Though he was much praised for this by early critics in 1954, he was quickly attacked for being old-fashioned. Even in the tautened version of the score he offered for the 1976 Covent Garden revival – with the role of the heroine adapted for the mezzo voice of Dame Janet Baker – the piece was described by one critic as a dodo. Yet as Richard Hickox suggests, fashion after 40 years matters little, and the success of the Opera North production in January 1995 indicated that at last the time had come for a big, warmly Romantic, sharply dramatic work to be appreciated on its own terms. This recording was made under studio conditions during the run of the opera in Leeds in the UK. The discs amply confirm what the live performances suggested, that Walton's tautening of the score, coupled with a restoration of the original soprano register for Cressida, has proved entirely successful.

Hickox conducts a performance that is magnetic from beginning to end. The scene is atmospherically set in Act 1 by the chorus, initially off-stage, but then with the incisive Opera North chorus snapping out thrilling cries of 'We are accurs'd!'. The first soloist one hears is the High Priest, Calkas, Cressida's father, about to defect to the Greeks, and the role is superbly taken by the firm, dark-toned Clive Bayley. Troilus's entry and his declaration of love for Cressida bring Waltonian sensuousness and the first statements of the soaring Cressida theme. Arthur Davies is not afraid of using his head voice for pianissimos, so contrasting the more dramatically with the big outbursts and his ringing top notes. This is a young-sounding hero, Italianate of tone. Similarly, Judith Howarth's Cressida is quite girlish, and she brings out the vulnerability of the character along with sweetness and warmth. After Calkas has defected to the Greeks, her cry of 'He has deserted us and Troy!' conveys genuine fear, with her will undermined. All told, although some fine music has been cut, the tautened version is far more effective both musically and dramatically, with no longueurs at all. The role of Diomede, Cressida's Greek suitor, can seem one-dimensional, but Alan Opie in one of his finest performances on record sharpens the focus, making him a genuine threat, with the element of nobility fully allowed. As Antenor, James Thornton sings strongly but is less steady than the others, while Yvonne Howard is superb in the mezzo role of Evadne, Cressida's treacherous servant and confidante. Not just the chorus but the orchestra of Opera North, the English Northern Philharmonia, respond with fervour.

Naturally and idiomatically they observe the Waltonian rubato and the lifting of jazzily syncopated rhythms which Hickox as a dedicated Waltonian instils, echoing the composer's own example. As for the recorded sound the bloom of the acoustic enhances the score, helped by the wide dynamic range.

Peter Warlock

British 1894-1930

GROVE Warlock was self-taught, though he was in contact with Delius from 1910, and was a friend of Van Dieren, Moeran and Lambert. Under his original name of Heseltine he wrote on music and edited English works of the Elizabethan era. As Warlock he produced a large output of songs, some dark, desolate and bleakly intense (The Curlew for tenor and sextet, 1922), others rumbustious, amorous or charming, but all informed by an exceptional sensitivity to words and high technical skill. He also wrote choral music and a few instrumental pieces (notably Capriol Suite for strings, 1926, based on 16th-century dances).

Songs

The Wind from the West. To the Memory of a Great Singer. Take, o take those lips away. As ever I saw. The bayley berith the bell away. There is a lady. Lullaby. Sweet content. Late summer. The Singer. Rest sweet nymphs. Sleep. A Sad Song. In an arbour green. Autumn Twilight. I held love's head. Thou gav'st me leave to kiss. Yarmouth Fair. Pretty Ring Time. A Prayer to St Anthony. The Sick Heart. Robin Goodfellow. Jillian of Berry. Fair and True. Ha'nacker Mill. The Night. My Own Country. The First Mercy. The Lover's Maze. Cradle Song. Sigh no more, ladies. Passing by. The Contented Lover. The Fox Ⓕ
John Mark Ainsley ten Roger Vignoles pf
Hyperion CDA66736 (69 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts included. Recorded 1994 ●

Philip Heseltine, so strangely renamed, did not facilitate either the singing or the playing of his songs. For the voice they have a way of passing awkwardly between registers, and though the high notes are not very high they tend to be uncomfortably placed. The pianist, caught for long in a pool of chromatics, suddenly finds his hands flying in both directions. Yet for the singer with the control of breath and command of voice that John Mark Ainsley so splendidly employs here, and for a pianist with Roger Vignoles's sureness of touch and insight, they must be wonderfully satisfying to perform, for there is such a love of song implicit in them and such a personal voice speaks through them. The programme here is arranged chronologically, from 1911 to 1930. Early and Elizabethan poems are the favourite source, and then the poems of contemporaries such as Belloc, Symons and Bruce Blunt. Even the earliest of the songs, The Wind from the West, has the characteristic touch of a lyrical impulse, directly responsive to words, and a fastidious avoidance of strophic or harmonic banality. Often a private unease works within the chromaticism as in the Cradle Song ('Be still, my sweet sweeting'), yet nothing could be more wholehearted in gaiety when he is in the mood for it (viz. In an arbour green, Robin Goodfellow, Jillian of Berry). Ainsley sings with fine reserves of power as well as softness; he phrases beautifully, and all the nuance that is so essential for these songs (in 'Sleep', for instance) is most sensitively judged. Vignoles is entirely at one with singer and composer.

Choral Works

Warlock A Cornish Carol. I saw a fair maiden. Benedicamus Domino. The Full Heart. The Rich Cavalcade. Corpus Christi. All the flowers of the spring. As Dewe in Aprylle. Bethlehem Down. Cornish Christmas Carol Moeran Songs of Springtime. Phyllida and Corydon Finzi Singers / Paul Spicer
Chandos CHAN9182 (76 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts included. Recorded 1992 ●

The Peter Warlock of the evergreen Capriol Suite and the boisterous songs seems a world away from the introverted and intense artist of these unaccompanied choral carols. Perhaps Warlock's real genius was an ability to create profound expression in short musical structures, but even the more outgoing pieces – the joyful Benedicamus Domino and the Cornish Christmas Carol, with its gentle hint at 'The First Nowell' – have an artistic integrity which raises them high above the level of the syrup of modern-day carol settings. Given performances as openly sincere and sensitive as these, few could be unmoved. In the two Moeran madrigal suites there is an indefinable Englishness – the result of a deep awareness of tradition and love of the countryside. The Finzi Singers' warm-toned, richly expressive voices capture the very essence of this uniquely lovely music.

Carl Maria von Weber

German 1786-1826

GROVE Weber studied in Salzburg (with Michael Haydn), Munich (JN Kalcher)and Vienna (Abbé Vogler), becoming Kapellmeister at Breslau (1804) and working for a time at Württemberg

(1806) and Stuttgart (1807). With help from Franz Danzi, intellectual stimulation from his friends Gänsbacher, Meyerbeer, Gottfried Weber and Alexander von Dusch and the encouragement of concert and operatic successes in Munich (especially Abu Hassan), Prague and Berlin, he settled down as opera director in Prague (1813-16). There he systematically reorganised the theatre's operations and built up the nucleus of a German company, concentrating on works, mostly French, that offered an example for the development of a German operatic tradition. But his searching reforms (extending to scenery, lighting, orchestral seating, rehearsal schedules and salaries) led to resentment. Not until his appointment as Royal Saxon Kapellmeister at Dresden (1817)and the unprecedented triumph of Der Freischütz (1821) in Berlin and throughout Germany did his championship of a true German opera win popular support. Official opposition continued, both from the Italian opera establishment in Dresden and from Spontini in Berlin; Weber answered critics with the grand heroic opera Euryanthe (1823, Vienna). His rapidly deteriorating health and his concern to provide for his family induced him to accept the invitation to write an English opera for London; he produced Oberon at Covent Garden in April 1826. Despite an enthusiastic English reception and every care for his health, this last journey hastened his decline; he died from tuberculosis, at 39.

Weber's Romantic leanings can be een in the novel emotional flavour of his music and its relevance to emergent German nationalism, his delicate receptivity to nature and to literary and pictorial impressions, his parallel activities as critic, virtuoso pianist and Kapellmeister, his dedication to the evolution of a new kind of opera uniting all the arts and above all his wish to communicate feeling. His role as a father-figure of musical Romanticism was acknowledged by those who succeeded him in the movement, from Berlioz and Wagner to Debussy and Mahler. His melodic and harmonic style is rooted in classical principles, but as he matured he experimented with chromaticism (the diminished 7th chord was a particular favourite). He also was among the subtlest of orchestrators, writing for unusual but dramatically apt and vivid instrumental combinations. All his most successful music, including the songs and concertos, is to some degree dramatically inspired.

Weber won his widest audience with Freischütz, outwardly a Singspiel celebrating German folklore and country life, using an idiom touched by German folksong. Through his skilful use of motifs and his careful harmonic, visual and instrumental designs notably for the Wolf's Glen scene, the outstanding example in music of the early Romantic treatment of the sinister and the supernatural – he gave this work a new creative status. Euryanthe, despite a weak libretto, further advances the unity of harmonic and formal structures, moving towards continuous, freely composed opera. In Oberon Weber reverted to separate numbers to suit English taste, yet the work retains his characteristically subtle motivic handling and depiction of both natural and supernatural elements. Of his other works, some of the German songs, the colouristic Konzertstück for piano and orchestra, the dramatic clarinet and bassoon concertos and the virtuoso Grand duo concertant for clarinet and piano deserve special mention.

Clarinet Concertos

Clarinet Concertos – No 1 in F minor, J114; No 2 in E flat, J118. Grand duo concertant, J204
Sharon Kam cl Itamar Golan pf Leipzig Gewandhaus Orchestra / Kurt Masur
Warner Elatus 0927-46744-2 (64 minutes: DDD) Ⓜ
Recorded 1996 ●

Teldec provides a good programme in having the two Weber clarinet concertos coupled with a work which is virtually another concerto but with piano accompaniment, the Grand duo concertant. Sharon Kam is a young Israeli whom Kurt Masur heard in her home country, immediately inviting her back to Leipzig to play concertos. She was contracted by Teldec in 1994, but this is the first disc entirely devoted to her playing, revealing her as a most imaginative and individual artist, using the widest tonal and dynamic range, and with a very sure technique, with every note cleanly in place. As the opening movement of the First Concerto demonstrates, she has the gift of magicking a phrase, and one mark of her magnetism and flair is the way she can hold tension over an exaggerated pause or tenuto. Most remarkable of all is the dark intensity of Kam's account of the slow minor-key Romanza of the Second Concerto, with the soloist clearly the one insisting on a very measured tempo, when Masur's preference is always towards flowing Andantes. She is similarly impressive in the Grand duo concertant, though there the piano tone of Itamar Golan is on the shallow side.

Clarinet Concertos – Nos 1 and 2. Clarinet Concertino in E flat, J109. Clarinet Quintet in B flat, J182 Kari Kriikku cl New Helsinki Quartet (Jan Söderblòm, Petri Aarnio vns Ilari Angervo va Jan-Erik Gustafsson vc) Finnish Radio Symphony Orchestra / Sakari Oramo
Ondine ODE895-2 (76 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1996 ●

Kari Kriikku's are brilliant performances of works that more or less reinvented the clarinet as an instrument of brilliance, at any rate in the hands and under the flashing fingers of Weber's friend Heinrich Bärmann. The formidable difficulties hold no terrors for Kriikku; indeed, wonderfully fluent as his playing is in, for instance, the fireworks music that ends the Second Concerto and the Quintet, one almost wants there to be more sense of difficulties overcome as witness of the virtuoso as hero. But that would be to quibble, especially when Kriikku has such a wide range of expression and such an intelligent approach to the music. He plays the First Concerto as a slightly tense, witty work, giving the Adagio a long-breathed lyricism and the finale humour as well as wit. The only questionable element is his own over-long cadenza to the first movement. The Second Concerto is treated as a more lyrical and dramatic work, with an elegant polacca finale, and there is a beautiful length of phrasing in the Andante, as there is in the 'Fantasia' movement of the Quintet. Kriikku neatly touches off the mock-sinister intervention in the Quintet's finale, refusing to take it seriously. He is well accompanied throughout.

Grand duo concertant

Grand duo concertant, J204[b]. Clarinet Quintet in B flat, J182[a]. Seven Variations on a Theme from 'Silvana', J128[b]
Pascal Moraguès cl [b]Mari Izuha pf
[a]Pražák Quartet (Vaclav Remes, Vlastimil Holek vns Josef Klusoň va Michal Kaňka vc)
Praga Digitals PRD250164 (61 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 2001

In his note to this record, Pierre Barbier comments that the Grand duo concertant 'can be understood as a concerto without orchestra'. It would be fairer to say 'double concerto without orchestra', and it is certainly no sonata. In no other recording do the two soloists so fully respond to each other, in subtlety of rubato, in swift and witty changes of mood, in delicacy of balance between the instruments. It is a work that really needs the timbre of a contemporary piano, especially in the con molto affetto section of the finale, with its churning piano tremolos, but the players have such an attentive ear for one another (as well as a dashing individuality that can make them seem enthusiastic rivals), that it all comes out as brilliantly as Weber must have intended when he wrote the piece for himself and his cavalier friend Heinrich Bärmann.

The Quintet is rather less successful than this piece or the lighthearted Silvana variations. Pascal Moraguès's clear, bright tone, attractively as he phrases and irresistibly as he brings off the cascading music of the closing section, can lack something of the warmth Weber admired in Bärmann's playing. David Shifrin (on Delos) also couples these three works. While he is excellent in the Quintet he cannot, with David Golub, match this scintillating performance of the Grand duo concertant.

Piano Sonatas

Piano Sonatas –No 1 in C, J138; No 2 in A flat, J199. Rondo brillante in E flat, J252, 'La gaité'. Invitation to the Dance, J260
Hamish Milne pf
CRD CRD3485 (76 minutes: DDD) Ⓜ
Recorded 1991 ●

Weber's piano music, once played by most pianists, has since suffered neglect and even the famous Invitation to the Dance is now more often heard in its orchestral form. Since he was a renowned pianist as well as a major composer, the neglect seems odd, particularly when other pianist composers such as Chopin and Liszt are at the centre of the concert repertory; but part of the trouble may lie in the difficulty of the music, reflecting his own huge hands and his tendency to write what the booklet-essay calls 'chords unplayable by others'. Hamish Milne makes out a real case for this music, and his playing of the two sonatas is idiomatic and resourceful, even if one cannot banish the feeling that Weber all too readily used the melodic and harmonic formulae of 18th-century galanterie and simply dressed them up in 19th-century salon virtuosity. From this point of view, a comparison with Chopin's mature sonatas or Liszt's magnificent single essay in the form reveals Weber as a lightweight. A hearing of the first movement in the First Sonata will quickly tell you if this is how you may react, while in its Presto finale you may praise a Mendelssohnian lightness but also note a pomposity foreign to that composer. Leaving aside the musical quality of these sonatas, this is stylish playing which should win them friends. The Rondo brillante and Invitation to the Dance make no claim to be other than scintillating salon music, and are captivating in Milne's shapely and skilful performances. The recording is truthful and satisfying.

Lieder

Meine Lieder, meine Sänge, J73. Klage, J63. Der Kleine Fritz an seine jungen Freunde, J74. Was zieht zu deinem Zauberkreise, J86. Ich sah ein Röschen am Wege stehn, J67. Er an Sie, J57. Meine Farben, J62. Liebe-Glühen, J140. Über die Berge mit ungestüm, Op 25 No 2. Es stürmt auf der Flur, J161. Minnelied, J160. Reigen, J159. Sind es Schmerzen, J156. Mein Verlangen, J196. Wenn ich ein Vöglein war', J233. Mein Schatzerl ist hübsch, J234. Liebesgruss aus der Ferne, J257. Herzchen, mein Schätzchen, J258. Das Veilchen im Thale, J217. Ich denke dein, J48. Horch'!, Leise horch', Geliebte, J56. Elle était simple et gentilette, J292
Dietrich Fischer-Dieskau bar Hartmut Höll pf
Claves CD50-9118 (52 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included. Recorded 1991 ●

'In my opinion the first and most sacred duty of a song-writer is to observe the maximum of fidelity to the prosody of the text that he is setting.' Weber was writing in defence of a number he composed for an obscure play, but his words can stand as an apologia for his 90-odd songs. His contribution to German song has been underrated, for his ideas were different from those of his contemporaries. Fischer-Dieskau used to resist suggestions that he might take up Weber's songs, and it is good that he has now done so, even late in his career. Always sensitive to words, he now responds with the subtlety of understanding that comes from many years of closeness to German poetry. Only very occasionally is there the powerful emphasis on the single expressive word that sometimes used to mar his interpretations, keeping them too near the surface of the poetry. He can still use individual colour marvellously: the tonal painting of 'blue', 'white' and 'brown' in Meine Farben is exquisitely done. But more remarkable, here and in other songs, is the manner in which he follows the novel melodic lines which Weber has contrived out of the poetry.

Ein steter Kampf is a masterly example; so is Was zieht zu deinem Zauberkreise, one of the few songs in which Weber enters Schubertian territory; so are Es türmt auf der Flur and Liebesgruss aus der Ferne. Not even Fischer-Dieskau can quite bring off the coy Der Kleine Fritz by slightly sending it up (the only hope), and there is something a bit hefty about Reigen, a very funny wedding song full of 'Heissa, lustig!' and 'Dudel, didel!', though Hartmut Höll does wonders with the clanking accompaniment. Höll varies his tone so much here from the warmth and depth of his touch elsewhere that one wonders if the engineers did not take a small hand: why not? These are charming, touching, witty, colourful verses, often by minor figures of Weber's circle, and they drew from him music that eightens their point. Fischer-Dieskau's intelligent artistry could not more eloquently support the praise for Weber from Wilhelm Müller, poet of Die schöne Müllerin and Winterreise, as 'master of German song'.

Der Freischütz

Peter Schreier ten Max (Hans Jörn Weber); Gundula Janowitz sop Agathe (Regina Jeske); Edith Mathis sop Aennchen (Ingrid Hille); Theo Adam bass Caspar (Gerhard Paul); Bernd Weikl bar Ottokar (Otto Mellies); Siegfried Vogel bass Cuno (Gerd Biewer); Franz Crass bass Hermit; Gerhard Paul spkr Samiel; Günther Leib bar Kilian (Peter Hölzel); Leipzig Radio Chorus; Staatskapelle Dresden / Carlos Kleiber

DG The Originals ② 457 736-2GOR2 Ⓕ
(130 minutes: ADD). Notes, text and translation included. Recorded 1973 oo

Carlos Kleiber's fine set of Der Freischütz earns reissue on CD for a number of reasons. One is the excellence of the actual recorded sound with a score that profits greatly from such attention. Weber's famous attention to details of orchestration is lovingly explored by a conductor who has taken the trouble to go back to the score in manuscript and observe that there are differences between that and most of the published versions. So not only do we hear the eerie sound of low flute thirds and the subtle contrast of unmuted viola with four-part muted violins in Agathe's 'Leise, leise', among much else, with a new freshness and point, but all the diabolical effects in the Wolf's Glen come up with a greater sense of depth, down to the grisliest detail. The beginning of the Overture, and the opening of the Wolf's Glen scene, steal upon us out of a primeval silence, as they should. All this would be of little point were the performance itself not of such interest. There is a good deal to argue about but this is because the performance is so interesting. Whatever one may feel about some of Kleiber's tempos, and one may feel some of them to be unwise in both directions, they spring from a careful, thoughtful and musical mind. The singing cast is excellent, with Gundula Janowitz an outstanding Agathe to a somewhat reflective Max from Peter Schreier, at his best when the hero is brought low by the devilish machinations; Edith Mathis is a pretty Aennchen, Theo Adam a fine, murky Caspar. The dialogue, spoken by actors, is slightly abbreviated and occasionally amended. Kleiber's reading produces much new insight to a magical old score.

Additional recommendation

Der Freischütz Ⓗ

Grümmer Agathe; Hopf Max; Streich Aennchen; Proebstl Caspar; Poell Ottokar; Böhme Hermit; Cologne Radio Symphony Orchestra and Chorus / E Kleiber

Koch Schwann mono ② 316422 (125 minutes: ADD: radio broadcast, 1955) Ⓕ

Grümmer is in superb form here, and Streich a model Aennchen. Under Kleiber's inspired direction they make out a good case for this profoundly satisfying performance, different from but just as valid as son Carlos's later version on DG. One of the most desirable on disc – it sounds as if it might have been recorded yesterday.

Anton Webern Austrian 1883-1945

GROVE Webern studied at Vienna University under Adler (1902-6), taking the doctorate for work on Isaac; in composition he was one of Schoenberg's first pupils (1904-8), along with Berg. Like Berg, he developed rapidly under Schoenberg's guidance, achieving a fusion of Brahms, Reger and tonal Schoenberg in his orchestral Passacaglia, already highly characteristic in its modest dynamic level and its brevity. But he was closer than Berg in following Schoenberg into atonality, even choosing verses by the same poet, George, to take the step in songs of 1908-9. His other step was into a conducting career which he began with modest provincial engagements before World War I.

After the war he settled close to Schoenberg in Mödling and took charge of the Vienna Workers Symphony Concerts (1922-34). Meanwhile he had continued his atonal style, mostly in songs:the relatively few instrumental pieces of 1909-14 had grown ever shorter, ostensibly because of the lack of any means of formal extension in a language without key or theme. However, the songs of 1910-25 show a reintroduction of traditional formal patterns even before the arrival of serialism (especially canonic patterns, no doubt stimulated, as was the instrumentation of many of these songs, by Pierrot lunaire), to the extent that the eventual adoption of the 12-note method in the Three Traditional Rhymes (1925) seems almost incidental, making little change to a musical style that was already systematised by strict counterpoint. However, Webern soon recognised that the 12-note principle sanctioned a severity and virtuosity of polyphony that he could compare with that of the Renaissance masters he had studied. Unlike Schoenberg, he never again sought to compose in any other way. Rather, the highly controlled, pure style of his Symphony appears to have represented an ideal which later works could only repeat, showing different facets. His use of the series as a source of similar motifs, especially in instrumental works, merely emphasises the almost geometrical perfection of this music, for which he found literary stimulus in Goethe and, more nearly, in the poetry of his friend and neighbour Hildegard Jone, whose words he set exclusively during his last dozen years. With Schoenberg gone, Berg dead and himself deprived of his posts, Webern saw Jone as one of his few allies during World War II. He was shot in error by a soldier after the end of hostilities, leaving a total acknowledged output of about three hours' duration..

Complete works, Opp 1-31

Awards 1978

Passacaglia, Op 1 (London Symphony Orchestra /Pierre Boulez). Entflieht auf leichten Kähnen, Op 2 (John Alldis Choir / Boulez). Five Songs from 'Der siebente Ring', Op 3. Five Songs, Op 4 (Heather Harper sop Charles Rosen pf). Five Movements, Op 5 (Juilliard Quartet). Six Pieces, Op 6 (LSO /Boulez). Four Pieces, Op 7 (Isaac Stern vn Rosen pf). Two Songs, Op 8 (Harper sop chamber ensemble /Boulez). Six Bagatelles, Op 9 (Juilliard Qt). Five Pieces, Op 10 (LSO /Boulez). Three Little Pieces, Op 11 (Gregor Piatigorsky vc Rosen pf). Four Songs, Op 12 (Harper sop Rosen pf). Four Songs, Op 13. Six Songs, Op 14 (Harper sop chbr ens /Boulez). Five Sacred Songs, Op 15. Five Canons on Latin Texts, Op 16 (Halina Lukomska sop chbr ens /Boulez). Three Songs, Op 18 (Lukomska sop John Williams gtr Colin Bradbury cl /Boulez). Two Songs, Op 19 (John Alldis Ch, mbrs LSO / Boulez). String Trio, Op 20 (mbrs Juilliard Qt). Symphony, Op 21 (LSO /Boulez). Quartet, Op 22 (Robert Marcellus cl Abraham Weinstein sax Daniel Majeske vn Rosen pf /Boulez). Three Songs from 'Viae inviae', Op 23 (Lukomska sop Rosen pf). Concerto, Op 24 (mbrs LSO /Boulez). Three Songs, Op 25 (Lukomska sop Rosen pf). Das Augenlicht, Op 26 (John Alldis Ch, LSO /Boulez). Piano Variations, Op 27 (Rosen pf). String Quartet, Op 28 (Juilliard Qt). Cantata No 1, Op 29 (Lukomska sop John Alldis Ch; LSO /Boulez). Variations, Op 30 (LSO /Boulez). Cantata No 2, Op 31 (Lukomska sop Barry McDaniel bar John Alldis Ch; LSO /Boulez). Five Movements, Op 5 –orchestral version (LSO /Boulez) Bach (orch Webern) Musikalischen Opfer, BWV1079 –Fuga (Ricercata) No 2 (LSO /Boulez) Schubert (orch Webern) Deutsche Tänze, D820 (Frankfurt Radio Orchestra /Anton Webern) (recorded live in 1932)
Various artists
Sony Classical ③ SM3K45845 Ⓜ
(223 minutes: ADD). Notes, texts and translations included. Recorded 1967-72 ●●●

Webern is as 'classic' to Boulez as Mozart or Brahms are to most other conductors, and when he is able to persuade performers to share his view the results can be remarkable – lucid in texture, responsive in expression. Despite his well-nigh exclusive concern with miniature forms, there are many sides to Webern, and although this set is not equally successful in realising all of them, it leaves you in no doubt about the music's sheer variety, as well as its emotional power, whether the piece is an ingenious canon-by-inversion or a simple, folk-like Lied. From a long list of performers one could single out Heather Harper and the Juilliard Quartet for special commendation; and the smooth confidence of the John Alldis Choir is also notable. The recordings were made over a five-year period and have the typical CBS dryness of that time. Even so, in the finest performances which Boulez himself directs, that remarkable radiance of spirit so special to Webern is vividly conveyed. It is a fascinating bonus to hear Webern himself conducting his Schubert arrangements – music from another world, yet with an economy and emotional poise that Webern in his own way sought to emulate.

Passacaglia, Op 1

Webern Passacaglia, Op 1. Six Pieces, Op 6. Five Pieces, Op 10. Variations, Op 30 Bach (arr Webern) Musikalisches Opfer, BWV1079 –Ricercar a 6
Schoenberg A Survivor from Warsaw, Op 46
Gottfried Hornik narr Vienna State Opera Chorus; Vienna Philharmonic Orchestra / Claudio Abbado
DG 431 774-2GH (50 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Text and translation included. Recorded 1989-92 ●

This is a fine reading of the rarely-heard and forcefully dramatic Variations, Op 30. Abbado and the VPO are responsive to the romantic intensity of the early Passacaglia, and the sets of expressionist miniatures are even more convincing in their blend of delicacy and power. The fourth piece from Op 6, the closest Webern came to concentrating the essence of a Mahlerian funeral march, and ending with an ear-splitting percussion crescendo, is all the more effective for Abbado's refusal to set a self-indulgently slow tempo. Technically, these recordings outshine the competition, though there are other memorable interpreters – Boulez especially in Op 30. Given the evident rapport between Webern and Abbado it seems odd that the disc doesn't include more of Webern's music. The Bach arrangement is nevertheless an ear-opening exercise in passing Baroque counterpoint through a kaleidoscope of expressionist tone colours, and Schoenberg's A Survivor from Warsaw retains its special power to move and disturb.

Webern Passacaglia, Op 1. Five Pieces, Op 5. Six Pieces, Op 6. Im Sommerwind Bach (orch Webern) Musikalisches Opfer, BWV1079 –Ricercar a 6
Schubert (orch Webern) Deutsche Tänze, D820

Berlin Philharmonic Orchestra / Pierre Boulez
DG 447 099-2GH (67 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1993-94 ●

With the exception of the Bach and Schubert arrangements this is all relatively early, pre-serial Webern, yet Boulez devotes as much care and as much affection to the D minor Passacaglia and to the undeniably immature but irresistibly luscious Im Sommerwind as to the far more characteristic Op 5 and Op 6 pieces. Indeed, if the Passacaglia is anything to go by, a Brahms symphony cycle from Boulez would be a fascinating prospect, while his reading of the 'idyll for large orchestra' suggests that his Delius might be no less interesting. Boulez does not imply that the mature Webern is present here in embryo; but he does perhaps make us ask how much of that later music is, like this, inspired by nature.

To be reminded of Brahms by the Passacaglia is no less appropriate. This is a Janus of a piece, looking back not only to Brahms's Fourth Symphony but beyond, and at the same time moving onwards from the delicate chamber passages in Im Sommerwind towards the 'orchestral chamber music' of Op 5 and Op 6. Boulez looks both ways too, with rich orchestral amplitude and expressive phrasing (very broad rubato) but he also notices Webern's already marked liking for transparent textures, quiet subtleties of string colour and the sound of the muted trumpet. And yes: heard in this context the shorter pieces are a logical progression. They are intensely expressive, with a wide range of emotion often within a few bars; no wonder Boulez prefers the earlier, richer scoring of Op 6. He obviously loves their Mahler-derived dissolution of the boundary between orchestral and chamber music, and encourages the orchestra to play with great tonal beauty. Those qualities recur in the Bach and Schubert arrangements; the rubato in the Fourth Schubert Dance and the Viennese charm of the Fifth suggest that a Boulez Fledermaus, even, might be a gleam at the back of his mind. The recordings are warm and clean.

String Quartet

Webern String Quartet (arr Poppen). Five Pieces, Op 5. Bach Musical Offering, BWV1079 – Ricercar a 6 (orch Webern). Cantata No 4, Christ lag in Todesbanden, BWV4[a]
[a]Hilliard Ensemble; Munich Chamber Orchestra / Christoph Poppen
ECM New Series 461 912-2 (69 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded c2002 ●●●

Symmetry, the cyclic evolution of a musical germ and the idea of birth in the midst of death: all are fundamental to this disc titled 'Ricercar'. Webern's motivically determined orchestration of the 'Ricercar' from Bach's late The Musical Offering, where single lines change colour by the bar, opens and closes the programme.

Christoph Poppen's orchestration of Webern's 1905 String Quartet soars and surges with an ardour that befits this early but significant masterpiece. Like Webern in Bach, Poppen knows how and where to taper his forces, while his players respond with obvious dedication. Bach's Cantata Christ lag in Todesbanden grows, as Herbert Glossner reminds us, from a 'primordial cell' of a single semitone motive. Eight stanzas each end with a 'Halleluja', as unalike in shade and meaning as the strands of Webern's 'Ricercar', so magnificent is the young Bach's handling of the texts. Like Joshua Rifkin and more recently Paul McCreesh, Poppen performs choral Bach with single voices; he also encourages a string playing style that largely dispenses with vibrato, so that when you cross from Webern's Quartet to Bach's BWV4 you could as well be switching to a period performance. The Hilliards sing beautifully, both solo and in ensemble, and the balance between voices and instruments is impeccable.

Some might balk at the sudden eruption of Webern's violent 'Heftig betwegt' on the heels of Bach's closing 'Halleluja', but the musical sense of having five 'symmetrical' Movements for String Quartet fall within the greater symmetry of the programme as a whole overrides any initial discomfort. Again, Poppen's finely tooled reading focuses in precise detail the mood and texture of each miniature so that the eventual return of Bach-Webern is indeed like a profound thought revisited by a changed mind. This is a disc you'll want to return to again and again – surely recommendation enough.

Kurt Weill German/American 1900-1950

GROVE Weill was a pupil of Humperdinck, Busoni and Jarnach in Berlin (1918-23); their teaching informed his early music, including the choral Recordare (1923)and the Concerto for violin and wind (1924), the latter also influenced by Stravinsky. But the deeper influence of Stravinsky, coupled with an increased consciousness of music as a social force, led him to a rediscovery in the mid-1920s of tonal and vernacular elements, notably from jazz, in his cantata Der neue Orpheus and one-act stage piece Royal Palace, written between two collaborations with the expressionist playwright Georg Kaiser: Der Protagonist and Der Zar lässt sich photographieren. In 1926 he married the singer Lotte Lenya, who was to be the finest interpreter of his music.

His next collaborator was Brecht, with whom he worked on The Threepenny Opera (1928), The Rise and Fall of the City of Mahagonny (1929) and Happy End (1929), all of which use the corrupted, enfeebled diatonicism of commercial music as a weapon of social criticism, though paradoxically they have beome the epitome of the pre-war culture they sought to despise. Yet this is done within the context of a new harmonic consistency and focus. These works have also drawn attention from the theatre works in which Weill developed without Brecht during the early 1930s, Die Bürgschaft and Der Silbersee (with Kaiser again).

In 1933 he left Germany for Paris, where he worked with Brecht again on the sung ballet The Seven Deadly Sins. Then in 1935 he moved to the USA, where he cut loose from the European art-music tradition and devoted himself wholeheartedly to composing for the Broadway stage, intentionally subordinating aesthetic criteria to pragmatic and populist ones. Yet these works are still informed by his cultivated sense of character and theatrical form.

'Ute Lemper sings Kurt Weill'

Der Silbersee – Ich bin eine arme Verwandte (Fennimores-Lied); Rom war eine Stadt (Cäsars Tod); Lied des Lotterieagenten. Die Dreigroschenoper – Die Moritat von Mackie Messer; Salomon-Song; Die Ballade von der sexuellen Hörigkeit. Das Berliner Requiem – Zu Potsdam unter den Eichen (arr Hazell). Nannas-Lied. Aufstieg und Fall der Stadt Mahagonny – Alabama Song; Wie man sich bettet. Je ne t'aime pas. One Touch of Venus – I 'm a stranger here myself; Westwind; Speak low Ute Lemper sop Berlin Radio Ensemble / John Mauceri
Decca New Line 425 204-2DNL (50 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included ●●

The songs in this collection are mostly from the major works Weill composed between 1928 and 1933, but also included are one from his years in France and three items from the 1943 Broadway musical One Touch of Venus. By comparison with the husky, growling delivery often accorded Weill's songs in the manner of his widow Lotte Lenya, Ute Lemper has a voice of clarity and warmth. What distinguishes her singing, though, is the way in which these attributes are allied to an irresistible dramatic intensity. Her 'Song of the Lottery Agent' is an absolute tour de force, apt to leave the listener emotionally drained, and her Je ne t'aime pas is almost equally overwhelming. Not least in the three numbers from One Touch of Venus, she displays a commanding musical theatre presence. This is, one feels, how Weill's songs were meant to be heard.

The Seven Deadly Sins

Die sieben Todsünden[a]. Symphony No 2[b]
Teresa Stratas, Nora Kimball sops Frank Kelley, Howard Haskin tens Herbert Perry, Peter Rose basses Chorus and Orchestra of the Opéra National de Lyon / Kent Nagano
Erato 0630-17068-2 (65 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Text and translation included
Recorded [a] 1993; [b]1996 ●

Weill and Brecht's Seven Deadly Sins, written in haste just after their flight from Hitler's Germany, was their last major collaboration. The question of its interpretation will always be bound up with the memory of Lotte Lenya, who created the role of Anna I. This performance of Sins was recorded at the same time that Stratas performed it for Peter Sellars's film of the work (available on video from Decca). There is a certain amount of stage noise in this recording, especially in 'Lust' – the heart of the work. Stratas's singing isn't pretty, but then it's not meant to be; she projects text and music in such a dramatic and heartfelt way that it puts this version immediately in the front rank. Nagano's conducting begins with a very slow introduction, which may sound off-putting to those familiar with the much sprightlier Rattle or Masur versions, which also have soprano soloists. As the performance progresses though, Nagano's control of the drama seems just right. The recorded sound of the symphony is noticeably better than that of Sins. As Weill's only major orchestral work, it has never really caught on, though the orchestral writing is as sophisticated as anything in his operas. With so many versions of Die sieben Todsünden, preferences for voice and coupling are important. Fassbaender and von Otter both have a selection of Weill songs and arias, Réaux with Masur has the Lulu suite, Ross with Rattle, Stravinsky's Pulcinella. For first-time Weill buyers, we are inclined to recommend this version over all the others.

Street Scene

Kristine Ciesinski sop Anna Maurrant; Richard Van Allan bass Frank Maurrant; Janis Kelly sop Rose Maurrant; Bonaventura Bottone ten Sam Kaplan; Terry Jenkins ten Abraham Kaplan; Meriel Dickinson mez Emma Jones; Angela Hickey mez Olga Olsen; Claire Daniels sop Jennie Hildebrand; Fiametta Doria sop First Nursemaid; Judith Douglas mez Second Nursemaid; English National Opera Chorus and Orchestra / Carl Davis
TER Classics ② CDTER21185 (146 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1989

Street Scene is the most ambitious product of Weill's American years. It's something of a Porgy and Bess transferred from Catfish Row to the slum tenements of New York. Where Porgy and Bess is through-composed with recitatives, though, Street Scene offers a mixture of set musical numbers, straight dialogue, and dialogue over musical underscoring. The musical numbers themselves range from operatic arias and ensembles to rousing 1940s dance numbers. It is consistently well sung, particularly where style is concerned. Weill described the work as a 'Broadway opera', and it demands a vernacular rather than a classical operatic singing style. This it duly gets from Kristine Ciesinski as Anna Maurrant, while Janis Kelly's beautifully clear but natural enunciation and her sense of emotional involvement make daughter Rose's 'What good would the moon be?' a performance of real beauty.

Praiseworthy, too, is Richard Van Allan as the murderous husband, his 'Let things be like they always was' creating a suitably sinister effect. Among the subsidiary attractions is the appearance of Catherine Zeta Jones, performing the swinging dance number 'Moon-faced, starry-eyed'.

Henryk Wieniawski

Polish 1835-1880

GROVE After studying at the Paris Conservatoire Wieniawski embarked on the career of a travelling virtuoso, giving concerts in Russia, Germany, Paris and London. At the bidding of Anton Rubinstein he settled in St Petersburg (1860-72) and exerted a decisive influence on the growth of the Russian violin school. Meanwhile he composed his best works including the demanding Etudes-caprices op.18, the Polonaise brillante op.21 and his masterpiece, the Second Violin Concerto in D minor op.22. Further world travels, notably to the USA and Russia, and a period as violin professor at the Brussels Conservatory (1875-7) contributed to the breakdown of his health. One of the most important violinists of the generation after Paganini, he was known for the emotional quality of his tone. As a composer he combined the technical advances of Paganini with Romantic imagination and Slavonic colouring, showing Polish nationalism in his mazurkas and polonaises. His brother Józef (1837-1912) was an accomplished pianist who taught in Moscow, Warsaw and Brussels; their nephew Adam (1879-1950) was a director of the Chopin Music School in Warsaw.

Violin Concerto No 1

Wieniawski Violin Concerto No 1 in F sharp minor, Op 14[b] Beach Romance, Op 23[a] Debussy Préludes – La fille aux cheveux de lin (arr A Hartmann)[a] Elgar Chanson de nuit, Op 15 No 1[a] Kreisler La Gitana[a] Poldini Marionnettes – Poupée valsante (arr Kreisler)[a] Prokofiev Tales of an Old Grandmother, Op 31 (arr Milstein)[a] – Andantino; Andante assai
Midori vn [a]Robert McDonald pf [b]St Louis Symphony Orchestra / Leonard Slatkin
Sony Classical SK89700 (52 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
[b]Recorded live in 1988 and 2001 ◉

Wieniawski's First Violin Concerto has never matched No 2 in popularity, but Midori's involving performance makes one wonder why. Put it alongside Perlman's EMI version with the LPO under Ozawa, and – perhaps not surprisingly – her live account sounds more volatile and more freely expressive, with even the conventional passage-work given an extra sparkle. She also chooses a more flowing Larghetto for the central 'Preghiera' (Prayer) slow movement, which brings out the songful lyricism more persuasively, with her first entry magically hushed, full of natural gravity. The dotted rhythms of the Rondo finale are then even more playful. The radio recording is full and forwardly balanced, but the range of dynamic and expression in Midori's playing is never compromised.

In the encore pieces, the range of dynamic is again remarkable. She plays the opening item, Hartmann's arrangement of Debussy's 'La fille aux cheveux de lin', with such delicacy she seems simply to be musing to herself, and her simple gravity in Elgar's Chanson de nuit, the last item, taken steadily, turns it into a sort of prayer. Such an approach could easily have lapsed into sentimentality, but emphatically not so here.

A thoroughly enjoyable disc.

Hugo Wolf

Austrian 1860-1903

GROVE Wolf played the violin, piano and organ as a child and studied briefly at the Vienna Conservatory (1875-7, meeting his idol Wagner) but, lacking discipline and direction, he had to rely on friends and cultured benefactors for help and introductions. His first important works, the songs of 1877-8, arose from the effects of his sexual initiation and first romantic attachment. Some are bright, others agonised, reflecting his depression and illness from a syphilitic infection. Though in 1880 this cloud seemed to abate, a pattern of cyclic mood swing and sporadic creativity was already established. Holidays, studies of Wagner and radiant song settings alternated with personal estrangements and a dark, dramatic strain in his music. For three years (1884-6), he wrote trenchant musical criticism for the Wiener Salonblatt, siding with Wagner and against Brahms, meanwhile working on Penthesilea (1883-5) and the D minor Quartet (1878-84)and beginning a secret love affair with Melanie Köchert. Compositional mastery and a sense of purpose came only in the late 1880s, when he turned from subjectivity to imaginative literature as a stimulus. In 1888 Eichendorff's poetry and in particular Mörike's inspired a sudden flowering of song music that in profusion and variety matched Schubert and Schumann. His acclaimed public performances won new converts, and in February 1889 he finished the 51 songs of the Goethe songbook, in April 1890 the 44 Spanish songs. Publication and critical recognition turned his thoughts to opera but from 1891 physical exhaustion and depressive phases stemmed the flow of original music. In 1895 he composed his only completed opera, Der Corregidor, but it was unsuccessful; in 1897 he composed his last songs and had the mental breakdown that led to his terminal illness.

Wolf's strength was the compression of large-scale forms and ideas – the essences of grand opera, tone poem and dramatic symphony – into song. Combining expressive techniques in the piano part with an independent vocal line, and using an array of rhythmic and harmonic devices to depict textual imagery, illustrate mood and create musical structure, he continued and extended the lied tradition of Schubert and Schumann. Yet he was original in his conception of the songbook as the larger dramatic form; each one seems to have been planned in advance to represent a poet or source. Folk music, nature studies, humorous songs and ballads peopled by soldiers, sailors, students or musicians recur in the German settings, while religious or erotic themes dominate the Spanish and Italian songbooks.

Lieder Recitals

Elly Ameling

Spanisches Liederbuch – Die ihr schwebet um diese Palmen; Ach, des Knaben Augen; Mühvoll komm' ich und beladen; In dem Schatten meiner Locken; Sagt, seid Ihr es, feiner Herr; Mögen alle bösen Zungen; Alle gingen, Herz, zur Ruh; Tief im Herzen trag' ich Pein; Komm, o Tod, von Nacht umgeben; Ob auch finstre Blicke glitten; Bedeckt mich mit Blumen; Sie blasen zum Abmarsch; Wer tat deinem Füsslein weh; Geh' Geliebter, geh' jetz. Mörike Lieder – Das verlassene Mägdlein; Nimmersatte Liebe; Verborgenheit; Im Frühling; Elfenlied; Auf ein altes Bild; Lied vom Winde

Elly Ameling sop Rudolf Jansen pf

Hyperion CDA66788 (59 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ

Texts and translations included. Recorded 1991 ◉

This is a gratifying distillation of Ameling as a Wolf interpreter, a late flowering of her art in which we are consoled for some loss in the quality and quantity of tone by the insights offered. In so many of these readings, her performance represents Wolf singing of the most telling kind. The four central songs tell us all. To 'Ob auch finstre Blicke glitten' she brings a depth of verbal accent and inner expression that places it among Wolf's highest achievements. There follow a properly weary, care-ridden account of 'Alle gingen, Herz, zur Ruh', a languorous evocation of 'Bedeckt mich mit Blumen' and a tragic entry into the abasing world of 'Mühvoll komm 'ich und beladen'. The two sacred songs are hardly less impressive. Her choice ends with a reading of 'Geh' Geliebter', in which Ameling sheds the years to give us all the ardent thoughts of the girl reluctant at dawn to leave her lover. If you have hesitated before buying the complete EMI set, you might prefer to try this rewarding and distinguished selection. Ameling shows equal discernment in her choice from the Mörike settings, catching the specific mood of each. If there is a favourite here it has to be 'Das verlassene Mägdlein', where the dreadful anguish of the abandoned girl, so unerringly caught by Wolf, is expressed in a mood of almost toneless lassitude – just right.

Stephan Genz

An* ('O wag es nicht'). Frage nicht. Herbst. Herbstentschlus. Nächtliche Wanderung. Traurige Wege. Liederstrauss – Sie haben heut' abend Gesellschaft; Ich stand in dunkeln Träumen; Das ist ein Brausen und Heulen; Aus meinen grossen Schmerzen; Mir träumte von einem Königskind; Mein Liebchen, wir sassen beisammen; Es blasen die blauen Husaren; Du bist wie eine Blume; Wenn ich in deine Augen seh'; Mädchen mit dem roten Mündchen; Wo ich bin, mich rings umdunkelt; Es war ein alter König; Mit schwarzen Segeln; Spätherbstnebel; Ernst ist der Frühling; Wie des Mondes Abbild zittert; Sterne mit den gold'nen Füsschen; Wo wird einst des Wandermüden.

Stephan Genz bar Roger Vignoles pf

Hyperion CDA67343 (67 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ

Recorded c2002 ◉

This is a fascinating recital. Wolf's mature songs are generally reckoned to date from Mörike Lieder of 1888. One of the songs here ('Wo wird einst des Wandermüden') was written in that year; the rest are from 1876 to 1880, when Wolf was 20. In these early songs, unpublished in his lifetime, he is by no means distinctively and identifiably 'Wolf'. Yet neither, for all the manifold influences at work on him (most notably Beethoven, Schubert and Schumann), is he anything but an independent composer with imagination, passion, a feeling for voice and words, and, even more remarkably, for the piano in combination with them – the outstanding absence being a gift for memorable melody.

Genz and Vignoles do him such service as would have done the young man's heart a world of good if he could have heard them. Most delightful in the quieter, legato songs such as 'Ich stand in dunkeln Träumen' and 'Ernst ist der Frühling', the baritone is also masterly in expression, finding ample resources of coloration for Abendbilder. Roger Vignoles is equally responsive, and turns his hands with skill and flair to both the grand Romantic style of Nächtliche Wanderung and the nimble merriment of 'Mädchen mit dem roten Mündchen'.

Hans Hotter

Goethe Lieder – Harfenspieler: I, Wer sich der Einsamkeit ergibt; II, An die Türen; III, Wer nie sein Brot; Cophtisches Lied I and II; Anakreons Grab; Ob der Koran von Ewigkeit sei?; So lang man nüchtern ist; Prometheus; Grenzen der Menschheit. Italienisches Liederbuch – Ein Ständchen Euch zu bringen; Schon streckt' ich aus; Geselle, woll'n wir uns in Kutten hüllen. Drei Gedichte von Michelangelo. Eichendorff Lieder – Der Musikant.. Mörike Lieder – Der Tambour; Nimmersatte Liebe; Fussreise; Verborgenheit 🅷

Hans Hotter bass-bar Gerald Moore pf

Testament mono SBT1197 (70 minutes: ADD) Ⓕ

Texts and translations include

Recorded 1951, 1953 and 1957 ◉◉

At last: a reissue of Hotter's 1953 Hugo Wolf recital, which forms the centrepiece of this release, and it's in far better, more immediate sound than on the original LP. Hotter's interpretations of Prometheus, Grenzen der Menschheit, the gloomy Harfenspieler Lieder and resigned Michelangelo settings – Wolf at his greatest – remain virtually unsurpassed. They were surely written with a bass-baritone of Hotter's calibre in mind and, quite apart from his vocal prowess, his verbal insights are once again remarkable, while the account of the naughty monks' exploits from the Italian Songbook remind us of Hotter the humorist. The earlier and later items that complete the CD disclose similar gifts, notably the delightful Der Tambour – and Anakreons Grab, which, both in 1951 and 1957, matches the Innigkeit of Goethe's poem and Wolf's setting. Moore is a masterly partner in music that severely taxes the pianist. This disc is a must for Wolf enthusiasts.

Geraldine McGreevy
Goethe Lieder
Mignon – I, Heiss mich nicht reden; II, Nur wer die Sehnsucht kennt; III, So lasst mich scheinen. Philine. Mignon, 'Kennst du das Land?'. Gutmann und Gutweib. Epiphanias. St Nepomuks Vorabend. Der Schäfer. Blumengruss. Gleich und Gleich. Die Spröde. Die Bekehrte. Frühling übers Jahr. Anakreons Grab. Dank des Paria. Phänomen. So lang man nüchtern ist. Hoch beglückt in deiner Liebe. Als ich auf dem Euphrat schiffte. Nimmer will ich dich verlieren! Ganymed. Gretchen vor dem Andachtsbild der Mater Dolorosa. Wanderers Nachtlied
Geraldine McGreevy sop Graham Johnson pf
Hyperion CDA67130 (76 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included. Recorded 2000

The first and abiding impression made by this recital is of air and grace. Graham Johnson's piano-playing is delightfully free yet exact. McGreevy's voice has a warmth in its still youthful glow; she also has the art of making it smile. In the first two Mignon songs she intensifies tone and emotion quite movingly; in Kennst du das Land? she may be not quite seeing the mountain and caves of the third verse or feeling the awesome power of the 'Flut', and in Philine she lacks the naughty zest for it. Yet always there are lovely things – as when she catches the expression of the statues as they put to Mignon their piteous question. She is also good (as are they both) at the boisterous Gutmann und Gutweib: a rarity and a curiosity that is lucky to find in Johnson so persuasive an advocate.

Christiane Oelze and Hans Peter Blochwitz
Italienisches Liederbuch
Christiane Oelze sop Hans Peter Blochwitz ten
Rudolf Jansen pf
Berlin Classics Ⓕ 0017482BC (78 minutes: DDD)
Texts included. Recorded c2002 ◉

These three excellent artists sensibly understate rather than overstate the songs' emotional content and where – about midway through the collection – the feelings become more immediate, the performers come forth with just the right amount of added intensity.

Christiane Oelze's fine-grained soprano, spirited readings and incisive diction fulfil just about every side of the songs assigned to her – from mocking, jealousy and anger to true love – and she wholly avoids the archness that afflicts some interpreters. Hans Peter Blochwitz, always a discerning Lieder singer, may have lost a little of his sweet tenor's bloom but compensates with a true understanding of the lyrical impulse that suffuses those wonderful love songs given to the male interpreter, especially the three successive, outright masterpieces beginning with 'Sterb' ich, so hüllt in Blumen'.

Rudolf Jansen deserves a notice to himself for his unravelling of all the intricacies of the often independent piano parts and for his outright mastery in giving the keyboard its due without ever stealing the thunder of the singers; his instrument is ideally balanced with the voices in a truthful recording. These songs are so remarkable that there will never be one definitive way of singing them. On the only other disc featuring a tenor, Schreier is a fuller-voiced, more 'interventionist' interpreter than Blochwitz: that pays huge dividends in some songs, less in others. In the end, your choice may be made through a preference for one singer over another: right now this reviewer is in thrall to Oelze and Blochwitz.

Peter Schreier
Mörike Lieder –Der Genesene an die Hoffnung; Ein Stündlein wohl vor Tag; Der Tambour; Nimmersatte Liebe; Fussreise; Verborgenheit; Im Frühling; Auf einer Wanderung; Der Gärtner; In der Frühe; Gebet; Neue Liebe; Wo find' ich Trost?; Frage und Antwort; Lebe wohl; Heimweh; Denk' es, o Seele!; Der Jäger; Storchenbotschaft; Bei einer Trauung; Selbstgeständis; Abschied
Peter Schreier ten Karl Engel pf
Orfeo C142981A (60 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included. Recorded 1996 ◉

Peter Schreier's ever-supple tenor, honed by keen-eyed intelligence and a verbal palate sharp enough to taste and try every last word, makes him a Wolf interpreter of the highest order. In this meticulously shaped programme of 22 of Wolf's eager settings of Mörike, one wonder appears after another. Schreier and his ever-sentient pianist, Karl Engel, move from a gentle awakening of love, which grows in intensity towards the innermost core of songs of doubt and fear, and on through a gallery of wonderfully dry, wry tableaux to the final farewell and the kicking of the critic downstairs. The first song here, Im Frühling, epitomises the equilibrium, security and entirety of performances which have grown from long-pondered consideration. The long, drowsy vowels, and Schreier's sensitivity to the high-register placing of crucial words of longing all fuse into the slow-walking movement of cloud, wing, river, breeze, as language becomes expanded and enriched by tone. Schreier's remarkable steadiness of line in Verborgenheit reveals the song's secrets only reluctantly: the fierce intensity of sudden illumination is all the more searing. Grotesquerie and poignancy coexist in Bei einer Trauung, and we feel every catch of the voice as Schreier turns weird and whimsical tale-teller in Storchenbotschaft.

Elisabeth Schwarzkopf
Mörike Lieder – Im Frühling; Auf eine Christblume I; h Lied vom Winde. Goethe Lieder –Philine; Mignon; Der Schäfer; Blumengruss; Frühling übers Jahr; Anakreons Grab; Phänomen; Ganymed. Spanisches Liederbuch – Mühvoll komm' ich und beladen; In dem Schatten meiner Locken; Bedeckt mich mit Blumen; Wer tat deinem Füsslein weh; Wehe der, die mir verstrickte. Italienisches Liederbuch – Nun lass uns Frieden schliessen. Sechs Lieder für eine Frauenstimme – Mausfallen-Sprüchlein. Sechs alte Weisen
Dame Elisabeth Schwarzkopf sop Gerald Moore pf

EMI Festspieldokumente mono 764905-2 (71 minutes: ADD). Texts included Ⓕ
Recorded live in 1958 ●●●

'A blissful experience of the purest lied art' reported the Salzburger Nachrichten on Schwarzkopf's recital. The recording derives from the Austrian Broadcasting Corporation's archive. It gives a marvellous sense of presence, recalling most vividly what it was that made the memory of Schwarzkopf's song recitals precious. First, the quality of voice, caught here at its purest and most radiant; then the full concentration of a total sensibility, emotion and intellect fused, upon the songs: every one of them lived a special life on each separate occasion. The riches of this recital are beyond the scope of a short review. Every song here deserves a paragraph to itself, and the appreciation of Gerald Moore's work would have a large share in each. The disc, for one who cares for Wolf's songs and the art of their performance, is beyond price.

Anne Sofie von Otter and Olaf Bär
Spanisches Liederbuch
Anne Sofie von Otter mez Olaf Bär bar Geoffrey Parsons pf
EMI Double Forte ② 575181-2 (109 minutes: DDD). Texts and translations included Ⓜ
Recorded 1992-94 ●

The songs are performed not in the published order but in one devised by Bär for several recitals of the set given by this trio, and now carried over into the recording studio. For the 10 religious songs the reordering works well. In any case here the two singers show a deep and rewarding comprehension of the agony and ecstasy of poems and music. Listen, too, to von Otter's sense of smiling wonder in 'Ach, des Knaben Augen' as the holy mother looks into her son's eyes. By contrast in 'Mühvoll komm' ich und beladen' she changes to a searing, soul-searching manner that captures completely the woman's remorse, magnificently so at the climactic 'Nimm mich an'. Bär is as tense and inward in the great 'Herr, was trägt der Boden hier', capturing the voices of penitent and Christ to perfection. Note, too, Parsons's deliberately heavy gait in 'Die du Gott gebarst'. There are problems, however, in the secular songs.

With von Otter, apart from downward transpositions that make the piano parts sound unduly dark and Parsons consequently a shade heavy-handed, there is little to quarrel with. She teases, flirts, falls in love with the best of them, alert with her words, but never overdoing the archness. Bär, though, is not only up against the perhaps more formidable challenge of Fischer-Dieskau (on DG) but also against his own reordering. He does not have the immense tonal range and emotional charge of the older baritone. 'Herz, verzage nicht geschwind' is broader, more biting in Fischer-Dieskau's reading, for instance, 'Ach im Maien' that much more mellifluous, but you could say that Bär's more contained, but by no means reticent approach has its own, Wolfian justification. But it is entirely Bär's fault that songs Nos 21 and 24, which should be sung as a group, lose some of their force when separated as here, thoughtfully as Bär sings each in its turn. However, the readings as a whole are worthy of the collection. There is more space around the voices than on the closer-miked DG set, where Fischer-Dieskau is very much a presence in the room with you. This newer version doesn't replace the old, but those who want another, fresh, valid view of the Spanisches Liederbuch or just want to hear von Otter in her element will wish to acquire these two absorbing discs.

Various Artists: Hugo Wolf Society Edition 🄷
Mörike Lieder – excerpts. Spanisches Liederbuch – excerpts. Italienisches Liederbuch – excerpts. Eichendorff Lieder – excerpts. Goethe Lieder – excerpts. Drei Gedichte von Michelangelo. Gedichte von Scheffel, Mörike, Goethe und Kerner – excerpts. Gedichte von Richard Reinick – excerpts. Gedichte nach Heine, Shakespeare und Lord Byron – excerpts
Marta Fuchs, Ria Ginster, Tiana Lemnitz, Elisabeth Rethberg, Alexandra Trianti sops Elena Gerhardt mez Karl Erb, John McCormack, Helge Roswaenge tens Herbert Janssen, Gerhard Hüsch bars Friedrich Schorr bass-bar Alexander Kipnis, Ludwig Weber basses with various pianists
EMI mono 566640-2 (375 minutes: ADD) Ⓜ
Texts and translations included
Recorded 1931-38 ●●●

The old Hugo Wolf Society recordings hold their place not only as regards the distinction of the readings but as evidence of the pioneering work done by Ernest Newman and Walter Legge in the promulgation of the composer's highly original style. Six volumes were issued on 78rpm discs between 1931 and 1938, but a planned seventh was not released as a set (because of the war intervening) until the LP reissue came out in 1981. Here a further six titles have been unearthed from the EMI archives. This is a cornucopia of delights for the Lieder lover. Gerhardt had the whole of the first volume to herself, and launches the project with a typical honesty of approach. Her slightly grand voice and inimitable style may not be to modern tastes but persist and you'll surely respond to the generosity of her singing. The next volumes are dominated by Hüsch, Janssen and Kipnis, to whom Legge assigned exactly the right pieces for their respective styles. All are deeply rewarding, but Hüsch in love-songs from the Spanish Songbook and Kipnis in the Michelangelo Songs and so much else make particularly memorable contributions. Among the women, the much underrated Greek soprano Alexandra Trianti brings just the right lightness of touch to some of the teasing, airy pieces from the Italian Songbook. Elisabeth Rethberg encompasses the grander passions of the Italian Songbook and is unsurpassed in the sorrowful abasement of 'Mühvoll komm' ich und beladen' from the Spanish Songbook. To round things off Gerhardt is heard again, in a newly issued version of a rarely heard, grief-laden song, 'Uber Nacht', on which she lavishes all her love for Wolf. The pianists from Bos to Moore are uniformly excellent, but it is Wolf and the singers who make this one of the great enterprises of the pre-war gramophone.

Iannis Xenakis

Greek/French 1922-2001

GROVE Xenakis was a French composer of Greek parentage and Romanian birth. In 1932 his family returned to Greece, and he was educated on Spetsai and at the Athens Polytechnic, where he studied engineering. In 1947 he arrived in Paris, where he became a member of Le Corbusier's architectural team, producing his first musical work, Metastasis, only in 1954, based on the design for the surfaces of the Philips pavilion to be built for the Brussels Exposition of 1958. This, with its divided strings and mass effects, had an enormous influence; but in ensuing works he moved on to find mathematical and computer means of handling large numbers of events, drawing on (for example) Gaussian distribution (ST/10, Atrées), Markovian chains (Analogiques) and game theory (Duel, Stratégie). Other interests were in electronic music (Bohor, 1962), ancient Greek drama (used in several settings) and instrumental virtuosity (Herma for piano, 1964; Nomos alpha for cello, 1966). His later output, chiefly of orchestral and instrumental pieces, is large, many works from the mid-1970s onwards striking back from modernist complexity to ostinatos and modes suggestive of folk music.

Knephas

A Colone. Nuits. Serment. Knephas. Medea
New London Chamber Choir; Critical Band / James Wood
Hyperion CDA66980 (58 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included. Recorded 1997 ○○○

This enterprising release is a great success, showing just how varied – and unintimidating – Xenakis's music can be. The performances are nothing short of phenomenal in their technical assurance and emotional power, and the recording is also something special, giving the singers just the right degree of space and resonance to project the often complex textures with all the necessary precision. The earliest works offer different angles on the composer's ultra-expressionist idiom, with Nuits (1967) adopting a very direct way of representing its anguished lament for the martyrs of Greece's struggle for freedom after 1945. Medea (also 1967) uses much more text, and its chant-like style has affinities with Stravinsky's Les noces, but the overall effect is much harsher, with abrasive yet imaginative instrumental writing. A Colone (1977) also has Stravinskian affinities, and the text (Sophocles's description of the delights of Colonus) prompts music which is uninhibitedly exuberant. This warmer, more celebratory side of Xenakis is carried over into Serment (1980), a short setting of a text derived from the Hippocratic Oath and not, one suspects, an entirely serious effort, though there is nothing trivial about it either. Finally, the superb Knephas ('Darkness') of 1990 begins in an appropriately unsparing manner, but ends with a hymnic apotheosis which recalls Messiaen in its harmonic character and warmth of atmosphere. Here is one of the 20th-century's most important musical voices, and this recording does it full justice.

Jan Dismas Zelenka

Bohemian 1679-1745

GROVE After serving Count Hartig in Prague, Zelenka became a double bass player in the royal orchestra at Dresden in 1710. He studied with Fux in Vienna and Lotti in Venice, 1715-16; from 1719 he remained in Dresden, except for a visit to Prague in 1723. Having gradually taken over the duties of the ailing Kapellmeister, Heinichen, he was made only church music composer (1735); Hasse was the new Kapellmeister. He composed mainly sacred works, among them three oratorios, 12 masses, and many other pieces; his output also includes a festival opera (1723, Prague), six chamber sonatas for oboes (c 1715) and other instrumental pieces. His music, like that of Bach (whom he knew), is notable for its adventurousness, its contrapuntal mastery and its harmonic invention.

Capriccios

Capriccios – No 2 in G; No 3 in F. Ⓟ
Concerto a 8 in G. Hipocondrie a 7 in A
Das Neu-Eröffnete Orchestre /Jürgen Sonnentheil
CPO CPO999 458-2 (61 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1996

This disc contains two of Zelenka's five Capriccios, a Concerto for eight instruments and the intriguingly titled Hipocondrie, which occupies ground somewhere between suite and concerto. Zelenka was skilled in the art of combining instruments of differing colours, ordering them about in a way that makes us wonder if he had a grudge against players. The horn-writing in the Capriccios is merciless, with uncommonly high parts often emerging in exposed moments in the texture. Zelenka's melodic facility, rhythmic imagination and instinctive feeling for effective instrumental ranges and colours are sufficient to sustain interest. There is an inventive freshness about his music which contains surprises at almost every turn. Sometimes, however, as in the finale of the Concerto in eight parts, sequential patterns are overworked, giving the movement a somewhat amorphous, unsatisfying shape. Initial rather good ideas, almost always arresting, are less well sustained than, say, Telemann's, even if they are sometimes bolder and more adventurous. Sonnentheil achieves spirited, amiable performances from Das

Neu-Eröffnete Orchestre. The two horns are excellent, and, if oboes and strings sound a shade unrefined occasionally, this does little to spoil enjoyment of an entertaining programme.

Trio Sonatas

Trio Sonatas –No 1 in F; No 3 in B flat; 🅿
No 4 in G minor
Ensemble Zefiro (Paolo Grazzi, Alfredo Bernardini obs Alberto Grazzi bn Manfred Kraemer vn Lorenz Duftschmid violone Gian Carlo Rado theorbo Rinaldo Alessandrini hpd/org)
Astrée Naïve E8563 (52 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1995 ●

Zelenka was one of a gifted group of composers associated with the Dresden court during the first half of the 18th century. The court orchestra, one of the best around at that time, boasted a particularly accomplished wind section, and it may have been for some of these players that Zelenka wrote his six trios. The sources have not survived complete in all cases, and the realisation, for example, of the bass parts in the First and Third Sonatas must always be conjectural. Ensemble Zefiro has thought carefully about this and has arrived at a solution which is both idiomatic and, it seems, in keeping with the surviving material. The playing is spirited and plentifully endowed with virtuosity. The oboists Paolo Grazzi and Alfredo Bernardini are technically secure and tastefully imaginative in their ornamentation. Bassoonist Alberto Grazzi is also fluent and furthermore a sensitive ensemble player. Keyboard continuo is stylishly provided by Rinaldo Alessandrini, sometimes playing harpsichord, at other times organ; and additional continuo support includes violone and theorbo. Readers so far unacquainted with these sonatas are in for a treat, for this is music rich in fantasy, exciting for its virtuosic content, unusually extended in the working out of its ideas, and effectively constructed.

Trio Sonatas –No 2 in G minor, No 5 in F; 🅿
No 6 in C minor
Ensemble Zefiro (Paolo Grazzi, Alfredo Bernardini obs Alberto Grazzi bn Roberto Sensi db Rolf Lislevand theorbo Rinaldo Alessandrini hpd/org)
Astrée Naïve E8511 (52 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1993 ●

For sheer élan and spirit the Baroque instrumental players on this disc take some beating. Zelenka's six sonatas for two oboes, bassoon and continuo are among the most rewarding and at times most difficult pieces of Baroque chamber music in the oboe repertory. Indeed, pieces demanding such virtuosity from these instruments were probably without precedent at the time (1715). The writing is often such as to make us wonder if they were destined for friends or for enemies of the composer. Here, then, we are treated to some splendidly invigorating playing of music which offers a great deal beyond face value. The sounds of the solo instruments themselves, together with an effective continuo group of double-bass, harpsichord/organ and theorbo are admirably captured in the recording.

The Lamentations of Jeremiah

Michael Chance counterten John Mark Ainsley 🅿 ten Michael George bass
Chandos Baroque Players
Hyperion Helios CDH55106 (73 minutes: DDD). Ⓑ
Texts and translations included. Recorded 1990

Between the incomparable settings by Thomas Tallis and the extremely austere one by Stravinsky (which he called Threni) the Lamentations of Jeremiah, have attracted surprisingly few composers. Perhaps the predominantly sombre tone, without even the dramatic opportunities presented by the Dies irae in a Requiem, is offputting. Be that as it may, Zelenka showed remarkable resourcefulness in his 1722 setting for the electoral chapel at Dresden, where he was Kapellmeister. His musical language is in many ways similar to that of JS Bach but there are also daring turns of phrase which are entirely personal. The six Lamentations feature each singer twice; this performance is intimate, slightly spacious in tempo and with a resonant acoustic.

Sub olea pacis et palma virtutis

Noémi Kiss, Anna Hlavenková sops Markus 🅿
Forster counterten Jaroslav Březina, Adam Zdunikowski tens Aleš Procházka bass
Czech Boys' Choir; Musica Florea; Musica Aeterna; Ensemble Philidor / Marek Štryncl
Supraphon ② SU3520-2 (94 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Text and translation included

From obsequiousness comes greatness. Coupled to an allegorical play, designed to laud not only a Habsburg emperor (Charles VI) at his coronation in Prague in 1723 but also his predecessors who had controlled the Czech lands since 1526, is Italianate music of vigour, grandeur and tenderness. It simply needs to be experienced. Sub olea pacis is one of only four Latin plays with music, out of hundreds, to survive complete and is the only one which identifies the composer; Zelenka seems to have written most of the music in a hurry; the libretto mentions the presence of dancers but the score contains no dance interludes, so what they did or what they represented is unknown. Sensibly, the play itself has been omitted in this recording. Zelenka's contribution is operatic and, after a three-part Overture, matches the drama with a prologue, three acts and epilogue. There are recitatives, choruses and arias. Let's now dispense with an irritating technical flaw. First and second violins are placed on either side of the podium (as they should be) but the firsts aren't always stable. They tend to move within their own area, sometimes merging with the seconds on the right.

Otherwise the recording is very good: spacious with no gimmicky close-ups to give the period instruments a bad sound and the solo singers an artificial presence.

Throughout the performance, Stryncl's pacing of the music and balancing of dynamics show concern not only for his colleagues but also for making sense of the words themselves. His ability to float a flexible rhythm is keen, though, occasionally, he veers towards rigidity. Look out for those remarkable arias that pit solo instruments against singers, particularly No 22 where a chalumeau (precursor of the clarinet, here played by Christian Leitherer) duets with a soprano. So there you have it, a magnificent work. And Zelenka, anticipating Haydn, signed off with the words 'Laus Deo'. Most appropriate – which is another way of saying that this set is a significant addition to the recorded repertoire. Do listen and delight in what it has to offer.

Alexander Zemlinsky

Austrian 1871-1942

GROVE Zemlinsky was a pupil of Fuchs at the Vienna Conservatory (1890-92). In 1895 he became a close friend of Schoenberg's; he also had encouragement from Mahler, who presented his opera Es war einmal at the Hofoper in 1900. His orchestral fantasy Die Seejungfrau dates from these years. By this time he was working as a theatre conductor in Vienna his later appointments were at the German theatre in Prague (1911-27) and the Kroll Opera in Berlin (1927-31). In 1933 he fled to Vienna, and then in 1938 to the USA. From the same background as Schoenberg, and similarly influenced by Mahler and Strauss, he developed an impassioned style in such works as his Second Quartet (1914), one-act operas Eine florentinische Tragödie (1917) and Der Zwerg (1922), and Lyric Symphony (1923). Later works, including the opera Der Kreidekreis (1932), the Sinfonietta (1934) and the Fourth Quartet (1936), are influenced more by Weill and German neo-classicism.

Sechs Gesänge, Op 13

Zemlinsky Sechs Gesänge, Op 13 Mahler Lieder eines fahrenden Gesellen. Rückert-Lieder
Anne Sofie von Otter mez North German Radio Symphony Orchestra / Sir John Eliot Gardiner
DG 439 928-2GH (56 minutes: DDD Ⓕ
Texts and translations included
Recorded live in 1993 ●●

This is another absolute winner for both von Otter and Gardiner. The three works make an ideal programme, the two Mahler pieces forming a sensible frame for the central Zemlinsky. In all three offerings von Otter offers that peculiar gift of hers consisting of utter conviction allied to wonderful musicianship. In terms of tempo, phrasing, balance and sheer interpretative know-how, the pair take no false steps and very many fruitful ones. You will look hard to find a version of Lieder eines fahrenden Gesellen filled with such sense of emotions being felt and expressed so immediately. Von Otter and Gardiner make the work live here and now for our time, Gardiner rewardingly alert to every nuance and subtlety in Mahler's orchestral writing.

The Zemlinsky is the real revelation, though, far preferable to the piano version of these shadowy Maeterlinck settings. These songs of sexual liberation and fin de siècle decadence, which mirror precisely the world of Jugendstil as exemplified in Klimt's paintings – and are equally multi-mirrored, highly coloured and erotic – cry out for instrumental clothing. Gardiner revels in the dream-world orchestration while von Otter perfectly catches their hot-house atmosphere and underlines the texts' meaning without ever indulging in any overemphases. It's almost a relief to come up into the open air of Mahler's Rückert setting, 'Ich atmet' einen linden Duft', where von Otter lightens her timbre, bringing a gentle smile into her tone. In these settings, she once more finds the right 'face' for each song – even expanding grandly into the affirmations at the end of 'Um Mitternacht' – and then ends a compelling disc with just the other-worldly serenity predicated by 'Ich bin der Welt'. There's no need to seek out any other recording of these pieces.

Eine lyrische Symphonie, Op 18

Zemlinsky Eine lyrische Symphonie, Op 18[b]
Berg Lyric Suite (arr cpsr). Fünf Orchesterlieder nach Ansichtskartentexten von Peter Altenberg, Op 4[a]
[ab]Vlatka Orsanić sop [b]James Johnson bar
South West German Radio Symphony Orchestra / Michael Gielen
Arte Nova 74321 27768-2 (67 minutes: DDD) Ⓢ
Recorded 1994 ●

A first-class bargain, let down by the fact that the words of the vocal pieces are not provided and a slightly but not disagreeably lean orchestral sound. Gielen has the reputation of a specialist in contemporary music, of 'advanced'-contemporary music in particular, and that might imply that he will take a coolish view of Zemlinsky. In fact he responds with a beautiful sense of long, lyrical line, and although his orchestra lacks the last degree of sumptuousness, his accuracy and clarity of detail reveal more of the subtle beauties of the score than some more opulent readings, as well as bolder vehemence. His control of tempo and his readiness to slow the music to breathless stillness are both admirable. These virtues would count for a lot less if the soloists were merely competent. Both are more than that. Orsanic is clean and accurate; although she does not hover as ecstatically as she might in the fourth song, she responds to the solo string writing at its opening with an imaginative fining-down of tone. Even so, she sounds rather more at home in the Berg Altenberg Lieder, where she reacts intelligently to the texts and opens out to lyrical vehemence at the end of the cycle. Johnson is still better, a fine lyric baritone with dignity, clear diction and admirable phrasing. The pieces from the Lyric Suite are exceptionally well done, richness of texture combining with excellent precision of attack, fine solo playing and warm expressiveness. In sum, Gielen's reading of the Zemlinsky will not disappoint any admirer of the work, regardless of their bank balance.

Additional recommendation
Eine lyrische Symphonie, Op 18
Voigt sop Terfel bass-bar Vienna Philharmonic Orchestra / Sinopoli
DG 449 179-2GH (49 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ

A sumptuously rich performance from Sinopoli and the Vienna Phil, with both soloists on superb form.

Eine florentinische Tragödie

Eine florentinische Tragödie[a]. Eine lyrische Symphonie, Op 18[b]. Symphonische Gesänge[c]. 3 Psalms
[a]Iris Vermillion mez Bianca; [a]Heinz Kruse ten Guido Bardi; [a]Albert Dohmen bar Simone; [b]Alessandra Marc sop, [b]Håkan Hagegård bar, [c]Willard White bass
Royal Concertgebouw Orchestra / Riccardo Chailly
Double Decca ② 473 734-2DF2 Ⓜ
(156 minutes: DDD)
Recorded [a]1996 ●

A Florentine Tragedy is a disturbing, shocking piece, but to make its fullest impact it also needs to sound ravishingly beautiful. Zemlinsky's sumptuous scoring often demands an orchestra of the Royal Concertgebouw's stature, and in this reading it sounds quite magnificent. But the score also needs a conductor of subtlety and shrewdness to point up the two passages of con- strasting serene lyricism, one where Simone's wife Bianca assures Count Bardi of her eternal love and another when husband and wife redis- cover their love for each other. Vermillion is very fine at both these points, her mezzo timbre adding warmth to her line. Kruse is admirable too, fining down his ringing tenor in that duet scene, and, as Simone, Dohmen is forceful and dangerous. But Chailly is the real star, pacing the opera so well that it seems over in no time, drawing richly complex but never muddy tex- tures from his remarkable orchestra.

On hearing the Alma Mahler songs one is struck by the ben- efits of their orchestration. But here again, exquisitely though Vermillion sings these songs, Chailly must take at least half the credit. Each song is taken faster than in most recordings with piano, and every one of them gains from it in impulsive urgency. In Zemlinsky's opera and Alma Mahler's songs the recording leaves noth- ing to be desired: the colours are rich and clean.

Der König Kandaules

James O 'Neal ten König Kandaules; Monte Pederson bar Gyges; Nina Warren sop Nyssia; Klaus Häger bass Phedros; Peter Galliard ten Syphax; Mariusz Kwiecien bar Nicomedes; Kurt Gysen bass Pharnaces; Simon Yang bass Philebos; Ferdinand Seiler ten Sebas; Guido Jentjens bar Archelaos; Hamburg State Philharmonic Orchestra / Gerd Albrecht
Capriccio ② 60 071/2 (128 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded live in 1996
Notes, text and translation included

Der König Kandaules, based on a play by André Gide, is Zemlinsky's last opera, written during the Nazis' rise to power and complete in short score when he fled to America in 1938. He showed it to his pupil Artur Bodanzky, then a principal conductor at the Met, who seems to have warned him that the libretto would not be acceptable – in one scene Kandaules tricks his wife into undressing in front of a fisherman he has recently befriended, then into sleeping with him. Zemlinsky never completed the orchestration of Der König Kandaules but left a large number of indications of scoring. Antony Beaumont's orchestration sounds perfectly convincing. When two excerpts from the score were performed and recorded in 1994 it already looked as though a major work by Zemlinsky was about to be revealed. And that is the case: a marvellous and quite characteristic score, but in some ways a dismaying one. All the orchestral richness and the voluptuously singing lines that one expects are there, but wedded to a plot that seems all too accurately to reflect the disorder and disillusion of the times in which it was written.

Nyssia, the wife so chaste and beautiful that until now no one but Kandaules has seen her unveiled, is portrayed in music of quite sumptuous allure, but her reaction to his betrayal is more Salome-like than tragic: she orders the fisherman Gyges to kill her husband and take his place, in her bed as well as on the throne. Gyges, the poor but honest peasant, is a murderer himself: he killed his own wife because, as Kandaules would have agreed, she was his property. And Kandaules the seeming altruist, whose greatest pleasure is to share his wealth with others, is in fact simply boasting of his good fortune: even his wife's beauty is a sort of torment to him if other men are not jealous of it. And in Zemlinsky's musical portrayal the more his baseness becomes obvious the more glamorous and sympathetic he is. The performance is a fine one, O 'Neal lacking only the last touch of heroic vocal stature for Kandaules, Warren only a little stretched by the Ariadne-like role of Nyssia, Pederson first class (a moment or two of suspect intonation aside) as Gyges. Albrecht is perfectly at home in this sort of music, the orchestra's admirable richness of tone does not obscure detail, and the recording is atmospheric (stage business audible) but clear. Zemlinsky's reputation can only be enhanced by this ravishing, richly complex, disturbing opera.

Bernd Alois Zimmermann

German 1918-1970

GROVE Zimmermann encountered the music of Stravinsky and Milhaud while serving in the army, and in 1942 was able to return to studies, with Lemacher and Jarnach; he also attended the courses given by Fortner and Leibowitz at Darmstadt, 1948-50, and most of his published works date from after this period. From 1957 he taught at the Cologne Musikhochschule. At first he brought together Stravinskian neo-classicism and 12-note technique, but in the mid-1950s he passed through extreme Webernism to a style rich in allusions and quotations, expressing an aesthetic of 'pluralism'. His main works of this kind include the opera Die Soldaten (1965) and the Requiem für einen jungen Dichter (1969); later his style became sparer. His output includes concertos (Dialoge for two pianos, 1960) and other orchestral scores and chamber music, these instrumental works often cast as imaginary ballets. His writings throw light on the state of composition in his day.

Requiem für einen jungen Dichter

Vlatka Orsanić sop James Johnson bar Michael Rotschopf, Bernhard Schir spkrs Christoph Grund org Alexander von Schlippenbach Jazz Band; Cologne Radio Chorus; Stuttgart Radio Chorus; Edinburgh Festival Chorus; Bratislava Slovak Chorus; Bratislava City Chorus; South-West German Radio Symphony Orchestra / Michael Gielen

Sony Classical SK61995 (64 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1995 ●●

Zimmermann's Requiem for a young Poet is a humbling polyphony of 20th-century misdeeds – riveting, provocative, uncompromising and as essential to our understanding of 1960s 'serious' music as The Beatles are to an informed perception of that decade's pop culture. In fact, the two momentarily converge when Zimmermann quotes The Beatles' song Hey Jude (something of a horrific pun, especially given the Requiem's use of the German language and of Hitler's voice in particular). The work opens to a hollow drone, a sort of post-Holocaust Zarathustra framing a gallery of voices, three of them, like Zimmermann's own, being suicides: the poets Vladimir Mayakovsky, Konrad Bayer and (via Mayakovsky) Sergei Essenin. The spoken word is crucial throughout; in fact Bayer provided the Requiem's chilling motto: 'What can we hope for? There is nothing that awaits us except death'.

The vast opening section consists of a 'Prolog', two 'Requiems' (each launched to an agonised choral cry) and a 'Ricercar'. Taped voices recall major post-war cultural, religious and political figures (sometimes in person): Wittgenstein, for example, who was associated with the Vienna Circle of which Bayer was a member. Recited extracts from his 'Philosophical Investigations' (relating specifically to the idea of 'language games') precede the voice of Pope John XXIII; then Hitler, Chamberlain, the former Greek Prime Minister Andras Papandreou, readings from Pound, Schwitters, Camus etc; musical fragments by Wagner, Milhaud and Messiaen – a tumbling stream of consciousness where thinkers and artists have the definite upper hand. Most texts are spoken in German and although there are no detailed texts or translations provided, one presumes that the point of quotation was more a matter of evoking memory and specific events than pondering the wisdom of those present. The work's brief later sections rely more on voices and instruments than on pre-recorded reportage (jazz is a strong presence), although the latter returns with a vengeance for a deeply pessimistic 'Dona nobis pacem', with Beethoven (the Choral Symphony), von Ribbentrop, Stalin, Goebbels, Churchill and Bayer himself in fateful attendance. The Requiem climaxes to the unsettling sound of massed demonstrations and ends with a forcefully punctuated choral declamation (or affirmation) of the words 'Do... /na... /no... /bis... /pa... /cem'! Fans of Zimmermann's opera Die Soldaten will have already braced themselves.

'The piece is inscribed to all the catastrophes that the human race has brought down upon itself and addresses those aspects of human behaviour that have opened up the way to such a Day of Wrath or that threaten to do so.' Hiekel's words ring true but barely touch the aural scope and emotional impact of this incredible piece, its sustained tension, telling juxtapositions (voices that echo or mix in various perspectives), the devastating effect of those 'montage-like' chords and the rude (but rare) invasions of humour. Michael Gielen, with his impressive gallery of skills, is the ideal interpreter.

COLLECTIONS

Classical GOOD
CD
GUIDE
2004

Orchestral 1161

Chamber 1175

Instrumental 1185

Choral 1211

Vocal 1221

Early Music

Chant 1272

Medieval-Mid Renaissance 1274

High Renaissance-Baroque 1298

ORCHESTRAL

Cello Concertos

Boccherini (arr Grützmacher) Cello Concerto in B flat, G48 Bruch Kol Nidrei, Op 47 Elgar Cello Concerto in E minor, Op 85 Haydn (arr Gevaërt) Cello Concerto No 2 in D, HobVII*b*/2 – Allegro moderato; Adagio H
Pablo Casals vc London Symphony Orchestra / Sir Landon Ronald; BBC Symphony Orchestra / Sir Adrian Boult
Biddulph mono LAB144 (79 minutes: ADD) Ⓜ
Recorded 1936-46 ●

The leonine growl that prefaces Elgar's most introspective orchestral masterpiece is played here with uncompromising defiance, whereas the weary solo ascent that follows can rarely – if ever – have conveyed a deeper sense of disorientation. Casals' handling of the solo line is wistful, sometimes wilful, profoundly personal and ideally accompanied by the ever-attentive Sir Adrian Boult. No other performance is quite as successful in contrasting the 'brave front' of Elgar's bolder tuttis with the ineffable sadness of his solo writing. Occasional hiccups in the cello line (the odd spot of discoloration) go for nothing and Casals' distant groaning merely serves – like Glenn Gould's humming and Toscanini's singing – to compound an impression of total commitment.

Biddulph's annotation relates how a changing critical climate gradually became sympathetic to Casals's account of the Elgar Concerto (initial reactions were fairly hostile), and how Britain's handling of the Franco situation in Spain deeply offended Casals. Projected sessions never materialised, and the Haydn Concerto recording that is here issued for the first time (it was set down the day after the Elgar) remained incomplete. What we do have, however, is very well recorded, typically eloquent and full of interpretative incident, with sundry expressive subtleties and an especially memorable account of the Adagio.

Kol Nidrei is given one of the slowest, purest and most deeply felt readings imaginable, perfectly reflecting the pain, resolution and quiet victory that mark the three stages of repentance (Kol Nidrei is the pivotal evening prayer for the Jewish Day of Atonement). Transfers are, again, excellent (Ward Marston was at the control desk), and if you are in search of 'The Essential Casals' – no, 'The Quintessential Casals' – then you need look no further.

Les introuvables de Jacqueline du Pré
Bach Cello Suites – No 1 in G, BWV1007; No 2 in D minor, BWV1008 (rec live 1962) Beethoven 12 Variations on Handel's 'See the conqu'ring hero comes', Wo045$_j$. Seven Variations in E flat on Mozart's 'Bei Männern, welche Liebe fühlen', Wo046$_j$. 12 Variations in F on 'Ein Mädchen oder Weibchen', Op 66$_j$ (recorded live in 1970). Cello Sonatas$_c$ – No 3 in A, Op 69; No 5 in D, Op 105 No 2 Bruch Kol Nidrei, Op 47$_a$ Chopin Cello Sonata, Op 65$_j$ Delius Cello Concerto$_e$ Dvořák Cello Concerto in B minor, B191$_g$. Silent woods, B182$_g$ Elgar Cello Concerto in E minor, Op 85$_d$ Fauré Elégie, Op 24$_a$ Franck Violin Sonata in A$_j$ (arr vc/pf) Handel Oboe Concerto in G minor, HWV287$_b$ (arr vc/pf Slatter. rec live 1961) Haydn Cello Concertos – No 1 in C$_h$; No 2 in D$_d$ Monn (arr Schoenberg) Cello Concerto in G minor$_d$ Saint-Saëns Cello Concerto No 1 in A minor, Op 33$_f$ Schumann Cello Concerto in A minor, Op 129$_f$
Jacqueline du Pré vc $_a$Gerald Moore, $_b$Ernest Lush, $_c$Stephen Kovacevich pfs $_d$London Symphony Orchestra / Sir John Barbirolli; $_e$Royal Philharmonic Orchestra / Sir Malcolm Sargent; $_f$New Philharmonia Orchestra, $_g$Chicago Symphony Orchestra, $_h$English Chamber Orchestra / Daniel Barenboim $_j$pf Ⓑ
EMI ⑥ 568132-2 (857 minutes: ADD) ●●

As the title suggests, this fine six-disc retrospective of Jacqueline du Pré's recording career – a mere 10 years long – was masterminded by French EMI. The wonder was that right from the start Jacqueline du Pré was mature in her artistry, and it is good that from the period even before the first official EMI sessions the collection includes three BBC recordings: Bach's Cello Suites Nos 1 and 2 and a Handel sonata arranged from the Oboe Concerto in G minor. Those early BBC recordings are inevitably flawed, but the sheer scale of the artistry is never in doubt. Of the handful of items recorded by EMI in July 1962 with Gerald Moore accompanying, only Bruch's Kol Nidrei is included.

The Delius was du Pré's first concerto recording, and she was not nearly as much at ease as she came to be later. The CD transfers do not minimise any of the flaws in the original recordings, notably the disappointing sound given to her Chicago recording of the Dvořák Concerto. Not only is the orchestral sound both coarse and thin with a high degree of background hiss, the cello is balanced far too close. Even with that balance, one registers clearly the wide dynamic range of du Pré's playing, down to a whispered pianissimo. It was right to include it and also the cello sonata recordings of Chopin and Franck, the last recordings ever made by du Pré in December 1971. The tone may not have been quite so even, but the fire and warmth are undiminished. All the concerto recordings are welcome, with the tear-laden quality in the slow movement of the Schumann matching that in the Elgar. It is good that the supreme Beethoven sonata recordings she made with Stephen Bishop (later Kovacevich) are included here, both sparkling and darkly intense. From the Beethoven series recorded at the 1970 Edinburgh Festival by the BBC only the three sets of variations are included. A must for anyone who was ever magnetised by du Pré's playing.

Piano Concertos

Addinsell Warsaw Concerto Gottschalk (orch Hazell) Grande fantaisie triomphale sur l'hymne national brésilien, RO108
Litolff Concerto Symphonique No 4 in D minor, Op 102 – Scherzo
Rachmaninov Piano Concerto No 2 in C minor, Op 18
Cristina Ortiz pf
Royal Philharmonic Orchestra / Moshe Atzmon
Decca 414 348-2DH (58 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1984

The C minor Concerto of Rachmaninov symbolises Romanticism at its ripest. Its combination of poetry and sensuous warmth with languorously memorable melodic lines balanced by exhilarating pianistic brilliance avoids any suggestion of sentimentality. The simple chordal introduction from the soloist ushers in one of the composer's most luscious tunes, yet the slow movement develops even greater ardour in its melodic contour, and the composer holds back a further haunting expressive idea to bring a lyrical contrast to the scintillating finale.

The genuinely inspired pastiche Warsaw Concerto by Richard Addinsell has a principal theme worthy to stand alongside those of Rachmaninov and its layout shows satisfying craftsmanship. Ortiz plays this main theme with great affection and she is equally beguiling in the delicious Litolff Scherzo. The effect here is of elegance rather than extrovert brilliance: this is reserved for the Gottschalk Grande fantaisie triomphale, which is played with a splendid panache that almost covers its inherent vulgarity and certainly emphasises its ingenuous charm. Throughout the recording balance is realistic and the reverberation adds an attractive bloom.

Trumpet Concertos

Baroque Trumpet Concertos
Albinoni Concerto in B flat, Op 7 No 3$_b$
Baldassare Sonata for Cornett, Strings and Continuo in F$_b$ Corelli Sonata for Trumpet and Strings in D
Franceschini Sonata for Two Trumpets, Strings and Continuo in D (Friedrich) A Marcello Oboe Concerto in D minor$_b$ Torelli Sonata a 5 con tromba, G7 Viviani Capricci armonici – Sonata prima
Vivaldi (rev Malipiero) Concerto for Two Trumpets and Strings in C, RV537$_a$ Håkan Hardenberger, ^{a}Reinhold Friedrich tpts
I Musici
Philips 442 131-2PH (54 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Items marked $_b$ transcribed for trumpet
Recorded 1993

Listeners will revel in Hardenberger's highly exacting playing and his silky articulation and rhythmic discipline – the Vivaldi is as high-tech and effortless as you will ever hear. I Musici are a curious choice of accompanists. Still sporting their timelessly vigorous and yet unashamedly Mediterranean approach to Baroque chamber playing, there is quite a temperamental polarity here, one would suspect, between their style and Hardenberger's Nordic and less overtly emotional playing. The result, however, is not as marked as you might expect, since Hardenberger vocalises more in this recording than in the past (all slow movements are warmer and less 'worked out' than in previous discs of this nature) and he responds to I Musici's full-blooded playing in a similarly jaunty way. The Marcello D minor Concerto has some especially sweet moments.

Violin Concertos

Heifetz the Supreme H
Bach Violin Partita No 2 in D minor, BWV1004 – Chaconne Brahms Violin Concerto in D, Op 77$_a$
Bruch Scottish Fantasy, Op 46$_b$
Gershwin (arr Heifetz) Three Preludes$_c$
Glazunov Violin Concerto in A minor, Op 82$_d$
Sibelius Violin Concerto in D minor, Op 47$_e$
Tchaikovsky Violin Concerto in D, Op 35$_f$
Jascha Heifetz vn $_c$Brooks Smith pf
$_{aef}$Chicago Symphony Orchestra / $_{af}$Fritz Reiner; $_b$New Symphony Orchestra / $_b$Sir Malcolm Sargent; $_d$RCA Victor Symphony Orchestra / $_{de}$Walter Hendl
RCA Red Seal ② 74321 63470-2 Ⓜ
(154 minutes: ADD). Recorded 1955-65

For once a record company's hype is totally justified. Heifetz was and is supreme. Witness how he plays the Bach 'Chaconne', with an extraordinary range of dynamic and feeling, and a total grip on the structure. The subtlety of his bowing is a thing to marvel at. This is a superb and indispensable anthology, excellently accompanied too. How persuasively Reiner shapes the opening of the Brahms, and Sargent the Scottish Fantasy; how tenderly Heifetz plays the 'Canzonetta' of the Tchaikovsky, and then astonishes us with his quicksilver brilliance in the finale. The violin's first entry in the Sibelius is quite Elysian, and Heifetz's tone in the slow movement sends shivers down the spine. He discovered all the romantic charm in the Glazunov concerto, and virtually made it his own. And how good that the selection ends with Gershwin, sparklingly syncopated and bluesy by turns: nothing else here better shows the flexibility of the Heifetz bow arm, even if the microphones are too close.

Gidon Kremer
Brahms Violin Concerto in D, Op 77$_b$ Hindemith Violin Sonata in E flat, Op 11$_a$ Schnittke Quasi una Sonata$_a$ Schumann Violin Concerto in D minor, Op posth$_c$ Sibelius Violin Concerto in D minor, Op 47$_c$ Weber Grand duo concertant, J204$_a$
Gidon Kremer vn $_a$Andrei Gavrilov pf $_b$Berlin Philharmonic Orchestra / Herbert von Karajan; $_c$Philharmonia Orchestra / Riccardo Muti
EMI Double Forte ② 569334-2 (151 minutes: ADD) Ⓜ
Recorded 1976-82

It would be hard to imagine a finer showcase for Kremer's talent. The Schumann has been a benchmark performance for some years, strong and purposeful in the outer movements, hushed and dedicated in the central slow movement. With Muti a challenging yet sympathetic partner, the Sibelius is also given a remarkable performance, notable not just for Kremer's expressive warmth, but for his inner intensity in the great opening melodies of the first two movements, each played as a hushed meditation, but with the first flowing freely, fanciful and poetic, not too slow for an Allegro moderato. The finale is then fast and volatile.

Kremer's glowing account of the Brahms Concerto was his first collaboration with Karajan and plainly inspired them both. The slow movement possesses poise and purity, leading to a beautifully sprung account of the finale, with dance rhythms brought out. The analogue recording is comparably spacious. In the three new items Gavrilov proves a comparably inspired partner, with the Weber so winningly characterised – fiery in the first movement, dedicated in the Andante and exuberant in the finale – that one almost forgets the original clarinet version, so satisfying is the transformation. The early Hindemith Sonata can rarely have been played with such warmth and intensity, and the Schnittke work, full of extended, pregnant pauses, is superbly held together by the concentrated interplay of the performers, an astonishing 20-minute tapestry.

American Orchestral

American Dreams

Barber Adagio for Strings, Op 11 Canning Fantasy on a Hymn Tune Carmichael (arr Van Cleve/Dant): Johnny Appleseed Suite – Prayer and Cathedral Vision Carpenter Sea Drift Chadwick Symphonic Sketches – Noël Foote Suite in E, Op 63 – Pizzicato and Adagietto Gershwin (arr cpsr): Lullaby
Indianapolis Symphony Orchestra / Raymond Leppard
Decca 458 157-2DH (61 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1997 ●

A most appealing concert, featuring a healthy sprinkling of rare Americana which deserve to be much better known. George Whitefield Chadwick's Yuletide evocation, 'Noël', forms the enchanting curtain-raiser. Next comes Barber's ubiquitous Adagio in a decent enough, if hardly memorable rendering. The spirit of Tchaikovsky (and the Scherzo from his Fourth Symphony in particular) hovers benignly over the pizzicato outer portions of the second movement of Bostonian Arthur Foote's Op 63 Suite in E (1907-8); by contrast, the lyrical Adagietto at its core radiates a chaste and noble eloquence. Anyone who has ever responded to the likes of Griffes and Loeffler will also surely revel in the exquisitely wrought, thoroughly impressionistic progress of John Alden Carpenter's powerful 1933 tone-poem inspired by Whitman's Sea Drift, while lovers of VW's Tallis Fantasia will detect a kindred radiance and mastery of string sonority in Thomas Canning's Fantasy on a Hymn Tune (conceived during the Second World War when the composer was teaching mechanics at a Nebraska air-base). That just leaves Gershwin's lilting Lullaby for strings and the tuneful, touchingly sincere 'Prayer and Cathedral Vision' from Hoagy Carmichael's Johnny Appleseed Suite. Throughout, Raymond Leppard draws a consistently alert and affectionate response from his Indianapolis band, and their efforts have been very well served by the Decca sound engineers (though the acoustic of Indianapolis's Hilbert Circle Theater is not, in all truthfulness, of the most flattering). All told, an admirably enterprising and rewarding issue.

American Tapestry

Griffes The White Peacock Hovhaness Symphony No 2, 'Mysterious Mountain', Op 132 Ives Orchestral Set No 1, 'Three Places in New England'
Piston Suite, The Incredible Flutist
Schuman New England Triptych
Dallas Symphony Orchestra / Andrew Litton
Dorian DOR90224 (73 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1995 ●●

A dazzling calling-card for the formidable technical and interpretative skills of the Litton/Dallas Symphony partnership, featuring five American masters at their most approachable; an ideal introduction for anyone yet to dip a toe into the vast range of repertoire beyond Gershwin, Copland and Barber. We kick off in exhilarating style with William Schuman's marvellous New England Triptych of 1956. Taking its cue from hymn tunes by Schuman's countryman William Billings (1746-1800), the work comprises two bustling tableaux framing a central meditation ('When Jesus wept') of exalted beauty and compassion. Next comes Charles Griffes's gorgeous The White Peacock – a transatlantic cousin, if you will, to Debussy's Prélude à l'après-midi d'un faune. With the first of Ives's Three Places in New England, for all the fastidious refinement on show, Litton's direction remains oddly earthbound and short on atmosphere. Otherwise, all goes swimmingly, the giddy, increasingly hilarious din of the central 'Putnam's Camp' dashingly well conveyed. No grumbles, either, about Litton's clean-limbed, purposeful way with Alan Hovhaness's Mysterious Mountain (his Second Symphony, composed in 1955 for Stokowski and the Houston Symphony), a serene yet agreeably sturdy score. Lastly, there's the crowd-pleasing concert suite that Walter Piston fashioned from his 1938 ballet score, The Incredible Flutist. It's a delectably tuneful and witty confection, crammed with indelible invention (who could fail to be seduced by the languid charms of the 'Tango of the Merchant's Daughters' or 'Siciliana'?). Rest assured, Litton and his terrific band do Piston absolutely proud. The glorious acoustic of Dallas's Eugene McDermott Hall lends an enticing glow to a sound picture of bewitching tonal naturalness and stunning range (bass-drum fanciers will have a field-day in both outer movements of the Schuman). A classy collection indeed.

British Orchestral

The Beecham Collection – Delius H
An Arabesk[dfh]. A Mass of Life – Part 2 No 3: Prelude[h]. Songs of Sunset – Parts 1-7[bdfh]; Part 8[cegi]. I-Brasil[ah]. Le ciel est pardessus le toit[ej]. Cradle Song[ej]. Irmelin Rose[ej]. Klein Venevil[eh]. The Nightingale[ej]. Twilight Fancies[ej]. The Violet[eh]. The Violet[ej]. Whither[eh]
[a]Dora Labbette sop [b]Olga Haley, [c]Nancy Evans mezzos [d]Roy Henderson, [e]Redvers Llewellyn bars [f]London Select Choir; [g]BBC Chorus; [h]London Philharmonic Orchestra; [i]Royal Philharmonic Orchestra / Sir Thomas Beecham [j]pf
Somm Recordings mono SOMM-BEECHAM8 Ⓜ
(74 minutes: ADD). Recorded 1929-46 ●

The Beecham Collection – Handel H
Piano Concerto in A (arr Beecham)[a]. The Gods Go a'Begging[b] – Introduction; Minuet; Hornpipe; Musette; Tambourine; Gavotte; Sarabande; Fugato. The Gods Go a'Begging[c] – Introduction; Larghetto; Gavotte; Allegro; Ensemble; Bourrée
The Origin of Design[d]
[a]Lady Betty Humby Beecham pf [abd]London Philharmonic Orchestra; [c]Royal Philharmonic Orchestra / Sir Thomas Beecham
Somm Recordings mono SOMM-BEECHAM7 Ⓜ
(75 minutes: ADD). Recorded 1932-49

Thanks to Shirley, Lady Beecham, we have here a splendid range of Beecham recordings from Sir Thomas's personal archive, most of them never issued before. The great treasure is the live recording of Delius's orchestral song-cycle to words by Ernest Dowson, Songs of Sunset. Rob Cowan has already described the performance as 'achingly beautiful', and that is no exaggeration. It was recorded at the Leeds Festival in 1934, and presents a strikingly different view of the work from that of other interpreters on disc.

Far more than any rival, Beecham conveys a virile thrust and energy in the writing, partly opting for faster speeds. Thanks to Beecham's magnetism arguments have a tautness that can otherwise seem to ramble. Both in this, with its seven linked sections, and in the single span of An Arabesk, a setting of Jens Peter Jacobsen in Philip Heseltine's translation, the line of the argument is clarified. Roy Henderson is the clean-cut, sensitive baritone soloist in both, sounding very English, with Olga Haley a fresh, bright mezzo soloist in the Songs of Sunset.

What has no doubt prevented this inspired reading of the Songs of Sunset from being issued before is that the test pressing of the final climactic section is missing. So, to have the work complete, that final ensemble for soloists and chorus together is included here in the studio recording which Beecham made for HMV in 1946, but which he rejected. With Nancy Evans and Redvers Llewellyn as soloists, it makes an excellent conclusion, with the chorus more clearly focused than its predeccessor in 1934. What matters is that the choral sound in both has ample weight. An apology is given for the noisy surfaces at the ends of 78 sides, but the full-bodied nature of the transfer makes that flaw exceptionally easy to ignore.

Dora Labbette is the enchanting soprano soloist in all the separate songs, bright and silvery, attacking even the most exposed high notes with astonishing purity and precision, producing magical pianissimos. Four of the 10 come in the beautiful orchestral versions, with the rest accompanied at the piano by Beecham himself. He may not have been the most accomplished pianist, but his natural magnetism still shines out, not least in the striking early song, longer than the rest, Twilight Fancies.

The disc of Beecham's arrangements of Handel is just as distinctive, always elegant and warmly expressive. He defies latterday taste if anything even more radically than Stokowski in his arrangements of Bach, yet is similarly winning. The 10 movements from the ballet, The Origin of Design, come from the very first recording sessions of Beecham's newly founded London Philharmonic in December 1932. The following month he re-recorded three of the movements (available on Dutton), but extraordinarily this far bigger selection of movements was never issued – brilliantly performed, with the players on their toes, not least the soloist Leon Goossens. Sadly the 78 side containing the 'Serenade' is so damaged that the opening of the movement has had to be omitted.

Seven of the movements from the later ballet, The Gods Go a'Begging, made between 1933 and 1938 did get published, but all the rest, including the six movements from the same ballet recorded with the RPO in 1949, have never appeared in any format, inexplicably so when Beecham is in sparkling form throughout.

The oddity is the four-movement Piano Concerto which Beecham cobbled together from various Handel movements (which are unidentified here) for his then-wife, the pianist Betty Humby. The result makes a curious confection, starting with a nine-minute 'Chaconne' in which grandly spacious sections punctuate energetic chaconne variations.

The result is energetic, sounding less like Handel than 20th-century pastiche, with keyboard figuration and pianistic tricks unashamedly reflecting the romantic concerto tradition. As in the Delius disc, transfers bring satisfyingly full-bodied sound, if with obvious limitations. What is clear throughout is the Beecham magic – wonderful control of phrasing and rhythm in performances that are light of touch and full of fun.

British Light Music Classics 3

Ancliffe Smiles, then Kisses Binge Miss Melanie Caryll The Pink Lady Coates Music Everywhere Dexter Siciliano Duncan Girl from Corsica Ellis Alpine Pastures Evans Lady of Spain Farnon Portrait of a Flirt Godin Valse septembre Joyce Songe d'automne Ketèlbey In a Persian Market[a] Melachrino Woodland Revel Monckton Soldiers in the Park Richardson Melody on the Move Strachey In Party Mood. Theatreland Tomlinson Little Serenade Torch On a Spring Note Wood Montmartre

[a]New London Light Opera Chorus,
New London Orchestra / Ronald Corp
Hyperion CDA67148 (80 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1999

This third Hyperion helping of British Light Music Classics proves no less rewarding than its predecessors. The almost obligatory pieces by Coates, Farnon and Ketèlbey are here, and so too are such favourites of the post-Second World War era as Haydn Wood's Montmartre, Trevor Duncan's Girl from Corsica, Ernest Tomlinson's Little Serenade and Sidney Torch's On a Spring Note. All have popped up from time to time in similar collections over the past few years; what makes these Hyperion collections especially rewarding is the way they introduce items not otherwise readily available. Examples include the two pieces by Jack Strachey – the bouncy In Party Mood, which served as the signature tune of Housewives' Choice, and the rousing march Theatreland. There is also a gratifying whiff of mountain air and cowbells in Vivian Ellis's Alpine Pastures, which was for many years the signature tune of My Word.

No less welcome are pieces from an earlier age that both LP and CD have tended to neglect. Valse septembre by Felix Godin was prominently featured in the film Titanic, but the elegant and shapely Smiles, then Kisses by that fine craftsman Charles Ancliffe has probably been neglected since the post-Second World War revival of 'Olde Tyme Dancing'. Ronald Corp and the New London Orchestra play with their familiar accomplishment and affection and, if anything, an even surer grasp of pace than before. The CD is gratifyingly full and excellently recorded.

Brian Kay's British Light Music Discoveries

Alwyn Suite of Scottish Dances Arnold The Roots of Heaven – Overture Bennett Little Suite Jacob The Barber of Seville Goes to the Devil Johnstone Tarn Hows Langford Two Worlds Langley The Coloured Counties Lyon Joie de vivre Parker The Glass Slipper – Overture Sargent Impression of a Windy Day, Op 9

Royal Ballet Sinfonia / Gavin Sutherland
ASV White Line CDWHL2113 (70 minutes: DDD) Ⓜ
Recorded 1998

Though Brian Kay's name and portrait are used to promote this splendid collection, one suspects the driving force may have been its producer and annotator, Philip Lane, who has done such a lot for British light music on CD. With so much of Malcolm Arnold's music available, it is astonishing that his typically ebullient and tuneful overture The Roots of Heaven is here receiving its first recording. The same goes for William Alwyn's attractive set of Scottish dances, which are largely based on traditional tunes. Gordon Jacob's witty take-off of Rossini's best-known overture is the best-known piece here, but all the rest are very well worth getting to know. Richard Rodney Bennett's utterly charming Little Suite includes a waltz in best Murder on the Orient Express style, and the ebullient overture by David Lyon is a splendid representation of his work. You may never have thought of Sir Malcolm Sargent as a composer, but his contribution proves as rewarding as any, being a most attractive tone-poem with some appropriately breezy melodies. Then there is Clifton Parker's dainty overture to the musical play The Glass Slipper, plus three tone-poems by sometime BBC producers – Alan Langford contrasting the old world and the new, and Maurice Johnstone and James Langley elegantly depicting some of England's loveliest countryside. This really is a most enterprising and enjoyable collection, with stylish playing from the Royal Ballet Sinfonia.

Summer Streams

G Bush Divertimento Hedges Divertimento Langford Four Pieces Lyon Intermezzo Sumsion A mountain tune Wright Two Pieces[a]

Royal Ballet Sinfonia / David Lloyd-Jones with Richard Friedman vn
ASV White Line CDWHL2121 (72 minutes: DDD) Ⓜ
Recorded 1997-98

As Alan Langford's Waltz glides in on track 1, instinct tells you this CD is going to be pure delight to all lovers of English string music – and it doesn't disappoint. Langford was a pupil of Benjamin Frankel, and the four pieces gathered together here combine to make a perfect little suite and also display Langford's masterly writing for strings. The slightly more weighty sound world of the late Geoffrey Bush's Divertimento of 1943, a substantial three-movement work, can easily rub shoulders with the string music of Elgar, Finzi and Vaughan Williams. Where has it been hiding, and why is it not heard more often? Beautifully structured and brimming with memorable ideas, this will be an irresistible discovery to all who hear it. Geoffrey Wright's charming 'Summer Stream' (from which the disc takes it title) is one of two miniatures for strings and harp, the other being a slightly roguish Irish jig originally composed for Sean O'Casey's play Cock-a-doodle Dandy. As we progress to Herbert Sumsion's Graingeresque A mountain tune and David Lyon's Intermezzo (My Fair Lady meets a 'light' Brucknerian ländler) we realise that there isn't a weak piece to be heard on this disc. The programme closes with Anthony Hedges's substantial Divertimento for strings (1971), a work 'light' in spirit perhaps, but one that can surely hold its head high in the company of some of our finest string music. The performances are, like all the music here, a pure delight to the ear.

French Orchestral

Marches and Overtures à la Française
Adam Si j'étais roi – Overture Boieldieu La dame blanche – Overture Gounod Marche funèbre d'une marionnette Meyerbeer Coronation March Offenbach La belle Hélène – Overture. Orphée aux enfers – Overture. Les contes d'Hoffmann – Prelude Rossini Guillaume Tell – Overture Rouget de Lisle La marseillaise Saint-Saëns Suite algérienne in C, Op 60 – Marche militaire française. Marche héroïque in E flat, Op 34
Detroit Symphony Orchestra / Paul Paray
Mercury Living Presence 434 332-2MM Ⓜ
(66 minutes: ADD). Recorded 1959-60

They don't make collections like this any more! Or so it seems. Yet can musical tastes really have changed so radically from the days when people would patiently turn over a 78rpm record for the second half of Boieldieu's La dame blanche Overture? Unlikely, and there must surely be a welcome for such a collection of charmingly melodious, unpretentious and yet well-crafted pieces as on this CD. Paul Paray (1886–1979) was a genuine son of Normandy who in his seventies could still bring out the Gallic warmth, excitement and sparkle of these pieces. The recording sounds just a shade raw with the violins at the top of their range, but generally the warmth and richness of sound exhibited here make it quite unbelievable that these recordings are now 38-odd years old.

Tortelier's French Bonbons
Adam Si j'étais roi – Overture Auber Le cheval de bronze – Overture Chabrier Habanera. Joyeuse marche Gounod Marche funèbre d'une marionnette Hérold Zampa – Overture Maillart Les dragons de Villars – Overture Massenet Les Erinnyes – Tristesse du soir. Thaïs – Méditation[ac]. Mélodie – Elégie (arr Mouton)[b]. La Vierge – Le dernier sommeil de la Vierge Offenbach La belle Hélène – Overture (arr Haensch). Les contes d'Hoffmann – Entr'acte et Barcarolle[c]. Thomas Mignon – Overture; Me voici dans son boudoir
[a]Yuri Torchinsky vn [b]Peter Dixon vc
[c]Royal Liverpool Philharmonic Choir;
BBC Philharmonic Orchestra / Yan Pascal Tortelier
Chandos CHAN9765 (75 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1999

This splendid collection is a worthy successor to many nostalgically remembered LPs by Paul Paray and others. The concert opens in the bandstand with gusto and style; and after Hérold's Zampa comes Gounod's whimsical little Marche funèbre d'une marionnette, beloved of Alfred Hitchcock. The succession of wind (and harp) solos at the opening of Mignon is beautifully played (there is plenty of warm romantic feeling throughout the disc) and Adam's Si j'étais roi is delectably pointed, as is the exhilarating closing galop of Auber's Cheval de bronze. Maillart's grandiose, very French military piece is vigorously projected, Chabrier lilts, and the gentler evocations by Massenet make seductive interludes. But it is the overall zest one remembers. Tortelier doesn't push anything too hard, yet gives the rhythms plenty of lift, and his codas fizz nicely. The BBC Philharmonic is on top form and the Chandos recording is top-drawer, vivid, resonant and glowing. All in all, a programme to cheer you up on a bleak winter's day. Just try La belle Hélène and you will be won over.

Miscellaneous Orchestral

Sir John Barbirolli
Haydn Symphony No 83 in G minor, 'La Poule' Lehár Gold und Silber, Op 79 J Strauss II Die Fledermaus – Overture. Kaiser-Walzer, Op 437. Perpetuum mobile, Op 257. Tritsch-Tratsch-Polka, Op 214 R Strauss Der Rosenkavalier Suite
Hallé Orchestra / Sir John Barbirolli
BBC Legends/IMG Artists BBCL4038-2 Ⓜ
(76 minutes: ADD). Recorded live in 1969 OO

Among all the treasures rediscovered in the BBC archives, this disc of a Barbirolli Prom Concert of 1969 is among the most enticing. He opens with one of his favourite Haydn symphonies, and only Beecham can match his delightful characterisation of The Hen (dainty violins, plus gently clucking oboe) which Haydn makes sure we hear several times in the course of a most appealing first movement. As shaped by JB the Andante combines an Elysian simplicity with classical beauty of line, and the Minuet and finale similarly match grace with exuberance. There is surely no finer performance on disc.

Then comes the Johann Strauss section, with Sir John himself vocalising in the Overture's glorious waltz theme. But the highlight is a richly contoured, magical account of the Emperor Waltz, with all the mellow nobility of line one associates with Bruno Walter, plus an added touch of Barbirolli's Italianate sunshine. The reprise is so lovely it would melt the hardest heart. Then follows a fun performance of the Tritsch-Tratsch-Polka, with outrageous agogic tempo distortions and sudden pauses which bring a couple of great bursts of laughter from the Promenaders. But the best is yet to come.

With the Rosenkavalier suite the Hallé strings and horns surpass themselves. This musical patchwork may be no more than a comparatively inept pot-pourri, but Sir John invests each section of the score with such loving detail that one can only regret that he never recorded the whole opera. The Prelude, with its sexy, whooping horns, and a great passionate tenuto on the key moment of the lovers' passionate embrace (behind the curtain), then leads on to a wonderful feeling of tenderness as their ardour gently subsides. Later the Presentation of the Rose scene, with exquisite oboe playing, is meltingly beautiful. After the great surge of the Viennese waltz sequence, the closing section and the softly sensuous duet that sees Octavian and Sophie raptly departing together is wonderfully affectionate, rudely interrupted, of course, by the explosive coda (which is rather badly in need of some re-organisation).

The encore is Lehár's Gold and Silver, and Sir John encourages his Promenaders to hum along gently so as not to overwhelm its famous lyrical melody; and he even manages to entice them into a pianississimo when it is reprised. Prommers in the late 1960s were then just as appreciative but more self-disciplined than they are today, and there is no hint of vulgarity and much warmth in their response. Sir John cuts the coda to make time for his own witty little speech in appreciation of their contribution, continuing with a warmly expressed wish to return with his orchestra; and this alone is worth the price of an unforgettable disc, recorded with great warmth and atmosphere.

Sir Thomas Beecham: The RPO Legacy Volume 1 H
Bach Christmas Oratorio, BWV248 – Sinfonia
Berlioz Le corsaire, Op 21 Chabrier Joyeuse marche
Debussy Printemps Mussorgsky Khovanshchina – Dance of the Persian Slaves Sibelius Tapiola, Op 112
Smetana The Bartered Bride – Overture; Polka; Dance of the Comedians
Royal Philharmonic Orchestra / Sir Thomas Beecham
Dutton Laboratories mono CDLX7027 Ⓑ
(74 minutes: ADD). Recorded 1946-47

With astonishingly full mono sound, this first disc in the RPO Legacy series vividly captures the tense excitement of the months following Beecham's founding of the orchestra in 1946. It starts with the recording of the Berlioz Corsaire Overture which was the very first from the RPO to be issued. Beecham at hectic speed in the opening flourish challenges his violins to keep up, and the result has an apt element of wildness while offering fine ensemble. Tapiola, recorded a few weeks later in November 1946, similarly has a rugged intensity as well as polish, with the terracing of texture and dynamic beautifully brought out even in mono.

Finest of all in the collection is the Debussy Printemps which Beecham conducted as early as 1913, but which he never recorded again. Though the sessions began on the very day that Tapiola was recorded, the contrast of mood is astonishing. Finnish ruggedness and severity give way to sensuousness and beauty in the first of the two sections and to energy and colour in the second. Bach, not a composer generally associated with Beecham, inspires him to a performance which suggests French rather than German music, sweet and elegant, and the Smetana and Chabrier are electrifying, not least the horn trills in the Chabrier. The Dutton transfers have a vivid sense of presence with contrasts of dynamic and texture more clearly established than is common in mono recordings of the 1940s.

Sir Thomas Beecham: The RPO Legacy, Volume 5 H
Berlioz King Lear, Op 4 – Overture Delius Summer Evening (ed & arr Beecham) Dvořák The Golden Spinning Wheel, Op 109 Handel-Beecham The Great Elopement (excerpts) Haydn Symphonies – No 40 in F; No 102 in B flat Liszt Symphonic Poem, Orpheus, S98 Massenet La Vierge – Le dernier sommeil de la Vierge Méhul Les deux aveugles de Tolède – Overture Mendelssohn Octet, Op 20 – Scherzo. Die schöne Melusine, Op 32 – Overture Paisiello Nina, o sia la pazza per amore – Overture Saint-Saëns Le rouet d'Omphale in A, Op 31
Royal Philharmonic Orchestra / Sir Thomas Beecham 🏵
Dutton Laboratories ② 2CDEA 5026 Ⓑ
(151 minutes: ADD). Recorded 1947-51 ◉

Older readers who collected Beecham 78s in the late 1940s, will remember all these recordings. The two cherishable overtures by Méhul and Paisiello show the great maestro with a twinkle in his eye, but it is the Dvořák Golden Spinning Wheel that one never forgets and rightly remembers for its vividness. In this new Dutton transfer the sound is remarkably wide-ranging, delivering astonishingly crisp percussion and bright violins which offset the truly golden horns, and it comes up almost like a modern recording. The performance, too, of what is essentially an episodic piece, is wonderfully alive and spontaneous.

Fair Melusina was another favourite, and to end the first disc Dennis Brain leads the RPO horns with superb confidence in the spectacular Trio of the Minuet of Beecham's pioneering recording of Haydn's 40th, F major Symphony. The performance of No 102 is marvellous: what grace and vitality there is here. The Mendelssohn Scherzo is as light as thistledown, and only Martinon (Decca) approached Beecham's exquisite touch in Le rouet d'Omphale. Orpheus, too, sounds especially beautiful in Beecham's hands, while Handel-Beecham is like Bach-Stokowski: its unique qualities (here an affectionate elegance and a true feeling for Baroque colour) certainly counter any charges of anachronism. This is altogether an unmissable collection; and the Dutton transfers are fresh, clear and full-bodied like the old 78s were (even on modest equipment). The notes, as usual, are by Lyndon Jenkins, and they are as informative as ever.

Sir Thomas Beecham Favourite Overtures, Volume 2 H
Mozart Le nozze di Figaro. Don Giovanni. Die Zauberflöte$_a$ Weber Oberon. Der Freischütz
Brahms Tragic Overture Wagner A Faust Overture
Berlioz Le carnaval romain Rossini La scala di seta
London Philharmonic Orchestra, $_a$Berlin Philharmonic Orchestra / Sir Thomas Beecham
Dutton Laboratories mono CDLX7009 Ⓑ
(75 minutes: ADD). Recorded 1933-40

The Zauberflöte Overture is taken from Beecham's complete recording of the opera, and he shows a measured, profound response to Mozart's inspiration. All his characteristic elegance is still there, but the 43 players of the Berlin Philharmonic are made to play in a concentrated, highly characterful fashion. He provides a strong, arrestingly dramatic account of the Don Giovanni Overture, yet his Nozze di Figaro bubbles over with charm and wit. He finds plenty of drama in the Wagner, and the Brahms has an appropriate and highly impressive strength and profundity of feeling. A reading such as this effectively gives the lie to Beecham's reputation in some quarters as a lightweight interpreter. Perhaps the best performance of all is the overture by his beloved Berlioz, for energy and excitement are matched by playing of the most affecting delicacy and poetry in the piece's more reflective passages. All the engineering is outstanding.

Fritz Busch 🄷

Beethoven Leonore Overture No 2, Op 72[b]
Brahms Tragic Overture, Op 81[b]. Symphony No 2 in D, Op 73[d] Haydn Sinfonia concertante in B flat, Hob I:105[ab] Mendelssohn Symphony No 4 in A, 'Italian', Op 90[b] Mozart Symphony No 36 in C, 'Linz', K425[b]
R Strauss Don Juan, Op 20[c]
Weber Der Freischütz – Overture[b]
[a]Waldemar Wolsing ob [a]Carl Bloch bn
[a]Leo Hansen vn [a]Alberto Medici vc
[b]Danish State Radio Symphony Orchestra;
[c]London Philharmonic Orchestra / Fritz Busch
EMI/IMG Artists mono ② 575103-2 Ⓜ
(157 minutes: ADD). [ab]Recorded 1947-51, [c]1936, [d]1950

This is treasure indeed. Those who think of Fritz Busch simply as a Mozartian, the great musical architect of opera at Glyndebourne from 1934 onwards, will find it a revelation that he conveys such authority in this wide range of works in the central orchestral repertory. They are superbly played by the Danish orchestra which he did so much to bring up to a standard and, in many ways, put British orchestras at that time to shame. Not only is the playing refined and polished in a way that after the war only the newly-founded Philharmonia and RPO were beginning to match, but every one of these performances conveys high voltage intensity.

Except for the 1936 account of Strauss's Don Juan with the LPO, searingly dramatic though recorded in boxy sound, all these recordings were made with the Danish State Radio Orchestra between 1947 and 1951 in the hall built by Danish Radio – a wonderfully helpful acoustic. It seems irrelevant that these are all mono recordings, so full and atmospheric is the sound.

Busch's 1947 recording of Brahms's Second Symphony is a recording long cherished by collectors, and this new transfer rekindles the thrill of the performance. At speeds that are fast as well as steady, it brings out the dramatic thrust of a work often regarded as lyrical above all.

The Weber Overture and Mozart Linz Symphony are just as compelling, with bite and energy given higher priority than charm. The recordings of Leonore No 2, Brahms's Tragic Overture and Mendelssohn's Italian Symphony are all taken from live radio recordings, which unlike some from that immediate post-war period are as vivid in sound as the commercial recordings of EMI, though the Weber recording has relatively high surface hiss.

Han-Na Chang

The Swan – Classic Works for Cello and Orchestra
Bruch Ave Maria, Op 61 Dvořák Silent Woods, B182
Fauré (arr Hazell) Sicilienne, Op 78. Après un rêve, Op 7 No 1 Glazunov Chant du ménestrel, Op 71
L J Kim (orch R Panufnik) Korean Elegy
Rachmaninov (arr Hazell) Vocalise, Op 34 No 14
Respighi Adagio con variazioni Saint-Saëns (arr Hazell) Le cygne Tchaikovsky Nocturne, Op 11
Han-Na Chang vc Philharmonia Orchestra / Leonard Slatkin
EMI 557052-2 (63 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 2000 OO

The phenomenally gifted Han-Na Chang's first CD (which included a glorious account of Tchaikovsky's Rococo Variations) to which Rostropovich – who also conducted it – gave his enthusiastic imprimatur – received the highest praise. She was 13 then; now she is 18, but that wonderfully spontaneous musicality which is hers by natural instinct (one thinks of the young Menuhin) has flowered with maturity. Her line is marginally firmer, and her ardour and sensibility bring phrasing which simply breathes with the music. The opening Fauré Après un rêve begins with winning delicacy – its ardour never over-emotes, while Sicilienne is utterly delightful. But it is perhaps in Rachmaninov's Vocalise that her singing line and subtle colouring touch the heartstrings most poignantly, although the much less familiar Respighi Adagio, Dvořák's Klid and the Kim Elegy all have a disarmingly simple eloquence. Saint-Saëns' famous Swan has never glided by more guilelessly (yet there is a subtle dynamic control) and, not surprisingly, the slavic dolour of Tchaikovsky's Nocturne is perfectly caught.

'You can see that I am in love with all these pieces,' Chang says in the notes, and her passionate advocacy of Bruch's Ave Maria, 'full of inner conflicts', makes for a splendid coda to a highly enjoyable disc, with Slatkin a warmly supportive accompanist. Chris Hazell's arrangements of about half the items are superb. As Chang notes in the booklet: 'I think they reflect in a very honest way what the composers had in mind.' The recording is beautiful, and has an 'old-fashioned' mellow EMI analogue-style ambience, but with the cello set forward and caught with total digital realism.

Nicolai Golovanov 🄷

Glazunov Symphony No 6 in C minor, Op 58 Liszt Orpheus, S98. Héroïde funèbre, S102. Mazeppa, S100. Festklänge, S101. Prometheus, S99

Mendelssohn A Midsummer Night's Dream – Overture; Scherzo Tchaikovsky 1812 Overture, Op 49
Moscow Radio Symphony Orchestra / Nicolai Golovanov
EMI/IMG Artists mono ② 575112-2 Ⓜ
(148 minutes: ADD). From Melodiya originals recorded 1948-53

Nicolai Golovanov was one of the outstanding Russian conductors of the generation before Mravinsky. Hounded from his post as chief conductor at the Bolshoi Theatre in 1952, he died the following year, but not before making some recordings that richly deserve their place in this series. Unlike Mravinsky, he evidently did not rehearse familiar repertoire to death, being more prepared to tolerate rough edges in the interests of the live recreative act. So while these performances may not make library first choices, they are all inspiring in one way or another.

The Glazunov Sixth Symphony will startle those inclined to consider his musical invention rather slack. Everything here tingles with life and passion, as though the music were being composed in front of our very eyes. As with the great Furtwängler, incandescence and revelation are the words that come to mind. Intensity is sustained across all four movements, and Golovanov even makes the finale seem less of a stop-start affair than usual.

Of the remaining performances, Tchaikovsky's 1812 – recorded only three years after the end of the Great Patriotic War, and with the 'Slava' chorus from Glinka's A Life for the Tsar grafted on to the Tsarist hymn at the end – appears to be the most valuable. Recording quality is surprisingly clean for this vintage and provenance. True, the end of the first movement of the Glazunov suddenly changes perspective, while Prometheus suffers quite badly from distortion. But the communicative force of Golovanov's conducting triumphs over such shortcomings.

Nigel Kennedy vn
Bach Concerto for 2 Violins and Strings in D minor, BWV1043 – Largo ma non tanto. Violin Sonata No 3 in C, BWV1005. Cantata No 60, O Ewigkeit, du Donnerwort – Choral: Er ist genug Beethoven Violin Concerto – Rondo (Allegro) Brahms Violin Concerto in D, Op 77 – Allegro giocoso, ma non troppo vivace Bruch Violin Concerto No 1 – Adagio Debussy Le fille aux cheveux de lin Elgar Violin Concerto – Andante Kennedy Melody in the wind Kreisler Praeludium and Allegro in the style of Pugnani Massenet Thaïs – Méditation Mendelssohn Violin Concerto – Allegro molto appassionato Monti Csárdás Satie Gymnopédie No 1 Sibelius Violin Concerto – Allegro ma non tanto Tchaikovsky Violin Concerto – Canzonetta: Andante Traditional Scarborough Fair. Danny Boy Vaughan Williams The Lark Ascending Vivaldi The Four Seasons – 'Spring': Allegro; 'Summer': Presto
Nigel Kennedy vn John Lenehan pf Kroke; BPO; ECO / Jeffrey Tate; LPO / Okko Kamu, Vernon Handley; CBSO / Rattle; NDRSO / Klaus Tennstedt
EMI ② 557411-2 (148 minutes: DDD) Ⓜ
Recorded 1984-2002 ●

The portrait on the front of this double-CD package is of Nigel Kennedy with his face daubed with stripes of maroon and blue paint looking more like a native American warrior than a loyal Aston Villa football fan, apparently trying to take a bite out of his violin.

Yet turn inside the booklet, and one discovers a most touching 1964 photo of the very youthful prodigy together with his mentors Yehudi Menuhin and Robert Masters. We also have from the mid-1980s Kennedy's performance of the Adagio from his inspirational first recording of the Elgar Concerto, made with Vernon Handley and the LPO: this track demonstrates that, like Menuhin before him, Kennedy's deep musical instincts could produce a performance of extraordinary depth of feeling and insight, to say nothing of absolute technical command, at the outset of a career which had begun in the concert hall in 1977. The first of these two CDs, opening with the unbuttoned vitality of the first movement from 'Spring' of The Four Seasons, offers mostly short encore pieces in which the masterful technique and natural feeling for a melodic contour are well demonstrated. Almost all have charisma. Vaughan Williams' Lark Ascending soars aloft radiantly; if it is also warmly romanticised, it is very beautiful, and raptly serene at the close. Two of the shorter examples of Kennedy's rich espressivo on the first disc are Massenet's 'Méditation' (with a discreet choral backing) and a ravishing performance of the Londonderry Air.

The second CD, with excerpts from half-a-dozen major 19th-century concertos, confirms that this remarkably talented violinist has matured musically far more than one would expect from the visual and spoken image he still seems anxious to project. Among the recordings included, it is again the Romantic repertoire that suits him best. The ardently passionate account of the Adagio of the Bruch G minor Concerto and the magically coloured 'Canzonetta' of the Tchaikovsky remain in the memory.

Paul Kletzki Ⓗ
Berlioz Benvenuto Cellini – Overture[a]
Brahms Symphony No 4 in E minor[b]
Dvořák Slavonic Dances[c] – No 6 in D; No 7 in C minor; No 7 in C Mendelssohn Meeresstille und glückliche Fahrt, Op 27[d] Schubert Rosamunde, Fürstin von Zypern, D797 – No 5, Entr'acte in B flat after Act 3[e] Tchaikovsky Capriccio Italien[f]. Symphony No 5 in E minor[g]
Wagner Wesendonck Lieder – Träume[h]
[h]Hugh Bean vn [afh]Philharmonia Orchestra; [b]Czech Philharmonic Orchestra; [c]French National Radio & TV Orchestra; [d]Israel Philharmonic Orchestra; [e]Royal Philharmonic Orchestra; [g]Bavarian Radio Symphony Orchestra / Paul Kletzki
EMI/IMG Artists [abd]mono ② 575468-2 Ⓜ
(148 minutes: ADD). Recorded 1952-67

This set devoted to the Polish-Swiss conductor Paul Kletzki is a revelation. Right from the off – Berlioz's Benvenuto Cellini Overture, thrillingly played by the Philharmonia in 1951 – you sense someone in absolute command of the orchestra. A live 1967 Tchaikovsky Fifth with the Bavarian RSO retains Kubelík's 'old-style' orchestral layout (divided violin desks) and relates a reading that while not perfect in every executive detail is abundantly warm and communicative. Just sample the soaring cello countermelody at 6'09" into the first movement or Kletzki's audible command for a more 'singing' tone at 9'47" into the first movement of Brahms's Fourth (or at least that's what it sounds as if he's saying). There the Czech Philharmonic is heard to fine effect in 1965 (in mono), the lower strings rolling majestically at the close of the Andante moderato. Both readings are infinitely malleable: you may find you disagree with them in principle but end up loving them in practice. And there are the other studio recordings, principally Mendelssohn's overture Calm Sea and Prosperous Voyage (Israel PO, mono) and Tchaikovsky's Capriccio Italien (Philharmonia, stereo), shaped and sustained with expertise. There's also the added bonus of Hugh Bean playing Wagner's 'Träume', and he does so most beautifully.

Serge Koussevitzky H

Beethoven Symphony No 5 in C minor, Op 67[a] Harris Symphony No 3[b]
Liszt Mephisto Waltz No 1, S110 No 2[c]
Rachmaninov The Isle of the Dead, Op 29[d] Sibelius Symphony No 7 in C, Op 105[e] Tchaikovsky Symphony No 5 in E minor, Op 64[f]
[bcdf]Boston Symphony Orchestra; [e]BBC Symphony Orchestra; [a]London Philharmonic Orchestra / Serge Koussevitzky
EMI Classics/IMG Artists mono ② Ⓜ
575118-2 (149 minutes: ADD)
Recorded [a]1933, [b]1942, [c]1936, [e]live in 1933, [f]1944 and [d]1945 ●

This set will provide non-specialist listeners with the perfect entrée into Serge Koussevitzky's world. There are no weak links in what is on offer; even the Beethoven, a little self-consciously grandiloquent in style, is by no means uninteresting or lacking in fervour. Transfers are vivid and full, notwithstanding some unavoidably crumbly moments in the Harris. Only don't expect too wide a dynamic range – it isn't there in the original source material.

The conductor's instrument of choice was of course the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which he led from 1924 until 1949. Their music-making is distinguished by a peculiar intensity allied to a depth of sonority and care over finish unequalled until Karajan's Berlin years. EMI's programme starts with a famously white-hot version of Tchaikovsky's Fifth. The conductor's considerable liberties matter not a jot, given the urgently communicative nature of the music-making: it would be a cold-hearted music-lover who could not respond to such a performance. Curiously perhaps, the reading's marked freedom of nuance is not a feature of the Rachmaninov symphonic poem, let alone the Roy Harris Third Symphony. Again though, it is impossible to imagine either work being performed with greater electricity.

The Sibelius is something else again: Koussevitzky guest conducting in what was then very unfamiliar music and with a very new orchestra – the BBC Symphony. For some listeners, the extraordinary tension of this performance, captured live in 1933, is too much of a good thing, and one has heard carping criticism of the conductor's departures from the score. The truth is that no metronome marks having yet been printed, Koussevitzky had no choice but to go his own way. What matters is that such priceless documents remain in circulation to show us what these disconcertingly astute dinosaurs were capable of. Strongly recommended.

Constant Lambert – The Last Recordings H

Chabrier Pièces posthumes – Ballabile (orch Lambert)[a] Suppé Ein Morgen, ein Mittag, ein Abend in Wien – Overture[b]. Pique Dame – Overture[c]
Waldteufel Estudiantina, Op 191[d]. Les Patineurs, Op 183[e]. Pomone, Op 155[f]. Sur la plage, Op 234[g]
Walton Façade[h] – Suite No 1; Suite No 2
Philharmonia Orchestra / Constant Lambert
Somm Céleste Series mono SOMMCD023 Ⓜ
(73 minutes: ADD). Recorded 1949-50

Constant Lambert was a flamboyant, sparkling figure who thrived on colourful music like this, so it is sad that he died just before the advent of stereo. That all his recordings are in mono has had the effect, at least until recently, of deterring those who might resurrect them in whatever format. This charming disc, a generous and very well-transferred collection, fills an important gap. Lambert's flair as a ballet conductor is reflected in all the items here. Consistently whether in Waldteufel waltzes, Suppé overtures or the orchestral Façade pieces – source of a highly successful ballet – Lambert is masterly at giving a spring to the dance-rhythms, while never indulging excessively in rubato unhelpful to dancers. The idiomatic Viennese-style hesitations in the waltzes, notably the Skaters' Waltz and the Suppé Viennese overture, are exquisitely judged, never too obtrusive, just nudging you enough, while Lambert rivals even the composer himself in bringing out the fun of Façade. He was, after all, almost its surrogate creator, the friend of Walton who alongside him discovered the joys of jazz and syncopated rhythms in the early 1920s.

It is remarkable, too, that even with the limitations of mono recording of 1950 Lambert keeps textures ideally clear and transparent, helped by the refined playing of the Philharmonia Orchestra, not least the string section, adding to the freshness of all these performances. A delightful disc.

Sergei Nakariakov – No Limit

Bruch Canzone in B, Op 55[a] Gershwin (arr Dokshitser) Rhapsody in Blue[b] Massenet Thaïs – Méditation[a] Saint-Saëns Introduction and Rondo capriccioso in A minor, Op 28[b] Tchaikovsky Andante cantabile, Op 11[a]. Variations on a Rococo Theme in A, Op 33[a] (all arrangements by Mikhail Nakariakov unless otherwise indicated)

Sergei Nakariakov ^{a}flugelhn/^{b}tpt
Philharmonia Orchestra / Vladimir Ashkenazy
Teldec 8573-80651-2 (62 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1999 ●

What a wonderful trumpeter the young Sergei Nakariakov is! So beautiful is his tone, so naturally musical is his phrasing, so astonishing is his easy virtuosity, that he almost reconciles you to these arrangements. Certainly to the Saint-Saëns, which comes off with splendid panache – and that hair-raisingly fast tonguing at the end is extraordinary. (Is it single- or double-tonguing? It's so clean that it's impossible to decide.) The disc is worth considering for this piece alone.

But, oh dear, Tchaikovsky's Andante cantabile on the flugelhorn just does not work, for all the warmth of line and the tasteful vibrato. The Rococo Variations fare rather better, with the melodic line at times lying higher up. It really is a lyrical (Variation 3 is beautifully phrased) and bravura tour de force, but still sounds far better on a cello. Max Bruch's Canzone emerges unscathed, and Massenet's 'Méditation' is romantically stylish if inevitably carrying a whiff of the bandstand. Certainly flugelhorn playing of this calibre is rare.

Nakariakov is undoubtedly in his element in Gershwin, where he returns to the trumpet. He clearly enjoys himself and it is a sparkling performance, with a nice jazzy inflection, and here the trumpet's middle and lower range is used to good effect, with a touch of humour when the bassoon briefly takes over. The big tune is introduced delicately and beguilingly with a mute; but in the following string tutti the saxes fail to shine through.

Throughout, Ashkenazy provides good support; these are very much accompaniments, and the recording balance reflects that priority. But that Gershwin opening should have been left to the clarinet (it was apparently Benny Goodman's idea in the first place).

Itzhak Perlman – A la carte
Glazunov Mazurka-Oberek in D. Meditation, Op 32
Kreisler The Old Refrain. Schön Rosmarin
Massenet Thaïs – Méditation Rachmaninov Vocalise, Op 34 No 14 Rimsky-Korsakov (arr Kreisler) Fantasia on Two Russian Themes, Op 33
Sarasate Zigeunerweisen, Op 20. Introduction and Tarantella, Op 43 Tchaikovsky (orch Glazunov) Scherzo in C minor, Op 42 No 2
Wieniawski Légende, Op 17. Zigeunerweisen
Itzhak Perlman vn Abbey Road Ensemble / Lawrence Foster
EMI 555475-2 (63 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1995 ●

A most enjoyable programme. Perlman approximates the 'old school' with something of an actor's skill: he feels the period, not as a first-hand witness (even at 50, he is far too young for that), but as a respectful recipient of a great tradition. His 'Méditation' is an elevated 'easy listen', sensitively accompanied. The Glazunov Mazurka-Oberek should be at least as popular as Saint-Saëns's concert pieces for violin and orchestra, and Perlman does it proud. The initial pages of Rachmaninov's Vocalise are a little over-sweet (too many well-oiled slides), but its latter half achieves genuine expressive eloquence. Glazunov's Meditation is suitably honeyed, and the Kreisler-Rimsky Fantasia (where Goldmark's A minor Concerto hovers around the main theme) is given a truly splendid performance. Of the rest, the two Kreisler pieces are exceptional, Schön Rosmarin especially, while Lawrence Foster's expert Abbey Road Ensemble provides a discreet but flavoursome orchestral base.

Mstislav Rostropovich: 'Mastercellist'
Chopin Introduction and Polonaise brillante in C, Op 3^{a} Dvořák Cello Concerto in B minor, B191^{b}
Glazunov Chant du ménéstrel, Op 71^{c} Rachmaninov Cello Sonata in G minor, Op 19^{d}. Vocalise, Op 34 No 14^{a} Schubert Impromptu in G flat, D899 No 3 (arr Heifetz/Rostropovich)^{a}
Schumann Cello Concerto in A minor, Op 129^{e}. Träumerei, Op 15 No 7^{a}
Tchaikovsky Andante cantabile^{f}
^{ad}Alexander Dedyukhin pf
^{e}Leningrad Philharmonic Orchestra / Gennadi Rozhdestvensky; ^{c}Boston Symphony Orchestra / Seiji Ozawa; ^{bf}Berlin Philharmonic Orchestra / ^{b}Herbert von Karajan, ^{f}Mstislav Rostropovich vc
DG ^{ad}mono ② 471 620-2GM2 Ⓜ
(134 minutes: ADD). Recorded 1959-79

Of the two major celebratory collections which appeared simultaneously to celebrate the great Russian musician's 75th birthday, the DG two-disc package is a clear first choice, unless you already have his famous and unsurpassed 1969 recording of the Dvořák Concerto with Karajan, or indeed the hardly less imaginative account of the Schumann Concerto, which reaches out to the listener equally compellingly.

The slighter, touchingly nostalgic Glazunov Chant du ménéstrel here is exquisitely sung, and Rostropovich equally readily communicates his affection for the pair of warmly lyrical Tchaikovsky melodies which together form the Andante cantabile. But what makes this compilation quite indispensable is the inclusion of the works with piano. These pieces, recorded in Poland in 1956, show a youthful Rostropovich, and include a fresh and inspirational reading of Rachmaninov's Cello Sonata, a characteristically intense work with its richly burgeoning lyrical melodies. Rostropovich plays raptly with a rare delicacy of feeling, his timbre in the upper range sweetly refined,his melismatic line slightly more restrained than in later years, and always echoed by the poetic Alexander Dedyukhin. The encores are played affectionately and the mono recording is faithful and well balanced.

Wolfgang Sawallisch
Stokowski Transcriptions
Bach Cantatas: No 208 – Schafe können sicher

weiden; No 140 – Wachet auf!; No 80 – Ein' feste Burg. Toccata and Fugue in D minor, BWV565
Beethoven Piano Sonata No 14 in C sharp minor, 'Moonlight', Op 27 No 2 – Adagio sostenuto
Boccherini String Quintet in E, G275 – Minuet
Chopin Prelude in E minor, Op 28 No 4
Debussy Suite bergamasque – Clair de lune. Préludes, Book 1 – No 10, La cathédrale engloutie
Franck Panis angelicus Rachmaninov Prelude in C sharp minor, Op 3 No 2 Tchaikovsky String Quartet No 1 in D, Op 11 – Andante cantabile. At the ball, Op 38 No 3[a]
[a]Marjana Lipovšek mez Philadelphia Orchestra / Wolfgang Sawallisch
EMI 555592-2 (66 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1995

Quite apart from the reissues of Stokowski's own recordings, there are several other discs of these highly coloured arrangements. Though Stokowski's own recordings, even those he made in extreme old age, generally have a degree more flair and dramatic bite than any others, the contrasts are not always what you would expect. So it is surprising to find that the BBC Philharmonic strings are more ripely resonant than those of the Philadelphia Orchestra in Franck's Panis angelicus, though that is an exception, and possibly Sawallisch simply wanted to minimise the piece's bold vulgarity. One of the items common to these discs is the Adagio from Beethoven's Moonlight Sonata, and there Sawallisch brings out far more of the mystery of what becomes an evocative, atmospheric piece, making the Bamert disc seem clinical. This collection also gains in glamour from having Marjana Lipovšek as an appropriately Slavonic-sounding soloist in the orchestration of the Tchaikovsky song, At the ball. This EMI disc provides a generous programme together with richly rounded recording, well defined in the bass. Yet Bamert's even more generous selection of 15 encore pieces overlaps on only three items, and includes more in which Stokowski has the greatest fun tweaking the ear provocatively, such as Mozart's Turkish Rondo: the advice to anyone with a sweet tooth is to get both discs for maximum indulgence.

Daniil Shafran vc
Kabalevsky Cello Concerto No 2 in G, Op 77[a] Prokofiev Symphony-Concerto in E minor, Op 125[b] Tsintsadze Five Pieces on Folk Themes[c]
Daniil Shafran vc [c]Nina Musinyan pf
[a]Leningrad Philharmonic Orchestra / Dimitry Kabalevsky; [b]USSR State Symphony Orchestra / Gennady Rozhdestvensky
Cello Classics CC1008 (78 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
[b]Recorded live at the Great Hall of the Moscow Conservatoire in 1961, [a]1967, [c]1957

First, the bottom line: this is an inestimably important cello release, one that no aficionado of great string playing can afford to ignore. As a relative youngster Daniil Shafran shared important competition prizes with Rostropovich; but his appearances outside of Russia were rare and most of his recordings remained all but unknown beyond specialist circles. There were one or two exceptions, most notably Shostakovich's Cello Sonata with the composer at the piano, a real 'cello classic' that enjoyed limited circulation in the West.

Kabalevsky's Second Cello Concerto (1964) is a fairly big work, mostly serious in tone with demanding cadenzas and a wink or two in the direction of Prokofiev's Symphony-Concerto. Kabalevsky himself was hugely impressed by Shafran's playing – and little wonder given its sensual tone, its agility in faster music and unerring concentration. Shafran's sound is very different to Rostropovich's, more prone to building vibrato on the note – starting 'cold' then gradually intensifying the vibration – or alternating notes with, or without, vibrato. Others bent on similar ploys can sound mannered, but not Shafran, whose seamless bowing and widened dynamics, not to mention his extraordinary deftness, have inspired accolades bordering on a cult. Comparisons in the Prokofiev are especially telling, Rostropovich being earnest but suave, Shafran more colourful but unremittingly intense. Gennady Rozhdestvensky's mastery of the orchestral score is an added bonus.

The Kabalevsky alone is in stereo and there is some excellent annotation by Isserlis and Andrew Stewart.

Sir Georg Solti – Hungarian Connections
Bartók Hungarian Sketches, Sz97. Romanian folkdances, Sz68 Kodály Háry János, Op 15 – Suite[a] Liszt Two Episodes from Lenau's Faust, S110 – Der Tanz in der Dorfschenke. Hungarian Rhapsody No 2 in D minor (orch Döppler) L Weiner Csongor és Tünde, Op 10*b* – Introduction; Scherzo
[a]Laurence Kaptain cimb Chicago Symphony Orchestra / Sir Georg Solti
Decca 443 444-2DH (72 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded live in 1993 ●

This is a terrific programme. The sequence is imaginative, the material extremely attractive, and the standard of performance high. The Mephisto Waltz swirls in heady abandon, with strings as delicate as thistledown, and some snappy work from the Chicago brass. The once-ubiquitous Second Hungarian Rhapsody is wittily turned, although Döppler's sundry added counterpoint and rather tame orchestration tend to mute the rustic edge of Liszt's original. The performance, though, has plenty of life, and the recording conjures up a realistic sense of aural perspective. Sir Georg's empathy for this idiom is everywhere in evidence, and never more so than in Bartók's Romanian folkdances, where lightness of touch and sensitive rubato re-create a crucial feeling of improvisation. The Hungarian Sketches are tellingly pointed, with fluid lines in 'Evening in the Village' and 'Melody', a hilarious ff trombone/tuba belch in 'A Little Tipsy' and cleanly differentiated percussion in the 'Bear Dance'. Solti's version is now perhaps the current front-runner, and makes for a most entertaining musical diversion. Nice, too, to hear music by the underrated Leó Weiner, his Csongor és Tünde ballet with its subtle reminiscences of Nicolai's Merry Wives of Windsor Overture and Liszt's Dante Symphony. The busy Scherzo is the sort of thing Bartók might have composed had he not outgrown the worlds of Strauss and Dohnányi, while the Introduction is reminiscent of Kodály in pastoral vein. Kodály himself is represented by a genial account of the Háry János Suite, superbly recorded and with some distinctive solo work.

Michael Tilson Thomas – New World Jazz
J Adams Lollapalooza Antheil A Jazz Symphony
Bernstein Prelude, Fugue and Riffs
Gershwin Rhapsody in Blue Hindemith Ragtime
Milhaud La création du monde
Raksin The Bad and the Beautiful – main theme
Stravinsky Ebony Concerto
Tad Calcara, Jerome Simas cls
New World Symphony / Michael Tilson Thomas pf
RCA Red Seal 09026 68798-2 (68 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1997 ●●

The Ultimate Jazz Album, this, imaginatively programmed and impeccably realised by all involved. We kick off with the dazzling world première recording of John Adams' Lollapalooza (1995), whose infectiously rhythmic, post-modern cavortings are relished to the full by Tilson Thomas and his superb young band. This Rhapsody in Blue evinces an improvisatory fantasy and edge-of-seat, theatrical fervour to make one appreciate anew the extraordinary boldness, reckless danger even, of Gershwin's ground-breaking inspiration. Bernstein's exhilarating Prelude, Fugue and Riffs receives the outing of a lifetime, a gloriously idiomatic, stunningly assured display which, like the wonderfully poised reading of Stravinsky's Ebony Concerto, invites and fully withstands comparison with the best rivals. We also get a singularly deft and atmospheric performance of Milhaud's 1923 ballet masterpiece, La création du monde, whose striking pre-echoes of Gershwin have never seemed more potent. All of which leaves Hindemith's 'well-tempered' Ragtime, a mischievous reworking from 1921 of the C minor Fugue from Book 1 of the 48 (and dispatched on this occasion with a gleeful exuberance), George Antheil's endearingly outrageous A Jazz Symphony and David Raksin's gorgeous main title for Vincente Minnelli's The Bad and the Beautiful (1952). Thrillingly realistic sound throughout. Not to be missed!

Arturo Toscanini Ⓗ
Martucci Song of Remembrance$_a$
Schumann Symphony No 2 in C, Op 61 Tommasini Il carnevale a Venezia Wagner A Faust Overture
$_a$Bruna Castagna mez NBC Symphony Orchestra / Arturo Toscanini
Naxos Historical ② 8 110836/7 (89 minutes: ADD) Ⓢ
Recorded 1941

Schubert Symphony No 2 in B flat, D125
Wagner Parsifal – Prelude; Good Friday music (concert version); Klingsor's Garden (concert version)
NBC Symphony Orchestra / Arturo Toscanini
Naxos Historical 8 110838 (73 minutes: ADD) Ⓢ
Recorded 1940 ●

The success of any Toscanini broadcast series depends largely on the quality of available source material, and on that count alone, Naxos's enterprise seems notably superior to most that have preceded it.

Martucci's lyrical La canzone dei ricordi (or 'The Song of Remembrance') was orchestrated by the composer in 1900 and is vaguely reminiscent of Debussy's La damoiselle élue. Bruna Castagna's seamless mezzo is well employed, and so are the tender-toned NBC strings. Debussy's muse also haunts Tommasini's colourful Carnival of Venice Variations where Toscanini's characteristic interpretative priorities are textural clarity, singing lines and driving rhythms. Neither work strikes one as especially memorable; perhaps the Martucci just edges it. Both sound adequate, though the opening bars of La canzone are prone to crumble.

The tension of the opening pages of the 1941 account of Wagner's Faust Overture, the swelling Brucknerian curve of the broadened principal theme and the finely tensed delivery of the main argument, all are exceptional. So is the playing, though it's not as demonstrably spectacular as the second movement of Schumann's Second Symphony. Aside from staccato-style phrasing at great speed, the switch between the main motive and two successive trios witnesses a degree of dynamic elasticity that any soloist would view as a severe challenge. Here, the entire band swings from one episode to the next like a single player. It's simply stunning.

Turning to the 1940 concert, Schubert's Second is again up against a Toscanini rival, from 1938 this time. But while the 1946 Schumann Second does at least have a spot of extra clarity on its side, the 1938 Schubert Two (the two performances are usefully coupled together on Dell'Arte) sounds bad-tempered and relentless virtually for the duration. Two years later, Toscanini let the air in – and he also encouraged his players to sing. True, the mood is still high-octane and speeds are pretty nifty (a pitch rise in the second movement further intensifies a sense of haste). But those who know only the earlier broadcast will note how this second version accommodates added perspectives, as well as extra flexibility and countless tiny crescendos that were barely hinted at before. It's a far more musical reading, better balanced as sound though not as viscerally 'immediate'.

The Parsifal selection is fascinating, though the 'acid top' that grated on the old Music & Arts LPs is still sometimes in evidence.

Generally, though, the sound is improved and the performances are, for the most part, extraordinarily gripping. The Prelude is the exception, which Toscanini played with greater intensity on other occasions, though here the closing pages are beautifully sustained. Naxos advises us that, in addition to the Prelude and Good Friday Music, we should expect 24 minutes of Klingsor's Garden. Not so. The general intention seems to have been to counter the static aura of the previous excerpts with a healthy quota of music drama. What we actually hear is the Prelude to Act 2, followed by the Third Act Prelude, the animated lead-up to Klingsor's Magic Garden, the Garden itself and then an orchestrated version of the opera's serene closing pages. Why Toscanini didn't insert the Good Friday Music between the Klingsor's Garden and the finale is anyone's guess, but as a makeshift 'synthesis' it works well, and most of the playing is fabulous. It offers a tantalising glimpse of what Toscanini's Parsifal might have sounded like in the theatre, though tempos are rather faster than we have been led to expect.

John Williams – The Guitarist
Anonymous Lamento di Tristan. Ductia. Saltarello
Domeniconi Koyunbaba Houghton Stélé
Satie Gnossiennes Nos 1 and 2. Gymnopédie No 3
(all arr Williams) Theodorakis Three Epitafios
J Williams Aeolian Suite
John Williams gtr orchestra / William Goodchild
Sony Classical SK60586 (63 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1998

The seemingly polarised but reconcilable elements of protest and a yearning for space and time for contemplation appear to be buried in Williams's psyche. Here they find full expression. Turkish, Greek and Greek-influenced music are the backbone of the programme: Domeniconi's programmatic Koyunbaba speaks for itself, as does the music of Theodorakis ('love, loneliness and freedom of expression'), and Satie's is seen as an 'early reaction against 19th-century Romanticism'; Houghton's Stélé and Williams's own skilfully wrought Aeolian Suite, too, have declared connections with Greek music. Total technical mastery is something that has never been lacking in Williams's performances (barring the occasional slips that all artists make in concert), and to it he here adds a modest but unfailingly tasteful ability as an arranger.

Koyunbaba is a work that can seem interminable – and in many hands it does, but Williams's performance of it is heartfelt, not contrived, and Houghton's Stélé reveals the longings that can dwell in the souls of composers who began with jazz, rock and media music.

If you have to live with only one recording by Williams it should be this one. It is perhaps the most personal musical statement he has yet made, and it is in every sense immaculately recorded.

Viennese Orchestral

New Year's Day Concert, 2002
J Hellmesberger II Danse diabolique
J Strauss I Radetzky-Marsch J Strauss II
Die Fledermaus – Overture. Hünstlerleben. Zivio!
Eisen-Polka. Wiener Blut. Tik-Tak. An der schönen, blaüen Donau Josef Strauss Die Schwätzerin.
Vorwärts! Aquarellen. Die Libelle. Plappermäulchen!
Vienna Philharmonic Orchestra / Seiji Ozawa
Philips 468 999-2PH (79 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded live in 2002 ●

Ozawa, always happy in balletic music, which in effect Strauss's waltzes and polkas are, draws the most refined playing from the Vienna Philharmonic. If there were some raised eyebrows at the choice of Ozawa, plainly there is complete rapport between players and conductor.

Fully at home in the idiom, Ozawa dares to exaggerate the Viennese lilt in waltzes, encouraging the orchestra to indulge in a habit, once more marked than it usually is now, of anticipating the second beat of the bar. Certainly, Harnoncourt in 2001's concert (Teldec), though Viennese in his background, took a more purist attitude. As it is, the waltzes Artist's Life, Aquarellen, Vienna Blood and the traditional encore, The Blue Danube, have a coaxing persuasiveness impossible to resist, and the recording is not just ripe in the way one expects of the venue, but clearer on detail than it sometimes has been.

If one quality marks out the whole concert, it is the daring of Ozawa's control of rubato, aided by the unfailing responsiveness of the VPO. A truly Viennese experience.

New Year's Day Concert, 2003
Brahms Hungarian Dances – No 5 in
G minor; No 6 in D (orch Reichert)
J Strauss I Chineser Galopp. Radetzky-Marsch
J Strauss II Kaiser-Franz-Joseph I Rettungs-Jubel-Marsch. Der Zigeunerbaron – Schatzwalzer.
Niko-Polka. Scherz-Polka. Secunden. Hellenen-Polka.
Kaiser-Walzer. Bauern-Polka. Lob der Frauen.
Leichtes Blut. Krönungslieder. Furioso-Polka.
An der schönen blauen Donau Josef Strauss
Delirien. Pêle-mêle Weber Invitation to the Dance,
J260 (orch Berlioz)
Vienna Philharmonic Orchestra /
Nikolaus Harnoncourt
DG ② 474 250-2GH2 (107 minutes: DDD) Ⓜ
Recorded live at the Musikverein, Vienna
on January 1, 2003 ●

Unusually in 2003's New Year's Day concert there's nothing by the supporting cast of Viennese dance composers such as Hellmesberger, Komzák or Ziehrer. Instead, Weber – as arranged by Berlioz (in his bicentenary year) – and Brahms get to show their dance steps, not to mention Brahms's orchestrator here, Friedrich D Reichert. Otherwise it's all Strauss.

The now customary international touch is provided most obviously by the Hellenen-Polka, marking the accession of Greece to the EU presidency in 2003. By contrast, the international scene of the Strausses' time is recalled by the waltz Krönungslieder, composed for the coronation of Tsar Alexander II in 1856, and the sprightly Niko-Polka.

The Vienna Philharmonic remains unmatched in this repertory. With a native conductor such as Harnoncourt, with an instinctive feel for the music, even familiar numbers such as Johann's Kaiser-Walzer and Josef's glorious Delirien waltz receive outstanding performances. Not least, the Furioso-Polka provides an absolutely exhilarating conclusion.

Graceful and fiery by turns, and always supremely polished, this must rank among the very best of Vienna New Year Concerts.

Vienna Soirée
Heuberger Der Opernball – Overture Lanner Die Schönbrunner, Op 200. Tourbillon-Galopp, Op 142 No 1 Lehár Ballsirenen. Gold und Silber, Op 79 Suppé Ein Morgen, ein Mittag, ein Abend in Wien – Overture Ziehrer Wiener Bürger, Op 419. Freiherr von Schönfeld, Op 442. Fächer, Op 525
Vienna Philharmonic Orchestra / Sir John Eliot Gardiner
DG 463 185-2GH (57 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1999 ●

Sir John Eliot Gardiner draws scintillating performances from the VPO in this delightful collection of overtures, waltzes and shorter pieces, including one item not otherwise available, Lanner's dashing Tourbillon-Galopp. Gardiner sets the pattern in a performance of the Suppé overture at once high-powered, highly polished and deliciously sprung. Compared with most other performances, this is a reading of fearless extremes, both in dynamics and tempos. It seems a bigger, stronger piece as a result, not just light and undemanding. Some may find the high tension and brisk manner of the openings of some items diminishes the cosy Viennese charm, but there is ample compensation not just in the pinpoint precision of ensemble but the glorious resonance of the VPO's playing, and Gardiner, as in his Vienna recording of Lehár's The Merry Widow, enters fully into the Viennese spirit. Lehár's Ballsirenen waltz is, in fact, a fantasy on themes from that operetta, refined and tender as well as ebullient. The other Lehár item, too, the Gold and Silver waltz, brings magical pianissimos when the main theme is repeated.

It has sometimes been claimed that the Viennese lilt is just an excuse for imprecision, but with Gardiner, polish and lilt go together, as in the underlined hesitations in Ziehrer's Wiener Bürger waltz.

Most winning of all are the rarer, shorter items, where Gardiner and the Viennese players uninhibitedly shrug off all thought of vulgarity, playing Ziehrer's Fächer Polonaise and Schönfeld March with irresistible zest and bounce.

The DG recording, made in the Vienna Musikverein, has ideal freshness and clarity as well as warmth.

CHAMBER

String Ensembles

Musica Baltica P
Albrici Sinfonia in D minor. Sonata a 5 Anonymous Fantasia a 7 Baltzar Pavane a 3 in C Becker Sonata a 5 in F Fischer Herzlich tut mich verlangen Hasse Suite in D minor Kirchoff Sonata in B flat Luetkeman Choralfantasie a 5, 'Innsbruck, ich muss dich lassen'. Fantasia a 5 Meder Sonata, 'Der Polnische Pracher'. Sonata di Battaglia in C Vierdanck Capriccios – a 2 in D minor; a 4 in D minor
Musica Antiqua Köln / Reinhard Goebel
Archiv Produktion 459 619-2AH (81 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1998 ●

This is one of Musica Antiqua Köln's most diverting and original projects, tracing with illumination and alacrity the hidden treasures of the late Hanseatic age. As Reinhard Goebel eloquently describes in a richly-woven note, the Ostsee became a patriciate of merchants who disseminated German culture and manners to trade-route centres – such as Lübeck, Stockholm, Riga or Danzig – before local musicians transmitted the received wisdom in their own dialect. This programme is no mere journey through the Baltic ports but a riveting exposé of high-class instrumental music from the 17th century. Not many sources survive after the ravages of a war-torn region whose remaining collections faced the ultimate assault in the last war. Goebel has assembled a good deal of his astonishingly varied programme from the wonderful 'safe-haven' Duben Collection in Uppsala, Sweden. The heady mix of styles ranges from the fragrant chorale-fantasies of the North German contingent (Fischer's Herzlich tut mich verlangen is a little peach) to the Viennese-influenced works such as Andreas Kirchoff's taut and quixotic vignette; the unabashed regional swagger of Albrici's Sonata for two trumpets which, if less ostentatious than examples by Biber and Vejvanovsky, provides an uncompromisingly distinctive Nordic flourish. The English pavan, with its imploring contrapuntal grandeur, infuses the earlier Fantasies by Luetkeman and Anonymous and the Baltzar work; Vierdanck's Italianate extroversion and Meder's skilful progammatic pieces (though the Sonata di Battaglia is rather too much of a good thing) are only a soupçon of national taste and genre. Musica Antiqua Köln are alive to all of them. While the early-century works might generally benefit from viols (rather than the comparatively astringent mid-Baroque, violin-dominated consort), the degree of focus and incandescence is only intermittently undermined by fluffy entries and the occasional suspect intonation. In the Baltzar Pavane a 3, each line is beautifully voiced and caressed. A first-rate undertaking, both revelatory and immensely pleasurable.

Neapolitan Chamber Works P

Durante Concerto for Two Violins, Viola and Continuo in G minor Mancini Sonata for Recorder, Two Violins and Continuo in D minor Sarri Concerto for Recorder, Two Violins, Viola and Continuo in A minor A Scarlatti Sonata for Recorder, Two Violins and Continuo in A minor D Scarlatti Sonata for Mandolin and Continuo in D minor, Kk90
Il Giardino Armonico Ensemble / Giovanni Antonini rec
Teldec Das Alte Werk 4509-93157-2 Ⓕ
(54 minutes: DDD). Recorded 1993 ●

The idea of a selection of music that might have been heard in early 18th-century Naples is not a new one but, in the area of chamber music, it has not been more vividly brought to life than on this disc. Domenico Scarlatti's Sonata is one of several believed to have been intended for a solo instrument with continuo, and here the soloist is as clean and quick-fingered a mandolinist as you could find, even if you hired a private detective (he is also the violist!) – a beguiling performance indeed. The remaining items lack any other recording, and all are to be welcomed. Sarri was a prolific composer of vocal music and the Concerto was his only instrumental work, with the recorder singing 'arias' that would tax any diva. There is something in each of the others to surprise and delight, such as the subtly tear-shedding chromatics of the opening Affetuoso of Durante's Concerto and the Piano of Alessandro Scarlatti's Sonata, a recorder/violin duo. Every item is illuminated by sensitivity to expressive nuance and dynamics, and the recording is close to perfection.

Sonatas from Dresden P

Furchheim Sonatas – E flat; D. Sonatella in A
Fux Rondeau Thieme Sonatas – E minor; D minor
Ziani Sonatas – No 11 in G minor; No 12 in D minor
Musica Antiqua Köln / Reinhard Goebel vn
Vanguard Classics 99199 (55 minutes: DDD) Ⓜ
Recorded 1999

The exuberantly Baroque city of Dresden provides the peg on which to hang some well-contrasted string sonatas by composers associated at one time or another with its culturally sophisticated court. Venetian composer Pietro Andrea Ziani (1616-84), a contemporary of Cavalli, worked there for a couple of years in the mid-1660s. The music of the Austrian-born Johann Joseph Fux (1660-1741) was popular in Dresden (though he never actually worked there), and this programme features an attractive Rondeau. Clemens Thieme (1631-68) and Johann Wilhelm Furchheim (?1635-82) both hailed from Dresden or its neighbouring countryside and were associated with the court Kapelle. Their music is, both rhythmically and texturally, perhaps the most interesting on the disc. What a wealth of ideas is contained in these pieces and what a civilised court it must have been, artistically at least, under all those Johann Georgs (II-IV) to have fostered such diversity and profusion of talent following the 30 Years War.

Musica Antiqua Köln always seems to be at its very best when conveying the expressive variety and textural richness of 17th-century ensemble music. The string sound on this recital is first-rate throughout, disciplined, tonally clear with an intentional edge to it, and warmly communicative. Furchheim's Sonatas in E flat and A major bring us into close contact with the manner of Biber or Schmelzer, although in these instances without the former's virtuosity. To get the most out of this repertoire it is best to play two or three pieces at a time, rather than listen to the entire programme uninterrupted. Highlights include Furchheim's A major Sonatella and Fux's seven-part Rondeau, played with fantasy and verve by these splendid players under Reinhard Goebel's experienced direction.

Wind Ensembles

Beethoven Quintet for Piano and Wind in E flat, Op 16$_a$ Brahms Trio for Horn, Violin and Piano in E flat, Op 40$_b$ Dukas Villanelle$_c$ Marais Le Basque$_d$ (arr hn and pf) Mozart Quintet for Horn and Strings in E flat, K407/K386$_e$ H
Dennis Brain hn $_b$Max Salpeter vn $_{cd}$Wilfrid Parry, $_b$Cyril Preedy pfs $_a$Dennis Brain Wind Ensemble; $_e$English String Quartet
BBC Legends/IMG Artists BBCL4048-2 Ⓜ
(72 minutes: ADD). Recorded 1957 ●●●

This is a marvellous record which does the fullest justice to the art of Dennis Brain, whom Boyd Neel called 'the finest Mozart player of his generation on any instrument'. This 1957 recording of the Mozart Horn Quintet surely bears that out. Brain has warm support from the English String Quartet, particularly in the lovely slow movement, but here his playing consistently dominates the ensemble lyrically, while the closing Rondo is sheer joy. So is Marais' delectable Le Basque. James Galway has subsequently made this piece his own on record, but Brain uses it as a witty encore, without showing off. Needless to say, the performance of the Brahms Horn Trio is very fine indeed. The infinitely sad, withdrawn atmosphere of the slow movement created by Brain's gentle soliloquy (track 11, 1'57") is unforgettable; and again the infectious hunting-horn whooping of the finale carries all before it. The recording is distanced in a resonant acoustic and is not ideally clear, but one soon forgets this.

The Dukas Villanelle is an arch-Romantic piece which all horn players feature for the want of something better, and Brain's ardour all but convinces us that it is fine music. But the highlight of the programme is the Beethoven piano and wind quintet in which Brain shows himself the perfect chamber music partner. Without wishing to dominate, he can't help making his mark at every entry. And his colleagues join him to make a superb team. The recording is astonishingly real. The very opening, not loud, nevertheless makes one sit up. The blending is so perfect, and Parry's pianism is not only the bedrock of the performance – the playing itself is very beautiful indeed.

In short, this is the performance against which all others must now be judged.

The Goossens Family

Bach Easter Oratorio – Sinfonia[d] Boyce Matelotte[c] Dunhill Three Short Pieces, Op 81 – Romance[c] Elgar (arr Jacob) Soliloquy[e] Finzi Interlude in A minor, Op 21[d] Henschel Shepherd's Lament[c] Hughes Bard of Armagh[c] Krein Serenade for Oboe and Two Harps[ab] Nicholas (trans M Goossens) Melody[ab] Pitfield Rondo lirico[c] Richardson Scherzino[c] Saunders A Cotswold Pastoral[d] Somers-Cocks Three Sketches – No 1[c] Stanton Two Pieces – Chanson pastorale[c]

Leon Goossens ob [a]Marie Goossens, [b]Sidonie Goossens hps [c]David Lloyd pf [d]Fitzwilliam Quartet; [e]Bournemouth Sinfonietta / Norman Del Mar

Chandos Enchant CHAN7132 Ⓜ

(61 minutes: DDD) ●

It is sad that this touching tribute to Leon Goossens, a superstar among oboists, has had to wait so long to appear on CD. The disc is described as honouring the whole Goossens family, and the harpists Marie and Sidonie certainly deserve recognition, but their contribution here is peripheral. They simply accompany their brother in two of the most charming items, Michael Krein's songful Serenade and Morgan Nicholas's hymn-like Melody. Melvin Harris's booklet-note puts admirably in context the place of Leon Goossens' style and technique in the development of oboe-playing in Britain, emphasising how this collection of short oboe pieces, many originally written for Goossens, represents a personal triumph. In June 1962, just after he had recorded the Bach Double Concerto, BWV1060, with Yehudi Menuhin for EMI – a classic recording – he was injured in a car crash and suffered serious damage to the muscles around his mouth, vital for any wind-player.

It was both a medical marvel and a tribute to Goossens' will-power that he ever played again, and this collection bears formidable witness to that triumph. Though the technical facility may not be quite the same as earlier, the warmth of tone and the ability to charm are undiminished. That he was in his late seventies at the time only adds to the marvel.

This collection is especially welcome because so many of the items are unique recordings, most of the composers being seriously under-represented in the catalogue. One of the exceptions is Finzi, whose beautiful Interlude is the most extended piece here, superbly played by the Fitzwilliam Quartet, with contrasted sections covering a wide emotional range. All items earn their place, but it is particularly pleasing to have the carefree little Rondo by Thomas Pitfield with its witty pay-off. Teacher of John McCabe among others, Pitfield, who died recently, is a composer who deserves a disc to himself.

The performance of the Bach Sinfonia may seem old-fashioned played with such expressive warmth, and no source is given for the jaunty Boyce hornpipe, Matelotte, but those are niggling points. Charm is the key to the whole collection, and such an illuminating portrait of a great artist too little represented on disc is most welcome.

String Quartets

Black Angels

Crumb Black Angels Tallis (arr Kronos Qt) Spem in alium Marta Doom. A sigh Ives (arr Kronos Qt/Geist) They are there! Shostakovich String Quartet No 8 in C minor, Op 110

Kronos Quartet (David Harrington, John Sherba vns Hank Dutt va Joan Jeanrenaud vc)

Nonesuch 7559-79242-2 Ⓕ

(62 minutes: DDD) ●●

This is very much the sort of imaginative programming we've come to expect from this talented young American quartet. With an overall theme of war and persecution the disc opens with George Crumb's Black Angels, for electric string quartet. This work was inspired by the Vietnam War and bears two inscriptions to that effect – in tempore belli (in time of war) and 'Finished on Friday the 13th of March, 1970', and it's described by Crumb as 'a kind of parable on our troubled contemporary world'. The work is divided into three sections which represent the three stages of the voyage of the soul – fall from grace, spiritual annihilation and redemption.

As with most of his works he calls on his instrumentalists to perform on a variety of instruments other than their own – here that ranges from gongs, maracas and crystal glasses to vocal sounds such as whistling, chanting and whispering. Doom. A sigh is the young Hungarian composer István Marta's disturbing portrait of a Romanian village as they desperately fight to retain their sense of identity in the face of dictatorship and persecution.

Marta's atmos-pheric blend of electronic sound, string quartet and recorded folk-songs leave one with a powerful and moving impression. At first sight Tallis's Spem in alium may seem oddly out of place considering the overall theme of this disc, but as the insert-notes point out the text was probably taken from the story of Judith, in which King Nebuchadnezzar's general Holofernes besieged the Jewish fortress of Bethulia. Kronos's own arrangement of this 40-part motet (involving some multi-tracking) certainly makes a fascinating alternative to the original.

A particularly fine account of Shostakovich's Eighth String Quartet (dedi-cated to the victims of fascism and war) brings this thought-provoking and imaginative recital to a close. Performances throughout are outstanding, and the recording first-class.

Smetana Quartet

SBT1074 Dvořák String Quartet No 12 in F, 'American', B179. Piano Quintet in A, B155[a] Janáček String Quartet No 1, 'The Kreutzer Sonata' SBT1075 Dvořák Terzetto in C, B148. String Quartet No 14 in A flat, B193 Janáček String Quartet No 2, 'Intimate Letters'
Smetana Quartet (Jiří Novák, Lubomir Kostecký vns Milan Skampa va Antonín Kohout vc)
[a]Pavel Stěpán pf
Testament ② SBT1074/5 Ⓕ
(oas: 79 and 77 minutes: ADD). Recorded 1965-66 ●

Listening to these discs tempts one to think that in the 1960s the Smetana was the Berlin Philharmonic of quartets – just as in the 1950s the Hollywoods might have been fancifully called the Philadelphia Orchestra of quartets. Much of the playing here is in a class of its own, only later equalled by the Borodin and Alban Berg Quartets in terms of finesse and ensemble. The Dvořák performances must be numbered among the very best now in the catalogue: their phrasing has none of the artificiality that marks some professional quartets (that is to say that a phrasing once rehearsed becomes, as it were, mechanically reproduced so that while the line rises and falls it doesn't genuinely breathe) and it is an enormous relief to hear genuine pianissimo tone and so natural and unforced an ensemble. There are numerous recordings of each of the Janáček Quartets but in terms of tonal finesse, perfection of ensemble and depth of feeling the present issues would be difficult to beat.

The String Quartet in 18th-Century England 🅿

Abel String Quartet in A, Op 8 No 5 Marsh Quartetto in B flat in imitation of the Stile of Haydn's Opera Prima Shield String Quartet in C minor, Op 3 No 6 Webbe Variations in A on 'Adeste Fideles' S Wesley String Quartet in E flat
Salomon Quartet (Simon Standage, Micaela Comberti vns Trevor Jones va Jennifer Ward-Clarke vc)
Hyperion CDA66780 (69 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1995 ●

For various reasons connected with the patterns of its social life, the string quartet was slow to become established in England. The work that opens this CD, by the German-born Abel, comes from the first set of quartets to be published in London (in 1769); it is an amiable piece, graceful enough, harmonically rather static and texturally unenterprising. The few Englishmen who ventured into the string quartet genre did rather better. William Shield's work, the sixth of a set published in 1782, begins with a passionate C minor gesture and has some echoes of Haydn both in the ingenuity of its humour and in its seriousness, though not in his technique nor his sureness of taste; but the Adagio is very remarkable, quite individual in the tone of its expression and reaching an extraordinarily imaginative climax in each half with a sort of free-flying violin passage, in its way breathtaking.

John Marsh wrote his quartet 'in imitation of the Stile of Haydn's Opera Prima' in the 1780s: it is a very fluent, polished piece, close in manner to Haydn's Op 1 No 1, with a spirited 6/8 opening movement, two minuets (the second particularly delightful) with an appealing Largo of charm and warmth, between them, and a witty finale with some lively invention. Samuel Webbe, too, used Haydn as his model – the slow movement of the Emperor Quartet – for his variations on Adeste Fideles: it is a beautiful, highly ingenious piece, harmonically rich, exquisitely crafted. But the most unexpected work here is certainly the Samuel Wesley Quartet, usually supposed to date from the very beginning of the 19th century but surely more likely to be 20 years later – the energetic, leaping lines, the complex figuration, the abrupt gestures, the free textures: all this speaks of a later, post-classical era. It is a substantial and powerful piece, wholly individual in tone. The Salomon brings a good deal of fire to this piece, and indeed, once past the Abel, it plays this music with splendid conviction, as it amply merits. This CD is something of a revelation.

Duos

Americana

Chaplin (arr Ogermann) Smile Foster Jeanie with the light brown hair. Old folks at home (both arr Heifetz) Gershwin Short Story (arr Dushkin). Three Preludes. Porgy and Bess – Summertime; A woman is a sometime thing; My man's gone now; Bess, you is my woman now; It ain't necessarily so; Tempo di Blues (arr Heifetz) Joplin The Ragtime Dance. The Easy Winners (both arr Perlman) Novacek Four Rags Ponce (arr Heifetz) Estrellita Traditional (arr Heifetz) Deep River Vieuxtemps Souvenir d'Amérique, Op 17
Leila Josefowicz vn John Novacek pf
Philips 462 948-2PH (64 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1999 ●●

Here's a major virtuoso not yet in her mid-twenties simply letting her hair down. Josefowicz has been acclaimed in the Sibelius and Tchaikovsky concertos under Neville Marriner (Philips) and she's played with John Novacek since she was eight. Their rapport is stunning. Josefowicz's magical technique is based on total control with occasional glissandos and extremely subtle near-blue notes.

Novacek's own Four Rags, close to the novelty piano idiom, are wonderful vehicles for the duo; Vieuxtemps' variations on 'Yankee Doodle' (Souvenir d'Amérique) are hilarious in a way which Gottschalk pioneered; and in Joplin's Ragtime Dance the composer's request for foot-stamping effects is followed, and the parallel thirds go wonderfully on the violin in Perlman's transcription. Josefowicz's melodic playing in Ponce's Estrellita ('Mexican Serenade') is irresistibly seductive, but the climax of the CD comes with a free approach to the Heifetz arrangements of six magnificent songs from Porgy and Bess. These two know much more about jazz than Heifetz ever did, and the Josefowicz/Novacek interpretations belong to the tradition of Fitzgerald/ Nelson Riddle or Miles Davis/Gil Evans. Every song comes across as an eloquent portrayal of its character's predicament – baleful bereavement in 'My man's gone now', casual cynicism in 'It ain't necessarily so', and so on.

'Americana' is a rapturous delight which Josefowicz fans, Gershwin fans, violin aficionados and many others cannot afford to miss. Fine recording, too. In short a fantastic talent and a hugely enjoyable anthology.

Cello Song

Bach Cantata No 156, Ich steh mit einem Fuss im Grabe – Sinfonia Brahms Five Lieder, Op 105 – Wie Melodien zieht es mir Castelnuovo-Tedesco Sea Murmurs, Op 24a Chopin Cello Sonata in G minor, Op 65 – Largo Debussy Beau soir Delius Hassan – Serenade Dvořák Seven Gipsy Melodies, B104 (Op 55) – Songs my Mother Taught Me
Elgar Romance, Op 62 Grieg Lyric Pieces, Book 3, Op 43 – To the Spring Messiaen Quatuor pour la fin du temps – Louange à l'Eternité de Jésus
Rachmaninov Romance in F minor Schumann Fünf Stücke im Volkston, Op 102 – No 2, Langsam
Scriabin Etudes in B flat minor, Op 8 No 11
Traditional The Star of the County Down
Villa-Lobos O Canto do capadócio
Julian Lloyd Webber vc John Lenehan pf
Philips 434 917-2PH (53 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1992

As the title of this disc implies, all the pieces contained therein are rather in the same slowish-paced, lyrical vein, but their sequence has been cleverly chosen so that there is still plenty of variety to keep the listener's attention. Some of the items are original cello and piano pieces, others are skilful arrangements, and there is a good mixture of well known and unusual offerings. Elgar's bassoon Romance translates particularly well to the cello, as do the Brahms, Debussy and Dvořák songs, and only in the arrangement of Grieg's piano piece To the Spring does one feel that a cello is a little out of place. The Messiaen excerpt is the longest and the most profound item, and it exists quite happily as an entity away from the rest of the Quatuor. Throughout, Julian Lloyd Webber plays with exceptional sensitivity, sympathy and tonal beauty – it would be difficult to find better performances of this kind of repertoire anywhere on records of today or yesterday. John Lenehan gives good support, and Philips have provided a mellow, roomy recording.

Devil's Dance

Bazzini La ronde des lutins, Op 25 Bolcom Graceful Ghost Brahms Walpurgisnacht, Op 75 No 4 Grieg (arr Achron) Puck, Op 71 No 3 Korngold (arr Révay) Caprice fantastique, 'Wichtelmännchen'
Mendelssohn Hexenlied, Op 8 No 8 Morris Young Frankenstein – A Transylvanian Lullaby Paganini (arr Schumann) Caprice No 13 in B flat Saint-Saëns (arr cpsr) Danse macabre, Op 40 Sarasate Concert Fantasy on Gounod's 'Faust' Tartini (arr Kreisler) Violin Sonata in G minor, 'Devil's Trill' Williams (arr cpsr) The Witches of Eastwick – The Devil's Dance
Ysaÿe Solo Violin Sonata in A minor, Op 27 No 2 – first movement
Gil Shaham vn Jonathan Feldman pf
DG 463 483-2GH (69 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1998-99 ●

According to the prominent red caution notice provided, one approaches the opening track on this CD at one's peril. But as it happens John Williams's title-piece, ingenious as it is, is less devilish than the closing excerpt from Ysaÿe's Solo Violin Sonata, Op 27 No 2, which, after a whiff of unaccompanied Bach, offers the Dies irae as a demonic cantus firmus (always clear) for Gil Shaham's dazzlingly fiendish decorations. Tartini's Devil's Trill Sonata (supposedly inspired in a dream by the Prince of Darkness himself), heard in Kreisler's arrangement, opens with a disarmingly mellow warmth. Shaham makes light of the once much-feared trills and here totally civilises the satanic influence. If you need to be petrified by this piece, you have to turn to Andrew Manze's recording. Nevertheless, overall this is a most engaging collection, imaginatively devised, played with panache, and given demonstration sound quality – not a scratch can be heard.

There are quite a few 'finds' too, notably Grieg's delicious 'Puck', a sparkling scherzando, and Korngold's impish Wichtelmännchen, with its quirky coda, while Mendelssohn's Hexenlied has a 'sprite'-ly charm (and taxes the pianist too, as any accomplished goblin should). Bazzini's La ronde des lutins remains one of the most hair-raising of all violinistic showpieces, and is taken here at a fair old lick, and with much aplomb, while William Bolcom's elegantly Graceful Ghost brings a wraith-like halcyon interlude.

Paganini himself could not have presented this programme with more diabolically easy bravura, and certainly not with such a consistent sense of style.

Devil's Trill

Gluck Orfeo ed Euridice – Dance of the Blessed Spirits Leclair Sonatas for Violin and Continuo – D, Op 8 No 2; C minor, Op 5 No 6 Tartini Sonata for Violin and Continuo in G minor, 'Devil's Trill'
Vivaldi (arr Respighi) Sonata for Violin and Continuo in D, Op 2 No 11
Yuval Yaron vn Jeremy Denk pf
Naim Audio NAIMCD018 (48 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1996 ●●

This is truly beautiful violin playing, elegant in the opening Larghetto of Tartini's The Devil's Trill Sonata and with the truest intonation later on. The cadenza, too, is extremely brilliant, though never 'showy'. Both sonatas by the 18th-century dancer-turned-composer Jean Leclair find Yaron in fine fettle, with a winsome tone and tastefully controlled vibrato. Respighi's naughty-but-nice reworking of a sonata that Vivaldi dedicated to Frederick IV of Norway and Denmark features some delicious piano harmonies beneath the solo line, and you would be hard put to find a more eloquent voicing of the Gluck/Kreisler 'Mélodie'. So who, you may ask, is Yuval Yaron? Violin aficionados may already have encountered him, but the more general reader might like to know that he won First Prize at the 1975 Sibelius Competition in Helsinki, studied with Gingold and at Heifetz's masterclasses and is currently Professor of Violin at the Indiana University School of Music in Bloomington, where his excellent pianist Jeremy Denk also serves and where Naim's recordings were. The timing is stingy but, as already suggested, Yaron's playing is an absolute joy to behold.

Duos for Violin and Cello

Bach Two-Part Invention No 6 in E, BWV777
Handel/Halvorsen (arr Press) Passacaglia
Kodály Duo, Op 7 Ravel Sonata for Violin and Cello
Kennedy vn Lynn Harrell vc
EMI 556963-2 (58 minutes: ADD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1999

Here's a brilliant expiation for crusty old curmudgeons who would tell you that Kennedy's musical priorities are rather to shock than to please. Kennedy plays into Lynn Harrell's hands as if the two men had once shared a single umbilical chord. Ravel's rarely heard Sonata for Violin and Cello finds them locked in earnest dialogue (as in the first movement) or sparring furiously (in the second), alternating sundry dramatic effects, such as slammed cello pizzicatos and lacerating bowed fortissimos (a Kennedy speciality). They also alternate harmonics (2'40" into the Très vif second movement), then bring a veiled brand of poetry to the slow movement (marked Lent and a sure recollection of the Piano Trio's Passacaille, composed some six years earlier). It's an amazing piece, mostly characteristic but with fleeting suggestions of various contemporaries. One imagines that Kennedy's interest in various indigenous musics fuels his enthusiasm for Kodály's earthy Op 7. You can almost see him chuckle at the tipsy folk-tune at 4'32" into the last movement – even more so when it makes a humorous return – and Harrell's playing mirrors the mood exactly.

As to the Handel-Halvorsen Passacaglia, Kennedy and Harrell employ a very individual brand of fire – teasing, grappling, racing or duetting as if they were playing jazz. Wonderful fun and an urgent candidate for the Replay button, that's if you reach it before the Bach Two-part Invention has started. If it has, you'll end the listening session with a mood of sublime simplicity. You can't really go wrong, either way.

Espana!

Albéniz Suite española, Op 47 – Sevilla; Cádiz; Aragon; Castilla. Pavana capricho, Op 12. Iberia – Triana. Navarra Falla La vida breve – Danses espagnoles. El amor brujo – Ritual Fire Dance
Infante Danses andalouses Lecuona Malagueña
Katia and Marielle Labèque pf
Philips 438 938-2PH (59 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1993

The Labèque sisters give us the right Iberian mixture of vigour, brilliance, shadows and languor, and seem to be thoroughly enjoying themselves in music that they know well. There is no more exciting keyboard performance of Falla's 'Ritual Fire Dance'. This is actually a transcription by Mario Bragiotti. Indeed, save for the Danses Andalouses by Manuel Infante, every piece here is a transcription and the Labèques themselves have had a hand in that of Lecuona's exquisitely sultry Malagueña, which includes quietly plucked strings at the two-minute mark. But no one would know that this music was not originally written for two pianos, for everything is idiomatic. Indeed, the transcription of Albéniz's Suite española and Pavana capricho is by the composer, while that of his 'Triana' (music that beautifully blends vivacity and delicacy) is by his friend Granados. The recording is intimate yet atmospheric.

Fantaisie for Flute and Harp

L Boulanger Nocturne Caplet Rêverie
Fauré Fantaisie, Op 79. Après un rêve, Op 7 No 1. Sicilienne, Op 78. Pièce Piazzolla Histoire du Tango
Ravel Pavane pour une infante défunte
Saint-Saëns Romance, Op 37 Traditional El diablo suelto. La partida. Spanish Love Song (trans Galway). Urpila. Bailecito de procesión Villa-Lobos Modinha. Bachianas Brasileiras No 5
Anna Noakes fl Gillian Tingay hp
ASV White Line CDWHL2101 (76 minutes: DDD) Ⓜ
Recorded 1996

Here is a lightweight but entertaining collection, which happily juxtaposes French insouciance with Latin American sparkle. The pair of South American folksongs which opens the programme are real lollipops; then comes some lilting Villa-Lobos; first the sultry rhythmic Modinha, nudged with a nice rhythmic subtlety, and then the famous (soprano/cello) Bachianas Brasileiras No 5, which sounds seductive enough on the flute. The disc includes flowing, coolly beautiful Fauré and a gentle, haunting Nocturne by Lili Boulanger (meltingly phrased by Anna Noakes), followed by a romantic morceau by Saint-Saëns. One of the most enticing later pieces is the chimerical Rêverie of André Caplet and the recital ends with a highly individual and immediately arresting suite of four strongly flavoured miniatures by Astor Piazzolla called Histoire du Tango, bewitching in their combination of Latin rhythmic inflexions with a smoky Parisian night-club atmosphere. They are presented with much élan and sparkle and given added lift by various uninhibited percussive thwacks from both players. Although the harp sounds somewhat recessed, it always provides a glowing web of sound.

Impressions d'enfance
Bartók Violin Sonata No 2, Sz76
Enescu Impressions d'enfance, Op 28
Schulhoff Violin Sonata No 2
Plakidis Two Grasshopper Dances
Gidon Kremer vn Oleg Maisenberg pf
Teldec 0630-13597-2 (63 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1996 ●●

This is a fabulous recital, the sort that suggests wet ink on the page and performances born more of impulse than of duty. The Enescu sequence is pure delight, from the gypsy-like cadences of the unaccompanied 'Minstrel' that opens the suite, through the virtual-reality chirruping of 'The bird in the cage and the cuckoo on the wall', to the ingenious 'linking' miniatures that etch a cricket and 'Wind in the chimney'. Impressions d'enfance (1940) ends with an extraordinarily graphic 'Sunrise'. The idiom straddles late Debussy and mature Bartók, though Enescu's characteristically Romanian flavouring soon gives the game away. Kremer's performances are agile, lean and impetuous, with copious slides and numerous flushes of warmth. Furthermore, he carries the camp-fire element into the Bartók, rhapsodising rapturously over the final climax and effecting a magical diminuendo towards the sonata's close. Maisen-berg commands a multi-shaded tonal palette and it's a delight to encounter a work that can be – in unsympathetic hands – a listening trial transformed into a sort of cerebral Hungarian rhapsody.

Which leaves Ervín Schulhoff's outspoken Second Violin Sonata, a product of 1927, touched by Hindemith's influence in the first movement, and by heated emotions in the second. Kremer and Maisenberg give it show-case treatment and the recording is, as elsewhere, first-rate.

Håkan Hardenberger tpt
Constant Alleluias Damase Trois prières sans paroles
Hakim Sonata for Trumpet and Organ
Jansen Processional Jolivet Arioso barocco
Satie La statue retrouvée Sauguet Non morietur in aeternum Tomasi Semaine Sainte à Cuzco
Håkan Hardenberger tpt Simon Preston org
BIS BISCD 1109 (68 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 2001

The trumpet has played a prominent part in French contemporary music in the last 30 years or so, motivated as ever by outstanding executants who inspire composers to plot new graphs. André Jolivet wrote Arioso barocco for the great Maurice André. This is the one truly evocative work, 'Messiaen-ic' in its gestating mysteries but still quite distinctive. Håkan Hardenberger presents a typically catholic celebration of this specialised virtuoso genre, with the trumpet and organ united in the thrilling acoustic of Aarhus Cathedral: finding an agreeable recording perspective within such a reverberant space takes some doing. The organ is a little recessed in places but it suits the gentle lilt of Damase's eminently forgettable schmaltz, and the irreverent circus-cum-lounge-lizardry of Hakim's riotous Sonata.

The most gripping sound picture is found in those pieces divulging an effortless cohesion between two doyens of their instruments, often at full stretch.

Hardenberger's gleaming high register, rasping fortes and floating pianissimo legatos, not to mention the quality of tuning where the trumpet is expected to sit unequivocably between the inscrutable partials of Preston's thoughtful organ registrations, is in glorious evidence in Marius Constant's quizzical Alleluias, and Tomasi's concise and customarily idiomatic Semaine Sainte à Cuzco.

One could quibble that Hardenberger's quick vibrato is a touch predictable but this is an artist setting standards in works which very few other people can actually play. In toto, another considerable achievement from this sparkling duo.

Sergei Nakariakov – Virtuoso Music for Trumpet
Arban Variations on a theme from Bellini's 'Norma'[a]. Variations on a Tyrolean Theme[a] W Brandt Concert Piece No 2 Falla La vida breve – Danse espagnole[b]
Fauré Le réveil[b] Paganini Caprice in E flat, Op 1 No 17[b]. Moto perpetuo in C, Op 11[b]
Saint-Saëns Le carnaval des animaux – The swan[b]
Sarasate Zigeunerweisen, Op 20[c]
Tchaikovsky Valse-scherzo in C, Op 34[b]
Waxman Carmen Fantasia[a]
Sergei Nakariakov tpt Alexander Markovich pf
Teldec 4509-94554-2 (59 minutes: DDD)
Items marked [a] arr Markovich, [b]Nakariakov, Ⓕ
[c]Dokshitzer. Recorded 1994 ●

Sergei Nakariakov is an extraordinary talent. It is one thing to be able to play the violin at the age of 17 with the technical aplomb of one's elders but a brass instrument – on a purely physical level – requires a strength and maturity which can be accelerated only so fast. His prowess as a trumpeter lies not only in the sphere of technical wizardry, which he has in super-abundance, but in a security of tone and interpretational vision: the subtle tuning in this selection of mainly transcribed violin pieces and the gypsyish portamentos are astute and accomplished. The Russian-ness of his playing is fascinating; he has that intensity of tone that Westerners find so hard to emulate without sounding corny or chastened. Nakariakov has a focused but fat, epic sound (though no doubt it will get even more wholesome with age) and a total security and command in all registers. His technique is particularly admirable in the lower reaches where he seems rarely to need the air at his disposal to progress through phrases. Nakariakov's slow playing is fluid, especially in Le réveil.

Emmanuel Pahud flute
Paris French Flute Sonatas Dutilleux Sonatine
Ibert Jeux. Aria Jolivet Chant de Linos
Messiaen Le merle noir Milhaud Sonatina for Flute and Piano, Op 76 Poulenc Flute Sonata
Sancan Sonatine
Emmanuel Pahud fl Eric Le Sage pf
EMI 556488-2 (66 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1997 ●

Examinations are usually viewed with aversion and some suspicion, but the Paris Conservatoire's custom of commissioning new works for its final examinations has valuably enriched the repertoire for wind instruments: three of the works on this disc – the Sonatinas (of 1943 and 1946 respectively) of the exact contemporaries Dutilleux and Sancan, and Messiaen's Le merle noir – owe their origin to these competitive exams. By their nature they lay stress on technical virtuosity, as indeed do nearly all the works here, which though differing widely in idiom share a certain Gallic style recognisable by its 'clarity, refinement and lightness of touch', as the insert-note puts it. These qualities are also characteristic of the playing of the Swiss-born Emmanuel Pahud, Principal Flute of the Berlin Philharmonic, who has a lighter tone than some of his distinguished predecessors. All the items here have been recorded before, however. Excellent partnered by Eric Le Sage, Pahud's brilliant and sensitive performances are outstanding. Exhilaratingly skittish in the brief scherzando finale of the Sancan and that of the Poulenc, intense in the Jolivet, mysteriously atmospheric in the first movement of the Dutilleux (a work undervalued by its composer), tender in the Ibert Aria and powerfully athletic at the end of the Messiaen, this disc is a winner.

Pastoral
Bax Clarinet Sonata[a] Bliss Pastoral (posth)[a]. Two Nursery Rhymes[b] Ireland Fantasy-Sonata in E flat[a]
Stanford Clarinet Sonata, Op 129[a]
Vaughan Williams Six Studies in English folk song[a]. Three Vocalises for Soprano Voice and Clarinet[b]
Emma Johnson cl [b]Judith Howarth sop
[a]Malcolm Martineau pf Ⓕ
ASV CDDCA891 (74 minutes: DDD) ●

A lovely programme, radiantly performed and most judiciously chosen. Things get under way in fine style with John Ireland's marvellous Fantasy-Sonata: beautifully written, passionately argued and encompassing (for Ireland) a wide range of moods; it's certainly a work that shows this underrated figure at the height of his powers. The Clarinet Sonata by Ireland's teacher, Stanford, is one of that composer's most successful works: formally elegant and most idiomatically laid out, it boasts a central Adagio (entitled 'Caoine' – an Irish lament) of considerable eloquence. Johnson is a gloriously mellifluous exponent in both Vaughan Williams's Six Studies and the Bax Sonata, and in the first movement of the latter she manages to convey a slumbering mystery that is somehow almost orchestral in its imaginative scope. Judith Howarth joins Johnson for the haunting Three Vocalises (one of Vaughan Williams's very last utterances from his final year) and makes an equally agile showing in Bliss's delightful Two Nursery Rhymes and touching Pastoral. A real pleasure, then, from start to finish and Malcolm Martineau proffers superb accompaniments.

Lawrence Power viola
Ligeti Viola Sonata Prokofiev Romeo and Juliet, Op 64 (arr Borisowsky)[a] – La danse des chevaliers; Juliette enfant; Mercutio; Montagues et Capulets; La mort de Juliette Roslavets Viola Sonata No 1[a]
Takemitsu A Bird came down the Walk[a]
Lawrence Power va [a]Simon Crawford-Phillips pf
Harmonia Mundi Les Nouveaux Musiciens Ⓑ
HMN91 1756 (61 minutes: DDD). Recorded 2001 ●

Though still in his early twenties prize-winning violist Lawrence Power has concertised, broadcast and toured with encouraging regularity. His keen reflexes, supple bowing and acute sense of style suggest a definite star in the ascendant. His opening selection is a tightly knit Viola Sonata that Nicolai Roslavets composed in 1926, music that weaves a complex web of ideas based on 'synthetic chords'. The musical language seems to meld elements of Scriabin, Berg and early Schoenberg and the gritty piano writing finds a sympathetic advocate in Simon Crawford-Phillips. Power himself fronts this highly dramatic performance with fervour and perception. Ligeti's 1995 Sonata for unaccompanied viola opens uncompromisingly on the C string only, toying with pitch much as Britten does (on the horn) at the start of his Serenade – though at one point Ligeti seems to be quoting Mahler 10. Its six variegated movements incorporate a jagged Presto and a haughty 'Chaconne chromatique' to close. Toru Takemitsu's A Bird came down the Walk (1994) sounds more grateful to play – its repertoire of gestures edge nearer the soul of the instrument, or seems to – and Power makes the most of its wide range of tone colours. But for many the highlight of the disc will be the sequence of four pieces that WW Borisowsky arranged from Prokofiev's Romeo and Juliet. Here Power and Crawford-Phillips collaborate for some vivid character painting. The performances are masterly and the sound is first-rate.

David Pyatt horn
Abbott Alla caccia Beethoven Horn Sonata in F, Op 17 Damase Pavane variée. Berceuse, Op 19
Koechlin Horn Sonata, Op 70 Hindemith Horn Sonata Schumann Adagio and Allegro in A flat, Op 70 F Strauss Nocturno, Op 7
David Pyatt hn Martin Jones pf
Erato 3984-21632-2 (66 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1996 ●

Beethoven's Horn Sonata – premièred in its day premièred by the Bohemian virtuoso, Punto – is nevertheless written rather clumsily for the horn (the composer suggested the cello as an alternative), and even Dennis Brain had problems with it. David Pyatt – Gramophone's Young Artist of the Year in 1996 – sails off into the work with aplomb and gives it one of the finest performances on or off record. He makes it seem to sit easily on the instrument and provides just the right kind of timbre and buoyant lyrical flow – indeed it sounds like a masterpiece, which it very nearly is. He is helped by a first-rate partnership with Martin Jones and an excellently balanced recording.

The second piece here is an attractive novelty by Franz Strauss, father of Richard, and another famous player who advised Wagner on the format of Siegfried's horn call. Koechlin's Sonata has a rather fine Andante très tranquille, and another Frenchman, Jean-Michel Damase, provides two short but memorable occasional pieces. The Hindemith Sonata is wayward: it never seems quite sure where it is progressing harmonically, but Pyatt and Jones are so naturally and spontaneously attuned to the work that it becomes readily assimilable. Abbott's Alla caccia is an endearing lollipop while Schumann's Adagio and Allegro here emerges flowing almost as easily as if it had been written by Mozart – who knew just what a horn could manage without sounding effortful. Altogether this is a splendid recital that will give much pleasure to any lover of this highly rewarding instrument.

Maxim Vengerov – Virtuoso Works for Violin and Piano

Bazzini La ronde des lutins, Op 25 Bloch Baal shem – Nigun Kreisler Schön Rosmarin. Tambourin chinois. Caprice viennois Messiaen Thème et Variations Paganini I palpiti, Op 13 Sarasate Caprice basque, Op 24 Tchaikovsky Souvenir d'un lieu cher, Op 42 – No 2, Scherzo in C minor; No 3, Mélodie in E flat Wieniawski Polonaise No 1 in D, Op 4. Légende, Op 17

Maxim Vengerov vn Itamar Golan pf

Teldec 9031-77351-2 (67 minutes: DDD) Ⓜ

Recorded 1993 ●

Maxim Vengerov is such a masterful musician that everything he touches turns to gold. Firstly, his intonation is impeccable. The purity and steadiness of Paganini's I palpiti is such that one never has the impression of his being under any strain. The double-stopping episodes in Wieniawski's Légende appear to come as naturally to him as single notes. He captures the mawkish Slavonic melancholy with real intensity. In the Kreisler selection Vengerov is gentle and generous-spirited, charmingly pure in Schön Rosmarin and idiomatic for the tongue-in-cheek Tambourin chinois. The Bazzini has terrific attack, though it might have been more impish. The piece is undeniably inconsequential, but one is left gawping at the phenomenal accuracy and confidence of the left-hand pizzicato section at the end. In conclusion it must be said that rarely if ever does one hear the Tchaikovsky Mélodie played with more eloquence or refined tone colour.

Miscellaneous Chamber Groups

Journey to the Amazon

L Almeida Historia do Luar$_a$ Barrios Waltz, Op 8 No 4. Julia Florida Brouwer Canción de cuna, 'Berceuse'$_a$ (arr Grenet) Canonico Aire de Joropo$_a$ (arr Lauro/Diaz) Lauro Seis por derecho$_a$. El marabino. Valses venezolanos – No 3, Natalia$_a$ Montaña Porro$_a$ Savio Batucada$_a$ Thiago de Mello A Hug for Pixingha$_a$. Chants for the Chief$_{ab}$ – No 1, A Chamada dos ventos/Canção Nocturna; No 2, Uirapurú do Amazonas (both arr cpsr). Lago de Janaucá. A Hug for Tiberio$_a$. Cavaleiro sem Armadura$_{ab}$ (arr Wolff) Vianna Cochichando$_a$ (arr Barbosa-Lima)

Sharon Isbin gtr with $_a$Gaudencio Thiago de Mello perc $_b$Paul Winter sax

Teldec 0630-19899-2 (55 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ

Recorded 1997 ●

No one is currently doing more to free the guitar from its rent-a-programme image than Sharon Isbin. She is not South American, nor does the Amazon flow through Cuba, Colombia, Venezuela or Paraguay, but none of this matters in the least. Others before her have hitched rides with specialists in particular areas and sounded like uncomfortable passengers, but Isbin has loved and felt this music for over a quarter of a century and in the company of Thiago de Mello and Paul Winter is entirely at home. One might fear the addition of assorted percussive sounds and 'rain-forest' noises to be intrusive, especially in the familiar items, but they are atmospherically enhancing, handled with great discretion (delightfully in Grenet's arrangement of Brouwer's Canción de cuna) and often rhythmically uplifting. Lauro's setting of the traditional Seis por derecho has never sounded more full of vitality. The guitar has a wide range of tone colour, which Isbin exploits with skill and taste in traversing the gamut from tenderness to joyously rhythmic energy.

The excellent annotation resides in a concertina-form booklet, which is user-friendly in that respect, but whose printing in white on a 'rain-forest' background is not equally so. Recording is beautifully clear and well balanced. Waste no time in getting your hands on this disc.

Mnemosyne

Anonymous Alleluia nativitatis. Eagle Dance. Fayrfax Africanus. Novus novus. Russian Psalm Athenaeus Delphic Paean Billings When Jesus Wept Brumel Agnus Dei Dufay Gloria Garbarek Loiterando. Strophe and Counter-Strophe Guillaume le Rouge Se je fayz dueil Hildegard of Bingen O ignis Spiritus Paracliti Mesomedes Hymn to the Sun Tallis O Lord, in Thee is all my trust Tormis Estonian Lullaby Traditional Mascarades. Quechua Song. Remember me, my dear (all arr Hilliard Ensemble)

Jan Garbarek saxes The Hilliard Ensemble

ECM New Series ② 465 122-2 (105 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ

Texts and translations included

Recorded 1998

'A sign we are, inexplicable without pain… .' The words are by the 19th-century German poet Friedrich Hölderlin, taken from Mnemosyne, one of the cryptic hymns that he wrote before descending into madness. ECM publishes the entire first strophe as a sort of legend, and the reference is telling. 'Mnemosyne' was the mother of the muses, and the word also means 'memory'. For Hölderlin, song was an 'abandoned, flowing nature', a description that fits this album beautifully. Memory, ecstasy, pain, joy, reconciliation: all are, at one time or another, signalled in the present programme.

Garbarek spices the English 13th-century Alleluia nativitatis that opens the second disc with some unexpectedly Eastern-sounding modulations. The Delphic Paean that follows dives headlong among some absorbing dissonances, whereas Garbarek's own Strophe and Counter-Strophe enjoys a more sophisticated harmonic climate. Add Basque folk-song fragments warmed by the breathy aural contours of Garbarek's saxophone, and you have a characteristic sampling of a sequence that lasts, in total, for one-and-three-quarter hours. Both discs feature twilit Estonian lullabies (placed third on disc 1, and sixth on disc 2). Dufay's Gloria (sung sans Garbarek) ends on a desolate, protracted Amen, with Fayrfax Africanus marking an exultant point of contrast. Brumel's Agnus Dei allows Garbarek to temporarily monopolise the main melody line, but perhaps the most striking collaboration of all is for Hildegard's O ignis Spiritus which reaches spine-tingling levels of ecstasy.

The second CD includes a Russian Psalm where Garbarek adopts a resonant bass presence, an up-tempo Iroquois and Padleirmiut Eagle dance and, to close, works by William Billings and Mesomedes that complete the musical arch with something close to perfection. It is a difficult disc to categorise. Maybe we should view it as a collaborative original composition which balances ancient and modern, sacred and profane, body and soul.

Emmanuel Pahud flute

Debussy Syrinx[a]. Chansons de Bilitis (arr Lenski)[b]. La plus que lente[c]
Prokofiev Flute Sonata in D, Op 94[b]
Ravel Trois chansons madécasses[d]
[d]Katarina Karnéus mez [abd]Emmanuel Pahud fl
[d]Truls Mørk vc [bcd]Stephen Kovacevich pf
EMI 556982-2 (61 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1999 ◉

Pahud's range of tone colour is amazing – no one listening to the Prokofiev Sonata is likely to feel short-changed by not hearing it in its familiar violin transcription, and in 'Aoua!', the central song of Ravel's Chansons madécasses, Pahud gets closer than most flautists to playing, as the composer directs, 'like a trumpet'. His dynamic range is still more startling, if anything, but there is never any sense of him extending the instrument beyond its nature, of forcing it to do un-flute-like things. Katarina Karnéus's clean French diction and wide range are well suited to the Ravel (the Chansons madécasses ideally demand a mezzo who is also a soprano, or vice versa).

The Chansons de Bilitis recorded here are not Debussy's set of three songs nor, strictly speaking, his incidental music for a stage entertainment based on Pierre Louÿs's poems. It is the Six épigraphes antiques (for piano duet or two pianos) that Debussy based on that stage music which have been transcribed for flute and piano by Karl Lenski. The flute is either evoked or deliberately imitated throughout the Epigraphes and it seems, especially when played this beautifully, a permissible and appropriate addition to the flautist's repertoire. To which the Prokofiev Sonata is, of course, central, and Pahud gives it a big, bold and vivid reading, but with nothing overstated in the lyrical dialogues of the opening movement or the warmly expressive Andante. The recording is a little close but richly colourful.

Henry Purcell and his Time 🄿

Baltzar Divisions on 'John Come Kiss me Now'[b]
Jenkins Fantasia in three parts W Lawes Fantasia-Suite No 7 in D minor Locke The Broken Consort – Suites Nos 3[b] and 4 Purcell Pavans – B flat, Z750; G minor, Z752[a]. Fantasia upon a Ground, Z731[ab]
C Simpson Prelude. Divisions on a Ground[b]
Scaramouche (Andrew Manze, Caroline Balding vns Jaap ter Linden bass viol Ulrike Wild hpd/org)
[a]Foskien Kooistra vn [b]Konrad Junghänel theorbo
Channel Classics CCS4792 (60 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1992

On this disc of English 17th-century chamber music, Scaramouche offers a homogeneous selection of music and instrumental combinations. (The disc advertises itself, by the way, as offering the music of 'Henry Purcell and His Time', a claim whose level of accuracy – Lawes, for one, died over a decade before Purcell was born – is eloquently symbolised by a portrait of an unmistakably Elizabethan lady on the front of the box!) Here the innocent charm of other selections of this nature is largely replaced by the weightier, more sober pronouncements of Lawes, Locke and Purcell, but also by a bold interpretative vigour which makes it just as lively a listen in its own way.

Jaap ter Linden's rendition of his Simpson piece is suitably poetic, while Andrew Manze's version of John Come Kiss me Now has a Turkey-in-the-Straw ending that will certainly make you chuckle.

This may be a slightly less polished and fluent recording than some others, but in the end, moments such as these – as well as the fact that there is lastingly rewarding music to be heard here – will make you want to play this disc again and again.

INSTRUMENTAL

Thomas Adès pf

20th Century Piano
Busoni Sonatina No 3, 'ad usum infantis' Castiglioni Come io passo l'estate Grieg Norwegian Peasant Dances, Op 72 – Knut Luråsens halling I; The Goblin's Bridal Procession; The Bride of Skudal Janáček Intimate Sketches – Cekám Tě! Kurtág Les Adieux in Janáčeks Manier. Egy igaz ember emlékére. Hommage à Csajkovszkij. Hommage à Nancy Sinatra. Keringó. A Megvadult lenhajó lång. Preludium e Korál. Tears Nancarrow 3 Canons for Ursula Stanchinsky Canon a 4 voci. Sonata No 2 in G Stravinsky Piano-Rag Music. Souvenir d'une marche boche. Valse pour les enfants
Thomas Adès pf
EMI 557051-2 (72 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 2000 ●

Given free rein to construct a recital programme a composer/pianist will almost always present an audience with a very different kind of recital from that of a concert pianist per se. Look not for standard repertoire and virtuosic display for it's unlikely to be on the agenda. Expect instead a programme of exploration and of unexpected juxtapositions, which is exactly what Thomas Adès delivers.

Adès opens this enterprising selection of 20th-century piano music with Castiglioni's How I Spent the Summer, an incident-packed 'travel diary' suite telling of adventures during a vacation in the Italian Alps. Though partly aimed at aspiring young pianists it nevertheless contains some sophisticated pianistic invention and engages the listener's attention all the way. It's a particularly welcome gem too, considering the woeful dearth of Castiglioni in the catalogue at present. Next comes Grieg. Adès gives us beautifully crafted, sharply characterised readings of three pieces from Slåtter, Op 72, reminding us that Grieg was often harmonically adventurous and forward-looking as well as a master miniaturist.

Adès's genuine respect and admiration for the music on this disc shines through again and again, making the performances throughout not just fine, but special too. Busoni's Sonatina No 3 ad usum infantis is not only an excellent example of this but also of the subtlety of Adès's playing. Only in the Stanchinsky pieces is one aware of a degree of hesitancy and lack of focus. However, Adès excels in his selection of pieces from Kurtág's piano cycle Playing Games, and indeed takes real pleasure in the composer's mischievous sense of humour – check out the grotesque transformations of Debussy and Tchaikovsky in The Mad Girl with Flaxen Hair and Homage to Tchaikovsky. There are more gems for the uncovering here, too, not least an impressive account of Nancarrow's Three Canons for Ursula. In sum, a fascinating disc.

Pierre-Laurent Aimard pf

'At Carnegie Hall'
Beethoven Piano Sonata No 23 in F minor, 'Appassionata', Op 57 Berg Piano Sonata, Op 1 Debussy Etudes – Pour les huit doigts. Images – Reflets dans l'eau; Poissons d'or Ligeti Etudes, Book 1 – Cordes à vide; Automne à Varsovie; Book 2 – Der Zauberlehrling Liszt Deux Légendes – St François de Paule marchant sur les flots, S175 No 2 Messiaen Vingt Regards sur l'enfant Jésus – Première Communion de la Vierge
Pierre-Laurent Aimard pf
Teldec 0927-43088-2 (76 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded live at Carnegie Hall, New York in 2001 ●●

There can be no justice in this world if this document of a recital at Carnegie Hall doesn't establish Pierre-Laurent Aimard as a major artist on the international stage. The range of his carefully composed programme may astonish. So, surely, will his excellence in all departments – pianistic, musical, intellectual and imaginative. The highest qualities in these domains are constantly in play and in balance, without lapse, and there is a temperament, a warmth and a freshness of vision here that make everything wondrous and delightful.

The Berg and the Beethoven, the first half of the recital, are thoughtfully counterpointed – the Berg, a pivotal work, suggesting 'a reflection on what the sonata has been and might become' (Aimard's own annotation) and instructive when placed as a preface to the Appassionata. Admire this pianist's formal strength and perfectly judged rhetoric in both, and a reading of the Beethoven not just as tragedy, still less as a succession of extreme contrasts, but as a completely characterised poetic drama.

Throughout Aimard's programme you notice that he makes everything speak – the continuity to be understood only in musical terms, naturally, but as if there were narrative in the way one thing follows another. Then Debussy, played like a composer, the spaces wondrously inhabited. Of the Ligeti Etudes one needs say only that he is Ligeti's preferred exponent, so these three are self-recommending. Exciting playing and, once again, drawing attention only to the music.

Carnegie Hall cheered to the rafters, applauded lots everywhere and kept commendably quiet during the music. Aimard says he did barely half an hour of retouches afterwards, mostly to cover the coughs. If he's not yet known to you, hold back no longer.

Géza Anda pf

Bartók Concertos for Piano and Orchestra – No 1, Sz83$_a$; No 2, Sz95$_b$; No 3, Sz119$_b$ Chopin Waltzes$_d$ – No 1 in E flat, Op 18; No 2 in A flat, Op 34 No 1; No 3 in A minor, Op 34 No 2; No 4 in F, Op 34 No 3; No 5 in A flat, Op 42; No 6 in D flat, 'Minute', Op 64 No 1; No 7 in C sharp minor, Op 64 No 2; No 8 in A flat, Op 64 No 3; No 9 in A flat, Op 69 No 1; No

10 in B minor, Op 69 No 2; No 11 in G flat, Op 70 No 1; No 12 in F minor, Op 70 No 2; No 13 in D flat, Op 70 No 3 Mozart Concerto for Piano and Orchestra No 21 in C, K467$_{c}$
Géza Anda pf/$_{c}$dir $_{ab}$Berlin Radio Symphony Orchestra / Ferenc Fricsay; $_{c}$Salzburg Camerata Academica
Philips Great Pianists of the 20th Century ②
456 772-2PM2 (155 minutes: ADD) Ⓜ
Recorded 1959-75 ●

Philips's tribute to a great artist incomparable in Bartók and no less so in Schumann is marred by a selection of bewildering eccentricity. True, no pianist played the Bartók concertos with such matchless precision and elegance, but the accompanying choice of 13 of Chopin's waltzes, made when Anda was already ill and dispirited, and a Mozart concerto performance that hardly suggests his glory in its prime, is doubly inexplicable when you consider his rich and scintillating recorded legacy. More positively, it is impossible to celebrate sufficiently Anda's and Fricsay's partnership in Bartók. Anda famously played all three concertos in one concert, presenting their spiral from savage iconoclasm through neo-Baroque virtuosity to autumnal joy and reflection with unflagging brio and finesse, and his Edinburgh Festival performance of the Second Concerto quickly acquired legendary status. His matchless clarity and rhythmic verve colour every page, and in the slow movements of Concertos Nos 2 and 3 his timing, like that of a great actor, and unique tonal sheen lend a remarkable atmosphere to those evocations of the Puszta, the mysterious Hungarian plains, whose seemingly limitless expanse is contrasted by the hyperactivity of their 'night music'. Here, Anda's differentiation between, say, piano, pianissimo and ppp is uncannily precise, his articulation of the fugue from the Third Concerto not only razor-sharp but a wonder of dancing vivacity and refinement; a far cry from so many less subtle and bludgeoning alternatives. The first disc is indispensable, the second a missed opportunity.

Leif Ove Andsnes pf

A Portrait
Brahms Intermezzo in B flat minor, Op 117 No 2 Grieg Piano Concerto in A minor, Op 16. Lyric Pieces, Op 43 – No 1, Butterfly; No 6, To the Spring; Op 65 – No 6, Wedding Day at Troldhaugen Haydn Piano Concerto, HobXVIII/11. Piano Sonata, HobXVI/32 Janáček Sonata 1.X.1905, 'From the Street' Johansen Portraits, Op 5 – The Little Stone God; Reindeer; Towards the Father's Mountain Liszt Mephisto Waltz No 1, S514 Nielsen Humoresque Bagatelles, FS22 Rachmaninov Etudes-tableaux in C, Op 33 No 2 Sæverud Ballad of Revolt, Op 22 No 2 Schumann Fantasie, Op 17 Shostakovich Concerto for Piano, Trumpet and Strings, Op 35 Tveitt Fifty Folk-tunes from Hardanger, Op 150 – A-wooing; Langeleik tune; The Long, Long Winter Night
Leif Ove Andsnes pf Bergen Philharmonic Orchestra / Dmitri Kitaienko; City of Birmingham Symphony Orchestra / Paavo Järvi; Norwegian Chamber Orchestra
EMI Classics 574789-2 (151 minutes: DDD) Ⓜ
Recorded 1991-99

'Leif Ove Andsnes: A Portrait' is a two-disc selection taken from his previous discography offering many examples of his unassuming and superlative artistry. Never for a moment is there even a whiff of narcissism, or a hint of the sort of pianist with an eye for special effects or for tints and underlinings achieved at the expense of the composer. All these performances are quietly resolute with an imperious yet effortless command and a rare poetic candour and simplicity.

Andsnes's Grieg Concerto is among the finest of all recordings of this ever-green masterpiece. He is subtly and gently communing in the principle theme, and brilliantly alert in the animato e molto leggiero cascades or in the final presto sprint to the exultant close. Throughout, you could never confuse his simplicity with plainness and time and again you are made aware of the sort of musicianship which can only be encouraged rather than taught.

Again, even when he seems a trifle remote from Brahms's autumnal glow and rapture in the Second Intermezzo from Op 117, his musicianship is unfailing and on home ground in Grieg (three of the Lyric Pieces), while with lesser-known composers such as Tveitt, Johansen and Saeverud he evinces a deeply moving poetic empathy. He shows a frightening affinity for the heart-stopping violence and desolation of the Janáček Sonata, and his Gramophone award-winning Haydn is a marvel of dexterity and sustained musical radiance.

So here is a very special tribute designed for those few listeners still not fully aware of this artist's calibre.

Martha Argerich pf

Début Recital
Brahms Two Rhapsodies, Op 79 Chopin Scherzo No 3 in C sharp minor, Op 39. Barcarolle in F sharp, Op 60 Liszt Hungarian Rhapsody No 6 in D flat. Piano Sonata in B minor, S178 Prokofiev Toccata in D minor, Op 11 Ravel Jeux d'eau
Martha Argerich pf
DG The Originals 447 430-2GOR Ⓜ
(71 minutes: ADD). Recorded 1960-71 ●●●

Here, on this richly filled CD, is a positive cornucopia of musical genius. Martha Argerich's 1961 disc remains among the most spectacular of all recorded débuts, an impression reinforced by an outsize addition and encore: her 1972 Liszt Sonata. True, there are occasional reminders of her pianism at its most fraught and capricious (Chopin's Barcarolle) as well as tiny scatterings of inaccuracies, yet her playing always blazes with a unique incandescence and character.

The Brahms Rhapsodies are as glowingly interior as they are fleet. No more mercurial Chopin Scherzo exists on record and if its savagery becomes flighty and skittish (with the chorale's decorations sounding like manic bursts of laughter), Argerich's fine-toned fluency will make other, lesser pianists weep with envy. Ravel's Jeux d'eau is gloriously indolent and scintillating and the Prokofiev Toccata is spun off in a manner that understandably provoked Horowitz's awe and enthusiasm. Liszt's Sixth Hungarian Rhapsody is a marvel of wit and daring and the B minor Sonata is among the most dazzling ever perpetuated on disc. The recordings have worn remarkably well and the transfers have been expertly done.

Claudio Arrau pf

Albéniz Iberia, Book 1 Bach Chromatic Fantasia and Fugue in D minor, BWV903 Balakirev Islamey
Brahms Variations on a Theme by Paganini, Op 35. Piano Concerto No 1 in D minor, Op 15ª
Liszt Rhapsodie espagnole, S254. Harmonies poétiques et réligieuses, S173 – No 3, Bénédiction de Dieu dans la solitude. Années de pèlerinage – Troisième année, S163 – Les jeux d'eau à la Villa d'Este. Etudes d'exécution transcendante, S139 – Chasse-neige
Claudio Arrau pf ªConcertgebouw Orchestra / Bernard Haitink
Philips Great Pianists of the 20th Century ②
456 706-2PM2 (157 minutes: ADD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1927-76 ◉

It will come as a big surprise to many admirers of Claudio Arrau, a thoughtful philosopher of the keyboard, to hear the first item on this issue. You could hardly imagine a more dazzling virtuoso display in Balakirev's spectacular showpiece, Islamey. It was recorded for Polydor in the late 1920s, when Arrau was in his mid-twenties, and the panache is irresistible. Not only are the brilliant outer sections breathtaking in the clarity of the scampering triplets, with the heaviest textures made clear – helped by a full-toned transfer – the tonal resonance and the velvety warmth of legato in the sensuous melodic writing of the central section are equally distinctive. That item alone is enough to make this a compelling issue, and the other items on the first of the two discs amplify that spectacular start, presenting Arrau in his earlier years as a dazzling virtuoso, evidently uninhibited in the recording studio. That is so, whether in the Bach Chromatic Fantasia (aptly improvisatory in tone and again with textures crystal-clear); in Liszt (the Rhapsodie espagnole given astonishing lightness and clarity in this 1936 performance) and Albéniz (with the mystery and keen originality of the piano-writing heightened).

Both the Bach and the Albéniz date from the mid-1940s, and one imagines the Philips compilers may have wondered how to cap all these free and intense studio performances. Overall, the present set does tend to confirm the impression that over the years Arrau grew increasingly self-conscious in the recording studio, less able to indulge in flights of spontaneous imagination. The three Liszt performances which complete the programme on the first disc, recorded between 1969 and 1976, are among the finest he made for Philips, with the cello-like resonances of Bénédiction reminding one of Arrau's playing in the central section of Islamey and the shimmering at the start of 'Chasse-neige', the twelfth Transcendental Study, made magical in an impressionistic way. There is much to enjoy too in Arrau's 1974 reading of Brahms's Paganini Variations, when the relatively broad speeds never sound slack or lack tension. Rather the Brahmsian textures are clarified, and rhythms pointed the more persuasively, particularly in the flights of fantasy in the Second Book. In the performance of the 1969 version of the First Brahms Concerto with Haitink and the Concertgebouw, the first two movements are rather heavy-going, not helped by an expressive style which tends towards rallentandos in what are already broad basic speeds. The finale is sharper, clean and unrushed, strong and dramatic, yet it is a pity that in the single representation of Arrau in this wide-ranging series, this second of the two discs is devoted completely to Brahms, instead of developing the imaginative pattern of the first.

Jorge Bolet pf

Liszt Années de pèlerinage – Première année: Suisse, S160 – Au bord d'une source; Deuxième année: Italie, S161 – Sonetto 104 del Petrarca. Consolation in D flat, S172 No 2. Etudes d'exécution transcendante d'après Paganini, S140 – No 3 in A flat minor, 'La campanella'. Etudes d'exécution transcendante, S139 – No 9, Ricordanza; No 11, Harmonies du soir. Gnomenreigen, S145 No 2. Harmonies poétiques et religieuses, S173 – No 7, Funérailles. Hungarian Rhapsody No 12 in C sharp minor, S244. La leggierezza, S144 No 2. Liebesträume in A flat, S541. Mephisto Waltz No 1, S514. Réminiscences de Don Juan , S418. Réminiscences de Norma, S394. Rigoletto Paraphrase, S434. Venezia e Napoli, S162
Jorge Bolet pf
Philips Great Pianists of the 20th Century ②
456 814-2PM2 (53 minutes: DDD/ADD) Ⓜ
Recorded 1979-84 ◉

The second volume of Philips's tribute to Jorge Bolet, with one noble exception, is taken from his later Liszt recordings for Decca, dating from 1978-85 and a time when his quest for perfection led him to be more sober and circumspect. One is awed by a grandeur and regality that forbade all possible levity. Bolet's musical thunder, whether distant or unleashed, is virtually omnipresent, a constant reminder of how excellent it is 'To have a giant's strength, but it is tyrannous/To use it like a giant.'

The central build-up of Funérailles, a work superbly suited to Bolet's inherently sombre nature, is monumental, and who else has stormed the climax of the Third Liebestraum with such tonal magnificence, fleshing out the harmonies with added notes, which is an endearingly old-fashioned touch that also colours the summit of Funérailles?

La campanella may be more magisterial than scintillating, and others may have tripped the light fantastic more engagingly in Gnomenreigen, yet both are played with formidable finish and resource. In the opening pages of La leggierezza one hears 'the eternal note of sadness', a touch of elegy, and if in Harmonies du soir Bolet slides gratefully into his favourite mood, that of a troubled repose, he also offers a performance of a Himalayan range and grandeur.

Put simply, his Réminiscences de Don Juan is so musical, so superior to that of other more flashy players who turn its epic display into a mere pot-boiler, and how romantically yet precisely he paces Ricordanza, resisting all temptation in some of Liszt's most effusive and sumptuously decorated variations to hysteria or exaggeration.

Finally, that 'noble exception', the Norma paraphrase taken from a performance in Alabama in 1988, and an interpretation in which 'Bolet's divine slowness' takes on a truly extraordinary dimension. Such a performance erases memories of a less than joyful or sun-drenched Venezia e Napoli or a First Mephisto Waltz with stout and clamorous rather than pianissimo nightingales. The sound of Bolet's beloved and burnished Bechstein has come up admirably, and these records ensure Bolet a unique place in the pianist's Pantheon.

Julian Bream gtr

Falla Homenaje, 'Le tombeau de Claude Debussy' Moreno Torroba Prelude. Sonatina. Burgalesa Sor Estudios – No 5 in B minor; No 12 in A. Fantasia Op 7 No 2. Guitar Sonata in C, Op 22 – Minuetto: Allegro; Rondo: Allegretto. Studies in A minor, Op 31 No 20. Andante largo, Op 5 Turina Fandanguillo, Op 36. Hommage à Tárrega, Op 69. Ráfaga, Op 53 Villa-Lobos Preludes (1940)
Julian Bream gtr
DG Westminster Legacy mono 471 236-2GWM
(75 minutes: ADD). Recorded 1955-56 Ⓜ

Albéniz Córdoba, Op 232 No 4. Mallorca, Op 202. Suite española, Op 47 No 1 Granados Dedicatoria, Op 1. Danzas españolas, Op 37 – No 4, 'Villanesca'; No 5, 'Andaluza'. Tonadillas al estilo antiguo – La maja de goya. Malats Serenata española Pujol Tango española. Guajira
Julian Bream gtr
RCA Redseal 74321 68016-2 (75 minutes: DDD) Ⓢ
Recorded 1982 and 1991

Julian Bream is probably the most universal guitarist of the 20th century. The Westminster recordings, made during the 21st and 22nd years of his life, signalled the emergence of the first truly significant English guitarist in history, potentially capable of becoming worthy of mention in the same breath as Segovia – a status he indeed achieved. Segovia not only brought new life to the 19th-century repertory of the guitar, he also extended it by 'borrowing' suitable music originally written for the lute and the early guitar, and by persuading then-contemporary composers to write for him. Julian Bream has done likewise but, with the benefit of later scholarship, in greater depth. On the one hand he has played a major role in the revival of the lute itself and the Elizabethan consort; on the other he has received works from an impressive list of famous composers – unrestricted by Segovia's innate conservatism. All in all, it is a unique achievement.

The Westminster recordings reveal the astonishing maturity Bream displayed at this early stage. The combination of infectious freshness and instinctive understanding of what lies behind the written notes is redolent of the early Segovia – but without the latter's idiosyncratically free approach to rubato. He is, too, less devoted to 'orchestrating' the music via a wide variety of tone colour, but his sound is no less 'three-dimensional' and he is no less conscious of the function and character of every note. The remastering of the recording per se is spectacularly successful in conveying the crystal clarity of every aspect of these wonderful performances. The RCA disc is a compilation drawn from recordings of Bream in his full maturity, and is of particular interest to those who have not invested in RCA's full 28-CD archive. A splendid issue.

Alfred Brendel pf

Beethoven Rondo for Piano and Orchestra in B flat, WoO6[a]. Quintet for Piano and Wind in E flat, Op 16[b]. Piano Sonatas – No 17 in D minor, 'Tempest', Op 31 No 2; No 26 in E flat, 'Les adieux', Op 81a; No 30 in E, Op 109. 11 Bagatelles, Op 119. 15 Variations and Fugue on an Original Theme in E flat, 'Eroica', Op 35. Seven Variations in F on Winter's 'Kind, willst du ruhig schlafen', WoO75. Fantasia in G minor, Op 77. Rondo in G, Op 51 No 2 Dvořák Slavonic Dances[c] – B78: No 1 in C; No 2 in E minor; No 6 in A flat; No 8 in G minor; B145: No 1 in B; No 2 in E minor; No 4 in D flat; No 6 in B flat; No 7 in A Haydn Piano Concerto in D, HobXVIII/11[d] Liszt Années de pèlerinage – Deuxième année, Italie, S161: Sonetto 47 del Petrarca; Sonetto 104 del Petrarca. Harmonies poétiques et réligieuses, S173 – No 3, Bénédiction de Dieu dans la solitude; No 7, Funérailles; No 10, Cantique d'amour. Etudes d'exécution transcendante d'après Paganini, S140 – E flat; A flat minor. Hungarian Rhapsody in A minor, S244 No 11. Mephisto Waltz No 1, S514. Opera Transcriptions – Oberon, S574; Il trovatore, S433; Tristan und Isolde, S447 Mozart Piano Concerto No 27 in B flat, K595[e] Rondo for Piano and Orchestra in D, K382[e] Prokofiev Piano Concerto No 5 in G minor, Op 55[f] Schoenberg Piano Concerto, Op 42[g]. Schubert Fantasy in C,

'Wanderer', D760. Drei Klavierstücke, D946
Stravinsky Three Movements from Petrushka
Alfred Brendel pf with [c]Walter Klien pf [b]members of the Hungarian Wind Quintet; [a]Vienna Volksoper Orchestra / Wilfried Boettcher; [d]Vienna Chamber Orchestra, [e]Vienna Pro Musica Orchestra / Paul Angerer; [f]Vienna State Opera Orchestra / Jonathan Sternberg; [g]South West German Radio Symphony Orchestra, Baden-Baden / Michael Gielen
Vox ⑥ CD6X3601 (453 minutes: ADD) Ⓑ
Recorded 1955-66 ●

Writing with superb authority, Alfred Brendel once answered his own rhetorical question. 'What is piano playing of genius? Playing which is at once correct and bold. Its correctness tells us that is how it has to be. Its boldness presents us with a surprising and overwhelming realisation: what we had thought impossible becomes true.' Heard at his greatest, as in these Vox and Regis reissues of recordings dating from 1955-67, Brendel makes criticism fall silent. Wherever you turn, you will not hear a dishonest note or phrase, anything less than profoundly considered. Even Prokofiev's Fifth Concerto, music Brendel despises and which he recorded when his career was still not fully launched, comes up fresh, its extravagance illuminated by a pin-point wit and delicacy.

True, most great artists regard their early recordings with suspicion. Yet even Brendel, with his intimidating scrutiny, must have periodically delighted in his early candour and assurance, his effortless resolving of complexity into simplicity, in the absolute 'rightness' of his interpretations and their untrammelled virtuosity. His later work for Philips may be more speculative but his early freshness, even sang-froid, is something to marvel at. Here, he wears his profound insights with the lightest of touches. Thought-provoking and personal to the last, his performance of Mozart's final Concerto captures exactly music of a clouded radiance with a momentary burst of anger at 3'22" in the finale, a 'do not go gentle into that good night' reminder of Mozart's lack of resignation. The selection, too, of Beethoven's Sonatas abounds with unselfconscious slants and angles unknown to lesser artists. And you will rarely hear a more internal or communing performance of Schubert's Wanderer, almost as if Brendel is telling us that such outwardly uncharacteristic music hardly goes against the grain but remains an organic part of Schubert's oeuvre. In Liszt's Cantique d'amour you can sense him caught in the breathless central elaboration, yet he never allows his playing to degenerate into either a salon, conversational elegance or flashy rhetoric. His inwardness, too, in the central blessing of the 'Bénédiction' is a marvel of poetic insight.

Brendel may be celebrated for his intellectual probity, yet, as this memorable album shows, his warmth and humanity are supported by an unfaultering virtuosity. Here, surely, is an incomparable marriage of heart and mind.

David Briggs org

Great European Organs, Volume 57
Brewer Marche héroïque Bridge Adagio in E, H63 No 3 Faulkes Grand choeur in D Harris Caprice Macpherson Fantasy-Prelude Mendelssohn (arr Best) Athalie – War March of the Priests Parry Chorale Preludes, Set 2 – Eventide Stanford Organ Sonata No 3 in D minor, 'Britannica', Op 152
Priory PRCD680 (68 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Played on the Lewis organ of St John the Evangelist, Upper Norwood, London. Recorded 1999 ●

Perhaps a more appropriate title would be 'Great British Organ', as this CD is a celebration of home-grown artistry: Victorian and Edwardian music played on a vintage late 19th-century instrument by one of Britain's finest organists. Although this Lewis organ may not be in a prestigious venue like a cathedral, city hall or concert hall, this doesn't mean it's an instrument of lesser quality. On the contrary, it has all the colour and brilliance one hears on the larger organs Lewis built for Southwark Cathedral and the Kelvingrove Art Gallery, Glasgow (these latter instruments can be heard on previous 'Great European Organs' CDs).

Briggs's programme is ideally suited to the organ, too, and he gives splendid performances. You can tell from the finely judged rubato and judicious choice of tempos that he is an experienced choral and orchestral conductor as well as a very fine soloist. This all makes for eminently satisfying music-making, and his imaginative use of the organ means that we hear all its available tone colours.

Priory's production is of the highest order – the recording is excellent and the insert-notes informative. Inevitably as the century progresses this organ will show signs of wear and tear, so it's good to have a recording made so soon after the recent restoration by Harrisons. Lovers of the late 19th-century British organ will certainly be indebted to Briggs and Priory for committing to CD the magnificent sound of this Lewis instrument.

Shura Cherkassky pf

Liadov A musical snuffbox, Op 32 Ⓗ
Liszt Piano Concerto No 1 in E flat, S124[a]. Liebestraum in A flat, S541 No 3. Réminiscences de Don Juan (Mozart), S418. Hungarian Rhapsody No 13 in A minor, S244. Faust (Gounod) – Waltz, S407
Saint-Saëns Le carnaval des animaux – Le cygne
Shura Cherkassky pf [a]Philharmonia Orchestra / Anatole Fistoulari
Testament mono SBT1033 (62 minutes: ADD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1952-58 ●

Here, in excellent transfers of HMV recordings dating from the 1950s, is a vintage Cherkassky recital. Mercurial and hypnotic, his way with Liszt's E flat Concerto reminds us in every nook and cranny that he has always been able to enliven and transform even the most over-familiar score. True, there are moments – such as the start of the Allegro vivace – where he is less than ideally poised or balletic (one of those instances where his elfin caprice can seem close to uncertainty and where he leads Fistoulari and the Philharmonia a Puckish dance: now you hear me, now you don't), yet his sparkle and charm are inimitable. Again, in Variation 1 of the Don Juan Fantasy he is perhaps more flustered than elegantamente, but even when his virtuosity is less than watertight, his playing is infinitely more fascinating and imaginatively varied. Cherkassky can be garrulous or somnolent, his phrasing languorous or choppy, yet in the ecstatic, long-breathed descent just before the coda of the Liebestraum No 3 and in all of the Hungarian Rhapsody No 13 and the Faust Waltz, his mastery has seldom, if ever, sounded more effortless or unalloyed. Finally, an encore of friandises: Godowsky's fine-spun elaboration of Saint-Saëns's 'Le cygne'.

Clifford Curzon pf

Haydn Andante and Variations in F minor, HobXVII:6
Liszt Sonetto 104 del Petrarca, S161 No 5. Berceuse, S174 (2nd version). Valse oubilée, S215 No 1. Piano Sonata in B minor, S178 Schubert Impromptus, D899 – No 2 in E flat; No 3 in G flat; No 4 in A flat
Sir Clifford Curzon pf
BBC Legends/IMG Artists mono BBCL4078-2 Ⓕ
(67 minutes: ADD). Recorded live in 1961 ●

Curzon was always reluctant to work in the recording studio, and so one treasures a compilation such as this of live performances, flawed on detail though they can be. Anyone who wants to count the occasional slips of finger in his account of the Liszt Sonata, for example, will obviously reject it in favour of the more studied, less spontaneous studio version he recorded for Decca two years later. Yet the impulsive energy of this live account is invaluable in letting us appreciate a side of Curzon's genius rarely revealed in his official recordings – the daring of the virtuoso. As for the other Liszt items, they reveal his magic at its most intense, so that in the Petrarch Sonnet his velvet legato has one imagining a voice singing the words, and equally the improvisational quality he brings to his playing of Liszt is again magnetic in the Valse oubliée.

In the Haydn Variations, he similarly finds sparkle and fantasy in a performance recorded for the BBC, and the Schubert Impromptus – for him core repertory – find him at his happiest, though his breathtakingly fast tempo for No 2 with its rippling scales in triplets may initially seem disconcerting. The mono sound from the early '60s may be limited, but undistractingly lets you enjoy the performances.

Evgeni Finkelstein gtr

'The Fall of Birds' – Russian Guitar Music
Beljaev Prelude and Three Valses Koshkin Andante quasi passacaglia and toccata, 'The fall of birds'. Suite, 'Elves'. Variations on a theme by Štěpán Rak, 'The Porcelain Tower' Rudnev Variations on a Russian Folk Song
Evgeni Finkelstein gtr
Acoustic Music Records 319 1273 2 Ⓕ
(50 minutes: DDD). Recorded c2002

Nikita Koshkin arrived on the contemporary guitar scene in the early 1980s with his groundbreaking suite The Prince's Toys; he remains Russia's most famous composer for the instrument. Two of his works on this disc, The fall of birds and Variations on a theme of Štěpán Rak, are among the most remarkable in the guitar's contemporary repertory, absorbing products of a powerful imagination. The former is 'symbolic of the end of the world', the latter came at a time when he was fascinated by Chinese art. The Elves are whimsicalities from his love of fairy-tales.

Evgeni Finkelstein is a formidable performer, possessing every quality required by this music, and the validity of his interpretations of Koshkin's music derives from his close association with the composer. This is a thrilling disc that should be on the shelves of anyone who has the slightest interest in the guitar.

Annie Fischer pf

Bartók 15 Hungarian Peasant Songs, Sz71
Brahms Piano Sonata No 3 in F minor, Op 5
Dohnányi Rhapsody in C, No 3 Op 11 Liszt Three Concert Studies, S144 – No 3, Un sospiro. Grandes études de Paganini, S141 – No 6, Quasi Presto
BBC Legends/IMG Artists mono BBCL4054-2 Ⓜ
(64 minutes: ADD). Recorded live in 1961 ●

Few pianists have found a more direct path to poetic truth than Annie Fischer. Blessedly free of all attitudinising or exaggeration, her finest performances burned with a fierce clarity and vision, and her London appearances, both in recital and with Otto Klemperer during the 60s, became the stuff of musical legends. Like, say, Schnabel and Myra Hess, Annie Fischer felt inhibited in the studios, and the story of her endlessly protracted Hungaroton recording of the complete Beethoven Piano Sonatas testifies to her discomfort. So all credit to those who rescued this magnificent recital taken live from the 1961 Edinburgh Festival. How characteristic is that mix of brio and poetry in the Brahms F minor Sonata. Others, such as Radu Lupu, may be more romantically inclined but few have played this early masterpiece with such sweep and panache. Her assault on the notorious octave swirl commencing the first-movement development may be more fearless than impeccable, but the final pages of the Andante are truly molto appassionato and fortissimo, and how typical is that forthright – not merely vague or impressionistic – end to the Intermezzo, with its muffled timpani strokes. In such hands the finale is an epic waltz indeed, and she reveals the glory of one daunting rhetorical gesture after another.

Her Bartók is wonderfully free-wheeling and idiomatic, and in Liszt's Un sospiro the directness of her playing suggests heroic rather than sentimental passion. Her way with the Dohnányi Rhapsody, too, reminds us of her versatility, her joy in unbounded virtuosity as well as her dedication to the great masterpieces of the repertoire. The recordings faithfully reflect a special sense of occasion, and the excellent notes offer an apt reminder that Annie Fischer lived before a time when 'genuine musical interest was often squeezed to the margins'.

Ignaz Friedman pf

Ignaz Friedman Plays Mendelssohn, Chopin and Liszt Ⓗ
Chopin Ballade No 3 in A flat, Op 53. Impromptu No 2 in F sharp, Op 36. Mazurkas – No 5 in B flat, Op 7 No 1; No 6 in A minor, Op 7 No 2; No 7 in F minor, Op 7 No 3; No 17 in B flat minor, Op 24 No 4; No 23 in D, Op 33 No 2; No 25 in B minor, Op 33 No 4; No 26 in C sharp minor, Op 41 No 1; No 31 in A flat, Op 50 No 2; No 41 in C sharp minor, Op 63 No 3; No 44 in C, Op 67 No 3; No 45 in A minor, Op 67 No 4; No 47 in A minor, Op 68 No 2. Nocturne No 16 in E flat, Op 55 No 2
Liszt Hungarian Rhapsody No 2 in C sharp minor, S244 No 2 Mendelssohn Songs without Words – A, 'Hunting Song', Op 19 No 3; G minor, 'Venetian Gondola Song', Op 19 No 6; F sharp minor, 'Venetian Gondola Song', Op 30 No 6; C minor, Op 38 No 2; A flat, 'Duetto', Op 38 No 6; E flat, Op 53 No 2; F, Op 53 No 4; F sharp minor, Op 67 No 2; A, 'Kinderstück', Op 102 No 5
Ignaz Friedman pf
Biddulph LHW044 (77 minutes: ADD) Ⓜ
Recorded 1930-36

If many modern pianists can be dismissed with damning brevity, Ignaz Friedman's elegance and aplomb demand a book rather than a review. In his tantalising selection of Chopin Mazurkas his inimitable brio allows for both a sense of peasant origins (that slight lift on the second beat, that light or emphatic – according to context – stress on the third) and the rarest sense of fantasy and idealisation. His rapid tempo in, say, Op 24 No 4 offers him, paradoxically, time for one enchanting felicity or passing piquancy after another, and an airborne lightness and freedom. His legato and cantabile make notes melt together rather than merely join or elide with another, and in Op 63 No 3 the attributes of such haunting sweetness combine with an authentic 'wood-note wild'. Who would have thought that Op 67 No 3, a relatively slight work, could be spun off with such vivacious idiosyncrasy or that the Third Ballade could emerge free from all constraint (why not plunge down the keyboard in a cascade of double rather than single notes and end with further reinforcements in a cloud of glory?) True, Friedman can play free and easy with the score. Taken at such a speed the Second Impromptu's final leggiero scales turn into an unapologetic display, their innate beauty compromised by an extravagant flurry. But in the E flat Nocturne, Op 55 No 2, with its subtle prophecy of Fauréan radiance, Friedman spins the most magical of lines. Seemingly as natural as breathing, Friedman's artistry is quite without (disfiguring) archness, leaving younger pianists to wonder at such insouciance, at such effortless transcending of received wisdom. The transfers are admirable, and Allan Evans's notes are good enough to survive some careless proof-reading.

Great European Organ Collections

EMI Great Cathedral Organ Series, Volume 1
Gigout 10 Organ Pieces – No 4, Toccata[f]
Howells Rhapsody, Op 17 No 1[e] Karg-Elert Pastel in F sharp, Op 92 No 3[d] Parry Choral Fantasy No 1, Old 100th[e] Reubke Sonata on the 94th Psalm in C minor[b] Saint-Saëns Fantaisie in D flat, Op 101[a]
Statham Lament[d] S S Wesley Choral Song and Fugue[e] Whitlock Four Extemporizations – No 4, Fanfare[c]
[a]Christopher Dearnley Salisbury Cathedral [b]Roger Fisher Chester Cathedral [c]Noel Rawsthorne Liverpool Anglican Cathedral [d]Heathcote Statham Norwich Cathedral [e]Herbert Sumsion Gloucester Cathedral [f]Arthur Wills Ely Cathedral
Amphion Recordings PHICD160 (76 minutes: ADD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1963-70 ●

The 19 LPs of EMI's 'Great Cathedral Organs' series released between 1963 and 1971 constituted one of the most important recording projects in the history of the English organ. The brainchild of producer Brian Culverhouse (whose booklet-essay provides some fascinating anecdotes), it featured organs of impeccably English lineage and organists steeped in the centuries' old traditions of English cathedral music. Since most of these organs have long since been replaced or modified in an attempt to give them a more European flavour, and many modern-day English cathedral organists belong to a more cosmopolitan musical generation, these recordings have assumed particular historical significance. They recorded, quite literally, the end of an era. The CD transfers vary from the disappointing (Ely) to the outstanding – interestingly enough, the oldest recordings, those made on Liverpool's vast Willis organ, have come out with simply staggering presence – but all provide vivid aural pictures of these uniformly wonderful organs set within generous helpings of their respective cathedrals' gloriously atmospheric acoustics. The men who oversee the day-to-day running of the music in a great cathedral don't necessarily make the best solo performers on disc, and many of these performances would not bear close scrutiny beside other available versions. But while this disc does not set out to offer itself as a rival to other recorded performances, Roger Fisher's stunning and breathtakingly exciting account of the Reubke, despite the pervasive hiss, is a performance-in-a-million, and Noel Rawsthorne elicits awed admiration with his brilliantly communicative playing.

Great European Organs, Volume 26
Ravanello Theme and Variations in B minor
Reger Five Easy Preludes and Fugues, Op 56 – No 1 in E Schmidt Chaconne in C sharp minor
Shostakovich Lady Macbeth of the Mtsensk district – Passacaglia Stanford Fantasia and Toccata in D minor, Op 57
Keith John org
Priory PRCD370 (73 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded on the organ of Gloucester Cathedral in 1991 ●●●

On the face of it this CD might look as if its appeal is purely for those with a specialist taste in large-scale post-romantic organ music. Certainly Schmidt's gargantuan Chaconne represents a daunting prospect both to player and listener, while Shostakovich's only organ solo begins with the kind of chilling dissonance which would certainly scare off those of a delicate disposition. Similarly, neither Stanford nor Reger usually attract a crowd when their organ music is played – and who has ever heard of Ravanello? But if ever a recording was made to shatter preconceptions, this is it.

For a start, the Gloucester organ makes a wondrous sound and Priory's recording is in a class of its own; in terms of sound alone this surely ranks as one of the best ever CDs of organ music. Then Keith John quite literally pulls out all the stops to produce an unparalleled display of virtuosity and musicianship. His technical prowess turns the Schmidt into a thrilling tour de force, while few could question, after hearing his performances, that the Stanford is one of the best works ever written by a British composer or that Ravanello's music doesn't deserve the neglect it currently suffers.

Great European Organs, Volume 48
Commette Scherzo Dallier Cinq Invocations
Guilmant Marche funèbre et chant séraphique, Op 17 No 3 Ibert Trois Pièces Philip Toccata and Fugue in A minor
Gerard Brooks org
Priory PRCD558 (79 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded on the Cavaillé-Coll organ in the Abbey Church of St Ouen, Rouen in 1995

Here we have a magnificent recording of one of the truly Great European Organs. In Gerard Brooks, Priory has found a player as eager to reveal the glories and subtleties of one of Cavaillé-Coll's greatest creations as his own impressive virtuosity. Widor's description of this as a 'Michelangelo of an organ' seems singularly apt in the light of a disc which displays the instrument so vividly. A simple reading of the track list might imply that such opulent resources are being squandered on a collection of oddities drawn from the ample dark recesses of French organ literature. If Guilmant is the only familiar name (so far as organists are concerned, Ibert is an obscure figure), the music of the others is as familiar as a new Andrew Lloyd Webber score – we're sure we've heard it all before but can't quite remember where.

Edouard Commette's Scherzo is clearly first cousin to Henri Mulet's famous Carillon sortie, Achille Philip's Toccata comes from the same stable as that from Boëllman's Suite gothique, while Henri Dallier's Invocations inspired by Latin Marian texts could easily pass for Vierne, especially the glittering final Toccata. But if the idioms are familiar and the ideas derivative, the musical quality in both intellectual and emotional terms is undeniable. Simply put, this is a programme of immensely enjoyable music, all of which bears repeated listening and is certainly deserving of a place on the shelves of lovers of good organ music.

Great European Organs, Volume 51
Bach Pastorale in F, BWV590 G Böhm Vater unser im Himmelreich, WKii138 Buxtehude Prelude, Fugue and Chaconne in C, BuxWV137 Eben Homage to Dietrich Buxtehude Guridi Triptico del Buen Pastor.
Liszt (trans Schaab) Orpheus, S98
Saint-Saëns Fantaisie in D flat, Op 101
Peter King org
Priory PRCD618 (78 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded on the Klais organ of Bath Abbey in 1997 ●

This seems rather a peculiar programme with a focus on Buxtehude and the North German Baroque and with a few other disparate pieces thrown in to spice up the menu. Peculiar or not, it works superbly. The new Bath Abbey instrument is adorable – a complete rejection of the argument often propounded that, on purely musical terms, an organ built outside the British Isles is inappropriate for a major English ecclesiastical building – and it makes everything here sound convincing and impressive. This sumptuous instrument is well served by a beautifully proportioned recording. For those interested in the music rather than the instrument, Peter King's performances range from the solid (Buxtehude's Praeludium in G minor) to the near-inspired (Bach's Pastorale). Eben's Homage is based on material from the two Buxtehude pieces on the disc and uses Buxtehudian structures and figurations in a typically astute Eben manner. The inclusion of the Liszt and Saint-Saëns is obviously inspired by King's deep fondness for these pieces – it shows in every bar of these lovingly nurtured performances – while the Guridi has moments which allow us to hear the organ's more atmospheric qualities. Not everybody will be immediately attracted to this disc by the music, but for the sheer pleasure of hearing a truly wonderful, modern instrument, this release cannot be recommended too highly.

Twelve Organs of Edinburgh
Bach Concerto in G, BWV592$_{be}$ Bridge Adagio in E, H63 No 2$_{df}$ Bruhns Praeludium in E minor$_{cg}$
Buxtehude Prelude, Fugue and Chaconne in C,

BuxWV137$_{bh}$. Praeludium in D minor, BuxWV140$_{di}$ Couperin Messe pour les paroisses – Tierce en taille$_{bh}$ Handel Il pastor fido – Overture$_{dj}$. Ode for St Cecilia's Day, HWV76 – March$_{df}$ Hesse Variations on an original theme, Op 34$_{ck}$ Hollins Concert Overture No 3 in F minor$_{be}$ Høvland Toccata – Now thank we all our God$_{df}$ Humperdinck (arr Lemare) Hänsel und Gretel – Angel scene$_{bl}$ Krebs O König, dessen Majestät$_{cg}$ Leighton Prelude, Scherzo and Passacaglia, Op 41$_{cm}$ Mendelssohn Organ Sonata in B flat, Op 65 No 4$_{an}$ Pachelbel Alle Menschen müssen sterben$_{di}$ Saint-Saëns Fantaisie in E flat$_{ao}$ Sweelinck Ballo del granduca$_{ao}$ Tomkins Voluntary$_{ap}$ Walond Voluntary in D$_{ap}$

$_{a}$Peter Backhouse, $_{b}$Timothy Byram-Wigfield, $_{c}$Michael Harris, $_{d}$John Kitchen orgs

Priory ② PRCD700AB (153 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ

Played on the organs of $_{e}$St Cuthbert's Church, $_{f}$McEwan Hall, $_{g}$Canongate Kirk, $_{h}$Greyfriars Kirk, $_{i}$Reid Concert Hall, $_{j}$St Cecilia's Hall, $_{k}$St Andrew's and St George's Church, $_{l}$St Mary's Episcopal Cathedral, $_{m}$St Giles Cathedral, $_{n}$Broughton St Mary's Church, $_{o}$St Stephen's Church Centre, $_{p}$Lodge Canongate, Kilwinning ○

On these CDs, the instruments span three centuries and originate in Britain, Northern Ireland, Denmark and Austria. From the 18th century, we hear two surviving British organs with an exquisite, singing tone. The 19th century brought greater power and variety of orchestral colour, well illustrated by Byram-Wigfield's performance of the Humperdinck at St Mary's Cathedral. The 20th century has seen a return to a clearer, more 'Baroque' type of organ-building, together with the use of computer technology to improve playing aids and the design of the mechanism and casework. The Rieger organ at St Giles Cathedral is a supreme example of an outstanding contemporary instrument.

The pieces on these discs have been brilliantly selected to display the essential character of each organ, and this alone is a considerable achievement. It's always interesting to see and hear an artistic partnership developing between the player and the organ, and all four performers strike up a fruitful and happy relationship with their instruments. Some of the pairings could be described as a match made in heaven, and into this category falls Byram-Wigfield's colourful performances of Hollins and Humperdinck, and Kitchen's spontaneous, stylish performances of Buxtehude, Handel and Pachelbel. Harris's playing of Leighton's masterpiece is quite stunning, and this track is an awesome monument to 20th-century organ-building and composition at the highest level.

Priory's recordings and production are, as always, truly excellent.

Marc-André Hamelin pf

Blanchet Au jardin du vieux sérail Blumenfeld Etude for the left hand, Op 36 Casella Deux contrastes, Op 33 Glazunov The Seasons, Op 67 – Autumn: Petit adagio Godowsky Triakontameron – Alt Wien Hamelin Etudes – No 3 (d'après Paganini-Liszt); No 6: Essercizio per pianoforte (Omaggio a D Scarlatti) Hofmann Kaleidoskop, Op 40. Nocturne, 'Complaint' Kapustin Toccatina Lourié Gigue Massenet Valse folle Michalowski Etude d'après l'Impromptu in A flat by Chopin Moszkowski Etude A flat minor, Op 72 No 13 Offenbach Concert Paraphrase of 'The Song of the Soldiers of the Sea' Poulenc Intermezzo in A flat Rachmaninov Polka de W R Vallier Toccatina EB Woods Valse phantastique

Marc-André Hamelin pf

Hyperion CDA67275 (67 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ

Recorded 2001

Whatever enchants, teases and outrages is offered here in a cornucopia of encores tailor-made to delight those who revel in music's byways. No other pianist could have brought off a recital of this kind with such wit, assurance and boundless dexterity. Hamelin even gives such champions of the Rachmaninov Polka as Horowitz, Cherkassky and the composer himself, with their more personalised bravura, a run for their money, while his own étude on La campanella makes Liszt's original seem like a beginner's piece. Like some phenomenal juggler he makes you aware, so to speak, of an ever-widening pattern of glittering clubs and balls as he enlarges and refines the scope of his légerdemain. His take-off of Scarlatti is wickedly inventive, parodying every aspect of his musical character; his Hofmann Nocturne (with its warm memory of Chopin) as beguiling as it is accomplished. He plays John Vallier's Toccatina more explosively than Moiseiwitsch in his famously suave recording, and if Kapustin's identically entitled piece reminds us that he was fond of writing a tale twice or, indeed, many times told, Hamelin's performances are a wonder of brilliance and refinement. The recordings are superb, Jeremy Nicholas's notes a mine of informative tit-bits. In Marc-André Hamelin Hyperion clearly has a pianist to turn other record companies green with envy.

The Composer-Pianists

Alkan Esquisses, Op 63 – No 46, Le premier billet-doux; No 47, Scherzetto Bach/Feinberg Kommst du nun, Jesu, vom Himmel herunter BWV650 Busoni Fantasia after J. S. Bach Feinberg Berceuse, Op 19a Godowsky Toccata in G flat, Op 13 Hamelin Etudes – No 9, 'd'après Rossini'; No 10, 'd'après Chopin'; No 12 (Prelude and Fugue) Haydn/Alkan Symphony No 94 in G, 'Surprise' – Andante Medtner Improvisation in B flat minor, Op 31 No 1 Rachmaninov Moment musical in E flat minor, Op 16 No 2. Etude-tableau in E flat, Op 33 No 4 Scriabin Poème tragique in B flat, Op 34. Deux Poèmes, Op 71 Sorabji Pastiche on Hindu Song from Rimsky-Korsakov's 'Sadko'

Marc-André Hamelin pf

Hyperion CDA67050 (68 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ

Recorded 1998 ○○

Here is a cunning and potent mix of every conceivable form of pianistic and musical intricacy (it excludes the merely decorative, salon or ephemeral). Everything is of the most absorbing interest; everything is impeccably performed. Hamelin's richly inclusive programme ranges from Godowsky's Toccata, music of the most wicked, labyrinthine complexity, to three of his own projected cycle of 12 Etudes, among them a ferociously witty and demanding Prelude and Fugue and a reworking of Chopin's Op 10 No 5, full of black thoughts as well as black notes. Then there is Alkan's sinister absorption of the Andante from Haydn's Surprise Symphony (loyal to Haydn, Alkan's teasing perversity also makes such music peculiarly his own); a Berceuse by Samuel Feinberg that prompts Francis Pott, in his brilliantly illuminating notes, to question what sort of child would be lulled by such strangeness; some superb Medtner and Scriabin and a cloudy, profoundly expressive Fantasia after J. S. Bach by Busoni. Clearly among the most remarkable pianists of our time, Hamelin makes light of every technical and musical difficulty, easing his way through Godowsky's intricacy with yards to spare, registering every sly modulation of Alkan's 'Le premier billet-doux' and generating a white-hot intensity in Rachmaninov's admirably revised version of his Second Moment musical. Here, Hamelin's maintenance of a 'line' set within a hectically whirling complexity is something to marvel at. Taut, sinewy and impassioned, this performance is a worthy successor to Rachmaninov's own legendary disc. Every phrase and note is coolly appraised within its overall context and the results are audacious and immaculate as required. Hyperion's sound is superb.

Christopher Herrick org

Organ Dreams, Volume 2
Barber (arr Strickland) Adagio, Op 11 Dubois In paradisum Bridge Adagio in E, H63 No 2 Elgar 11 Vesper Voluntaries, Op 14 Guilmant Sonata No 7 in F, Op 89 – Rêve Howells Siciliano for a High Ceremony Liszt Evocation à la Chapelle Sixtine, S658 Schumann Study in A flat, Op 56 No 4 S Wesley Short Pieces with Voluntary – No 5 in A minor; No 8 in F; No 9 in F; No 11 in D
Christopher Herrick org
Hyperion CDA67146 (73 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1999 ◉

After eight highly acclaimed discs of 'Organ Fireworks' the winning combination of Christopher Herrick and Hyperion have turned their attention towards the calmer and more reflective repertory grouped under the title 'Organ Dreams'. Volume 2 consists mostly of original organ music spanning the period 1815-1952, all of which fits the instrument in Ripon Cathedral like a well-tailored glove.

Not every title reflects a dream-like state, though the disc's opening track – Dubois' In paradisum creates an aura of calm. Frank Bridge's oft-played Adagio in E is also smoothly shaped, with its grand climax carefully controlled. Guilmant's 'Rêve' of 1902 is delicious, its impressionistic perfume wafting effortlessly.

With a running time of 19 minutes, Elgar's rarely heard Vesper Voluntaries of 1889 form the centrepiece of Herrick's programme. What charmers they are: mostly mezzo-piano in dynamic, with occasional fuller-bodied outbursts, none of them outstays its welcome. They are followed by Howells' rambling Siciliano (the most recent piece on the disc), which Herrick keeps moving. However, he does allow himself plenty of time for William Strickland's convincing arrangement of Barber's Adagio.

The Liszt is a shameless piece of kitsch which borrows freely from Allegri's Miserere and Mozart's Ave verum corpus. More worthwhile are Schumann's Study and a quartet of miniatures by Samuel Wesley. The only fault with the whole package is that the portrait purporting to be that of Wesley senior is, in fact, that of his natural son, Samuel Sebastian.

In summary, this thoroughly enjoyable disc is sensitively and affectionately played, and it works well at a single hearing.

Organ Fireworks, Volume 6
Cocker Tuba tune Elgar Organ Sonata No 1 in G, Op 28 Hollins A Trumpet Minuet CS Lang Tuba tune Lemare Concertstück in the form of a Polonaise, Op 80 Spicer Kiwi Fireworks – Variations on 'God defend New Zealand' Sumsion Introduction and Theme Wagner (trans Lemare, arr Westbrook and Herrick) Die Meistersinger von Nürnberg – Prelude, Act 1
Christopher Herrick org
Hyperion CDA66778 (76 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded on the Norman and Beard organ in the Town Hall, Wellington, New Zealand in 1995 ◉

This series turned into something of a world tour for Christopher Herrick and the 'Organ Fireworks' team, and here they travel to New Zealand. They have come up with one genuine piece of 'home-grown' music (although C.S. Lang left New Zealand for England almost before he could tell a nappy from a nazard) and a connection with Edwin Lemare; he played this organ three months after its completion in 1906. However, the starting-point for this programme is the tradition of civic organ concerts which was exported from the town halls of Edwardian England to such far-flung corners of the British Empire as Singapore, South Africa and, of course, New Zealand. The Wellington Town Hall organ is typical of a large turn-of-the-century English symphonic organ, and while it might seem a little extravagant to go half-way round the world to find one, it is, following its 1985-86 restoration, rare in being substantially unaltered and in excellent working condition. Full organ is gloriously meaty, the flue tone beautifully blended and the solo reeds a joy to behold – a silvery Tromba perfect for Hollins's elegant Minuet; a gutsy Tuba ideal for both Cocker and Lang. As ever, Herrick's performances have both musical integrity and great communicative flair: his is a matchless performance of the Elgar Sonata, in which the composer's strangely awkward use of the organ, in places treating it almost orchestrally, is immaculately managed.

Organ Fireworks IX
Bach (arr Reger) Chromatic Fantasia and Fugue in D minor, BWV903 Bartók (arr Herrick) Six Romanian Folkdances, Sz56 Eftestøl Seven Allegorical Pictures Gowers An Occasional Trumpet Voluntary Langlais Trois paraphrases grégoriennes, Op 5 N Rawsthorne Dance Suite – Line Dance Widor Symphony No 5 in F minor, Op 42 No 1 – Toccata Wolstenholme Bohemesque Christopher Herrick org
Hyperion CDA67228 (72 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Played on the organ of Berner Münster, Switzerland

Beyond a fascinating and varied mix of familiar and unfamiliar repertoire, the strengths of Hyperion's spectacular 'Organ Fireworks' series lie in consistently first-rate recordings of some of the world's most aurally stunning instruments (of which this 57-stop organ in Berne is a classic example), and Herrick's playing, which can only be described as unfailingly brilliant. There are surely few players around who in the same breath, as it were, could plunge into the emotional intensity of Langlais' Paraphrases grégoriennes, glide over the glib figurations of Widor's Toccata, dance with agility through a masterly transcription (by Herrick himself) of Bartók's Romanian Folkdances, and delve into the surprising rhythmic intricacies of Wolstenholme's Bohemesque, with its peculiarly disturbing 15/8 time-signature. Herrick is a musician with a powerful urge to communicate. And communicate he does, drawing on his enormous technical and intellectual resources to turn out performances which sometimes amaze, often astound but never fail to stimulate.

Myra Hess pf

1938-42 HMV Recordings Ⓗ
Bach Cantata No 147, Herz und Mund und Tat und Leben – Jesu, bleibet meine Freude (arr Hess) Brahms Piano Pieces, Op 76 – No 2, Capriccio in B minor; No 3, Intermezzo in A flat. Capriccio in D minor, Op 116 No 7. Intermezzo in E flat, Op 117 No 1. Intermezzo in C, Op 119 No 3 Ferguson Piano Sonata in F minor, Op 8 Matthay Elves, Op 17. Stray Fancies, Op 22 D Scarlatti Keyboard Sonata in G, Kk14 Schumann Carnaval, Op 9
Dame Myra Hess pf
Biddulph mono LHW025 (76 minutes: ADD) Ⓜ
Recorded 1938-42 ●

Those who, sadly, retain an image of Dame Myra Hess as either a sober-suited pianist inclined towards severity or a 'graciousness' that excluded the toughest, most durable virtues, are in for a surprise. For here, on this truly glorious record, she ranges effortlessly from sheer wit and style (Schumann's Carnaval) to a dancing rhythmic magic (Scarlatti), from a glowing poetic inwardness (all the Brahms, with perhaps Op 76 No 3 as the distantly shining star of the set) to a matchless eloquence (Howard Ferguson's tragic masterpiece, his 1938-40 Piano Sonata). Yet all such qualities are seamlessly joined. Nothing is forced, and whether you consider her regal tonal resource (tirelessly celebrated by Stephen Kovacevich, her finest pupil) or a naturalness and candour easy to underestimate, everything is achieved with supreme authority; an illusion achieved by only the truest artists. What an object-lesson, then, for today's harassed young pianists, jostling for attention in an increasingly commercial market-place, a reminder of a poetic and speculative artistry beyond price. Finally, David Lennick's transfers are masterly, and Wayne Kiley's notes refer movingly to the legendary wartime National Gallery concerts held in London, where Hess's performances created an 'indelible image of hope and vision in adversity'.

Vladimir Horowitz pf

The Solo European Recordings, 1930-36, Volumes 1 and 2 Ⓗ
APR5516 – Chopin Etudes – C sharp minor, Op 10 No 4; G flat, 'Black Keys', Op 10 No 5; F, Op 10 No 8; F, Op 25 No 3 (recorded 1934). Mazurkas – F minor, Op 7 No 3; E minor, Op 41 No 2; C sharp minor, Op 50 No 3. Scherzo No 4 in E, Op 54. Piano Sonata No 2 in B flat minor, 'Funeral March', Op 35 – Grave ... doppio movimento (rec 1936)
Liszt Funérailles, S173 No 7. Piano Sonata in B minor, S178 ●●

APR5517 – Bach/Busoni Nun freut euch, lieben Christen gmein, BWV734 Beethoven 32 Variations on an Original Theme in C minor, WoO80 Debussy Etude No 11 'Pour les arpèges composés' Haydn Keyboard Sonata in E flat, HobXVI/52 Poulenc Pastourelle. Toccata Prokofiev Toccata in D minor, Op 11 (rec 1930) Rachmaninov Prelude in G minor, Op 23 No 5 Rimsky-Korsakov/Rachmaninov The tale of Tsar Saltan – Flight of the bumble-bee D Scarlatti Keyboard Sonatas – B minor, Kk87; G, Kk125 Schumann Presto passionato in G minor (rec 1932). Arabeske in C, Op 18. Traumes Wirren, Op 12 No 7. Toccata in C, Op 7 Stravinsky Petrushka – Russian dance (rec 1932)
Vladimir Horowitz pf
APR mono ② APR5516/7 Ⓜ
(oas: 69 and 71 minutes: ADD) ●●

Horowitz's 1930-36 European recordings are beyond price, and so it is more than gratifying to have them permanently enshrined on APR rather than fleetingly available elsewhere. This is notably true of Horowitz's legendary, forever spine-tingling 1932 recording of the Liszt Sonata. Here, once more, is that uniquely teasing and heroic sorcery with octaves and passagework that blaze and skitter with a manic force and projection; an open defiance of all known musical and pianistic convention.

Horowitz's virtuosity, particularly in his early days, remains a phenomenon, and hearing, for example, the vivamente elaboration of the principal theme or the octave uproar preceding the glassy, retrospective coda is to be reminded of qualities above and beyond the explicable. His way with the Chopin Mazurkas unites their outer dance elements and interior poetry with a mercurial brilliance and idiosyncrasy, and who but Horowitz could use his transcendental pianism to conjure a commedia dell'arte vision of such wit and caprice in Debussy's Etude, Pour les arpèges composés? Of the previously unpublished recordings, the first movement from Chopin's Second Sonata is as macabre and tricky as ever, with a steady, oddly menacing tempo. Prokofiev's Toccata, on the other hand, is tossed off at a nail-biting speed, and not even a small but irritating cut, a wild, approximate flailing at the end and an added chord by way of compensation, can qualify the impact of such wizardry. In Rachmaninov's G minor Prelude, however, Horowitz's volatility gets the better of him. If Horowitz, in common with virtually every other pianist, was not equally convincing in every composer and was even 'a master of distortion' for some, he was a Merlin figure of an indelible, necromantic brio for all others.

Though expertly transferred, they do show their age somewhat, but nothing can lessen the impact of Horowitz's early charisma.

The Last Recording
Chopin Mazurka in C minor, Op 56 No 3. Nocturnes – E flat, Op 55 No 2; B, Op 62 No 1. Fantaisie-impromptu in C sharp minor, Op 66. Etudes – A flat, Op 25 No 1; E minor, Op 25 No 5 Haydn Piano Sonata in E flat, HobXVI/49 Liszt 'Weinen, Klagen, Sorgen, Zagen', Präludium, S179 Wagner/Liszt Paraphrase on Isolde's Liebestod from 'Tristan und Isolde', S447
Vladimir Horowitz pf
Sony Classical SK45818 (58 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1989 ●

Horowitz was a legend in his lifetime, not only for his staggering technique but also for the personality and authority of his playing. Other pianists such as Rubinstein and Arrau may have been finer all-rounders, but none has left so many performances distinguished by a special individuality that is covered, though hardly explained, by the word magic. As Murray Perahia has written, from the point of view of a pianist over 40 years his junior, 'he was a man who gave himself completely through his music and who confided his deepest emotions through his playing'. The perfor-mances in this last of his recordings, made in New York in 1989 and with superlative piano sound, are wonderfully crystalline and beautifully articulated, yet there is warmth, too, in the Haydn sonata that begins his programme and nothing whatever to suggest that octogenarian fingers were feeling their age. The rest of the disc is devoted to Chopin and Liszt, two great romantic composers with whom he was always associated, the last piece being Liszt's mighty transcription of Wagner's Liebestod, in which the piano becomes a whole operatic orchestra topped by a soprano voice singing out her love for the last time. Apparently this was the last music Horowitz ever played, and no more suitable ending can be imagined for a great pianistic career informed by a consuming love of music that was expressed in playing of genius. A uniquely valuable record.

Horowitz pf

Debussy Children's Corner – Serenade for a doll. H Etudes – Pour les cinq doigts; Pour les sixtes; Pour les huits doigts Kabalevsky Piano Sonata No 2 in E flat, Op 45. Preludes, Op 38 – No 1 in C; No 3 in G; No 8 in F sharp minor; No 10 in C sharp minor; No 16 in B flat minor; No 17 in A flat; No 22 in G minor; No 24 in D minor Moszkowski Etincelles,Op 36 No 6. Etudes de virtuosité,Op 72 – in F; in A flat Prokofiev Three Pieces from Cinderella, Op 95 – No 2, Gavotte; No 3, Valse lente
Vladimir Horowitz pf
Urania mono SP4206 (61 minutes: ADD) Ⓕ
Recorded live in 1947-51

If anyone needs a sharp reminder of Horowitz's greatness in certain repertoire, then this is it. Who else could – or would – show such a teasing and phenomenal mastery of tone in his tantalisingly brief selection of Debussy Etudes, biting and acerbic when not suave and luxuriant, their fantasy unfolded with all the cunning and artifice at his command. His 'Serenade for a Doll,' as on so many other occasions, is more speculative than coquettish, remembering, like Debussy himself, a long-vanished world of childhood innocence.

And who but Horowitz could make Kabalevsky sound so indelibly Russian rather than frivolous? He casts an aura of rare distinction over the eight Preludes he chooses from Op 38, conjuring a memory of Mussorgsky's 'Gnomus' (Pictures at an Exhibition) in No 10 and whirling us through the moto perpetuo of No 3 with enviable aplomb. And his long-favoured Moszkowski encores are tossed off with a nonchalance and demonism that only he could command. His mischievous charm and ravishing cantabile in Prokofiev's 'Gavotte' and 'Valse lente' from Cinderella close a recital of live New York performances dating from 1947-51 when he was at the height of his powers. Such playing has you by the throat, roaring and whispering its audacity through every page.

This reissue brilliantly captures Horowitz's instrument with its resonating bass and splintering treble. Just listen and be amazed by this ultimate Merlin of the keyboard.

Stephen Hough pf

English Piano Album
Bantock Song to the Seals (arr Hough)

Bowen Rêverie d'amour, Op 20 No 2.
Serious Dance Op 51 No 2. The Way to Polden,
Op 76 Bridge The Dew Fairy. Heart's Ease
Elgar In Smyrna Hough Valse énigmatique – No 1;
No 2 Leighton Study Variations, Op 56 Rawsthorne
Bagatelles Reynolds Two Poems in Homage to Delius. Two Poems in Homage to Fauré
Stephen Hough pf
Hyperion CDA67267 (74 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ

The very opening item, Rawsthorne's four Bagatelles, instantly makes it clear that this latest recital disc from Stephen Hough has a different aim from his previous collections of charmers. Gritty and tough, in Hough's hands sounding wonderfully pianistic, these miniatures are thoughtful and intense, balanced at the end of the disc by the final item, also by far the longest, Kenneth Leighton's Study Variations. These do not make for easy listening either, but they inspire Hough to superb pianism over six sharply characterised pieces, at times echoing Bartók in their angry energy, at others full of fantasy. What all these very varied pieces demonstrate is Hough's profound love of keyboard sound and textures, and his rare gift of bringing out the full tonal beauty.

It is evidence, too, of Hough's wizardry that he makes the Elgar piece, In Smyrna, sound so magical. In his hands it is like an improvisation with echoes of the lovely solo viola serenade in the overture, In the South. The three Bowen works are simple and song-like using an almost cabaret-style of piano writing. In all these pieces Hough's magic is presented in full, clear Hyperion sound. Thoroughly recommended.

Stephen Hough's New Piano Album
Chaminade Autrefois, Op 87 No 4. Pierrette, Op 41
Godowsky Triakontameron – Alt Wien Hough Etude de Concert. Musical Jewellery Box Kálmán Was weiss ein nie geküsster Rosenmund (arr Hough)
Liszt Soirée de Vienne in A minor, S427 No 6
Moszkowski Etincelles, Op 36 No 6
Pabst Paraphrase on 'Sleeping Beauty' (arr Hough)
Paderewski Mélodie in G flat, Op 16 No 2
Rachmaninov Humoresque in G, Op 10 No 5.
Mélodie in E, Op 3 No 3 (1940 vers)
Rodgers Carousel – The Carousel Waltz. The King and I – Hello, Young Lovers (all arr Hough)
Schubert Moment musical in F minor, D780 No 3.
Die schöne Müllerin, D795 – No 8, Morgengruss
(all arr Godowsky) Tchaikovsky Dumka, Op 59.
Humoresque in E minor, Op 10 No 2. Swan Lake,
Op 20 – Pas de quatre (arr Wild)
Traditional The Londonderry Air (arr Hough)
Stephen Hough pf
Hyperion CDA67043 (78 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1997-98

Stephen Hough fashions a viable programme culled from a bottomless piano bench of transcriptions, encores and other sundry ear-ticklers. Indeed, Hough proves that one can make a well-balanced meal using only desserts. Modern pianists, to be sure, are more calorie conscious than their forebears, and Hough is no exception. It's not his way to emphasise inner voices or linger over juicy modulatory patterns, à la Hofmann, Moiseiwitsch, Horowitz, Cortot or Cherkassky. If Hough prefers to bind Godowsky's garish counterpoints with skimmed milk rather than double cream, he's cheeky (and smart!) enough to insert his own ossias into Moskowski's Etincelles, or to retool the Tchaikovsky/Pabst Sleeping Beauty Paraphrase to more brilliant pianistic effect. As in his previous 'Piano Albums', Hough serves up his own Rodgers & Hammerstein transcriptions. If the decorative note-spinning in 'Hello, Young Lovers' distracts from rather than enhances the eloquent original, the pianist's giddy romp through 'The Carousel Waltz' is a tour de force that brilliantly recaptures both the tender and tough-minded qualities inherent in the musical's book. Hough's own Etude de Concert gets plenty of finger-twisting mileage out of a rather unmemorable theme, harmonised, however, with clever Gershwinisms. The unadorned Rachmaninov and Tchaikovsky selections are played with heartfelt simplicity and a lean yet singing sonority.

Julius Katchen pf

Balakirev Islamey Brahms Piano Sonata No 3 in F
minor, Op 5. Variations on an original theme in D,
Op 21 No 1. Hungarian Dances Chopin Ballade No
3 in A flat, Op 47. Fantasie in F minor, Op 49
Franck Prélude, choral et fugue Liszt Hungarian
Rhapsody No 12 in C sharp minor, S244
Mendelssohn Prelude and Fugue in E minor/E,
Op 35. Introduction and rondo capriccioso, Op 14
Rorem Piano Sonata No 2
Julius Katchen pf
Philips Great Pianists of the 20th Century ②
456 856-2PM2 (157 minutes: ADD) Ⓜ
Recorded 1949-62 ●●

The booklet-essay claims that Katchen's 1949 Brahms F minor Sonata was the first ever piano LP. You are likely to be totally bowled over by it now. Katchen plays each of the five movements as to the manner born, calling to mind Schumann's eulogy: 'We heard the most genial playing, which made an orchestra out of the piano. There were sonatas, more like disguised symphonies…'. You begin to wonder if this colossal performance will spoil the rest of the programme. It all has immense character, but apart from the Brahms at the end nothing quite reaches the same heights.

Katchen certainly makes a good case for Ned Rorem's Sonata, a pastiche-Gallic affair which in less temperamental and skilful hands would almost certainly sound merely insipid. The Mendelssohn Prelude and Fugue eventually tips over into Wagnerian hyperbole, while the Introduction and rondo capriccioso is treated as a pretext for flash-fingered display, as is, more justifiably, the Liszt Rhapsody.

Not many pianists would dare to deliver

Islamey with such delirious abandon, and the central section is fabulously atmospheric. Whether the last few pages come off depends on personal tolerance levels, however; at these tempos they're inevitably something of a smash and grab affair. The Franck Prélude is unfolded patiently and with marvellously natural rhetorical presence, and the two Chopin pieces have the feeling of one-off, showstopping encores designed to bring the house down, rather than considered interpretations for repeated listening.

In these particular instances the recording quality must be partly to blame, because the Brahms Variations sound immediately warmer and less concerned with effect. They are all the better for Katchen's letting the climaxes grow organically rather than screaming them out. And the Hungarian Dances are pure joy. Katchen played music on his own terms rather than the composer's. He was a big enough artist to get away with that most of the time, and when the temperamental affinity was particularly strong, as with early Brahms, the results were well-nigh incomparable.

Wilhelm Kempff pf

Bach Chromatic Fantasia and Fugue in D minor, BWV903 Beethoven Piano Sonata No 22 in F, Op 54 Schubert Piano Sonata No 12 in F minor, D625. Drei Klavierstücke, D946. Impromptus, D899 – No 3 in G flat; No 4 in A flat

BBC Legends/IMG Artists BBCL4045-2 Ⓜ

(77 minutes: ADD). Recorded live in 1969 ●●●

Kempff's art was at its apogee at the time of his 70th birthday in the autumn of 1965; rigour and fantasy held in perfect poise. Bryce Morrison, who has provided the notes for this BBC Legends release, and who was present at this concert – and indeed many other legendary recitals, recalls: 'If I were to single out one musical experience that transcended all others, it would have to be Wilhelm Kempff's 1969 Queen Elizabeth Hall recital. At his greatest, as he undoubtedly was on this occasion, Kempff's playing seemed bathed in a numinous light or halo of sound, his choice of music by Bach, Beethoven, and Schubert seemingly improvised on the spot.'

Alfred Brendel has said of Kempff, 'he was an Aeolian harp, ever ready to respond to whatever interesting wind blew his way'. It is a remark that applies especially well to Kempff's Schubert. He has said that in his early years Schubert's music was a book with seven seals. He played Schubert Lieder, but it was not until much later, after the First World War, that he entered the private world of the piano sonatas. For him, Schubert's 'heavenly length' was never lengthy if seen in proportion to the larger experience. 'If length becomes evident as longueur,' Kempff has written, 'the fault lies with the interpreter (I speak from my own experience ...).'

Not here. The reading is wonderfully taut yet touched with a rare ease of utterance. The enigmatic end is perfectly judged (and well 'heard' by an audience whose applause merely stutters into life). After the 'disconsolate lyricism' (BM's phrase) of the sonata, the Drei Klavierstücke offer more or less unalloyed pleasure, Kempff winging the music into life. The playing has charm, dash and magic. He once said of Schubert's piano music: 'It ought not to be subjected to the glaring lights of the concert halls, as it is the confession of an extremely vulnerable spirit. Schubert reveals his innermost secrets to us piano-pianissimo.' We hear this wonderfully well in Kempff's playing of the first of his two encores, the Impromptu in G flat, where his fabled cantabile comes even more mesmerisingly into its own. An Aeolian harp indeed!

At the start of the recital, Kempff provides a shrewdly voiced and somewhat Mendelssohnian account of Bach's Chromatic Fantasia and Fugue. It is a performance to free the fingers and light the way ahead, the great work assuming the role of warm-up man with as good a grace as can be expected.

Rare Recordings, 1936-1945 🄷

Bach Chromatic Fantasia and Fugue in D minor, BWV903. Cantata No 147, Herz und Mund und Tat und Leben – Choral: Wohl mir, dass ich Jesum habe (arr Kempff) Beethoven Piano Concerto No 5 in E flat, 'Emperor', Op 73$_a$ Chopin Berceuse in D flat, Op 57. Mazurkas – No 7 in F minor, Op 7 No 3; No 34 in C, Op 56 No 2. Fantaisie-impromptu in C sharp minor, Op 66 Fauré Nocturne No 6 in D flat, Op 63 Mozart Piano Concerto No 21 in C, K467$_b$ Liszt Années de pèlerinage – Première année, S160: Au lac de Wallenstadt; Au bord d'une source; Eglogue; Deuxième année, S161: Il penseroso; Sonetto 123 del Petrarca. Venezia e Napoli, S162 – No 1, Gondoliera

Wilhelm Kempff pf $_a$Berlin Philharmonic Orchestra / Peter Raabe; $_b$Leipzig Symphony Orchestra / Hans Weisbach

Music & Arts ② CD1071 (134 minutes: AAD). Ⓕ

Recorded 1936-45 ●●

Here is musical treasure confirming that Wilhelm Kempff was a unique artist, whose miraculous pianism expressed a poetry as deep as it was natural. His early teacher, Heinrich Barth, is quoted in the sleeve-note as saying, 'Boy, what I cannot give you must come from heaven,' to which one can only retort that Kempff's gifts were, indeed, heaven-sent. A more modest teacher, Marguerite Long, listened in astonishment to Kempff's performance of Fauré's Sixth Nocturne (a work she had played to the composer and taught to successive generations of French pianists), chastened and feeling that she was hearing this rapturous piece for the first time.

How to explain the start of the central section, with its idealised birdsong emerging in a pianissimo so delicate and luminous that it seems to come from another world? Above all, the playing has an improvisatory freedom that can never be taught; ironically, considering Kempff's nationality, this may well be the most magically recreative performance of a Fauré piano work ever to appear on record. Kempff's Chopin, too, is a marvel of poise and economy, a classic instance of his style and understatement, and his Liszt, taken from the gentler, more picturesque side of his genius, is evocative in a manner unthinkable from any other pianist. Who else could confide the opening of the 'Sonetto 123 del Petrarca' with such a sense of its lento placido, dolcissimo and espressivo or close with a more beatific or glowing memory of the poet's words, 'I saw on earth angelic grace.' Again, his Bach is light-years away from other more pedantic or 'correct' versions, freely and unapologetically romantic in the Chromatic Fantasia, light, buoyant and inimitably voiced in the Fugue.

Then there are two live performances of concertos where the supposed division between Mozart's Appollonian and Beethoven's Dionysian genius seems to melt at a touch. Here is the most radiant, least hectoring of Emperor Concertos with a rapt sense of poetry beneath the outer tumult that not even the dim 1936 recording can hide. The Mozart is introduced as played by 'Professor Kempff', but the performance is so filled with light and air, a spirit of adventure and, in the finale, a transcendental fleetness, that the title seems comically ponderous and inept. Kempff's cadenzas, which include a quote from the C minor Fantasia, K475, offer further instances of his inventiveness, his wit and solemnity. Most of the recordings, when you stop to consider them, have come up remarkably well and those who thirst for true musical genius should invest in this double album without delay. These are rare recordings in every sense.

Brahms Ballades, Op 10. Piano Pieces – Op 76; Op 116-19 Schumann Arabeske in C, Op 18. Kreisleriana, Op 16 H
Wilhelm Kempff pf
Philips Great Pianists of the 20th Century mono ② 456 862-2PM2 (153 minutes: ADD) Ⓜ
Recorded 1950-56

Many of Kempff's recordings, made in stereo, have been regularly reissued, but the mono recordings of Brahms and Schumann, like so many from that mono LP era, have been seriously neglected. Yet in many ways these were the high points of Kempff's work in the recording studio. They are masterly, notable for their utmost concentration and sense of spontaneity, the magnetic, improvisatory quality in the playing. The transfers are superb, full and firm, bringing out the resonance and warmth of Kempff's piano sound, often giving the illusion of full stereo. Indeed, comparing this recording of the four Ballades, Op 10 with the stereo one which Kempff made later in 1972 for DG, the Decca mono sound is preferable, and the interpretations here are more keenly concentrated, with a greater sense of repose at speeds generally a shade broader.

The beauty of Kempff's playing, his ability to produce a singing legato, while using the pedal lightly, plainly stems from Kempff's early training as an organist. So it is that even the densest passages in the Brahms pieces, involving much octave doubling, have a rare transparency, with the melodic line always brought out, as in the middle section of the Capriccio, Op 116 No 3.

The seven Fantasies of Op 116 mark a high point in their range of expression and the way that Kempff builds them as a sequence, three Capriccios and four Intermezzos. With his incisive articulation Kempff is as strong and positive as anyone, while finding extra clarity, and using the subtlest dynamic shading. And though his style is flexible in an improvisatory way, it is fascinating to find that he is much less inclined than other pianists to use agogic hesitations, preferring not to disturb his seamless melodic lines. The Schumann performances have similar qualities, with the Arabeske flowing easily, totally charming. Kreisleriana dates from a little later, 1956, again songful and flowing, with the fifth section sparkling and full of fantasy and the sixth, Sehr langsam, as rapt as you are ever likely to hear it.

Bach Nun komm' der Heiden Heiland, BWV659 H Cantata No 147, 'Herz und Mund und Tat und Leben' – Jesu bleibet meine Freude. Cantata No 140, 'Wachet auf, ruft uns die Stimme' – Wachet auf, ruft uns die Stimme (all arr Kempff) Beethoven Piano Sonata No 27 in E minor, Op 90^{a} Liszt Deux Légendes, S175. Années de pèlerinage – Première année Suisse, S160 – Au lac de Wallenstadt; Au bord d'une source; Eglogue. Deuxième année Italie, S161 – Il penseroso; Canzonetta del Salvatore Rosa; Sonetto 47 del Petrarca; Sonetto 104 del Petrarca; Sonetto 123 del Petrarca. Venezia e Napoli, S162 – No 1, Gondoliera Mozart Piano Concerto No 23 in A, K488^{a} Schubert Piano Sonata No 16 in A minor, D845
Wilhelm Kempff pf ^{a}Bamberg Symphony Orchestra / Ferdinand Leitner
Philips Great Pianists of the 20th Century mono/^{a}stereo ② 456 865-2PM2 (149 minutes: ADD) Ⓜ
Recorded 1950-60

As in the first Kempff volume in the Philips Great Pianists series, the items here have been chosen by Alfred Brendel who is quoted as saying that Kempff's Liszt recordings are 'the greatest we have', and one may agree with Steinberg that the two Légendes, inspired by St Francis of Assisi and St Francis of Paola, are the 'crown jewel' of the collection. Like the other Liszt recordings here, Kempff made them for Decca in 1950 during the brief period when he forsook DG; though there is a hint of clatter in the topmost register, Kempff's wonderfully clear and transparent re-creation of Liszt's bird-sounds in the first of the two has never been matched on disc. The composer's poetic side is consistently brought out, not just in the Légendes, but in the inspired selection from the Années de pèlerinage.

While DG has over the years kept most of its Kempff recordings in the catalogue, it is specially valuable that these and the other Decca recordings should be included here. It is fascinating to compare Kempff's 1953 Decca recording of the Schubert A minor Sonata, D845, with the one he recorded later for DG in his Schubert sonata cycle. Here in the earlier version, with speeds marginally broader, he is lighter and more transparent, bringing out the poetry more intensely, yet emphasising structural strength in his observance of the exposition repeat, ignored on DG. In that same year Kempff recorded the three Bach transcriptions, reflecting his early training as an organist in their warmth and weight, very freely Romantic by latter-day standards but wonderfully persuasive in keyboard colourings. Both of the DG recordings have long been staples of the catalogue, with Kempff again at his freshest and most poetic in the elusive little Op 90 Sonata of Beethoven, making the music sing. He similarly gives a magical performance of Mozart's A major Concerto, always phrasing with winning individuality, but never in a wilful way. In all this material transfers are clean and fresh.

Evgeni Kissin pf

Evgeni Kissin in Tokyo
Anonymous Natu – Wa Kinu. Todai – Mori. Usagi (all arr Saegusa) Chopin Nocturne in A flat, Op 32 No 2. Polonaise in F sharp minor, Op 44
Liszt Concert Studies, S144 – La leggierezza; Waldestrauschen Prokofiev Piano Sonata No 6 in A, Op 82 Rachmaninov Lilacs, Op 21 No 5. Etudes tableaux, Op 39 – No 1 in C minor; No 5 in E flat minor Scriabin Mazurka in E minor, Op 25 No 3. Etude in C sharp minor, Op 42 No 5
Evgeni Kissin pf
Sony Classical SK45931 (73 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded live in 1987

One reason for buying this CD is that it contains dazzling piano playing by a 15-year-old Russian set fair for a career of the highest distinction. A better reason is that the recital contains as full a revelation of the genius of Prokofiev as any recording ever made in any medium. The Sixth Sonata is the first of a trilogy which sums up the appalling sufferings of Russia under Stalin in a way that is only otherwise found in Shostakovich's 'middle' symphonies. Kissin plays it with all the colour and force of a full orchestra and all the drama and structural integrity of a symphony, plus a kind of daredevilry that even he may find difficult to recapture.

As for the rest of the recital only the Rachmaninov pieces are as memorable as the Prokofiev, although everything else is immensely impressive (the Japanese encore-pieces are extremely trivial, however). Microphone placing is very close, presumably in order to minimise audience noise; but the playing can take it, and indeed it may even be said to benefit from it.

Zoltán Kocsis pf

Bartók Six Romanian Folkdances, Sz56
Debussy Deux arabesques. D'un cahier d'esquisses. L'isle joyeuse. Estampes. Fantaisie$_a$
Dohnányi Variations on a Nursery Song, Op 25$_a$
Grieg Lyric Pieces, Book 3, Op 43 Liszt Années de pèlerinage, troisième année, S163 – Les jeux d'eau à la Villa d'Este Rachmaninov Piano Concerto No 4 in G minor, Op 40$_b$. Prelude in C sharp minor, Op 3 No 2. Vocalise, Op 34 No 14 (arr Kocsis)
Zoltán Kocsis pf $_a$Budapest Festival Orchestra / Ivan Fischer; $_b$San Francisco Symphony Orchestra / Edo de Waart
Philips Great Pianists of the 20th Century ②
456 874-2PM2 (153 minutes: DDD) Ⓜ
Recorded 1982-95 ●●

As a pianist, Zoltán Kocsis (also a conductor, composer and musicologist) is at once fastidious, interpretatively innovative and profoundly respectful of the recorded legacies left by major artists of the past – most notably those of Bartók and Rachmaninov. His recording of Rachmaninov's Fourth Concerto reawakens memories of the composer's own.

Edo de Waart and his San Francisco players are with him every single bar of the way, heightening the drama of the outer movements, and tenderising the wistful Largo. The solo playing is agile and quick-witted, with amazing finger velocity and a distinctive brand of rubato. One might imagine that Kocsis's arrangement of the Vocalise would subscribe to the same taut, trimly tailored pianistic aesthetic: but what we hear is malleable almost to excess and, towards the end of the piece, extravagantly decorated. The C sharp minor Prelude is given a far more central reading, and a brilliant one at that. Memories of Rachmaninov also inform Kocsis's approach to Grieg's Op 43 Lyric Pieces, particularly the chirruping 'Vöglein' and of 'Erotik' which – unlike the Vocalise – allows for phrasal freedom while holding fast to the musical line. Control is a very Kocsisian attribute, and helps to forge aural sculpture out of Debussy's two early Arabesques. The Suite bergamasque is scarcely less accomplished while Estampes and D'un cahier d'esquisses balance sensuality and spontaneity. Kocsis brings a winning lilt to L'isle joyeuse, although his fingerwork remains extraordinarily clear throughout.

The Fantaisie for piano and orchestra is given a fine performance which centres more on clarity than atmosphere, while the Nursery Variations combines fun with pianistic finesse: both works are superbly accompanied by Fischer and the Budapest Festival Orchestra (which Fischer and Kocsis co-founded). Liszt's ochre-tinted fountain is viewed with the hindsight of Bartók (or so it seems): Kocsis's performance attends rather more to the music's harmonic constituents than to its virtuoso aspect. And then there are Bartók's Romanian Folkdances, idiomatic and musically satisfying. The recorded sound has great presence.

Dinu Lipatti pf

The Last Recital Ⓗ
Bach Partita in B flat, BWV825 Chopin Waltzes – Nos 1 and 3-14 Mozart Piano Sonata No 8 in A minor, K310/K300*d* Schubert Impromptus, D899 – No 2 in E flat; No 3 in G flat
Dinu Lipatti pf
EMI Références mono 565166-2 Ⓜ
(73 minutes: ADD). Recorded live in 1950 ●●●

Apart from the two Schubert Impromptus, the programme of Lipatti's last recital consisted of works he had recorded only some 10 weeks earlier for EMI, in a Geneva studio, while enjoying a miraculous cortisone-wrought new lease of life. However, when honouring this Besançon Festival engagement on September 16th, 1950, very much against the advice of his doctors, leukaemia had once more gained the upper hand. Less than three months later he was dead, aged only 33. As those of us who have long cherished the original LPs already know, the only evidence of weakness was the omission of the last of the concluding Chopin Waltzes (in his own favoured sequence, that in A flat major, Op 34 No 2). For the rest, the recital stands as 'one of the great musical and human statements, a testimony to his [Lipatti's] transcendental powers, an almost frightening assertion of mind over matter', as the sympathetic introductory note puts it in the insert-booklet. One has to marvel at the clarity of articulation and part-playing in the Bach Partita, at once so attentive to craftsmanly cunning yet so arrestingly unpedagogic and alive. For Mozart he finds a wonderfully translucent sound world, rich in subtleties of colouring – not least in the slow movement's laden song. And as in the two Schubert Impromptus, the musical message is all the more affecting for its totally selfless simplicity and purity of expression. Even if just one or two of the Waltzes might be thought too fast, with over-swift internal tempo changes for contrasting episodes, his gossamer lightness of touch and mercurial imaginative fancy explain why his way with them has now acquired legendary status.

The only small regret is that this excellently remastered mid-price CD deprives us of the endearingly spontaneous extended arpeggio with which Lipatti prefaced the opening Partita, as if in greeting to his instrument, and likewise the improvisatory modulation with which he carried his Besançon listeners from Bach's B flat major to Mozart's A minor.

Joanna McGregor pf

Sawhney Neural Circuits[c]. Messiaen Quatuor pour la fin du temps – Louange à l'éternité de Jésus[a] Pärt Cantus in memory of Benjamin Britten[b] Urban Prophecies[d] Schnittke Piano Concerto[e] Traditional Siwe Bell Music[f]. Nyive Iwa[f]
[bce]Joanna MacGregor [ce]pf [d]Aref Durvesh tabl [a]Christopher van Kampen vc [cdf]Bash Ensemble (Chris Brannick, Joby Burgess, Steve Hiscock, Andrew Martin perc); [bce]Britten Sinfonia; [d]Play Ensemble (Emma-Louise Hible fl Timothy Sidford, George King, Jakob Lindbirk, Nick Hougham kybds/synts Henry Baldwin, Patrick King, Owen Gunnell, Sam Staunton perc) / [d]Cameron Sinclair, Joanna McGregor
SoundCircus SC008 (56 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
[bcef]Recorded live in 2001 ●

This would be a highly covetable album if it merely introduced Sawhney's Neural Circuits, but the programming is admirable throughout, creating a network of contextualising links: the 'found sound' techniques evoke Reich's City Life and The Cave (and there are also hints of free-jazz pianist Cecil Taylor's Unit Structures and Stockhausen's Hymnen); the traditional Ghanaian pieces remind us how Reich's African studies informed minimalism and, consequently, much subsequent composition; while Schnittke, as ever, alludes disconcertingly to any period or style of music which takes his fancy – witness the references to Russian Church music, which the piano attempts to shout down, or the episode of strolling jazz bass.

This account of Pärt's Cantus comprises MacGregor's recorded début as conductor. Despite the competition (notably Russell Davies on ECM) she manages to throw fresh light on this now-familiar but still strikingly beautiful piece, and the merging of the final bell resonances into the opening sounds of the lithe and luminous Ghanaian pieces is magical.

Urban Prophecies is another riveting and thought-provoking Sawhney construct. Not as stunning as Neural Circuits (there's nothing with the power of the ferocious piano part and the increasingly prominent vibraphone figures), its web of interlocking compound time-signatures and snatches of news bulletins on apocalyptic events still impresses. The CD ends with a ravishing performance of Messiaen's cooler contemplation of the end of time.

Wayne Marshall org

Symphony
Dupré Symphony No 2 in C sharp minor, Op 26. Evocation, Op 37 – Allegro deciso Hakim Vexilla Regis prodeunt Roger-Ducasse Pastorale in F Widor Symphony No 6 in C minor, Op 42 No 2
Wayne Marshall org
Virgin Classics 545320-2 (72 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded on the Marcussen organ of Bridgewater Hall, Manchester in 1997 ●

Although you may be torn between open-mouthed admiration for the sheer technical bravado of the playing and horror at Wayne Marshall's breathtaking speeds, the former sentiment will win the day. He plays at speeds beyond the ability of any normal human being. The first movement of Widor's Sixth Symphony is marked Allegro, a word musical dictionaries translate as 'lively'. There are plenty of markings implying a faster speed. Yet it just cannot be possible to play faster than this. Listening amazed at such incredibly athletic finger- and foot-work you won't know whether to laugh or cry. Surely Widor could never have expected his works to sound quite like this – yet if he wanted his music to amaze and excite he surely can have no cause for complaint here. For while Marshall's stunning virtuosity is certainly the main feature of this performance, he is also an astute musician who successfully treads that fine line between mere exhibitionism and musical respectability. Perhaps highest praise must go to the mighty Manchester Marcussen; certainly no Cavaillé-Coll could have supported playing of this agility with such clarity. Marshall displays the organ mostly in hefty, full-throated combinations of stops; even the tranquil opening of the lovely Roger-Ducasse Pastorale only gives passing glimpses of some of the gentler stops. Sadly, a somewhat violently waving swell pedal and a rather unfortunate piece of tuning mar the character of the lone reed stop featured in the fourth movement of the Widor. Yet this is a stunning recording of a magnificent organ and there is no denying that few organ discs on the market present quite such brilliant playing.

Yehudi Menuhin vn

Menuhin in Japan 🄷
Bach Solo Violin Sonatas – No 1 in G minor, BWV1001; No 2 in D minor, BWV1002 – Sarabande. Solo Violin Partita No 3 in E, BWV1006 Bartók Six Romanian Folkdances, Sz56[a] (arr Székely)
Beethoven Sonatas for Violin and Piano[a] – No 5 in F, 'Spring', Op 24; No 9 in A, 'Kreutzer', Op 47
Brahms Hungarian Dance No 1 in G minor[a] (arr Joachim) Dvořák (arr Kreisler) Slavonic Dance in E minor, B78 No 2[a]. Symphony No 9 in E minor, 'From the New World', B178[a] – Largo
Granados (arr Kreisler) 12 Danzas españolas, Op 37[a]
Kreisler Caprice viennois, Op 2[a] Nováček Perpetuum mobile, Op 5 No 4[a] Ravel (arr Catherine) Pièce en forme de habanera[a] Sarasate Danzas españolas[a] – Malagueña; Habanera; Romanza andaluza, Op 22
No 1 Tartini (arr Kreisler) Sonata for Violin and Continuo in G minor, 'Devil's Trill'[a]
Wieniawski Scherzo-tarantelle in G minor, Op 16[a]
Yehudi Menuhin vn with [a]Adolf Baller pf
Biddulph mono ② LAB162/3 (146 minutes: ADD) Ⓜ
Recorded 1951 ●

Here's a fully fired-up Menuhin, high on adrenalin and relishing the thrill of the moment. The circumstances were a Japanese tour, a punishing concert schedule and a two-day sequence of sessions which, on the evidence of the manifest results, probably involved a minimum of 'takes'. There were technical audio problems, most of them concerning substandard shellac and a rough-sounding end product. Surface levels are unusually high for 1951 commercial releases, but the recorded balance is adequate. What really surprises is the raging intensity and burnished tone quality of Menuhin's playing, especially when considering that his commercial recordings from the same period were prone to roughness. Even close scrutiny, though, suggests it is not a question of those 'rough edges' being camouflaged by a blanket of surface noise. It seems that this playing really is as good as it sounds! The Kreutzer Sonata throws caution to the wind (a little too much perhaps in first movement's central section) with a compensating spontaneity that recalls Menuhin's audacious youth and those fabulous records from the 1930s. Adolf Baller is no mere accompanist, but an immensely strong player in his own right, with plenty of individual ideas.

The Bach solo sonatas are truly home territory for Menuhin, and these particular readings show greater maturity than his pre-war recordings and a surer technical command than the two complete sets that he made a few years later. In his notes Erik Wen rightly suggests that the Japanese performances 'project an expressive, almost improvisatory, freedom while maintaining an eloquent pacing throughout', though the sound on the pre-war set is better. The heat remains full on for Tartini's Devil's Trill, again notably superior to Menuhin's earlier commercial recording. The 'encores' breathe fire and passion by the second: Brahms's First Hungarian Dance is super-fast and the Dvořák 'Negro Spiritual Melody' (ie the principal theme from the New World Symphony's Largo) witnesses a veritable flood of tone. Occasionally in these shorter pieces the tempo is pushed too far, but the excitement is almost tangible. A marvellous release.

Arturo Benedetti Michelangeli pf

Beethoven Piano Sonata No 4 in E flat, Op 7 🄷
Brahms Variations on a Theme by Paganini, Op 35[a]. Four Ballades, Op 10[b] Chopin Mazurkas – No 19 in B minor, Op 30 No 2; No 20 in D flat, Op 30 No 3; No 22 in G sharp minor, Op 33 No 1; No 25 in B minor, Op 33 No 4; No 34 in C, Op 56 No 2; No 43 in G minor, Op 67 No 2; No 45 in A minor, Op 67 No 4; No 46 in C, Op 68 No 1; No 47 in A minor, Op 68 No 2; No 49 in F minor, Op 68 No 4
Mompou Cançon i danza No 1[a] Schumann Album für die Jugend, Op 68 – No 36, Matrosenlied; No 38, Winterszeit I; No 39, Winterszeit II. Carnaval, Op 9[c]
Arturo Benedetti Michelangeli pf
Philips Great Pianists of the 20th Century
[a]mono/stereo ② 456 904-2PM2 Ⓜ
(149 minutes: [b]ADD/DDD). Recorded 1942-81 ●

No more imperious or mesmeric pianist has ever existed than Arturo Benedetti Michelangeli. His psychological complexity is evident at every turn, switching in a trice from a chill and intimidating perfection to a flickering Romantic susceptibility. Above all, this is the playing of a unique master – at no point could you ever mistake Michelangeli for another pianist. That this provides a two-edged sword is part of the mystery and fascination. In what sense is Michelangeli's neutral and inhibited, if pianistically ultra-precise, Beethoven Op 7 Sonata Allegro molto e con brio? He conjures a near mystical stillness in the second movement Largo, but his freeze-dried pianism in the final Rondo is the reverse of grazioso. On the other hand he is hypnotic in the wintry declamation of his selection from Schumann's Album for the Young while in Carnaval his pianism is of a calibre that, even when heartless, holds his listeners in a vice-like grip. 'Arlequin' struts and spins with an incomparably teasing elegance and finesse. Even though he offers wildly trumpeting Papillons, and refuses to indulge the piano and forte jocular contrasts of 'Pierrot', there's breathlessly surging and agitato (as marked) 'Chopin' and a piquancy and drollery throughout, startling to those who consider Michelangeli's 'egotistical sublime' above such characterisation. Again, the poco espressivo of Var 13, Book 2 from Brahms's Paganini Variations is very poco indeed and the molto dolce of Var 12, Book 1 is coldly compromised, but the overall mastery is phenomenal. The glissandos of Var 13 in Book 1 become part of a wild stamping dance that makes a mockery of so many other more effortful alternatives.

Michelangeli is crystalline and compelling in Brahms's Fourth Ballade in a manner far removed from gentler and more Romantic received wisdom and in his selection of Chopin Mazurkas he strips away all decorative surface gestures, penetrating to their very essence, confiding their shifts of mood with the rarest sense of vision and darkness. Op 33 No 4 in B minor, which Michelangeli often played as an encore, reminds one of a patrician refinement that has remained unequalled. The transfers are excellent.

Chopin Fantasie in F minor, Op 49. Ballade No 1 in G minor, Op 23. Waltz in E flat, Op posth Debussy Images – Reflets dans l'eau; Hommage à Rameau; Cloches à travers les feuilles; Et la lune descend sur le temple qui fût Schumann Carnaval, Op 9. Faschingsschwank aus Wien, Op 26 Mompou Cançons i danses No 6 – Canción H

Arturo Benedetti Michelangeli pf

Testament mono ② SBT2088 Ⓕ

(130 minutes: ADD). Includes a half-hour rehearsal sequence. Recorded live in 1957

Readers who are familiar with Michelangeli's 1971 DG recording of Debussy's Images will be astonished at this highly mobile 1957 concert performance of 'Cloches à travers les feuilles', which is almost a full minute faster than its stereo successor; or 'Reflets dans l'eau', which glides across the water's surface with such swiftness and ease that the more considered DG alternative – glorious though it is – sounds studied by comparison. 'Hommage à Rameau' is shaped with the utmost finesse and 'Et la lune descend sur le temple qui fût' coloured by exquisitely graded nuances. The performance of Schumann's Carnaval is a choice gallery of aural sculpture, whether in the minutely calculated responses of 'Pierrot', the teasing rubato of 'Coquette', the energy and attack of 'Papillons', the effortless flow of 'Chopin' or the ecstatic lingerings in 'Aveu'. Michelangeli's 'Eusebius' is tender but unsentimental, whereas his 'Florestan' has enough 'reflective' ingredients to suggest that the two characters are closer in spirit than we often think. Faschingsschwank aus Wien contrasts muscular assertiveness (the opening Allegro) with the most amazing control (in the 'Romanze'), while the 'Intermezzo' promotes a virtually orchestral range of dynamics. Michelangeli's Chopin has a rare nobility, the Fantasie especially which, at a rather faster tempo than usual, holds together as a narrative entity. Then there is the imposing First Ballade and the encores – a sunny posthumous E flat Waltz (a regular extra on Michelangeli's concert programmes) and Mompou's sad but tender 'Canción'. This disc leaves you humbled by, and grateful for, some wonderful piano playing. Michelangeli's art is both rare and elusive, his expressive vocabulary finely distilled and unlikely to impress those who listen only for technical mastery. So it's ironic that those who criticise Michelangeli for 'coldness' or 'aloofness' are often the very commentators who are so dazzled by his virtuosity that they cannot hear beyond it. Testament's transfers are superb.

Mikhail Pletnev pf

Pletnev Live at Carnegie Hall

Bach (arr Busoni) Partita No 2 in D minor, BWV1004 – Chaconne Balakirev Islamey Beethoven Piano Sonata No 32 in C minor, Op 111 Chopin Four Scherzos, Opp 20, 31, 39, 54 Moszkowski Etude de virtuosité, Op 72 No 6 Rachmaninov Etude-tableau in E flat minor, Op 39 No 5 D Scarlatti Sonata in D minor, Kk9 Scriabin Deux Poèmes, Op 32 – No 1 in F sharp

Mikhail Pletnev pf

DG ② 471 157-2GH2 (102 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ

Recorded live in 2000 ◉◉

The billed recital was the Bach-Busoni transcription, the Beethoven Sonata Op 111 and the Chopin Scherzos, and the rest – five items on a 'bonus' CD, finishing with Balakirev's Islamey – amount nearly to a half-programme on top. The recording comes with buckets of applause, linking every item, and by the end of Islamey the audience is in a state of near frenzy (and the piano beginning to complain). Some may blow hot and cold over Pletnev but he is not to be missed. As celebrity recitals go this must have been an exceptional spectacle. There is an old-time feel about it, as if Horowitz might have been about to walk out on stage. Bach, Beethoven, Chopin and a few others are of the party but it is the pianist people have come to hear, and they are expecting to be astonished.

When covering the ground in such thoroughbred style, Pletnev's athleticism has an allure which is a pleasure in itself. The tumultuous codas of Chopin's Scherzos are meat and drink to him, and in making a dash for home, over hedge and ditch, there is never a doubt about his stamina. It is a thrilling dash too, the mechanics of piano playing thrown off, the virtuosity transcendental – and the house brought down (four times). There has been grace along the way, many special moments, and always a faultless sense of timing. But with Pletnev in this mood the personality does seem disappointingly limited. It is the devil in his make-up who predominates, and you don't have to travel far in the first Scherzo to find yourself questioning the volatility and the exaggerated feverishness of it all. Is there nothing more to these wonderful pieces than tempests, and charm and coquettishness in the slower bits? Does the middle section of the first one – folk-like and remote – really have to be perfumed to high heaven? But that is his way: toy with the detail and then snatch it away, play with the line and texture to see what novelties one might come up with, hold up the flow, if fancy invites, or perhaps step on the gas. Add a gloss, in other words, as if this constantly performed music could not be interesting to modern listeners unless given a new slant, or a wholesale transcription. It's a point of view, but as Pletnev takes us with him through the flea-markets you ask yourself: if the operation has to be done, could there not be more authenticity of feeling and less vulgarity?

In Chopin he can strike you as a heartless fellow. The Beethoven is a traversal rather than a completely coherent interpretation of the last Sonata he offers, but it is full of striking things. The first movement alternates agitation with near-stasis, and the coda is floated away like something out of Medtner; but the spirit of inquiry and control of mass and sonority are of such an order that the ground is made fertile, the communication fresh. What Beethoven would have thought at having so many of his indications and inflections of expression stood on their heads we shan't know, but no doubt he would have considered it a futile endeavour for the performer to take delight in the physical challenges and to allow the sense to emerge from the sound. The Arietta, played very slowly, is ideally hymn-like and direct; and although some of the detailing in the variations strikes you as weird, the breath of the huge second movement as a lyrical span is impressively sustained, right through to the final trilling, which is wonderful. Not a monumental version of the Sonata entirely hewn from the rock, then, and that makes a nice change.

The Bach-Busoni at the beginning, an uncharacteristically misguided transcription and such a waste of time, will not disappoint admirers of it. The Scriabin, Moszkowski and Balakirev, though, are outstanding among the encores. Oh yes, a Carnegie Hall début with attitude and knobs on, and no, it is never dull. But best to have been there, perhaps.

The Rachmaninov Piano

Beethoven Piano Sonata No 26 in E flat, 'Les adieux', Op 81a Chopin Andante spianato and Grande Polonaise in E flat, Op 22
Mendelssohn Andante cantabile and Presto agitato in B. Rondo capriccioso in E, Op 14
Rachmaninov Etudes-tableaux – Op 33: No 6 in E flat minor; No 8 in G minor; No 9 in C sharp minor; Op 39: No 5 in E flat minor. Variations on a theme of Corelli, Op 42
Mikhail Pletnev pf
DG 459 634-2GH (74 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1998

Gimmickry? Not a bit of it. This is a genuinely illuminating and thought-provoking issue. More than that, it's immensely enjoyable. The freedoms and avoidances of convention which Pletnev often likes to allow himself here sound consistently inspired and true to the spirit of the music. The instrument is Rachmaninov's pre-war American Steinway. What you hear is a well-regulated tone, a little more uneven between the registers and a little thinner overall than its modern counterpart, but never measly or tinny, with the exception of the high treble, which sometimes gives an impression similar to excessive use of the soft pedal. Some of the glittering passagework in the Chopin does becomes rather glaring, especially when pushed beyond mezzo-forte. On the whole though, even this is easy to adapt to, because in Pletnev's hands the texture is so rich in nuance, his own eloquence apparently released from all inhibitions. There's also a significant gain in transparency. Indeed if anyone wanted to claim that this kind of instrument has all the advantages of the 'early' piano with none of the drawbacks it would be hard to disagree. Whether it would stand up to the demands of having to project to the back of a full-size concert hall is debatable, but heard in DG's close yet well-ventilated recording, it sounds marvellous. Rarely will you hear as involving an account of the Rachmaninov Corelli Variations, and only Richter has surpassed Pletnev in the Etudes-tableaux. Nor is it only Rachmaninov's own opulent textures which are thrillingly clarified. The Les adieux Sonata is wonderfully free, both in rubato and voicing, and never so at the expense of the longer lines of the structure. Pletnev's Mendelssohn is breathtakingly poetic and, in the Rondo capriccioso, stunningly articulate, every single phrase subtle yet unselfconscious. All in all, this is one of the very finest achievements in Pletnev's already imposing discography.

Maurizio Pollini pf

Boulez Piano Sonata No 2 Prokofiev Piano Sonata No 7 in B flat, Op 83 Stravinsky Petrushka – three movements Webern Piano Variations, Op 27

Maurizio Pollini pf
DG The Originals 447 431-2GOR Ⓜ
(68 minutes: ADD). Recorded 1971-76 ●●●

Perfection needs to be pursued so that you can forget about it. Pollini's Petrushka movements are almost inhumanly accurate and fast; but what comes across is an exhilarating sense of abandon, plus an extraordinary cumulative excitement. The Prokofiev Seventh Sonata remains a benchmark recording not only for the athleticism of its outer movements but for the epic remorselessness of the central Andante. The Webern Variations are a magical fusion of intellectual passion and poetry, and the Boulez Sonata vividly reminds us why the European avant-garde was such a powerful force in the 1950s. These recordings are a monument to what it is possible for two hands to achieve on one musical instrument. The 'original-image bit-processing' has given a bit more brilliance and presence, as claimed, and another gain is the retention of atmosphere between movements.

Sviatoslav Richter pf

Chopin Etude in E, Op 10 No 3 Liszt Valses oubliées, S215 – No 1; No 2. Etudes d'exécution transcendante, S139 – No 5, Feux follets; No 11, Harmonies du soir Mussorgsky Pictures at an Exhibition Rachmaninov Prelude in G sharp minor, Op 32 No 12 Schubert Moment musical No 1 in C, D780. Impromptus, D899 – No 2 in E flat; No 4 in A flat Ⓗ
Sviatoslav Richter pf
Philips 50 Great Recordings 464 734-2PM Ⓜ
(74 minutes: ADD). Recorded live in 1958 ●●

Even at the height of his powers Richter could be an erratic player, but on this occasion the force was with him from first note until last. Not only did the recital help to spread the Richter 'legend' in the months leading up to his much-hyped London and New York débuts in 1960, his Mussorgsky Pictures made a decisive contribution to the rehabilitation of that piece as a staple of the piano repertoire. Here is virtuosity entirely at the service of the music, defying anyone to say a word against Mussorgsky's pianistic imagination or to want to hear Ravel's orchestral make-over ever again. The rest of the recital displays Richter's view of the romantic repertoire at its first mature flowering, after a period of occasionally experimental overstatement and before its rigidification. His Schubert, Chopin and Liszt share a common core of determined resistance to buffeting emotions. Yet on the surface his Schubert is as beautiful and refined as anyone's; the possibly disconcerting intensity of his Chopin is built strictly around the composer's expression markings; and as all collectors of recorded piano music already know, his Liszt Feux follets remains a benchmark performance to this day. It is impossible to say for sure if the Prokofiev sonatas presented here are the absolute best available, though one suspects they are. He was in at the birth, or nearly so, of all three pieces, and his identification with their expressive worlds is complete. Defiance and unstoppable momentum are at the heart of the matter, and virtuosity of the highest order is pressed into the service of those core values. It is doubtful whether anyone has taken the Scherzo of the Sixth Sonata more convincingly at this tempo (the fast end of allegretto), for instance, or found more wide-ranging yet integrated drama in all three movements of the Eighth. You could certainly wish for more refined recording quality on the first disc, though the Prokofiev sonatas are well enough recorded, especially the Eighth. Overall it's difficult to imagine a truer encapsulation of the Richter phenomenon. If by any chance you have missed these recordings in past incarnations you now have an opportunity not to be passed up.

Richter Rediscovered
Chopin Ballade No 3 in A flat, Op 47. Etudes, Op 10 – No 10 in A flat; No 12 in C minor, 'Revolutionary'. Mazurka in C, Op 24 No 2. Scherzo No 4 in E, Op 54 Debussy Préludes, Book 1 – No 5, 'Les collines d'Anacapri' Haydn Keyboard Sonata No 60 in C, HobXVI/50 Prokofiev Gavotte, Op 95 No 2. Piano Sonata No 6, Op 82. Visions fugitives, Op 22 – No 3, Allegretto; No 4, Animato (two recordings); No 5, Molto giocoso; No 6, Con eleganza; No 8, Commodo; No 9, Allegretto tranquillo; No 11, Con vivacità; No 14, Feroce; No 15, Inquieto; No 18, Con una dolce lentezza Rachmaninov Preludes – F sharp minor, Op 23 No 1; A, Op 32 No 9; G sharp minor, Op 32 No 12 Ravel Jeux d'eau. Miroirs – La vallée des cloches
Sviatoslav Richter pf
RCA Red Seal ② 09026 63844-2 (113 minutes: ADD).
Recorded live at Carnegie Hall in 1960 and at the Mosque Theatre, Newark in 1960 Ⓕ ●

'Richter Rediscovered' is a two-disc album celebrating a unique pianist in much of his early glory. The producer's note tells us that 'virtually none of the recordings on these CDs have been heard since their actual performance of over 40 years ago.' He also tells us that the reasons for this remain unclear, though knowing Richter's fluctuating attitudes to his own performances, it is not difficult to deduce why these recitals have remained in limbo for so long. True there are gaucheries and confusions, inaccuracies and memory lapses, but never for a second do you doubt that you are listening to one of the greatest of all pianists. Both recitals date from 1960 and were given with an almost palpable tension, a discomfort that has you on the edge of your seat in both an enthralling and bad sense; the playing is phenomenal at one level, strange and nerve-wracking at another.

He courses his way through the first movement of Haydn's C major Sonata, hiding behind an incontestable but inscrutable mastery, is teasingly whimsical in Chopin's Fourth Scherzo and much given to sudden sprints and skirmishes in the Third Ballade (try him at the capricious flight commencing at 4'10"). He chivies Ravel's delicious indolence and sparkle in Jeux d'eau virtually out of existence but is unforgettable in the chiming bells of La vallée des cloches. He is at his most awe-inspiring on home territory, plumbing the very depths of despair in Rachmaninov's great B minor Prelude before storming through its central carillon of Moscow bells in a style all his own. Prokofiev's Sixth Sonata is launched with a punishing venom and articulacy, its extremes of stillness and hyperactivity miraculously unified, and how he tantalises his adoring audience with his incomparably played selection from the Visions fugitives! Chopin's Etude Op 10 No 10 is spun off with a grace and rapidity that must have left all aspiring pianists weak at the knees.

The recordings have come up trumps. All in all, these records create an ever-astonishing portrait of a pianist of bewildering fantasy and caprice, urgency and commitment.

Solomon pf

Solomon in Berlin 🄷
Bach Concerto in the Italian style, BWV971
Beethoven Piano Sonatas – No 3 in C, Op 2 No 3; No 14 in C sharp minor, 'Moonlight', Op 27 No 2
Chopin Fantasie in F minor, Op 49. Nocturne in B flat minor, Op 9 No 1. Scherzo No 2 in B flat minor, Op 31 Brahms Intermezzos – E, Op 116 No 4; E flat minor, Op 118 No 6. Rhapsody in B minor, Op 79 No 1
Solomon pf
APR mono ② APR7030 (92 minutes: ADD) Ⓜ
Recorded live in 1956 ●

This invaluable issue brings together on two short CDs recitals given by Solomon in 1956 for Berlin Radio. This was the time of Solomon's greatest success when, as Bryan Crimp puts it in his excellent notes, he had acquired a Midas touch, at long last reaping the rewards his artistry deserved. The recordings are clean but airless, yet they do little to dim one's sense of Solomon's quality, his masterly but unobtrusive virtuosity, his unsullied honesty and musicianship. How typical is his robust, pacy opening Allegro in the Bach, how impeccable his unfolding of the central Andante; a truly seamless aria in such hands. His rhythmic zest in the finale, too, is hard to resist. In Beethoven Solomon is, not surprisingly, no less remarkable. By 1956 he had modified his celebrated slow tempo for the first movement of Op 27 No 2, yet the playing remains sculpted and marmoreal, a statement mixing abstraction and elegy and wholly devoid of impressionism or 'moonlit' overtones. Solomon's Brahms is no less lucid and classic, though his B minor Rhapsody has a truly agitato sweep and propulsion. Here Solomon's poise and sang-froid are only just on the right side of detachment. The same might be said of his Chopin Fantasie. Solomon was hardly a pianist to wear his heart on his sleeve, and although there have been other, more richly idiosyncratic Fantasies on record, there are few more masterly or refined. Finally, criticism falls silent when you listen to Solomon in the B flat minor Nocturne, where his magically 'contained' eloquence re-creates a pearl beyond price. Here, heart and mind work in faultless harmony and alliance.

Andreas Staier hpd

Variaciones del Fandango español
Albero Recercata, Fuga and Sonata – G; D
Boccherini Guitar Quintet in D, G341 – Fandango (arr Staier/Schornsheim)$_{a}$ Ferrer Adagio and Andantino in G minor Gallés Keyboard Sonatas – No 9 in C minor; No 16 in F minor; No 17 in C minor
López Variaciones del Fandango español
Soler Fandango
Andreas Staier hpd with $_{a}$Christine Schornsheim hpd $_{a}$Adela Gonzáles Cámpa castanets
Teldec 3984-21468-2 (65 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1998 ●

The heyday of the fandango dance was in the 18th century (Mozart introduced a form of it in Figaro, following Gluck's Don Juan). It was danced by a single couple who did not touch but whose movements were highly erotic; and there were several local varieties of it, including the malagueña, the granadina, the rondeña and the murciana. Andreas Staier does not, despite the disc's title, confine himself to the fandango rhythm or to the key of D minor which was so prevalent for it. He kicks off with stunning virtuosity with Soler's famous piece (if it really was by him), with its exciting build-up and fearsome hand-crossings. After the initial tiento (which he pulls about with violent changes of speed), he tears at a most un-fandango-like breakneck pace into the dance, whirling breathlessly to the end and employing a free range of registrations on his German-type instrument. He does not make the mistakes of spoiling the cumulative effect by rubatos and changes of speed or tacking on a reprise which wrongly ends the work on the tonic instead of the dominant. He adopts the same fast pace for the very similar but shorter variations on the fandango by López (which he discovered), who was an organist in the royal chapel in Madrid under Charles III and IV. It is a distinct relief to find a more authentic speed adopted in a free arrangement for two harpsichords of a fandango from a Boccherini quintet, which is enlivened by (obbligato) castanets. Albero's recercatas and gigantic fugues are every bit as astonishing in their chromaticisms and eccentric key-shifts as Bach's Chromatic Fantasia and Fugue – in fact, more outlandish. The recercatas resemble the older lute préludes non-mesurés; the lively sprawling fugues (that in D minor a gigue) call forth brilliantly virtuosic playing and splendidly rhythmic stamina; and each work closes with a binary sonata movement which contains Scarlattian chordal scrunches. Of the other non-fandango works here, the most interesting is an F minor Sonata by Josep Gallés, a Catalan whose other sonatas disclose a somewhat disorganised musical mind.

Antal Szalai vn

Bach Partita No 2 in D minor, BWV1004 Kreisler Recitative and Scherzo-Caprice, Op 6 Ysaÿe Solo Violin Sonata in D minor (Ballade), Op 27 No 3 Petrovics Rhapsody No 1
Antal Szalai vn
BMC BMCCD047 (55 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded c2002 ●

Bach's spirit is everywhere. Szalai opens his programme with a patient and warm-hearted account of the D minor Partita where the crowning Chaconne takes 15'24" to unfold, a good overall timing, unhurried but mobile enough to avoid sluggishness. Emil Petrovics' First Rhapsody is an ingenious study in aural perspectives that opens like a ticking clock and ends – as violin rhapsodies usually do – with faster, folk-like material.

Kreisler's comparatively unfamiliar Recitativo and Scherzo-Caprice is brilliant without being showy, and a fine example of Szalai's richness on the lower strings. Ysaÿe's Sonata, the one dedicated to Enescu, is deeply expressive music but technically very demanding, a minefield of potential disaster when it comes to intonation which Szalai surveys with considerable skill and accuracy. Szalai's sound is pleasingly full bodied, his vibrato intense but unobtrusive, his double-stops evenly gauged and his bowing mostly immaculate.

The close-miked recording captures the full lustre of his tone. Many lesser players would have us suffer a repertoire of off-bow noises, but not Szalai, whose smooth delivery never precludes a rare level of musicianship. This is one of the two or three finest violin CDs you will hear this year.

Simon Trpčeski pf

Scriabin Piano Sonata No 5 in F sharp, Op 53
Stravinsky Three movements from Petrushka
Prokofiev Piano Sonata No 6 in A, Op 82
Tchaikovsky The Nutcracker – Suite, Op 71a (arr Pletnev)
Simon Trpčeski pf
EMI Debut 575202-2 (73 minutes: DDD) Ⓢ
Recorded c2001 ●●

The minute Trpčeski opens Pletnev's Concert Suite from Tchaikovsky's Nutcracker, you hear a master of rhythmic precision and, later, a capacity to shoulder fierce challenges with unflinching aplomb and authority. Everything is musically and ardently inflected and while Trpčeski's virtuoso voltage in the final pages of the Andante maestoso is awe-inspiring, his unfailing musicianship is even more remarkable. Again, in Scriabin you sense a pianist who, for all his compelling mastery, sounds still in the first flush of love for the composer's vividness and idiosyncrasy. The accelerando into the first Presto con allegrezza is steep and thrilling and Trpčeski's sense of Scriabin's towering rhetoric at 7'20" is masterly.

In Petrushka, Trpčeski rejoices in virtuosity tailor-made for Artur Rubinstein, but also remembers the music's balletic origins. Time and again he fills a score too often treated as a vehicle for black and white ferocity with a wealth of colour and character.

There are more pulverising accounts of Prokofiev's Sixth Sonata (notably from Richter, Kissin and, most recently, the formidably lean and articulate François-Frédéric Guy) but few more musical. Trpčeski's quality is unfailing, and he has been recorded with a fine mix of clarity and resonance.

Fredrik Ullén pf

Got a Minute?
Brahms Study after Chopin's Etude, Op 25 No 2 Chopin Waltz in D flat, 'Minute', Op 64 No 1 Cortot Adagio after Chopin's Cello Sonata, Op 65 Ferrata Second Study after Chopin's Waltz, Op 64 No 1 Furst Showpan Boogie Godowsky Waltz after Chopin's Op 64 No 1 Gruenberg Jazz Masks, Op 30a Joseffy Two Concert Studies after Chopin Michałowski Paraphrase on Chopin's Waltz, Op 64 No 1 Moszkowski Waltz after Chopin's Op 64 No 1 Philipp Two Concert Studies after Chopin's Op 64 Reger Five Special Studies after Chopin Rosenthal Study after Chopin's Waltz, Op 64 No 1 Sorabji Pastiche on Chopin's Waltz, Op 64 No 1. Pasticcio capriccioso sopra l'op 64 no 1 del Chopin
BIS CD1083 (77 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 2000 ●

Now here's a treasure trove for those with a sweet tooth. Godowsky's infamous reworkings of Chopin's Etudes are, of course, familiar, but few are aware of the diversity of Chopin arrangements conjured by Godowsky's peers. This collection concentrates on the surprising range of treatments of the Minute Waltz, from virtuosic enhancements à la Moszkowski or Rosenthal to the wild and fantastical pastiches of Sorabji. True, the usual understanding of transcription – the idiomatic recasting of music from one medium to another – may be stretched by this sort of super-pianistic amplification, but the wit and invention of these ear-tickling fantasies have their own authentic rewards.

Musically, the most daring works are by Reger and Sorabji, who treat Chopin's structures as springboards for their own imaginative adventures. Try Reger's transformation of Chopin's Etude in thirds (Op 25 No 6), cruelly recast in sixths, or the wealth of subsidiary thematic embellishment in his elegant gloss on the C sharp minor Waltz (Op 64 No 2). The Polish Chopin specialist Aleksander Michałowski wrote numerous Chopin elaborations, and his version of the Minute Waltz is as dazzling as it is demanding.

Rosenthal, Joseffy and Ferrata were all Liszt pupils, and their treatments, although varied, exhibit familiar traits: doubling in thirds, and a saturation of filigree embroidery and polyphonic enrichment. It's all good harmless fun, and Chopin – like Bach – can easily withstand the treatment without suffering irrevocable damage to the identity and purity of the originals. As if to prove the point, Ullén ends his exploration with the original D flat Waltz, and makes the astute observation that 'our perception of a piece depends as much on our knowledge of its descendants as of its precursors'.

Ullén performs these treacherous pieces with astonishing clarity and dexterity, dispatching the torrents of notes and intricate detail with unruffled aplomb. Anyone who plays Ligeti's Etudes must have mental agility and a fearless technique, but Ullén also shows a refinement of nuance and musical shape, making music of even the most over-written material. The principal caveat is his tendency to keep the embellishing figuration too much in the foreground, at the expense of depth of sonority in the melodic line; there are also places that cry out for bolder primary colours, rather than Ullén's pastel shades. That said, this is a remarkable achievement, and should be snapped up by all piano enthusiasts. The recorded sound is rather glassy, but crystal clear.

Maxim Vengerov vn

Bach Toccata and Fugue in D minor, BWV565
Shchedrin Echo Sonata. Balalaika[a]
Ysaÿe SoloViolin Sonatas, Op 27 – No 2 in A minor; No 3 in D minor (Ballade); No 4 in E minor; No 6 in E
Maxim Vengerov vn
EMI Ⓕ 557384-2 (67 minutes: DDD)
[a]Recorded live in 2000 and 2002 ●●

This solo violin recital offers a masterly demonstration of the artistry as well as the virtuoso prowess of Maxim Vengerov. It culminates in the two items which will obviously win the widest popular appeal, a thrilling solo violin transcription of Bach's D minor Toccata and Fugue and Shchedrin's Balalaika, written in 1997, which Vengerov uses as a party-piece encore, dispensing with his bow and playing the violin pizzicato as though it is a balalaika, to the great amusement of the audience.

Vengerov makes Bach's Toccata and Fugue into a formidable showpiece, something that in its sustained power can well stand comparison even with the great Chaconne of the D minor Partita, with Vengerov thrillingly bringing out the dramatic and dynamic contrasts.

Vengerov lifts off with Ysaÿe's Sonata No 2, the one in A minor dedicated to Jacques Thibaud, which opens with surreal fragments of the Preludio to the Third Partita. Vengerov is in total command emotionally and technically of this demanding piece, and his readings of the four Ysaÿe Sonatas are similarly passionate. His red-blooded approach provides a striking contrast with Frank Peter Zimmermann's finely disciplined studio performances also on EMI.

Vengerov is warmer, more volatile and spontaneous in romantic style. He almost seems to improvise; he is also the more immediately persuasive, emphatically bringing out the Dies Irae quotations in No 2 and deftly in the Sarabande of No 4 bringing out the melody implied in the pizzicato line. This is a solo violin recital, which, unlike many, in its magnetism and variety, its power and passion, runs no risk of monotony.

Jason Vieaux gtr

Guitar Recital
Barrios Waltzes, Op 8 – Nos 3 and 4. Julia Florida – Barcarola Bustamente (arr Morel) Misionera Krouse Variations on a Moldavian Hora. Merlin Suite del recuerdo. Morel Chôro. Danza Brasileira. Danza in E minor Orbón Preludio y Danza Pujol Preludios – Nos 2, 3 and 5
Jason Vieaux gtr 🏆
Naxos 8 553449 (64 minutes: DDD) Ⓢ
Recorded 1995 ●

This is the début recording by an artist of great talent. His technical prowess is impressive to say the least, as near flawless as one may get, and his tone is as clear and expressive as his musical thinking. There are now many finger-perfect guitarists on tap, but those of Vieaux's natural musicality are rare indeed; everything in the moulding of the phrases comes from within – you just can't programme sensitivity of this kind. The main thrust of the music is Latin-American, a nice juxtaposition of the well known (Morel, Barrios, Pujol and Bustamente) with some unfamiliar but substantial (of their kind) pieces by Merlin and Orbón. The apparent 'misfit' is the work by Krouse, far removed from Latin America, but why should music of this quality be excluded, for whatever reason? It is included for the best of reasons, because the performer loves it and is right to do so. The theme is Moldavian and the language of the imaginative and technically punishing variations convincingly matches it. Vieaux plays everything with chameleon-like felicity of style and feeling. Superb recording and excellent notes complete an issue of the greatest distinction.

Arcadi Volodos pf

Piano Transcriptions
Horowitz Variations on a Theme from Bizet's 'Carmen' Rachmaninov Morning, Op 4 No 2. Melody, Op 21 No 9 (all arr Volodos) Liszt Hungarian Rhapsody No 2 in C sharp minor, S244 (arr Horowitz). Litanei, S562 No 1. Schwanengesang, S560 – No 3, Aufenthalt; No 10, Liebesbotschaft
Rimsky-Korsakov The tale of Tsar Saltan – Flight of the bumble-bee (arr Cziffra) Prokofiev Pieces from Cinderella – Gavotte, Op 95 No 2; Oriental dance,

Op 97 No 6; Grand waltz, Op 107 No 1
Tchaikovsky Symphony No 6 in B minor, Op 74, 'Pathétique' – Allegro molto vivace (arr Feinberg)
Bach Trio Sonata No 5 in C, BWV529 – Largo (arr Feinberg) Volodos Concert Paraphrase on Mozart's 'Turkish March'
Arcadi Volodos pf
Sony Classical SK62691 (61 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1996 ●●

Arcadi Volodos, Russian-born but Spanish-based, here declares himself both as elegant lyricist and spectacular virtuoso; his playing is as tactful as it is audacious, the work, surely, of a Romantic pianist for our times. His tributes to Horowitz (the ultimate Russian virtuoso icon) and Cziffra (the ne plus ultra of pianistic necromancy) are as coolly masterful as they are personally engaging and are wholly devoid of wilfulness or undue idiosyncrasy. Those anxious for Horowitz's splintering treble and thundering bass or for Cziffra's manic explosions and accelerations will listen in vain. Mercifully, Volodos remains his own man, tempering some heart-stopping octaves and glissandos at the close of Feinberg's transcription of the Scherzo from Tchaikovsky's Pathétique Symphony with a touch of nonchalance, and in Feinberg's other arrangement, guiding Bach gently but firmly into the 19th century. Volodos is no less beguiling in his own Rachmaninov song transcriptions; here is that dreamed-of vocal 'line', luscious cantabile and aristocratic rather than ostentatious voicing and texturing. Last but far from least, his elaboration of Mozart's 'Turkish March' seasons the most decadent and epicurean taste with a teasing wit and insouciance. Sony's sound is superlative and this delectable recital makes one long for more substantial as well as glittering fare from a pianist who, as his producer puts it, 'never loosens the reins of his guiding intellect'.

Arcadi Volodos at Carnegie Hall

Liszt Hungarian Rhapsody No 15 in A minor, S244, 'Rákóczy'. A Midsummer Night's Dream – Wedding March, S410 (both arr Horowitz) Rachmaninov Fragment in A flat. Etudes-tableaux – No 8 in D minor, Op 39; C minor, Op posth Schumann Bunte Blätter, Op 99 Scriabin Piano Sonata No 10 in C, Op 70. Enigma, Op 52 No 2. Caresse dansée, Op 57 No 2. Prelude in B, Op 2 No 2
Arcadi Volodos pf
Sony Classical SK60893 (72 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded live in 1998 ●●

Taken live from his Carnegie Hall début recital at the age of 26, this recital confirms a daunting legend. Volodos is unquestionably among the world's master pianists, a virtuoso for whom even the most fiercely applied difficulties simply do not exist. At the same time, everything is given with an unfaltering sense of equilibrium; as fast as you marvel at one thing it is immediately counterpointed by another. His technique in, say, the Liszt Rhapsody and Wedding March Variations is stupendous but never at the expense of musical quality. His sonority can be as delicate as it is thunderous and full-blooded. His accuracy and taste are impeccable so that instead of celebrating something self-serving or rip-roaring you find yourself conscious of higher virtues, of rhythm that can be magically free or held in a vice-like grip, as well as an unequalled fluency and aplomb. In Scriabin's Tenth Sonata he is faithful to the composer's obsessive and opalescent vision at every point, more than equal to even the most decadent and esoteric directions. Volodos's Rachmaninov, in this brief but enterprising selection, is played with the same magical sense of flux and clarity. Yet if one had to choose just one item from this recital, for a desert island, it would have to be Schumann's Bunte Blätter, an audacious gathering with a graphic shift from the lighter to the darker side of Romanticism (Nos 1-8 and 9-14 respectively). Sony's sound triumphs over difficult circumstances, and if a teasing touch of enigma remains, both in performance and choice of repertoire, with an artist of this calibre you can hardly say that the golden age of pianism is dead.

Gillian Weir org

Organ Master Series – Volume 1

Hindemith Organ Sonata No 1
Jongen Sonata Eroica, Op 94 Reubke Sonata on the 94th Psalm in C minor Willan Introduction, Passacaglia and Fugue, B149
Priory PRCD751 (74 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Played on the Aeolian-Skinner Organ of The First Church of Christ, Scientist, Boston, Massachusetts
Recorded 2000 ●●

A mouth-watering programme, containing four of the finest romantic works for organ. Hindemith is probably the only name widely known, but if anyone thinks of him as a rather dry composer they should listen to Weir's outstanding performance of his Sonata No 1. As Dame Gillian says in her programme notes, this is the most Romantic of Hindemith's three sonatas, but it gives her the opportunity to bring to the fore the more classical sounds of the Aeolian-Skinner organ.

This instrument was designed by Dame Gillian's husband, Lawrence Phelps, and is one of the largest in the USA. It has a thrilling tutti and a huge range of lovely colours which Dame Gillian exploits with complete mastery. It receives a fine, natural recording from Priory, and organ buffs will be well satisfied with the detailed notes about the instrument.

Dame Gillian's virtuoso playing vividly communicates itself to the listener, and at all times she performs with clarity of articulation and flexibility of tempo. Perhaps there's a little too much rubato in the Willan, and one may prefer the more natural flow of Francis Jackson's inspired 1964 recording. However, the Jongen and Reubke sonatas receive strong, dramatic performances which are amongst the finest ever recorded. In sum, an irresistible combination of great music, great playing and a spectacular instrument.

Sophie Yates hpd

French Baroque Harpsichord Works 🅿
D'Anglebert Pièces de Clavecin – Suite in G minor; Tombeau de M. de Chambonnières F Couperin L'Art de toucher le clavecin – Prélude in D minor. Livre de clavecin, Deuxième ordre – Seconde Courante; Sarabande, 'La Prude'; Les Idées heureuses; La Voluptueuse Forqueray La Rameau; La Boisson; La Sylva; Jupiter Rameau L'enharmonique. L'Egyptienne. La Dauphine
Sophie Yates hpd
Chandos Chaconne CHAN0545 (71 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1993 ●

Sophie Yates has a real understanding of the French style – so difficult to capture, with its special conventions and elaborate ornamentation. Her phrasing is subtle as well as musical; and she proves herself capable of the flexibility proper to this music without risk to the underlying pulse or to continuity. Her reading of La Dauphine, Rameau's last harpsichord piece, is justifiably free and improvisatory, since it is thought to be a transcription of Rameau's extemporisation at the wedding of the Dauphin in 1747. She savours Rameau's bold enharmonics, too, shows drive and energy in his L'Egyptienne, impressive dignity in Forqueray's tribute to his great contemporary and in a d'Anglebert sarabande, expressiveness in Forqueray's La Sylva and a sense of enjoyment in the trenchant drama of the flashing thunderbolts of his Jupiter. Yates also has the advantage of admirable recording of a particularly beautiful and rich-sounding instrument (a copy of a Goujon).

Evan Ziporyn clarinet

This is not a clarinet
D Lang Press Release[a] Tenzer Three Island Duos[b] Ziporyn Four Impersonations[b]. Partial Truths[a]
Evan Ziporyn [a]bass cl/bcl Ⓕ
Cantaloupe Music CA21002 (53 minutes: DDD) ●●

This is no ordinary clarinet recital, and Ziporyn, truly a phenomenon in American music, cannot simply be understood as a clarinettist. For a start, there are moments in his composition Partial Truths where it is hard to believe that this is a clarinet record. 'Are these pan-pipes? Or Didgeridoos?' was one typical response from one poor unsuspecting listener.

Ziporyn's clarinet sound is so individual, so raunchy, that it would be hard to imagine any other player making this record. But it may yet turn out that the big Z's most lasting contribution to American music is to be found in his own compositions. In many ways he makes music like a traveller who trades between continents. His Four Impersonations captures the sounds of Japanese gagaku, Balinese music and Nairobi guitar music. The precision with which he hears subtle nuances of tuning and phrasing is spellbinding. The fact that this is all achieved through the medium of a solo clarinet is beyond belief. The recital is rounded off with another tour de force, a masterly rendition of David Lang's Press Release, one of the clarinet's great modern classics. Phenomenal.

Nikolaj Znaider vn

'Bravo!'
Achron Hebrew Melody, Op 33 (arr Auer)[a]
Chopin Nocturnes[a] – No 8, Op 27 No 2 (in D – originally D flat – trans Wilhelmj); No 16 in E flat, Op 55 No 2 (trans Heifetz)
Kreisler Recitativo and Scherzo-Caprice, Op 6 Ponce Estrellita (arr Heifetz)[a]
Rachmaninov Vocalise, Op 34 No 14 (trans Press)[a]
Sarasate Danzas españolas – Romanza Andaluza, Op 22 No 1[a] Wieniawski Polonaise No 1 in D, Op 4[a]. Variations on an Original Theme, Op 15[a] Ysaÿe Solo Sonata, 'Ballade', Op 27 No 3
Nikolaj Znaider vn [a]Daniel Gortler pf
RCA Red Seal 82876 50470-2 (60 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded c2002 ●●

Violin buffs with good memories or sizeable record collections will already know many of these pieces from old 78s. Nikolaj Znaider's performances are more acts of homage than of imitation, even in cases where his finest recorded predecessors – Heifetz mostly, but also Elman and perhaps Szeryng – provided formidable benchmarks.

Znaider already has a very distinctive style, with quick-reflex bowing, a colourful range of dynamics, a fast and fairly narrow vibrato, phrasing that's thought through virtually by the bar, clean multiple stops and an interpretative take on each piece that's invariably more thoughtful than flashy. Wieniawski's Polonaise is full of individual incident, exuberant but finely detailed. Much the same goes for the less familiar Variations on an Original Theme, but some of the most overtly brilliant playing is in the two unaccompanied pieces, especially Ysaÿe's Third Sonata, music that toys with the close of Bach's 'Chaconne'.

Much to delight the ear, then, the sort of fare that was once commonplace but that nowadays graces our CD players all too rarely. This kind of repertoire stands or falls on the strengths or weaknesses of its interpreters and Znaider vies with the best in recent years for strengths. With good sound and intelligent accompaniments, you won't be disappointed.

CHORAL

Ampleforth Schola Cantorum

Carols from Ampleforth
Traditional O come, all ye faithful. Once in Royal David's city. Unto us is born a son. The Sussex Carol. God rest you merry, gentlemen. Hark! the herald angels sing (all arr Willcocks). Personent hodie (arr Holst). Good King Wenceslas (arr Jacques). Adam lay y-bounden (arr Warlock). Angel tidings (arr Rutter). Past three o'clock. Ding dong! merrily on high (both arr Wood). It came upon a midnight clear. Come with torches. Silent Night (all arr Little). Still, still, still (arr Ledger). The Infant King (arr Pettman). The First Nowell (arr Stainer/Willcocks) H C Stewart On this day earth shall ring M Praetorius A great and mighty wonder Mathias Sir Christemas
Ampleforth Schola Cantorum / Ian Little with Simon Wright org
Ampleforth Compact Discs AARCD1 Ⓕ
(58 minutes: DDD)

Here is a programme of carols as traditional as turkey and plum pudding, and as wholesome. You don't have to groan at the approach of Have yourself a merry little Christmas or any other feeble compromise with the changing times; there's not even a bleat from John Tavener and William Blake's unprofitably questioned little lamb. Musically, the programme is in the first place a triumph for Anon, and then for Sir David Willcocks whose arrangements are rich in seasonable splendour and knowledge of how to get the best out of choir and organ. Other arrangers have done good work too, including the choir's director, Ian Little, who provides inspired embellishments in the last verse of It came upon a midnight clear but may just possibly have gone a little over the top towards the end of Silent Night. He has also trained a splendid choir. Forthright tone from the trebles, ample tone from the men, combine to live up to the name of their foundation. The organist, Simon Wright, does an excellent job, varying the might of his invincible reeds and implacable pedals with a scattering of two-foot spangle-dust, light and bright as a Christmas-tree fairy. The building itself is aurally spacious, the harmonies of Ding dong! merrily on high engaging in merry argument with their echo. There will doubtless be homes in which a playing of this disc will constitute the Christmas Day reveille, and if the rest of the day goes as well they can count themselves lucky.

Cambridge Singers

Feel the Spirit
Carmichael Skylark (arr Rutter)
Rutter Feel the Spirit[ad]. Birthday Madrigals[bc]
Shearing Songs and Sonnets from Shakespeare[bc]
Rutter The Heavenly Aeroplane Traditional Lord of the Dance (arr Rutter)
[a]Melanie Marshall mez [b]Malcolm Creese db [c]
[c]Wayne Marshall pf Cambridge Singers; [d]BBC Concert Orchestra / John Rutter
Collegium COLCD128 (75 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts included. Recorded 2001

This disc's Anglo-American thread pays homage to three of John Rutter's favourite musical traditions – the spiritual, the madrigal and American song. The most substantial work here is the new half-hour-long cycle of spirituals Feel the Spirit, which received its première in Carnegie Hall in June 2001. These luscious arrangements bear repeated listening: orchestrally colourful and playfully witty). In their exuberant moments they lie somewhere between Porgy and Bess and George Mitchell's brand of close-harmony minstrelsy. Melanie Marshall's voice is engagingly honeyed, especially in the Vaughan Williams-flavoured 'Sometimes I feel like a motherless child'. The Cambridge Singers and BBC Concert Orchestra are on top form throughout.

Rutter's Birthday Madrigals were completed in 1995 to celebrate George Shearing's 75th birthday. Drawing on texts from the Elizabethan era, they feature the superb bass-playing of Malcoln Creese and some sympathetic pianistic embellishments from Wayne Marshall, and are juxtaposed by Shearing's own beautiful Songs and Sonnets (1999), a follow-up Shakespearean cycle to Music to Hear (1985).

The fillers offer a triple bonus and include a full French impressionist treatment of Hoagy Carmichael's exquisite Skylark. A delightful disc. Strongly recommended.

Hail, Gladdening Light
J Amner Come, let's rejoice Anonymous Rejoice in the Lord Bairstow I sat down under his shadow Dering Factum est silentium Elgar They are at rest J Goss These are they that follow the lamb W H Harris Bring us, O Lord God Howells Nunc dimittis Morley Nolo mortem peccatoris Philips O beatum et sacrosanctum diem Purcell Remember not, Lord, our offences, Z50 Rutter Loving shepherd of Thy sheep J Sheppard In manus tuas Stanford Justorum animae, Op 38 No 1 R Stone The Lord's Prayer Tallis O nata lux Tavener A hymn to the mother of God. Hymn for the dormition of the mother of God Taverner Christe Jesu, pastor bone Tomkins When David heard Vaughan Williams O vos omnes Walton A litany C Wood Hail, gladdening light
Cambridge Singers / John Rutter
Collegium COLCD113 (72 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included ●

This has the subtitle 'Music of the English Church' and it is arranged under four main headings: anthems and introits (these count as one), Latin motets, settings of hymns and other poetry, and prayer-settings. Each of them is well represented in a programme that varies delightfully in period and style, and in performances which are remarkably consistent in quality.

Some of the items will come as discoveries to most listeners: for example, the anthem Come, let's rejoice, a splendid, madrigal-like piece written by John Amner, organist from 1610 to 1641 at Ely Cathedral where these recordings were made. Others are equally impressive in their present performance: a deep quietness attends the opening of Richard Dering's Factum est silentium, which ends with rhythmic Alleluias set dancing with subdued excitement. Among the hymn-settings is one by a 16-year-old called William Walton. Included in the prayers is the choirmaster's own setting, characteristically made for pleasure, of Loving shepherd of Thy sheep. All are unaccompanied, and thus very exactingly test the choir's blend of voices, its precision, articulation and feeling for rhythm. In all respects it does exceptionally well; the tone is fresh, the attack unanimous, the expression clear and sensitive, the rhythm on its toes. These are young, gifted singers, formed with disciplined enthusiasm into a choir with a distinctive style – recorded with admirable results by a family firm.

Sing, ye Heavens

Anonymous Pange lingua. Veni Creator Spiritus. Vexilla Regis Croft (arr Rutter) O God, our help in ages past Gibbons Drop, drop slow tears Luther (arr Rutter) A mighty fortress Miller (arr Rutter) When I survey the wondrous Cross Monk (arr Rutter) All things bright and beautiful. Christ the Lord is risen today R H Prichard (arr Rutter) Love divine, all love excelling Purcell (arr Rutter) Christ is made the sure Foundation Rutter Eternal God Scholefield (arr Rutter) The day thou gavest, Lord, is ended Schulz (arr Rutter) We plough the fields and scatter Tallis Glory to thee, my God Traditional (arr Rutter) Amazing Grace. Be thou my vision. The King of love my Shepherd is. Let all mortal flesh keep silence. Lo! he comes with clouds descending. Morning has broken

Thelma Owen hp John Scott org

Cambridge Singers; City of London Sinfonia Brass / John Rutter

Collegium COLCD126 (77 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ

Texts and translations included. Recorded 2000 ●

The Service was the Lord's; anthem, canticles, psalms and responsories were the choir's; and the hymns were anybody's. That (roughly) is one remembers it. Of course the best of hymns were acknowledged as having dignity, strength and other appeals to heart and head; and with descants and special harmonies by Vaughan Williams or David Willcocks they could join in musical character and interest. But it seems to be a relatively recent development that their performance has become something of an art form.

The art lies in knowing how much to arrange and how much to leave be. On the whole John Rutter has it right. In Love divine, for instance, the first verse has the voices in unison and the harmonies 'straight', verse 2 has the choir in standard four-part harmony, and verse 3 has a descant and new harmonies, both of which are emboldened to acquire a richer life towards the end. Most are accompanied by the organ, some by organ and brass, a few by harp. These include the group described as 'folk hymns' ending with We plough the fields and scatter, taken at a brisk pace and sounding almost Haydnesque. Gibbons's Drop, drop slow tears is sung unaccompanied throughout, with no 'improvements'. Tallis's Glory to thee, my God has verse 4 in double canon. And Rutter provides a hymn of his own, Eternal God, written in 1999 'with the aim of augmenting the meagre stock of hymns which make mention of music'.

Generally, the selection is fine, both words and music. In performance, the plainsong hymns are rather too 'barred', and the somewhat garish stained-glass ending of Let all mortal flesh keep silence will not be to everyone's taste. But this, as we know, is an excellent choir; they are fortified by some splendid players; and presentation and recorded sound (apart from recessing the choir too much in the hymns with brass) are admirable also.

Additional recommendations

A cappella – works by Debussy, Ravel and Poulenc

Cambridge Singers / Rutter

Collegium CSCD509 (63 minutes: DDD) Ⓜ

Recorded 1980s

A very attractive programme, with a most touching and expert pastiche madrigal, Lay a Garland by RL Pearsall.

There is Sweet Music – works by Vaughan Williams, Britten, Grainger, Holst and Moeran

Cambridge Singers / Rutter

Collegium CSCD505 (56 minutes: DDD) Ⓜ

Recorded 1980s

An utterly delectable disc, packed full of your favourite choral pieces, sung by a choir that John Rutter made into one of the best in the country.

Chanticleer

Billings The Singing Master's Assistant – David's Lamentation Cagle Soar Away Davids The Un-Covered Wagon Foster Camptown Races (arr Halloran). Jeanie with the Light Brown Hair (arr Puerling) Gershwin Goldwyn Follies – Love Walked In (arr Puerling) Hawley Tre Rime di Tasso – Fuggi, fuggi, dolor; Labbra vermiglie e belle Hill Voices of Autumn Lawson/Waller/Yates Calling my Children Home (arr Jennings) Lienas Credidi Padilla Versa est in luctum Ronell Willow Weep for Me (arr Jennings) Stucky Whispers Traditional Guide Me, O Thou Great Jehovah. I'm a Pilgrim (arr Jennings). Jefferson ('Glorious Things of Thee are Spoken'). Wayfarin' Stranger (arr Jennings)

Chanticleer / Joseph Jennings

Teldec 0927-48556-2 (78 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ

Texts and translations included. Recorded c2002

This bold, eclectic, well-planned programme, moving from plainsong to spiritual with contrasting groups of song in between, is typical of the versatile American male choral group

Chanticleer. Their commitment to their art is 100 per cent.

Chanticleer adopt a raw, exposed vocal timbre, notably on the alto line, to revive the Colonial spirit of Glorious Things of Thee are Spoken to a tune from 1827. They adopt a similar vocal style for William Billings' powerful setting of David's Lamentation and Soar Away, AM Cagle's spare setting of words from an 1814 collection of hymn and spiritual songs where the supplicant pleads for a sober mind to see the tempter fly.

Three contrasted contemporary pieces give full rein to Chanticleer's outstanding vocal capabilities. In Whispers, prompted by Walt Whitman's Whispers of heavenly death, Steven Stucky threads allusions to Byrd's Ave verum corpus round his own music to suggest how images of death can be metamorphosed through great art into mystical exultation. Whispers haunts the mind long after the music has stopped. In The Un-Covered Wagon the composer has the choir imitating the ceremonial sounds of Native American tribal music, shakers and drums, encircling the hymn Faith of our Fathers in polyphonic fashion. A couple of very inviting bluegrass songs lead to a gospel style finale (I'm a Pilgrim), where you may find the temptation to join in irresistible.

Clare College, Cambridge

Blessed Spirit – Music of the soul's journey
Anonymous Requiem aeternam. Kontakion of the Dead. Domine Jesu Christe. O quanta qualia. In paradisum Byrd Iustorum animae Harris Faire is the Heaven Hildegard of Bingen O felix anima Holst The Evening Watch, H159 Parry Songs of Farewell – No 4, There is an old belief Schütz Selig sind die Toten Sheppard Audivi vocem de caelo Tavener Funeral Ikos Tchaikovsky Blessed are they Traditional Steal Away (arr Brown). Deep River (arr Luboff) Victoria O quam gloriosum Walford-Davies Psalm No 121 and Requiem aeternam
Clare College Choir, Cambridge / Timothy Brown
Collegium COLCD127 (71 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included. Recorded 2000 ●

There can be nothing but praise for the excellence of these performances, for the quality and choice of the music itself and, most of all, for the gorgeous sound quality of these recordings made in Ely Cathedral. Add to this some eminently readable booklet-notes and we have a real winner, even if the overall aural effect bears a striking resemblance to those ubiquitous inoffensive compilation discs played in hotel lobbies the world over.

Within the basic theme of death and the soul's subsequent journey to paradise the music juxtaposes chunks of plainsong and standard cathedral choir repertoire with some rather more esoteric choral pieces. Whether it's the ancient plainchant In paradisum, Psalm 121 sung to Walford Davies's fine Anglican chant, William Harris's richly textured anthem Faire is the Heaven or the almost erotically indulgent arrangement by Timothy Brown of Steal Away, Clare College Choir distinguish it all with finely crafted and beautifully shaped perfor-mances that are not just note-perfect but intensely perceptive as well. There's no hint of the sickliness we sometimes experience when church music is exposed to such slick professionalism on disc – rather a real sense of wonder and awe at the timeless beauty of the programme.

It is difficult to listen to the disc in its entirety without falling into some kind of soporific trance, but taken individually each piece is, in its own way, as dramatic and earth-shaking as the garish blue cover leads us to suspect.

Illumina
Anonymous Lumen ad revelationem Byrd O lux, beata Trinitas Grechaninov The seven Days of the Passion, Op 58 – O gladsome light Harris Bring us, O Lord God Hildegard of Bingen O choruscans stellarum Holst Nunc dimittis, H127
Josquin Desprez Nunc dimittis Ligeti Lux aeterna Palestrina Christe, qui lux es et dies. Lucis Creator optime Rachmaninov Vespers, Op 37 – Nunc dimittis Rautavaara Vigilia – Evening Hymn Rutter Hymn to the Creator of Light Tallis O nata lux de lumine. Te lucis ante terminum Tchaikovsky Vesper Service, Op 52 – Hail, gladdening Light
Whyte Christe, qui lux es et dies
Wood Hail, gladdening light
Clare College Choir, Cambridge / Timothy Brown
Collegium COLCD125 (76 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included. Recorded 1999 ●

Retrospectively the disc's final item, Ligeti's Lux aeterna, dominates the recital. Not only does it make an indelible impression, but it also casts its light over the entire programme and style of singing. To a listener who has not heard it before (a slightly smaller category than might be thought, as the piece was used in the film 2001: A Space Odyssey) it may even come as the light on the road to Damascus, a blinding revelation of unknown choral sonorities. An extraordinary sound-world is opening up, with long, finely-ruled streams of light, a spectrum of colours wide as the distance from heaven to earth, and all mingling eventually within the cavern of a great bell. The challenge to singers (even when assisted by the reverberance of Ely Cathedral's Lady Chapel) is formidable indeed, and these young voices (with lungs and ears involved also) do marvellously well. And so they do throughout. The quality of choral tone here is remarkable: no thready sopranos, none of those bone-dry basses, but a sound that, though strictly disciplined in the matter of vibrato, is still fresh and natural. They achieve wonders of crescendo, as in William Harris's Bring us, O Lord God, and their opening chords (in Tallis's O nata lux for instance) are as if cut by the sharpest slicer ever made. Even so, this smooth, flawless beauty of sound is, in some contexts, like the modern beauty of the face of a heroine in some televised piece of period-drama. Josquin Desprez's Nunc dimittis is an example:

the singing is extremely beautiful, but conceptually (and not just in the women's voices) seems anachronistic. It's as though they have worked on their programme with the precept 'All choral music aspires to the condition of Ligeti'. A wondrous record, all the same.

Dresden Kreuzchor

Musica Divina
Bach Der Geist hilft unsrer Schwachheit, BWV226
Brahms Motets, Op 29 – Schaffe in mir, Gott, ein reines Herz Bruckner Os justi Draeseke Psalm 93, Op 56 Duda Friede über Israel, Op 25
Hessenberg O Herr, mache mich zum Werkzeug deines Friedens, Op37 No 1 Homilius Domine, ad adiuvandum me. Herr, wenn Trübsal da ist
Mendelssohn Jauchzet dem Herrn alle Welt
Reger Nachtlied, Op 138 No 3 Schein Psalm 116
Schütz Die Himmel erzählen die Ehre Gottes, SWV386. Das ist je gewisslich wahr, SWV388
Dresden Kreuzchor / Roderich Kreile
DG 453 484-2GH (76 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included.
Recorded 1997 ◉

The choir is in quite splendid form here: fine in blend, balance and tone, scrupulously precise, alert and responsive to the direction of its still relatively new conductor, Roderich Kreile, appointed 28th Kantor in 1997. The very opening phrases tell us what we want to know in embarking on a recital of this kind: it's a choir that has the life of the music within it. The opening of Schütz's Das ist je gewisslich wahr ('This is a faithful saying ... that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners') is chorale-like in form, but has an underlying rhythmic vitality which a duller choir could easily miss but which here carries the rich promise of a wonderful piece of work about to unfold. And so it does, and still more so the Creation motet (Die Himmel erzählen) which follows.

And then comes the work which alone would give sufficient reason for drawing special attention to the recital. Johann Schein's 'Das ist mir lieb', one of a collection dating from 1616 when a certain Burchhard Grossmann thought to celebrate his return to health by commissioning 16 composers to set Psalm 116 to music (all can be heard on a three-disc set on CPO). Schein's contribution is vivid as a picture-book, with tears that flow and feet that slide to illustrate the text, sometimes also as effective in natural speech-rhythms as a good dramatic monologue. It is a magnificently resourceful piece of writing, and ends with a funfair of Hallelujas.

But everything here is worth hearing. Some of the motets are of recent composition, one of them, Kurt Hessenberg's prayer to 'make me an agent of your peace' a quietly intense plea for reconciliation, doubly moving in the context of this recital and coming from this place. Bach is, of course, the master at the centre of all – practically every later composer pays some implicit tribute. Der Geist hilft unsrer Schwachheit is the second of the Six Motets, inexhaustible in its development of ideas, harmonic and contrapuntal. It also seems to assume similar tirelessness in its singers; and as far as this choir is concerned, the confidence is well placed, for their vitality fully meets the challenge. It is an excellent record, and (to go a little further) an inspiring one.

Ely Cathedral

Magnificat and Nunc dimittis, Vol 14
Bairstow Evening Service in G Blow Evening Service in G Bullock Evening Service in D Child Evening Service in E minor Cruft Collegium Regale
Greene Evening Service in C Orr Short Service
Rose Evening Service in C minor Wills Evening Service on Plainsong tones C Wood Evening Service in G
Ely Cathedral Choir / Paul Trepte with David Price org
Priory PRCD592 (71 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1996 ◉

All of the items here are worthy of the series, and each has its distinctive flavour. Ernest Bullock's Magnificat, which opens the recital, is a good example of Anglican unpredictability. Gentle and lyrical in mood and manner, it develops with what seems to be an almost rhapsodic freedom, the organ part moving with a fluent independence, and as intimate as a piano accompaniment. Bernard Rose, in his Service for trebles, approaches the canticle in similar mood but with entirely different results, making much of the resonance of boys' voices in thirds, and giving full rein to his invention in his writing for the organ. Robin Orr is another who puts much of his more creatively adventurous self into the organ part, and his settings are not made for comfort: the first Gloria for instance strikes an awed note, with its rather severe minor tonality. Adrian Cruft, most modern of these composers, in both date and style, writes boldly, with skill in the deployment of the voices in his men-only settings, which, the notes tell us, were originally for accompaniment by wind instruments as an alternative to accompaniment by the organ. From the 17th century there are masterly settings by John Blow and William Child; from the eighteenth, Maurice Greene; nothing from the nineteenth (unless it be said that Bullock, Wills, Wood and Bairstow were all children of the nineteenth). With fine work by the organist, David Price, and with the choir showing itself a confident, spirited master of its business, the performances are to be relished.

King's College, Cambridge

Best Loved Hymns
Bain Brother James's Air[a] (arr Johns)
Bourgeois Praise to the Lord, the Almighty[b]

Gibbons Drop, drop slow tears Goss Praise my soul, the King of Heaven[b] Handel Thine be the glory, risen, conquering Son[b] (arr Cleobury) W Harris O what their joy and their glory must be[b]
Howells All my hope on God is founded[bc]
Ireland My song is love unknown[b] Luther A mighty fortress is our God[bc] (arr Rutter) Miller When I survey the wondrous cross[b] Parry Dear Lord and Father of Mankind[b] Rutter Be thou my vision[a]
Scholefield The day thou gavest, Lord, is ended[b]
Taylor Glorious things of Thee are spoken[b]
Traditional All people that on earth do dwell[bc] (arr Vaughan Williams). Morning has broken[a] (arr Rutter). Let all mortal flesh[b] (arr Jackson)
Vaughan Williams Come down, O Love Divine[b]
[a]Sioned Williams hp [b]Benjamin Bayl, Thomas Williamson orgs King's College Choir, Cambridge; [c]The Wallace Collection / Stephen Cleobury
EMI Classics 557026-2 (69 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 2000 ●

Here is the high art of hymnody. No tentative playover on the stopped diapason while knee-joints crack and fingers fumble for collection money. No intrusive notes from the congregation with members who pride themselves on 'singing seconds' (presumably, as Harvey Grace remarked, because the interval almost exclusively used is that of a third). These are musical performances, as surely as if they were the canticles and anthems featured here, and in some instances the form is indeed that of the hymn-anthem. The hymns themselves, as the title proclaims, are 'best loved', but are presented with elaborations for brass, organ, harp and descanting trebles. Dressed up in Sunday best, they are thrilling in majesty, exquisite in contemplative piety, but very largely cordoned off amid notices that say 'Do not join in'.

The selection probably reflects modern, conservative good taste quite faithfully. At the popular end, Brother James's Air and Morning has broken are admitted; at the mystical other, Let all mortal flesh keep silence preserves the ancient tune but swathed in subtly abrasive harmonies. Of things grandly Victorian, The day Thou gavest is in, but Lead, kindly light and Abide with me are out. Some would have found a place among any 'top 10' chosen 50 years ago – Dear Lord and Father of Mankind, When I survey the wondrous Cross and Praise, my soul, the King of Heaven for example. Some such as All my hope on God is founded and Be thou my vision are relatively new to the lists. Two – A mighty fortress and the Old Hundredth – seem timeless.

The famous choir sing well (though their uncovered 'ee' sounds nag somewhat, as does an oddly unyielding element somewhere in the men's voices). The accompaniments are skilfully played, colourfully arranged and spaciously recorded. Excellent annotations are provided by Alan Luff, who comes up with a fund of information such as the identity of Brother James (a Christian Scientist, James Leith Macbeth Bain) and the origin of the tune Abbot's Leigh, which was composed in 1941 when BBC listeners were complaining that Glorious Things of Thee are Spoken was still being sung to the old German national anthem.

A Festival of Nine Lessons and Carols
Adès The Fayrfax Carol Bach In dulci jubilo Darke In the bleak mid-winter Goldschmidt A tender Shoot
Ord Adam lay ybounden Rutter Dormi, Jesu
Tavener The Lamb Traditional Once in Royal David's city. Up! good Christen folk. The Truth from Above. Sussex Carol. In dulci jubilo. God rest you merry, gentlemen. Gabriel's Message. Joys Seven. Riu, riu, chiu. While Shepherd's watched. I saw three ships. O come, all ye faithful. Hark! the herald angels sing
Weir Illuminare, Jerusalem
King's College Choir, Cambridge / Stephen Cleobury
EMI ② 573693-2 Ⓜ
(83 minutes: DDD) Recorded 1999 ●●

Surprising as it may seem, this is the first complete commercial recording of this celebrated event. Happily, little has changed down the years to rob the service of its sense of serenity and quiet joy. On the present recording, the readings are all skilfully done, and the carols, in Stephen Cleobury's felicitous phrase, are 'the handmaid' of Milner-White's liturgy. Since 1918, the repertory has evolved, quietly, almost imperceptibly. Indeed, one of the pleasures of this recording is its chronicling of the care and imagination with which successive organists and choir-masters have selected and arranged the music down the years. The choir's performance style, too, has changed at a pleasingly slow rate, though rather a lot has changed since the (abridged) service was last recorded. The present choir's music-making is lighter toned, the diction cleaner, the pacing altogether more urgent. This is a lustier, merrier style of carol singing. Their fresher, less consciously beautiful style both suits and reflects the performing preferences of our age; yet out there, amid the secularised mass markets toward which releases like this are unerringly aimed, there is a palpable hankering after mystery. Does this explain the recording itself? Unlike its analogue predecessors, this spectacularly engineered digital affair puts, not the choir, but the famous King's acoustic centre-stage. The choir as always is self-evidently 'there', the trebles very much so; and although the congregational version of God rest you merry, gentlemen is something of a muddle, the hymns generally sound well: the descants in great barnstorming perorations of O come, all ye faithful and Hark! the herald angels sing thrillingly caught. Above all is the thrill of having this great event complete on record for the first time. The philosopher George Santayana has said: 'Fixity of tradition, of custom, of language is perhaps a prerequisite to complete harmony in life and mind.' That may not be a fashionable view in fin de siècle Britain, but it is why, each Christmas, this Festival of Nine Lessons and Carols sends a beam out into the world of special luminescence and beauty.

Laudibus

All in the April evening
Bennet All creatures now Byrd Ave verum corpus Campion Never weather-beaten saile more willing bent to shore (arr Parry) Elgar As torrents in summer. My love dwelt in a northern land, Op 18 No 3. Grant Crimond (arr Ross) Morley Fyer, fyer Roberton All in the April evening Stanford The bluebird, Op 119 No 3 Sullivan The long day closes Traditional O can ye sew cushions? (arr Bantock). Ca' the Yowes. The turtle Dove (both arr Vaughan Williams). All through the night. The banks o' Doon. Dream Angus. Drink to me only with thine eyes. An Eriskay love lilt. Wee Cooper o'Fife (all arr Roberton) Vaughan Williams Three Shakespeare Songs Warlock Corpus Christi
Laudibus / Michael Brewer
Hyperion CDA67076 (69 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1998 ●

How Sir Hugh Roberton would have loved these fresh young voices. 'Soo gracious, soo musical', he used to murmur when the audience leant their uncertain voices to a rehearsal of Crimond. The new choir under Michael Brewer may not be quite so expert in the choral portamento as the Glasgow Orpheus used to be, but they sing in that tradition, the first requirement of which is beautiful sound, in tone and blend. Sir Hugh's arrangements of Scottish folk-songs find a natural home here, the melodies sweet and strong, the hummed accompaniments gentle and affectionate. Those by Vaughan Williams have a more distinctive flavour, and this, too, is well brought out, with feeling for the characteristic rise-and-fall, the sadness lurking close to the heart. The programme takes a natural half-time break after some more of Sir Hugh, and wakes us from an interval-nap with Morley's Fyer, fyer and John Bennet's All creatures now: they make us feel that, compared with the first Elizabethans, we're never really more than half-awake anyway. The effect of having a choir (even if a relatively small one), rather than single voices, is not what we are used to in these things, but Laudibus have the rhythm of them in their bones and the sense of the words in their heads. Then there are some of the masterpieces among our later part-songs: Elgar's My love dwelt in a northern land (lovely to hear that magical third verse so well done), Stanford's The bluebird (with the smoothest of textures and a charming soloist), Warlock's Corpus Christi and Vaughan Williams's Tempest settings. And then, in spirit if not in truth, back to Sir Hugh for The long day closes, Sullivan's patent eye-moistener. A delightful disc.

New College Choir, Oxford

Agnus Dei I and II
Allegri Adagio in G minor[a]. Miserere mei
Bach Cantata No 147, Herz und Mund und Tat und Leben – Jesu, bleibet meine Freude[a]. St John Passion, BWV245 – Ruht wohl Barber Agnus Dei, Op 11 Bizet Agnus Dei Brahms Geistliches Lied, Op 30[a] Bruckner Christus factus est[a] Byrd Ave verum corpus Elgar (arr Cameron) Variations on an original theme, 'Enigma', Op 36 – Lux aeterna Fauré Ave verum, Op 65 No 1 (both arr Higginbottom)[a]. Cantique de Jean Racine, Op 11 (arr Rutter)[a]. Requiem, Op 48[a] – In paradisum; Pie Jesu; Libera me Górecki Totus tuus, Op 60 Lotti Crucifixus a 8 Martin Mass for Double Choir – Agnus Dei Mendelssohn Hear my prayer Monteverdi Selva morale e spirituale – Beatus vir[a] Mozart Ave verum corpus, K618[a] Palestrina Missa Papae Marcelli – Kyrie Purcell Hear my prayer, O Lord, Z15 Rachmaninov Vespers, Op 37 – No 6, Ave Maria Schubert Psalm 23, D706 (all arr Cameron)[a] Tavener The Lamb
New College Choir, Oxford; [a]Capricorn / Edward Higginbottom
Erato 3984-29588-2 (139 minutes: DDD) Ⓜ
Recorded 1996-97 ●

This mid-price combines the two popular choral compilations 'Agnus Dei I' and 'Agnus Dei II'. From the original first disc the Allegri, Bach, Fauré and Mendelssohn are clear favourites. When we realise that Barber's Agnus Dei is an arrangement of his famous Adagio and that Elgar's Lux aeterna is 'Nimrod' with a halo, then those must be added too.

The performances are delightful, with the single exception of 'Jesu, bleibet meine Freude' ('Jesu, joy of man's desiring') where each of the choir's minims has its swell and diminuendo so that they bounce along before us like so many faintly ridiculous balloons. Thomas Herford is the excellent soloist in Hear my prayer and a capital exponent of the high C in the Allegri. The quality of choral sound is very fine: also the warmth of the acoustic, not usually associated with New College Chapel, is ideal.

From the original second disc, the performance of the famous Adagio ascribed to Albinoni, courtesy of Remo Giazotti, and set here by John Cameron to a text, in Latin, from the New Testament, is deserving of as much success as Barber's Adagio. The other items from that issue are taken at rather faster speeds than usual. Lotti's Crucifixus, Schubert's 23rd Psalm and Martin's Agnus Dei from the Mass for Double Choir are examples, and all of them benefit, especially in this context. The choir itself has long been one of the best in its normal repertoire of church music, and these excursions have emboldened it in coloration and expressive scope. Purcell's Hear my prayer, for instance, is sung with exceptional intensity. Some of the arrangements may be questionable. Albinoni is fair game, but Brahms's lovely Op 30 forfeits the spiritual quietness of church when deprived of its organ accompaniment, and Schubert is not really in need of strings and harp. For all that, though, it remains a delightful compilation, and not to be dismissed by 'serious' musicians on account of its wider appeal.

Blow Let my prayer come up. The Lord God is a sun and a shield Boyce The King shall rejoice. Come,

Holy Ghost. Praise the Lord, O Jerusalem Clarke Praise the Lord, O Jerusalem Croft The Lord is a sun and shield Handel Zadok the Priest; The King shall rejoice Purcell I was glad when they said unto me. My heart is inditing
New College Choir, Oxford; Academy of Ancient Music / Edward Higginbottom
Decca 470 226-2DH (71 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts included. Recorded c2001 ●●

Playing history backwards, the programme begins in 1761 with George III and ends with James II in 1685. Perhaps with almost any other genre the idea would work well, giving our belief in progress yet another knock, but coronation music was one department in which the Hanoverian age shone, and, on this showing, if Handel remains supreme, Boyce was not far behind. The earlier composers celebrate their monarchs with some very good music, but the drums and trumpets, the splendour and colour, the sense of energy and festivity, come later. And Boyce (whose large-scale anthem opens the programme) is so good that for a moment we wonder whether even Handel is going to live up to the standard set by his successor.

The King shall rejoice is the work in which the two composers are presented for inevitable comparison. Of course Handel's setting is a masterpiece, strong in ideas, massive in construction and daring. But Boyce, marvellously, preserves the directness, adding what it doesn't seem right to call a sophistication and yet is a subtilising touch, with lovely contrasts in (for example) the heavenly second movement, 'His honour is great', and its stately growth towards the final fugue. This, more than any other single item, is the cause for an imperative recommendation. The current catalogue has no other recording to offer, and the score has been specially edited from its manuscript in the Bodleian Library in Oxford.

Excellent performances by choir and instrumentalists receive every support from the recording team.

St Paul's Cathedral

Advent at St Paul's
Anonymous Laudes Regiae. Angelus ad Virginem (arr Willcocks)[a]. O come, O come, Emmanuel (arr Carter)[a]. Rejoice in the Lord alway Britten A Hymn of St Columba[a] Bruckner Virga Jesse floruit Byrd Laetentur coeli A Carter Toccata on Veni Emmanuel[b] Gibbons This is the record of John[a] Handl Ecce concipies[c] R Lloyd Drop down, ye heavens[a] Palestrina Matins Responsory. Vesper Responsory Parsons Ave Maria Peerson Blow out the trumpet[a] Rutter Hymn to the Creator of Light Weelkes Hosanna to the Son of David Wilby Echo Carol[a]
St Paul's Cathedral Choir / John Scott [b]org with [a]Andrew Lucas org
Hyperion CDA66994 (71 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Text and translations included. Recorded 1997

As in the seasonal calendar a single window opens first, so in this Advent recital a solo voice sings in the distance; and by the end, all windows alight, the great Cathedral is filled with the organ's fortissimo from deepest pedal sub-bass to brightest trumpet and topmost piccolo. The programme begins with some plainsong dating back to the first millennium of the era. The end, more plainsong but not so plain now, has O come, O come, Emmanuel audaciously arranged, then to become the subject of an organ toccata with sufficient energy to propel the hymn, the Cathedral and all into the new age. In between comes a satisfying alternation of ancient and modern. Particularly splendid is Martin Peerson's Blow out the trumpet, an anthem strong in rhythm and colour. Robert Parsons's five-part Ave Maria is also a joy. The modern works include an interesting, deeply felt piece by John Rutter, Hymn to the Creator of Light: its first section, less ingratiating (but not therefore less good) than his more characteristic style, is followed by an angular refulgence of praise in preparation for a chorale-melody sung quietly in octaves amid an affectionate interweave of gentle polyphony – the effect is lovely.

The choir is on top form. Britten's Hymn of St Columba is especially well performed, probably making the strongest impression of all. Andrew Lucas is the remorselessly exercised organist in this, and John Scott takes over for the Toccata: both are excellent.

Epiphany at St Paul's
Bingham Epiphany Byrd Praise our Lord all ye Gentiles. Senex puerem portabat Cornelius Weihnachtslieder, Op 8 – Die Könige Crotch Lo! Star-led chiefs Dearnley The growing limbs of God the Son Eccard When to the temple Mary went Handl Omnes de Saba venient Holst Nunc dimittis, H127 Howells Here is the little door Marenzio Tribus miraculis Mendelssohn Christus, Op 97 – When Jesus our Lord Ouseley From the rising of the sun Surplice Brightest and best of the sons of the morning Traditional Coventry Carol. O worship the Lord SS Wesley Ascribe unto the Lord
St Paul's Cathedral Choir / John Scott with Huw Williams org
Hyperion CDA67269 (72 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Notes and texts included ●

'As with gladness men of old did the guiding star behold': the best-known of Epiphany hymns is not in this recital, which nevertheless is luminous with a sense of goodness and well-being, brightest and best of choral records for some time. It ranges widely over the centuries, from the 16th onwards. Eighteenth-century elegance is embodied in Crotch's Lo, star-led chiefs. The 19th century does well with tuneful Ouseley and a masterpiece, Ascribe unto the Lord, from SS Wesley. The most recent work is Judith Bingham's Epiphany, written for Winchester Cathedral in 1995. Impressively eventful, it develops from a quiet, rather mystical opening to a dramatic and powerful fortissimo conclusion.

But probably the most sublime moment in the recital comes from the other end of the 20th century with the opening of Holst's eight-part Nunc dimittis of 1915. This, through to the almost carol-like rejoicing of the Gloria and its exultant 'Amen', casts a glow over the whole programme. And that programme is one which could hardly have been better performed, anywhere or at any time. The Cathedral choir are on top form, opulent in tone, tasteful in style; Huw Williams accompanies with skill and imagination. In short, a distinguished record: inspiring and not in the least 'inspirational'.

Hear my Prayer
Allegri Miserere mei[abdij] B Rose Feast Song for St Cecilia[acf] Brahms Ein deutsches Requiem – Ich hab' nun Traurigkeit[aj] Britten Festival Te Deum, Op 32[aj] Harvey Come, Holy Ghost[aeg] Mendelssohn Hear my prayer[aj] Stanford Evening Canticles in G[aij] Tavener I will lift up mine eyes Wise The ways of Zion do mourn[ahj]
[a]Jeremy Budd, [b]Nicholas Thompson trebs [c]Simon Hill, [d]Wilfred Swansborough countertens [e]Andrew Burden, [f]Alan Green tens [g]Nigel Beaven, [h]Charles Gibbs, [i]Timothy Jones basses St Paul's Cathedral Choir / John Scott with [j]Andrew Lucas org
Hyperion CDA66439 (76 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included. Recorded 1990

The special distinction of this disc is the work of the treble soloist, Jeremy Budd. He sings in a programme which is very much the choirboy's equivalent of an operatic soprano's 'Casta diva' and more of that sort. As it is, he crowns the Allegri Miserere with its five top Cs, spot-on, each of them (rather like Melba singing 'Amor' at the end of Act 1 in La bohème five times over). He commands the breath, the long line and the purity of tone necessary for the solo in Brahms's Requiem and copes with the difficult modern idiom of Jonathan Harvey's Come, Holy Ghost with an apparent ease that to an older generation may well seem uncanny. Other modern works are included. John Tavener's I will lift up mine eyes, written for St Paul's in 1990, has its characteristic compound of richness and austerity; and in this, the words penetrate the mist of echoes more successfully than do those of the Feast Song for St Cecilia, written by Gregory Rose and set to some very beautiful music by his father Bernard. It is good, as ever, to hear Stanford's Evening Service in G, with its almost Fauré-like accompaniment finely played by the excellent Andrew Lucas; and for a morning canticle there is Britten's Te Deum with its effective build-up to 'Lord God of Sabaoth' and its faint pre-echo of The Turn of the Screw at 'O Lord, save Thy people'. There is also a melancholy anthem by Michael Wise, whose fate it was to be knocked on the head and killed by the watchman to whom he was cheeky one night in 1687.

Psalms for St Paul's Volume 9
Bairstow Psalm 107 Hurford Psalm 108 Jacobs Psalm 112 Ouseley Psalm 105 Stewart Psalm 106 Turle Psalm 109. Psalm 110 Vann Psalm 113 Woodward Psalm 111
Huw Williams org St Paul's Cathedral Choir / John Scott
Hyperion CDP11009 (63 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts included. ●●

Psalms for St Paul's Volume 12
Bertalot Psalm 141 Camidge Psalm 140 Day Psalm 139 Hanforth Psalm 145 Hervey Psalm 143 Monk Psalm 144. Psalm 146 Rose Psalm 121 Scott Easter Anthem Stanford Psalms 147, 149 and 150 Stewart Psalm 142 Talbot Psalm 150 Willcocks Psalm 148
Huw Williams org St Paul's Cathedral Choir / John Scott
Hyperion CDP11012 (64 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts included. Recorded 2000 ●●

The phrase 'fearfully and wonderfully made', coined some 3000 years ago by the Psalmist for his 139th Psalm, perfectly describes these final releases in Hyperion's series, Psalms from St Paul's. Over the course of 12 discs all 150 Psalms have been presented in the traditional Anglican grouping covering Matins and Evensong for every day of a 30-day month. After weeks in which we have been subjected to wounds which 'stink and are corrupt through my foolishness' (8th morning), heathen who 'grin like a dog and run about through the city' (11th evening), 'all manner of flies and lice' (21st morning), not to mention the shedding of innocent blood, 'even the blood of their sons and of their daughters' (21st evening), the unrestrained joy of the 30th evening, especially Psalm 150, comes as a welcome relief. And to mark the end of the monthly cycle Psalm 150 is sung to an appropriately celebratory chant (unique in having its own built-in descant) by Stanford which also provides a fitting conclusion to an exceptionally inspiring and captivating – not to say enchanting – series.

The intense pleasure and satisfaction to be gleaned from these discs is hard to explain to the uninitiated, who will seek in vain for any intrinsically musical interest. But while the 20 simple chords of a typical Anglican chant might appear a preposterously miniscule structure to those weaned on Bach cantatas or Mahler symphonies, for the true aficionado the framework of a chant offers infinite scope for expressive creativity. James Turle (1802-82) conjured up real pathos in his lovely chant for Psalm 109 while the Revd Sir Frederick Arthur Ouseley (1825-89) achieved an air of total contentment for Psalm 105. In more recent times Barry Rose shamelessly milks the St Paul's acoustic with his delicious chant to Psalm 121 (included as an appendix to the final disc), John Bertalot gives us a tantalisingly bittersweet chant for Psalm 141 while Sir David Willcocks depicts true majesty for Psalm 148.

Huw Williams' accompaniments are models of sensitivity and discretion, although not without occasional touches of humour ('ye dragons and all deeps' seems to shake the very oundations in Psalm 148 while his 'right hand' ertainly provides generous support for Psalm 39), and John Scott's relaxed direction, ovingly caressing these timeless words and hrases, ensures that the leisurely pace, which night from less inspired choral directors induce ts hearers to a state of suspended animation, ere creates an aura of mystery and sanctity; an ura fully enhanced by this spacious and warmly tmospheric recording. Here, surely, is the very pogee of English Psalm singing.

ortsmouth Cathedral

agnificat and Nunc Dimittis, Volume 4
ndrews Evening Service in G Bairstow Evening
ervice in D Brewer Evening Service in E flat
Darke Evening Service in F Howells Evening Service
n E. Evening Service in B minor Lassus Magnificat uarto toni R Shephard Salisbury Service tanford Evening Service in C, Op 115 Victoria unc dimittis Weelkes Evening Service for Trebles – agnificat; Nunc dimittis ortsmouth Cathedral Choir / Adrian Lucas with avid Thorne org
riory PRCD527 (79 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
exts included. Recorded 1995 ●

ne good thing after another; it almost urprises that a succession of Mags and Nuncs an be so varied, satisfying and enjoyable. The rogrammes in this excellent series allow for a air variety of styles and centuries, but in this nstance a particularly generous share of the redit must go to the performances. Forthright nd invigorating, they give rise to a distinct uspicion that the whole business may be a leasure: that the choristers have some rhythm n their bones and at certain points might even ave a smile on their faces. It is there right from he start, with Brewer in E flat (and how ndeservedly stodgy that can sound in erformance) bright with energy and ncouraging a conviction that there genuinely s something in which to rejoice. This extends o Lassus, Victoria and Weelkes, where, instead f the more usual formal reading of notes, there s a common effort of understanding and magination, lifting the notes off the page and ometimes, with a little judicious semi-staccato, etting them a-dance. Nor is there any lack of ensitive shading or of repose in the right places a fine feeling for mood in the lovely and little-nown B minor setting of Howells, for xample. A splendid recital, with a fine choice f repertoire, and consistently admirable laying by the organist.

obert Shaw Festival Singers

Magnum Mysterium
órecki Totus tuus, Op 60[a] Lauridsen O Magnum ysterium[b] Poulenc Quatre motets de Noël – O
agnum mysterium[a] Rachmaninov Vespers, Op 37
Praise the name of the Lord[a] Schubert Der Entfernten, D331[b] Tallis If ye love me[ac]. A new commandment[ac] Traditional Amazing Grace[a].
Sometimes I feel like a moanin' dove[a]. Wondrous Love[a] Victoria O vos omnes, qui transitis per viam[ac]. O magnum mysterium[ac]
[a]Robert Shaw Festival Singers, [b]Robert Shaw Chamber Singers / Robert Shaw
Telarc CD80531 (57 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1992, 1994, 1997 and live in [c]1989 ●●

This compilation of unaccompanied choral music is a tribute to Robert Shaw, one of the world's great choir trainers. He quickly established that reputation back in the 1940s, when Toscanini chose the Robert Shaw Chorale for major choral recordings with the NBC Symphony Orchestra. Later, over two decades as music director of the Atlanta Symphony, Shaw was diverted more towards the orchestral repertory, his choral recordings then usually involving the orchestra too.

After retiring from that post in 1988 he once again found time for unaccompanied choral music, establishing in 1989 a summer festival of choral concerts and workshops at Quercy in south-central France, using a choir of students from American universities chosen by competitive audition. Between then and 1994 he made a series of recordings for Telarc with that festival choir. They provide most of the items here, atmospherically recorded in St Pierre at Gramat.

The four opening items on the disc, the Tallis and Victoria motets, were recorded in that first year, 1989, with the intention of including them with similar repertory on a full disc. In the event, they now appear on disc for the first time, immaculate performances from a relatively large choir, which demonstrate the consistent refinement of matching and balance characteristic of Shaw's choral work.

The Poulenc and Rachmaninov items also date from 1989, the movement from the Rachmaninov Vespers demonstrating the fervour that Shaw could draw from his singers. The two American hymns and one spiritual item are from the 1992 Festival, with Shaw's own arrangements exploiting the sort of elaborate choral effects he relished in other music. The last and longest item on the disc, the Górecki motet, recorded in 1994, brings a performance which concentratedly sustains a very slow speed and extremes of pianissimo that are both rapt and dreamlike.

At under an hour the compilation might have been more generous, but that is a tiny criticism to set against the outstanding quality of singing and recording.

Wells Cathedral Choir

'Hills of the North, rejoice'
Anonymous On Jordan's bank the Baptist's cry.
When I survey the wondrous cross. Come, Holy Ghost, our souls inspire A Brown Come, ye faithful, raise the strain Crüger Ah! holy Jesu W Davies O

little town of Bethlehem Dykes Holy! Holy! Holy! Evans For the beauty of the earth Ferguson From the Eastern mountains Gauntlett Ye choirs of new Jerusalem Gibbons Drop, drop slow tears G Ives Gracious Spirit, Holy Ghost Maclagan Palms of glory, raiment bright Schulz We plough the fields and scatter Shaw Hills of the North, rejoice Stanford For all the Saints Stainer Lord Jesus think on me Thrupp Brightest and best of the sons of the morning Traditional Of the Father's heart begotten. Forty days and forty nights. I bind unto myself today Vaughan Williams It is a thing most wonderful R Williams Hail the day that sees him rise
Wells Cathedral Choir / Malcolm Archer with Rupert Gough org
Hyperion CDP12103 (76 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts included. Recorded c2002 ●

In this recital from Wells the voices are magnificent; likewise the organ. Records from Wells always have a healthy glow about them. The choir, who are as well-disciplined musically as any in the country, sing as though for the joy of it. The men ('gentlemen' is the approved term) are excellent: distinctive pleasures lie in the easy resonance of their unison verses and the fine balance of well-matching tones in the verses arranged for alto, tenor and bass.

The programme follows the Church year, from Advent to All Saints, with something good for every season. At Christmas, what Alan Luff in his notes describes as 'the fine rolling tune' Divinum mysterium swings us from verse to verse of Of the Father's heart begotten as apparently it has done since the 11th century. At Passiontide, When I survey the wondrous Cross has the altos fluting a delicious obbligato, and Ascension inspires the organist to seek out rare harmonies and inject a fresh rhythmic energy in the last verse of Hail the day that sees him rise. The whole record is a delight, and if one hymn collection is to be chosen, then this should be it.

Worcester Cathedral

Great Cathedral Anthems – XI
Beach Let this mind be in you Dirksen Songs of Isaiah – Arise, shine Friedell Draw us in the Spirit's tether Hancock Earthquake, Wind and Fire Hoiby The Lord is King Macfarlane Open our eyes Neswick Happy are they that fear the Lord Parker Jam sol recedit igneus Rorem Exaltabo te, Domine Sowerby I was glad Judith Hancock org Choir of Saint Thomas Church, Fifth Avenue / Gerre Hancock
Priory PRCD629 (64 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts included. Recorded 1999 ●

Great Cathedral Anthems – XII
Atkins Abide with me. If ye then be risen with Christ. There is none that can resist thy voice Day Turn back O Man. When I survey the wondrous cross Elgar Light out of darkness. O hearken thou Guest For the Fallen Lucas Sacerdotes Domini Tomkins O sing unto the Lord. When David heard that Absolom was slain Willcocks My heart is fixed, O God
Adrian Lucas org Worcester Cathedral Choir / Sir David Willcocks
Priory PRCD750 (61 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 2000 ●

To conclude its series of Great Cathedra Anthems – a series which, at just 12 discs merely scratches the surface of the available repertoire – Priory celebrates the work, not o a major church music composer, but of one o the best-known and most highly respecte choral directors of our time. And, in taking Si David Willcocks back to Worcester, where from 1950 to 1957 he was Master of the Choristers, we are also given an opportunity t celebrate the music of one of Britain's mos musically influential cathedrals. Of course the Worcester choir under Willcocks in the 1950 would have been a very different-sounding body from their 21st-century successor, here singing (presumably after only a handful o rehearsals) under an awe-inspiring 'legend', an perhaps it is unfair to criticise the occasiona raggedness of blend and ensemble while the over-bright boys' tone seems a world apar from the smooth 'coo' which became Willcocks' hallmark at King's College Cambridge. But Willcocks never made recordings with his Worcester Choir and, give the chance to hear such Worcester gems a When I survey by Edgar Day, assistant unde Willcocks, and If ye then be risen by Willcocks predecessor at Worcester, not to mention rarel heard anthems by the greatest Worcesterian o them all, Elgar, the combination of a legendar choral director, a keen and enthusiastic choi and Adrian Lucas's resourceful and vivid orga accompaniments, makes this a fitting conclusio to an eminently rewarding series.

The penultimate disc in the series give British church music aficionados a rare chanc to sample American anthems. Few of those included here will be familiar to English ears and only Harold Friedell's charming Draw us i the Spirit's tether could be mistaken for the genuine English product. But the unfettere drama, vivid musical imagery and shee Technicolor opulence of these anthems make refreshing change from the restrained emotion and tight-lipped charm of their Englis counterparts. Under Gerre Hancock, himsel something of a legend in church music circles the choir of St Thomas's New York prove themselves to be one of the best cathedra choirs on either side of the Atlantic and Judith Hancock's polished and imaginative orga accompaniments add a fine touch of distinction Priory's recording achieves the perfect balanc between atmosphere (which in this location i most generous) and clarity.

VOCAL

Roberto Alagna ten

French Arias

Bazin Maître Pathelin – Je pense à vous quand je m'éveille Berlioz La damnation de Faust – Nature immense Bizet Les pêcheurs de perles – A cette voix; Je crois entendre encore Bruneau L'attaque du Moulin – Le jour tombe Cherubini Les abencérages – Suspendez à ces murs; J'ai vu disparaître l'espoir Gluck Iphigénie en Tauride – Quel langage accablant; Unis dès la plus tendre enfance Gounod Mireille – Mon coeur est plein d'un noir souci; Anges du paradis Grétry Les fausses apparences ou L'amant jaloux – Tandis que tout sommeille Halévy La juive – Rachel, quand du Seigneur Lalo Le roi d'Ys – Puisqu'on ne peut fléchir; Vainement, ma bien-aimée Massenet Le Cid – Ah! tout est bien fini; O souverain, ô juge, ô père Méhul Joseph – Vainement Pharaon dans sa reconnaissance; Champs paternels Meyerbeer L'africaine – Pays merveilleux Saint-Saëns Samson et Dalila[a] – Vois ma misère Thomas Mignon – Elle ne croyait pas

Roberto Alagna ten
[a]London Voices; Orchestra of the Royal Opera House, Covent Garden / Bertrand de Billy
EMI 557012-2 (72 minutes: DDD). Texts and translations included. Recorded 1999-2000 Ⓕ OOO

This is one of the best recitals Alagna has recorded. By juxtaposing familiar with somewhat lesser-known arias, he offers a survey of French operatic style from 1778 (Grétry's L'amant jaloux) to 1893 (Bruneau's L'attaque du moulin). As John Steane points out in his booklet, the French tenor, and what was expected of him, shifted from the haute-contre type of the late 18th century, through heroic antics of the 1830s and 40s, when Nourrit and Duprez launched the fashion for stentorian high notes, to the more modern elegance demanded by Massenet and his successors.

Of the operas that will be curiosities to all but the most travelled music-lovers, Cherubini's Les abencérages and Méhul's Joseph are both worthy of revival. Alagna deals with the climactic cry of 'Je te perds; mon âme flétrie t'adresse d'éternels adieux' from Les abencérages most effectively, the high notes taken softly, as the composer would have expected, while in Joseph he sounds suitably tormented.

Like Joseph, Bazin's Maître Pathelin from 1856 knew a lot of success in its time, mostly because of the aria sung here, 'Je pense à vous quand je m'éveille'. This used to be a favourite concert item with French tenors, and Alagna begins very well, establishing the ardent mood. Grétry's L'amant jaloux is a jolly little piece – there was a complete EMI recording of it in the 70s which had Charles Burles as the hero. In this mandolin-accompanied serenade, he is singing to the wrong woman as it turns out. These lovely songs from Grétry's operas whet the appetite, which is then rather let down when one hears them all the way through.

The final item is also one of the best, Dominique's farewell to the forests from L'attaque du moulin. In this scene, the noble-hearted Flemish soldier has been captured by the Germans and accused of helping their French enemies. As he anticipates being shot at dawn, the young man sings this almost ecstatic song to the sky and the trees. It's a captivating moment, and Alagna gives it for all its worth.

In the better-known numbers, Alagna is predictably suave as Wilhelm Meister in Mignon, a delicate 'Elle ne croyait pas'. The Bizet, Lalo and Gounod all find him on form too. In the other pieces that are associated with more heroic voices, he sometimes uses a rather throaty sounding effect, especially noticeable in the aria from Le Cid, though as Vasco in L'africaine he rises to a really thrilling 'O paradis'. There has never been a satisfactory recording of this opera. On this evidence, perhaps it should be Alagna's next project. S

Sergei Alexashkin bass

Russian Opera Arias, Volume 2

Borodin Prince Igor – I hate a dreary life; No sleep, no rest; How goes it Prince? Mussorgsky Boris Godunov – Once in the town of Kazan Rimsky-Korsakov Sadko – O fearful crags (Song of the Viking Guest). The Tsar's Bride – Sleep has overcome her. Mozart and Salieri – Everyone says there's no justice; No, I can't oppose my fate; You will sleep for a long time, Mozart! Rachmaninov Aleko – By the magical power of the singing; The entire encampment sleeps Tchaikovsky Mazeppa – So this is my reward. Eugene Onegin – Everyone knows love on earth

Sergei Alexashkin bass Ambrosian Opera Chorus; Philharmonia Orchestra / Gennadi Rozhdestvensky
Chandos CHAN9629 (74 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included. Recorded 1997

Over this recital shines the steady light of Osip Petrov, the great artist who with the première of Glinka's Life for the Tsar in 1836 initiated a tradition of bass singing that was to colour the whole of Russian opera. It includes, as this admirably selected programme shows, a grave solemnity of voice, but also a baritonal elegance and a wide range of colour, a manner tragic, ruminative or seductive, together with the ferocious humour we encounter in Mussorgsky's Varlaam (another of Petrov's creations). The characteristics touch on much lying deep in Russia's life, and the line has included Stravinsky's father, Feodor, Mikhail Koryakin, Feodor Chaliapin and many others.

Sergei Alexashkin is a worthy inheritor of it, and this recital arouses hopes for more than just glimpses of some great roles. Alexashkin has the range to give subtle contrast to different roles in the same opera: the gloomy regret of Prince Igor's aria and also the brighter manliness which the Khan Konchak brings to their exchanges, the exhausted sorrowfulness of Rachmaninov's Old Gipsy and the more youthful acquaintance with the identical betrayal now encountered by Aleko. There is the dignity but also the coldness and the sudden glint of paranoia which possesses Salieri as he faces what he conceives to be his artistic duty in murdering Mozart, yet the jollity is only just this side of the maudlin in Mussorgsky's Varlaam and Borodin's Galitsky. Much depends on the subtle modifications of tone, still more on his ability to phrase with due care for meaning, whether in the free-ranging recitative of Salieri or, in Gremin's declaration of his devotion to Tatyana, the soaring melodic response to the warmth of the sun that has lit his life.

Rozhdestvensky and the Philharmonia are superb companions in these ventures into a great repertory; and Chandos backs it all very well with full texts and translations.

Victoria de los Angeles sop

Berlioz Les nuits d'été, Op 7ª – Villanelle; Le spectre de la rose; L'île inconnue Brahms Meine Liebe ist grün, Op 63 No 5. Nachtigall, Op 97 No 1 Delibes Bonjour, Suzon! Halffter Dos Canciones Handel Judas Maccabaeus, HWV63 – So shall the lute and harp awake Nin Cantos populares españolas – Montañesa; Paño murciano Obradors Chiquitita la novia Ravel Vocalise en forme de habanera A Scarlatti Le Violette Schubert Mein!, D795 No 11 Schumann Widmung, Op 25 No 1 Stravinsky Pastorale Valverde Clavelitos Vives Canciones epigramáticas – La presumida; El ritrato de Isabela H

Victoria de los Angeles sop Gerald Moore pf ªBBC Symphony Orchestra / Rudolf Schwarz

BBC Legends/IMG Artists mono BBCL4101-2 Ⓕ

(62 minutes: ADD). Recorded live in 1957 ●●

When Victoria de los Angeles appeared at the Edinburgh Festival in 1957, she was in her prime, the voice as supple and sensitive as it was beautiful. Everything she tackled seemed to be touched by the magic of her attractive presence and glorious singing.

Good as her account of Schumann's Widmung may be, it is when she gets to Brahms, perhaps her favourite composer in this genre, that she is wholly at home, the wistful sense of pain in Nachtigall caught to perfection. In the wordless pieces by Stravinsky and Ravel she floats that warm yet ethereal tone of hers with consummate ease, and the long-breathed phrasing and excellent French in Duparc's mélodie are enhanced by this artist's innate skill in word-painting. For all that, audiences were always impatient for her to get to the Spanish part of her programme, for in this field she was unsurpassed as a singer and interpreter. Many of these songs were also recorded by her in the studio, but the live occasion gives these performances an extra frisson. The encores are even better. An account of Clavelitos is a superior reading even to those famous ones available elsewhere. That is complemented by a delightfully insouciant account of the Delibes song that she didn't attempt on any other recorded occasion.

Gerald Moore, as was his wont, manages to change idioms with his familiar virtuosity. As a whole, this is an invaluable addition to the singer's extensive discography.

Songs of Spain – traditional and early; medieval; Renaissance; Baroque. Medieval and Renaissance songs of Andalusia. Renaissance songs. 19th- and 20th-century arrangements and art songs by Barrera/Calleja, Falla, Granados, Guridi, Halffter, Lorca, Mompou, Montsalvatge, Nin, Rodrigo, Toldrá, Vals and Valverde. Opera arias – Goyescas, La Tempranica (Giménez) and La vida breve H

Victoria de los Angeles sop with various artists

EMI mono/stereo ④ 566937-2 Ⓜ

(301 minutes: ADD/DDD). Texts and translations included. Recorded 1950-92 ●

Nothing could be more appropriate in celebrating Victoria de los Angeles's 75th birthday than this extensive conspectus of her recordings of Spanish song over 40 years. We begin with her 1950 set of traditional songs arranged by Graciano Tarragó, evocative of an era and a style preserved amazingly in various collections. The singer here is not as outgoing or communicative as she was soon to become, perhaps a shade intimidated by this early encounter with the microphone. There is a certain sameness to her approach, but the voice of the young artist, so refulgent, is a delight in itself. The Renaissance and Baroque pieces that fill the rest of the first disc are another matter. Not only is the music more accessible but de los Angeles performs it with a winning charm. The second disc is devoted entirely to medieval and Renaissance songs recorded in 1960 and 1967 with the Ars Musicae de Barcelona.

The last two discs bring us to 19th- and 20th-century arrangements of traditional material and original compositions. Among the former, Lorca's set, Canciones populares españolas, are absolutely irresistible both in themselves and as performed by the unflagging Victoria in 1970. These imaginative re-creations, full of sentiment, verve and fun, release every aspect of the singer's genius – eager, forward tone, vital enunciation of the texts and unfettered joy in the mere act of communication.

The remainder of the songs here, all of which featured frequently in her recitals, maintain this high standard. We are also given what was perhaps de los Angeles's signature-tune, Valverde's 'Clavelitos' – not the early 78rpm version, though, but the 1960 stereo remake – a sure-fire encore at most of her recitals.

The final CD includes her unrivalled recordings of Granados's Tonadillas, and his Tres majas dolorosa, suffering love epitomised in music and interpretation, as it is in Salud's arias from Falla's La vida breve. Then, dating from a live recital at Hunter College, NY, in 1971 with her close contemporary Alicia de Larrocha at the piano, we have Granados's Canciones amatorias, another favourite item of the singer's, and her dark-grained, intense account of Falla's Seven Spanish Popular Songs, with exuberant, subtly shaped support from Larrocha. Catching the bird on the wing, as it were, adds a further dimension of immediacy to our appreciation of this much loved artist. Andrew Walter's transfers are impeccable.

Songs and Arias by Brahms H
Falla, Fusté, Granados, Guridi, Handel, Nin, Respighi, Schumann, Toldrá, Turina, Valverde and Vives
Victoria de los Angeles sop with various artists
Testament mono SBT1087 (75 minutes: ADD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1942-53

The two Respighi songs are magical performances – Stornellatrice, with the golden voice at its richest and E se un giorno tornasse, a study in subtle shading of tone, a dialogue between a mother and her dying, jilted daughter. For those two brief items alone, superbly transferred, this collection is an essential for all admirers of this singer, but there is so much more. Having Handel's 'O had I Jubal's lyre' in German rather than English may be odd, but the performance sparkles and among the Lieder it is good to have not just 'Der Nussbaum' – the Schumann song which was always special to her – but two previously unpublished, 'Widmung' from the Myrthe songs and 'Ich grolle nicht' from Dichterliebe.

Through the whole collection the superb transfers capture the full-throated glory of los Angeles's voice at the beginning of her career. The 1942 recordings of two Hungarian folk-songs, previously unpublished, may be rough and limited – made when the singer was only 18 – but they amply demonstrate that already the voice was fully developed in its beauty. No fewer than 18 of the 27 items are of Spanish songs, and though in one or two instances los Angeles was destined to make even more idiomatic readings later with a Spanish accompanist, these ones with Gerald Moore as her partner have a freshness and brilliance that has rarely been matched in this repertory. In particular it is good to have her first recording of the encore number which she made her own, Clavelitos.

Anthologies

Awards 1993

Singers of Imperial Russia, Volumes 1-4 H
GEMMCDS9997/9: recorded 1900-11: Soprano – Medea Mei-Figner; Tenors – Ivan Ershov, Nikolai Figner and Leonid Sobinov; Baritone – Ioakim Tartakov; Basses – Adamo Didur and Vasili Sharonov GEMMCDS9001/03: 1901-11: Sopranos – Natalia Ermolenko-Juzhina and Maria Michailova; Mezzo-soprano – Antonina Panina; Tenors – David Juzhin, Andrei Labinsky and Gavril Morskoi; Baritones – Oskar Kamionsky and Polikarp Orlov; Basses – Dmitri Bukhtoyarov, Vladimir Kastorsky, Vasili Sharonov and Lev Sibiriakov
GEMMCDS9004/06: 1901-24: Sopranos – Irena Bohuss, Anna El-Tour, Janina Korolewicz-Wayda, Maria Kuznetsova, Lydia Lipkowska and Nadezhda Zabela-Vrubel; Contralto – Evgenia Zbrueva; Tenors – Dmitri Smirnov and Eugene Witting; Bass – K E Kaidanov
GEMMCD9007/09: 1901-14: Sopranos – Maria Michailova and Antonia Nezhdanova; Mezzo-soprano – Galina Nikitina; Contralto – Evgenia Zbrueva; Tenors – Alexandr Alexandrovich, Alexandr Bogdanovich, Alexandr Davidov, Andrei Labinsky and Eugene Witting; Baritone – Nikolai Shevelev. Basses – Vladimir Kastorsky and Lev Sibiriakov
Pearl mono 4x ③ GEMMCDS9997/9, 9001/3, 9004/6 and 9007/9 Ⓜ
(oas: 207, 209, 222 and 221 minutes: AAD) OOO

This is the equivalent of one of those exhibitions for which queues form long and deep and daily outside the Tate Gallery or the Royal Academy: in fact, if a similar exhibition of paintings, furniture and porcelain from the Tsar's palaces were mounted in London it would surely be a sell-out. Quite simply, there has never been a published collection to match this, both in the quality of the items and in its extensiveness. Of the singers of Imperial Russia, the world came to know Chaliapin, who eclipsed the rest. He is not among the artists presented here, but we have, among the basses, two who at least for vocal splendour are his equal: Adamo Didur, the Pole who was New York's first Boris Godunov (preceding Chaliapin there), and Lev Sibiriakov, another giant of a man with a magnificently produced voice to match. The tenors include Smirnov and Sobinov, a kind of collector's Tweedledum and Tweedledee, though in fact very unalike indeed. New to most listeners will be Ivan Ershov, heard in Siegfried's Forging Song from St Petersburg, 1903, with piano and anvil accompaniment: an astonishing voice and most accomplished in technique. Evgenia Zbrueva the contralto, sopranos Nezhdanova, Ermolenko-Jushina, Mei-Figner and the superbly recorded Korolewicz-Wayda are also plentifully represented. Most amazing of all, perhaps, is the vividness of sound. These are some of the world's rarest recordings and they are almost all in pristine condition.

Stars of English Opera, Volume 1 H
Opera Arias with various orchestras and conductors
Sopranos – Gwen Catley (Rigoletto), Joan Cross (Così fan tutte), Dame Joan Hammond (Gianni Schicchi, Tosca); Mezzos – Janet Howe (Samson et Dalila), Gladys Ripley (Don Carlo), Marjorie Thomas (Alcina); Tenors – Webster Booth (Esmeralda), James Johnston (The Bartered Bride), David Lloyd (Don Giovanni, Die Zauberflöte), Heddle Nash (La favorita, Les pêcheurs de perles); Baritones – John Hargreaves (Rigoletto), Redvers Llewellyn (Falstaff),

Dennis Noble (Il barbiere di Siviglia); Bass – Oscar Natzke (Die lustigen Weiber von Windsor)
Dutton Laboratories mono CDLX7018 Ⓑ
(75 minutes: ADD). All items sung in English.
Recorded 1938-49

The discs chosen come from that fruitful period in British singing in the years before, during and just after the Second World War, when Columbia and HMV were busy recording a crop of native singers performing so eloquently in their native tongue. The group of tenors alone is a distinguished one, headed by Heddle Nash, whose dreamy, poised mezza voce is heard to perfection in Nadir's Romance from Les pêcheurs de perles, one of his most beguiling records. His ardent, refined singing of 'Spirit so fair' from La favorita, made during the same 1944 Liverpool session, is equally desirable. So is James Johnston's account of Jeník's aria from The Bartered Bride. Most welcome of all are Don Ottavio's second aria and Tamino's Portrait solo as sung by David Lloyd, whose forthright, mellifluous tone and persuasive performances offer Mozart singing of the highest calibre. Joan Cross's account of Fiordiligi's Act 2 aria, is another fine piece of Mozart singing – and isn't that Dennis Brain playing the horn solos? Marjorie Thomas's refined art is recalled in her pure Handelian legato while Llewellyn offers character but a rather attenuated tone in Ford's aria, Hargreaves much feeling but stilted diction as Rigoletto. If these two baritones were limited in appeal, Noble was one of great distinction regarding tone, line and diction. His 1939 HMV 'I'm the factotum' launches this disc in the most engaging way.

Transfers, as usual from this source, are exemplary, surface noise wholly eliminated, voices clean and forward.

Stars of English Opera, Volume 3 🄷
Opera Arias and Ensembles with various orchestras and conductors
Sopranos – Dame Isobel Baillie (Alessandro), Joyce Gartside (Simon Boccanegra), Dame Joan Hammond (Faust), Dora Labbette (La bohème), Miriam Licette (Le nozze di Figaro), Dame Maggie Teyte (The Maid of Orleans); Contraltos – Kathleen Ferrier (Orfeo ed Euridice), Jean Watson (Un ballo in maschera); Tenors – Gerald Davies (La bohème), Tano Ferendinos (L'Arlesiana, Werther), James Johnston (Simon Boccanegra), Heddle Nash (L'elisir d'amore, Faust); Baritones – Arnold Matters (Simon Boccanegra), Frederick Sharp (Simon Boccanegra); Basses – Norman Allin (La reine de Saba), Owen Brannigan (Faust), Howell Glynne (Simon Boccanegra)
Dutton Laboratories mono CDLX7024 Ⓑ
(77 minutes: ADD). Recorded 1927-50

Norman Allin is perhaps the most striking revelation here: sturdy and firm as a rock (but by no means hard-hearted), individual and memorable, and there is nothing to be found quite like him today. Somewhat like him a generation after was Howell Glynne, who is heard here in Fiesco's aria from Simon Boccanegra, one of the best of the old Sadlers Wells singers and later a very good Baron Ochs at Covent Garden. It is good also to hear Jean Watson: Canadian-born, she came to us after the war and sang a stunning Azucena. Her Ulrica solo is scrupulous but not very dramatic. 'Scrupulous' is the word for all these, including the Melboid sopranos, Licette, (Labbette) Perli and Teyte. If there is a disappointment it is with Arnold Matters's dull-toned Boccanegra, balanced, however, by the pleasure of hearing Joyce Gartside and James Johnston as the lovers. And shedding her light over all is Kathleen Ferrier, whose test-pressing of 'What is life?' suggests not so much a star of the British opera as a nearly full moon in the international firmament. It is a delightful collection, the sound vivid and compelling as ever.

Dame Isobel Baillie and Kathleen Ferrier

To Music 🄷
Songs, Arias and Duets by [a]Arne, [ab]Brahms, [b]Elgar, [b]Gluck, [b]Greene, [a]Grieg, [b]Handel, [ab]Mendelssohn, [ab]Purcell, [a]Schubert and [a]Scott
[a]Dame Isobel Baillie sop [b]Kathleen Ferrier contr
Gerald Moore pf
APR mono APR5544 (69 minutes: ADD) Ⓜ
Recorded 1941-45. All items sung in English

This is a delightful disc, with a happily chosen programme and well-matched contributions from both singers. Even so, it has to be admitted that the first thought concerns date. The piano arrangements of Purcell duets and Handel arias are definitely of the period; nothing could be more remote from the modern style which was even then coming into vogue. But 'dated' in a much better way is the quality of the singing itself. Would you today find the runs in Purcell and Handel sung with at once such clear articulation and such smoothness? Dame Isobel is sometimes a little pipey but mostly charming. Ferrier is royal. The transfers are excellent.

Arleen Auger sop

Liederabend
Includes Beethoven Marmotte, Op 52 No 7. Wonne der Wehmut, Op 83 No 1. Zärtliche Liebe, WoO123 Gluck Einem Bach der fliesst Haydn Lieder für das Clavier, HobXXVIa – No 4, Eine sehr gewöhnliche Geschichte; No 21, Das Leben ist ein Traum. Canzonettas, HobXXVIa – No 34, She never told her love; No 35, Piercing eyes Mozart Wie unglücklich bin ich nit, K147/K125g. Oiseaux, si tous les ans, K307/K284d. Der Zauberer, K472. Die Zufriedenheit, K473. Das Veilchen, K476. Die Alte, K517. Im Frühlingsanfang, K597. Das Kinderspiel, K598 Schubert Nähe des Geliebten, D162b. Claudine von Villa Bella – Liebe schwärmt auf allen Wegen. Heidenröslein, D257. Seligkeit, D433. Geheimes, D719

Arleen Auger sop Erik Werba fp
Orfeo d'Or C509011B (70 minutes: ADD) Ⓕ
Broadcast performance, 1978

When this recital was given in the spring of 1978, Auger was at the absolute height of her powers and obviously in fabulous voice. And given the irresistible repertory she offers here, this is a disc to treasure. Her tone and its management were ideal for her utterly apt choice of Lieder. Whether the mood is grave or gay, she captures it perfectly and her effortless command of German means that the text is always given its full due. Sad and/or intimate pieces, such as Haydn's She never told her love, Mozart's Als Luise die Briefe, Beethoven's Wonne der Wehmut and Schubert's Nähe des Geliebten are given the benefit of Auger's full, appropriately plangent timbre. Then in cheerful songs, such as Mozart's Der Zauberer, Beethoven's Marmotte, Schubert's Heidenröslein and Seligkeit, Auger adopts a suitably smiling tone.

In all, her treatment is natural and unaffected, proving her the true successor to Irmgard Seefried in this repertory. Nothing should deter anyone from acquiring this delightful recital.

Dame Janet Baker mez

Scottish and English Folksongs
Arne The Tempest – Where the bee sucks^{a} Beethoven Scottish Songs, Op 108^{b} – No 5, The sweetest lad was Jamie; No 7, Bonnie laddie, highland laddie; No 20, Faithfu' Johnie; WoO156^{b} – Cease your funning; Polly Stewart Boyce Tell me lovely shepherd^{c} Campion Third Booke of Ayres^{d} – If thou long'st so much to learne; Never love unlesse you can; Oft have I sigh'd for him that heares me not. Fourth Booke of Ayres^{d} – Faine would I wed a faire young man Dowland The First Book of Songs or Ayres – Come againe^{d} Haydn Scottish Folksong Arrangements^{e} – I'm o'er young to marry yet; John Anderson; O can ye sew cushions; Sleepy Bodie; Up in the morning early; The White Cockade; The brisk young lad; O bonny lass; Duncan Gray; My boy Tammy; Shepherds, I have lost my love; Green grow the rashes; Love will find out the way; The birks of Abergeldie; My ain kind dearie; Cumbernauld House; Jamie come try me; The Flower of Edinburgh Monro My lovely Celia^{c} Purcell Lord, what is man?, Z192^{c}. Sleep, Adam, sleep and take thy rest, Z195^{c}
Dame Janet Baker mez ^{a}Douglas Whittaker fl ^{be}Yehudi Menuhin vn ^{b}Ross Pople vc ^{ac}Ambrose Gauntlett vada ^{d}Robert Spencer lte George Malcolm ^{b}hpd/^{e}pf ^{ac}Martin Isepp hpd
Testament SBT1241 (70 minutes: ADD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included
Recorded 1967 and 1975 ●●●

'A Pageant of English Song' was Baker's first solo LP for EMI. Side 1, in which she is accompanied by Martin Isepp and Robert Spencer, is reissued on this CD. Side 2, with Gerald Moore at the piano, can be heard on a double CD on EMI. Dame Janet was at the beginning of the high summer of her career when this was recorded in 1967. Every recital, concert appearance or opera role was an event. In the first song, Dowland's 'Come againe', each word is given the perfect weight, with beautiful touches on the repeated 'I sit, I sigh, I weep, I faint, I die'. The jolly 'Never love unlesse you can', the melancholy 'Oft have I sigh'd' and the coquettish 'Faine would I wed' each has its own 'face', Baker finding just the right expression in her voice. The Scottish songs arranged by Haydn, recorded eight years later, seem rather slight in comparison. Nineteen of these arrangements one after another seem rather too much of a good thing. The five Beethoven Scottish arrangements are the best part of the 1975 session. 'Fathfu' Johnnie' is a setting to place beside any great song of the same period. The recording seems to favour the instrumentalists somewhat, whereas in the 1967 selections, Baker's voice is always fresh and forward.

Haydn Arianna a Naxos, HobXXVIb/2^{a} Schubert Der Blinde Knabe, D833^{b}. Totengräberweise, D869^{b} Schumann Frauenliebe und -leben, Op 42^{c}. Der Page, Op 30 No 2^{b}. Meine Rose, Op 90 No 2^{b} R Strauss Vier Lieder, Op 27^{b} – No 3, Heimliche Aufforderung; No 4, Morgen. Befreit, Op 39 No 4^{b} Wolf Spanisches Liederbuch^{b} – Die ihr schwebet um diese Palmen; Geh' Geliebter
Dame Janet Baker mez ^{a}John Constable, ^{b}Paul Hamburger, ^{c}Geoffrey Parsons pfs
BBC Music Legends/IMG Artists BBCL4049-2 Ⓜ
(80 minutes: ADD)
Recorded live in ^{ab}1968 and ^{c}1971 ●●

Although recorded on three separate occasions, and with different accompanists, this programme is fairly typical of the recitals that Dame Janet gave in the late 1960s and early '70s when she was at the absolute peak of her form. She probably wouldn't have opened with the Haydn, reserving it usually as the final item in the first half, an operatic climax to work towards. She recorded it later with Raymond Leppard (for Philips – nla) but this live version has a wonderful sense of intimacy. The recording is first rate, with marvellous presence; Baker has that ability to invest a simple phrase in the first recitative such as 'la face splenda del nostro amor' with unforgettable poignancy. In the second part, as Ariadne rails against her fate, she allows herself an almost verismo-like outburst at 'ei qui lascia in abbandono'. This cantata can sometimes seem a bit heavyweight on a recital programme, but as Baker sings it seems to grows in beauty and intensity.

Frauenliebe und -leben was the work that brought Baker early fame as a recording artist, in her recital for Saga. Later she recorded it again for EMI with Barenboim. This recording from 1968, accompanied by Geoffrey Parsons, finds her in luxurious full voice, revelling in each successive melody. It isn't preferable to the earlier Saga version with Isepp, but here she lets herself go more at certain key moments such as 'O lass im Traüme' in the third song.

This cycle belonged to Janet Baker, and with the single exception of Sena Jurinac, there just isn't a singer to equal her in it.

The songs recorded in the studio with Paul Hamburger include two by Wolf, not available anywhere else in Baker's discography. 'Geh' Geliebter' is sung with typical ardour. The two Schubert and Schumann songs are fresh and lively, but it is the Strauss group that has the highest voltage. Heimliche Aufforderung doesn't really suit her, with its intoxicated ardour, but Morgen is a superb example of that hushed, rapt quality that was one of the characteristic joys of Baker's art. The final song, Befreit, achieves a dramatic thrust that suggests the theatre in the best possible sense. Admirers who already possess Baker's other versions of this material should not be deterred – this is a splendid souvenir of her in the full glory of her prime. Newcomers to Baker's singing – there can't be many people under 30 who heard her live – are in for a treat.

Song Recital

Britten Corpus Christi carol Busch Rest
Fauré Automne, Op 18 No 3. Prison, Op 83 No 1. Soir, Op 83 No 2. Fleur jetée, Op 39 No 2. En sourdine, Op 58 No 2. Notre amour, Op 23 No 2. Mai, Op 1 No 2. La chanson du pêcheur, Op 4 No 1. Clair de lune, Op 46 No 2 Gurney The fields are full
Ireland The Salley Gardens Parry Proud Maisie. O Mistress Mine Quilter Love's Philosophy, Op 3 No 1 Schubert Am Grabe Anselmos, D504. Abendstern, D806. Die Vögel, D691. Die Götter Griechenlands, D677. Gondelfahrer, D808. Auflösung, D807 Stanford La belle dame sans merci
R Strauss Morgen, Op 27 No 4. Befreit, Op 39 No 4
Vaughan Williams Linden Lea
Warlock Pretty Ring-time
Dame Janet Baker mez Gerald Moore pf
EMI 565009-2 (75 minutes: ADD) Ⓜ
Texts and translations included. Recorded 1967-69

This CD is a timely reminder, a generous one too, of Baker in her prime. At the peak of her career at the end of the 1960s, the tone is at its most beautiful, the singing as secure as it is intelligent. One realises anew that here is one of the great singers of the century and one comfortable in so many idioms. It may be that some native singers of Fauré and Schubert capture the soul of these songs more unerringly, but few actually sing them so glowingly, so intensely. The typical Schubertian sadness brings out the very best in her. Nobody has sung Am Grabe Anselmos with so much sincere and deep feeling, nor have the lamenting echoes of Die Götter Griechenlands ever sounded more haunting. Technically the performances are also without fault. In her own language, Dame Janet is at home in every sense. The gems here are the Stanford ballad, the tensions of the tale sustained throughout by both artists, the tender sorrow of Britten's Corpus Christi, the fervent outpouring of Quilter's Love's Philosophy. Everywhere Moore is at one with his partner, always supportive, perceptive, with that soft and inimitable touch of his. The recordings, for their dates, are exemplary in balance and presence.

Song Recital

Brahms Vier ernste Gesänge, Op 121[d]. Lieder, Op 91e. Four Duets, Op 28[f] Chausson Poème de l'amour et de la mer, Op 19[b] Duparc Phidylé[b]. La vie antérieure[b]. Le manoir de Rosemonde[b]. Au pays où se fait la guerre[b]. L'Invitation au voyage[b] Ravel Shéhérazade[a]
Schumann Frauenliebe und-leben, Op 42[c]
Dame Janet Baker mez [f]Dietrich Fischer-Dieskau bar [e]Cecil Aronowitz va [cf]Daniel Barenboim pf [a]New Philharmonia Orchestra / Sir John Barbirolli; [b]London Symphony Orchestra / [de]André Previn pf
EMI ② 568667-2 (134 minutes: ADD) Ⓜ
Recorded 1967-77

There comes a time in each great singer's career when they are at the peak of their form: artistry, voice, confidence, everything is at the maximum. Where Dame Janet Baker is concerned, that happy coincidence was in the years from 1967 to 1971. On the opera stage, her Dido in Les troyens, her Lucretia, Octavian, Dorabella and finally Diana in Calisto showed us her range of dramatic and comic skills. On the concert platform, working with Barbirolli, Szell, Giulini, Boult, Boulez and Barenboim, everything she did seemed well-nigh perfect. This two-CD selection from her EMI recordings opens with her famous performance of Ravel's Shéhérazade under Barbirolli, recorded in 1967. Of the song-cycles they recorded, this is perhaps the least regarded – Baker's voice never had quite the sensuous quality one is hoping for in this piece; but the security, the joy in the sound of her voice as she sings of Asia, and the right pace, all add up to a very fine recording. What is missing can be noted in the final line, about the beautiful boy walking past, with his feminine movements. One waits for a hint of irony, a slight smile of regret in the voice, but it isn't there. Baker was not given to innuendo; her humour was more robust. The succeeding Chausson Poème de l'amour et de la mer and then the group of songs by Duparc, recorded nearly 10 years later, show up a marked deterioration in her voice. Where once all had been steady, there is a beat that becomes intrusive, a sense of strain on some of the high notes, even here and there a slight worry over the pitch. Le manoir de Rosemonde is the best performance, the high drama bringing out the best in her.

The performance of Schumann's Frauenliebe und -leben dates from 1975. Although at the time many people thought this outshone if not eclipsed Baker's earlier, justly famous Saga disc, this is debatable. The sound is certainly better on EMI and in the mid-1960s she had the ability to convey both the hushed, girlish quality of the earlier songs and the mature, and then even tragic, tones for the last three. The extra verbal clarity of this later performance does not make up for the slight sense of strain. There are no reservations whatsoever about the Brahms songs, with Previn. The extra darkness in Baker's voice by 1977 makes these the highlight of the whole selection. In the Vier ernste Gesänge, and then the two Op 91 songs with piano and viola, Baker, Previn and Cecil Aronowitz achieve the perfect balance. As an encore we get four Brahms duets with Dietrich Fischer-Dieskau. Everything Dame Janet recorded is worth hearing, and this pair of discs gives an unusual cross-section of her repertory.

Cecilia Bartoli sop

An Italian Songbook

Bellini Vaga luna che inargenti. L'abbandono. Malinconia, ninfa gentile. Il fervido desiderio. Torna, vezzosa Fillide. Vanne, o rosa fortunata. Dolente imagine di figlia mia. La farfalleta. Per pietà, bell'idol mio Donizetti Il barcaiolo. Ah, rammenta, o bella Irene. Amore e morte. La conocchia. Me voglio fa'na casa Rossini Péchés de vieillesse – Book 3: L'esule; Book 11: A ma belle mère; Aragonese. La passeggiata. Mi lagnerò tacendo – Boléro. Soirées musicales – La danza
Cecilia Bartoli mez James Levine pf
Decca 455 513-2DH (67 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included. Recorded 1996

The transforming power of imagination is rarely shown so clearly. On record and in recital these songs and their like have so often appeared as tepid little exercises, cautious investigations of the voice, the acoustic, the audience. But now, behold, they burgeon. Life abundant lies within the vocal line, and even the silly old accompaniments sound well. Such is the effect of the Bartoli-Levine combination. From the very first bars it feels that something special among Bartoli's many fine recordings have come into being here with these two distinguished artists in association. These are thoughtful, passionate and colourful performances, which outshine all previous versions of the more familiar songs. Among the less familiar items, Bellini's Torna, vezzosa Fillide may come as the most engaging discovery. Rossini's miniature Requiem for his mother-in-law seems not to be a joke, whereas the Aragonese (a setting in the style of Aragon of Mi lagnerò tacendo) surely must be. There might have been something to say here and now about intrusive 'h's and that other intrusion, a breathy quality sometimes cultivated in the interests of expression or intimacy, but they are not gross or prohibitive features of the singing here, and the lovely voice and lively art make ample amends.

Arie Antiche

Anonymous O leggiadri occhi belli Caccini Tu ch'hai le penne, amore. Amarilli Caldara Selve amiche. Sebben, crudele Carissimi Vittoria, vittoria! Cavalli Delizie contente Cesti Intorno all'idol mio Giordani Caro mio ben Lotti Pur dicesti, o bocca bella Marcello Quella fiamma che m'accende Paisiello Nel cor più non mi sento. Il mio ben quando verrà. Chi vuol la zingarella Parisotti Se tu m'ami A Scarlatti Già il sole dal Gange. Son tutta duolo. Se Florindo è fedele. O cessate di piagarmi. Spesso vibra per suo gioco Vivaldi Sposa son disprezzata
Cecilia Bartoli mez György Fischer pf
Decca 436 267-2DH (66 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included. Recorded 1990-91 ●

With Scarlatti and Vivaldi among the composers, these arie antiche are not necessarily very old. Italian singers have long been accustomed to lumping together all songs earlier than Mozart (or perhaps Haydn) under this heading, piously including them at the start of a recital so as to establish a classical tone and give them time to try out their voices before entering on the more strenuous and popular part of their programme. Bartoli here devotes a whole disc to them, as things delightful in themselves, varied in mood and style, and calling in turn on almost all the essential arts of a good singer. No one can come away with a feeling of having been short-changed at the end of this. Her voice is ideal, both silken and chaste, finely controlled, cleanly produced. With a simple, direct song such as the famous Caro mio ben she will never fuss or show off; with Vivaldi's Sposa son disprezzata she exploits the most deliciously languishing tone and sometimes one more frankly passionate and 'operatic'. Most of the items are gems, and to all of them György Fischer brings the touch of the expert jeweller, knowing exactly how best to set off the beauties of voice and melody.

Chant d'amour

Berlioz Tristia, Op 18 – La mort d'Ophélie. Zaïde, Op 19 No 1 Bizet Chant d'amour. Ouvre ton coeur. Adieux de l'hôtesse arabe. Tarantelle. La Coccinelle Delibes Les filles de Cadix Ravel Chants populaires – Chanson française; Chanson espagnole; Chanson italienne; Chanson hébraïque. Vocalise en forme de Habanera. Deux mélodies hébraïques. Tripatos Viardot-Garcia Hai luli!. Havanaise. Les filles de Cadix
Cecilia Bartoli mez Myung-Whun Chung pf
Decca 452 667-2DH (68 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included. Recorded 1996 ●

Cecilia Bartoli goes from strength to strength. Taking on the French repertory in this delightful disc, she also gives us some great rarities. The opening Bizet group includes two of his best-known songs, Ouvre ton coeur and Adieux de l'hôtesse arabe. In the first, one perhaps might ask for more of a smile in the voice. In the pessimistic Hugo poem about the Arab girl bidding farewell to the handsome traveller, Bartoli relishes the muezzin-like vocalise on 'Hélas, adieu, souviens-toi'. This is one of the best performances of this mini-drama since Conchita Supervia's orchestral-accompanied version. In this, and the succeeding Tarantelle, 'tra-la-la's and froth, one is prompted to wonder if there will one day be a Bartoli

Carmen. La Coccinelle ('The ladybird') is a little salon gem, with a fast waltz motif. Bartoli uses a croaky little voice to act out the Ladybird.

Delibes's Les filles de Cadix, all trills and sunshine, is contrasted with an equally demanding setting of the same poem by Pauline Viardot. Hai luli! with words by Xavier de Maistre is a sad second-cousin to the Willow Song from Rossini's Otello. Havanaise is a real curiosity: the first and last stanzas, sung in Spanish, frame a middle section in French which breaks into a Rossinian flight of coloratura before returning to the swaying movements of the dance. Evenings chez Viardot must have been enlivened considerably by such songs. The narration of Ophelia's death, words by Ernest Legouvé, vaguely based on Shakespeare, ends with a wordless melody which Bartoli sings in a hushed, beautiful tone. In Zaïde she plays the castanets with skill; if this song is less interesting than the evocations of Spain by Bizet, Delibes and Viardot, that's Berlioz's fault, not Bartoli's. In the concluding Ravel group, an interesting contrast can be made between Viardot's Havanaise of the 1840s and Ravel's Habanera of 1907. In the four popular songs, Bartoli is especially effective in the Hebrew number as well as the two other Mélodies hébraïques, 'Kaddish' and 'L'énigme éternelle'. All these Ravel songs have often been recorded, so one cannot help wishing that Bartoli and Chung had stayed with the 19th-century French salon repertory to uncover more rarities. Still, this is one of the most satisfying recitals by one of the great singers of our time. First-rate recording and sensitive accompaniment throughout.

Italian Songs

Beethoven La Partenza, WoO124. Four Ariettas, Op 82. In questa tomba oscura, WoO133
Haydn Arianna a Naxos, HobXXVIb/2 Mozart Ridente la calma, K152/K210*a* Schubert Didone abbandonata, D510. Im Haine, D738. An die Leier, D737. La pastorella al Prato, D528. Vier Canzonen, D688. Pensa, che questo istante, D76. Willkommen und Abschied, D767
Cecilia Bartoli mez András Schiff pf
Decca 440 297-2DH (68 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included. Recorded 1992

It is good to be reminded of these composers' responses to the Italian muse in this particularly well-cast recital. Central Europe, in the person of András Schiff, meets Italy, in Cecilia Bartoli, to delightful, often revelatory effect. The simple form and undemanding vocal line of Beethoven's little La Partenza makes for a truthfulness of expression which Bartoli's clear, light-filled enunciation recreates to the full. With her warm breath gently supporting the voice's lively, supple inflexion, she reveals Beethoven's own skill in word-setting both here and in two fascinatingly contrasted settings of 'L'amante impaziente' in the Ariettas, Op 82. Schubert's 10 Canzone selected here show a wide range of treatment, from the compressed lyric drama of Dido's lament 'Vedi quanto adoro', in which Bartoli's lives intensely from second to second, to the honeyed Goldoni pastorella and the thrumming, pulsating serenade of 'Guarda, che bianca luna', D688 No 2. A gently, fragrantly shaped Mozart Ridente la calma, and a Haydn Arianna a Naxos of movingly immediate and youthful response complete this unexpectedly and unusually satisfying recital.

Live in Italy

Bellini Malinconia, ninfa gentile. Ma rendi pur contento Berlioz Zaïde, Op 19 No 1 Bizet Carmen – Près des remparts de Séville Caccini Nuove musiche e nuova maniera de scriverle – Al fonte al prato; Tu ch'hai le penne. Amarilli mia bella Donizetti La conocchia. Me voglio fa'na casa T Giordani Caro mio ben Handel Il trionfo del Tempo e del Disinganno – Lascia la spina Montsalvatge Canto negro Mozart Oiseaux, si tous les ans, K307/K284*d*. Le nozze di Figaro – Voi che sapete Rossini Mi lagnerò tacendo, Book 1 – No 2 in D; No 3 in D minor, 'Sorzico'; No 4 in E, 'Il risentimento'. L'orpheline du Tyrola. Zelmira – Riedi al soglio. Canzonetta spagnuola Schubert La pastorella al Prato, D528 Viardot Havanaise. Hai luli! Vivaldi Griselda – Agitata da due venti
Cecilia Bartoli mez Jean-Yves Thibaudet pf
Sonatori de la Gioiosa Marca
Decca 455 981-2DH (77 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included. Recorded live in 1998

Bartoli's voice is still in lovely, almost unflawed condition. If one wishes to take stock of her growth as an artist, the second item in her programme, Caccini's Amarilli, affords an opportunity. She recorded it first in 1990 in a touching performance, beautiful as sound and sensitive in mood (available on Decca). But the mood was set, and she was singing a song written and remembered. In the newer recording she is living and seemingly inventing it. Thus the development of feeling at 'Credilo pur' brings a fresh impulse, a more urgent appeal, and the repetitions of the beloved name acquire a musing, improvisatory quality. All of this (and much more of its kind) is sheer enrichment. Nevertheless, if the vocal equivalent of a selective weedkiller could be employed, it might make short work of two other fast-growing products of this fair field. One, the persistent aspirating of runs, is probably too deep-rooted by now; the other, more insidious, is of comparatively recent cultivation, a breathy winsomeness, an exhalation of pretty pathos or girlish wide-eyed intimacy. If this were reserved for occasional use it might be acceptable and effective, but in the present recital it is habitual. As for the technique used in passagework such as abounds in the Vivaldi aria, it does facilitate rapid movement and helps to ensure clear articulation. Everything is heightened in these performances – the rich depth of contralto tone, languor and vivacity in the Viardot songs, the panache of the Berlioz, and smouldering promise and fiery fulfilment of Rossini's Canzonetta spagnuola. The variety of accompaniments is another attraction, all delightfully played. With the live atmosphere and the sense of freedom around the voice, this is surely the most faithful and revealing of all Bartoli's records to date.

Carlo Bergonzi ten

The Sublime Voice of Carlo Bergonzi Ⓗ
Excerpts from operas by Cilea, Leoncavallo, Mascagni, Ponchielli, Puccini and Verdi
Carlo Bergonzi ten with Renata Scotto, Dame Joan Sutherland, Renata Tebaldi sops and others
Decca ② 467 023-2DX2 (154 minutes: ADD) Ⓜ ●

The collection opens with one of the warmest gelide manine ever. Carlo Bergonzi's voice is at its freshest and most beautiful (the recording comes, with other excerpts, from the 1959 Bohème under Serafin), but impresses especially with the variety of its handling, the fertility of imagination. A year earlier, the Butterfly is similarly delightful, Bergonzi's Pinkerton being all confidence and energy. These are some of the best things, but the composer most closely associated with Bergonzi, and of whom we hear most, is not Puccini but Verdi. From the Rigoletto of 1964 (Kubelík) all of the Duke's solos find something very close to their ideal singer, the clean cut of the voice suiting their requirement for an elegance of manner. That is an immediate presence, too, in the items from Un ballo in maschera (Solti, 1962): Bergonzi's voice at the start of the second disc enters with magical lightness and grace in the opening phrases of 'La rivedrà nell' estasi'. Then, how the Karajan Aida (1959) challenges its singers with those (one would think) impossibly slow speeds – and how nobly Bergonzi meets the challenge in his 'Celeste Aida'. Not everything is as good as that: he unexpectedly turns his verse of 'Parigi, o cara' to mush, and one wouldn't choose his 'Di quella pira' to take into battle. Otello's monologue (1975) is not really in his voice or sensibility. Some of the excerpts end abruptly, and sometimes the sequence is disconcerting. Transfers are generally fine, but tracks from the 1958 recital under Gavazzeni have a rough surface on the voice.

Robin Blaze counterten

German 17th-Century Church Music
Bach Cantata No 53, Schlage doch, gewünschte Stunde[a] H Bach Sonatas – No 1 in C; No 2 in F J Christoph Bach Ach, dass ich Wassers g'nug hätte[a] J M Bach Auf, lasst uns den Herren loben[a] Bernhard Was betrübst du dich, meine Seele[a] Buxtehude Jesu, meine Freud und Lust, BuxWV59[a]. Jubilate Domino, omnis terra, BuxWV64[a] Geist Vater unser, der du bist im Himmel[a] Krieger O Jesu, du mein Leben[a] Rosenmüller Christum ducem, qui per crucem[a]. Sonata No 2 in E minor Schütz Erbarm dich mein, O Herre Gott, SWV447[a]
[a]Robin Blaze counterten The Parley of Instruments / Peter Holman
Hyperion CDA67079 (74 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included. Recorded 1998 ●

The principal pleasure of this programme is that Robin Blaze is so refreshingly natural and is no more singing to 'pip' a perceived rival than to force his personality on the listener. In fact, Blaze's musical instincts are ideal for this marvellous pre-Bach solo repertory which represents a supreme test for an alto singer of any description: the rhetorical language is often profoundly intense, the richly wrought string textures must be conversed with, since the instrumental writing is so suggestive in its close dialogue and, most critically, the voice must assume its primus inter pares with a glowing warmth of expression. In short, Blaze scores on all fronts. In Johann Christoph Bach's celebrated lament, Ach, dass ich Wassers, Blaze colours the dolorous text with much affection and peerless control, though The Parley of Instruments provides a fairly pedestrian accompaniment. The Parley's Renaissance violin consort in the brighter numbers lends an incandescent and grainy immediacy, especially in the first of the two mesmerising Buxtehude cantatas, Jesu, meine Freud und Lust. Here and in the beguiling setting of the Lord's Prayer by Christian Geist, Blaze unassumingly traverses the quick-shifting moods with consummate ease, sailing sweetly and effortlessly above the consort with long-breathed chorale phrases and then in Jubilate Domino, elevating the text with an infectious rhythmic energy. Blaze has many distinctive qualities in the current firmament, not least his superb intonation (no current practitioner comes close), his capacity for listening as a true chamber musician (though The Parley doesn't listen enough to him) and a light, uncloying timbre, intelligently focused and exquisitely nuanced. Highly recommended.

Stephanie Blythe mez

Bach St John Passion, BWV245 – Von den Stricken; Es ist vollbracht!. Mass, BWV232 – Agnus Dei. St Matthew Passion, BWV244 – Erbarme dich; Können Tränen meiner Wangen Handel Hercules, HWV60 – Where shall I fly?. Giulio Cesare, HWV17 – Priva son d'ogni conforto; Son nata a lagrimar; Al lampo dell'armi; Dall'ondoso periglio; Aure, deh, per pietà; Madre!. Semele, HWV58 – Awake, Saturnia; Iris, hence away. Serse, HWV40 – Ombra mai fu; Frondi tenere
Stephanie Blythe mez with David Daniels counterten Jérôme Hantaï va da gamba Martin Isepp, Emanuelle Haïm hpds Paris Ensemble Orchestra / John Nelson
Virgin Classics 545475-2 (72 minutes: DDD)
Texts and translations included Ⓕ

A new Marilyn Horne perhaps? This is Stephanie Blythe's solo début recording. Her tone and timbre call strongly to mind the work of her distinguished (and fellow) American predecessor. Like Horne, she possesses a rich, firm, characterful mezzo, particularly solid in the lowest register. She also seems to have Horne's technical fluency. In Handel here, she dispatches Dejanira's desperate imprecations and Juno's anger as to the manner born, diction clear, attention paid to the dramatic situation in each. She encompasses martial and pensive Caesar with equal aplomb. Then she switches, with due versatility, to despairing Cornelia, aria and duet. In the latter she is joined by David Daniels, no less, as Sesto. The duet, in particular, is delivered on both sides with understanding and feeling.

Her Bach is only a mite less compelling. Again the vocal and technical accomplishment are not in question, but the interpretations are on the cool side, 'Es ist vollbracht!' excepted. Never mind, this is a disc – very well recorded – that marks the arrival of an auspicious talent.

Barbara Bonney sop

The Radiant Voice
Includes Bach Cantata No 211, 'Coffee Cantata' – Heute noch, lieber Vater, tut es doch Donizetti L'elisir d'amore – Chiedi all'aura lusinghiera Grieg Peer Gynt – Solveig's Song Lloyd Webber Requiem – Pie Jesu Mozart Exsultate, jubilate, K165 – Alleluia. Vespers, K339 – Laudate Dominum. Le nozze di Figaro – Deh, vieni, non tardar. Die Zauberflöte – Ach, ich fühl's Pergolesi Stabat Mater – Stabat Mater Dolorosa Purcell Dido and Aeneas – When I am laid in earth Schumann Liederkreis, Op 39 – Mondnacht R Strauss Morgen, Op 27 No 4. Der Rosenkavalier – Mir ist die Ehre widerfahren
Barbara Bonney sop Various performers, orchestras and conductors
Decca 468 818-2DH (76 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1988-2000

'The Radiant Voice.' And, it might be added, the exquisite art. Whoever is responsible for the programme has made an excellent selection. Arranged chronologically, it starts with John Dowland and ends with André Previn, whose Vocalise for voice, cello and piano provides a thoughtful, sensitively chosen final number. In between there is some delightful Bach and Mozart, with Lieder by Schumann and Strauss, songs by Grieg and Sibelius, and, among other items, two excerpts from opera.

The Rosenkavalier duet, of course, is '[wie] himmlisch' indeed, Bonney's Sophie heard in ideal partnership with Susan Graham as Octavian. The earliest recordings – 'Solveig's Song' and Susanna's 'Deh, vieni' – come from 1988. Very slightly, these and others from the early 1990s are perceptibly more youthful in sound, and among the latest it is possible to identify an added depth and fullness. But most remarkable is the consistency, the consistency too of pleasure given throughout the anthology.

American Songs
Argento Six Elizabethan Songs Barber Ten Hermit Songs, Op 29 Copland 12 Poems of Emily Dickinson Previn Sallie Chisum remembers Billy the Kid. Vocalise[a]
Barbara Bonney sop [a]Sato Knudsen vc André Previn pf
Decca 455 511-2DH (76 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts included. Recorded 1996 ●●

Barbara Bonney is allegedly related to Billy the Kid. Allegedly. She herself is convinced, or rather was convinced, when she first saw the pictures. The resemblance to her own father was 'terrifying': the big searching eyes, the ears that stick out – the look. And then an American friend in London gave her a copy of The Collected Works of Billy the Kid, and that's where André Previn came in. Sallie Chisum remembers Billy the Kid – the spur of this all-American programme – takes its cues from Wild West history – or is that mythology? Sallie Chisum was a prostitute who went to bed with both Billy and Pat Garrett, and her words are starry-eyed. Previn sets them as she will have remembered them, touches of sweet sentiment in the voice played off against the dusty and gritty realities of the keyboard. There's more than a hint of the bar-room piano in that. And then up soars the voice recalling the 'flower in his lapel' and the fragrance of it lends a touch of naïvety. The Argento was a shrewd choice, not just on account of its rarity value (this is the world première recording), but because Bonney and Previn both have ties with England which adds something to our perception of the cycle's Anglo/American cross-breeding. Both are brilliantly articulate and quick of reflex, the mix of ancient and modern, the ornate and the reflective – indeed the somnambulant – is beautifully judged.

The Copland and Barber sets are splendid, too. In Copland's Emily Dickinson, Bonney of course has the wholesome, homespun qualities – the pure and simple gifts – this music demands. We know how raptly she will sustain 'Heart, we will forget him!', and she does. There is ecstasy and truth in this voice. But she can be feisty, too, deploying a determined and surprisingly resilient low register for 'There came a wind like a bugle' and the awesome plunge to 'East of eternity' in 'Sleep is supposed to be'. In all this, Previn's contribution, his partnership, is invaluable. Listen to him sign off 'Going to Heaven!' Not so much the exclamation mark, more the wink. And listen to him, too, lending weight and masculinity to the bolder illuminations of Barber's Hermit Songs. His resoluteness undoubtedly helps Bonney darken and intensify her response to these songs. 'The Monk and his Cat' sounds all the more cosy and incongruous in consequence. We may have each other, it seems to say, but in the end we have only ourselves. To that end, the closing song is marvellous. A very real sense of isolation permeates the final stanza. Bonney and Previn may be two, but for the time being they are one.

Diamonds in the Snow

Alfvén The Forest Sleeps, Op 28 No 6. So take my heart Grieg I love but thee, Op 5 No 3. Op 25 – No 2, A Swan; No 4, With a waterlily. Last Spring, Op 33 No 2. From Monte Pincio, Op 39 No 1. Six Songs, Op 48. Peer Gynt – Solveig's Song. The Princess Sibelius Astray, Op 17 No 4. Op 36 – No 4, Sigh, sedges, sigh, Op 36 No 4; No 6, The Diamond on the March Snow. Songs, Op 37 – No 4, Was it a dream?; No 5, The Maiden's Tryst Sjöberg Tonerna Stenhammar The Girl Came Home from her Tryst, Op 4b No 1. Fylgia, Op 16 No 4. Adagio, Op 20 No 5. I skogen. Sverige

Barbara Bonney sop Antonio Pappano pf

Decca 466 762-2DH (72 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ

Texts and translations included. Recorded 1999 ◉◉◉

Scandinavian songs have long had a special place in Barbara Bonney's repertoire, and it is perhaps surprising that she has waited so long to devote a whole recital on disc to those for voice and piano. But then, intelligent singers tend to know their own voices best. This lovely soprano still sounds very like springtime, though in fact summer is getting on. The pure, silvery tones remain to her, while opening out into full bloom is the rose garden; a few years ago it would not have been apparent that these richer colours, with their intimations of depth and maturity, were biding their time, steadily developing their potential. And the songs need such resources – not each singly, but if a whole programme is planned, then, as a sequence they call for more than the voice of innocence and sunshine. Bonney, at this stage of her career, has both the maidenly silver for Solveig's Song, Die verschwiegene Nachtigall (Op 48) and the Stenhammar songs, and the fuller emotional and vocal reserves for Zur Rosenzeit and Ein Traum (also Op 48) and the Sibelius group. Antonio Pappano is a first-rate accompanist and in combination these two artists have much to say – it is not necessary to go beyond the first song (Grieg's Våren) to recognise that. Those who feel they are already well stocked with this once-unfamiliar repertoire are urged that there is a great deal to discover and enjoy in these performances; for those who may think of starting, here is a golden opportunity.

Ian Bostridge ten

The English Songbook

Britten The Salley gardens^{a} W C D Brown To Gratiana dancing and singing^{a} Delius Twilight Fancies^{a} Dunhill The Cloths of Heaven, Op 30 No 3^{a} Finzi The dance continued, Op 14 No 10^{a}. Since we loved, Op 13 No 7^{a} German Orpheus with his lute^{a} Grainger Bold William Taylor, BFMS43^{a}. Brigg Fair, BFMS7^{b} Gurney Sleep^{a} Parry No longer mourn for me^{a} Quilter Come away, death, Op 6 No 1^{a}. I will go with my father a-ploughing^{a}. Now sleeps the crimson petal, Op 3 No 2^{a} Somervell To Lucasta, on going to the wars^{a} Stanford La belle dame sans merci^{a} Traditional The death of Queen Jane^{a}. The little turtle dove^{a}. My love's an arbutus (arr. Stanford)^{a} Vaughan Williams Linden Lea^{a}. Silent Noon^{a} Warlock Cradle Song^{a}. Jillian of Berry^{a}. Rest, sweet nymphs^{a}

Ian Bostridge ten ^{a}Julius Drake pf

^{b}Polyphony / Stephen Layton

EMI 556830-2 (69 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ

Texts included. Recorded 1999 ◉

The recital begins with Keats and ends with Shakespeare: that can't be bad. But it also begins with Stanford and ends with Parry; what would the modernists of their time have thought about that? They would probably not have believed that those two pillars of the old musical establishment would still be standing by in 1999. And in fact how well very nearly all of these composers stand! Quilter's mild drawing-room manners might have been expected to doom him, but the three songs here – the affectionate, easy grace of his Tennyson setting, the restrained passion of his Come away, death and the infectious zest of I will go with my father a-ploughing – endear him afresh and demonstrate once again the wisdom of artists who recognise their own small area of 'personal truth' and refuse to betray it in exchange for a more fashionable 'originality'. Likewise Finzi, whose feeling for Hardy's poems is so modestly affirmed in The dance continued. Does that song, incidentally, make deliberate reference, at 'those songs we sang when we went gipsying', to Jillian of Berry by Warlock (whose originality speaks for itself)? Jillian of Berry itself perhaps calls for more full-bodied, less refined tones than Bostridge's. One could do with a ruddier glow and more rotund fruitiness in the voice. Yet for most of the programme he is not merely a well-suited singer but an artist who brings complete responsiveness to words and music. The haunted desolation of Delius's Twilight Fancies is perfectly caught in the pale hue of the voice which can nevertheless give body and intensity to the frank cry of desire, calming then to pianissimo for the last phrase amid the dim echoes of hunting horns in the piano part. Julius Drake plays with strength of imagination and technical control to match Bostridge's own.

Maria Callas sop

Bellini Norma – Casta diva Bizet Carmen – L'amour est un oiseau rebelle; Près des remparts de Séville; Les tringles des sistres Catalani La Wally – Ebben? ... Ne andrò lontana Donizetti Lucia di Lammermoor – Spargi d'amaro pianto Giordano Andrea Chénier – La mamma morta Gluck Orphée et Eurydice – J'ai perdu mon Eurydice Puccini Gianni Schicchi – O mio babbino caro. La bohème – Sì, mi chiamano Mimì; Donde lieta uscì. Madama Butterfly – Un bel dì vedremo. Tosca – Vissi d'arte Rossini Il barbiere di Siviglia – Una voce poco fa Saint-Saëns Samson et Dalila – Mon coeur s'ouvre à ta voix Verdi La traviata – Ah, fors'è lui; Addio del passato 🄷

Maria Callas sop with various artists
EMI Classics 557050-2 (74 minutes: ADD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included OO

Bellini Norma – Casta diva. La sonnambula – Ah! non credea mirarti Bizet Carmen – L'amour est un oiseau rebelle; Près des remparts de Séville; Les tringles des sistres Catalani La Wally – Ebben? ... Ne andrò lontana G Charpentier Louise – Depuis le jour Cilea Adriana Lecouvreur – Io son l'umile ancella Donizetti Anna Bolena – Al dolce guidami. Lucia di Lammermoor – Spargi d'amaro pianto Giordano Andrea Chénier – La mamma morta Gluck Orphée et Eurydice – J'ai perdu mon Eurydice Gounod Roméo et Juliette – Je veux vivre Massenet Le cid – De cet affreux combat; Pleurez, mes yeux. Manon – Adieu, notre petite table Meyerbeer Dinorah – Ombre légère Mozart Le nozze di Figaro – Porgi, amor Puccini La bohème – Sì, mi chiamano Mimì; Donde lieta uscì. Gianni Schicchi – O mio babbino caro. Madama Butterfly – Un bel dì vedremo. Manon Lescaut – In quelle trine morbide. Tosca – Vissi d'arte. Turandot – Signore, ascolta!; Tu, che di gel sei cinta Rossini Il barbiere di Siviglia – Una voce poco fa Saint-Saëns Samson et Dalila – Printemps qui commence; Mon coeur s'ouvre à ta voix Spontini La vestale – O Nume, tutelar degli infelici Verdi Otello – Ave Maria. Rigoletto – Gualtier Maldè; Caro nome. La traviata – Ah, fors'è lui; Addio del passato. Il trovatore – D'amor sull'ali rosee H
Maria Callas sop with various artists Ⓕ
EMI Classics ② 557062-2 (148 minutes: ADD) OO

The single disc here would seem to come with the subtitle 'Callas sings film', as half the items have been chosen to link with film soundtracks. It may be interesting to learn that 'Vissi d'arte' was used in a film called Copycat or that the Habanera from Carmen now has three film credits to its name, but that is unlikely to sway the confirmed opera-lover. The more important factors will be the generous length of the CD at 74 minutes and its full-price tag, which is optimistic for what is in effect a sampler designed to encourage purchasers to investigate Callas's recordings further.

Of course, there is nothing cut-price about the performances. The 17 tracks on this disc are taken from recordings that made operatic history in the second half of the 20th century. It is particularly heartening to find items from the 1954 Puccini recital disc that Callas made with Serafin, where the singing is perfectly schooled in every detail. The two extracts from the live performance of La traviata in Lisbon are welcome for showing that Callas was as impressive live as on disc, though it is a shame that 'Ah, fors' è lui' is shorn of both its recitative and cabaletta.

Purchasers of the two-disc compilation get all these tracks and about the same number again. With Callas this also means double the range of experience, which would not be the case with every singer: the smouldering sexuality of Dalila's 'Printemps qui commence' is unlike anything on the single disc and so is the virginal purity of Gilda's 'Caro nome' from Rigoletto. Hearing early and late recordings mixed up sometimes means a jolt in the quality of voice we hear, as when the impeccable young Callas of Dinorah's 'Ombra leggiera' gives way to the unsteady Waltz song from Gounod's Roméo et Juliette. But whatever Callas sang, there were moments that she brought to life unlike anybody else. We may have technically less fallible singers today, but we do not have personalities like hers, and that is ultimately to the music's loss. To judge from the high percentage of French operas represented here and the Paris-centric notes, the set was planned primarily for French buyers. Any compilation of Callas, however, will appeal to everybody.

Emma Calvé sop

The Complete 1902 G&T, 1920 Pathé and 'Mapleson Cylinder' Recordings H
Opera arias – Amadis de Gaulle, Carmen, Cavalleria rusticana, Les contes d'Hoffmann, Le domino noir, Faust, Galathée, Hamlet, Manon, Mignon, Mireille, Norma, Le nozze di Figaro, Le pardon de Ploëmel, La perle du Brésil, La périchole, Philémon et Baucis, Pré aux clercs, Roméo et Juliette, Sapho and La vivandière; songs by Beethoven, Bland, De Lara, Foster, Gounod, Hahn, Key, Massenet, Thomas and Traditional
Emma Calvé, Cécille Merguillier sops with various artists
Marston mono ② 52013-2 (139 minutes: ADD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1902-20

In the alphabetical index of great singers, Calvé follows Callas, and the sequence is suggestive. Both were actress-singers who brought revelations of opera-as-theatre to the audiences of their time; both acted with the voice (as contemporary accounts of Calvé tell and as we know to be so with Callas); and both were strong personalities among the most famous women in the world. One sad and striking difference is that Callas's recordings testify amply to this, while Calvé's are inadequate in repertoire as well as technical conditions to do her justice. Yet much is caught, right from those extraordinary cylinders made at performances in the Metropolitan in 1902 where, among all that is lost, her high-notes can be heard ringing out well into the house above the orchestra, with a tone sufficiently distinctive for us to associate it with the studio recordings made later that same year. They in turn are reinforced by the amazingly vivid series made for Pathé in 1920, by which year the singer was in her early sixties. The quality of copies used and results obtained is fine. There is a second singer here and her presence adds greatly to its attractions. Cécile Merguillier recorded for Pathé and Edison in 1904 and 1905 when virtually in retirement though only in her early forties, and still singing with fresh voice, assured technique and captivating style.

A light soprano, she was singing Philine in Mignon in 1887, the night the old Opéra-Comique burnt down. Her solos from Mireille and Philémon et Baucis are especially delightful, and as far as can be ascertained, this is the first time a full sequence of her records has been collected on disc.

Enrico Caruso ten

Complete Recordings, Volume 5, 1908-1910 🄷
Franchetti Germania – Studenti udite; Non, non chiuder gli occhi vaghi Geehl For you alone Gounod Faust – O merveille![a]; Seigneur Dieu, que vois-je![b]; Eh! quoi! toujours seule?[b]; Il se fait tard![c]; O nuit d'amour[c]; Mon coeur est pénétré d'épouvante![c]; Attends! Voici la rue[c]; Que voulez-vous, messieurs?[d]; Alerte! alerte![e] Leoncavallo Pagliacci – No, Pagliaccio non son Mascagni Cavalleria rusticana[g] – O Lola ch'ai di latti fior di spino Ponchielli La Gioconda – Cielo e mar! Puccini Madama Butterfly – Amore o grillo; Non ve l'avevo detto?[f] Tosti Addio Verdi Il trovatore – Mal reggendo[h]; Se m'ami ancor[h]. Aida – Già i sacerdoti[h]; Misero appien mi festi[h]
[bce]Geraldine Farrar sop [b]Gabrielle Gilibert mez [h]Louise Homer contr Enrico Caruso ten [df]Antonio Scotti bar [abde]Marcel Journet bass [g]Francis Lapitino hp Victor Orchestra
Naxos Historical 8 110720 (79 minutes: AAD) Ⓢ
Recorded 1910

'O merveille!' as Caruso sings in the first phrase of all. And what a miracle it is, after all. To take that opening phrase for a start: so gentle, beautifully rounded and expressive (the consonants made to work, the portamento like a sigh of wonder). And then in the quartet how well he shows himself as an artist mindful of others in ensemble. How shapely his phrases in the Prison scene, how incisive his tones in the Duel trio! Also a major pleasure is to hear again his colleagues Farrar and Journet, both of them singing with a distinction worthy of their great partner.The 1910 sessions (none of them date back to 1908, notwithstanding the album title) also included the solo from Otello, deeply felt as though he had it already worked into the system. Lovely also to hear the 'Cielo e mar' and the Germania solos still preserving so much of his younger, less weighty and heroic self. The sound generally is a degree fuller and smoother than on the rival Pearl set. Another advantage is that the excerpts are separately tracked.

Caruso in Opera, Volume 2 🄷
Arias – L'Africaine, Andrea Chenier, La bohème (Leoncavallo and Puccini), Carmen, Cavalleria rusticana, Don Pasquale, Eugene Onegin, La favorita, Les Huguenots, Macbeth, Martha, Nero, La reine de Saba, Rigoletto, Tosca and Il trovatore
Enrico Caruso ten with various artists
Nimbus Prima Voce mono NI7866 Ⓢ
(79 minutes: ADD). Recorded 1905-20

The 1906 recording of 'M'apparì' from Martha comes first, and it introduces an aspect of Caruso's singing that rarely finds a place in the critical commentaries: his subtlety. Partly, it's rhythmic. The move-on and pull-back seems such an instinctive process that we hardly notice it (though no doubt a modern conductor would – and check it immediately). It makes all the difference to the emotional life of the piece, the feeling of involvement and spontaneous development. Then there is the phrasing, marvellously achieved at the melody's reprise. The play of louder and softer tones, too, has every delicacy of fine graduation; and just as masterly is the more technical covering and (rare) opening of notes at the passaggio. An edition of the score which brought out all these features of Caruso's singing would be a densely annotated document. It would, even so, be a simplification, for accompanying all this is the dramatic and musical feeling, which defies analysis – and, of course, the voice. That voice! You may feel you know all these records and hardly need to play them, yet there is scarcely an occasion when the beauty of it does not thrill with a sensation both old and new (the first 'Ah!' is one of recognition, the second of fresh wonder). So it is with nearly all of the items here: all, in fact, save the Eugene Onegin aria, which remains external, and the late L'Africaine recording with its saddening evidence of deterioration. The transfers are excellent.

Tracey Chadwell sop

Tracey Chadwell's Song Book
R R Bennett A Garland for Marjory Fleming[a] Cresswell Words for Music[a] Farquhar Six Songs of Women[a] Joubert The Turning Wheel, Op 95[a] Lefanu I am Bread[a]. A Penny for a Song[a] Lilburn Three Songs[a] Lumsdaine A Norfolk Songbook[b] Maconchy Sun, Moon and Stars[a]. Three Songs[a] Whitehead Awa Herea[a]
Tracey Chadwell sop [a]Pamela Lidiard pf [b]John Turner recs
British Music Society ② BMS420/1CD Ⓕ
(141 minutes: ADD). Texts included
Recorded 1988-94

Tracey Chadwell, a soprano of exceptional gifts and intelligence, died in her mid-thirties early in 1996 after a long and courageous battle with leukaemia. Nicola Lefanu, who contributes an affectionate note to this anthology of recordings from the BBC archives, was at her last concert, three weeks before her death, and says that 'she looked and sounded ravishing'. She always did, and apart from its value as a memorial to a much loved and deeply missed artist and as a collection of fine songs (many of them written for her), this pair of discs could stand as a model to other singers in the expert management of a voice, in fearless vocal resource and joyful adventurousness in choice of repertory. She had admirable taste: there is no music here that needs special pleading, and her advocacy of all of it is compelling. Most of it is unfamiliar, much of it not recorded before, so it is probably helpful to single out a few particular pleasures: Lefanu's haunting, intimate and subtle I am Bread easily sustaining its seven-minute duration, not least because of Chadwell's care over line and florid detail; the elegant talent of David Farquhar, making a simple but memorable thing of Sir Philip Sidney's 'My true love hath my heart and I have his'; the strong drama and toughly strong melody of Gillian Whitehead's Awa Herea, using texts in Maori and English, and making huge demands of the singer's technique as well as her imagination; Richard Rodney Bennett's beautiful settings of the poems of a child who died at eight years old (Chadwell's tender line in 'Sweet Isabell' is deeply moving here). She brings a wonderfully pure tone and limpid line to Elizabeth Maconchy's Thomas Traherne settings. Pamela Lidiard, her regular accompanist, is an ideally sensitive partner and the recordings are excellent.

Boris Christoff bass

Opera Arias 🄷
Don Carlo, Don Giovanni, Ernani, La forza del destino, Iphigénie en Aulide, Mefistofele, Nabucco, Norma, Simon Boccanegra, La sonnambula and I vespri siciliani
Boris Christoff bass with various artists
EMI Références mono 565500-2 Ⓜ
(80 minutes: ADD). Recorded 1949-55

The grieving king, the patriarchal priest, the smirking demon: these are all expected presences in Christoff's gallery of vivid characters, and one might well extend the list mentally by a dozen or so more before thinking of Leporello. Christoff sang very little Mozart but the Catalogue aria in Don Giovanni featured in his concert programmes. It is a marvellous performance, and alone provides a very good reason for buying this disc. Almost as unlooked for may be the Count's aria in La sonnambula, sung with affection and a nearly perfect legato. Warmth of tone perhaps is wanting, in both that and the 'Infelice' (Ernani), but there is certainly no lack of emotional warmth in the fine solos from I vespri siciliani and Simon Boccanegra.

Philip's great aria in Don Carlo ends with a too overt and prolonged tearfulness (avoided in later versions), but this recording is still among the supremely impressive mementos of its era. It comes from one of Christoff's first sessions in the studios, and is strikingly natural and lifelike, as are all the 78s heard here. In the 1955 recordings one is more aware of the microphone: for example, in his most authoritative vein, Christoff is splendidly represented by the Gluck aria (Iphigénie en Aulide) made in 1951, whereas the same magnificence is present in the excerpts from Nabucco (1955) but just slightly diminished by seeming to be made somewhat larger than life.

When all is over, however, the first item demands a replay: that Catalogue song of Leporello's. Gaiety, rhythm, even a chuckle, a swelling grandeur in the portrayal of the 'maiestosa', a daintiness in 'la piccina': it is all there, and with it a certain suavity of style, and, rarer still, the elegant phrases of 'Nella bionda' sung with scrupulous legato. This disc goes into the 'Essential Christoff Collection' forthwith.

Régine Crespin sop

Berlioz Les nuits d'été Ravel Shéhérazade[a]
Debussy Trois chansons de Bilitis[b]
Poulenc Banalités[b] – Chansons d'Orkenise; Hôtel. La courte paille[b] – Le carafon; La reine de coeur. Chansons villageoises[b] – Les gars qui vont à la fête. Deux poèmes de Louis Aragon[b]
Régine Crespin sop [b]John Wustman pf [a]Suisse Romande Orchestra / Ernest Ansermet
Decca Legends 460 973-2DM (68 minutes: ADD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included. Recorded 1963-67

Some recordings withstand the test of time and become acknowledged classics. This is one of them. Régine Crespin's voluptuous tone, her naturally accented French and her feeling for the inner meaning of the songs in the Berlioz and Ravel cycles are everywhere evident. Better than most single interpreters of the Berlioz, she manages to fulfil the demands of the very different songs, always alive to verbal nuances. In the Ravel, she is gorgeously sensuous, not to say sensual, with the right timbre for Ravel's enigmatic writing. The Debussy and Poulenc songs on this disc enhance its worth. Crespin offers an extremely evocative, perfumed account of the Debussy pieces and is ideally suited to her choice of Poulenc, of which her interpretation of 'Hôtel' is a classic. Ansermet and his orchestra, though not quite note-perfect, are right in timbre and colour for these rewarding cycles. The sound is reasonable given the age of the recording.

David Daniels counterten

Sento amor
Gluck Telemaco – Se parentro alla nera foresta. Orfeo ed Euridice – Che puro ciel!; Ahimè! Dove trascorsi? ... Che farò senza Euridice? Handel Tolomeo – Inumano fratel ... Stille amare. Partenope – Rosmira, oh! Dio! ... Sento amor; ch'io parta?; Furibondo spira il vento Mozart Ascanio in Alba – Ah di sì nobil alma. Mitridate, re di Ponto – Venga pur, minacci; Vadasi ... oh ciel ...Già dagli occhi. Ombra felice! ... Io ti lascio, K255
David Daniels counterten Orchestra of the Age of Enlightenment / Harry Bicket
Virgin Classics Veritas 545365-2 Ⓕ
(62 minutes: DDD). Texts and translations included
Recorded 1999 ●

Curiously, the music on this disc is presented in reverse chronological order. Any slight reservations that one might feel at the beginning or in the middle are swept away when it comes to the end, for David Daniels is a magnificent interpreter of Handel and sings these arias with a freedom, a passion and a beauty of tone that he does not quite achieve in the later music. The dramatic recitative 'Inumano fratel', from Tolomeo, is declaimed with great force; Daniels uses the words as well as the notes to produce a performance of due rhetorical power, and both here and in the lamenting aria that follows his tone is ringing and finely focused. In the first of the Partenope arias the detail of Handel's complex line is etched with exemplary clarity; the second, another song of despair (as the hero Arsace thinks himself abandoned by his beloved), is done softly, with much expressive intensity; and the third is a tour de force, an angry piece full of rapid semiquavers thrown off with vitality and precision. This is model Handel singing, at one with the idiom and its expressive language. Much of the continuo accompaniment is assigned, happily, to a lute. Gluck's 'Che farò' is finely sung, full and warm in tone, and with some very sweet legato, but is perhaps a shade objective and sober for a character allegedly in desperation. The wonderment of 'Che puro ciel!' is better caught by both Daniels and the orchestra. Of the Mozart pieces, the Ascanio in Alba aria is done with due vigour. In the concert aria one might wish for a rather sharper attack than a countertenor can readily provide, but something of the excitement of this piece is certainly caught. The two arias for Farnace from Mitridate that begin the disc are cleanly sung, with some happy touches of phrasing (particularly at the little ornamental figures in 'Venga pur', done with a nice hint of wit), delicate, warm tone and sensible, effective cadenzas, but the total result does seem slightly pallid for Mozart. But this is in sum a very enjoyable recital, of appealing music, done by one of the most distinguished countertenors.

Geraldine Farrar sop

Geraldine Farrar in French Opera H
Opera Arias and Duets – Carmen, Les contes d'Hoffmann, Manon, Mignon, Roméo et Juliette and Thaïs
Geraldine Farrar sop with various artists
Nimbus Prima Voce mono NI7872 Ⓢ
(79 minutes: ADD). Recorded 1908-21

This is a lovely addition to the Prima Voce series. Farrar's Carmen appears as a model of effectiveness within the restraints of good musical and dramatic behaviour. The 'Séguedille' is sheer enchantment (irresistible promise in that breathed 'je l'aimerai' and the dreamily provocative reprise of 'Près des remparts'), while in the 'Chanson bohème' we catch the energy of her personality as well as the carrying power of her by no means robust lyric soprano. These are all cherishable records, of the kind that on some pleasant desultory evening with the gramophone one will feel a prompting to take down from the shelves.

Seasoned collectors should not necessarily assume that they already have everything on the disc: there is, for instance, the unpublished 'Je veux vivre' (Roméo et Juliette) from 1911, a performance of surprising delicacy and charm. The Prelude to Act 4 is there, too, in a recording from 1921 said to be by the orchestra of La Scala conducted by Toscanini, one of those legendary sessions which put him off the gramophone for a decade. If he had heard the results as cleanly defined as they are here, he might have thought again.

Renée Fleming sop

The Beautiful Voice
Dvořák Songs my mother taught me, B104 No 4 Cano Luna – Epilogo Canteloube Chants d'Auvergne – Baïlèro Charpentier Louise – Depuis le jour Flotow Martha – 'Tis the last rose of summer Gounod Faust – O Dieu! que de bijoux! ... Ah! je ris Korngold Die tote Stadt – Glück, das mir verblieb Lehár Die lustige Witwe – Es lebt eine Vilja Massenet Manon – Obéissons quand leur voix appelle Orff Carmina Burana – In trutina Puccini La rondine – Chi il bel sogno di Doretta Rachmaninov Vocalise, Op 34 No 14 (arr Braden) J Strauss II Die Fledermaus – Klänge der Heimat R Strauss Morgen, Op 27 No 4
Renée Fleming sop English Chamber Orchestra / Jeffrey Tate
Decca 458 858-2DH (70 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included. Recorded 1997 ●

Sweet tooth, prepare for action. What does Lamb say in his Chapter on Ears? Something about piling honey upon sugar and sugar upon honey. The programme capitulates in stages. It begins well, sharpening the palate with Marguerite's Jewel Song after Louise's erotic musings. Soon we are swaying dreamily with the 'Viljalied' and then reclining in the drowsy sunshine and languid trickle of Canteloube's 'Baïlèro'. Louise, in this performance, cares for words and feelings as well as tone, Marguerite relishes her new role of 'coquette', and Manon plays lovingly with the consciousness of her own beauty. Throughout, the singing provides pleasures that are not simply those of 'the beautiful voice', as the title has it. Occasionally, it is true, one wishes for a more athletic style (the creamy Caballé-Te Kanawa associations spiced with a dash of Ninon Vallin perhaps). But this is 'the beautiful voice', no doubt about that, exercised with skill and heard in what will appeal widely as a programme of captivatingly beautiful music.

Great Opera Scenes
Britten Peter Grimes – Embroidery in childhood[b] Dvořák Rusalka – O silver moon Mozart Le nozze di Figaro – Porgi, amor; E Susanna non vien! ... Dove sono R Strauss Daphne – Ich komme, grünende Brüder Tchaikovsky Eugene Onegin – Letter scene[a] Verdi Otello – Era più calmo? ... Mia madre aveva ... Piangea cantando ... Ave Maria[a]

Renée Fleming sop [a]Larissa Diadkova mez [b]Jonathan Summers bar London Symphony Orchestra / Sir Georg Solti
Decca 455 760-2DH (72 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included. Recorded 1996

Here's a singer who has reached complete maturity as an artist, revelling in her vocal and interpretative powers. To the warm and vibrant voice is added an imagination that places Fleming in the first rank among today's lyric sopranos. The eclectic, ambitious choice of programme allows us to hear every aspect of her art. She is exactly the impulsive Tatyana, the girl's unreasoned ardour pouring out here in a stream of richly varied tone and feeling. Desdemona's Willow song is full of foreboding, also full of lovely singing, the repeated 'Cantiamo' voiced with precision of tone and timing, notes fined away with the utmost sensitivity. Ellen Orford's Embroidery aria is sung beautifully, the high B flat and A flat on 'Now' taken perfectly pianissimo after the forte A. These scenes benefit enormously from being placed in context, allowing Fleming to fit into the relevant situation. Diadkova is an idiomatic, responsive Filipyevna, and she makes the most of Emilia's few phrases. Summers is a wise and experienced Balstrode. All in all, Fleming lays claim here to Te Kanawa territory, and proves a worthy successor. More than Dame Kiri, she identifies with each character and moulds her voice to the woman in question. For Sir Georg this is obviously a labour of love, nowhere more so than in the postlude to Daphne, most sensuously done; he and the LSO provide worthy support for their superb soloist. The recording is faultless, capturing voice and orchestra in ideal balance.

Awards 1999

I Want Magic

Barber Vanessa – He has come…Do not utter a word, Anatol Bernstein Candide – Glitter and be gay Floyd Susannah – Ain't it a pretty night; The trees on the mountains Gershwin Porgy and Bess – Summertime; My man's gone now
Herrmann Wuthering Heights – I have dreamt
Menotti The Medium – Monica's Waltz
D Moore The Ballad of Baby Doe – The Letter Song
Previn A Streetcar Named Desire – I want magic!
Stravinsky The Rake's Progress – No word from Tom…I go to him
Renée Fleming sop Metropolitan Opera Orchestra, New York / James Levine
Decca 460 567-2DH (58 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included. Recorded 1998 ○○○

This survey of operas old and new reinforces the feeling that the current generation of star singers in the USA is making an effort to explore home-grown repertory. Fleming's voice is sumptuous, her lower register especially sounds so warmly resonant that it is reminiscent of Leontyne Price in her glory days. Fleming shows herself equal to every mood; only at the end of 'Glitter and be gay' is there a false moment when she rather overdoes the brittle laughter. What beautiful tunes there are here, including the waltz song from The Medium and 'Ain't it a pretty night' from Susannah. This was recorded before Fleming took part in the world première of André Previn's A Streetcar Named Desire in San Francisco and her programme ends with a sneak preview of that. 'I want magic!' is Blanche's philosophy of life, justifying her flights of fancy. Among the other items, Fleming makes the extract from Wuthering Heights sound positively Mahleresque, and Anne's great aria from The Rake's Progress – 'officially' an American opera, Stravinsky, Auden and Kallman at least all being resident there when it was written – suits her surprisingly well. Levine and the Met Orchestra provide idiomatic accompaniment.

Bruce Ford ten

Three Rossini Tenors

Rossini La donna del lago – Alla ragion deh rieda; Qual pena in me. Otello – No, no temer, serena; Non m'inganno, al mio rivale; Ah! vieni, nel tuo sangue … Ahimè fermate … Che fiero punto è questo. Ricciardo e Zoraide – Donala a questo core. Armida – Come l'aurette placide; In quale aspetto imbelle
Nelly Miricioiu sop Paul Austin Kelly, Bruce Ford, William Matteuzzi tens Geoffrey Mitchell Choir; Philharmonia Orchestra, Academy of St Martin in the Fields / David Parry
Opera Rara ORR204 (70 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included. Recorded 1996

'Only three?' Rossini might have remarked. During the years 1815-22 which this recital so thrillingly celebrates, Rossini had four, possibly five, world-class tenors at his disposal. Still, it is a good marketing ploy, with Opera Rara's three tenors turning in bravura performances in repertoire which the three tenors have only occasionally flirted with. It says much for Rossini's guile, and the guile of the programming, that one comes away from this recital, not bored or sated, but thrilled and satisfied. Amusingly, there is no actual trio for tenors until the last track, the astonishingly beautiful scene in Armida where Carlo and Ubaldo hold the adamantine shield up to Rinaldo's gaze and, in so doing, confront him with an image of his own baseness. Rossini's leading heroic tenor was Andrea Nozzari. Bruce Ford sings the Nozzari roles here, with Paul Austin Kelly and William Matteuzzi taking turn and turn about with the more purely brilliant roles (Uberto, Rodrigo, Ricciardo) Rossini wrote for the celebrated tenore contraltino in the Naples company, Giovanni David. All three acquit themselves superbly. To have Nelly Miricioiu on hand to sing Elena and Desdemona is an added bonus. David Parry and the Philharmonia Orchestra give performances of great dash and beauty. The recording places the orchestra rather obviously to the rear of the singers, but that is no bad thing. Slightly more distracting is the fact that the Rossini tenor is clearly a difficult creature for the microphone to decipher and absorb, particularly en masse. Thus, while Matteuzzi and Kelly are allowed to coo into the microphones like a pair of sucking doves, Bruce Ford is cast more in the role of the blackguard outsider, never quite as well forward, the sound never quite as 'clean'. The insert-notes are altogether excellent.

Cristina Gallardo-Domâs sop

Bel Sogno – Italian Arias and Scenes
Bellini I Capuleti e i Montecchi – Eccomi in lieta vesta; Oh! quante volte
Catalani La Wally – Ebben?…Ne andrò lontana Cilèa Adriana Lecouvreur – Ecco…Io son l'umile ancella
Donizetti Anna Bolena – Piangete voi?; Al dolce guidami Puccini Madama Butterfly – Un bel dì vedremo. La bohème – Sì, mi chiamino Mimì; Donde lieta uscì. Manon Lescaut – In quelle trine morbide. Suor Angelica – Senza mamma. Gianni Schicchi – O mio babbino caro Verdi La traviata – È strano!…Ah, fors'è lui…Sempre libera[a]; Teneste la promessa; Addio, del passato. Simon Boccanegra – Come in quest'ora bruna. Otello – Ave Maria
Cristina Gallardo-Domâs sop [a]Jonas Kaufmann ten
Munich Radio Orchestra / Maurizio Barbacini
Teldec 8573-86440-2 (78 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ ●

Gallardo-Domâs, in a wide-ranging recital, proves that she need not fear comparison with any of her contemporaries and little from the best of her predecessors. By dint of her unimpeachable musicality, the sheer beauty of her truly Italianate tone and her exemplary way with words, she makes every track on this generously filled recital an individual experience to treasure – and of how few singers can that be said? As Butterfly she is suitably intense and lonely, her Mimì is at once fragile and determined – phrase after phrase of both her solos seems to achieve some kind of ideal. Manon's 'In quelle trine morbide' has all the necessary attention to detail, equalling an unforgettable performance by the young Tebaldi, and 'O mio babbino caro' is just the charming, unaffected solo it ought to be. In Verdi, the singer has been rightly admired as Violetta, one of her calling-cards, in many noted houses, and shows why by her identification with the woman's plight. There is an intensity of utterance combined with a care over phrasing and dynamic that is very special. With good orchestral support and a faithful, well-balanced recording, this CD is surely one that is going to please even the most fastidious admirer of the soprano voice.

Amelita Galli-Curci sop

Opera Arias and Songs H
Arias from Il barbiere di Siviglia, Dinorah, Don Pasquale, Lakmé, Lucia di Lammermoor, Manon Lescaut (Auber), Martha, Le nozze di Figaro, I Puritani, Rigoletto, Roméo et Juliette, La sonnambula and La traviata; songs by Alvarez, Benedict, Bishop, Buzzi-Peccia, David, Delibes, Giordani, Grieg, Massenet, Proch, Samuels, Seppilli
Amelita Galli-Curci sop with various artists
Romophone mono ② 81003-2 (159 minutes: ADD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1916-20

In Gramophone in 1923 the Editor wrote: 'One of the most solid grounds I have for facing the coming of old age with equanimity is the reasonable hope that I shall spend it listening to as many records of la diva Galli-Curci's voice as there are of Caruso's'. The purity of her voice was certainly a delight; it was at that time firm and even throughout its wide compass; and her fluency in scalework, precision in staccato, and ability to swell and diminish on a long-held high note were exceptional. She was an artist who could phrase and nuance exquisitely and who, within the boundaries of a more or less pretty joy and sadness, could be quite poignantly expressive. In the years of her greatest fame and success, roughly the decade from 1916 to 1926, her operatic repertoire was the standard one for the 'coloratura' soprano, and it is well represented by her records. What they also have, making them treasurable beyond anything that such a summary might suggest, is a personal flavour, a caress, a way of making words sound like water purling gently on a summer's afternoon, a dreaminess that can awaken to fun and affection though she could also flatten rather sadly in pitch. The transfers on this release, which concentrates on her recordings up to 1920, are of fine quality and make for a most enjoyable disc.

Lesley Garrett sop

Soprano in Red
Chabrier L'étoile – O petite étoile; Je suis Lazuli!
Coward Bitter Sweet – If love were all
Heuberger Der Opernball – Im chambre séparée
Lehár Zigeunerliebe – Hör' ich Cymbalklänge. Friederike – Warum hast du mich wachgeküsst? Die lustige Witwe – Es lebt eine Vilja, ein Waldmägdelein[a] Novello Perchance to dream – We'll gather lilacs. The Dancing Years – Waltz of my heart Offenbach La belle Hélène – On me nomme Hélène la Blonde. Orphée aux enfers – J'ai vu le Dieu Bacchus[a]; Ce bal est original[a] Romberg The New Moon – Softly, as in a morning sunrise; Lover, come back to me J Strauss II (arr Benatzky) Casanova – Nuns' Chorus and Laura's Song[a]
Sullivan The Contrabandista – Only the night wind sighs alone Lesley Garrett sop [a]Crouch End Festival Chorus; Royal Philharmonic Concert Orchestra / James Holmes
Silva Screen Classics SILKTVCD1 Ⓕ
(60 minutes: DDD). All items sung in English
Recorded 1995

Lesley Garrett has won herself a huge following of those who respond to her straightforward, unaffected vocalising, to the clarity and brightness of her voice and its ringing top notes. What also appeals about Garrett's recordings is the attention paid to less familiar material and the quest for authenticity of period style. Both facets are fully evident in this collection. The eager entreaties of Laura's Song from Casanova, the bright expressiveness of 'If love were all' and the sheer joyfulness of 'Waltz of my heart' (complete with piano contribution) are highlights. Especially gratifying, though, are the rarities. In the pedlar Lazuli's two numbers from Chabrier's L'étoile, Garrett's clarity of diction shows off Jeremy Sams's lyrics to fine effect and she should certainly win over the Sullivan faction with the first ever recording of an engaging little number from the pre-Gilbert operetta The Contrabandista. In Novello's 'We'll gather lilacs' double tracking permits Garrett to duet with herself. Ensemble and momentum go curiously adrift at the choral entries in Offenbach's 'Hymn to Bacchus', but this detracts only a little from another delightful Garrett collection.

Angela Gheorghiu sop

Casta Diva

Bellini Norma – Casta Diva[a]; Ah! bello, a me ritorna[a]. I puritani – Qui la voce sua soave… Ah! rendetemi la speme; Vien, diletto. La sonnambula – Ah! non credea mirarti Donizetti Anna Bolena – Piangete voi?[a]… Al dolce guidami castel natio. Lucia di Lammermoor – Regnava nel silenzio; Quando rapito in estasi Rossini Guglielmo Tell – S'allontanano alfine!…Selva opaca. Il barbiere di Siviglia – Una voce poco fa…Io sono docile. L'assedio di Corinto – L'ora fatal s'appressa…Giusto ciel! in tal periglio[a]

Angela Gheorghiu sop [a]Chorus of the Royal Opera, Covent Garden; London Symphony Orchestra / Evelino Pidò

EMI 557163-2 (61 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ

Texts and translations included ●●

Once again we have to count our blessings. As with the recent recital by Karita Mattila (Erato – reviewed further on), we are a lucky generation, in this respect at least, that here we have sopranos with such purity of tone, evenness of production and scrupulous musicianship; and with Gheorghiu's recital it is rare that ghost-voices of singers from the past enter the listening mind clamouring to be brought out for comparison. If they do so at all it is in the solos from Il barbiere di Siviglia and Lucia di Lammermoor. Gheorghiu, one could say, is not a Rosina: in the famous cavatina she catches the determination of those 'lo giurai's and 'vincerò's but not the fun-loving trickster behind them. As Lucia, more surprisingly, she simply fails to make it clear that this is a ghost story with blood in it.

Otherwise we are in the land of heart's desire. In 'Casta diva' and the other Bellini solos, Gheorghiu finds (better than most) the right balance between purity of line and the inflections needful for expression. In the aria from I puritani the phrases are finely bound yet movingly 'inner'; and then, with 'Vien, diletto', comes a marvellously vivid change, the face lighting up with eagerness located in the bright vowels and pointed rhythms. The scales, trills and ornaments are also a delight, whether as sheer technical accomplishment or as heighteners of emotion. Perhaps listeners should be warned that, although Lucia's cabaletta sports a high D and Elvira's an E flat, these are not (as they would be with Sutherland) crowning events: the 'event', so to speak, is the whole performance.

My World

Brediceanu Mult mă'ntreabă inima Brodszky Be my love Cavadia Umbra Delibes Les filles de Cadix Dvořák Songs my mother taught me, B104 No 4 Falla El paño moruno Grieg Solveig's Song Hadjidakis Pai efiye to treno Leoncavallo Mattinata Liszt Oh! quand je dors, S282 J Martini Plaisir d'amour Mezzetti Cântec se sirenă Mitake Kawa no Nagare no yô ni Montsalvatge Canto negro Ovalle Azulão Parisotti Se tu m'ami, C xxii, 68 Poulenc Les chemins de l'amour Respighi Nebbie Satie Je te veux Schubert Ständchen, D957 No 4 Schumann Myrthen, Op 25 – No 1, Widmung; No 24, Du bist wie eine Blume R Strauss Zueignung, Op 10 No 1 Sup Guriwoon Guemgang San Traditional Durme, kerido hijico (arr Behar)

Angela Gheorghiu sop Malcolm Martineau pf

Decca 458 360-2DH (75 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ

Texts and translations included. Recorded 1997 ●

This eclectic programme makes a welcome change from recorded recitals devoted to one composer, one genre. Gheorghiu avers, in a frank note, that she thrives on change, loves to be in different countries and experience different idioms so she 'wanted to create a unique recital programme that would reflect all these aspects of my interests'. She certainly has done that: her generous choice boxes the compass from classical through German, Spanish, Italian and French song to ethnic pieces. She also points out that many of the items exploit the warm qualities of her lower voice: the haunting pieces, semi-popular, from the far east, for instance; even more the Greek popular song. Still better are the three songs from her native Romania. Then there's Ovalle's insinuating Azulão, chosen apparently at the suggestion of Martineau, the singer's creative partner, and sung in that soft-grained manner peculiar to Gheorghiu. She ends with a bravura account of the Lanza favourite Be my love, the slight accent in the English almost an advantage. Similarly her indeterminate German makes her three Lieder sound unidiomatic, but each of these love-songs is given with such conviction that the customary criteria for judgement can for once be set aside. Her French is much better; in any case the erotic charge of the Satie and Poulenc pieces is amply felt. There's much else to commend: the elegiac quality in Respighi's infinitely sad Nebbie contrasting with the earthy high spirits of Montsalvatge's Canto negro and the Delibes song, and the wistful touch in the famous Dvořák. With an admirably faithful recording as a bonus, this ought to be a runaway success.

Angela Gheorghiu & Roberto Alagna

Opera Arias and Duets
Berlioz Les troyens – Nuit d'ivresse![ab] Bernstein West Side Story – Only You ... Tonight, it all began tonight[ab] G Charpentier Louise – Depuis le jour[a] Donizetti Anna Bolena – Al dolce guidami[a]. Don Pasquale – Tornami a dir[ab] Gounod Faust – Il se fait tard! ... O nuit d'amour[ab] Mascagni L'amico Fritz – Suzel, buon di ... Tutto tace[ab] Massenet Manon – Je suis seul! ... Ah! fuyez, douce image[b]; Toi! Vous! ... N'est-ce plus ma main[ab] Offenbach La belle Hélène – Au mont Ida[b] Puccini La bohème – O soave fanciulla[ab]
[a]Angela Gheorghiu sop [b]Roberto Alagna ten
Orchestra of the Royal Opera House, Covent Garden / Richard Armstrong
EMI 556117-2 (61 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included. Recorded 1995 ●

Ideally matched, the two young lyric artists of our day who have most taken the hearts and hopes of public and critics sing here in a programme that is both aptly and imaginatively selected. It ranges quite widely over the French and Italian repertoires, always combining instant satisfaction with a wish for more. The Cherry duet from L'amico Fritz comes first, and the voices have just the right freshness for it, the soprano warm-toned, the tenor elegant and cleanly defined; the style too is charming, natural and mutually responsive. Then with the excerpts from Manon they are not only well suited but show already a real dramatic impulse in their duet, again with its developments so well felt and understood. The Garden scene works unusual magic. The solos provide welcome opportunities: Gheorghiu, delightful in 'Depuis le jour', is even more so in the aria from Anna Bolena, exquisitely phrased and shaded as though it were the slow movement of a sonata by Mozart. 'Ah! fuyez, douce image' opens with the softness associated from long ago with Smirnov and Muratore; Alagna never forgets what he is singing about, is thrilling on his high B flats and finely controlled in the concluding diminuendo. His Mount Ida song from La belle Hélène has panache and humour, a deliciously promising pianissimo start to the last verse and a good robust C thrown in before he finishes. And then, inspiration on somebody's part, there is West Side Story. 'Tonight' has never been better sung, and it also brings us to the other element in this recital – the playing of the Covent Garden orchestra under Richard Armstrong. In this, they make us realise afresh how distinctively flavoured (in harmony and orchestration) is Bernstein's marvellous score: the duet is intensely moving, yet the rhythm is kept strong and there is no sugar-coating or melting into slush. Repeatedly, in Gounod and Bernstein as in Mascagni and Puccini, one reacts with an 'I'd never noticed that before' or simply a smile or sigh of pleasure in the sound.

Beniamino Gigli ten

The Complete HMV Recordings, 1918-32 🄷
Opera arias and duets – L'amico Fritz, La bohème, Cavalleria rusticana, Faust, La favorita, Fedora, La Gioconda, Iris, Lodoletta, Mefistofele, Les pêcheurs de perles, Stabat mater (Rossini), Tosca; songs by Cannio, de Curtis, Niedermeyer, Schubert, Sullivan and Tosti
Beniamino Gigli ten with various artists
Romophone mono ② 82011-2 (139 minutes: ADD) Ⓜ
Recorded 1918-19 and 1931-2 ●

The first of these two CDs enshrines the golden youth of Gigli, and therefore some of the most beautiful tenor sounds ever committed to disc. Listen to the three extracts from La Gioconda – the Act 1 encounter with Barnaba, 'Cielo e mar' and the love duet with Laura made at the first sessions in Milan in 1918 – and imagine yourself with the audiences when the singer had one of his earliest successes as Enzo; also enjoy the honeyed, mellifluous timbre, the homogeneous tone, the fluid delivery, the enthusiastic attack that must have enthralled Gigli's contemporaries. The ease and naturalness of the sound still have the power to amaze the ear, as they do in such a dreamy, sweet account of 'Apri la tua finestra' from Mascagni's Iris. Then in 'Spirto gentil' (La favorita), the subtle, suave way Gigli moves into the reprise has surely never been equalled, let alone surpassed. Pieces that he repeated later – the arias of Cavaradossi and Faust, the Act 1 duet from La bohème, for instance – are here done with fewer of the maddening if endearing traits that informed the later recordings. Faust was not yet in his repertory, but the aria and even more the Garden Duet with the estimable Maria Zamboni are filled with the kind of immediate, open-hearted passion that is the hallmark of all Gigli's records. A pity he has such an acid-toned partner in the Cherry Duet from L'amico Fritz because he is perfectly suited by the role of the shy Korbus.

Six tracks into the second disc we are carried forward 12 years to 1931, when Gigli returned to HMV from his spell with Victor. This is the fully-fledged Gigli with which collectors will be most familiar, the voice more mature, the style a deal coarsened. Yet who can resist Tosti's Addio or Sullivan's The Lost Chord (conducted by Barbirolli), both sung in delightfully accented English, or even his outrageously self-indulgent account of the Dream from Manon, in Italian? The 1931 coupling of the arias from Faust and La bohème must have been Gigli's best-selling operatic 78s: both pieces are sung in score pitch, the tenor's high C now firmly in place. Neither reading is a model of style, but both are emotionally overwhelming, the boyish charm, use of portamento and verbal detailing of his Rodolfo especially winning. In a famous account of the Cavalleria duet, he is partnered by an impassioned Giannini: both artists exhibit an authentic spinto style now severely in jeopardy. At the end come a wonderfully forthright account of 'Cujus animam' from Rossini's Stabat mater (though he abjures the high D flat) and two soulful Neapolitan songs by de Curtis, perfect Gigli territory. The transfers of the electrics are faultless; the sound of the acoustics, poor recordings in themselves, is less amenable.

Alma Gluck sop

Anonymous (words by Ben Jonson) Have you seen but a white lily grow? Bellini La sonnambula – Ah! non credea mirarti Bishop Lo, here the gentle lark Bizet Carmen – Je dis que rien ne m'épouvante Charpentier Louise – Depuis le jour Godard Jocelyn – Oh! ne t'éveille pas encore Hahn Chansons grises – L'heure exquise Handel Atalanta – Care selve, ombre beate. Theodora – Angels, ever bright and fair Humperdinck Hänsel und Gretel – Suse, liebe, Suse Loewe War schöner als der schönste Tag Massenet Elégie Puccini La bohème – Quando m'en vo' soletta; Donde lieta uscì Rameau Hippolyte et Aricie – Rossignols amoureux Rimsky-Korsakov Snow Maiden – Going berrying; Lel's Third Song. Sadko – Song of the Indian Guest. The Tsar's Bride – Haste thee, mother mine Saint-Saëns Le timbre d'argent – Le bonheur est chose légère Smetana The Kiss – Cradle song Tosti La serenata

Alma Gluck sop with various artists
Nimbus Prima Voce NI7904 (77 minutes: ADD) Ⓢ
Recorded 1911-17

In 1915 W J Henderson called Gluck 'the most beautiful lyric soprano before the public'. Her record of Carry me back to old Virginy was the first celebrity disc in America to sell over a million copies. Yet her career lasted little beyond a decade; less, if one counts time out for re-training. It was a delicate voice and, as she soon found, any sort of operatic hurly-burly endangered it. There still must have been something wrong in its training or usage. Her records remain a precious memento, and the best of her recorded art can be very happily sampled here. The Nimbus transfer process suits Gluck well. Otherwise it might be a foregone conclusion that with Marston's two-CD volume still available, readers would be referred back to the more comprehensive selection. As it is, Nimbus has three items not included by Marston, all good, and one of them, the famous solo from Jocelyn, surely quintessential. Gluck had the most lovely soft tones, perhaps of all, in the upper part of the voice; and in this lullaby ('Angels guard thee' in the English version) the precise take and pure quality of the upper notes are heavenly. In Musetta's song from La bohème (also absent from Marston) she gives a lesson to all screaming Musettas, singing (as Nigel Douglas observes in his booklet-note) con molta grazia ed eleganza as Puccini recommended. Lo, here the gentle lark, the third bonus item, matters less and is not one of the showier versions abounding in alts; resourcefully sung, even so. Included are most of the gems – the Rameau, Loewe's canzonetta, Hahn's L'heure exquise and Have you seen but a white lily grow? for instance.

Susan Graham mez

French Operetta Arias
Hahn Brummell – Air de la Lettre. Ciboulette – C'est pas Paris, c'est sa banlieue. Mozart – Etre adoré. O mon bel inconnu! – O mon bel inconnu; C'est très vilain d'être infidèle Honegger Les aventures du roi Pausole, H76 – Si vous saviez Messager L'amour masqué – J'ai deux amants; Mon rêve. Coups de roulis – Les hommes sont biens tous les mêmes. Fortunio – Je ne vois rien. Passionément – L'amour est un oiseau rebelle. La petite fonctionnaire – Je regrette mon Pressigny. Les p'tites Michu – Vois-tu, je m'en veux. Les dragons de l'impératrice – Amour, amour, quel est donc ton pouvoir Simons Toi c'est moi – C'est ça la vie; Vagabonde Yvain Yes – Yes

Susan Graham mez City of Birmingham Symphony Orchestra / Yves Abel
Erato 0927-42106-2 (59 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Notes, texts and translations included ●●

This is a scrumptious album of bonbons – mostly from the latter end of the golden age of French operetta – to which Susan Graham brings her lovely soprano-ish mezzo very much à la Parisienne. She opens and closes the programme with two numbers from Moïse Simons' Toi c'est moi. The first, 'C'est ça la vie, c'est ça l'amour', is a flamboyant tribute to Bizet's Carmen, full of Latin-American rhythmic bravado. Graham sings it with a wicked I-can-be-Carmen-too twinkle in her sly, sexy delivery without sounding too knowing. She's in her element, too, with the closing 'Vagabonde', a vivacious waltz-song.

In between Graham takes us on a delectable Paris-by-night tour of latish French operetta, mostly dating from the era when Sacha Guitry and his wife Yvonne Printemps were the romantic leads. Of the 17 numbers she selects, only two come from works that have remained in the consciousness of today's music-lovers.

This is the musical equivalent of an expensive box of scrummy chocolates. The perfect treat for the music lover.

Il tenero momento
Gluck Paride ed Elena – O del mio dolce ardor. Iphigénie en Tauride – O toi qui prolongeas mes jours; O malheureuse Iphigénie!; Non, cet affreux devoir...Je t'implore et je tremble. Orphée et Eurydice – Qu'entends-je? Qu'a-t-il dit?; J'ai perdu mon Eurydice Mozart Le nozze di Figaro – Non so più cosa son; Voi che sapete. La clemenza di Tito –

Parto, parto, ma tu, ben mio[a]; Deh per questo istante. Idomeneo – Non ho colpa, e mi codanni. Lucio Silla – Dunque sperar poss'io...Il tenero momento
Susan Graham mez [a]Antony Pay bscl Orchestra of the Age of Enlightenment / Harry Bicket
Erato 8573-85768-2 (63 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 2000 ●●

It's a very long time since I heard an operatic recital by a modern singer that satisfied me as much as this one does. Graham, now at the apex of her career, displays her skills as singer and interpreter in a sensibly planned and executed programme, comprised of arias from roles she has sung on stage. In consequence, unlike her coeval and colleague Renée Fleming in her recent recital (Decca), Graham sounds entirely inside all her music and dispenses it with a confidence and attack that is truly amazing, but the refulgent, vibrant voice and faultless technique – except perhaps in a virtuoso cadenza at the end of Orfeo's Act 2 showpiece (from the Viardot 1869 edition of Gluck's work) – are wholly at the service of the music, the mezzo showing a sensitive empathy with the emotions of every character she portrays. Vulnerable Iphigénie, insecure Sesto, palpitating Cherubino, forlorn Orfeo (in 'J'ai perdu'), lovelorn Paris and Cecilio (Lucio Silla) all come before us in lifelike form by virtue of Graham's exemplary use of words, themselves enhanced by firm consonants. Beyond that there is her understanding of the Baroque verities and her idiomatic command of Italian and French.

If you need to be convinced to buy this disc – and you can sample before buying – then listen to Sesto's two arias. They are templates of the rest in the ideal moulding of phrase, evenness of tone throughout a wide tessitura and exemplary coloratura allied to an identification with the youth's plight. The moment to savour most is the reprise, in the second piece, of the words 'Deh, per questo istante solo' where Graham employs a quite magical mezza voce.

To complete one's pleasure in a treasurable CD, there are the wholly stylish playing of the alert orchestra under the command of Harry Bicket, who is a specialist in this kind of music, and a perfect balance in the recording between voice and instruments.

Elisabeth Grümmer sop

Great Singers of the Century
Mendelssohn Lieder, Op 71 – No 2, Frühlingslied; No 6, Nachtlied. Auf Flügeln des Gesanges, Op 34 No 2. Scheidend, Op 9 No 6. Neue Liebe, Op 19*a* No 4 Schoeck Lieder, Op 10 – Erinnerung; Die Einsame. Lieder, Op 20 – Auf meines Kindes Tod; Nachruf. Ergebung, Op 30 No 6. Motto, Op 51 No 2. Das holde Bescheiden, Op 62 – Auf der Teck; Im Park; Nachts Schumann Frauenliebe und -leben, Op 42 Wolf Spanisches Liederbuch – In dem Schatten meiner Locken; Mögen alle bösen Zungen; Bedeckt mich mit Blumen; Sie blasen zum Abmarsch
Elisabeth Grümmer sop Aribert Reimann pf
Orfeo C506001B (68 minutes: ADD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1963, 1966 and 1968 ●●

Elisabeth Grümmer was disgracefully under-recorded, in particular in relation to her recital repertory. The central interpretation here, the Schumann cycle, discloses all this sincere, warm soprano's many virtues, above all her ability to sing the music in exemplary style with unaffected, straightforward feeling, entirely free from gloss and mannerisms and, where appropriate, a charming glint in her voice. In that sense she is a throwback to some of her great pre-war predecessors such as Lehmann and Lemnitz, but she is a better technician than either of those revered artists. She is the deferential, happy, wondering girl of the first songs to the life, then the eager bride and grateful mother, finally the desolate widow. Word and note are in perfect alliance; everything is clear, filled with meaning yet nothing is exaggerated or portentous, and the tone itself is amazingly fresh for a singer in her mid-fifties.

Mendelssohn's Auf Flügeln des Gesanges and Neue Liebe are sung with the same fresh spontaneity. So are some interesting settings of Eichendorff and Mörike by Schoeck. The four masterpieces from Wolf's Spanish Songbook are still better: Bedeckt mich mit Blumen has just the right erotic languour, In dem Schatten meiner Locken just the right sense of fun without any of the archness that can ruin its irresistibly loving message. Reimann, here and throughout, is a finely imaginative partner and the recording could not be bettered. This is a CD for all connoisseurs of Lieder singing at its very best.

Nathan Gunn bar

American Anthem – from Ragtime to Art Song
Barber Songs, Op 13 – No 3, Sure on this shining night; No 4, Nocturne Bolcom Cabaret Songs – Over the piano; Fur (Murray the Furrier); Song of Black Max Copland Old American Songs, Set 1 – Long time ago. Old American Songs, Set 2 – At the river Gorney Americana – Brother, Can You Spare a Dime? Hoiby The lamb Ives General William Booth Enters into Heaven. Slugging a vampire. Two little flowers Musto Recuerdo Niles The lass from the Low Countree Rorem Early in the morning. The lordly Hudson Scheer Lean Away (arr Thomas). American Anthem. At Howard Hanks' House. Holding each other (all arr Musiker) Traditional I wonder as I wander (arr Niles/Horton). Shenandoah (arr Musiker)
Nathan Gunn bar Kevin Murphy pf
EMI Debut 573160-2 (68 minutes: DDD) Ⓑ
Recorded 1998

Nathan Gunn is a protégé of the Met in New York and this is an exceptional début. As the title of the collection implies, there is a wide range of styles united simply through being American music, and Gunn wanted to illustrate the rich diversity of his inheritance. He has plenty of classics at his disposal. Of the three by Ives, Slugging a vampire is swashbuckling; General William Booth is delivered with complete confidence; and Two little flowers is suitably charming. Copland's arrangements of Long time ago and At the river are dead right and particularly moving in Gunn's smooth and steady delivery. The two Barber songs show the same effortless command. When Gunn moves towards the vernacular he chooses three hilarious character sketches from William Bolcom's Cabaret Songs, which are done with perfect rhythmic control in partnership with Kevin Murphy at the piano. In the traditional tunes and the real pop songs by Scheer they are just as effective as a team. Gunn's flexible, lyrical baritone often resembles Thomas Hampson and he brings the same intelligence to a wide range of Americana. Well recorded, if slightly harsh at times, but negligible notes and you are referred to the EMI web site for the texts. But a real discovery.

Thomas Hampson bar

Operetta Arias
Kálmán Gräfin Mariza – Komm, Zigány. Die Csárdásfürstina – Die Mädis vom Chantant Lehár Das Land des Lächelns – Dein ist mein ganzes Herz! Paganini – Gern hab' ich die Frau'n geküsst. Der Zarewitsch – Wolgalied Millöcker Der Bettelstudent – Ach ich hab' sie ja nur auf die Schulter geküsst; Ich knüpfte manche zarte Bande J Strauss II Eine Nacht in Venedig – Treu sein, das liegt mir nicht. Der Zigeunerbaron[a] – Als flotter Geist Stolz Auf der Heide blüh'n die letzten Rosen. Mein Herz ruft nach dir – Ich sing' mein Lied. Wien wird schön erst bei Nacht. Trauminsel – Ich hab' mich tausendmal verliebt Tauber Der singende Traum – Du bist die Welt für mich Zeller Der Obersteiger[a] – Sei nicht bös
Thomas Hampson bar [a]London Voices; London Philharmonic Orchestra / Franz Welser-Möst
EMI 556758-2 (60 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included

Thomas Hampson's elegant baritone is one of the glories of today, and he brings seemingly effortless power and grace to this collection of Viennese operetta arias. The clarity of the words is exemplary, and the selection of items is of especial interest. Some of the numbers are more usually associated with tenors rather than baritones, and Hampson accommodates them partly through his own flexible range, partly with discreet transposition (a semitone in 'Dein ist mein ganzes Herz!', for instance). He does well, too, to remind us of Richard Tauber's skill as a composer, plus the fact that 'Sei nicht bös' (heard here in an unfamiliar orchestration) was written for a male singer. Reminders of Millöcker's classic Bettelstudent are welcome too, with Hampson rather more at home as the blustering Colonel Ollendorf than as the beggar student himself, where more of a 'devil may care' approach might have helped. In the Kálmán numbers, the opportunities for graceful phrasing of 'Komm, Zigány' perhaps suit Hampson better than the comedy of 'Die Mädis vom Chantant', though the latter is given an especially effective ending.

It all makes a pleasant change from the usual operetta recital, with stylish accompaniments from the London Philharmonic and Welser-Möst. There is admirable documentation, too, from Miles Kreuger and operetta authority Michael Miller.

Roy Henderson bar

Centenary Recital
Songs – T Arne, Boyce, G Butterworth, Dale, Hatton, Purcell, Short, Stanford, Tchaikovsky, Vaughan Williams and Warlock
Roy Henderson bar with various artists
Dutton Laboratories mono CDLX7038 Ⓑ
(72 minutes: ADD). Recorded 1925-45

Roy Henderson was one of the country's most distinguished baritones during the interwar years. He sang Count Almaviva at Glyndebourne's inaugural season in 1934, was an outstanding Elijah and for many years virtually monopolised the all-important baritone solo in Delius's A Mass of Life and Sea Drift until he retired in 1952. He was also a noted recitalist, and to celebrate his centenary Dutton has had the excellent idea of reissuing his most significant 78rpm discs of British song, very few previously available either on LP or CD. We start with his 1940s Decca recordings of Butterworth's A Shropshire Lad and a tranche of Warlock, Vaughan Williams and Stanford songs. The transferred sound is clarity itself, matching the same attribute in Henderson's approach to words. Indeed he is quoted by Tully Potter in his notes as saying: 'It is the words that count, and determine the pace, the variations and the time'. He observes his dictum in his eloquently shaped and subtly inflected readings, notable for the true half-voice he employs on many occasions, especially in 'Is my team ploughing?' in the Butterworth cycle.

Other delights are his warm tone and fine legato in Vaughan Williams's lovely Orpheus with his lute and the sheer élan in Boyce's Song of Momus to Mars, a Dryden setting. The Vocalions and Columbias, dating from the 1920s, disclose a firmer, meatier tone, although the sensitivity is already there in Ireland's Sea Fever, a Henderson favourite – he re-recorded it for Decca.

He also offers varied and amusing accounts of Hatton's Simon the Cellarer and the traditional O no, John! Finally, a 1929 account of Tchaikovsky's To the forest shows that Henderson was just as successful in non-British song. Gerald Moore, Ivor Newton and Eric Gritton provide excellent support in this generously filled, rewarding tribute.

Wolfgang Holzmair bar

An die ferne Geliebte
Beethoven Adelaide, Op 46. An die ferne Geliebte, Op 98 Haydn Songs, HobXXVIa – No 9, Trost unglücklicher Liebe; No 12, Du zu späte Ankunft der Mutter; No 16, Gegenlied; No 22, Lob der Faulheit; No 30, Fidelity; No 31, Sailor's Song; No 33, Sympathy; No 34, She Never Told her Love; No 35, Piercing Eyes; No 36, Content; No 41, The Spirit's Song; No 42, O Tuneful Voice Mozart Die Betrogene Welt, K474. Das Veilchen, K476. An Chloe, K524. Das Traumbild, K530. Eine kleine deutsche Kantate, K619
Wolfgang Holzmair bar Imogen Cooper pf
Philips 454 475-2PH (80 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included ●

There must be few more moving songs in the English language than Haydn's The Spirit's Song, Content and She Never Told her Love, wholly on a par with his work in other fields in terms of harmonic ingenuity and emotional feeling. Or so it seems when they are sung with the deep eloquence provided by Holzmair, seconded by Cooper's perceptive piano playing. Over and over again in this absorbing, generous recital, but particularly in the Haydn, Holzmair more than ever sounds like a baritone equivalent of his great fellow-countryman, Julius Patzak.

There's the same plangent tone, the same ability to conjure forth the inner meaning of a song in an almost reticent way. Yet Holzmair is no less successful in the extrovert jollity of the familiar Sailor's Song. The slight accent in his otherwise commendable English somehow adds to the attraction of these readings. The partnership is just as successful in its Mozart choices, Cooper displaying typical jeux d'esprit, and they give a properly solemn account of the Masonic cantata, K619, with its many echoes of Die Zauberflöte. Even such a familiar song as Das Veilchen is performed with such spontaneity that it might have been written yesterday.

In the two Beethoven offerings, the many available versions provide strong competition. Adelaide, perhaps, calls for a slightly more outgoing fervour as provided recently by the Award-winning Stephan Genz, who also offered on the same CD a wonderfully youthful An die ferne Geliebte, but Holzmair in his more retiring, gentle way presents another, equally valid view of the cycle, one that yields up subtleties few others have found in the work, not least because he and Cooper have such a rapport that they seem to think as one.

Hans Hotter bass-bar

Opera Monologues, 1957-62 Ⓗ
Mussorgsky Boris Godunov – I have attained the highest power; Your Majesty, I make obeisance; Farewell, my son, I am dying Rossini Il barbiere di Siviglia – La calunnia è un venticello R Strauss Die schweigsame Frau – Wie schön ist doch die Musik Verdi Don Carlo – Ella giammai m'amò Wagner Der fliegende Holländer – Die Frist ist um. Die Meistersinger von Nürnberg – Was duftet doch der Flieder; Wahn! Wahn! Uberall Wahn!
Hans Hotter bass-bar Dorothea Siebert sop Lorenz Fehenberger ten Bavarian Radio Chorus and Symphony Orchestra / Meinhard von Zallinger, Rudolf Alberth, Eugen Jochum
Orfeo d'Or C501991B (67 minutes: ADD) Ⓜ
Recorded 1957-62. All items sung in German ●●

Too many young collectors today know Hotter only as a Wagnerian (then usually in the Solti Ring where he was past his best) and/or as a fine interpreter of Lieder. In fact he was also renowned in Austria and Germany in other repertory, and even as an accomplished comedian, singing his roles, as was then the custom, in the vernacular. These tracks, drawn from Bavarian Radio archives, tell us something of that other Hotter. In Don Carlos, he sang both King Philip and, more often, the Grand Inquisitor. He gives us a haunted yet commanding Philip, sung in a commendable legato. His amusing Don Basilio couldn't be a greater contrast. A video exists showing Hotter's giant, scheming, faintly ridiculous prelate, commanding the scene, as he commands the aria here. He is equally in character in Sir Morosus's monologue – the old man at last contented and at peace. But the revelation here is Hotter's Boris.

He sang the role on stage just once, at Hamburg in 1937, but 20 years later Bavarian Radio mounted a studio production of Mussorgsky's opera under Jochum with Hotter in the title-role. In both Act 2 monologues, the scene with Shuisky (the subtle, wily Fehenberger) and Boris's death, Hotter presents a frightened, superstitious yet still authoritative and curiously sympathetic Tsar. All are sung with a wealth of inner meaning and fidelity to dynamic marks while avoiding histrionics that are not in the notes. Here, at the peak of his powers, Hotter is as superb as he is in his 1960 account of the Dutchman's monologue, a benchmark reading.

Equally setting standards for others to emulate are his versions of Sachs's monologues, so refined and thoughtful. As in all Hotter's performances, it is the interior meaning conveyed through a deep understanding of the text, allied to warmth and beauty of the voice, that remains so telling; here is the singing-actor par excellence.

Dmitri Hvorostovsky bar

Songs and Dances of Death
Borodin Prince Igor – No sleep, no rest
Mussorgsky Songs and Dances of Death
Rachmaninov Aleko – Aleko's cavatina
Rimsky-Korsakov Sadko – The paragon of cities; Beautiful city! Kashchey the Immortal – In this, night's darkest hour. Snow Maiden (second version) – Under the warm blue sea. The Tsar's Bride – Still the beauty haunts my mind Rubinstein The Demon – Do not weep, my child; On the airy ocean; I am he whom you called. Nero – Vindex's Epithalamium: I sing to you, Hymen divine!

Dmitri Hvorostovsky bar Kirov Theatre Orchestra / Valery Gergiev
Philips 438 872-2PH (62 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included. Recorded 1993

In the scenes from Rubinstein's The Demon Hvorostovsky, superbly supported by Valery Gergiev and his Kirov orchestra recorded in their own theatre, has done nothing better than his impersonation of the devil; in the the third extract he projects the gloating demon to the life. This is splendid stuff. So is Vindex's rollicking Epithalamium from the same composer's Nero, sung with wonderful breadth and confidence. Then he changes character again to bring before us the emotional torment of Rachmaninov's Aleko as he recalls the love Zemfira once had for him. The best of the Rimsky items as regards music and interpretation are Nizgir's aria from the Snow Maiden and Gryaznoy's musing on past triumphs in the field of love from The Tsar's Bride. Here Hvorostovsky varies his tone more successfully than in the other Rimsky items. Mussorgsky's Songs and Dances of Death need an imposing bass rather than a lyric baritone to make their true mark, yet these are more than acceptable performances, helped by the excellent recording. This is a fascinating disc.

Kalinka
Kalinka. Barinya. Ah! Do you hear, my dearest friend? On the Little Mountain. Round Dance. Why have you misted over, clear sunset? I met you. The Little Willow. How was I, a tender young maiden? Rhyming Song. Ah, you field. As never the white birch tree. The noise of the town cannot be heard. In the dark forest. Already the fog has descended. Ah, shady spot. Birch-broom. I set off alone down the road
Dmitri Hvorostovsky bar St Petersburg Chamber Choir / Nikolai Korniev
Philips 456 399-2PH (57 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included. Recorded 1996

These Russian folk-songs are all arrangements, by different hands, some hands as distinguished as those of Rimsky-Korsakov and Shostakovich. Mostly they are for solo voice with a chorus sometimes participating in the narrative or verbal sketch, sometimes humming, sometimes bearing the burden of the song. There is not, however, much attempt to imitate a folk manner. The arrangements are sometimes light and barely intervene, as with Shostakovich's, especially in some of the rapidly pattering numbers. Others are slow and suffused with melancholy, richly harmonised in a manner that would surprise any peasant but can, at best, make a beautiful new composition altogether. Among them is Paul Reade's version of Ivushka, or The Little Willow, sung with soaring intensity by Hvorostovsky over warmly shifting harmonies from the chorus. Some arrangements are quite elaborate, not always as effectively as this. It is a striking collection, with most of the songs rather closer to original composition than to what we normally think of as arrangement. The recording does justice not only to Hvorostovsky but to the choir's nimble sopranos and to basses who can move around the area below the bass stave without effort. An unusual, enjoyable anthology.

Maria Ivogün sop

Opera Arias and Songs H
Anonymous O du liebs Angeli[a]. Z'Lauterbach han i'mein Strumpf verlor'n[a]. Gsätzli. Maria auf dem Berge[a] Bishop Lo, here the gentle lark[b]
Chopin Nocturne in E flat, Op 9 No 2[b] (arr sop/orch)
Handel L'allegro, il penseroso ed il moderato, HWV55 – Sweet bird[b] (recorded 1925) Donizetti Don Pasquale – Ah! un foco insolito[b] (rec 1924). Lucia di Lammermoor – Ardon gl'incensi[b] (rec 1917)
Kreisler Liebesfreud[b] Meyerbeer Les Huguenots – Une dame noble et sage[b] (German) Nicolai Die lustigen Weiber von Windsor – Nun eilt herbei[b] (all rec 1917) Rossini Il barbiere di Siviglia – Una voce poco fa[b] (rec 1925) Schubert Ständchen (Horch! Horch! die Lerch), D899[b]. Winterreise, D911 – Die Post[b] J Strauss II Frühlingsstimmen, Op 410[b] (rec 1924). G'schichten aus dem Wienerwald, Op 325[b]. An die schönen, blauen Donau, Op 314[c]. Die Fledermaus – Klänge der Heimat[c] Verdi La traviata – E strano ... Ah, fors'è lui ... Sempre libera[b] (sung in German, rec 1916)
Maria Ivogün sop [a]Michael Raucheisen pf [b]orchestra; [c]Berlin State Opera Orchestra / Leo Blech
Nimbus Prima Voce NI7832 (78 minutes: ADD) Ⓢ
Recorded 1916-32

Somewhere or other, after much searching of the memory, ransacking of the catalogues and phoning around among connoisseurs, it might be possible to discover a more delightful example of the coloratura's art than that of Maria Ivogün as displayed in her recording of Kreisler's Liebesfreud, made in 1924: if so, one such does not spring to mind now. With the most pure and delicate of tones, nothing shrill or piercing about them, she sings way above a normal mortal's reach, ease and accuracy in the purely technical feats going along with a lilt and feeling for the idiomatic give-and-take of waltz rhythm that are a joy musically.

Turn to Handel, with the solo from Il penseroso, and the same art is put to lovely use in a different idiom. Her Traviata aria has warmth and spontaneity; her Frau Fluth in Die lustigen Weiber von Windsor is a woman of charm and energy; and the 1934 recording of the Czardas in Die Fledermaus shines as bright in spirit as in clarity of timbre. From the same period comes the set of four songs, Swiss and German, that show most touchingly her command of the art to be simple.

This is an admirable introduction to a most lovely singer, and it represents the Prima Voce series at its best.

Sumi Jo sop

La Promessa
Bellini Malinconia, ninfa gentile. Per pietà, bell'idol mio Benedict La capinera Caldara Alma del core Cesti Intorno all'idol mio Donaudy O del mio amato ben. Vaghissima sembianza G Giordani Caro mio ben Gluck Paride ed Elena – O del mio dolce ardor Handel Rinaldo – Lascia ch'io pianga. Giulio Cesare – V'adoro, pupille Mozart Ridente la calma, K152/K210*a* Paisiello L'amor contrastato – Nel cor più non mi sento Rosa Star vicino Rossini Soirées musicales – La promessa Sarti Giulio Sabino – Lungi dal caro ben (arr Parenti) A Scarlatti Se Florindo è fedele D Scarlatti Qual farfalletta amante Tosti Non t'amo più! Verdi Ad una stella
Sumi Jo sop Vincenzo Scalera pf
Erato 3984-23300-2 (68 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included
Recorded 1997

Here is one of the most delightful singers of our time heard in a programme that extends her repertoire on record and, being apt and congenial in itself, brings a double refreshment. There is a delicious coolness about the Korean soprano's singing: an 18th-century elegance. And not the slightest coldness about it; simply a humanity and a civilisation where the heart is not worn on the sleeve. Interestingly, this is so even in the songs which often excite a more overtly passionate style of performance, Tosti's Non t'amo più! and the two by Stefano Donaudy. Similarly, such light-hearted 19th-century pieces as Rossini's 'La promessa' and Benedict's La capinera carry their gaiety with poise and refinement.

It is partly that they benefit from the company of Handel and Mozart, partly that the clear voice and graceful style bring out the Classicism in which their composers were educated rather than the thicker Romanticism to which their age was tending. Voice and style here are as one, and the opening Caro mio ben is a fine example of both. The tone remains unequivocally that of a high lyric soprano but now with a mature and reassuring warmth in the lower notes. The phrases are beautifully sustained and are shaded with respect for the unity of line. The quickening pace of the middle section is well judged, as is the modestly decorated 'tanto rigor' leading back to the principal melody. Sumi Jo is responsive to the urgency of Bellini's Malinconia and the lightness of Scarlatti's Farfalletta. Vincenzo Scalera accompanies tastefully, and recorded sound is fine.

Sumi Jo at Carnegie Hall
Adam Le toréador – Ah, vous dirai-je, maman Bellini I Puritani – Son vergin vezzosa; Qui la voce ... Vien, diletto Benedict The Gipsy and the Bird Bernstein Candide – Glitter and be gay Bishop Lo, here the gentle lark Cho Seonguja Herbert Naughty Marietta – Italian Street Song Hong Springtime of home Kim I shall live in the Blue Mountains Mozart Vorre spiegarvi, oh Dio, K418 Offenbach Les contes d'Hoffmann – Les oiseaux dans la charmille J Strauss II Die Fledermaus – Mein Herr Marquis (arr Rauber)
Sumi Jo sop Orchestra of St Luke's / Richard Bonynge
Erato 3984-21630-2 (64 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded live in 1996 ●

This sounds like a good night out at Carnegie Hall, and not one whose memory is spoilt when heard again, transferred to disc. Apart from a little wear on the upper register at a forte, the voice remains pure, firm and lovely, its tone rather fuller than when we first knew it, the technique secure, its accomplishments impressively displayed. Expressiveness is perhaps not a prime requisite here, and indeed one might wish for a programme that did require a little more than a pretty smile shaded off now and again into a pretty pathos; but all goes well and the audience's evident enthusiasm is well justified. The only item which doesn't really succeed is Adam's variations on the nursery tune, Ah, vous dirai-je, maman, usually thought of simply as a display piece. The air is a wistful little thing, sung by a girl feeling the first torments of love and finding consolation in the tender, softly rocking melody of a song. That feeling is absent in Sumi Jo's technically admirable performance. Happily, in the very next item, 'Qui la voce' from I Puritani, Sumi Jo's singing has just the right degree of emotion for a concert performance, with Bonynge and his players responding sensitively to the quickening of pulse and its sad relaxation. This and the Polonaise, sung later in the programme, find the singer at her delightful best, as does the Mozart with which the recital so enchantingly opens. The three songs said to be of Korean origin sound thoroughly western, and application to the booklet-notes gains no further enlightenment. Still, this is not the kind of occasion for queries and complaints. Here is a delectable singer amidst an appreciative public, and we are fortunate to have the opportunity of sharing their enjoyment.

Virtuoso Arias
Bellini La sonnambula – Ah! non credea mirarti ... Ah! non giunge[a] Bernstein Candide – Glitter and be gay[a] Delibes Lakmé – Où va la jeune indoue ... Là-bas dans la forêt plus sombre[a] Donizetti Lucia di Lammermoor – Mad scene[a] Meyerbeer Dinorah – Ombre légère[a] Mozart Die Zauberflöte – Der Hölle Rache[b] Rossini Il barbiere di Siviglia – Una voce poco fa ... Io son docile[a] R Strauss Ariadne auf Naxos – Noch glaub' ich dem einen ganz ... So war es mit Pagliazzo ... Als ein Gott kam jeder gegangen[a] Verdi Rigoletto – Gualtier Maldè ... Caro nome[a] Yoon (arr. Constant) Barley Field[a]
Sumi Jo sop [a]Monte-Carlo Philharmonic Orchestra / Paolo Olmi; [b]Paris Orchestral Ensemble / Armin Jordan
Erato 4509-97239-2 (74 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts included. Recorded 1994

Many listeners, well disposed towards most kinds of vocal recital, still tend to approach a new 'coloratura' programme with misgivings – all of which would seem to be obviated here. The emotional range of the music goes well beyond mere prettiness, whether of girlish glee or wilting pathos. The florid passages are assumed by the singer to have an expressive purpose, which she then seeks out and fulfils. Her tone is bright but not piercing, her style clean but not cold; she understands perfectly well that, though these arias are famous for their high notes, far more of the singer's time is spent in the middle register, where a scrawny or breathy tone and flawed legato will not be excused on account of a few brilliances in alt. Intelligence is clearly at work from the start, in the enunciation of the words. 'Una voce poco fa qui nel cuor mi risuono': the 'qui' ('here') is the 'gesture-word', the one that makes it actual and individual. 'La vincerò' is determined, but not doubly-underlined or given that arch, over-confident touch which may gain a point but, in doing so, forfeits likeableness. In La sonnambula sympathy is actually strengthened by the cleaning-up of all those downward portamentos that have threatened to become inseparable from the music since Callas and Sutherland introduced them. Similarly, the Mad scene from Lucia di Lammermoor is enacted as a genuinely dramatic piece but with a fresh realisation, rather than from a mind loaded with memories of those illustrious predecessors. The only way in which Jo appears at a disadvantage is in the relative hardness of some high notes.

Vesselina Kasarova mez

A Portrait
Handel Rinaldo – Or la tromba in suon festante
Gluck Orfeo ed Euridice – Che farò senza Euridice?
Mozart Le nozze di Figaro – Voi che sapete. Don Giovanni – Batti, batti, o bel Masetto Rossini La Cenerentola – Nacqui all'affano[abdeg]. Il barbiere di Siviglia – Una voce poco fa. L'Italiana in Algeri – Pronti abbiamo e ferri e mani ... Amici in ogni evento ... Pensa alla patria[g] Donizetti Anna Bolena – Sposa a Percy ... Per questa fiamma indomita ... Ah! pensate che rivolti[cfg]. La favorita – Fia dunque vero ... O mio Fernando! Bellini I Capuleti e i Montecchi – Se Romeo t'uccise un figlio ... La tremenda ultrice spada[cfg]
Vesselina Kasarova mez [a]Isolde Mitternacht-Geissendörfer sop [b]Barbara Müller contr [c]Andreas Schulist, [d]Dankwart Siegele ten [e]Tim Hennis bass [f]Leonid Savitzky bass [g]Bavarian Radio Chorus; Munich Radio Orchestra / Friedrich Haider
RCA Red Seal 09026 68522-2 (64 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included. Recorded 1996

This is the stuff of legends: it is difficult to imagine a début opera recital that could give so much pleasure. The vibrant richness of Kasarova's tone allied to her totally uninhibited manner before the microphone allows her to bring to astonishing life each of the characters portrayed within. She begins as she continues, with tremendous panache as Rinaldo invokes trumpets to great deeds, and Kasarova proves the warrior-lover to the life, Handel's complex coloratura used as an engine to express youthful fire. Then immediately she becomes the tender, lamenting Orpheus, real grieving in the plush, well-controlled tone. The two Mozart pieces disclose different timbres in the voice – bright and palpitating as befits Cherubino, soft-grained and sensuous as suits Zerlina. Kasarova is a fabulous Rossinian. In the three pieces here she combines vitality, verbal acuity and dispatch of fioriture. It's wonderful how she starts in mild, forgiving manner, caressing the start of 'Non più mesta', then lets fly in viscerally exciting manner for the roulades.

Even the well-trodden path of 'Una voce' sounds newly-minted as you seem to hear Rosina's varied thoughts passing through her mind, the text freshly inflected. As Isabella inspires her followers in 'Pensa alla patria', one notes the subtle accents on 'il tenero amor' and 'Caro, ti parli in petto', evincing all Isabella's inner feelings for her beloved Lindoro. Then it's off on another invigorating display at 'Fra pochi istanti'. From here Kasarova moves on to so-called bel canto territory. With 'O mio Fernando!' it's again the judgement of tonal colour, here sensual, heartstopping, while Jane Seymour's resistance to Henry VIII shows yet another 'face', dignified and noble. But in both Leonora's and Romeo's cabaletta, 'La tremenda ultrice spada', a little less might mean so much more: there is too much emphasis, too many breaths. But that is part of the style of a singer who is making no concessions to the studio, and is rather living out every moment of the given dramas.

Yvonne Kenny sop

Bizet The Pearl Fishers – I'm all alone here...As once before; Leïla! Leïla!...Your heart was never tuned to mine[b] Boughton The Immortal Hour – How beautiful they are Catalani La Wally – I'll float into the distance Donizetti Linda di Chamounix – Linda! Linda![b] Handel Joshua – O had I Jubal's lyre. Rinaldo – Hear thou my weeping Mozart Idomeneo – Gentle zephyrs, soft caressing. Nehmt meinen Dank, ihr holden Gönner, K383 Porter Kiss Me, Kate – So in love am I Puccini Gianni Schicchi – Oh, my beloved father Purcell The Indian Queen – I attempt from love's sickness. King Arthur – Fairest isle Rossini Semiramide – Dark day of dread![a]. William Tell – Dark, sombre wood Stravinsky The Rake's Progress – Gently, little boat[c] Sullivan The Mikado – The sun, whose rays Zeller The Bird Catcher' – When you're sent roses in this land
Yvonne Kenny sop [a]Della Jones mez [b]Barry Banks ten [c]Geoffrey Mitchell Choir; Philharmonia Orchestra / David Parry
Chandos/Peter Moores Foundation
Opera in English Series CHAN3035 Ⓕ
(76 minutes: DDD). Texts included OO

Lovely, lovely record, and that wretched, inevitable little word 'but' had better be admitted immediately and sent on its way. The 'but' concerns tone-quality when, at a certain volume and a certain height, a bright, metallic tinkle of wear or overtones obtrudes and momentarily compromises the purity of sound. It has long been a feature of Kenny's voice and makes only intermittent appearance here (in the Pearl Fishers duet, for example), but it has to be mentioned. That aside, delight is more or less continuous from start to finish.

Taking a look at the programme, one might at first think its order haphazard and likely to be too fragmentary and inconsequential: not so in practice. The disc opens with Lauretta's plea to her daddy ('daddy' surely, not 'father') and is quite happily followed by Ilia's invocation to the breezes, then back to Purcell and on to Handel and Donizetti and so forth. The jumps are not ones to break a leg over though. Perhaps this is because everything here, from Purcell to Cole Porter, is treated in a spirit of thinking the best – and finding it. All concerned seem united in this – the singer, the players and their admirable conductor. When a refined musical spirit is brought to it, the music responds. Handel's 'Jubal's lyre' responds as we no doubt expected it to, but when Rossini's 'Dark day of dread!' follows, instead of the heavyweight posturing suggested by the title, we find a blissfully scored duet, an idyll of love-birds in thirds with orchestral pizzicatos; and when this is followed by the famous solo from La Wally, that too is heard as an utterance almost refined in its passion, the song of a heartbroken girl rather than an aria for the spotlighted diva.

Delightful throughout is the cleanness of style: intervals, intonation, phrasing, the handling of words. Perhaps the characters need more differentiation, but then again perhaps not (this is not Mimì turning into Tosca, or Violetta into one of the Leonoras). As for the oddities – The Mikado, Kiss me Kate and so on – they all earn their welcome. And the odd notion of ending a lyric-soprano recital with what is properly a tenor solo (the Faery song from The Immortal Hour) proves to make for an inspired and magical coda.

Emma Kirkby sop

'Classical Kirkby'
Blow Sappho to the Goddess of Beauty. Sappho to the Goddess of Love Boyce An answer to Orpheus and Euridice. When Orpheus went down to the Regions below Campion When to her lute Corinna sings Eccles Corinna now you'r young and gay Ferrabosco So beautie on the waters stood Greene Orpheus with his Lute Lanier Hero and Leander H Lawes At dead low ebb of night. Ayres and Dialogues – Anacreon's Ode, call'd The Lute (orig Greek and English versions); Away, Away, Anacreon; Legousin hai gunaikes (Anacreon). Orpheus's Hymn to God. Weldon Stop, O ye waves Wilson Horace's Odes – Diffugere nives; Integer vitae
Emma Kirkby sop Anthony Rooley theo/lte
BIS BIS-CD1435 (54 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included. Recorded c2002 ●

'Classical Kirkby' is a delightful programme of English 17th- and 18th-century song with an uncommon and charming provenance. As a former Oxford classics scholar, Emma Kirkby was invited to become President of the Classical Association, and baulking at the idea of having to give the obligatory inaugural lecture offered to sing instead. The offer was accepted, and this is the outcome, a nicely varied and unusual recital of songs on classical texts and subjects, some serious, some humorous, some dramatic and some simply pretty.

Perhaps the rarest items are those setting words by classical poets themselves: two of Anacreon's poems appear in their original Greek, set by Henry Lawes, while two of Horace's Odes are heard in delicate settings by John Wilson. Other highlights include Nicholas Lanier's powerful depiction of Hero watching her beloved Leander drown, a rather sweet Shakespeare setting by Maurice Greene, and two jokey accounts by William Boyce of the Orpheus legend, seen from respective male and female viewpoints. All are sung with Kirkby's customary radiance of voice, technical agility and interpretative intelligence. This really is the kind of intimate programme that this great singer does best; this is not just 'classical Kirkby' but 'classic', too.

Magadalenz Kožená sop

Gluck La clemenza di Tito – Se mai senti spirarti sul volto. Paride ed Elena – Le belle immagini d'un dolce amore; O del mio dolce ardor bramato oggetto! Mozart La clemenza di Tito – Parto, ma tu, ben mio; Deh, per questo istante solo. La finta giardiniera – Va' pure ad altri in braccio. Idomeneo – Il padre adorato. Lucio Silla – Il tenero momento. Le nozze di Figaro – Voi che sapete è amor Mysliveček Abramo ed Isacco – Deh, parlate, che forse tacendo. Antigona – Sarò qual è il torrente. L'Olimpiade – Che non mi disse un di!; Più non si trovano
Magdalena Kožená mez
Prague Philharmonia / Michel Swierczewski
DG 471 334-2GH (68 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Notes, texts and translations included
Recorded 2001 ●

On this CD you will find some of the most compelling singing of late 18th-century operatic music that you are likely to encounter these days. Magdalena Kožená here shows that she possesses a full, firm, creamy voice, ideal for Classical-period music, and a keen sense of how to characterise it dramatically.

Mysliveček was highly gifted, successful throughout Italy, and was admired by the Mozarts. The aria from his oratorio Abramo ed Isacco, sung by Sarah when she believes Abraham has sacrificed their son, is an intense, impassioned piece, preceded by a vivid recitative, giving Kožená ample scope for expressive singing and incisive articulation. She draws beautifully long lines in Gluck's 'Le belle immagini', but of course it is the famous 'O del mio dolce ardor', Paris's first declaration of his love for Helen, where she catches the air of haunting oriental mystery so beautifully, that is especially affecting. But the best things naturally come in the big serious arias – in Mozart's two Tito arias for Sextus she shines above all, making Sextus's dilemmas, torn between love and duty, real with her colouring of the words, her variation of tone between firm resolution and soft tenderness (but always with a clear ringing sound), the warmth of her phrasing. Altogether a splendid disc, with first-rate support from Swierczewski and the Prague orchestra.

Alfredo Kraus ten

Alfredo Kraus con el Corazón
Bonfa/Maria Canción de Orfeo[b] Chapí El milagro de la Virgen – Flores purísimas[a] Chaplin Eternally[a] Fain Love is a many splendored thing[a] Guerrero El huésped del sevillano – Mujer de los ojos negros[b] Guridi El caserío – Yo no sé que veo en Ana María[a]. La meiga – Yo te vi pasar[b] Jiménez Corazón, corazón[c] Kosma Les feuilles mortes[b] Lara Noche de Ronda[a] Luna La pícara molinera – Paxarín, tu que vuelas[a] Maggio/Ferilli Un amore così grande[a] Monnot Hymne à l'amour[a] Esparza Oteo Rondalla[c] Porter You do something to me[a] Ramírez Alfonsina y el mar[a] Serrano La dolorosa – La roca fría del Calvario[a]. Los claveles – Mujeres[a]. La alegría del batallón – Al mismo rey del moro[b]. Alma de Dios – Canción del vagabundo[b] Sorozábal La tabernera del puerto – No puede ser[b] Pérez Soriano El guitarrico – Jota[a] Soutullo/Vert El último romántico – Bella enamorada[b] Moreno Torroba Luisa Fernanda – De este apacible rincón de Madrid[b] Trenet/Lasry La mer[b] Vives Doña Francisquita – Por el humo se sabe[a]
Alfredo Kraus ten [a]Tenerife Symphony Orchestra / Víctor Pablo Pérez; [b]Gran Canaria Philharmonic Orchestra / Carlos Riazuelo; [c]Madrid Complutense University Orchestra / Santiago López
RCA Victor ② 74321 72246-2 (101 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Song arrangements by Peter Hope and Joan Albert Amargós ●

The real glory of the two CDs lies in the seven zarzuela numbers that each contains. Some have been recorded by Kraus on previous occasions, but others (such as the two Guridi numbers and the Chapí rarity) probably have not. Either way, no tenor has ever created the frisson that Kraus does in this glorious music. Has anyone, for instance, shaped and caressed the phrases of 'Mujeres' from Los claveles as lovingly and sweetly as he does? Has anybody made the romance from El caserío such a tender realisation of affection for a woman who has too often been taken for granted? And, among the many performances of the aria from Doña Francisquita, has anyone balanced the passion, reflection and finely shaped line as he does?

The second CD ends with a further two songs performed to the accompaniment of an orchestra of mandolins, lutes and guitars. They make a glorious noise, and Kraus sounds thoroughly at home. But the zarzuela numbers are the real glory of this invaluable souvenir of a wonderful singer.

Solveig Kringelborn sop

Black Roses
Grieg Six Songs, Op 25 Nielsen Six Songs, FS18 Rangström The Girl under the New Moon. Pan. The Only Moment. Melody. Prayer to the Night. Villemo Sibelius Six Songs, Op 36
Solveig Kringelborn sop Malcolm Martineau pf
Virgin Classics 545273-2 (55 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included. Recorded 1996

The Grieg and Sibelius sets are decently represented on CD, particularly the obvious songs like 'A Swan' and 'Black Roses', after which the whole disc is named. All the Rangström songs have been recorded at one time or another, though not all are currently available, and two of the six Nielsen, FS18 set are not easily come by. But any addition to the romans repertoire (the romans, incidentally, is the Scandinavian equivalent of the German Lied or the French mélodie) is welcome, and one with as much charm as this, doubly so. Kringelborn opens with the Rangström group – and with the haunting Runeberg setting, 'The Only Moment' – and characterises all of them with real sensitivity. On home territory and Grieg, Kringelborn is very persuasive though the Sibelius set is not uniformly successful. 'Black Roses' comes off very well indeed. So, for the most part, do the Nielsen songs, except 'Lake of memory', where Kringelborn sounds a shade tentative – and slightly under the note. Summing up, if there are any reservations, it is that Kringelborn tends to set greater store by a smooth legato and beauty of sound than dramatic character. Mind you, she has beauty of sound to set store by, and a pleasing vocal personality, and there is so much that gives delight. Malcolm Martineau's accompanying throughout is admirable, and the recording first-class.

Erich Kunz bar

Opera Arias H
Don Giovanni, Der lustige Krieg, Eine Nacht in Venedig, Le nozze di Figaro, Der Vogelhändler, Der Waffenschmied, Der Wildschütz, Zar und Zimmermann, Die Zauberflöte and Der Zigeunerbaron; Viennese songs by various composers
Erich Kunz bar with various artists
Testament mono SBT1059 (79 minutes: ADD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1947-53

Here is Kunz in his absolute prime, moving his agreeable voice around Figaro's, Leporello's and Papageno's music with the confidence derived from experience in the roles in Vienna, but without the slightest sense of routine. It should not be forgotten that he was one of the first German-speaking singers to learn his Da Ponte roles in Italian: his diction and accent in them, as we find here, are virtually perfect. Under Karajan, in Figaro's 'Non più andrai' he is disciplined by a fast tempo, while Ackermann is more yielding in Leporello's 'Madamina'. Karajan also conducts the Giovanni/Zerlina duet (with the incomparable Seefried). It is a wonderful souvenir of two artists, their voices blending ideally, who sang so often together in that notable ensemble in Vienna. Kunz was also loved in his home city for his assumption of buffo parts in Lortzing's operas, and he brings to their arias, again with Ackermann in sympathetic support, a rich vein of comic characterization without ever resorting to caricature – Kunz was, above all, a sensitive musician. The second half of this issue is devoted to operetta items and Viennese songs. In the former it may be complained that he was often adopting, and transposing down, music written originally for a tenor: four songs from Ein Nacht in Venedig, in the Korngold rescension, rather suffer in that respect, yet Kunz's wholly idiomatic approach almost makes us forget the anomaly. In what are mostly Heurigen songs, he is absolutely in his element; only his older, tenor colleague, Julius Patzak was his peer in these. The accompanying Schrammel Ensemble are wholly authentic. Try, if you can, Da draussen in der Wachau, so beguiling in tone and style, and you will not be able to resist the rest.

Jennifer Larmore mez

My Native Land
Aborn 'Tis Winter now. Shall I compare thee to a Summer's day. Make me an instrument of Thy peace Abramson Soldier, Soldier Barber Bessie Bobtail, Op 2 No 3. Songs, Op 10 – No 1, Rain has fallen; No 2, Sleep now; No 3, I hear an army. Sure on this shining night, Op 13 No 3 Copland Old American Songs, Set 2 – The little horses; Zion's walls; At the river; Ching-a-ring J Duke In the fields. 20th century. Heart! We will forget him! Heggie He's gone away. The leather-winged bat. Barb'ry Allen. To say before going to sleep. White in the moon Hoiby Winter Song. A letter Hundley The astronomers Ives My native land. The things our fathers loved. Memories Naginski Richard Cory Niles Black is the color of my true love's hair. Fee Simple
Jennifer Larmore mez Antoine Palloc pf
Teldec 0630-16069-2 (75 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Selected texts included. Recorded 1996

Jennifer Larmore has chosen this programme with care: it feels like a personal choice, sung with personal concern. Whether it's recast traditional, homegrown original or something altogether loftier, she seems to know where it's coming from. American song is nothing if not outspoken and this is a full, ripe, outspoken voice. Black is the color of my true love's hair gives you the measure of it – a handsome song, handsomely recast, the low-lying phrases of its glorious melody just as dark as dark can be. Occasionally the characterisation slips into the Bryn Terfel school of the overstated. But then again you wouldn't want to be without the broadness of her Southern Belle in Robert Abramson's setting of Soldier, Soldier. For the rest, the unfamilar are among the richest pickings. The directness of Jake Heggie's setting of the traditional text He's gone away is at once disarming. It's impossible to date and yet there is something longstanding and venerable about it. Four other Heggie songs are offered, and in each case it's amazing how he assumes the identity of his texts. Lee Hoiby's work is most appealing, not least his impassioned Wilfred Owen setting, Winter Song, and Emily Dickinson's A letter, which is as shy, sly and wry as its deliciously knowing text. But ultimately, there is Samuel Barber. His two James Joyce settings, I hear an army and Rain has fallen, are stunning, the former vivid, vehement, the latter defined by an inconsolable and very particular melancholy, culminating in a furious piano cadenza that says more about frustration and despair than even Joyce's text. Antoine Palloc plays it here with an awareness and strength of purpose that mark out his contributions throughout the disc. And, of course, there is Sure on this shining night – as fine a song about wonder and the infinite as any. James Agee's text is one of nine reproduced in the beautifully illustrated booklet. It is a pity all the texts have not been included. Good as Larmore's diction is, they are needed.

Lotte Lehmann sop

Songs – Balogh, Beethoven, Brahms, Cimara, Franz, Gounod, Grechaninov, Hahn, Jensen, Marx, Mozart, Pfitzner, Sadero, Schubert, Schumann, Sjöberg, Wolf and Worth H
Lotte Lehmann sop with various artists
Romophone mono ② 81013-2 Ⓕ
(157 minutes: ADD). Recorded 1935-40

Lotte Lehmann was at the height of her powers as a song interpreter in the late 1930s: the bloom of youth is still in the tone, now enhanced by the experience of many years of stage interpretation. Thus, her characters in extremis become something of a talisman of suffering women. Her impassioned Gretchen in Schubert's great song is sister to, and inhabits the same world as, Lehmann's Leonore and Sieglinde. The searing intensity of 'Was hör ich alte Laute?' in Schumann's Alte Laute goes through you, becomes etched in the mind, just as do certain phrases in her operatic portrayals. Yet while the passions are felt on a large scale throughout these songs, the intimate mould of Lieder singing is never breached. The readings are generous and free, never dull, careful or limited, or by another token overladen with detailed word-painting in the Schwarzkopf manner. Unlike many of her contemporaries Lehmann ranged wide in her choice of repertory. She digs out Jensen's Lehn' diene Wang' an meine Wange and makes you believe this little sentimental song is a masterpiece. However, it is for the Schubert (including 12 songs from Winterreise, so immediate in effect, no holds barred), Schumann, Brahms and Wolf, that the myriad admirers of this artist will want these two lavishly filled CDs. The transfers are clean and clear, but at times impart a slight glare to Lehmann's tone. This offering is an essential addition to the Lehmann discography.

Dame Felicity Lott sop

My Garden
Barab One Perfect Rose Berners Red Roses and Red Noses Chabrier Lied. Toutes les fleurs
Chausson Le temps des lilas Fauré Green, Op 58 No 3. Les roses d'Ispahan, Op 39 No 4
Franck Le mariage des roses Musto Triolet. The Rose Family Schumann Mein Garten, Op 77 No 2. Jasminenstrauch, Op 27 No 4. Herzeleid, Op 107 No 1. Die Blume der Ergebung, Op 83 No 2. Erstes Grün, Op 35 No 4. Volksliedchen, Op 51 No 2
Stanford From the red rose
Stanley & Allen Cabbages, Cabeans and Carrots
Wolf Mörike Lieder – Er ist's; Im Frühling; Der Gärtner. Eichendorff Lieder – Nachtzauber. Goethe Lieder – Frühling übers Jahr; Anakreons Grab
Haydn Wood Roses of Picardy
Dame Felicity Lott sop Graham Johnson pf
Hyperion CDA66937 (65 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included. Recorded 1996

The green-fingered accompanist has cultivated another fine display. Graham Johnson's garden of song is a splendid place for finding not only the usual hardy annuals from Germany, but also rare flowerings of the repertoire from France, England and the United States. The first half of this disc is devoted to Schumann and Wolf in about equal measure. There are some unusual items among the Schumann, such as the opening 'Mein Garten' and Ophelia's 'Herzeleid'; for the Wolf selection, Johnson extends the frontiers of his garden rather drastically, so as to take in the green hill of 'Im Frühling' and the graveyard of 'Anakreons Grab'. No doubt he wanted to include a few major songs, but it is in these that Dame Felicity is most likely to be found wanting. Compared with the best rival performances, neither 'Im Frühling' nor 'Nachtzauber' reveals its hidden depths, though her warm and affectionate singing of 'Anakreons Grab' is on a higher level. The lighter Wolf songs, by contrast, are nicely turned. Once into the French and English half, there is no looking back, not least because the singer is twice as communicative in these languages as she is in German. The opening line of Chausson's Le temps des lilas is as idiomatic as one could wish, floating elegantly and sensuously over the long opening sentence and knowing just where to place the crucial change in vocal colour. The English-language group finds her lavishing a sensuality on Stanford's music that would probably have made the composer blush. There are two fine pithy songs by the American John Musto and another sarcastic one by Seymour Barab; then, in another rapid change of costume, she reappears in Eliza Doolittle's rags to end the disc with a delightfully upper-class fake Cockney rendering of Cabbages, Cabeans and Carrots. In the best Johnson style, the disc is both instructive and fun at the same time.

Giovanni Martinelli ten

Opera Arias and Duets Ⓗ
Giordano Andrea Chenier – Un dì all'azzurro spazio[e]; Come un bel dì di maggio[f]. Fedora[e] – Amor ti vieta; Mia madre, la mia vecchia madre
Mascagni Cavalleria rusticana[f] – O Lola; Mamma, quel vino è generoso Leoncavallo Pagliacci – Recitar!…Vesti la giubba[f]; Per la morte! smettiamo…No, Pagliaccio non sona[d]. Zazà – E un riso gentil[f] Puccini La bohème – Che gelida manina[e]. Tosca – E lucevan le stelle[e]
Verdi Rigoletto – La donna è mobile. Il trovatore – Quale d'armi fragor…Di quella pira[ad]. La forza del destino[b] – Oh, tu che in seno; Invano Alvaro…Le minacciei fieri accenti. Aida – Se quel guerrier io fossi…Celeste Aida[e]; Nume, custode e vindici[c]
Giovanni Martinelli ten [a]Grace Anthony sop [b]Giuseppe de Luca bar [c]Ezio Pinza bass [d]Metropolitan Opera Chorus and Orchestra / Giulio Setti, [e]Josef Pasternack, [c]Rosario Bourdon
Preiser Lebendige Vergangenheit mono 89062 Ⓕ (68 minutes: AAD). Recorded 1926-27

Here is one of the most fascinating of singers. He can also be one of the most thrilling, his voice having at its best a beauty unlike any other, his art noble in breadth of phrase and concentration of tone. It also has to be said that his records hardly make easy or restful listening, but what at first may even repel soon becomes compulsive, the intensity of expression and individuality of timbre impressing themselves upon the memory with extraordinary vividness. Martinelli's career was centred on the Metropolitan, New York, where he sang first at the height of the Caruso era, inheriting Caruso's more dramatic roles in 1921. This selection makes an unrepresentative start with 'La donna è mobile', but the excerpts from Il trovatore and La forza del destino have the very essence of the man, masterly in his shaping and shading of recitative, or in the long curves of his melodic line and the tension of his utterance. There are also superb performances of solos from Andrea Chénier and Pagliacci, the involvement of his 'No, Pagliaccio non son' unequalled before or since. These are recordings from 1926 and 1927, the period in which his vocal and artistic qualities were probably best matched. The transfers are fine apart from the song from Leoncavallo's Zazà which plays below pitch.

Karita Mattila sop

Arias and Scenes
Janáček Jenůfa – Jenůfa's Prayer Lehár Die lustige Witwe – Es lebt eine Vilja, ein Waldmägdelein Puccini Manon Lescaut – In quelle trine morbide R Strauss Elektra – Ich kann nicht sitzen und ins Dunkel starren Tchaikovsky The Queen of Spades – It is close on midnight already; What am I crying for? Verdi Simon Boccanegra – Come in quest'ora bruna Wagner Lohengrin – Einsam in trüben Tagen; Euch Lüften, die mein Klagen. Die Walküre – Der Männer Sippe; Du bist der Lenz
Karita Mattila sop London Philharmonic Orchestra / Yutaka Sado
Erato 8573 85785-2 (56 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included ●

We are surely a favoured generation that has three singers – Renée Fleming, Angela Gheorghiu and Karita Mattila (and perhaps more that don't come quite so easily to mind) – who satisfy so pre-eminently the taste for a soprano voice that has these sensuous virtues of richness, smoothness, firmness and purity.

On their own, and number by number, the performances are delightful. A lovelier voice one could not wish for, and it suits all of these operatic characters in turn, for all, whatever the nationality and present mood, presuppose a lyric soprano with powers of generous expansion, a warmth of tone in the essential middle register, and resources on high that can match the excitements of an emotional climax with a voice rich in its reserves of range and volume. Mattila has all of that, and the mastery to turn from Russian to Italian, German to Czech, Puccini to Janáček, Wagner to Lehár. She phrases well (hear the start of 'In quelle trine morbide'), commands a mature tone and manner (try Sieglinde's narrative) and is scrupulous over matters of detail (getting the climax of Lisa's 'midnight' aria right, for instance, where many don't).

If that is enough – and it is certainly a great deal – then this recital (well recorded and with admirable orchestral work) will give unspoilt pleasure. If something additional is wanting – and those who are accustomed to read between the lines will probably sense that there is – it is at least not so urgently wanting that its absence should spoil the pleasure of what is present.

John McCormack ten

Opera and Operetta Arias 🄷
Il barbiere di Siviglia, Barry of Ballymore, La bohème, Carmen, L'elisir d'amore, Faust, La fille du régiment, La Gioconda, In a Persian garden, Lakmé, Lucia di Lammermoor, Naughty Marietta, Les pêcheurs de perles, Rigoletto and La traviata; songs by Balfe, Barker, Blumenthal, Cherry, Claribel, Crouch, MacMurrough, Marshall, Parelli, Rossini and Traditional
John McCormack ten with various artists
Romophone mono ② 82006-2 (155 minutes: ADD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1910-11

You think, at the start of this journey through the recordings of two years, that here is McCormack at his absolute best, in the first of the Lucia di Lammermoor solos; but no, for the second one ('Tu che a Dio spiegasti l'ali'), made two months later, is better still, a perfection of lyrical singing, the music lying ideally within his voice as it was at that time, and with the heart and imagination more evidently involved. A little later comes 'Una furtiva lagrima', where the modulation into D flat major ('m'ama') brings surely some of the most beautiful, most unflawed tenor singing ever recorded. This album, from 1910 and 1911, presents him in finest voice. He was only 25 at the outset: in the first flush of his operatic success and already the partner of Melba and Tetrazzini. His favourite baritone partner was Mario Sammarco, who turns up as a blustery Figaro to his elegant Almaviva, retiring to a more discreet distance behind the recording horn in the duet from Les pêcheurs de perles (the deservedly rare version included here along with the more familiar 10 inch). They also join in the gondolieri-like harmonies of Rossini's Li marinari (splendid high Bs from McCormack) and give each other a run for their money in a full-bodied, exciting account of the duet from La Gioconda. McCormack, it is true, had still to develop eloquence as a singer of songs, but his eventual mastery is clearly foretold in the old Irish song, She is far from the land, a haunting and heartfelt piece of tender nostalgia. The transfers are excellent.

Lauritz Melchior ten

Complete MGM Recordings 1946-47 🄷
F Andersen I det frie[b] Bach/Gounod Ave Maria Bizet Agnus Dei[b]; Cantique de Noël Bond I Love You Truly De Curtis Torna a Surriento De Koven O Promise Me Geehl For You Alone Heuberger The Kiss in Your Eyes Hildach Der Lenz Kern The Song is You Lehár You Are my Heart's Delight Leoncavallo Mattinata. Pagliacci[c] – Vesti la giubba; No, Pagliaccio non son Nevin The Rosary Porter Easy to Love[b] Puccini Tosca[c] – Recondita armonia; E lucevan le stelle Rotter Spring Came Back to Vienna Schubert Who is Silvia?, D891 J Strauss II Kaiser, Op 437 Stravinsky Summer Moon (arr Klenner) Traditional All mein Gedanken[a]; Helan går[b]; Silent Night Youmans Without a Song
Lauritz Melchior ten [a]Lou Raderman vn [a]Albert Sendry org MGM Studio Orchestra and [b]Chorus / Georgie Stoll [a]pf; [c]Giocomo Spadoni
Romophone mono ② 82019-2 (78 minutes: ADD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1946-7 ●

In the years just after the war, two of the 20th-century's greatest singers, Pinza and Melchior, moved from the opera house into a world of more popular music. They were castigated for their pains because it was considered they were lowering the standards of their art. Today we take a much more tolerant attitude to these things; indeed it is frequently encouraged, especially by record companies. Melchior's move into films and the like was successful with the general public, and MGM signed him up for a series of recordings, made in 1946-47, when he was 56. They are presented here in their entirety.

The legendary Danish Heldentenor, still at the time singing Wagner at the Metropolitan, tackles a good deal of dross but turns more or less everything into gold by dint of his dignified artistry. A few of the songs are beyond even him to save, but he sings Schubert's Who is Sylvia?, Italian songs (in the original), Viennese operetta (in English) and Christmas songs – Bizet's Cantique de Noël a particular success – with total conviction. In a Danish children's song (this item comes from a film soundtrack) and a Swedish drinking song, both introduced by his own speech, his disarming honesty of approach is its own justification. The latter is an absolutely delightful and jovial end to the whole project, with a cry of 'Skol' to round it off!

That his voice had lost virtually nothing of its operatic opulence is proved in Cavaradossi's two arias, not wholly idiomatic in style, and Canio's two jealous outbursts, all recorded at the final session on December 26, 1947, by which time he was 57. As Canio, his impassioned utterance is full of the requisite pathos and power, yet avoiding the extravagant effects of some Italian tenors, a fitting end to his distinguished career in the studio recording the heavier tenor repertory. The transfers, by Mark Obert-Thorn, are exemplary.

Miscellaneous

The Reopening of La Scala Concert
Boito Mefistofele[a] – Prologue Puccini Manon Lescaut – Intermezzo; Act 3[b] Rossini La gazza ladra – Overture. Guillaume Tell – Passo a sei; Wedding Chorus[c]; Soldier's Dance. Mosè in Egitto – Dal tuo stellato soglio[d] Verdi Nabucco – Overture; Va pensiero[e]. I vespri siciliani – Overture. Quattro pezzi sacri[f] – Te Deum
[bc]Mafalda Favero, [d]Renata Tebaldi sops [cd]Jolanda Gardino mez [bcd]Giovanni Malipiero, [b]Giuseppe Nessi tens [b]Mariano Stabile bar [b]Carlo Forti, [acd]Tancredi Pasero basses [abcef]Chorus and Symphony Orchestra of La Scala, Milan / Arturo Toscanini
Naxos Historical mono ② 8 110821/2 Ⓢ
(108 minutes: AAD). Recorded from a broadcast performance in 1946 .

The war over, the Milanese set about the immediate rebuilding of the bombed La Scala. By 1946 the work was complete in time for Toscanini to return – by public demand – to his old house to direct the opening concert. This legendary occasion features on CD in tolerabl enough sound to enjoy its many virtues. Chie among them are the old maestro's inimitable indeed unique way of inspiriting singers an orchestra to perform Rossini and Verdi a perhaps never before or since. Nobody els combines the ability to give these composer musical precision and make the music sing a does Toscanini (try the cello melody in th Vespri Overture, or, for his exactness o execution, the following staccato passage) Those attributes are evident in all the overture presented here, giving the music that quality o Italianità of which Toscanini was an absolut master. Or try the three piercing chords jus before the chorus enters in 'Va, pensiero' t judge the conductor's interpretative genius Then, who (except perhaps Beecham) would b able to invest the dances from William Tell wit such a light, exuberant touch? And, still on th first CD, there is the utterly heart-warmin feeling in the Prayer from Mosè in Egitto wit the very young Tebaldi glorious on the sopran line and the veteran Pasero intoning, as only a Italian bass can intone, the bass-line.

The Verdi Te Deum that opens the secon disc displays that special quality found in Italia choral singing, and all the chorus members sin their hearts out for their old master, even whe there are some less than steady moments whic reveal that the war's exigencies haven't yet quit been overcome. Then we hear something o Toscanini's affection for two of his othe operatic loves, Puccini and Boito. Th Intermezzo to Manon Lescaut is a searin experience, followed by a performance of Act given by three of La Scala's stars of the pre-wa and wartime era, plus the inimitable comprimari Giuseppe Nessi as the Lamplighter. Favero an Malipiero, with their clear diction and ability t sing off the words with agility, show wha Puccini interpretation has lost in authenticity i these days of international homogenise performance. Toscanini is again in his element while in the Prologue to Mefistofele he shows a affinity with this eccentric score. Pasero has high old time in the title-role. Only th inadequate notes, which keep on repeating th same information in different articles and sa nothing whatsoever about the performance mar a most important issue, surely a must fo opera collectors.

Diana Montague mez

Great Operatic Arias, Volume 2
Berlioz La damnation de Faust, Op 24 – D'amour l'ardente flamme Delibes Lakmé – Viens Mallika; Dôme épais le jasmin ... Sous le dôme épais (Flowe duet) Donizetti La favorite – Fia dunque vero? ... O mio Fernando Gluck Orfeo ed Euridice – Che farò senza Euridice? Gounod Faust – Faites-lui mes aveux Offenbach La périchole – O mon cher amant, je te jure; Ah! quel dîner je viens de faire!; Tu n'es pas beau, tu n'es pas riche Rossini Le comte Ory – la faveur de cette nuit obscure Saint-Saëns Samson et Dalila – Printemps qui commence; Amour! viens aider ma faiblesse!; Mon coeur s'ouvre à ta voix

A Thomas Mignon – Connais-tu le pays?; Me voici dans son boudoir
Diana Montague mez Mary Plazas sop Bruce Ford ten Philharmonia Orchestra / David Parry
Chandos/Peter Moores Foundation
Opera in English Series CHAN3010 Ⓕ
(76 minutes: DDD). English texts included
Recorded 1997

Montague, our leading interpreter of what the French call the Falcon repertory (after a singer of this special character), has been far too little celebrated, at least on disc, so this superbly executed programme of French opera arias, with one exception, sung in the vernacular with impeccable diction and full of dramatic import, must be reckoned the jewel so far in the Chandos Opera in English series. Above all it is Montague's distinctive timbre, sense of the correct style and complete identification with each character in turn that make the recital so thrilling, exciting and pleasing.

An account of Orfeo's 'What is life?' that equals if not surpasses Ferrier's, a Delilah to die for, each of her arias given a different character as required, a Marguerite (Berlioz's) who yearns with the best on disc (Montague's low tones here so eloquent, the climax given all its due before the intense reprise), a Mignon who is suitably mysterious ('Have you heard of the land?' so full of longing for a lost ideal with a marvellous lift at the words 'my home') and a Donizetti Léonore who 'speaks' so tenderly of her love for her Fernando, with a cabaletta, including repeat, to show off the singer's forceful attack, all these emotional states are contained within a line and tone that respect vocal verities.

Montague has often been called upon to take breeches roles on stage so it is good to be reminded of her lighter touch, not only as Siebel and Frédéric, but also as Isolier, a part she sang to critical approval at Glyndebourne in 1997: the trio from Comte Ory is graced by Bruce Ford's elegant Ory and Plazas as the Countess Adèle. Plazas also partners Montague in a nicely flowing account of that duet from Lakmé. Finally we have Montague the witty comedienne in three deliciously articulated numbers of Périchole. Parry and the Philharmonia provide euphonious accompaniments and, where needed, true passion. The recording keeps a nice balance between voice and orchestra. This is a triumph for Diana Montague.

Claudia Muzio sop

Opera Arias 🄷
Aida, Un ballo in maschera, La bohème, Carmen, Cavalleria rusticana, Les contes d'Hoffmann, Ernani, La forza del destino, Gianni Schicchi, La Gioconda, Guillaume Tell, Louise, Madama Butterfly, Madame Sans-Gêne, Manon, Manon Lescaut, Mefistofele, Mignon, Otello, Pagliacci, Il segreto di Susanna, Suor Angelica, Tosca, La traviata, Il trovatore, I vespri siciliani and La Wally; songs by Braga, Burleigh, Buzzi-Peccia, Delibes, Donaudy, Giordano, Mascheroni, Olivieri, Roxas and Sanderson
Claudia Muzio sop with various artists
Romophone mono ② 81010-2 (140 minutes: ADD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1917-25

Romophone has put us in its debt by issuing the 1917-25 Pathés and adding four unpublished and fascinating Edison titles. Inevitably there is some overlapping with the first set (reviewed below) but it is surprising how many titles were not remade by the soprano. Here we have, on the first disc, an impassioned and nicely shaded 'Suicidio!' in a reading that is amazingly accomplished given that Muzio was just 28 at the time. 'O patria mia' and 'Un bel dì' adumbrate the sheer beauty of the voice of the young spinto: strength is there, but also refinement and feeling, although the technical command, as often with this singer, isn't always faultless. Above all, we catch an echo over the years of what Muzio must have been like: deeply affecting, in these roles, confirming contemporary comment.

The songs are irresistible. Buzzi-Peccia's Baciarmi is poised sensuously on a skein of gossamer tone. In another song, Burleigh's Jean, we can delight in Muzio's excellent and clear English and also in the better sound. Then come the four 'new' Edisons, which include Donaudy's O del mio amato ben, later repeated in 1935 for Columbia: the performance is just as plangent. Even more tenderly accented is a little-known and unattributed song, Torna amore, and the even more evocative traditional Mon jardin.

Opera Arias and Duets 🄷
Adriana Lecouvreur, Andrea Chénier, L'Arlesiana, La bohème, Cavalleria rusticana, Cecilia, La forza del destino, Mefistofele, Norma, Otello, La sonnambula, Tosca, La traviata and Il trovatore; songs by Buzzi-Peccia, Debussy, Delibes, Donaudy, Parisotti, Refice and Reger. Also contains part of Tosca, Act 1, recorded live in 1932
Claudia Muzio sop with various artists
Romophone mono ② 81015-2 (155 minutes: ADD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1934-35

This set completes Romophone's comprehensive survey of all Muzio's records, masterminded by Ward Marston. Since their first release, Muzio's Columbias of 1934-5 have always been her most accessible discs, but they have never, even on previous CD reissues, sounded so present and clear as here. This most eloquent of divas seems to be in the room with us, and the music in hand is delivered with such sincere passion, such total conviction, that tears are brought to the eyes. Not for a moment can one be anything but enthralled by these readings. Since there is not enough material to fill two CDs, Romophone have added a substantial extract from Act 1 of a 1932 San Francisco Tosca, primitively recorded and so far known only to a few Muzio fanatics. However, this is an essential issue for anyone wanting to know about the art of one of the most lovable and vital interpreters.

Opera Arias and Songs 🄷
Adriana Lecouvreur, L'Africaine, L'amico Fritz, Andrea Chénier, Bianca e Fernando, La bohème, Carmen, Les contes d'Hoffmann, Eugene Onegin, La forza del destino, Hérodiade, I Lombardi, Loreley, Madame Sans-Gêne, Mefistofele, Pagliacci, Paride e Elena, Rinaldo, Salvator Rosa, La traviata, Il trovatore, I vespri siciliani, La Wally and Zazà; songs by Bachelet, Buzzi-Peccia, Chopin, Guagni-Benvenuti, Herbert, Mascheroni, Monahan, Pergolesi, Rossini and Sodero
Claudia Muzio sop with various artists
Romophone mono ② 81005-2 (153 minutes: ADD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1911-25

The crackles and surface noise that usually afflict Edison reproduction have all but been eliminated, so that we can hear Muzio's voice in its absolute prime without, as it were, the effort of listening through a sea of interference. The sheer beauty of the soprano's voice and her wonderful intensity of expression can now be experienced with astonishing immediacy. All the Muzio gifts, including that of refined, exquisite phrasing combined with that peculiarly heart-rending intensity that was hers alone, are heard in that enchanting song by Bachelet, Chère nuit (first disc, track 8). If your dealer will let you hear that, even if you are sceptical about singers of the past, you are sure to make off home with this set, eager to hear the rest. A feast of captivating interpretations await the listener.

Heddle Nash ten

The Incomparable Heddle Nash 🄷
Puccini La bohème – Act 4^{a}
Opera Arias and Duets – Il barbiere di Siviglia, Così fan tutte, Don Giovanni, Die Fledermaus, La jolie fille de Perth and Rigoletto
Heddle Nash ten ^{a}Rodolfo with various artists including ^{a}Lisa Perli sop Mimì; ^{a}Stella Andreva sop Musetta; ^{a}John Brownlee bar Marcello; ^{a}Robert Alva bass Schaunard; ^{a}Robert Easton bass Colline
London Philharmonic Orchestra / Sir Thomas Beecham
Dutton Laboratories mono CDLX7012 Ⓑ
(69 minutes: ADD). Recorded 1929-35

When he made this recording of Act 4 of La bohème in 1935 Nash was at the height of his powers and sings a spontaneous, quite Italianate Rodolfo. Perli makes a simple, heartfelt Mimì. The rest of the cast falls far short of the principals, but Beecham is at his most alert, and sensitive too. Nash's Mozart is most elegantly represented by the well-nigh faultless versions of Ottavio's arias, made at the time of his sensational Covent Garden début in 1929 in Don Giovanni. The phrasing is refined, the breath long, the big run in 'Il mio tesoro' encompassed in a single span. The Duke of Mantua's three arias tell us just why this was one of Nash's favourite roles early in his career. He makes the most of the execrable translation by singing it with total conviction, and his lyric tenor rings out with just the right élan, matched by subtle colourings. The Serenade from La jolie fille de Perth is justly renowned because it displays to perfection the elegiac, minstrel-like quality of Nash's tone and his impassioned delivery – and yet he is said to have had a cold on the day it was made! The transfers (including the solo items) are superior to any previous issues, bringing the voices into one's room without let or hindrance.

Anne Sofie von Otter mez

Beethoven Adelaide, Op 46. Maigesang, Op 52 No 4. Liebes-Klage, Op 82 No 2. Der Kuss, Op 128. Zwei Lieder, WoO118. Als die Geliebte sich trennen wollte, WoO132. In questa tomba oscura, WoO133. An die Geliebte, WoO140. Sehnsucht, WoO146 Meyerbeer Viens, Mina viens. Komm du schönes Fischermädchen. La barque légère. La fille de l'air. Sicilienne. Prière d'enfants^{a}. Le voeu pendant l'orage. Hirtenlied^{b}
Spohr Sechs Lieder, Op 154^{c}
Anne Sofie von Otter mez Melvyn Tan fp with ^{a}Christina Högman sop ^{a}Kristina Hammarström mez ^{b}Eric Hoeprich cl ^{c}Nils-Erik Sparf vn
Archiv Produktion 469 074-2AH Ⓕ
(71 minutes: DDD). Texts and translations included.
Recorded 2000 ●

Neither Meyerbeer's nor Spohr's are over-represented in the record catalogues, and while their efforts in the genre are not to be compared with those of their younger contemporaries Schubert and Schumann, this is music of considerable charm; salon music, yes, but of a superior kind. Certainly, the shade of Schubert hovers over Meyerbeer's Komm du schönes Fischermädchen with its lilting barcarolle-like accompaniment and most obviously in Hirtenlied for voice, clarinet and piano. It's not a masterpiece in the league of Schubert's Shepherd on the Rock, but von Otter, Hoeprich and Tan make the strongest possible case for it.

Few song collectors, however, will be able to resist the twinkle in von Otter's voice in her selection of seven songs from Meyerbeer's anthology, 40 Melodies, while the Beethoven group includes a handful of his best loved songs: the funereal ode, In questa tomba oscura – gravely beautiful; Der Kuss – a masterpiece of comedy in song; the yearning Adelaide – urgently sung; and Seufzer eines Ungeliebten, whose concluding section is the theme Beethoven used for his Choral Fantasia. A delightful record of art-songs to which you will without a doubt find yourself returning. The sound quality is superb.

Lamenti
Bertali Lamento della Regina d'Inghilterra^{abd}

Legrenzi Il ballo del Gran Duca, Op 16 – Corrente nona[de] Monteverdi Madrigals, Book 7 – Con che soavità[ade]. Lamento d'Arianna[ac] Piccinini Ciaccona[c] Purcell Incassum, Lesbia, rogas, Z383[ad]. O Solitude! my sweetest choice, Z406[ac] Vivaldi Cessate, omai cessate, RV684[ad]
[a]Anne Sofie von Otter mez [b]Franz-Josef Selig bass [c]Jakob Lindberg theorbo [d]Musica Antiqua Köln / Reinhard Goebel [e]vn
Archiv Produktion 457 617-2AH (60 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included. Recorded 1997 ●

Anne Sofie von Otter adds to her laurels with this issue, which belies any doom and gloom suggested by its title with singing of an intensity of expression, subtlety of nuance and rich palette of vocal colour that leave one full of admiration. Whether lamenting a stony-hearted lover (Cessate, omai cessate) or a faithless one (in Arianna, all that remains of a lost Monteverdi opera), a queen of Arcadia (Incassum, Lesbia, rogas) or the husband of an English queen (presumably Charles I, in view of the frenzied cries for revenge), von Otter fills every word with vivid meaning while still preserving the musical line. Vengeance is also the passionate response of the lover in the Vivaldi cantata (no stranger to the record catalogue), superbly performed here, with full-blooded instrumental backing by Musica Antiqua Köln. At the opposite end of the emotional spectrum, another highlight of the disc is Purcell's sad, touching Incassum, Lesbia. His O Solitude! is built on a ground bass, as of course is the little piece for solo theorbo by Piccinini, as well as the Legrenzi Corrente – neither of which, in fact, suggests lamenting. The most varied instrumentation occurs in Monteverdi's sectional Con che soavità, with its changeable tempos and ornamental vocal line. The contribution by an admirable bass, Franz-Josef Selig, in two brief but low-lying narrations in the Bertali (a work largely in recitative, but with interludes for three violas) should not be overlooked. Altogether an outstanding disc.

Wings in the night – Swedish Songs

Alfvén Songs, Op 28 – No 3, I kiss your hand; No 6, The forest sleeps Sigurd von Koch Exotic Songs – No 1, In the month of Tjaitra; No 3, Of lotus scent and moonlight. The wild swans – spring night's rain; Mankind's lot; The wild swans
Peterson-Berger Nothing is like the time of waiting. Swedish folk ballads, Op 5 – No 1, When I go myself in the dark forest; No 3, Like Stars in the Heavens. Three Marit's Songs, Op 12. Böljeby Waltz. Return. Aspåkers Polka Rangström Poems by Bo Bergman – No 1, Wings in the night; No 3, Melody. The Dark Flower – No 2, Prayer to the night; No 4, Farewell. Pan. Old Swedish Sjögren Lieder from Wolff's 'Tannhäuser', Op 12 – No 4, Hab'ein Röslein dir gebrochen; No 6, Ich möchte schweben. Du schaust mich an mit stummen Fragen Stenhammar Songs and Moods, Op 26 – No 1, The Wanderer; No 4, Miss Blonde and Miss Brunette; No 5, A ship sails; No 9, Coastal song. Songs, Op 37 – No 1, Jutta comes to the Volkungs; No 2, In the maple's shade
Anne Sofie von Otter mez Bengt Forsberg pf
DG 449 189-2GH (74 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included. Recorded 1995 ●

If von Otter's and Forsberg's intention in compiling this recital was to provide an introduction to the riches of Swedish song so compelling that purchasers of it will hunger for more, they have succeeded. There are very few songs here that could not be programmed without apology or fear of comparison alongside the best German Lieder of the same period (the 40 years between 1884 and 1924). They contain considerable variety of mood and musical style, and the recital has been cleverly programmed to demonstrate in particular the range and the development of the two finest song composers here, Wilhelm Peterson-Berger and Wilhelm Stenhammar. Both were greatly gifted melodists, Peterson-Berger holding to an almost folk-like vein of simple lyricism, while Stenhammar reached further and touched darker moods, and the other composers here are by no means cast into the shade by these two masters. The performances are superb, quiet shadings of colour and subtle phrasings under immaculate control, a mere thread of voice often used to draw you into the heart of a song quite magically. Forsberg is an ideally imaginative and positive partner. You will probably find yourself playing several of these songs over and over again (for von Otter's exquisite little flourish of coloratura at the end of von Koch's Of lotus scent, for example, or for her delightful touch of humour and affection describing little chicks 'who can hardly walk' stumbling into the first warm sun of summer in the first of Peterson-Berger's Marit's Songs).

Adelina Patti sop

Opera Arias and Songs Ⓗ
Adelina Patti sop with Mario Ancona, Mattia Battistini, Emma Calvé, Fernando De Lucia, Edouard de Reszke, Emma Eames, Lucien Fugère, Wilhelm Hesch, Lilli Lehmann, Félia Litvinne, Francesco Marconi, Victor Maurel, Dame Nellie Melba, Lillian Nordica, Adelina Patti, Pol Plançon, Maurice Renaud, Sir Charles Santley, Marcella Sembrich, Francesco Tamagno and Francesco Viñas
Nimbus Prima Voce mono ② NI7840/1 Ⓜ
(120 minutes: ADD). Recorded 1902-28

This is a 'historical' issue for straightforward enjoyment. Although the originals were made in the very earliest years of recording, they are reproduced here with a vividness that calls for very little in the way of making allowances and so forth. It starts in party mood with the first Falstaff of all, Victor Maurel, singing to a bunch of cronies in the studio of 1907 the 'Quand'ero paggio' which he sang at La Scala in the première of 1893. They cheer and call for an encore, which he gives them, then again, this time in French. The record has been transferred many times, but never has it been so easy for the listener to 'see' it and feel part of it.

The magnificent bass Pol Plançon follows with King Philip's solo from Don Carlos, beautifully even in production and deeply absorbed in the character and his emotions. The hauntingly pure, well-rounded soprano of Emma Eames in Tosti's Dopo, and then the miraculously spry and elegant 80-year-old Lucien Fugère lead to the first of the Patti records: the one her husband thought unladylike and asked to be withdrawn from the catalogue, La calesera, and the most joyous she ever made. Tamagno, Melba, Nordica, Renaud: they are all here, and on thrillingly good form.

Luciano Pavarotti ten

Luciano Pavarotti – Live Recital
Beethoven In questa tomba oscura, WoO133
Bellini Dolente imagine di figlia mia. Malinconia, ninfa gentile. Vanne, o rosa fortunata. Bella Nice, che d'amore. Ma rendi pur contento Bononcini Griselda – Per la gloria d'adorarvi Cilea L'arlesiana – E la solita storia Donizetti Me voglio fa'na casa. L'elisir d'amore – Una furtiva lagrima Puccini Tosca – Recondita armonia; E lucevan le stelle
A Scarlatti Gia il sole al Gange Tosti La serenata. Non t'amo più!. Luna d'estate. Malià. Chanson de l'adieu. L'ultima canzone. 'A Vucchella. L'alba separa dalla luce l'ombra. Marechiare
Verdi Rigoletto – La donna è mobile
Luciano Pavarotti ten Leone Magiera pf
Decca 466 350-2DH (68 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded live 1997-99 ⦿

To sustain a career for 40 years is a remarkable achievement for any singer, exceptionally so for a tenor. Hugues Cuénod, who was still amazing audiences with 'things that it amuses my voice to sing' well into his eighties, is an exception to every rule; Tito Schipa stayed before the public for 46 years, but with a lighter voice and in a less demanding repertory than Pavarotti's. While Pavarotti can show off no high C in this collection, his upper register is still free enough for a full-voiced B natural or a triumphant B flat. He has lost little of his sense of long-spanned, finely sustained line, and it is surely not merely caution that leads him now to make extensive use of a crooning head voice and of intimate mezza voce shadings and to take such evident pleasure in the varieties of covered tone that can be drawn from the first syllable of the word 'luna' (in Tosti's Luna d'estate).

However the title of this collection is misleading; it is not so much a live recital as a selection of items recorded at a number of recitals. The voice is recorded very closely, perhaps to diminish the distraction of moving from one acoustic to another (it cannot disguise the fact that Leone Magiera plays at least three different pianos, not all of them of the highest quality) and listening to Pavarotti at a range of about three feet does reveal or even exaggerate the fact that here and there he does sound his age: a phrase cautiously approached, a high note prepared with a longer pause than heretofore and the vocal equivalent of crossed fingers, a hint of tarnish to the tone, of effort or strain hidden by charm and professionalism. All the more praiseworthy, then, that he should include the five Bellini songs (not so demanding as many of that composer's arias, but they insist on the most limpid cantabile); all the more engaging that he chooses no fewer than nine by Tosti because he so obviously enjoys them. Marechiare and after it the Rigoletto aria are obviously the encores, and in them one hears the old trouper delighted to be called back once again.

Rosa Ponselle sop

Rosa Ponselle On the Air, Volume 1, 1934-36 🄷
Bartlett A Dream Bizet Carmen – Danse bohémienne; Habanera; Seguédille; Mêlons! Coupons!. Ouvre ton coeur Bond I Love You Truly Brahms Volks-Kinderlieder – Wiegenlied Charles When I Have Sung My Songs Del Riego Homing Dvořák Humoresques, B187 – No 7 in G flat Eden What's In The Air Gluck Alceste – Divinités du Styx Grosvenor I Carry You In My Pocket Kountz The Sleigh Kreisler The Old Refrain Lehár Die lustige Witwe – Waltz Song Lockhart In the Luxembourg Gardens Mana-Zucca The Big Brown Bear^a Mascagni Cavalleria rusticana – Voi lo sapete; Ave Maria (arr from Intermezzo by Weatherly) Mozart Don Giovanni – Batti, batti Nevin The Rosary Padilla La violetera Ponce Estrellita Reger Schlichte Weisen, Op 76 – Maria Wiegenlied Romani Fedra – O divina Afrodite Saint-Saëns Samson et Dalila – Printemps qui commence Sandoval Ave Maria Schaefer The Cuckoo Clock Schubert Erlkönig, D328 Serradell La golondrina Spross Will-o-the-Wisp J Strauss II An der schönen, blauen Donau, Op 314 O Straus Der tapfere Soldat – Mein Held! Tchaikovsky Songs, Op 6 – Nun wer die Sehnsucht kennt Tosti Goodbye. L'ultima canzone Traditional The Last Rose of Summer. Danny Boy. Comin' thro' the Rye Valverde Clavelitos
Rosa Ponselle sop ^{a}Charles Henderson pf orchestra / André Kostelanetz
Marston ② 52012-2 (145 minutes: ADD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1934-36

In the 1930s, at the height of the Depression, the Americans weren't going to the opera very much – the Met was regularly half empty. Nor were they buying many records; they were, however, smoking. Chesterfield's, one of the leading tobacco manufacturers, sponsored a weekly radio programme, and a frequent guest on it was Rosa Ponselle. Ponselle herself said that these off-the-air recordings were a more accurate record of her singing than her studio-made discs. The sound is variable, there is a good deal of hiss and some distortion, but the familiar Ponselle style comes across loud and clear. It seems quite extraordinary now, but Ponselle made no commercial discs between 1930 (when she was at the very peak of her career) and 1939, when, just after her marriage, she was about to retire. Her singing is generous, emotive, a bit over the top sometimes in slight songs such as Ponce's Estrellita or Serradell's La golondrina. She has no difficulty crossing over to operetta, with Der tapfere Soldat ('The Chocolate Soldier') and The Merry Widow, since her stage career had begun in vaudeville. The only opera extracts here from roles she sang on stage are from Carmen, Cavalleria rusticana and Romani's Fedra.

The strength of her voice posed problems for the engineers, but by moving the broadcast microphone away from the orchestra, they were able to capture something of the energy and power of Ponselle's singing that she felt was absent from her earlier 78s. A lot of the material is ephemeral, but in a trifle like The Sleigh by Kountz one gets a vivid glimpse of her agility – it was one of the thrills of Ponselle's singing that such a huge voice had such a facility with coloratura passages, and that she could fine down the tone to wonderful pianissimos.

The sentimentality of many of these songs, such as Bartlett's A Dream or Bond's I Love You Truly would be completely beyond the scope of most modern singers, but Ponselle's directness lifts them above kitsch. It is sad that she didn't include arias from some of the operas she was singing at the Met at the same time – Luisa Miller or Andrea Chénier. As it is, this collection offers a fascinating souvenir of this great singer in her prime.

Dame Margaret Price sop

The Romantic Lied
Cornelius Trauer und Trost, Op 3 Liszt Freudvoll und leidvoll, S280. Über allen Gipfeln ist Ruh, S306. Mignons Lied, S275. Der du von dem Himmel bist, S279 Wagner Wesendonk Lieder Wolf Mörike Lieder – Er ist's; Begegnung; Der Gärtner; In der Frühe; Lebe wohl; Heimweh; Gesang Weylas; Bei einer Trauung
Dame Margaret Price sop Graham Johnson pf
Forlane UCD16728 (71 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included. Recorded 1993

Price and Johnson have done it again. He has chosen a programme for her that exactly suits her talents and style, and she (with his inestimable help) has executed it with commitment and understanding. The programme in itself is fascinating, comparing and contrasting composers of roughly the same generation and period. The cross-fertilisation of musical ideas is apparent, yet each emerges as an artist with something highly individual to say. Wolf isn't a composer with whom Price has been very much associated until now, but in a group of the Mörike settings, she proves herself at one with the poems and their music, catching in particular the restless ardour of Begegnung, the timeless mystery of Gesang Weylas, and the peculiarly Wolfian charm of the lighter pieces. Liszt is even more to her liking. She and Johnson choose the later, longer version of Freudvoll und leidvoll and make a grand romantic statement of it that is just right. The interpretation of the Wesendonk Lieder is the crowning glory of this wonderful recital. A virtually faultless reading, speeds (no unwanted lingering), phrasing, line and tone ideally adapted to the words and music.

Graham Johnson places the piano part in perfect relationship with the voice, helped by the exemplary recording of both.

Thomas Quasthoff bass-bar

Evening Star
Lortzing Zar und Zimmermann – O sancta justitia! Ich möchte rasen; Den hohen Herrscher würdig zu empfangen; Sonst spielt ich mit Zepter, mit Krone und Stern. Der Wildschütz – Fünftausend Taler! Träum oder wach ich?; Lass Er doch hören!...Bei diesem schlimmen Fall[a]; Wie freundlich strahlt die holde Morgensonne R Strauss Die schweigsame Frau – Wie schön ist doch die Musik Wagner Tannhäuser – Gar viel und schön ward hier in dieser Halle; Wie Todesahnung Dämmrung deckt die Lande; O du, mein holder Abendstern
Weber Euryanthe – Wo berg ich mich?; Schweigt, glühenden Sehnes
Thomas Quasthoff bass-bar [a]Christiane Oelze sop
Chorus and Orchestra of the Deutsche Oper, Berlin / Christian Thielemann
DG 471 493-2GH (67 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Notes, texts and translations included
Recorded 2001 ●

Once more Thomas Quasthoff puts us in his debt with a recital wholly out of the ordinary, executed – with Thielemann's eager cooperation – confidently in singing of such strength and beauty as to almost silence criticism. Surveying German Romantic opera from the now-neglected Lortzing to Richard Strauss, he ranges easily through roles usually assigned to either a specifically baritone or bass voice.

In the lengthy extracts from Zar und Zimmermann he portrays both the pompous, amusingly portrayed mayor Van Bett and the upright figure of the Tsar, whose Act 3 aria he sings with refined tone and elegiac feeling. In Der Wildschütz he is funny as the schoolmaster Baculus, a buffo bass figure whose 'Fünftausend Taler' used to be a staple of a German bass's repertory; then he sings Graf Eberbach's lovely solo in a mellow baritone. It's good to be reminded in such a positive way of Lortzing's merits.

In the Tannhäuser pieces he projects the address of the benevolent Landgrave with complete authority and then sings Wolfram's Evening Star aria, from which the CD takes its title, with perfection of tone and line. Finally he catches finely old Morosus's restored peace after all the disturbing events of Die schweigsame Frau have finally come to an end.

Thielemann, and his Berlin orchestra and chorus, are at one with their soloist throughout, and the recording catches everything in a clear, warm perspective.

Rosa Raisa sop

The Complete Recordings, 1917-26 H
Opera arias and duets – L'Africaine, Aida, Andrea Chénier, Cavalleria rusticana, Don Giovanni, Ernani, La forza del destino, La Gioconda, Madama Butterfly, Mefistofele, Norma, Otello, Tosca, Il trovatore and I vespri siciliani; songs by Tchaikovsky and Yradier
Rosa Raisa sop with various artists
Marston mono ③ 53001-2 (227 minutes: ADD) Ⓜ
Recorded 1917-26 ●

'I would listen to them, and then break them into pieces' wrote Raisa in 1962, explaining why she possessed none of her own records. It is a pity she could not have heard them in these fine transfers and reproduced on modern equipment. Her objection was that they failed to show the volume of her voice, and that is very probably true. The impression they give is that of an ample lyric soprano with a dramatic style rather than a full dramatic voice. What they preserve is a sound of exceptional beauty and in several instances singing of equally exceptional skill. Outstanding is the single previously unpublished item, the cabaletta 'Ah! bello a me ritorna' from Norma, recorded for Brunswick in 1929. A superb demonstration of vocal mastery, it seems totally unaware of difficulties. The semiquaver passagework, the bold intervals, the matching of rhythmic energy with lyric grace, all are mastered with apparent ease. It is of course sad to think that this is all that remains of a Norma often reported as having been the finest of all in this century, at any rate up to Callas's time.

There are many other lovely things here. Raisa's chequered career as a recording artist began with the aria from Andrea Chénier, 'La mamma morta', on Pathé in 1917, and this was also the subject of her last recording, in 1933. Despite the difference in tempo (the later version being more expansive), they are very alike in style and affectionate in feeling. Similarly with the six (no less) versions of 'Voi lo sapete'. Her 'Un bel dì' is unexpectedly touching and intimate, the manner delicate and girlish, till the 'per non morir', when the girl becomes woman. The duets with her baritone husband, Giacomo Rimini, include one (clear-voiced and dramatic against a scrunchy background) from Il trovatore on a Vitaphone soundtrack. Then the third disc ends with an interview, not especially illuminating but nice to have, given in 1962 and in lively style, a year before her death. Raisa was one of the great singers of her time, and among them perhaps the most outstanding example of neglect by the major record companies. The Marston catalogue is enriched by this release.

Elisabeth Rethberg sop

Opera Arias H
Aida, Andrea Chénier, La bohème, Der Freischütz, Lohengrin, Madama Butterfly, Le nozze di Figaro, Otello, Serse, Sosarme, Tannhäuser, Tosca and Die Zauberflöte; songs by Bishop, Braga, Cadman, Densmore, Flies, Gounod, Grieg, Griffes, Hildach, Jensen, Korschat, Lassen, Loewe, Massenet, Mendelssohn, Rubinstein, Schubert, Schumann, Taubert and Tchaikovsky
Elisabeth Rethberg sop with various artists
Romophone mono ② 81012-2 (158 minutes: ADD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1924-29

They're very collectable, these Romophone complete editions. Up they go on the shelves, and you know that there is another small but quite important area in the history of singing on records properly covered, ready for reference at any time, and reference that will be a pleasure because the standard of transfer is so reliable. In this instance it is the Rethberg Brunswicks: records which capture the voice in its lovely prime. Purely as a singer, Rethberg was surely the most gifted and accomplished lyric soprano of her age. The essential gift was a voice of exquisite quality, and her upbringing contributed to the purity of intonation and a feeling for musical style. Her production was even and fluent; on all these records there is scarcely a note or a phrase that is not delightful purely as singing. Some of the later records show it also as a voice capable of considerable expansion in volume. In Aida's 'O patria mia' Rethberg is celestial, ample in volume, sensitive in feeling, phrasing beautifully, taking the C softly and in a broad single sweep. Equally lovely is her Mimì, and then in the Andrea Chénier aria there is such an unpressured beauty of utterance that it almost becomes a different composition. A previously unpublished delight is a blissful performance of Eugen Hildach's Der Spielmann, and among the less familiar songs is a charmer by Carl Taubert, Es steht ein Baum in jenem Tal.

Opera Arias and Duets H
L'Africaine, Andrea Chénier, The Bartered Bride, La bohème, Carmen, Madama Butterfly, Le nozze di Figaro, Tosca, Die Zauberflöte and Der Zigeunerbaron; songs by Bizet, Mozart, Pataky and R Strauss
Elisabeth Rethberg sop with various artists
Preiser Lebendige Vergangenheit mono 89051 Ⓕ
(71 minutes: AAD). Recorded 1920-25

Elisabeth Rethberg died in 1976, when little notice was taken of the passing of a singer once voted the world's most perfect. The year 1994 was the centenary of her birth, so this fine selection of her early recordings was well timed. The earliest catch her at the charming age of 26 (the voice settled, but still that of a young woman), and the last of them, made in 1925, find her just into her thirties, mature in timbre, feeling and artistry. It is doubtful whether a judicious listener would at any point cry 'Ah, it's an Aida voice!', but Aida was the part for which she became most famous. In Countess Almaviva's first aria, her legato is the next thing to perfection; in Pamina's 'Ach, ich fühl's' the head tones are beautifully in place, the portamentos finely judged, emotion always implicit in the singing. The duets with Richard Tauber include the music of Micaëla and Don José sung with unrivalled grace and intimacy, Rethberg shading off the end of her solo most elegantly, Tauber softening in his so as to welcome and not overwhelm the soprano's entry. As for the songs, they are equally delightful.

Opera Arias and Ensembles H
L'Africaine, Aida, Attila, Un ballo in maschera, Boccaccio, Carmen, Cavalleria rusticana, Don Giovanni, Faust, Die Fledermaus, Der fliegende Holländer, Lohengrin, I Lombardi, Madama Butterfly, Die Meistersinger von Nürnberg, Le nozze di Figaro, Otello, Il rè pastore, Tannhäuser and Der Zigeunerbaron; songs by Brahms, Mendelssohn and Wolf
Elisabeth Rethberg sop with various artists
Romophone mono ② 81014-2 (155 minutes: ADD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1927-34

To the older collector of vocal recordings it is to be feared that not many of these records will come as new. Attention can be directed, however, to the last three. These were made in 1932 in the Bell Telephone Laboratories as part of an experiment in improved recording methods. They were recorded at 33rpm, and they achieved startling results. The quality of the voice is captured to perfection, but most impressive is the freedom of emission, no longer confined within the studio but able to ring and expand, the contrasts of loud and soft tones being effective and often as exquisite as they would have been in the flesh. Most revealing is Elisabeth's Greeting from Tannhäuser, sung with piano accompaniment but with a dramatic conviction and enthusiasm far more vivid than that of the earlier orchestral version. Other new items are unpublished takes of the two Verdi trios with Gigli and Pinza, differing slightly in balance, but very little in style. The six electric Parlophones include the tender Micaëla's aria and the solo from L'Africaine with its haunting unaccompanied introduction. Supreme among the Victors is the second Un ballo in maschera aria, the Meistersinger duet with Schorr running it close. It is also good to have the complete Nile scene from Aida, with Lauri-Volpi in his prime, de Luca a bit past his. Transfers are of the usual high standard, and with the first volume, this is clearly the primary source of a comprehensive Rethberg collection on disc.

Bidù Sayão sop

Opera Arias H
Faust, Manon and Roméo et Juliette; songs by Braga, Debussy, Duparc, Hahn, Koechlin, Moret, Ravel and Villa-Lobos
Bidu Sayão sop with various artists
Sony Classical Masterworks Heritage mono MHK62355 (73 minutes: ADD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1941-50 ●

Beauty, charm, exquisite voice, brilliant technique, personality, Bidù Sayão had them all. This recital opens with her most famous recording, Bachianas Brasilieras No 5 by Villa-Lobos, with the composer conducting. She recognised the opportunity for her particular soprano in the violin part that Villa-Lobos had written for this work and persuaded him to adapt it for soprano. Their famous recording was achieved in just one experimental take. In that her voice is used in a purely instrumental way, when she enters on the next track as Gounod's Juliette, one is struck by the presence the use of words adds to the voice. In the Jewel song from Faust she conveys a sense of joyous laughter to the 'Ah' in 'Ah, je ris de me voir si belle', without any sense of vulgarity, or playing to the (armchair) gallery. Massenet's Manon was the role of her Met début in 1937 and again her vocal acting immediately sketches in Manon's playful character in the Act 1 aria about the 'premier Voyage'. How can a voice suggest a pout? One would have to ask Brigitte Bardot, but Sayão can do it, when she starts to sing about the 'couvent' she's being sent to.

Sayão's voice had none of the acid nasal quality of the typical French light soprano, so she can manage to do all sorts of little things with the language without making it sound harsh. Sayão studied with Jean de Reszke; she is the youngest of his pupils on disc, and perhaps the only one still around today, at least the only one who had a great career. The presentation is superb.

Aksel Schiøtz ten

The Complete Recordings 1933-46, Volume 1 H
Opera and Oratorio Arias – Così fan tutte, Die Entführung aus dem Serail, Eugene Onegin, Don Giovanni, Faust and Die Zauberflöte; Acis and Galatea, Christmas Oratorio, Messiah, St Matthew Passion, Die Schöpfung and Solomon; songs by Dowland and Was mich auf dieser Welt betrübt (Buxtehude)
Aksel Schiøtz ten with various artists
Danacord mono DACOCD451 (75 minutes: ADD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1933-46

Schiøtz's singing was always the very epitome of silvery elegance. His attributes in Handel, Haydn and Mozart are amply confirmed in this, the first disc of Danacord's comprehensive 10-disc survey of all his recorded output. Sadly his career was cut short by a brain tumour in 1946, but for the 10 years of his prime, he was rightly fêted for his beautiful singing and masterly sense of style. Long before period-instrument performances were current, Schiøtz and Wöldike were seeking an authentic style of performing Handel and Bach, as exemplified here in the poised, unaffected account of the opening solos from Messiah, and arias from the St Matthew Passion and Christmas Oratorio. 'Frohe Hirten' from the latter and the lovely aria by Buxtehude sound even better now that they have been released from the scratch on the originals, the transfers expertly done by EMI's Andrew Walter. Also in the oratorio field the aria from Die Schöpfung demonstrates perfectly the singer's delicately etched line and pure tone.

There are few more fine-grained versions of Tamino's 'Portrait' aria, Ottavio's arias nor of Pedrillo's Serenade, but 'Un aur'amorosa' suffers from an uncomfortably fast speed. Schiøtz is also among the most elegiac of Lenskys in that character's lament (slightly cut), the most sweet-toned of Fausts, the top C taken in the head as is the case with other tenors of his ilk. It seems hardly to matter that these pieces are sung in Danish. The Dowland, like the Handel, is given authentically, though a guitar rather than a lute is used for the accompaniments.

As a bonus there are rehearsal performances of Acis's 'Love sounds the alarm', minus da capo, and 'Sacred raptures' from Solomon, the former impeccable, the latter showing an unaccustomed fallibility in the runs. The booklet is full of interesting photos and articles.

The Complete Recordings, 1933-46, Volume 2 🄷
Grieg Melodies of the Heart, Op 5[b] – No 1, Two brown eyes; No 3, I love but thee. Songs, Op 33 – No 2, Last Spring[b]; No 9, At Rondane[c]. Songs and Ballads, Op 9 – No 4, Outward Bound[c]
Schubert Die schöne Müllerin, D795[a]
Aksel Schiøtz ten
[a]Gerald Moore, [bc]Folmer Jensen pfs
Danacord mono DACOCD452
(75 minutes: ADD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included ●

The Complete Recordings, 1933-46, Volume 3 🄷
Bellman Fredman's Epistles – Dearest brothers, sisters and friends; Old age is with me; Sit down around the spring here. Fredman's Songs – Hear bells give out a frightful boom; So tipsy we are taking leave; Joachim lived in Babylon Brahms Die Mainacht, Op 43 No 2. Sonntag, Op 47 No 3. Ständchen, Op 106 No 1 Buxtehude Aperite mihi portas justitiae, BuxWV7 Grieg Songs, Op 49 – No 3, Kind greetings, fair ladies; No 6, Spring showers. The Poet's farewell, Op 18 No 3 Schumann Dichterliebe, Op 48
Aksel Schiøtz ten with various artists
Danacord mono DACOCD453 (69 minutes: ADD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included ●

The years 1945-46 were particularly fruitful ones for Schiøtz in relation to recording. With Walter Legge's eager support the Danish tenor could at last come to London to resume his recording career with Die schöne Müllerin, which takes up the lion's share of Vol 2. The Danacord transfer of this sensitive reading is now the one to go for: not only is the sound marginally superior to Preiser's earlier transfer but added to it are five wonderful readings of Grieg songs, these actually recorded for the composer's centenary in 1943. In particular the popular I love but thee and the gloriously ardent Last Spring find in Schiøtz an ideal interpreter, a singer whose style so effortlessly and unassumingly goes to the heart of the matter. He is just as convincing in the three lesser-known songs by Grieg in Vol 3, devoted to six months of recording activity at the start of 1946.

Yet another facet of his art is revealed in the Bellman songs, aptly recorded in Sweden, Schiøtz disclosing his sense of humour in the bawdy songs of the 18th century, pleasure-loving Bellman. In So tipsy we are taking leave, he captures to perfection the devil-may-care, bawdy mood and in all these attractive pieces finds a willing partner in Ulrik Neumann's guitar. But this third volume is most valuable for giving us Schiøtz's marvellous Dichterliebe, perhaps his finest achievement of all on disc.

Then come three Brahms songs, never issued on 78s, that are also near ideal, especially the delicately floated line of Die Mainacht. Gerald Moore, as ever, fits his playing intuitively to the singer he's partnering. Then, after the Grieg and Bellman, comes more evidence of the tenor's and Wöldike's championship of Buxtehude, then a neglected figure, which again benefits from Schiøtz's innate sense of the right style for the music in hand. It also allows us to hear a pleasing mezzo (Elsa Sigfuss) and bass (Holger Nørgaard). Andrew Walter's remastering of all this disparate material at Abbey Road is faultless.

The Complete Recordings, 1933-46, Volume 4 🄷
Hartmann Tell me, star of night, Op 63. Little Christine – Sverkel's romance Lange-Müller Once Upon a Time – Serenade; Midsummer song Mozart Per pietà, non ricercate, K420 Riisager Mother Denmark Schubert Die schöne Müllerin, D795 – No 1, Das Wandern; No 6, Der Neugierige; No 7, Ungeduld; No 8, Morgengruss; No 10, Tränenregen; No 11, Mein; No 15, Eifersucht und Stolz; No 17, Die böse Farbe; No 19, Der Müller und der Bach; No 20, Des Baches Wiegenlied Schubert/Berté Das Dreimäderlhaus – excerpts Weyse Angel of Light, go in splendour. In distant steeples. The Sleeping-Draught – Fair lady, open your window
Aksel Schiøtz ten with various artists
Danacord mono DACOCD454 (72 minutes: ADD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included ●

'Hidden Treasure' is the appropriate subtitle for this volume of the complete Schiøtz recordings. It begins with the 10 songs from what ought to have been a complete Schöne Müllerin, two songs recorded in London in 1939, eight with Hermann D. Koppel, who took over from Moore, in Denmark in 1939-40. The cycle was never finished, because – it seems – Koppel as a Jew had to flee his country when the Nazis occupied it. Schiøtz's voice, when he was 33, was even fresher, his reading even more spontaneous in suggesting the vulnerable youth's love and its loss, most poignant in an account of 'Der Müller und der Bach' that surpasses in forlorn expression other famed tenor interpreters such as Patzak, Pears, Schreier and Bostridge, but the whole sequence is a pleasure to hear for the plangency of Schiøtz's singing. There follows part of the Mozart aria Per pietà that the tenor sang as test for EMI in 1938, interesting as a rarity but not special. By contrast all the Danish items are desirable, among them the two Hartmann offerings: Tell me, star of night, a haunting song, is given ideal voicing by Schiøtz as is 'Sverkel's romance' from a romantic work, Little Christine, based on an Andersen fable.

The two items by Lange-Müller, written as incidental music for a play called Once Upon a Time, are even better, in particular the magical 'Midsummer song'. The note-writer tells how wonderful was Schiøtz's singing of this item in an open-air performance in 1941. His recordings had made Schiøtz famous and he also appeared the same year playing the role of Schubert in Lilac Time, of which we hear an amusing pot-pourri (a photo in the booklet shows him in the part). That Schiøtz was not averse to popular items is confirmed by Riisager's Mother Denmark, which he brought to London for that first session in May 1939. It is a song written for a diseuse about the delights of the homeland, and Schiøtz delivers it with the intimacy it calls for. Again, the transfers are faultless and this example of Anglo-Danish co-operation is highly recommendable.

Tito Schipa ten

Opera Arias H

L'Arlesiana, Il barbiere di Siviglia, La bohème, Don Giovanni, Don Pasquale, L'elisir d'amore, La favorita, Lakmé, Luisa Miller, Manon, Martha, Pagliacci, Rigoletto, La traviata and Werther

Tito Schipa ten with various artists

Preiser Lebendige Vergangenheit mono 89160 Ⓕ

(77 minutes: AAD). Recorded 1925-28 ●

The Master. And yes: he surely is, and never more so than in the recordings of this period. Schipa was then at the height of his fame and fortune, the voice approaching the end of its very best days (a thrill and a freshness which began to diminish in the early 1930s) and with the art having developed just about as far as it would go. Lovely examples are: 'Sogno soave' (Don Pasquale), 'Questa o quella' and 'E il sol dell'anima' (Rigoletto), the Traviata duets, the Lakmé and Werther solos, Harlequin's Serenade (Pagliacci), 'E la solita storia' (L'Arlesiana) and the finale of La bohème with the exquisite Bori. But if 'The Master', then one whose mastery was exercised within severe limitations. Today's tenors in the repertoire cultivate an extensive upper range, whereas Schipa sings here nothing above a B flat, transposing 'La donna è mobile', and even lowering 'M'apparì' so that the B flat becomes an A. His modern successors attempt and often attain a brilliance of bravura which can make Schipa sound tame and cautious (his 'Ecco ridente' is fine but lacks the brilliance of true virtuosity, and his 'Il mio tesoro' is essentially a bit of artful dodging). There are other limitations too, but these are enough for the present: and enough remains to place him among the unforgettables and the irreplaceables. Any of the recommendations mentioned will show why, and there is the added, vital and elusive quality of voice-personality.

This collection comprises a complete run of Schipa's operatic records made electrically for the Victor company. Transfers are faithful, with the sound well defined. Among all the many CDs currently devoted to him this would be a very suitable first choice.

The Complete Victor Recordings, 1922-25 H

Opera arias and duets – L'africaine, Il barbiere di Siviglia, La bohème, La corte del amor (Padilla), Don Pasquale, L'elisir d'amore, Emigranyes (Barrera), Lakmé, Lucia di Lammermoor, Manon, Marta, Mignon, Pagliacci, Rigoletto, La sonnambula, La traviata and Werther; songs by Barthélemy, Buzzi-Peccia, Costa, di Crescenzo, de Feuntes, di Capua, Huarte, Lakacios, Oteo, Paladilhe, Perez-Freire, Ponce, Roig, Schipa and Silvestri

Tito Schipa ten with various artists.

Romophone mono ② 82014-2 (150 minutes: ADD) Ⓕ

Recorded 1922-25

Tito Schipa is utterly special. Whether by art or personality (not always readily separable) he is one of those singers who instantly establish themselves in mind, memory and affections. He had a voice that could ring out strongly as well as commanding the style and delicacy for which he was renowned. He also had the skill, taste and personal magnetism to make something magical out of some very third-rate music (a faculty that contributed to the restriction of his artistic growth), and there are plenty of examples here – such as one called Quiéreme mucho, which veterans will recognise as a wartime hit over here called Yours. Alan Blyth's introductory essay points out that the acoustic Victors have been the least commonly reissued of Schipa's recordings, and that, while this is perhaps understandable (because the most popular of the titles were remade electrically a year or two later), they also catch him at the peak of his career and in his prime. Sometimes, indeed, the earlier recordings are marginally preferable to the more familiar remakes: the Dream song from Manon is rather more elegant, the Pagliacci serenade a shade more charming, and in the Traviata duets his partner, Amelita Galli-Curci, enjoys better vocal health. More importantly, some of the best items were never re-recorded, including the delightful Sonnambula duet and Mignon arias. Some of the songs, too, are charming, Pesca d'amore for example and the tiny tarantella by Vicenzo di Crescenzo called Ce steve 'na vota. 1925 saw the advent of electrical recording, and roughly a dozen of Schipa's first electricals are included. These are more ingratiating in the quality of the singing than in that of the recorded sound: one sympathises with those who complained at the time that the microphone added an unnatural harshness; it is also true that the shellac used just then often produced a particularly high and gritty surface-noise. Whatever has been done to mitigate them, these are still features that limit pleasure in listening here to the recordings of that period. Better quality came in with some of the very latest, and among these are the solos from Werther and Lakmé and the Death scene from La bohème with Lucrezia Bori, all among Schipa's very best. All who love singing will value Schipa's art, and all who value his art will want these records.

Andreas Scholl counterten

German Baroque Cantatas
Albertini Sonata quarto in C minor J Christoph Bach Ach, das ich Wassers g'nug hätte Buxtehude Fried- und Freudenreiche Hinfahrt, BuxWV76 – Muss der Tod denn auch entbinden (Klag-Lied). Jubilate Domino, omnis terra, BuxWV64 Erlebach Wer sich dem Himmel übergeben Legrenzi Libro quarto di sonate, La cetra' – Sonata quinta Rovetta Salve mi Jesu Schütz Kleiner geistlichen Concerten, SWV306-37 – Was hast du verwirket, SWV307; O Jesu, nomen dulcem, SWV308. Symphoniae sacrae, SWV341-67 – Herzlich lieb hab ich dich, o Herr, SWV348 Tunder Ach, Herr lass deine lieben Engelein
Andreas Scholl counterten Concerto di Viole (Brian Franklin, Friederike Heumann, Brigitte Gasser, Arno Jochem de la Rosée); Basle Consort (Pablo Valetti, Stephanie Pfister vns Karl Ernst Schröder lte Markus Märkl hpd/org)
Harmonia Mundi HMC90 1651 (72 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included
Recorded 1997

Expressively versatile though Scholl unquestionably can be, it is perhaps in the sphere of elegy and plaint that his art can be heard to strongest advantage. Two pieces of outstanding merit fall into this category and are sung here with tonal beauty, stylistic assurance and expressive puissance. One of them is Johann Christoph Bach's lament Ach, das ich Wassers g'nug hätte. This member of the family worked during the second half of the 17th century and was greatly admired by J S Bach, who described him as 'profound'. The lament, in da capo form, is scored for countertenor, violin, three violas da gamba, cello and organ. The other is the much better-known strophic 'Klag-Lied' from the longer Fried- und Freudenreiche Hinfahrt by Buxtehude, written in memory of his father who had died early in 1674. Scholl does great justice to each of these intimate pieces, attending as much to the spirit and utterance of the texts as to the sorrowful and at times searing inflections of the music.

These performances alone would be sufficient enticement to acquire the disc but, happily, there is much else in the programme to touch our sensibilities. Schütz is well represented with three tenderly expressive pieces, two of them from the Kleiner geistlichen Concerten and a third from the Symphoniae sacrae (1647); and Franz Tunder by a declamatory and rhythmically graceful setting of a verse of the hymn Herzlich lieb hab ich dir, o Herr. This piece is one of two whose composers have been wrongly exchanged on the track listing: the other is Salve mi Jesu which, though preserved in a Tunder manuscript, is probably the work of the Venetian, Giovanni Rovetta. Sensibly, the order of events is punctuated by two works for instrumental ensemble, one of them by Ignazio Albertini, the other by Legrenzi, whose position in the history of recording seems still to be that of occasional stand-in. He deserves better, and doubtless will come into his own one day. The playing of the two groups, Concerto di Viole and the Basle Consort, is accomplished and refined, both in ensemble and tuning, providing sensitive support in the vocal pieces and affecting insights to the instrumental ones. Despite the fanciful (if ingenious) packaging, which is brittle, inconvenient and impractical, this release is strongly recommended.

Heroes
Gluck Orfeo ed Euridice – Che farò senza Euridice. Telemaco – Ah non turbi Handel Serse – Fronde tenere...Ombra mai fù. Semele – Where'er you walk. Saul – O Lord, whose mercies; Such haughty beauties. Rodelinda – Con rauco mormorio; Vivi tiranno!. Giulio Cesare – Dall' ondoso periglio...Aure deh, per pietà Hasse Artaserse – Palido il sole
Mozart Ascanio in Alba – Al mio ben. Mitridate, Re di Ponto – Venga pur, minacci
Andreas Scholl counterten Orchestra of the Age of Enlightenment / Sir Roger Norrington
Decca 466 196-2OH (58 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included. Recorded 1998 ●

Heroes indeed! This is some of the finest heroic singing around, and in a countertenor voice – often supposed to be weakly or effeminate. There is heroism here in both love and war. Andreas Scholl's countertenor is formidable in every sense and transmits sturdy, masculine emotion just as forcefully as the softer sorts called for in, for example, what are probably the two most famous of the arias here: 'Ombra mai fù' (Handel's 'Largo'), which opens the recital, and 'Che farò' from Orfeo. The first of these discloses a wonderfully ample, creamy voice, beautifully even and controlled, capable of a poignantly soft top F and firm in profile in the lower register; the latter elicits an outpouring, a passionate one, of lovely tone, with a line of the chastity and purity that exactly captures Gluck's vision of his semi-divine hero. In 'Where'er you walk' – a tenor piece, transposed – he seems tonally more constrained, yet it is an uncommonly smooth and flowing performance. Of the other Handel items, particular mention should be made of the Saul aria 'O Lord, whose mercies', one of the loveliest Handel ever wrote, sung with great intensity of tone; the Rodelinda arias, one of them full of rapid fioritura, riskily but faultlessly delivered, and a peaceful one about a murmuring stream which, if perhaps taken rather quickly, nevertheless is a fine, serene piece of singing. The Hasse item is strong and impassioned, giving scope to Scholl's full bottom register; and of the two Mozart arias the one from Mitridate is a noble, powerful statement of defiance, done strongly and directly. Norrington provides generally sympathetic accompaniments.

This is an exceptional recital in which one of today's most beautiful and imaginatively used voices is heard at its finest.

A Musicall Banquet

Anonymous Go, my flock, go get you hence. O bella più. O dear life, when shall it be? Passava Amor su arco desarmado. Sta notte mi sognava. Vuestros ojos tienen d'Amor Batchelar To plead my faith Caccini Amarilli mia bella. Dovrò dunque morire? Dowland Far from triumphing court. In darkness let me dwell. Lady, if you so spite me. Sir Robert Sydney His Galliard Guédron Ce penser qui sans fin tirannise ma vie. Si le parler et le silence. Vous que le bonheur rappelle Hales O eyes, leave off your weeping Holborne My heavy sprite Martin Change thy mind since she doth change Megli Se di farmi morire? Tessier In a grove most rich of shade
Andreas Scholl counterten Edin Karamazov ltes/gtr/orph Christophe Coin bass viol Markus Märkl hpd
Decca 466 917-2DH (67 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included.

Like his Varietie of Lute Lessons, also published in 1610, Robert Dowland's A Musicall Banquet is an odd and interestingly innovative collection. It includes works by his famous father as well as by several otherwise unknown English composers alongside four pieces with French texts, two with Spanish texts, and four in Italian. There are timeless masterpieces like John Dowland's In darkness let me dwell and Caccini's Amarilli mia bella; but there is also a pioneering attempt to bring a truly international repertory to England.

The complete volume has been recorded twice before, in the late 1970s: Nigel Rogers did a splendid version with the inspired partnership of Anthony Bailes and Jordi Savall (EMI – nla); and the Consort of Musicke, as part of their complete John Dowland set, presented a version – with four excellent singers and Anthony Rooley on particularly eloquent form on the lute – coming a little closer to the source in the use of a voice on some of the generally texted bass-lines (this is currently available only on the 1997 L'Oiseau-Lyre complete reissue on 12 CDs). But it was high time for a new version; and, with music in four languages, there could hardly be a better collection to show the qualities of Andreas Scholl. He has that ability to float a line marvellously without compromising the clarity of the text; and if some listeners feel that greater variety of colour is possible, he more than compensates with his unwavering, faultless control.

Edin Karamazov carries the bulk of the accompaniment with a range of plucked instruments and performing styles: he shows particular success in the cruelly exposed and slow lines of In darkness let me dwell and in the more jaunty Spanish songs. Markus Märkl is a spirited harpsichordist in five pieces, and the wonderful Christophe Coin shows an astonishing range of colours and techniques on the bass viol.

This recording may not supersede the two earlier versions, but it offers many interesting alternatives, including a good reconstruction of the thoroughly garbled Italian that Dowland printed for Sta notte. Nobody will be disappointed.

Elisabeth Schwarzkopf sop

Unpublished Lieder and Songs 1957-64 🄷

Bizet Pastorale^{a} Brahms Von ewiger Liebe, Op 43 No 1^{a}. Deutsche Volkslieder – In stiller Nacht^{a}. Volks-Kinderlieder – Sandmännchen^{a}. Wiegenlied, Op 49 No 4^{a} Flies Wiegenlied^{a} Mozart Un moto di gioia, K579^{b}. Warnung, K433a^{a} Parisotti Se tu m'ami, C xxii, 68^{a} Schubert Claudine von Villa Bella – Liebe schwärmt auf allen Wegen^{a}. Lachen und Weinen, D777^{a}. Die Vögel, D691^{a}. Der Jüngling an der Quelle, D300^{a}. Du bist die Ruh, D776^{a}. Wiegenlied, D498^{a}. Die Forelle, D550^{a} Schumann Widmung, Op 25 No 1^{a} R Strauss Ruhe, meine Seele, Op 27 No 1^{a}. Zueignung, Op 10 No 1^{a}.Wiegenlied, Op 41 No 1^{a} Wagner Wesendonk Lieder – Träume^{a} Wolf Eichendorff Lieder^{a} – Die Zigeunerin; Nachtzauber. Alte Weisen^{a} – Tretet ein, hoher Krieger; Das Köhlerweib ist trunken
Elisabeth Schwarzkopf sop ^{a}Gerald Moore, ^{b}Walter Gieseking pfs
Testament SBT1206 (72 minutes: ADD) Ⓜ
Recorded 1957-64 ●

'Unpublished' is a word to warm the hearts and imaginations of collectors, and many of these recordings, though originally passed for issue, aren't even listed in official discographies. The first track here is a case in point – the aria from Schubert's Claudine von Villa Bella was a favourite with Schwarzkopf, but if one compares this recording from 1961 with the one eventually issued, made four years later, the 1965 version is more relaxed, having more of a sense of the surging lover's declaration. Persevere, though, and there are gems to be found.

Wolf's 'Die Zigeunerin' was one of Schwarzkopf's standbys. Perhaps you recall her singing it at the end of the first half of her last Royal Festival Hall concert in 1975. This was often a great moment in a Schwarzkopf recital – all nerves by then banished, the voice under control, she would play with the acoustic of the hall, using little echo effects that are caught on this recording. Maybe the reason it wasn't used, as in several other cases on the CD, is that the voice is a little too far forward, the pianist seeming to be banished to halfway back in the studio; but this gives a lovely sense of presence. In other cases the songs were discarded probably because there simply wasn't room on the LP. One of these is the single track which is not accompanied by Gerald Moore, Un moto di gioia, part of her famous Mozart programme accompanied by Walter Gieseking. It is a joy, as is Warnung. The other 'encore' pieces by Flies, Bizet and Parisotti must surely have been intended for the LP called Songs You Love, a Cook's Tour through song. In Se tu m'ami there is a slight fluff on one of the little laughs which perhaps led to its exclusion, but in every other way it is as charming and beguiling as any light-hearted song Schwarzkopf ever recorded.

The Brahms group is compelling. This was the beginning of a project to record a whole LP of Brahms songs with which she continued into the 1970s, though only a few songs were ever released (on the fourth and final 'Songbook' LP). Strauss's Zueignung seems awfully slow, and less involved than one would expect.

Wagner's 'Träume' is the one instance of the unpublished take being preferable to that issued. Again, one can see why the later recording is a more dramatic reading, but here the voice is poised with such lightness and it's so intimate – if you're in doubt about the prospect of this CD, listen to that followed by the Bizet Pastorale and then 'Die Zigeunerin'. At once one is in the presence of the great singer, a perfectionist in everything she did, as hard on herself when judging her records as she sometimes could be on her students. She would shake her head after some lovely piece of pure vocalism and murmur, 'Ah, but that's the easy part'.

The Unpublished EMI Recordings (1946-52) H
Opera arias – La bohème, La traviata and Die Zauberflöte (sung in English); songs and sacred works by Bach, Gounod, T Arne, Morley, Mozart, Schubert, R Strauss and Wolf
Elisabeth Schwarzkopf sop with various artists
Testament mono ② SBT2172 (134 minutes: ADD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included. Recorded 1946-52 ●

Good heavens!, I hear you cry, what need for more Schwarzkopf when there's already a heap of her recordings available. Well, there's a very good reason why Testament – and Schwarzkopf herself – thought this unissued material worth unearthing from the copious EMI archive. It may be heretical in the record world to say so, but Walter Legge had an Achilles' heel: he demanded perfection, and it was just occasionally bought at the expense of spontaneity. In the case of the commercial recordings included here, he thought his wife could perform the pieces better on a later occasion, but now we may judge that these earlier interpretations have that much more eager freshness than the previously published versions. That's particularly so in the case of Bach's Jauchzet Gott and Mozart's Exsultate, jubilate. With Schwarzkopf in pristine, youthful voice, her production at its easiest, her breath long, both works shine forth as joyful things to hear – tone, line, runs, all in perfect accord. The remainder of the first CD, bar the final track, is a conspectus of the work the soprano was doing at the time, in the late 1940s, at Covent Garden where she was for a while a member of the resident company. Her Violetta, in English, and her Mimì, in Italian, both show her care over the words, which are inflected with heartfelt meaning in both cases. But the gem here is Schwarzkopf's private recording of all Pamina's role sung at home in English to piano accompaniment in order that she might learn the role properly in the vernacular. So here we have an invaluable souvenir of a quite beautifully sung performance of 51 years ago. Schwarzkopf introduces this delightful oddity herself, a further bonus for posterity. The very last item on this CD brings a discovery of a very different kind. Legge apparently thought the Bach-Gounod Ave Maria wasn't musically worthy of the partnership, so the performance was never issued. How wrong he was: it turns out to be one of those occasions when a great artist can convert dross into gold.

On the second disc we have another addition to the singer's recorded legacy in a charming account of Morley's It was a lover and his lass. For the rest, it's all discarded takes of Lieder issued in later performances. None is as compelling as the 1948 Gretchen am Spinnrade, a performance of concentrated feeling urgently executed, and an irresistible account of Der Musensohn is preferable to issued versions because of its verve. Two versions of Wolf's Storchenbotschaft are included; the first from 1948 the simpler, more natural, the second from 1951 a shade over-elaborated. Of the remaining Wolf songs, all recorded in 1951, three songs demand mention: Bedeckt mich mit Blumen, always a favourite with the singer, for its dreamy eroticism ideally adumbrated and sung with just the vibrancy called for, a reading of Im Frühling, filled with spring's yearning, and Wiegenlied im Sommer, in which Schwarzkopf's soothing, tender tones would persuade any child to untroubled sleep. Throughout, Gerald Moore is the soprano's faithful, supportive partner, and EMI's clean recording adds to profound pleasure in an issue lovingly performed and lovingly prepared, with evocative photos and full texts and translations.

Irmgard Seefried sop

Lieder by Brahms, Flies, Mozart, Schubert and Wolf H
Irmgard Seefried sop with various artists
Testament mono SBT1026 (74 minutes: ADD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1946-53

Another 'must' for anyone who loves Seefried. In these wonderfully immediate and faithful transfers of performances made in Vienna and London, Seefried is heard at the peak of her powers, when her voice was at its freshest and easiest. In the Mozart, whether the mood is happy, reflective or tragic, Seefried goes unerringly to the core of the matter. Here we have the archness of Die kleine Spinnerin, the naughty exuberance of Warnung, the deep emotion of Abendempfindung and Unglückliche Liebe. We are offered five Schubert songs, including an unsurpassed Auf dem Wasser zu singen, so airy and natural; a pure, elevated Du bist die Ruh and a poised, ravishing Nacht und Träume. The lullabies of Flies, Schubert and Brahms are all vintage Seefried. The Wolf items are a real treasure trove: a sorrowful, plangent account of Das verlassene Mägdelein (perhaps the most compelling interpretation of all here; unutterably moving), an enchanting, spontaneous Elfenlied (with Gerald Moore marvellously delicate here). For the most part, Moore is in attendance to complete one's pleasure in an irresistible and generously filled disc.

Amy Shuard sop

Giordano Andrea Chénier – La mamma morta[a]
Mascagni Cavalleria rusticana – Voi lo sapete[a]
Puccini Turandot – In questa Reggia[a]. Gianni Schicchi – O mio babbino caro[a]. Tosca – Vissi d'arte[a]. La bohème – Quando m'en vo' soletta[a]
Tchaikovsky Eugene Onegin – Tatyana's Letter Scene, Act 1[b] Verdi Aida[a] – Ritorna vincitor; L'insana parola; Qui Radames verrà; O patria mia. Un ballo in maschera – Morrò, ma prima in grazia[a]
Amy Shuard sop [a]Royal Opera House Orchestra, Covent Garden / Sir Edward Downes; [b]Royal Philharmonic Orchestra / George Weldon
Dutton Laboratories CDCLP4006 Ⓜ
(56 minutes: DDD). Recorded 1961-62

'Where has this voice been all my life?' people will be saying as they come upon it for the first time in this disc. And indeed others, for whom the voice was for so many years just around the corner and a few tube stops away, will wonder whether they appreciated it properly when it was part of more or less day-to-day experience. The impression here is magnificent: a tone as beautiful as, say, mid-period Tebaldi and a volume comparable to that of Shuard's great teacher, Dame Eva Turner. The first phrase of all, the opening of 'Ritorna vincitor', could almost be mistaken for Dame Eva's, every 'r' so resolutely rolled, and an expression severely that of the princess rather than the slave-girl. She softens in manner and volume for 'Numi, pietà', but on the whole this is an Aida in the heroic mould, and even in 'O patria mia' the mood is firmly regulated, the nostalgia kept within bounds. Turandot is also Turneresque, formidable in vocal demeanour, indomitable on high.

Plenty of critical opinion – and Alan Blyth's notes quote Harold Rosenthal, Philip Hope-Wallace and Andrew Porter – can be adduced to confirm from live experience the superb impression created by these records, though some will not remember it quite so. Nevertheless, she was a genuinely distinguished operatic artist, and in international casts (as in Un ballo in maschera) clearly earned her place.

Of the negative elements, the record recalls her somewhat unvarying countenance and a sense of limited responsiveness (she knows when to soften, as she does, beautifully, in Tatyana's Letter scene, but doesn't enter into the development of feeling towards that point). However, it also revives a memory of her warm, moving and very accomplished singing of the Ballo aria, and it kindles a wish that we could have heard her in Andrea Chénier. The gift and accomplishment put on record here remain outstanding, as is the quality of transfer.

Gérard Souzay bar

Songs of Many Lands Ⓗ
Songs by Brahms, Buratti, Canteloube, Dørumsgaard, Durante, Ginastera, Grieg, Guarnieri, Hughes, Kilpinen, Liszt, Massenet, Mendelssohn, Mussorgsky, Nin, Ovalle, Respighi, Roussel, Sfakianakis, Villa-Lobos, Vuillermoz
Gérard Souzay bar Dalton Baldwin pf
Testament SBT1207 (79 minutes: ADD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1958, 1959, 1978 and 1979

The gems Souzay offers here should be cause for whoops of joy, happy faces and hands clapped at twice the normal speed. The songs which particularly catch the imagination include the Jägerleben, with its witty evocation of Schubert's 'Der Musensohn', Villa-Lobos's song of the extremely noisy ox-cart driver, and I'm goin' away, which copies Paul Robeson's tone to the life. Also the haunting Moravian song, Preletel Slavicel, the Venetian La barcheta (ascribed here to one Buratti, but it must be Reynaldo Hahn), and the audience's favourite, the song of the blue bird, Azualaò, from Brazil. All of these, and more, Souzay sings with rich, vibrant tone, resourceful art and plenty of character.

The remastering is excellent. An enterprising edition, offering the privilege of extended encore-time with a great singer in his prime.

Giuseppe Di Stefano ten

Opera Arias Ⓗ
L'amico Fritz, L'Arlesiana, L'elisir d'amore, La fanciulla del West, La forza del destino, Gianni Schicchi, Manon, Mignon, Tosca and Turandot; songs by Bixio, Tagliaferri; Sicilian folk-songs
Giuseppe Di Stefano ten with various artists
Testament mono SBT1096 (79 minutes: ADD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1944-56

Very moving it is to hear this voice again in its absolute prime. It is hardly possible to hear those Swiss recordings of 1944, with piano, and be untouched by the thought, as well as the sound, of this 22-year-old, singing his heart out, with so much voice and, already, with so much art. The 'Una furtiva lagrima' is perhaps not the fully polished article, but what Forster called the Italian 'instinct for beauty' is there, with lovely shading and phrasing. It is good to have the two Bixio songs (Se vuoi goder la vita and Mamma), previously unpublished, heartfelt, open-throated performances in the national tradition that used to get mocked and is now so missed. Indeed, thinking of that sequence of recordings, one could well wish this disc had given priority to reproducing them all: there is an amazingly good 'Pourquoi me réveiller?', for instance, and (till the end) a beautifully restrained Musica proibita. Still, what we have here fulfils exactly the promise of the label's name: it is a testament, and a testament of youth. The later operatic recordings, from 1955, find the tenor with some signs of wear and with a recklessly open way of taking his high As and B flats, but there is real passion, and imagination with it. In the latest recording, a commonplace song called Passione from 1956, one almost looks up at the speakers to see the face there: it seems so very clear and lifelike. Some of the sound (recording or transfer) seems overbright – the second Manon solo is a prime example – but it is always vivid and compelling. In the booklet-listing a translation of the song-titles would have been welcome. It would also have been useful if Peter Hutchinson's notes had related the excerpts to Di Stefano's career (did he for instance ever sing Dick Johnson, Rinuccio and Calaf on stage?).

Elsie Suddaby sop

Songs and Arias by M Arne, T Arne, Bach, Besly, Carey, Denza, Ford, German, Handel, Haydn, Jackson, MacCunn, Mendelssohn, Morley, Mozart, Purcell, Schubert, Somervell, Stanford and Warlock 🅷
Elsie Suddaby sop with various artists
Amphion mono PHICD134 (80 minutes: ADD) Ⓜ
Recorded 1924-52

Elsie Suddaby (1893-1980) was a close contemporary of Isobel Baillie and Dora Labbette and in many ways she evinces the strongest personality of the three, and has a distinctive timbre very much her own. That can be heard in the first item, Michael Arne's The lass with the delicate air, a piece she virtually appropriated as her signature tune. She sings it with such variety of tone and, yes, such delicacy of accent, that one capitulates at once to so graceful an artist. In Dido's Lament, the singular quality of being able, simply and naturally, to move the listener is there: adding appoggiaturas to the recitative and discreetly employing portamento in the Lament itself she goes to the heart of the matter. There is also the joyfully affirmative side of her art, shown in a fresh account of 'Rejoice greatly' from Messiah and 'Endless pleasure', as Semele wallows in her conquest of Jupiter. Better still is a version of 'Let the bright Seraphim' (Samson) that rings the rafters with its zealous delivery. Runs in all these Handel pieces are keenly accomplished, though not quite with Baillie's assurance. These HMV recordings catch Suddaby in her prime, when she was in her thirties, yet on a Decca 10-inch of 1941 of Thomas Arne's Where the bee sucks and Morley's It was a lover and his lass, there is no diminution of her powers, and even the Warlock songs and Mozart's Agnus Dei, when Suddaby was in her late fifties, find the tone almost as fresh as ever and wholly free of wobble. The CD is a generous offering, the transfers mostly well done and the booklet obviously a labour of love.

Dame Joan Sutherland sop

La Stupenda
Opera Arias – The Bohemian Girl , Beatrice di tenda, Norma. I Puritani, La sonnambula, Home, sweet home, Adriana Lecouvreur, Operette, Lakmé, La fille du régiment, Linda di Chamounix, Lucia di Lammermoor, Alcina, Esclarmonde, Die Zauberflöte, Les contes d'Hoffmann, Turandot, The Boys from Syracuse, Semiramide, Casanova, Attila, Rigoletto, La traviata, Tristan und Isolde. Glière Concerto for Coloratura Soprano, Op 82
Joan Sutherland sop with various artists
Decca ② 470 026-2DM2 (154 minutes: ADD) Ⓜ
Recorded 1959-90

An excellent selection, and a well-ordered one. The proof of that is that it can be played quite happily from start to finish, all 154 minutes of it, in one session, and still leave you wanting more. This of itself is some tribute to the singer, who is stupendous by virtue of several qualities, variety not notably being one of them. Roughly 20 operatic characters are represented in these excerpts, but it is hardly a portrait-gallery we enter: much the same face looks out from each of them, the most distinctive being the bride of Lammermoor's. And though they are not inexpressive, the nature of the expression, whether sad or happy, tends to be usually rather mild: even Turandot sounds like a nice woman, certainly not one who has been out in the cold so long as to need melting. The recording process has also reduced somewhat the impact of a feature which truly was stupendous in the opera-house – namely the sheer size of the voice. The early recordings especially might well give an impression that at the time of her famous triumph as Lucia her voice was still quite light, whereas the wonder of it lay in the combination of purity, agility and range with such ample house-filling power.

Anyway, there is plenty to feast upon here. Highlights include the aria from Linda di Chamounix, the polonaise from I puritani and the early 'Casta diva'. Among the less expected items it is good to find Glière's Concerto and the jolly song from The Boys of Syracuse. Two lesser tracks are 'I dreamt I dwelt in marble halls' and 'Home, sweet home' where vowels, consonants and the melodic line all seem to go into melt-down. Otherwise superb.

The Art of the Prima Donna
Opera Arias – Artaxerxes, Die Entführung aus dem Serail, Faust, Hamlet, Les Huguenots, Lakmé,

Norma[a], Otello, I Puritani, Rigoletto[a], Roméo et Juliette, Samson, Semiramide[a], La sonnambula and La traviata
Dame Joan Sutherland sop [a]Chorus and Orchestra of the Royal Opera House, Covent Garden / Francesco Molinari-Pradelli
Decca Legends ② 467 115-2DL2 Ⓜ
(109 minutes: ADD). Texts and translations included
Recorded 1960 ●●●

'The Art of the Prima Donna' has hardly been out of the catalogue since 1960 – now it's remastered for Classic Sound. There cannot be many admirers who haven't already got this, so for newcomers to Sutherland on disc one can only say – listen and wonder. Her voice, even throughout its range right up to the high E, always keeping its natural quality, is heard at its early fullness. Perhaps the best tracks of all are 'The soldier tir'd' from Artaxerxes and 'Let the bright seraphim' from Samson, but every track is beautiful. 'Casta Diva' – her earliest attempt at it – is her most limpid recording of this prayer, 'Bel raggio' from Semiramide has sparkling decorations, quite different from the ones she sang on the complete recording six years later, and the whole thing ends with the Jewel Song from Faust. It was a big voice and sounded at its best in larger theatres; listening to 'O beau pays' from Les Huguenots, one can see Sutherland in one's mind's eye, in pale blue silk, as Marguerite de Valois at the Royal Albert Hall in 1968. It is difficult to imagine anyone, coming to it for the first time, being disappointed.

Richard Tauber ten

Opera Arias and Duets Ⓗ
Aida, Il barbiere di Siviglia, The Bartered Bride, La bohème, Carmen, Don Giovanni, Eugene Onegin, Der Evangelimann, La forza del destino, Fra Diavolo, I gioielli della Madonna, Der Kuhreigen, Madama Butterfly, Martha, Mignon, Der Rosenkavalier, Tosca, Die tote Stadt, La traviata, Il trovatore, Die Walküre and Die Zauberflöte
Richard Tauber ten with various artists
Preiser Lebendige Vergangenheit mono ② 89219 Ⓕ
(143 minutes: AAD). Recorded 1919-26

Das Deutsche Volkslied Ⓗ
Opera Arias – Don Giovanni and Die tote Stadt; songs by Heymann and R Strauss
Richard Tauber ten with various artists
Claremont mono CDGSE78-50-64 Ⓜ
(67 minutes: ADD). Recorded 1924-39

These two issues present a neatly complementary view of Tauber's career. The Preiser set gives us a picture of the young tenor in his days almost exclusively as an opera artist in German-speaking lands singing his repertory in the vernacular. It evinces the golden, sappy, honeyed tone of Tauber in his prime. The style at this stage is wholly disciplined, but already we hear that outgoing, spontaneous exuberance that was soon to bring him world-wide fame in operetta. Few if any tenors have sung Mozart quite so beautifully as Tauber at this point in his career: the 1922 Bildnis aria is a model of its kind, preferable to his later version, and an object-lesson in phrasing for any aspiring tenor. His interpretations of Lensky's aria, the famous piece from Der Evangelimann, José's Flower Song, Jenik's aria (a glorious 1919 version) and Wilhelm Meister's farewell to Mignon show the plangent, almost melancholic timbre with which Tauber could invest such repertory. Then for pure singing his readings of the Italian Tenor's aria, Siegmund's Spring Song, Alfredo's aria and Pinkerton's outpouring of remorse are hard to beat. Add to this the many duets he never repeated in electric versions and you have a most desirable issue. In the company of regular colleagues of that time, such as Rethberg, Bettendorf, Sabine Kalter and, best of all perhaps, Lotte Lehmann (Die tote Stadt duets), his contributions reveal his generosity of both voice and manner. This is free-ranging, rich-hued singing marred only by most of the music being sung in the 'wrong' language. There are a few downward transpositions in the solos, but that was common practice at the time. Otherwise there's little to criticise here in the performances and none in the excellent transfers. The more intimate side of Tauber's art comes in the series of Volkslieder he recorded for Parlophone in 1926, nicely transferred by Claremont. Here one admires the very personal way in which he caresses these charmingly unassuming pieces. Four Strauss songs from 1932 sessions follow, notable for the passion in the tone. What a pity the CD wasn't completed with more Lieder rather than operatic items already available in numerous transfers, including the less-than-satisfactory Ottavio arias of 1939. But at the end there's a gem: 'Kennst du das kleine Haus am Michigansee?' where Tauber lavishes on a trifle all the magic of his incredible technique and heady tone, including those pianissimos conjured from nowhere. The transfers are excellent.

Renata Tebaldi sop

Opera Arias – Mefistofele, La Wally, Adriana Lecouvreur, Andrea Chénier, Die lustige Witwe, La Gioconda, La bohème, Gianni Schicchi, Manon Lescaut, Suor Angelica, Il tabarro, Tosca, Turandot, Madama Butterfly, La fanciulla del West, La regata veneziana, Aida, Un ballo in maschera, Don Carlo, La forza del destino, Otello, La traviata, Il trovatore
Renata Tebaldi sop various artists including Grace Bumbry mez Carlo Bergonzi, Gianni Poggi, Mario del Monaco tens Cornell MacNeil, Robert Merrill bars Cesare Siepi, Nicolai Ghiaurov basses; orchestras including Rome Santa Cecilia Academy Orchestra and Chorus; Royal Opera House Orchestra, Covent Garden; Vienna Philharmonic Orchestra; conductors including Herbert von Karajan; Tullio Serafin; Richard Bonynge; Sir Georg Solti

Decca ② 470 280-2DX2 (149 minutes: ADD) Ⓜ
Recorded 1949-69

Renata Tebaldi has often said that she found recording a very difficult experience. She missed the stimulation of an audience, and in the early days the engineers used to insist that she turn her head away from the microphone at each climactic note; this was because her voice was so powerful that the equipment couldn't deal with it. It's all the more impressive then, given the power of her voice, how consistent it remained throughout the 20 years this collection covers. Like every singer, she had her vocal problems from time to time, but she maintained the wonderfully even tone, and smooth legato, even at the moments of high drama.

This is an extremely satisfying survey. The items have been chosen to demonstrate Tebaldi's range as singer and actress. The closing scene from Adriana, the tense game of poker from Fanciulla, and the horrific last moment of Il tabarro show off Tebaldi the verismo specialist. All the Puccini items are very fine, culminating in the aria and duet from the end of Act 1 of La bohème, with Bergonzi as Rodolfo. Although the Don Carlo, Ballo and Gioconda scenes all come from the mid-1960s, the period after Tebaldi 'remade' her voice aiming to create a darker sound, in no way does it appear to have deteriorated. And the Rossini songs bring a lovely sense of fun, which was one of the characteristics of Tebaldi the recitalist.

Tebaldi once said that she would never have been able to appear in Suor Angelica on stage, for even when recording the part she cried so much she could hardly get through it. It is this total commitment and sincerity that shines through all Tebaldi's work. It's easy to hear how much she loved singing, and relished the Italian language. For those who never heard her, this is a fine 80th birthday celebration.

Bryn Terfel bar

We'll Keep a Welcome – The Welsh Album
T Gwynn Jones Diolch I'r Iôr[ef] W S Gwynn Williams My Little Welsh Home[f] A Hughes Tydi a Roddaist[ef] J Hughes Calon Lân[ef]. Cwm Rhondda[ef] James Hen Wlad fy Nhadau[ef] M Jones We'll Keep a Welcome[ef] Lewis Bugail Aberdyfi[a] Parry Myfanwy[ef] Prichard Hyfrydol[ef] Richards Cymru Fach[f] Traditional Ar Lan y Môr[f]. Dafydd y Garreg Wen[cdf]. Men of Harlech[ef]. Sosban Fach[ef]. Ar Hyd y Nos[ef]. Hiraeth[cef]. Suo-Gân[f] Troyte Sunset Poem[b] O Williams Sul y Blodau[a]
Bryn Terfel bar Bryan Davies [a]pf/[b]org [c]Meinir Heulyn, [d]Katherine Thomas hps [e]Black Mountain Chorus, [e]Risca Male Choir, [f]Welsh National Opera Orchestra / Gareth Jones
DG 463 593-2GH (75 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included ●

If the Welsh people showed signs of caution when voting for a National Assembly, they might have been stirred into greater numbers at the ballot box by this finely sung and unashamedly patriotic collection of songs featuring their mastersinger Bryn Terfel.

The programme is indeed eclectic, ranging from the unfamiliar, such as Cymru Fach with its Schubertian modulations and Arwel Hughes's beautiful melody Tydi a Roddaist, to such well-known songs as Ar Hyd y Nos ('All Through the Night') and We'll Keep a Welcome, made popular not so long ago by Sir Harry Secombe.

Careful planning has evidently been given to the content of this CD, but with a diverse cast-list of two choirs, the Orchestra of the Welsh National Opera, harp, organ and piano, it is impossible to prevent the occasional jolt to the ear. The melancholy and introspective mood of the lullabies and songs expressing a longing for the Homeland followed by such robust fare as Cwm Rhondda and Men of Harlech, taken here at a jaunty tempo, would benefit from a longer pause between tracks.

Chris Hazell has written some attractive arrangements to enhance such songs as Ar Lan y Môr ('On the Seashore'), which has a grave oboe obbligato, and a sympathetic setting of Suo-Gân ('Lullaby') for solo voice and orchestra.

The simple legato line of Dafydd y Garreg Wen ('David of the White Rock'), accompanied by harp, shows off Terfel's vocal sensitivity, and is such a highlight that it is a pity he could not have opened his CD with the solo version (instead of a choral version) of Hen Wlad fy Nhadau ('Land of my Fathers'), which is reprised anyway for full choir as a finale.

This album offers a rare treat in hearing Terfel relishing the music of Wales sung in his native tongue, with two vigorous supporting choirs who also demonstrate a gentler side to their art in humming the introduction to Ar Hyd y Nos. With the two distinguished harpists and keyboard players they provide the best possible advertisement for repertoire that has for too long been neglected by the major record companies.

Some Enchanted Evening
Berlin White Christmas Lane On a Clear Day You Can See Forever – She wasn't you Loewe Camelot – If ever I would leave you; How to handle a woman. My Fair Lady – On the street where you live; Get me to the church on time. Brigadoon – There but for you go I. Paint Your Wagon – I was born under a wand'rin' star; They call the wind Maria. The Little Prince – Little Prince Rodgers South Pacific – Some enchanted evening; Younger than springtime; There is nothing like a dam. Carousel – If I loved you; You'll never walk alone. Oklahoma! – Oh, what a beautiful morning. The King and I – Something wonderful; I have dreamed. Allegro – Come home; A fellow needs a girl. The Sound of Music – Edelweiss Weill Love Life – Here I'll stay
Bryn Terfel bar with Stephen Briggs, Keith Mills tens Maurice Bowen, Stephen Dowson basses Opera North Chorus; English Northern Philharmonia / Paul Daniel
DG 471 425-2GH (77 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Notes and texts included. Recorded 1996 and 1998

As an example of an opera singer putting his special gifts to the service of popular music, this is altogether one of the happiest. Indeed these marvellous songs have never been so consistently beautifully performed.

It helps, of course, that 'Some Enchanted Evening' was written for an operatic bass-baritone. Yet other numbers such as 'Oh, what a beautiful morning', so closely associated with Gordon MacRae, come across equally well. Terfel even performs those written for actors or female singers so convincingly as to make them completely his own. True, there is little attempt at a Cockney accent in 'Get me to the church on time'; but there is characterisation in the lead-up to 'On the street where you live', and for the most part he gives us just the sort of vernacular, non-operatic performances these numbers need. His command of pianissimo is used to marvellous effect, and the way the voice swells at 'He is wonderful' is quite thrilling. Sensitive conducting and authentic orchestrations play their full part in creating a totally absorbing effect. The pity is that, after sustaining such an elevated standard for over 70 minutes, the mood is destroyed by ending with Irving Berlin's White Christmas – a cheap gimmicke. That apart, this really is something wonderful.

Opera Arias

Borodin Prince Igor – No sleep, no rest
Donizetti Don Pasquale – Bella siccome un angelo
Gounod Faust – Vous qui faîtes l'endormie Mozart Le nozze di Figaro – Non più andrai. Don Giovanni – Madamina, il catalogo è questo; Deh! vieni alla finestra. Così fan tutte – Rivolgete a lui lo sguardo. Die Zauberflöte – Der Vogelfänger bin ich ja
Offenbach Les contes d'Hoffmann – Allez!...Pour te livrer combat...Scintille, diamant Rossini La Cenerentola – Miei rampolli femminini Verdi Macbeth – Perfidi! All'angelo contra me v'unite!...Pietà, rispetto, amore. Falstaff – Ehi! paggio! ...L'Onore! Ladri! Wagner Tannhäuser – Wie Todesahnung...O du mein holder Abendstern. Der fliegende Holländer – Die Frist ist um
Bryn Terfel bass-bar Orchestra of the Metropolitan Opera, New York / James Levine
DG 445 866-2GH (71 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included.
Recorded 1994-95 OO

In a careless moment we might describe Bryn Terfel as a very physical singer, and it would be true up to a point. His physical presence is much in evidence when he sings, or for that matter when he talks or just breathes. Having seen him 'in the flesh', one seems to see him while hearing the sound of his voice on records. But the crowning distinction of Terfel's art (granted the voice, the technique and the general musicianship) is its intelligence. As with words, so with characters: each is a specific, sharp-minded creation, and none is a stereotype. This Leporello exhibits his master's catalogue with pride; it is the book of life and not to be taken lightly. This Don Magnifico recounts his dream in all good faith (he doesn't know that he's a complete idiot, and doesn't deliberately set himself up to sound like one). No less impressive, as an aspect of intelligence, is the linguistic command, and still more so the use he makes of it: the sheer mental concentration of his Dutchman carries intense conviction and an ever-specific understanding. In short, a magnificent recital.

Luisa Tetrazzini sop

Opera Arias H

Un ballo in maschera, Il barbiere di Siviglia, Carmen, Dinorah, La forza del destino, Las hijas del Zebedeo, Lakmé, Linda di Chamounix, Lucia di Lammermoor, Mignon, La perle du Brésil, Rigoletto, Roméo et Juliette, Rosalinda, La sonnambula, La traviata, Il trovatore, I vespri siciliani and Die Zauberflöte; songs by Benedict, Brahms, Cowen, De Koven, Eckert, Gilbert, Grieg, Moore, Pergolesi, Proch and Venzano
Luisa Tetrazzini sop with various artists
Romophone mono ② 81025-2 (150 minutes: ADD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1904-20

Though Tetrazzini was one of the most prized and assiduously collected of recording artists in her time, her career on record was not really very satisfactory. As was true of several others she repeated the same items in several versions, whereas, especially in those days of such restricted recording-time, an extension to the repertoire would have been so much more welcome. The repertoire itself relied heavily on the familiar chevaux de bataille, the Mad scenes, Bell song, Shadow song and so forth, and often when something out of the way comes along, either, like the 'Pastorale' from Veracini's Rosalinda, it is not well suited, or, as with Proch's vapid variations, it was not worth doing in the first place.

There must also have been difficulties in successfully catching a voice which combined such brilliance and power with what could all too often emerge on record as a colourless and even infantile quality. Of the Victors reproduced here the best and most essential is the 1911 'Ah, non giunge' (La sonnambula). The cabaletta, 'Di tale amor', following 'Tacea la notte' (Il trovatore), is also a joy. The Lucia di Lammermoor sextet and Rigoletto quartet are also prime attractions, fine performances in many (but not all) ways and remarkably clear and lifelike as recorded sound.

Maggie Teyte sop

Chansons by Berlioz, Debussy, Duparc and Fauré H
Dame Maggie Teyte sop with various artists
Pearl mono GEMMCD9134 (74 minutes: ADD) Ⓜ
Recorded 1936-41

There was some sort of magic in the air at the EMI Abbey Road Studios in London on March 12 and 13, 1936. Maggie Teyte, just short of her 48th birthday, and Alfred Cortot, both of whom had been well acquainted with Claude Debussy, recorded 14 of his mélodies. This is no studio-bound recital but a performance, the passion and beauty of tone matched stroke for stroke by pianist and singer. These records, and the later ones Teyte made with Gerald Moore, are among the jewels of Debussy singing and playing. No one with an interest in French song should hesitate to acquire them, for they provide a lesson, not just in pronunciation of the French language (though like her contemporary and supposed rival, Mary Garden, Teyte sang with a pronounced English accent – something which entranced the French in the belle époque, when all things English were à la mode).

The beauty of Teyte's tone, the freshness and girlish quality of her high notes – something which never deserted her, and she continued to sing for another 20 years after this recording – are constantly astonishing. So, too, is the passion she puts into phrases such as 'Qu'il était bleu, le ciel, et grand l'espoir!' in 'Colloque sentimental' from the second book of Fêtes galantes, or the decidedly dark-hued 'Il me dit: 'Les satyres sont morts,' in 'Le tombeau des Naïdes' from Chansons de Bilitis.

Those who already have some of the other reissues of Teyte's Debussy recordings will find that this Pearl disc has a rather higher surface noise, perhaps the price one has to pay for getting the voice more forward. One wonders why Pearl have called the disc 'Chansons', the correct term for these settings is Mélodies – or there is the good old English word 'song'.

Dawn Upshaw sop

Goethe Lieder

Mozart Das Veilchen, K476 Schubert Rastlose Liebe, D138. Gretchen am Spinnrade, D118. Mignons Gesang, D877 No 4. Suleika I, D720. Versunken, D715. Wanderers Nachtlied II, D768. Ganymed, D544. An den Mond, D296 Schumann Liebeslied, Op 51 No 5. Nachtlied, Op 96 No 1. Lieder und Gesänge aus Wilhelm Meister, Op 98*a* – No 1, Mignon; No 5, Heiss mich nicht reden; No 7, Singet nicht in Trauertönen Wolf Blumengruss. Die Bekehrte. Die Spröde. Frühling übers Jahr

Dawn Upshaw sop Richard Goode pf

Nonesuch 7559-79317-2 (53 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ

Texts and translations included. Recorded 1993 ●

Upshaw and Goode are a musical marriage made in heaven, each a highly individual, probing and sincere artist prepared to challenge received views on a song. Thus their Gretchen am Spinnrade in this programme of all-Goethe settings is an outburst of a desperate and infinitely perturbed woman breaking conventional bonds. To emphasise the point Upshaw leans into the first syllable of 'nimmer' at each repetition with added feeling and times the climax of the great song at the word 'Kuss' in an overwhelming way, only such a similarly involving (although very different) interpreter as Lotte Lehmann could. Goode's playing simply underlines and reinforces the singer's intense utterance.

The Schumann settings are filled with just as much spontaneous emotion and direct imagination. The pair make as strong a case as is possible for Schumann's setting of Mignon's Kennst du das Land being superior even to Wolf's, the repeated 'Kennst du das wohl?' carrying an extraordinary charge. The singer's voice is also ideally fitted for Wolf's teasingly sensual Die Spröde and Die Bekehrte and the pair bring the lightest touch to Blumengruss. Finally they give Mozart's Das Veilchen a deeper meaning than almost any interpreters. The recording is ideally balanced, forward yet spacious.

I wish it so

Bernstein West Side Story – I feel pretty. Candide – Glitter and be gay. The Madwoman of Central Park West – My new friends Blitzstein Juno – I wish it so. No for an Answer – In the clear. Reuben, Reuben – Never get lost Sondheim Anyone Can Whistle – There won't be trumpets. Saturday Night – What more do I need? The Girls of Summer – The Girls of Summer. Merrily We Roll Along – Like it was. Evening Primrose – Take me to the world Weill One Touch of Venus – That's him. Lady in the Dark – The saga of Jenny; My ship. Lost in the Stars – Stay well

Dawn Upshaw sop orchestra / Eric Stern

Nonesuch 7559-79345-2 (45 minutes: DDD) Ⓜ

Texts included. Recorded 1993 ●●●

Bernstein, Blitzstein, Sondheim and Weill are a good quartet to explore in a recital and Dawn Upshaw's clear soprano is well suited to nearly all these songs. The Blitzstein numbers will only be familiar to specialists. 'I wish it so' from Blitzstein's adaptation of O'Casey's Juno seems to herald the mood of the whole disc, songs of longing, some optimistic, some resigned. 'In the clear' is one of the songs from No for an Answer, Blitzstein's follow-up to The Cradle Will Rock; it was first given in 1940, the same week that saw the first night of Weill's Lady in the Dark. In the Blitzstein, Eric Stern's arrangement with a solo cello part played by Matthias Niegele turns the song into a melancholy lullaby. This and a brilliant performance of 'Glitter and be gay' from Candide show off Upshaw's impressive range – from the coloratura of the Bernstein to mezzo-ish moodiness for the Blitzstein. Of the Weill songs, 'Stay well' from Lost in the Stars is especially successful, and 'That's him' from One Touch of Venus is playful. The two numbers from Lady in the Dark are given the most extensive overhaul, the melody of 'The saga of Jenny' such as it is disappears beneath Larry Wilcox's rearrangement and although Upshaw sings 'My ship' quite beautifully, again Daniel Troob has made an arrangement that pulls it about. All in all, this is a very attractive foray into the Broadway territory.

Norman Walker bass

A Portrait of Norman Walker H
Opera and Oratorio Arias – Acis and Galatea, The Children of Don, The Creation, The Dream of Gerontius, Dylan, Die Entführung aus dem Serail, Faust, Judas Maccabaeus, Messiah, La morte d'Orfeo, Le quattro stagioni (B Marcello), Die Zauberflöte; songs by Capel, Haynes, Lane Wilson, Purcell and Storace
Norman Walker bass with various artists
Dutton Laboratories mono CDLX7021 Ⓑ
(71 minutes: ADD). Recorded 1928-54

Norman Walker was one of our leading basses for some 17 years from 1937 when he sang as the Commendatore and the Speaker at Glyndebourne and King Mark (with Dame Eva Turner as Isolde) at Covent Garden. From then on he balanced his career nicely between the stage and the concert hall. This welcome reissue opens resplendently with Walker singing Handel and Haydn in the classic manner: steady, burnished tone, every run in its place and diction exemplary. Then comes Walker's unsurpassed account of the Angel of the Agony's solo from Gerontius, so urgent, so sympathetic, here allowed to run on to let us hear Heddle Nash sing 'I go before my judge' so movingly. Of Walker's opera repertory we hear a student account of 'O Isis und Osiris', which gives some evidence of what was to follow, and a test made in 1944 for Walter Legge of Osmin's aria, which suggests he might have been a good interpreter of that role. The extracts indicate Walker's dramatic prowess (though his Italian is far from idiomatic) – as does his brief contribution to the closing trio from Faust, with Joan Cross a suitably distraught Marguerite. More valuable than these, however, because they display so unerringly Walker's gifts as a conviction-singer, are the four British songs made at one session in 1952 with Gerald Moore. They are exemplified in the bass's confident tone, unobtrusive word-painting and subtle use of rubato. Indeed the singer, in these faultless transfers, seems to be in the room with us. Malcolm Walker provides a warm, personal cameo of his father in his notes.

Dolora Zajick mez

The Dramatic Soprano Voice
Cilea Adriana Lecouvreur – Acerba voluttà Gluck Orphée et Eurydice – J'ai perdu mon Eurydice. Alceste – Divinités du Styx Mascagni Cavalleria rusticana – Voi lo sapete Mussorgsky Khovanshchina – Sily potalnye Rossini Semiramide – Ah! quel giorno ognor rammento Saint-Saëns Samson et Dalila – Mon coeur s'ouvre à ta voix Tchaikovsky The Maid of Orleans – Prostite vy kholhv Verdi Don Carlo – O don fatale. Macbeth – La luce langue; Una macchia è qui tuttora. Il trovatore – Condotta ell'era in ceppi
Dolora Zajick mez Royal Philharmonic Orchestra / Charles Rosekrans
Telarc CD80557 (69 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ

Zajick, widely known as one of the leading operatic mezzo-sopranos of the day, is introduced here as a soprano, though neither the voice nor repertoire seems greatly to have changed. The addition of Lady Macbeth to the list of roles is interesting but not surprising, for it has been sung quite often by mezzos (on records, for instance, by Cossotto, Höngen and Verrett). It is not clear what purpose is served by apportioning the voice and (presumably) the repertoire to a different vocal category; the case is perhaps made out in the booklet, which was not included in the review copy, but it would have to be remarkably strong to convince us that Gluck's Orpheus, Verdi's Azucena and Mussorgsky's Marfa are roles for a soprano, however dramatic.

The voice is certainly one of exceptional quality and power. In spite of some 20 years of hard usage (she had been singing professionally for some time before winning her Tchaikovsky prize in 1982), the surface remains to a large extent unworn, its high and low notes particularly thrilling in thrust and opulence. The limitation lies in something which, if not exactly Slavonic wobble (Zajick is American by birth), is 'operatic vibrato', a condition common to many powerful voices where sustained notes, especially at a forte, may be perfectly firm while losing evenness and definition elsewhere. This affects the pleasure of her 'J'ai perdu mon Eurydice' more than that of 'Divinités du Styx' and of her Rossini rather more than her Cilea. In Verdi her richness of tone and assurance of dramatic authority carry the day.

Best is probably the Don Carlos: a towering performance of Eboli's great solo, impresssive on record, overwhelming in the effect one can imagine it having in the theatre. The deep, baleful phrases of Azucena in Il trovatore have the authentic quality, too. In Semiramide it is good to hear her singing the runs without aspirates.

In Khovanshchina she catches well the awe of Marfa's invocation and the humanity of her prophetic utterance. As Lady Macbeth she is not imaginative in colouring or in verbal expressiveness but rises triumphantly to the climaxes, both the loud and the soft. With no other solo recital to her name in the current catalogue, Zajick is certainly welcome to the opportunities afforded by this one, in which she is well supported by the RPO and its sympathetic conductor.

CHANT

Anonymous 4

1000: A Mass for the End of Time – Medieval Chant and Polyphony for the Ascension
Anonymous Judicii signum. Quem creditis super astra/Viri galilei. Celestis terrestrisque. Prudentia prudentium. Dominus in sina. Ascendens cristus. Salvator mundi/Rex omnipotens die hodierna. Elevatus est rex fortis/Viri galilei. Ante secula. Omnipotens eterne. Corpus quod nunc/Psallite domino. Apocalypse 21:1-5. Regnantem sempiterna. Cives celestis patrie
Anonymous 4 (Marsha Genensky, Susan Hellauer, Jacqueline Horner, Johanna Rose sngrs)
Harmonia Mundi HMU90 7224 (72 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included. Recorded 2000

For their tenth recording and their first of the new millennium, Anonymous 4 have decided to go apocalyptic. Not that it shows in the customary purity and calmness of their chanting, but for this CD they have taken as their theme the Last Judgment as evoked in a liturgical reconstruction of a Mass for Ascension Day from about the year 1000. The fears of what would happen at the end of the first millennium were genuine and widespread: Mankind would be judged and found wanting, Satan would appear and reap destruction.

Much of the music on this CD comes from manuscripts of chant and early polyphony from around 1000, mostly from the abbey of St Martial in Limoges, but with two pieces from the Winchester Troper. A lot of the chant, then, is Aquitanian in origin, and it can sound quite different to the now more familiar Gregorian tradition, with melodies that have a sweep and range not commonly encountered there. Indeed, Anonymous 4 make the most of these steeper melodic curves, notably in the troped Offertory Elevatus est rex fortis/Viri galilei, which gives them something to get their teeth into; elsewhere the chanting can sound a little tentative or even become rather static. Generally, though, the flow is good, and the different ways of embellishing the chant are convincingly done and provide welcome contrast. The embellishments range from the addition of other vocal lines which move in parallel or contrary motion to the chant, or simply serve as a sustained drone (a kind of harmonic trope of the melody), to the introduction of various types of ornament: repeated notes, simple turns, or Eastern-sounding slides. These are used sparingly and are executed with great precision.

The insert-notes make commendably clear which pieces have been elaborated polyphonically by the group, so alerting the listener to this further element of reconstruction. Leading chant scholars have been consulted about certain aspects of interpretation, and the recording is on the whole as exemplary in its thoughtful presentation as in the scrupulous performances they offer. If at times their singing is over-careful and unspontaneous, their fans will not be disappointed by this, the latest impressive contribution to little-known corners of the very early musical repertory by the 'fab four of medieval music' as The New Yorker has described them.

Ensemble Organum

Chants of the Church of Rome
Vespers for Easter Sunday
Ensemble Organum / Marcel Pérès bar
Harmonia Mundi HMC90 1604 (79 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included. Recorded 1996

Most scholars agree that a link exists between the Old Roman repertoire and the so-called Gregorian. The latter became official in Carolingian times, leading to the invention of Western notation. The main problem regarding this link is the absence of notated sources of Old Roman chant before the 12th to 13th centuries. These reconstructed Vespers are an attempt to demonstrate not only the magnificent service of Easter Vespers as sung in St John of the Lateran in the 12th century, but also a whole repertoire and performance style, carried through from at least six centuries previously. Marcel Pérès defends his theory that as late as the 12th century and beyond, the style of performance in a Roman basilica would have been similar to that practised today in Eastern rite Christianity. Indeed, many of the earliest neume shapes we strive to interpret spring to life in the light of such a style.

This performance is exhilarating, even convincing. An outline of the famous Gregorian Alleluia, Pascha nostrum, for example, which we sing today from sources dating from the late 9th and early 10th centuries, can be detected, buried beneath countless repetitions of typical phrases and a proliferation of ornament, elements that serve to build up a cumulative impression of strength. They are pruned away in the Gregorian revision, which is terser, more structured melodically and more coherent, according to a later understanding of modality. There can be no question that this is an important disc.

Canterbury Cathedral

Gregorian Chant
Mass for the Feast of St Thomas of Canterbury. The Office of Matins for St Thomas of Canterbury. St Dunstan's Kyrie
Lay Clerks of Canterbury Cathedral Choir / David Flood
Metronome METCD1003 (74 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included. Recorded 1994

A recording of music for the Feast of St Thomas à Becket by the Lay Clerks of Canterbury Cathedral is a delightful idea. The music for this feast in the Salisbury rite is rich and memorable, particularly that for the Offices. In this case the selection from Matins includes five magnificent responsories and two antiphons, as well as the hymn Martyr Dei and the Invitatory, Assunt Thomas Martyris. This last item is particularly valuable, since though the Invitatory has generally not found much favour in recordings and concerts (either as chant or set polyphonically), the cumulative effect of the form is, quite simply, extraordinary. This anthology also includes the Mass for the Feast of St Thomas (in which the Sequence, Solemne canticum, is especially impressive) and the Kyrie, Rex splendens, attributed to St Dunstan. The singing is restrained and sober and somewhat lacking in colour. The problem seems to be that there is little response to the words on the part of the singers: the chant somehow does not sound 'organic', as though it were sung liturgically. This is a difficult problem to solve, but there is no doubt that the quality of the singing itself is very high. Certainly no one with an interest in Western chant should hesitate to buy this very worthwhile recording.

Russian Patriarchate Choir

Suprasl – Orthodox Mosaic
Victor Korolev ten Oleg Kovalev bass
Russian Patriarchate Choir / Anatoly Grindenko
Opus 111 OPS30-229 (79 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included. Recorded 1999 ●●

The Russian Patriarchate Choir has yet again produced a magnificent recording of fascinating and unknown chant repertoire. This time, the music comes from a manuscript from the Monastery of Suprasl, Poland, showing, remarkably, the influence of a variety of chant traditions, including Greek, Slavic and Romanian. The work of reconstruction and transcription, by Anatoly Konotop, reveals a repertory of extraordinary richness and originality, mixing Balkan characteristics (the most obvious of which is the drone) with Slavic. There are two extended chants, one a Cherubic Hymn and the other a sublime chant for the veneration of the Epitaphios on Holy Friday, but all of the music, even the relatively short pieces such as the Demestvenny setting of verses from Psalm 140, has a long-breathed quality, a sense of the infinite, reflected in its huge melodic arches.

Listening to the Russian Patriarchate Choir, it is difficult to believe that any of the singers ever breathe, so naturally do they phrase these huge lines. It has always been the choir's aim to work with such early repertories in a liturgical context, however, and this shows quite clearly in their approach to this extraordinary music; musicology here is put to both practical and spiritual use.

The overall result produces a recording of surpassing beauty.

Anonymous Vigil in Kiev
Russian Patriarchate Choir / Anatoly Grindenko
Opus 111 OPS30-223 (78 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included. Recorded 1997

Here is a revelatory exploration of unknown Russian riches, here monastic polyphony. This is a repertory that contains more or less familiar versions of harmonised chants and often some spectacularly startling variants: notable of mention are the Deacon's Priidite (invitatory, monophonic), the elaborate fourfold response 'Tebe Gospodi' in the insistent litany, and the astonishing chromatic 'slips' in the Canticle of Simeon, the Megalynarion and in the Trisagion at the end of the Great Doxology.

Another item worthy of note is the Vespers prayer in which the bass is given the lion's share, especially at cadences, while the upper voices move smoothly from chord to chord. Full texts are provided, although there are one or two oddities in the English translation. The singing is sublime. There can be few choirs in the world who are able to combine such richness of sound with such prayerful attention to text, always perfectly declaimed.

Singphoniker

Officium
Anonymous Officium Beatae Mariae Virginis. Ad Vesperas. In Conceptione Beatae Mariae Virginis
Singphoniker / Godehard Joppich
Glissando 779007-2 (75 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included. Recorded 1999 ●

Don't let the jokey name fool you: these gentlemen are serious about their plainchant. Directed by the scholar Godehard Joppich, these six German singers present an interpretation of plainchant very different from the more speculative attitudes of such ensembles as the French Organum and the Spanish Alia Musica. While they describe their approach as one of 'scholarly reinterpretation', they avoid the ornaments and embellishments favoured by their more experimental counterparts. Some may see it as a more conservative approach, but the result is very satisfying. That is partly to do with the sound quality and recording, both of which are full-bodied and solid. Clearly these are professional singers and not monks, but there is none of the 'churchy' tameness that too often bedevils plainchant performances.

Another positive aspect is the programming, which reveals aspects of liturgical structure in a way that makes musical sense to a modern listener: thus the main item here is the full Marian Vespers. Each of the five psalms is coupled with its antiphon, which both precedes and follows the psalm itself. In the source used here (a late 14th- or early 15th-century manuscript from Hamburg), all five antiphons are drawn from the Song of Solomon, which imparts a satisfying sense of coherence and of – dare one use the word? – logic.

The series also includes two of the most famous Marian pieces, the Regina celi and Alma redemptoris mater. Presented as an unbroken sequence of continuous music, the 'experience' of plainsong has an aesthetic impact which popular plainchant compilations simply cannot match. Following the full Vespers is a selection from the rhymed office of another Hamburg manuscript from the late 15th century. So many plain-chant interpretations inserted into liturgical reconstructions are simply bland, however these give unalloyed pleasure to the listener. It is a pity that Joppich's insert-notes do not spell out his conception of performance. To the knowledgeable audience which such a recording clearly deserves to attract, the continuing debate over plainchant interpretation would surely be worth pursuing.

Solesmes Abbey Choir

Gregorian Chant H
The complete 1930 HMV Recordings
Solesmes Abbey Choir / Dom Joseph Gajard
Pearl mono ② GEMMCDS9152 (96 minutes: ADD) Ⓜ
Recorded 1930

When Solesmes produced their album of 12 records of Gregorian chant, it was a historic moment. They were making the first major contribution to the documentation of an art having its roots well back in the first millennium, an art underlying much of the subsequent development of Western music. The remarkable unity and flow of the chant was surely due to the fact that they were all singing this music day in, day out, and an occasional portamento, or lack of ensemble was a normal, understandable part of the package.

This is a sound of youthful vigour, with all the hallmarks of the familiar Solesmes style: the soaring phrases with their softened peaks and quiet final syllables; the firm enunciation of first syllables; the lifted accents on short notes; the quaint inter-pretation of the salicus; but over it all, its own special, innate quality, which combines unmistakable spirituality with robust everyday living. That quality, and a certain quiet confidence, are present in this singing to a degree rarely attained by any other monastic choir. The remastering, naturally, has not succeeded in eliminating all the needle hiss. One hardly notices this, by the way, such is the selective power of the human ear!

This collection is really Everyman's basic anthology of Gregorian chant. It ranges from well-known hymns and pieces of the Ordinary, through gems from the Temporale and the Common of Saints, to some of the greatest masterpieces of the repertoire, including the Good Friday responsory Tenebrae factae sunt and the splendid first mode offertory Jubilate Deo for the second Sunday after Epiphany. It also contains some items one rarely hears nowadays, such as the powerfully moving Media vita – 'In the midst of life we are in death'.

MEDIEVAL-MID RENAISSANCE

Acantus

Italian sacred simple polyphony of the Middle Ages and after Adoramus te Christe. Adoramus te Domine. Alleluia. Benedictus. Credo apostolorum. Cum autem venissem. De profundis. Gaude flore. O crux fructus. O Virgineta bella. Quasi cedrus. Qui nos fecit ex nichilo. Salva sponsa Dei. Salve, sancte Pater. Salve Virgo rubens rosa. Sanctus. Sicut pratum. Vergene madre pia. Verzene benedeta
Acantus
Gimell CDGIM516 (58 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1997 OO

For those expert in medieval music, this disc offers a relatively unknown repertory hardly ever recorded; for music lovers who just want a new musical experience, it's here in trumps; and for those who are not particularly musical it offers a vivid, ethnic-sounding experience with earthy spirituality. There are some very odd things about the packaging. The only title for the disc seems to be the name of the group, Acantus, which includes Alessandra Fiori, Gloria Moretti, Stefano Pilati and Marco Ferrari, people who have been doing excellent work for years but who have never quite managed to find an ensemble or a record company that remains intact. Another odd feature is that there is only the most indirect indication of what is recorded here, essentially just a list of titles (as given in the heading above) without mentioning that some pieces are from the 13th century, some from the 15th, one from the 19th and one from the contemporary folk tradition. This repertory of semi-popular sacred music – known to scholars as 'cantus planus binatim', 'primitive polyphony' (in the days when such language was allowable), 'polifonia semplice' and 'folk polyphony' – contains many glorious pieces, and Acantus gives a massively convincing account of them.

Alia Musica

El canto espiritual judeoespañol
Anonymous (arr Sánchez) Albinu malkenu. Yede rašim. Nostalgia y alabanza de Jerusalén. `Et ša'aré rašón. Yirú `enenu. Los siete hijos de Hana. Hodú l'Adonay. Yašen al teradam. El mélej. Noche de aljad. Ki ešmerá šabat. La fragua del estudio. Dodí yarad leganó. La ketubá de la ley
Alia Musica / Miguel Sánchez voc
Harmonia Mundi HMI98 7015 (62 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included

This is a recital of sacred music, liturgical and paraliturgical, from the Judeo-Spanish or Sephardic tradition, where ancient Jewish psalmody and cantillation have assimilated many of the musical characteristics and compositional techniques of Muslim Spain and the Ottoman empire. One doesn't listen for long before hearing the augmented second, the typical ornamentation, the voice-production with its Middle Eastern flavour, the interplay of free rhythm, Arabic metrical, and also what Solange Corbin has described as 'rythme unaire'. Then there are all those characteristic Turkish instruments: kanun, 'ud, ney, kaval and kamanya, each with its own delightfully unusual timbre. Alia Musica is an ensemble of eight singers and players, all male with one exception, three of them being both players and singers. The leader, Miguel Sánchez, sings his solos with remarkable ease and flexibility. The contralto, Albina Cuadrado, has a powerful, yet tender voice, well suited to her highly elaborate lament for the seven sons of Hannah, sung in 'ladino' (Jewish-Spanish); and also to the Sabbath evening Noche de aljad intercessions. One striking example of the interplay of styles is the 12th-century Hebrew poem by Yehudá aben Abbas, `Et ša'aré rašón, with its abundant ornamentation in the dramatic slow-beat solo cantillation, contrasting with a measured chorus with drone, and a vigorously animated rhythmic finale. This is a splendid achievement.

Alla Francesca

Cantigas de Santa Maria
(collected by Alfonso X 'el Sabio')
Nembressete madre de Deus. Maravillosos et piadosos. Quen a omagen da Virgen. U alguen a Jhesucristo. Como Jhesucristo fezo a san Pedro. Nunca ja pod'aa virgen. O ffondo do mar. Nas mentes senpre tener. Quen bõa dona querra loar. Non pod' ome pela virgen. Pois que dos reis nostro Sennor. Como o nome da virgen. Gran piadad'e merce. Quen diz mal da Reynna espiritual. Santa Maria amar. Pero que seja a gente. Null ome per ren
Alla Francesca (Brigitte Lesne, Emmanuel Bonnardot, Pierre Hamon, Pierre Bourhis, Florence Jacquemart, Brigitte Le Baron, Katarina Livljanic, Catherine Sergent)
Opus 111 OPS30-308 (64 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included. Recorded 1999 ●

These Spanish canticles, assembled by King Alfonso the Wise to honour the Blessed Virgin Mary, contain some delightful stories of miracles attributed to her intercession. They are becoming increasingly popular with early-music ensembles. Like many other groups, Alla Francesca were faced when recording them with problems to which no ready answer can be found. For whom were they intended? Probably not the Court. How were they performed? We just do not have a clue, except that there are many illustrations in the manuscript that depict musical instruments. But were the Cantigas accompanied? Perhaps these instruments are merely symbolic: we just do not know. What can be done to fill in the gaps left by imperfect notational indications? Alla Francesca's response to this last question is to rely on their own experience and musical instincts. More specific answers will depend upon the knowledge and taste of any present-day performers. Alla Francesca's singers and players have immersed themselves in 'the ancestral techniques of traditional music'. Compared with other groups, however, their approach is simple and natural. One often hears the forceful tones associated with the folk music of central Europe. But this performance is all gentleness and moderation: the singers avoid overdoing their vocal ornamentation; Brigitte Lesne's rippling tones lighten the horizon; the tempos are never forced; the instruments are subtly chosen and grouped. Some of the mantra-like refrains to the miracle ballads might have a mesmeric effect on the average listener, whereas the more developed chant-like melodies (for example, Santa Maria amar) are arresting in their beauty.

To relish all the subtlety that lies under the mantle of simplicity actually takes time, for this is music for whoever truly has time to listen, not for modern man with all his rush and haste...except, perhaps, as a potent antidote? It's certainly well worth the effort, for the recording quality is first-class.

Armes, Amours – Songs of the 14th and 15th Centuries
Anonymous Ho, ho, ho. Man, assay. Or sus vous dormes trop. Helas, Olivier Basselin. Ecce quod natura. Bel fiore Andrieu Armes, amours/O flour des flours Binchois Tant plus ayme. Busnois Est-il merchy Ghiselin La spagna Grimace A l'arme, a l'arme Joye Ce qu'on fait a quatimini Morton Il sera/L'ome armé (two versions). N'aray je jamais mieulx Paumann Mit ganczem Willen
Alla Francesca (Emmanuel Bonnardot, Raphaël Boulay, Pierre Hamon, Marco Horvat, Brigitte Lesne); Alta (Michèle Vandenbrouque, Pierre Boragno, Gilles Rapin)
Opus 111 OPS30-221 (56 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included. Recorded 1997 ●

This disc is an impressive vindication of the marriage of voices and instruments in secular music of this period. The case for all-vocal performance, very prevalent among English groups, has perhaps been greeted more cautiously elsewhere; but rarely has instrumental participation been so positively espoused. In any case, the performance of the songs by wind-bands alone is well attested, and Alta manages brilliantly on its own: those war-horses, Or sus and A l'arme, a l'arme are as exciting as if they had been sung. Oddly enough, it is the vocal selections that are more of a mixed bag: certain songs seem somehow under-interpreted, like Morton's N'aray je jamais mieulx, whose poignant melancholy is belied by a disconcertingly brisk tempo. And what of Busnois's Est-il merchy, here shorn of the repeats prescribed by the rondeau form? Ironically, this abridged version is admirable for its subtle handling of the tactus, and an impressive fluidity of exchange between the three singers: coming from musicians of this calibre, the formal solecism is all the more disconcerting. Yet in songs like Ho, ho, ho, Ce qu'on fait a quatimini and Helas, Olivier Basselin we find the group at its inventive and sure-footed best once again. And it certainly deserves credit for its adroit blend of well-known pieces with lesser-known finds. A few strange moments, then, but many more marvellous ones.

Beauté Parfaite – The Autumn of the Middle Ages

Anonymous Pour vous servir. Or sus, mon cuer, vers ma dame t'encline. Tousjours servir je veuil. Tant qu'en mon cuer/Sur l'erbette. Or sus, vous dormes trop. Cheulz qui volent retourner. La belle et la gente rose. Quant la douce jouvencelle. Instrumental Piece Anthonello de Caserta Beauté parfaite Binchois Adieu, jusques je vous revoye. Ay douloureux disant helas Dufay J'ay mis mon cuer. Je vous pri/Ma tres douce amie/Tant que mon argent Fontaine Pastourelle en un vergier Grenon La plus belle Legrant Entre vous, nouviaux mariés Libert Se je me plains Paullet J'aim. Qui? Raulin de Vaux Savés pour quoy suy sy gay Solage Fumeux fume par fumee Vaillant Par maintes foys

Alla Francesca

Opus 111 OPS30-173 (68 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ

Texts and translations included. Recorded 1996

This is probably the most rounded and successfully varied anthology of late 14th- and early 15th-century songs available. There have been several fine recordings of secular music from this period – a relief to those who feel that this area has suffered relative neglect in comparison to sacred genres. This collection spans a range of styles – from Solage at his weirdest (the famous Fumeux fume, sung here at a very slow tempo that is surprisingly effective) to Binchois at his most melancholy (Ay douloureux) and Dufay in his sprightly, May Day mode – and includes a number of light pastoral or genre pieces, jocose or slightly scurrilous: Pastourelle en un vergier is an example of the ballade form at its liveliest and most direct. As a cross-section of expressive registers and attitudes, it is a very astute and intelligent piece of programming.

Equally impressive is the variety of interpretative approaches, and the polish with which each is carried off. There is great discrimination in the use of instruments. The astonishing artistry of the flautist and recorder player, Pierre Hamon is notable (Par maintes foys), but the individual singers are also given greater chance to shine individually and (most importantly) the two agendas no longer compete with each other.

This is the place to mention Brigitte Lesne, whose distinctive but perfectly controlled vibrato is a singing-lesson in itself; and the scarcely less individual timbre of Emmanuel Bonnardot, restrained yet intense. Both are heard in Adieu, jusques je vous revoye. Even as straightforward a piece as Pastourelle en un vergier is fastidiously shaped, yet without the least bit of fuss. This awareness of the importance of detail is evident in the treatment of the texts. In all cases, they are responded to imaginatively, with a clear understanding of the intention, and the structural integrity of the poetic form (both literary and musical) is respected. Thus, it is easier to engage with the music on the many levels present both between and within pieces. Yet nearly every piece is approached in a different way: no mean feat with 22 works on offer. The disc closes with the magical Je vous pri, here deeply intelligent and compellingly expressive – adjectives that apply to all these interpretations.

Anonymous 4

'Darkness into Light'

Anonymous Christe, qui lux es. Inventor rutili. Jube Domine/In principio. Leccio libri apokalipsis. Lectio yasye prophete/Surge illuminare. Medie noctis tempus est. O lux beata trinitas. Quinque prudentes virginesTavener As one who has slept[a]. The Bridegroom[a]. Come and do Your will in me[a]. The Lord's Prayer Anonymous 4 (Marsha Genensky, Susan Hellauer, Johanna Rose, Jacqueline Horner sngrs); [a]Chilingirian Quartet (Levon Chilingirian, Charles Sewart vn Asdis Valdimarsdottir va Philip de Groote vc)

Harmonia Mundi HMU90 7274 Ⓕ

(64 minutes: DDD). Texts and translations included

Recorded c2002 ●●

There are those who consider Anonymous 4's style just too impeccable and pure, and though elements of their repertoire might benefit from a more maculate approach, just a few bars of their luminous singing of O lux, radiantly recorded, will seduce you from such wicked thoughts. The group's celestial perfection is right for this beautiful devotional music, and they are as utterly beguiling in Tavener's compositions as in the medieval pieces.

The Bridegroom, inspired by the parable of the wise and foolish virgins, is the last piece in a triptych commissioned for the Chilingirian Quartet. The other Tavener works were originally written for, respectively, the Chester and Winchester Cathedral Choirs and The Tallis Scholars. Various recordings of the original versions of The Lord's Prayer and As one who has slept are currently in catalogue, but the clarity and focus of these one-voice-to-a-part performances more than compensate for the loss of the choral fullness. The astringency of the strings is an effective complement to the sweetness of the voices, all blending into a bright yearning which Tavener characterises as 'a kind of Divine eros'. Anonymous 4 sound as marvellous as ever.

Star in the East

Medieval Hungarian Christmas Music

Anonymous 4 (Ruth Cunningham, Marsha Genensky, Susan Hellauer, Johanna Rose sngrs)

Harmonia Mundi HCX3957139 (68 minutes: ADD) Ⓑ
Texts and translations included

This disc is a selection of liturgical and paraliturgical Christmas pieces, taken from medieval Hungarian sources. Most are monophonic, but there is a modest sprinkling of simple polyphonic pieces for two, three and four voices. The charm of the performance lies in its unpretentious, almost childlike simplicity – suggested, maybe, by the delightful extracts from the Christmas story as quoted in the notes. The classic liturgical pieces, which include the Introit Dum medium silentium, the splendid Gradual Speciosa forma, and others, are heard in a version which tends to use the pentatonic scale, thus avoiding both B natural and B flat. The sung readings are impressive with their polyphonic settings. The rich Genealogy (Liber generationis) with its beautifully constructed melody are most enjoyable. Some of the vernacular pieces, as well as the Latin song for New Year's Day, have a regular ternary rhythm. The Hungarian Te Deum offers an interesting alternative for the concluding verses: it simply transposes the original theme up a fourth. The booklet is a marvel.

The Binchois Consort

Marriage of England and Burgundy
Anonymous O pulcherrima mulierum/Girum coeli circuivi. Incomprehensibilia firme/Praeter rerum ordinem Busnois Regina coeli I. Regina coeli II
Frye Missa Sine Nomine. Missa Summe trinitati
The Binchois Consort / Andrew Kirkman
Hyperion CDA67129 (75 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1999-2000 ◉◉

This is another disc to derive inspiration from the marriage in 1468 of Charles the Bold, Duke of Burgundy, and Margaret of York, sister of Edward IV and Richard III. The event fascinates performer-scholars because a manuscript of polyphony survives that can be very plausibly linked to these wedding celebrations (it is now kept in the Royal Library of Belgium in Brussels). After the Ferrara Ensemble's CD of mostly secular music came the Clerks' Group's mix of Masses from the manuscript (including Walter Frye's Flos regalis and Plummer's three-voice setting) and secular English songs. Now, with last year's Early Music Award-winners, the Binchois Consort, offering an all-sacred programme, four out of the five so-called 'Brussels' Masses (all of them in fact by English composers) are now available in fine performances.

It would be easy to insist on the fact that this programme is led by recent research. The attribution to Walter Frye of the anonymous three-voice Mass that opens this recording was made by Andrew Kirkman himself, and those of the two motets that conclude it to Busnois were proposed by Sean Gallagher (O pulcherrima/Girum coeli) and Rob Wegman (Incomprehensibilia firme/Praeter rerum ordinem), all of them young scholars with impeccable credentials. Kirkman's notes are informative and detailed, but he is as concerned as his singers to drive home the music's purely aesthetic, chamber-musical qualities. As to Kirkman's attribution there is no doubt: listen to the sustained duets of the Sanctus and Agnus Dei, and there can be no doubt that the Mass is by a composer of the first rank; one has to agree that Wegman's attribution of Incomprehensibilia cries 'Busnois' out of the speakers: it could hardly be by anyone else. Rightly Kirkman gently expresses doubts concerning O pulcherrima/Girum coeli, – in fact it puts one very firmly in mind of late Dufay, and of his motet Ave regina coelorum in particular.

In some these are faultlessly judged and engaging performances. The music's nuances and details are very sensitively rendered, but so is the sense of larger-scale architecture and pacing; and Kirkman's long-standing commitment to Frye is particularly evident. The performances of Busnois' motets (both conjecturally attributed and firmly ascribed) are, at their best, equally exciting; but just occasionally there is the hint of strain in the higher voices' upper reaches and in the intricate tracery of O pulcherrima and Incomprehensibilia (particularly the latter, whose many sections do not quite flow together), and of the singers bracing themselves for the cross-rhythms of Regina coeli I. But these are details, and it is difficult to imagine more lucid or elegant performances. In a very short time, the Binchois Consort have established themselves as one of the very finest ensembles in the field.

Capilla Flamenca

The A-La-Mi-Re Manuscripts
Anonymous Plus oultre. Salve Regina (on Myn Hert)
Alamire Tandernaken op den Rijn Gascogne Missa Myn hert – Kyrie Isaac Maudit soyt Josquin Proch dolor/Pie Jhesu. Plaine de duel Marbianus de Orto Dulces exuviae Moulu Mater floreat Mouton/Févin Celeste beneficium/ Adiutorium nostrum Newseider Myn hert altyt heeft verlanghen De la Rue Autant en emporte. Jam sauche. Myn hert altyt heeft verlanghen. Soubz ce tumbel Rigo Celle que j'ay
Willaert Missa super Benedicta es – Agnus Dei
Capilla Flamenca
Naxos 8 554744 (62 minutes: DDD) Ⓢ
Texts and translations included. Recorded 1999 ◉

Petrus Alamire – without the curious hyphens of this disc's title – was the head of a thriving workshop of music-copyists connected with the Netherlands court in the early 16th century. His beautiful manuscripts were sent to princes, popes and the super-rich across Europe, and contained music by the greatest composers of the age.

The works recorded here are a minute sampling of what was produced, in some ways an unrepresentative one: the majority of these manuscripts contained not songs, but sacred music, especially masses. Yet in another way this recit beautifully captures the tone and ambience of the Netherlands court: grave, serious, sometimes cerebral music, but richly and densely involving. Josquin is represented by the songs of his old age, and de la Rue, the star composer of the court chapel, by pieces written for his patron, Margaret of Austria, aunt of Charles V. They are exactly suited to the rich, warm and expressive tone of Capilla Flamenca, which records on Naxos for the first time. The group is complemented here by the instrumental consort La Caccia which provides light relief and occasional accompaniment. This alliance is well judged and satisfying: it is not often one hears a crumhorn consort in full flood. Some decisions seem to make light of the music's potential (Josquin's Plaine de duel, for example, taken at somewhat too brisk a pace), but on the whole there is much fine music-making to savour: especially enjoyable is the countertenor Marnix de Cat's delivery of de la Rue's Soubz ce tumbel (a distant precursor of Telemann's Canary Cantata), a lament on Margaret's favourite pet. The accompanying notes give an informative account of Alamire's colourful life, and the value of his enterprise. As to a final recommendation, it would be silly to pretend that cost is irrelevant: this is excellent value for money.

Missa Alleluia – Music at the Burgundian Court
Works include La Rue Missa Alleluia Obrecht Salve regina Josquin Desprez Huc me sydereo
Capilla Flamenca
Eufoda CDEUF1232 (60 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ

Here is classically full-throated, rich Flemish singing. The motets are hardly new to the catalogue, but these readings more than hold their own. Worth noting is the use of choirboys, notably in Obrecht's six-voice Salve regina, and Josquin's Huc me sydereo, here in its six-voice version. But the centrepiece here is unquestionably the Mass by Pierre de la Rue. The singing is mostly very stylish, with a sound image to wallow in. Strongly recommended.

La Capella Reial de Catalunya

El Cançoner del Duc de Calabria
Almodar Ah, Pelayo que desmayo!
Anonymous Ay luna que reluzes. Dizen a mi que los amores he. Gózate, Virgen sagrada. Si de vos mi bien. Un niño nos es nacido. Con qué la lavaré. Ojos garços ha la niña. Si la noche haze escura (attrib. F. Guerrero). Estas noches à tan largas. Vella, de vós som amorós (attrib. M. Flechaa). Yo me soy la morenica. Falai, meus olhos Carceres Soleta so jo ací Flecha Que farem del pobre Joan! Teresica hermana Morales Si n'os hubiera mirado
La Capella Reial de Catalunya / Jordi Savall
Astrée Naïve ES9960 (68 minutes: DDD) Ⓜ
Texts and translations included
Recorded 1995

This is vintage Capella Reial. The singing and playing are superb (as always), and the repertory – melodious and dancey by turn – of the Cançoner del Duc de Calabria is right up its alley. Amazingly, this is the first commercial recording dedicated to this songbook from the Valencian court of the Duke of Calabria – surprising because of the accessibility and quality of the music. Several items from the book have become well known (notably the ubiquitous Riu, riu, chiu, which, thankfully, is not included here), but up till now it has been difficult to gain an appreciation of the collection as a whole. Published in Venice in 1556, it records an earlier repertory, dating from the first decade of the 16th century through the 1530s and, possibly, 1540s. The Valencian court was one of the major cultural centres of the Iberian peninsula at this period, and the court culture was heavily influenced by the latest humanistic trends from Italy. In musical terms, the repertory of the Cançoner reflects this mix of imported and indigenous elements; most of the songs conform to the fixed-form villancico of the later 15th century, but within the essential refrain-and-verse structure much of the writing reveals a more madrigalian idiom. Indeed, popular-style refrains are often succeeded by madrigalian verses, and Capella Reial reinforce this through the scoring adopted; popular songs and refrains attract full-blown 'orchestrations' (the tutti ensemble of viols, winds, plucked instruments and percussion so characteristic of the Capella ensemble), or at least varied combinations of instruments, while the more imitative sections blend voices, viols and harp or vihuela. The songs are well chosen and nicely varied in poetic content and interpretation; it is particularly good to have the relatively few Catalan items from the songbook, which when sung by Jordi Savall's excellent team of native singers, are lent a distinctly dark flavour – thanks to the covered vowel sounds of the language. This is an outstanding disc which brings to light another unjustly neglected corner of the repertory in performances that reveal Capella Reial at their best.

La Columbina Ensemble

Canciones, Romances and Sonetos
Encina Triste España sin ventura! Antonilla es desposada. Tan buen ganadico. Mi libertad en sosiego. Pues que tú, Reina del cielo. Cucú, cucú, cucú Guerrero Niño Dios, d'amor herido. Prado verde y florido. Huyd, huyd. Si tu penas no pruevo. Todo quanto pudo dar Romero A quién contaré mis quejas. En Belén están mis amores. Como suele el blanco zisne. Soberana María. Las voces del fuego Vásquez A, hermosa, abrime cara de rosa. Con qué la lavaré. Torna, Mingo, a namorarte. Si no os uviera mirado. En la fuente del rosel. Soledad tengo de tí. Buscad buen amor. O dulce contemplación. De los álamos vengo
La Columbina Ensemble (Mariá Cristina Kiehr sop

Claudio Cavina counterten Josep Benet ten
Josep Cabré bass)
Accent ACC95111D (56 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included. Recorded 1995

In this survey of Spanish song in the 16th- and 17th-centuries the pieces chosen admirably reflect the consistency of idiom and quality during the period. Distinctive to the repertory is the blend of popular and culto elements, in both text and music. Madrigalian elements gradually infiltrate the simple, homophonic idiom cultivated by Encina and are thoroughly mastered by Juan Vásquez, the genius of Spanish song of the first half of the 16th century, and subsequently by Francisco Guerrero. All these developments are further consolidated by Romero, a near contemporary of Monteverdi, the two- and three-part songs selected here reflecting the 16th-century continuum that dominates the early Spanish Baroque. Apart from some stile concitato effects in the battle-cry refrains to En Belén están mis amores and Las voces del fuego, these technically highly accomplished but effective pieces are still predominantly in the Renaissance polyphonic idiom. None of the songs is more than about four minutes long, and most last around two, so that La Colombina's carefully chosen groupings of works by the same composer help to make a larger structure, and they very successfully juxtapose the more familiar with the less well known while giving a good insight into the range of the repertory. Their interpretations are always expressive and sensitive to the imagery of the text, and the blend and accuracy of ensemble are exemplary. These are utterly convincing performances without any need whatsoever for the 'orchestrated' approach so familiar from, say, Hespèrion XX. Here the madrigalian writing so apparent within Spanish forms such as the villancico, romance and soneto finally comes into its own for about the first time on CD.

Discantus

Campus Stellae – 12th-Century Pilgrims' Songs
Tropes of 'Benedicamus domino' – Ad superni regis decus; Dies ista celebris; Congaudeant catholici; Dies ista gaudium; Gregis pastor; Mira dies oritur. Conductus motets – Plebs domini; Flore vernans gratie. Prosae – Alleluia ... Gratulemur et letemur; Res est admirabilis; Quam dilecta tabernacula; Clemens servulorum gemitus tuorum. Versi – Uterus hodie virginis floruit; Lilium floruit. Kyrie tropes – Rex immense; Cunctipotens genitor Deus. Judicii signum
Discantus / Brigitte Lesne
Opus 111 OPS30-102 (69 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1994

All-female ensembles have hitherto been rather thin on the ground, but following on from Anonymous 4 and the high-voice section of Sequentia, here is Discantus, a 10-member group of sopranos and contraltos, dedicated to breathing new life into the performance of sacred monody and early polyphony. This is an attractive and varied selection of pieces illustrating different aspects of 12th-century French music, the main sources being two manuscripts from the school of St Martial de Limoges and the Codex Calixtinus, or Liber Sancti Jacobi, compiled in Burgundy, but relating to the famous pilgrimage to the shrine of St James of Compostela. The work which remains in the memory, after listening with delight to the whole of this absorbing programme, is undoubtedly a piece (from a rather later source) based on the Sibylline Oracles, Judicii signum, with its ominous, low-voiced announcement of the Last Judgement. Indeed, the alternation from piece to piece of high and low voices, of solo and choir, of monody and polyphony is adroitly and effectively managed throughout the recital, so that the musical interest of a well-balanced and well-planned programme is sustained. Brigitte Lesne and her singers have learnt how to make repercussion sound discreetly convincing. The cadential ornamentation, sometimes involving a kind of double polyphonic shake, might perhaps have gained from being allowed a little more panache. The vocal timbre is clear and fresh and the whole performance moves along with cheerful confidence.

Dame de Flors
Ecole Notre-Dame de Paris
Discantus (Anne Guidet, Claire Jéquier, Lucie Jolivet, Brigitte Le Baron, Anne Quentin, Catherine Schroeder, Catherine Sergent) / Brigitte Lesne
Opus 111 OPS30-175 (59 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included. Recorded 1996 ●

One is struck by the overwhelming majority of pieces in honour of the Virgin Mary in the extant sources of the School of Notre-Dame. Indeed, the rich and many-faceted devotion to Our Lady, which characterised the Middle Ages and reached its peak in the 12th and 13th centuries, was itself paralleled by the secular devotion to the ideal Lady of chivalry sung by troubadour and trouvère alike. Such devotion may well have contributed in no small measure to the development of the art of music, in particular of the ars antiqua with its musical forms: organum, conductus and motet. This is a gentle, unaffected programme of such pieces, some of them of almost childlike simplicity, others of ingenious complexity. The theme that unites them is Mary, seen as Star, Fountain, Maidservant, but above all, as Lady of Flowers, herself the mystical Flower watered by celestial dew, Rose, Lily, Blossom without a thorn. Discantus present her with imagination and sensitivity. An all-female ensemble of eight singers – might that not be a recipe for a bland 'sameness' in an hour-long Marian programme? However, Discantus achieve an amazing degree of variety by the simplest of means: by opposing vocal registers, by alternating solo and tutti, by varying the tempos and by delicate phrasing. The mood of each piece is carefully studied. Despite one slight imperfection of pitch, the sheer beauty and purity of the music is absolutely captivating.

Doulce Mémoire

Messe de mariage 🅿
Anonymous Pavane fait au mariage de Mr de Vandosme. Pavane fite pour le mariage de Henri le Grand. Muse honorons de ta chanson Bati Elevatione Bernardi Sinfonia Prima – a 6; a 8. Sinfonia Seconda a 8 Du Caurroy Au Roy, victorieux guerrier. A la Royne, ninfe qui tient tant d'heur Gagliano Messe à double choeur Guami Offertoire Lejeune Epithalame à deux choeurs. Te Deum
Doulce Mémoire / Denis Raisin-Dadre
Astrée Naïve E8808 (63 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included. Recorded 2000 ●

Doulce Mémoire's account of the Funeral Mass for Henry IV of France (assassinated in 1610) is arguably the finest of several available recordings of that piece (Astrée Naïve). Here, Denis Raisin-Dadre evokes another great state occasion connected with that monarch, his wedding to Maria de' Medici in 1600, celebrated first in Florence in September (with the Duke of Tuscany standing proxy for the king), then in Lyon in December, this time with Henry in person. This is reflected in the programme's mix of Italian and French repertories. At the risk of sounding sectarian, The French get the better deal: Marco da Gagliano's Mass for double choir flatters the ear more than it does the intellect. It would have been just right for a wedding at which most participants' minds would (one presumes) have been on other things. But for sheer musical interest, listen to the celebratory songs by Du Caurroy, and Lejeune's magnificent Epithalame (all of them in vers mesuré style). In terms of scoring, the range on offer is naturally greater and more festive than was the case on the funeral disc, and the acoustic result is every bit as compelling.

An interesting programme, then, whose execution is generally on a par with its conception. Just occasionally, the voices are a touch tentative in the upper reaches (for example from 4'30" of the epithalamium, and elsewhere in details of ornamentation) and towards the end the pace flags somewhat (specifically in Le Jeune's Te Deum), but then there is much more to praise and enjoy. The changes of scoring in the lengthy epithalamium are nicely judged. The progress of these musicians reminds one of their compatriots the Clément Janequin Ensemble, for whom the ideal integration of voices and instrumentation – originally a matter of trial and error – has of late been fully vindicated. Midway between the somewhat dogmatic genre of liturgical reconstruction and more loosely themed programmes, this approach lightly evokes the occasion, leaving the listener's imagination free to roam and fill in those details which it alone can supply.

Viva Napoli – Canzoni Villanesche 🅿
Azzaiolo Il primo libro de villotte – Al di dolce ben mio; Chi passa per 'sta strada. Il secondo libro de villotte – Girometta senza te Bendusi Pass'e mezzo della paganina, gagliarda. Pass'e mezzo ditto il romano, Pass'mezzo ditto il compasso
Caroso Il ballarino – Chiarenzana Festa Madonna io sono un medico perfetto Lassus Madonna mia pietà. La cortesia voi donne predicate. Tu sai, madonna mia, ch'io t'amo e voglio Nasco Il primo libro di canzone villanesche alla napolitana – Vorria che tu cantassi Negri Le gratie d'amore – Bizzarria d'amore Nola Chi la gagliarda Valente Intavolatura di cimbalo – Gaillarda Napolitana; Tenore grande alla Napolitana Willaert Vecchie letrose non valete niente. O bene mio. Madonna mia fa
Zanetti Il scolaro – La bella Pedrina; Saltarello
Ensemble Doulce Mémoire /
Denis Raisin-Dadre fl
Astrée Naïve E8648 (63 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included
Recorded 1998 ●

To date, Ensemble Doulce Mémoire's discography has been fairly evenly divided between French and Italian repertories. Here the group associates itself more firmly still with a specific location and repertory, that of Naples in the mid-16th century. One finds here the usual suspects of the popularising trend with which Naples is associated: Gian Domenico da Nola, Adrian Willaert (represented by his infamous Vecchie letrose and the delightful Madonna mia fa) and the young Lassus, on whom the city's popular musical culture clearly made a lasting impression. Indeed, the imaginative and entertaining programme notes invite us to imagine Lassus masterminding an evening's entertainment at the home of his Neapolitan employer, of which this is the programme. Some recent releases have shown that such recreations are by no means easy to carry off convincingly; but Denis Raisin-Dadre and his ensemble do just that.

Similarly, this disc's other theme, the villanella and its more learned polyphonic offshoots, has been generously treated by native Italian ensembles (notably on the Opus 111 label); it is a great compliment to these French musicians that they can hold their own in their Italian masquers' outfits. There is hardly a track that fails to convince; the diminutions in Madonna mia pietà, in common with the instrumental contributions in general, are skilfully done (even if they place more rhythmic constraints on the voices than one would like), and Vecchie letrose is as nasty as it ought to be. Even when the improvisatory licence is occasionally exceeded, the general tenor of this recital is strong enough to be convincing. The ensemble takes great care to present the booklet-notes as integral to the disc's conception; and after an hour's entertainment, a little unscripted surprise awaits.

This repertory is slowly gaining decent represen-tation on disc, but it is doubtful that there is a better-judged recital than this one.

Early Music Consort of London

The Art of the Netherlands
A Agricola De tous biens plaine (two versions). Fortuna desparata Anonymous Fortuna desperata. Mijn morken gaf mij een jonck wijff Barbireau Een wrolick wesen Brumel Du tout plongiet/Fors seulement. Missa 'Et ecce terrae motus' Busnois Fortuna disperata Compère O bone Jesu Ghiselin Ghy syt die wertste boven al Hayne Van Ghizeghem De tous biens plaine. De tous biens plaine (arr Josquin) Hofhaimer Ein fröhlich wesen Isaac Donna di dentro dalla tua casa. Missa 'La bassadanza' Josquin Desprez Scaramella va alla guerra. Allégez moy, doulce plaisant brunette. Allégez moy, doulce plaisant brunette (anonymous arrangement for two lutes). El grillo è buon cantore. De profundis clamavi a 5. Benedicta es, caelorum regina. Credo 'De tous biens playne'. Guillaume se va chauffeur. Adieu mes amours. Adieu mes amours (16th-century anonymous arrangement for organ). Inviolata, integra et casta es, Maria Mouton Nesciens mater virgo virum Obrecht Ein fröhlich wesen. Haec Deum caeli. Laudemus nunc Dominum Ockeghem Prenez sur moi vostre exemple. Ma bouche rit. Intemerata Dei mater La Rue Missa 'Ave sanctissima Maria'. Ave sanctissima Maria Tinctoris Missa sine nomine
Early Music Consort of London / David Munrow
Virgin Classics Veritas ② 561334-2 Ⓜ
(132 minutes: ADD). Texts and translations included.
Recorded 1975 ●●●

This is arguably Munrow's most most polished collection, devoted to the sacred and secular polyphony of the mid- to late-15th century. These recordings remain marvellously fresh and vital – even in the case of pieces that have since had more polished or more clearly recorded interpretations. That is especially true of the sacred music, recorded entirely vocally and (in most cases) one to a part. It would be a challenge to name a more tempestuous reading of Brumel's 'Earthquake Mass', a more sombre, self-absorbed Intemerata Dei mater, or more luminously clear canons. In the recordings of secular music, the passage of time is rather more obvious. But idiosyncratic though it may now appear, the choice of instruments always combines flair and verve. In the songs, tempos are rather more languorous than one is now used to, but Munrow's finest inspirations still strike very deep. The phrase 'essential listening' is often used (perhaps too often), but it surely applies to 'The Art of the Netherlands'. A word of warning: the contents of the three original LPs are not reproduced exactly. The entire instrumental portion, some 20 minutes of music, is cut. This is one of the most influential recordings of early music ever made.

Ensemble Cantilena Antiqua

Canticum Canticorum
The sacred symbol of love in the medieval musical tradition
Ensemble Cantilena Antiqua / Stefano Albarello counterten
Symphonia SY95135 (72 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ

This intriguing collection of music on the Song of Solomon includes not only 12th- and 13th-century Western monody and polyphony, but also Hebrew, Sephardic and Maronite melodies. The performances blend voices and instruments in a manner much favoured by Italian ensembles today; there is some fine singing, that of the countertenor Stefano Albarello being particularly striking. Text and documentation are intelligently and stylishly presented.

Ensemble Clément Janequin

Les Plaisirs du Palais
Anonymous C'est tout abus. Si vous n'avez madame. Triquedon daine Appenzeller Je pers espoir. Musae Jovis Barbion Pour quelque paine que j'endure Baston Ung souvenir me conforte Certon En languissant avoir secours j'attens. Que n'est-elle auprès de moy Clemens non Papa Priere devant le repas, O souverain Pasteur Dambert Secouez moy Decarella En Tour la feste Saint Martin Gombert La chasse au lièvre Hesdin Ung vray musicien Le Heurteur Mirelaridon Mittantier Laissons amour Le Roy Alemande du pied de cheval. Bransle de Champaigne. Bransles de Poictou Sermisy Aupres de vous à 2 voix. Aupres de vous à 4 voix. Hau, hau, hau le boys! Susato Priere apres le repas, Pere esternel
Ensemble Clément Janequin / Dominique Visse
Harmonia Mundi HMC90 1729 Ⓕ
(61 minutes: DDD). Recorded 2000 ●

This is a feast indeed. Ensemble Clément Janequin often hold their concerts seated round a table, and the theme of feasting recurs in their discography as well (remember their superb 'Une fête chez Rabelais'). Here the menu boasts a greater preponderance than usual of anonymous and lesser-known (indeed, obscure) chanson composers, alongside masters like Certon and Sermisy. But the programme's exoticism extends to the greatest composers of the time: Gombert's La chasse au lièvre could be described as a pastiche in the style of Janequin's representative songs (La chasse being the obvious model). In Gombert's narrative, however, the hunters end up round a table. Dominique Visse and his gang were bound to perform this piece sooner or later. Here it is the centrepiece of their recital, and like the whole, finds them at their best.

That said, one needs to be familiar with their discography to appreciate this new offering to the full. Around Gombert's hunt the disc is arranged palindromically, topped and tailed with prayers before and after the meal; but Clemens non Papa's exhortation to partake in moderation seemingly goes unheeded. There follows the familiar miscellany of love-songs, of ribaldry and drink, of voices and instruments. But there are new twists, and real gems, in the more out-of-the-way selections, like Mittantier's Laissons amour. Appenzeller's well-known deploration on Josquin is a fitting pendant to his Je pers espoir, itself modelled on Josquin's Mille regretz. Another new departure is the use of just one voice accompanied by viols (Bruno Boterf in Certon's En languissant and Visse in Sermisy's Aupres de vous).

One also needs to be familiar with the French chanson repertory in general; and certainly one must understand the texts, without which certain interpretative tricks may disconcert. (A pity, then, that some of the translations are wildly off base – a recurring problem with Harmonia Mundi, and crucial to put right with an idiom as exotic as this). So this is a connoisseur's feast, but it grows in stature with repeated hearing.

Ferrara Ensemble

Balades a III chans 🅿

Anonymous Adieu vous di, tres doulce compaynie. Lamech Judith et Rachel de plourer. Le mont Aon de Thrace Antonius de Civitate Io vegio per stasone Cordier Tout par compas suy composés Grimace Se Zephirus, Phebus et leur lignie Matteo da Perugia Rondeau-refrain. Pres du soloil deduissant s'esbanoye Trebor Helas pitié envers moy dort si fort. Si Alexandre et Hector fussent en vie

Ferrara Ensemble / Crawford Young

Arcana A32 (59 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ

Texts and translations included. Recorded 1994 ◉◉

The ballade, that noblest form (in every sense) of 14th-century secular music, was meant to honour the dukes and counts who did so much to foster the fine arts while war, famine and plague raged round them. Their musical protégés were by all accounts a slightly surreal bunch, dedicated seekers-out of weirdness, addicted to the bottle – possibly even to hashish. Small wonder that so much of their music seems hopelessly capricious on the page. Crawford Young's special achievement is to demonstrate what many enthusiasts of Ars subtilior have felt all along. In performance, that wilful strangeness can suddenly come across with astonishing naturalness: all it takes is the right singers, and here they are. Or perhaps that last sentence should read: 'here she is'. It is no slight on the other members of the Ferrara Ensemble to say that the mezzo-soprano, Lena Susanne Norin, steals the show. Her singing can only be described as luscious. True, the quality of these performances is partly a matter of direction. Tempo is of the first importance because it determines the specific gravity of the dissonances. Beyond that, however, the sensitivity to these details is down to Norin herself. This fierce-looking music, once tamed, becomes almost unbelievably sensuous. The tone of the accompanying string instruments is perfectly judged, the sound-recording outstanding – warm and glowing. The presentation of ballades is a tricky business: to perform all three stanzas can take well over 10 minutes. In the past, singers have tended to confine themselves to just one or two stanzas. That has the advantage of fitting more music into a recital, but aesthetically it makes about as much sense as trimming the tail of a peacock. A glorious recital.

The Whyte Rose

Anonymous Ballo de love (arr Young). Danse de Cleves. Fayre and discrete fresche wommanly figure. Love wolle I withoute eny variaunce/T'Andernacken al op den Rijn. My wofull hert of all gladnesse baryeyne. My herte ys so plungit yn greffe. Thus ye compleyne my grevous hevynesse Busnois Anima liquefacta est/Stirps Jesse. Je ne puis vivre ainsi Frye Alas, alas is my chief song. Salve virgo mater pya. Sospitati dedit Molinet Tart ara mon cuer sa plaisance Morton Le souvenir de vous me tue Ockeghem Quant de vous seul Robertus d'Anglia El mal foco arda quella falsa lingua

Ferrara Ensemble / Crawford Young Ite

Arcana A301 (66 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ

Texts and translations included. Recorded 1997 ◉◉

The emphasis here is on secular music, but motets are represented as well. As for the repertory, it includes such prominent names as Busnois, Ockeghem, Morton and Frye (to whom one may attribute Alas, alas, alas, here listed as anonymous), but there is a fair sprinkling of first-rate songs by lesser-known or anonymous composers, and instrumental dances favoured as light relief on some of this ensemble's previous recordings. The sound is strikingly warm, vivid and clear, and captures the almost sensuous interplay of lines whatever the distribution.

In the English music the almost weightless approach to rhythm works wonderfully: Frye's music lays very little agogic stress on the strong beat. But in the pieces by Busnois, whose music draws so much more from rhythmic impetus, this approach is less effective and leads to the very few solecisms on the disc (such as the perceptible slowing of the pulse in the first phrase of Je ne puis vivre, or the occasional lack of direction in Anima mea liquefacta est). Yet even in these pieces there are moments that can only be described as gorgeous, and elsewhere the combination of sound-image and interpretative nous is as admirable as anything the group has achieved: one can mention, almost at random, Alas, alas, Quant de vous seul, Le souvenir, Tart ara.

Fretwork

Agricola De tous biens playne. Si dedero Tandernaken Anonymous Dit le Bourguygnon. Fortuna desperata. Je suis d'Alemagne. Numqua fue pena major. Se congie pris. La Spagná Brumel Fors seulement Busnois Le Serviteur Caron Helas que pourra devenir Ghiselin Favus distillans. Fors seulement Hayne van Ghizeghem De tous biens plaine Isaac J'ay pris amours. La morra. Tartara Japart Vray dieu d'amours Josquin Desprez Adieu mes amours. Baisez moy, ma doulce amye. La Bernardina. De tous biens playne Lapicida 🅿

Tandernaken Obrecht Fors seulement. J'ay pris amours. Orto Ave Maria. Si sumpsero. Tsat een meskin Pinarol Fortuna desperata Stappen Beati pacifici/De tous biens plaine Stokem Brunette
Fretwork (Richard Boothby, Richard Campbell, Wendy Gillespie, Julia Hodgson, William Hunt, Susanna Pell viols) Ⓕ
Harmonia Mundi HMU90 7291 (76 minutes: DDD) ⊙

Few better compliments can be paid than returning to a recording again and again, for sheer pleasure. The occasion of Fretwork's collection is the anniversary of the establishment in Venice more than 500 years ago of the first music-printing presses. This is certainly the most stylish of several recordings made in connection with Ottaviano Petrucci's epoch-making achievement.

To present a recital of these song arrangements and 'purely' instrumental pieces exclusively on viols is a novelty worth commenting on. Most other recordings of this repertory use a mixed consort; part of the charm of this disc is that it seduces you into the belief that the music was actually intended for viols. Fretwork's single-mindedness is further emphasised by their eschewal of a guest singer, an option that would have guaranteed more variety on the surface level, and allowed them perhaps a greater range of options. That they have not done so is admirable.

Another strength of the recital is programming. Sheer generosity aside (there are 32 tracks), it is a treat to have so many favourite pieces here. The 15th century's hit-parade is also reflected, with no fewer than four settings of De tous biens plaine, three of Fors seulement, and two each of Fortuna desperata, J'ay pris amours and Tandernaken. There are lesser-known pieces too, but always, it seems, the viols' advocacy of the music (and of their suitability to it) is uppermost. Lovers of polyphony of all sorts, in all its abstraction and all its sensuousness, have something special in store. And lovers of chamber music of later periods will find themselves on surprisingly similar territory. Enough said: hats off.

Gothic Voices

The Earliest Songbook in England

Anonymous Verbum patris umanatur. In hoc ortus occidente. Regis cuius potentia. Ecce torpet probitas. Magno gaudens gaudio. Rerum deus conditor. Cantu miro. Vacillantis trutine. In natali novi regis. Diastematica. Divino maduit. Virgo mater salvatoris. Tronus regis instauratur. Benedicamus domino: Spiritus almi. Adulari nasciens. Agnus Dei: Qui pius est factus. Resonet, intonet. Ad honorem salvatoris I. Ad honorem salvatoris II. Argumenta faluntur fisice. Flos floriger. Licet eger cum egrotis. Ad cantus letitie
Gothic Voices (Catherine King contr Steven Harrold, Rogers Covey-Crump, Charles Daniels, Leigh Nixon tens Stephen Charlesworth bar)
Hyperion CDA67177 (65 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included. Recorded 1999

The eight leaves of the Cambridge University Library manuscript Ff. I. 17 are surely not in fact the earliest songbook in England; but this is nevertheless an astonishing and varied collection, copied around 1200, almost certainly in England. The texts are not in English but in Latin, and much of the music is likely to have originated elsewhere; moreover the songs are mostly what we now call sacred conductus, though they include the standard Goliardic fare of love-songs and songs of fierce political invective. Like so much from those years, the leaves survive only because they were used later for binding something else, and they must be just a tiny portion of something originally much bigger, but they make a splendidly contrasted collection of music. It is marvellous to have most of the music presented together on one disc.

And of course it is even more marvellous that Gothic Voices should have done it. Nothing is overstated yet nothing is allowed to pass without a burning musical conviction in the performances. Everything has a crystalline audibility. The two-voice pieces are done with the purity of intonation that we have come to expect from Gothic Voices; and the monophonic songs are all given with particular verve – especially in the four sung by Catherine King, who seems to become a more indispensable artist with each recording.

It should be mentioned that in the edition used by John Stevens the basically unrhythmed notes are read in a 'syllabic' interpretation, that is, with each syllable of the text sounding roughly the same length. This is now perhaps the most widely accepted approach, though some listeners may occasionally feel that the frequent Goliardic metres of the poetry demand something that dances more openly.

Lancaster and Valois – French and English Music, 1350-1420

Anonymous Puis qu'autrement ne puis avoir. Soit tart, tempre, main ou soir. Le ior. Avrai je ja de ma dame confort? Sanctus. Je vueil vivre au plaisir d'amours Cesaris Se vous scaviez, ma tres douce maistresse. Mon seul voloir/Certes m'amour Cordier Ce jur de l'an Fonteyns Regali ex progenie Machaut Donnez, signeurs. Quand je ne voy ma dame. Riches d'amour et mendians. Pas de tor en thies pais Pycard Credo Solage Tres gentil cue Sturgeon Salve mater domini/Salve templum domini Gothic Voices / Christopher Page lte
Hyperion CDA66588 (59 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included. Recorded 1991 ⊙

This is the 10th recording to come from Christopher Page's Gothic Voices and, the considerable success of their previous recordings notwithstanding, this is perhaps their best yet. In the space of 11 years, Page and his group have reinvented performance practice in medieval and 15th-century music, as powerful and popularising an influence as David Munrow and his Early Music Consort of London in the 1970s. 'Lancaster and Valois' takes its name from the chosen repertoire: French secular songs of the late 14th and early 15th centuries juxtaposed with sacred English pieces from around 1400.

Much thought has been given to the ordering of the pieces and the grouping of the voices, resulting in the greatest possible diversity. In Tres gentil cuer by Solage, Page sets an ideally lilting tempo, with the text finely enunciated by Margaret Philpot, the tenors (in this instance Charles Daniels and Leigh Nixon) adding definition but never threatening to engulf. This is followed by a Credo by the English composer Pycard, the longest and most stately piece on the disc, exploiting the richer timbres of tenors and baritones. With excellent sound and entertaining notes, this is an irresistible disc.

The Marriage of Heaven and Hell – 13th-Century French Motets and Songs

Anonymous Je ne chant pas. Talens m'est pris. Trois sereurs/Trois sereurs/Trois sereurs. Plus bele que flors/Quant revient/L'autrier jouer. Par un martinet/Hé, sire!/Hé, bergier! De la virge Katerine/Quant froidure/Agmina milicie. Ave parens/Ad gratie. Super te Jerusalem/Sed fulsit virginitas. A vous douce debonnaire. Mout souvent/Mout ai esté en doulour. Quant voi l'aloete/Dieux! je ne m'en partiré ja. En non Dieu/Quant voi la rose. Je m'en vois/Tels a mout. Festa januaria
Bernart de Ventadorn Can vei la lauzeta mover
Blondel de Nesle En tous tans que vente bise
Colin Muset Trop volontiers chanteroie.
Gautier de Dargies Autre que je ne seuill fas
Gothic Voices / Christopher Page
Hyperion CDA66423 (46 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included ●●

The reasons for the dazzling success of Gothic Voices both in the recording studio and in the concert hall are once again evident in this collection. It is both an entertaining and well-planned recital and, if one chooses to take it that way, reading Christopher Page's insert-notes while listening, a detailed lecture-recital. The music, all French and dating from the 13th century, is that seemingly impenetrable repertoire of polytextual motets, unexpectedly compared and contrasted with monophonic trouvère songs. The comparison is illuminating, and the performances of both genres of music are up to Gothic Voices' usual high standards. The clever juxtaposition of the trouvère Bernart de Ventadorn's Can vei la lauzeta mover with the triple-texted motet Quant voi l'aloete/Dieux! je ne m'en partiré ja/NEUMA encapsulates the thinking behind this recording: a compelling musical experience and a provocative intellectual one.

Music for the Lion-Hearted King

Anonymous Twelfth Century Mundus vergens. Novus miles sequitur. Sol sub nube latuit. Hac in anni ianua. Anglia, planctus itera. Etras auri reditur. Vetus abit littera. In occasu sideris. Purgator criminum. Pange melos lacrimosum. Ver pacis apperit. Latex silice Blondel de Nesle L'amours dont sui espris. Ma joie me semont Gace Brulé A la doucour de la bele seson Gui IV, 'Li chastelain de Couci' Li nouviauz tanz
Gothic Voices / Christopher Page
Hyperion CDA66336 (60 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included ●

Christopher Page has a remarkable gift for creating enthralling programmes of early music bound together by a brilliantly-chosen central theme, or appellation. This collection is no less distinguished and every bit as fascinating, musically and historically. Whether or not Richard himself ever actually listened to any of these pieces is beside the point: they are all representative of the period of his lifetime and are gathered together here in his name for the 800th anniversary of his coronation (1189). Two types of 12th-century vocal music are represented: the conductus – which can be written for one, two, three or even four voices and the chanson, or noble, courtly love song. The singers cannot be applauded too highly for performances marked by an extraordinary insight into how this music should be tackled, that is, with a fair degree of restraint as well as know-how, given the sort of audience it might have had in Richard's day: the royal court or the household of some high-ranking ecclesiastical figure.

The Spirits of England and France, Volume 1 – The 14th and 15th centuries

Anonymous Quant la douce jouvencelle. En cest mois de May. Laus detur multipharia. Credo. La uitime estampie real^a J Cooke Gloria da Perugia Belle sans per Machaut Ay mi! dame de valour Pykini Plaisance, or tost
The12th and 13th centuries
Anonymous Deduc, Syon, uberrimas. Je ne puis/Par un matin/Le premier jor/Iustus. Beata nobis gaudia. Virgo plena gratie/Virgo plena gratie/Virgo. Crucifigat omnes. Flos in monte cernitur. In Rama sonat gemitus. Ave Maria. La septime estampie real^a. La quarte estampie real^a Pérotin (attrib) Presul nostri temporis
Gothic Voices / Christopher Page;
^{a}Pavlo Beznosiuk medieval fiddle
Hyperion CDA66739 (63 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included. Recorded 1994

From the beautifully swift and unsentimental reading of the opening song, Quant la douce jouvencelle, through to the magically perfumed close with what Page calls the 'irredeemably English style' of Ave Maria, each piece has its own musical excellence. In the works of around 1400 it is usually Rogers Covey-Crump who leads the singing, with a skilled and nuanced grasp of the style that seems to grow with each recording. For the earlier works the spoils are divided between Paul Agnew, Julian Podger, Andrew Tusa and Leigh Nixon, all tenors with spirit and individuality. Finally, as an innovation in Gothic Voices recordings, Pavlo Beznosiuk plays three estampes on the medieval fiddle, without percussion and without any embellishment or deviation from the notes of their single surviving manuscript. While not everybody will be happy about this literal attitude to the problem of early instrumental music, Beznosiuk's playing is so rhythmically alive and so irresistible as to justify the approach. A superb recording from Gothic Voices, again.

The Spirits of England and France, Volume 2 – Songs of the Trouvères
Adam de la Halle Assenés chi, Grievilier
Anonymous Domna pos vos ay chausida. Quant voi la fleur nouvele. Amors m'art con fuoc am flamma. Trois Estampies Audefroi le Bastart Au novel tens pascor Ernoul li Vielle Por conforter mon corage Gace Brulé Desconfortez, plains de dolor. Quant define fueille et flor. De bien amer grant joie atent. Cil qui d'amours Gautier de Dargies La doce pensee Gontier de Soignies Dolerousement commence Guibert Kaukesel Un chant novel. Fins cuers enamourés Richart de Semilli Je chevauchai
Gothic Voices / Christopher Page medieval lte with Robert White bagpipes Nick Bicat perc
Pavlo Beznosiuk fiddle
Hyperion CDA66773 (62 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included. Recorded 1994 ●●

This is a disc devoted to monophonic song and one of startling power and originality. Essentially it explores two repertories: the serious grand chant, particularly in the work of Gace Brulé, whose four songs here are presented with tremendous conviction and in wonderfully spacious readings; and the lighter dance songs, where Page often includes instruments, played with robust good humour. As regards the rhythmic approach, this is neatly varied to match the needs of particular songs: sometimes an equalist interpretation, sometimes syllabic, and sometimes in strict metre roughly derived from the principles of modal rhythm. That seems a thoroughly judicious and musical solution, and it gives the disc considerable variety of pace.

Margaret Philpot shows her astonishing stylistic range in the five songs she sings, from Richart de Semilli's jovial Je chevauchai via Gace Brulé's wonderful De bien amer and concluding with Au novel tens pascor, the late chanson de toile by Audefroi le Bastart. Emma Kirkby makes a welcome return to Gothic Voices with two glorious performances: her success in later music has been so great over the last few years that it has been too easy to forget quite how expressive she can be in early monophony, especially with Page's rattling folk-style lute playing in Domna pos vos ay chausida. Once again Gothic Voices have produced a record that sets new standards.

The Spirits of England and France, Volume 3
Anonymous Abide, I hope it be the best. Exultavit cor in Domino Binchois Qui veut mesdire si mesdie. Amoureux suy et me vient toute joye. Adieu mon amoureuse joye. Ay douloureux disant helas. Magnificat secundi toni. Se la belle n'a le voloir Bittering En Katerina solennia/Virginalis concio/Sponsus amat sponsum Cardot Pour une fois et pour toute Dunstable Beata Dei genitrix
Fontaine J'ayme bien celui
Johannes de Lymburga Descendi in ortum meum
Legrant Se liesse Machaut Il m'est avis qu'il n'est
Power Gloria Velut Lassies ester vostres chans de liesse. Un petit oyselet chantant
Gothic Voices / Christopher Page
Hyperion CDA66783 (67 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included. Recorded 1995 ●

Gothic Voices continue their long-term exploration of early English and French polyphony with an offering devoted to the work of Binchois and his musical forebears of both 'nationalities'. Consistent with the ensemble's usual approach to this repertoire, voices and instruments are not mixed; instead, Christopher Page is joined by the lutenists Christopher Wilson and Shirley Rumsey in energetic renderings of several of the songs: light, and delightful, relief.

The songs of Binchois are relatively late territory for Gothic Voices. It has been 12 years or so since they covered this repertoire in any depth, and comparison with the present disc is instructive. Over the years there have been more, and deeper, men's voices; the hard-edged, polished chrome patina has perhaps mellowed and burnished with time. Perhaps, too, the almost obsessive concern with clarity and intonation has been allowed to ease a little, in favour of a heightened sensitivity to the affective projection of both text and music. Perhaps, but only just. The hard edge creeps back in when the programme strays from Binchois back on to earlier repertory, such as Power's marvellous five-voice Gloria – here portrayed as an exercise in risk-taking for composer and singers alike. Its brashness, though glorious to listen to, leads to an inevitable query, for there seem to be not one but two programmes here. Binchois' songs, characterised by their restraint and understatement, seem uneasy in the company of so many of his exuberant contemporaries and immediate predecessors (and the not-so-immediate – what is Machaut doing here?).

The singers do their utmost to reflect the difference in tone, but that only makes the discrepancy more telling. This is a pity, for the Binchois pieces are finely pitched, and deserved to have more space to themselves – more space also for the singers to acclimatise themselves to Binchois's languorous melancholy. Page knows a show-stopper when he hears one, and the haunted Ay, douloureux, clocking in at nearly nine minutes, stands out from other items in the collection like a hothouse plant. That is not meant to belittle the rest, but to suggest that, as a programme, this particular collection is perhaps not as well rounded as so many of its predecessors: the sum of its parts. Yet there is so much that is deeply moving and magical that anything less than a warm recommendation would be Scrooge-like.

The Spirits of England and France, Volume 4

Anonymous Missa Caput (ed Curtis). The story of the Salve regina. Salve regina. Jesu for thy mercy[a]. Clangat tuba. Alma redemptoris mater. Old Hall Manuscript – Agnus Dei Smert Jesu fili Dei[a] Traditional Make we merry[a]. Nowell, nowell, nowell
[a]Shirley Rumsey, [a]Christopher Wilson ltes
Gothic Voices / Christopher Page [a]lte
Hyperion CDA66857 (66 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included Recorded 1996

This recording breaks new ground for Gothic Voices in terms of repertory. For the first time, the group tackles a large-scale, multi-movement work. One could hardly imagine a more appropriate Mass for their début in the genre than the anonymous English Caput cycle. Composed *c*1440 and long thought to be by Dufay, it lays fair claim to being the single most influential work of the 15th century. Its most innovative technical features were widely copied by continental composers, but on this recording we can at last begin to appreciate what all the fuss was about: few on the continent at the time were capable of writing music of such breathtaking confidence. One can feel the impact, the delighted surprise of contemporary listeners on hearing that very first burst of four-note writing in the Kyrie. In that respect, it is sobering to think that the identity of this supremely influential composer may forever remain a mystery.

That phrase 'breathtaking confidence' aptly describes Gothic Voices, who are on the top of their form. Initially one could hardly fail to be surprised by the briskness of this performance, but there is little sign of hurry even in the most demandingly athletic places. Although the declamation of the text is kept fairly low-key, the sense of phrase and line, of the notes taking their place amid a kaleidoscope of changing sounds, is all beautifully judged. And with intonation and ensemble of this consistency, it is possible to revel in sheer sonority. What else? The accompanying items make for lighter listening and a nicely balanced programme. This, then, is a disc that grows in stature with each hearing.

The Spirits of England and France, Volume 5

Anonymous Missa, 'Veterem hominem'. Jesu, fili virginis. Doleo super te. Gaude Maria virgo. Deus creator omnium. Jesu salvator. A solis ortus. Salvator mundi. Christe, qui lux es. To many a well. Sancta Maria virgo. Mater ora filium. Ave maris stella. Pange lingua Dunstable Beata mater
Gothic Voices / Christopher Page
Hyperion CDA66919 (65 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included. Recorded 1996

Gothic Voices' peculiar brand of extrovert dynamism puts a new spin on the performance of 15th-century Mass music; more than just a Mass, what we have here is a glimpse into the very mind of a medieval composer. Music as contemplation, certainly, but active, not passive; music in which each single voice conveys weight, number, proportion. Thus, the recurring head-motif at the beginning of each movement of the Veterem hominem Mass cycle is experienced not so much as a structural device as a manifestation of divine immutability. In a similar spirit, the same tempos are retained in all the movements; this has not been attempted very often, but far from being unrelenting, the result suits both pieces very well. If Page and friends let rip in the Mass and in the carols (delivered with exhilarating brashness), they deliberately adopt a more placid approach for some of the smaller Marian pieces. As to the chants that intersperse the polyphony, they provide contrast; but can it be that the 15th-century singers who polished off their polyphony with such gusto, took their 'daily bread' of plainsong with so little salt?

The Study of Love – French Songs and Motets of the 14th Century

Anonymous Pour vous servir. Puis que l'aloe ne fine. Jour a jour la vie. Combien que j'aye (two versions). Marticius qui fu. Renouveler me feïst. Fist on dame. Il me convient guerpir. Le ior. En la maison Dedalus. La grant biaute. En esperent. Ay las! quant je pans Machaut Dame, je suis cilz/Fins cuer. Trop plus/Biauté paree/Je ne suis. Tres bonne et belle. Se mesdisans. Dame, je vueil endurer Pycard Gloria. Solage Le basile
Gothic Voices / Christopher Page
Hyperion CDA66619 (60 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included. Recorded 1992 ●●

The title of the disc speaks of the ways in which the discourses of love (and 'love') in the late Middle Ages are partly, perhaps largely, derived from books – the Bible, classical poetry and myths, the earlier medieval literary tradition – rather than some expression of unmediated personal feeling. But music was a powerful means for the late medieval artist to try to transcend the bookish intertextualities of the literary texts. Rarely have Gothic Voices, both as individuals and as a group, sounded more alive and present. The accord of vowel colour between the singers in some of the fully texted pieces is marvellous, a feature pointed up the more by juxtaposition with those works in which Page continues his experiments with lower-voice vocalisation. Where some slight untidiness creeps in, the impression often given is the positive one of risk being happily taken in the recording sessions. A wonderful addition to the catalogue, and the recorded sound is superlative.

The Voice in the Garden – Spanish Songs and Motets, 1480-1550 🅿

Anonymous Pase el agoa, ma Julieta. Harto de tanta porfía. Dindirín, dindirín. Ave, Virgo, gratia plena. Dentro en el vergel. Entra Mayo y sale Abril Encina Mi libertad en sosiego. Los sospiros no sosiegan Enrique Mi querer tanto vos quiere Mena Yo creo que n'os dió Dios. La bella malmaridada Peñalosa Por las sierras de Madrid. Ne reminiscaris, Domine. Precor te, Domine. Sancta Maria
Instrumental works – Anonymous A la villa voy

Milán Fantasías 10, 12 and 18 Narváez Fantasía II tono; Fantasía III tono. Paseávase el rey moro
Fernández Palero Paseávase el rey moro
Segni Tiento
Gothic Voices / Christopher Page with Christopher Wilson vihuela
Andrew Lawrence-King hp
Hyperion CDA66653 (52 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included. Recorded 1993 ●●

As usual with Gothic Voices, there is a mixture of all-vocal and solo-instrument performances, never the twain meeting and a mixture of what used to be called sacred and secular: motets by Peñalosa sit cheek by jowl with love songs and instrumental fantasies, giving an unusual and intriguing picture of the repertory. In general the record has all the qualities that make anything by Gothic Voices a required purchase for collections that aim at serious coverage of early centuries; and the resourceful selection of music makes it an important contribution to the understanding of Spanish culture. A note of special praise for Christopher Wilson's performances of the vihuela solos which have a control and eloquence that are truly impressive. Andrew Lawrence-King characteristically throws new light on some of this repertory with his immaculate range of colours and textures on the harp.

Harp Consort

'Miracles of Notre-Dame'
Anonymous Benedicamus Domino. Hyer matin a l'enjournee. S'amours dont sui espris Gautier de Coincy Miracles de Nostre-Dame – Amours dont sui espris; Entendez tuit ensemble; Ma viele; D'un amour coie et serie; Quant ces floretes florir; Hui matin a l'ajournee; Roine celestre; Esforcier m'estuet ma vois; Amours qui set bein enchanter; Puisque voi la flour novele; Cui donrai je mes amours; Douce dame; De la sainte Leocade; Talens m'est pris orendroit; Pour Dieu traiez vous en la; Je pour yver
Harp Consort / Andrew Lawrence-King hp
Harmonia Mundi HMU90 7317 Ⓕ
(70 minutes: DDD). Texts and translations included
Recorded c2002 ●●

There are so many difficulties for performers of Gautier de Coincy. Quite aside from the problems of all monophonic song from the 13th century (whether to use instruments or not, how literally to take the written notes, how much can be improvised and so on), most of the music is demonstrably not by him but adaptations of well-loved pieces of his time. His main contribution is therefore the poetry. And one important respect in which this issue improves over other Gautier recordings is that the texts are treated with the utmost seriousness. There is something marvellously refreshing in the way the singers relish the sound of their texts, enunciated with a deliciously hard-edged approach to medieval French. Around these seven songs, Andrew Lawrence-King has created a frame designed from shorter fragments. Many of them are instrumental renditions of the melodies, with some particularly remarkable and fascinating performances by Ian Harrison on cornett and shawm and some astonishingly attractive examples of group improvisation. In the past it has often seemed as though Lawrence-King has so many ideas that the result is more him than anything he claims to be performing. Here there may still be a lot of him, but it is all subjugated to an attempt to understand and portray Gautier de Coincy. The result is remarkably convincing and satisfying.

This is musicianship on a very high level.

The Play of Daniel
Douglas Nasrawi ten Daniel; Jeremy Birchall bass Habacuc; Harry van der Kamp bass King Baltassar; Ian Honeyman ten King Darius; Barbara Borden sop Queen; Caitríona O'Leary voc Child;
The Harp Consort /
Andrew Lawrence-King hp/psaltery/org
Deutsche Harmonia Mundi 05472 77395-2 Ⓕ
(78 minutes: DDD). Notes, text and translation included. Recorded 1997

Andrew Lawrence-King has assembled a thoughtful and attractive rendering of The Play of Daniel. The rhythmic interpretation of the unmeasured pitches is sensitively varied. A single pitch-standard is retained throughout – which seems to be the best approach, though there are plenty of good reasons for thinking otherwise. And, most important of all, the drama works well because careful and original thought has been given to the meaning of the words: as one example among many, Daniel's final speech is prefaced with a grand organ introduction that actively frames it as a prophecy well apart from the story. In fact the entire flow of the closing scenes is particularly effectively caught.

Douglas Nasrawi is an excellent Daniel, managing to encompass the wide range of musical styles in the role without losing the strong character; and he gives a wonderfully expressive reading of the great lament as Daniel enters the lions' den. Ian Honeyman may well be the first Darius on record to portray him fully as a thoroughly nice but weak man: somehow the music invites a bolder approach at the moment when Darius usurps Belshazzar, but plainly the present interpretation works better. Harry van der Kamp is a splendidly strong Belshazzar; and all the smaller roles are well characterised. Alongside this is a superbly skilled instrumental ensemble. There are many different ways of doing The Play of Daniel, but this one is thoroughly viable throughout.

Henry's Eight

Missa cum iucunditate
Clemens non Papa Pater peccavi. Ego flos campi
Josquin Desprez Absolve, quaesumus, Domine

Ockeghem Ave Maria Pierre de la Rue Missa cum iucunditate Willaert O crux splendidior
Henry's Eight / Jonathan Brown bass
Etcetera KTC1214 (60 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included. Recorded 1997 ●●

The Missa cum iucunditate is one of Pierre de la Rue's most widely circulated settings, and hearing it sung as zestfully as it is here, one understands why. It is indeed pervaded by the 'jollity' of the title, and belies de la Rue's rather dour reputation. In a previous recording The Hilliard Ensemble sang it one-to-a-part and sounded as though they were nearing the end of a long recording session; Henry's Eight involves all its members, so that the addition of a second countertenor in the Credo is neither contrived nor artificial, but an extension of what precedes it. The ensemble seems also to have allowed itself time to locate the music's rhetorical peaks: each movement has something new and fresh to offer, but the 'Osanna' stands out especially, demonstrating their ability to 'sing out' in an unrestrained manner, while still sounding unmistakably English. The selection of motets complements the Mass handsomely, and shows off some of the Eight's other emotional registers. The gems here are the performances of Ockeghem's Ave Maria (perhaps the finest available, contemplative and tensile: witness the final descent of the top line) and of Josquin's funeral motet, Absolve, quaesumus, Domine.

Jacob Heringman lute

'The Art of the Lute Player'
Bakfark Un Gay Bergier. Si grand è la pietà. Non accedat ad te malum, secunda pars. Fantasia No 9 Desprez[d] Adieu mes amours. Ave Maria. Benedicta es, caelorum regina. Christe Fili Dei[b]. Mille regretz[b] Gerle Scaramella Holborne Heres paternus. A Horn pype[a]. Responce. Galliard, 'The Fairie-round' Milán Fantasías[b] – XII; XXIV; XXXI. Pavanas[b] – I; VI. Tento IV[b] Mudarra Tres libros de musica en Cifras para vihuela – Fantasia que contrahaze la harpa en la manera de Ludovico[b]; Fantasia del primer tono[b]; Fantasia del segundo tono[b]; Tiento del segundo tono[b]; Fantasia del quinto tono[c] Waissel Polish Dances – I; II; III; IV; V
[d]Intabulations by Ripa
Jacob Heringman lte/[a]citt/[b]vihu/[c]gtr
Avie AV0011 (79 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 2002

Despite its title this is not merely another programme of lute music. Jacob Heringman, a distinguished lutenist, here shows his considerable technical and musical skills on three lutes, vihuela, cittern and renaissance guitar. His choice of repertoire springs from his particular love of 16th-century music and it includes many items by neglected composers, most of which have not been recorded before.

There is an abundance of dances and fantasias, the staple diet of most lutenists, but Heringman also focuses on the important but generally overlooked area of intabulations, adaptations of vocal works for the lute and vihuela. Since the plucked-string instruments lack the sustaining power of the human voice the vocal lines were kept 'alive' by adding embellishments.

This disc offers a unique variety of music, some of it rescued from undeserved oblivion, played on a matching variety of instruments and superbly recorded. The supple expressivity of the performances reflects Heringman's love of the music. Buy it without delay.

Hespèrion XX / XXI

Music for the Spanish Kings
Crecquillon Pour un plaisir. Un gay bergier. Diferencias sobre 'Las vacas' Francisco de la Torre Il Re di Spagna Ghizeghem De tous bien playne Giovane da Nola O Dio se vede chiaro. Cingari siamo venit'a giocare Gombert Dezilde al caballero Guglielmo Ebreo da Pesaro Collinetto Ortiz Fantasia I and II 'Salve Regina' Spagna Tres glosas sobre la Alta Valente Intavolatura di Cimbalo – Gaillarda Napolitana Willaert Vecchie letrose non valete niente. Je fille quant dieu me donne de qouy
Montserrat Figueras sop Hespèrion XX / Jordi Savall
Virgin Veritas ② VBD 561875-2 Ⓜ
(103 minutes: DDD). Recorded 1980s ●

No group has done more to create a sound world for Spanish music of this period than Hespèrion XX, and, while both of these CDs, reissued under the heading 'Music for the Spanish Kings', are classic examples of their colourfully instrumented and imaginative interpretations, they also represent the range of the degrees of musical 'otherness' that their performances can convey. The first CD, of secular music from the Aragonese court in Naples and from that of Charles V, is full of characteristic kaleidoscopic instrumentation, in which percussive instruments such as drums of various kinds and tambourines add a distinct flavour, whether strictly 'Spanish' or not.

The second CD of the arrangements of Antonio de Cabezón, the famous blind organist of Charles V and Philip II, generally sounds much less overtly 'Spanish', and the music, and the interpretations of it, which alternate wind band, viol consort and solo keyboard or lute/vihuela, fit much more squarely into a pan-European musical tradition. Here again the quality and panache of the playing make this a recording to treasure. This is vintage Hespèrion XX – you'll be amazed by these recordings' freshness and originality.

Diáspora Sefardí
Alejandría Las estrellas de los cielos Esmirna El Rey de Francia[a]. Yo era niña de casa alta
Jerusalén Hermoza muchachica Marruecos Nani, nani[a] Rhodes El moro de Antequera[a]. La guirnalda de rosas[a] Salónica Levantose el Conde Niño[a]. Axerico de quinze años Sarajevo Por que llorax blanca niña[a]. A la una yo nací. Paxarico tu te llamas Sofía El rey que tanto madruga[a]. En la santa Helena. Longe de mi tu estarás Turquía Por allí pasó un cavallero[a]. Two Improvisations

[a]Montserrat Figueras sop Hespèrion XXI / Jordi Savall viol/lira/rebab
Alia Vox ② AV9809 (130 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included. Recorded 1999 ○○

It is perhaps ironic that the Inquisition should have helped to preserve and enrich the musical tradition of the Sephardic Jews. Inquisitorial records provide an important source of information on musical practice in the Jewish community that until the diaspora of 1492 resided in the Iberian peninsula. The conversos who remained in Spain regularly came under suspicion for singing their own songs – taken as evidence of reversion to their own faith – while those who were expelled fanned out through northern Africa, eastern Europe and the Middle East. Thus, although the Sephardic tradition had its roots in medieval Hispanic culture, it was subsequently open to and enriched by multiple and diverse musical influences. Hespèrion XXI's recreation of this repertory casts its net wide, drawing on material from late medieval Spain, but also adapting living ballad traditions in Greece and incorporating Balkan-Turkish elements. It is important to emphasise the creativity of the musical process at work here: the oral tradition of the Sephardic Jews is all but lost, and we know little enough about actual performance practice in previous centuries. No matter: the result is beautiful, exotic, fantastical and at times profoundly moving. Montserrat Figueras's distinctive voice seems ideally suited to the long-breathed, meandering melodies, punctuated by those sinuous, fluttering, Eastern-sounding ornaments at which she excels. And even if the mix of languages makes it impossible to follow the story-line without recourse to the booklet-notes, she conveys a strong narrative sense: try the extended ballad Por que llorax blanca niña or the strangely mesmeric lullaby Nani, nani.

The instrumental accompaniment of plucked and bowed strings, recorders and percussion, comes across as genuinely improvisatory (although a good deal must surely have been worked out in advance), and this is also true of the purely instrumental creations on the second CD, some of which are simply called improvisations.

The playing of the instrumentalists is superb, and it all makes for compelling listening.

The Hilliard Ensemble

Officium

Jan Garbarek sax The Hilliard Ensemble (David James counterten Rogers Covey-Crump, John Potter tens Gordon Jones bar)
ECM New Series 445 369-2 (78 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Latin texts included. Recorded 1993. Also includes Plainchant, Notre Dame polyphony and motets by Dufay, de la Rue and Morales – with saxophone

The play between ancient chant and structured jazz-style improvisation creates a sort of spiritual time warp where past and present happily co-exist on the basis of shared musical goals. For no matter how one views so-called crossover (such a silly term), or the relative lack of wisdom in sticking to rigid musical boundaries, the evidence is conclusive: 'Officium' transcends any limitations imposed by time and style. If you have any doubts, then play either the opening or closing tracks, both of which find Jan Garbarek (a master of apposite extemporisation) easing around Christóbal de Morales's polyphonic 'Pace mihi domine' (from the Officium defunctorum) as if it were his own creation. The effect is enchanting and when, eight tracks later, the same piece is presented sans Garbarek's saxophone, we somehow miss the commentary. If the probable success of this album prompts certain jazz fans and early music specialists to commiserate over their invaded territories, or cynics to align Garbarek and the Hilliards with Górecki and the Monks, then take heart: we're still listening to Respighi's ancient masters, Stravinsky's 'Pergolesi', Tchaikovsky's Mozart and Loussier's Bach, not to mention Ellington's Tchaikovsky. Stylistic cross-pollination makes for a healthy creative environment, and this CD is one of its happiest symptoms. Recordings, documentation and presentation are exemplary.

Spain and the New World

Alba Stabat mater Alonso La tricotea
Anonymous Tierra içielos se quexavan. Di, por que mueres en cruz. Dindirin, dindirin. Si la noche haze escura Encina Triste España sin ventura!. Cucú, cucú, cucú. Hoy comamos y be bamos. Mas vale trocar Escobar Clamabat autem mulier. Pásame por Dios barquero. Salve regina Franco In ilhuicac cihuapille (attrib). Memento mei, Deus. Dios itlazo nantzine (attrib) Guerrero Ave Virgo sanctissima Lienas Salve regina Lobo O quam suavis est, Domine Luchas A la caça, sus, a caça Millán O dulce y triste memoria Mondéjar Ave rex noster Morales Pater noster. Parce mihi, Domine. Magnificat a 6 Padilla Transfige, dulcissime Domine Peñalosa Inter vestibulum et altare. Magnificat quarti toni Rivafrecha Vox dilecti mei Urreda Nunca fué pena ma yor
The Hilliard Ensemble (David James, Ashley Stafford countertens Rogers Covey-Crump, John Potter, Mark Padmore tens Gordon Jones bar)
Virgin Classics Veritas ② 561394-2 Ⓑ
(126 minutes: DDD)
Texts and translations included. Recorded 1990-91

Originally released in late-1991, this two-CD set was The Hilliard Ensemble's contribution to the Columbus commemorations of the following year. It was also their first recording after Paul Hillier's departure from the group. In keeping with the Columbus theme, the collection includes music composed both in the Old World and in the New. The languages used are Latin for the sacred music and Spanish for the secular – but in addition there are two small pieces in Nahuatl, the tongue of the Aztecs.

With well over two hours of music, there is time for The Hilliard to dwell on many composers and genres, most of whom have but a small representation on disc. Spanish polyphony has a marked tendency to asperity in its treatment of dissonance, and generally eschews the more complex forms of polyphony adopted by Franco-Flemish composers: that makes for sobriety in its sacred music, and directness in the secular. This is best heard in the music of Encina and Peñalosa in the early 16th century; the closest Spain comes to a home-grown exponent of the international style is Morales, one of whose splendid Magnificats stands out as a high point.

The Hilliard Ensemble is more at ease with sacred music than with secular pieces. Those in the latter category come across either as forced, or as insufficiently defined. The collection as a whole, however, is a distinctive one, and offers a convincing picture of a country whose polyphonic tradition has often passed for a poor relation of the mainstream continental idiom.

Paul Hillier voc

Chansons de Trouvères
Anonymous Volez vous que je vous chant. Quant voi la flor nouvele Colin Muset En mai, quant li rossignolez Gace Brulé Les oxelés de mon païx. A la douçor de la bele seson Moniot d'Arras Ce fu en mai Thibault de Champagne Aussi conme unicorne sui. Deus est ensi conme li pellicanz. Chançon ferai, que talenz m'en est pris
Paul Hillier voc
Andrew Lawrence-King psaltery/hp/org
Harmonia Mundi Classical Express HCX3957184
(70 minutes: DDD). Texts and translations included Ⓑ
Recorded 1996 ●

The repertoire of trouvère songs is one 'we are only now beginning to explore', writes Margaret Switten. Here we have an enlightened and well-chosen selection, sensitively presented and delightfully sung by Paul Hillier with insight and feeling. The main object of the poets' attention is fin'amor, but other themes, including the return of spring, make their joyful appearance, and there is one piece in a completely different vein, a serious piece of religious polemics: Deus est ensi conme li pellicanz. The melodies, simple and stanzaic, are of great beauty. Outstanding in this respect is Gace Brulé's A la douçor de la bele seson. Many are modal (Dorian) and a few share a well-known opening phrase with a Gregorian melodie-type that Andrew Lawrence-King has made much use of in his accompaniments. His own contribution is momentous: if the manner in which these songs were originally performed still remains a mystery for the singer, it is even more of an enigma for the accompanist. But Andrew Lawrence-King has taken the word trouvère to heart: he is a true 'finder'. His empathy with text, music and singer is total: he 'invents' with a sure touch, and it is not going too far to say it is a touch of genius.

Distant Love
Codax Cantigas de Amigo – Prelude[b]; Ondas do mar de vigo[a]; Mundad'ei comigo[a]; Mia jrmana fremosa treides comigo[a]; Aj deus se sab'ora meu amigo[a]; Quantas sabedes amar amigo[a]; Eno sagrado en vigo[a]; Aj ondas que eu vin veer[a]; Postlude[c] Rudel Dansa[b]. Belhs m'es l'estius el temps floritz[ac]. Lanquan li jorn son lonc en may[a]. No sap chantar qui so non di[ac]. Pro ai del chan essenhadors[ab]. Quan lo rius de la fontana[ac]. Quan lo rossinhols el follos[ab]
[a]Paul Hillier voc
Andrew Lawrence-King [b]hp/[c]psaltery
Harmonia Mundi HMU90 7203 (68 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included. Recorded 1994-98 ●

This is a jewel, both for its music and in its performance. The title, 'Distant Love', is described by Margaret Switten in her note as a 'magic formula' that 'still haunts our imagination'. It was invented by the 12th-century troubadour Jaufre Rudel to evoke his own love, unattained and unattainable, for the fabulous Countess of Tripoli, in whose arms he is said to have died. A century later Martin Codax presents a woman singing of her desire for the absent lover she awaits in the port of Viga. Andrew Lawrence-King uses snatches of melody from both composers to create, with delicate subtlety, a preamble, a final Dansa, and various interludes. Very occasionally he adds a gentle accompaniment. Paul Hillier interprets each composer with intense sympathy and a remarkable command of the two languages – Galician-Portuguese and Old Occitan. He recites in a normal spoken voice the two Rudel poems lacking music, with Andrew Lawrence-King's added harp interludes for the first, and a quietly improvised accompaniment on the psaltery for the second. A great delight is Rudel's wonderful melody, composed for his most famous poem Lanquan li jorn and justly admired and imitated by the German Minnesinger Walther von der Vogelweide.

Micrologus

Cantico della Terra
Nicholay sollemnia[b]. Sonet vox ecclesie[b]. Passione di Diamante[a]. Miserere di Santu Lussurgiu[a]. O divina Virgo flore[b]. Dammi conforto[b]. Passione di Giulianello[a]. Stava la Madre[a]. Iam lucis orto sidere[b]. Kyrie eleison[b]. Gloria[b]. Sanctus[b]. Miserere di Sessa Aurunca[a]. Gloria di Montedoro[a]. Chi vol lo mondo despreçcare[b]. Submersus jacet Pharao[b]. O Lylium convallium[b]. Madonna Santa Maria[b]
[a]Quartetto Vocale Giovanna Marini (Giovanna Marini, Patrizia Bovi, Francesca Breschi, Patrizia Nasini, vocs); [b]Micrologus
Opus 111 OPS30-277 (61 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included. Recorded 1999

This is an odd and intriguing mixture. The Quartetto Vocale Giovanna Marini and Micrologus have taken a special interest in the way existing devotional folk music has a certain amount in common with the earliest written music of Italy – primarily the 'simple polyphony' and the monophonic lauda. By adopting the vocal styles of today's folk musicians – in particular the throaty and reedy singing styles with a large quantity of vocal slides and glottal stops – they have come up with new and invigorating interpretations.

As a theoretical approach, this is very old indeed. For decades there has been a branch of research that seeks material in common between the traditional and the old. But that research has produced little in the way of solid results; and from the present recording you could well conclude that the two have little in common.

Even so, the juxtaposition is musically exciting. The Quartetto Vocale present some astonishing examples of traditional polyphony; tracks 7 and 13, in particular, leave the listener gasping at the boldness of the music and the courage of the singers. Alongside this, Micrologus give slightly more restrained performances of early Italian music, of which the most fascinating is the group of Mass movements (tracks 10-12) from sources written around 1400.

A special note of welcome, too, for the insert-notes, which provide excellent documentation so the listener is never confused about what is old and what is new. Everything is done with such spirit that any listener considering what can be gained from such an interchange will find plenty to think about.

The Newberry Consort

Il Solazzo 🅿

Anonymous 14th Century Italian La Badessa. Bel fiore danza. Nova stella. Cominciamento di gioia. Trotto. Principe di virtu Bartolino da Padova Alba columba Ciconia O rosa bella. Ligiadra donna Jacopo da Bologna Non al suo amante Landini La bionda treccia. Dolcie signorie. Donna, s'i, t'o fallito. El gran disio Zacharo de Teramo Rosetta. Un fior gentil
The Newberry Consort / Mary Springfels
Harmonia Mundi HCX3957038 (62 minutes: DDD) Ⓑ
Texts and translation included. Recorded 1990

If medieval Italian music pales somewhat in comparison to the glories of opera from the 19th century onwards, there are still riches to be discovered in this collection of trecento vocal and instrumental works. The Chicago-based ensemble, The Newberry Consort, use a mere five performers to provide over an hour of entertainment. This was the era of writers such as Dante, Petrarch, Boccaccio, but also of Simone Prodenzani – the author of a cycle of sonnets entitled Il Solazzo, many of which were later set to music. While some of the Solazzo texts are presented here in musical form (the scurrilous La Badessa is one), Italian ballata from leading composers of the time are also represented – Ciconia's O rosa bella and Landini's La bionda treccia, for example. The vocal numbers are all taken by mezzo Judith Malafronte and countertenor Drew Minter who clear the hurdles of tricky pronunciation and flamboyantly complex vocal lines to give a thoroughly communicative performance of this wonderful music. Mary Springfels provides elegant and musical direction as well as that essential ingredient to a disc such as this – the informative booklet. If the prospect of an hour of early Italian song sounds daunting, fear not, for the instrumental dances on the disc (especially the anonymous Cominciamento di gioia) are played with a vitality that will make you want to jump up and join in! Explorers of the riches from Italian times long gone by need have no qualms when sampling from this lively, superbly performed disc.

Villon to Rabelais

Anonymous Amours m'ont fait. L'autrier quant je chevauchoys. La belle se siet. Belles tenés moy. Bon vin. En amours n'a si non bien. En douleur et tristesse. Faisons bonne chère. Héllas! Mon coeur n'est pas à moy. J'aimeray mon amy. My, my. Puis qu'autrement ne puis avoir. Petit fleur. Quant je suis seullecte. Réveillez-vous, Piccars. Rolet ara la tricoton. Suite of Bransles. Danse de Cleves (arr Duffin). La gelosia (arr Duffin). Petit vriens (arr Duffin) Busnois Vostre beauté Févin Faulte d'argent. Il fait bon aimer l'oyselet. Soubz les branches Marot Jouissance vous donneray Stockhem Je suis d'Alemagne. Marchez là dureau
The Newberry Consort (Drew Minter counterten William Hite ten Tom Zajac bar/hp/recs/perc David Douglass vielle) / Mary Springfels vielle/rebec
Harmonia Mundi HMU90 7226 (72 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included. Recorded 1997

Rarely does an Anglo-Saxon early music ensemble declaim French quite so convincingly. This recital from The Newberry Consort takes in the huge variety of expressive registers in secular music from the late 15th and early 16th centuries, including dance music. Part of the attraction is that most of these pieces have previously been neglected on disc because of their anonymous status: this includes works better known among scholars than by the general public, but whose musical worth transcends purely historical considerations. If the disc shows any bias, it is towards pieces of popular inspiration, often through the use of rustic texts, sometimes combined with more artful poems (as in Puis qu'autrement/Marchez là dureau or Vostre beauté/Vous marchez du bout du pie, or the settings of La tricotée). This is the only evident connection between Villon and Rabelais and the pieces recorded here (none of which set texts by either writer). The projection and enunciation of texts has been given careful thought, and is clearly executed so that recourse to the booklet is only necessary in those cases when several texts are declaimed at once. Drew Minter's contribution is worth mentioning in this regard, and the ensemble as a whole sings out even when the effect turns to slapstick (as in the drinking-song Bon vin).

It has become a truism that secular repertories are too often treated as also-rans in the discography of this period; a recital like this one helps to redress that imbalance very stylishly. Fittingly, it is dedicated to the memory of the scholar Howard Mayer Brown, who did so much to further the understanding of instruments and their participation in Renaissance music. It is a worthy tribute.

New London Consort

The Pilgrimage to Santiago 🅿
Including Cantigas de Santa María (coll/comp Alfonso el Sabio), the seven Cantigas de Amigo by Martin Codax; other medieval vocal and instrumental works from the Codices Las Huelgas and Calixtinus
New London Consort / Philip Pickett
L'Oiseau-Lyre ② 433 148-2OH2 Ⓕ
(126 minutes: DDD)
Texts and translations included ◉

In recent years a far higher standard of performance together with more rigorous scholarship has come to be expected from those who choose to perform this kind of repertoire. Philip Pickett has been in the forefront of this impressive rise in confidence (as much about what is not known as is definitely known) as this two-disc set amply demonstrates. What may perhaps be surprising to some is the quality of the music itself. The Cantigas remain some of the most enticing melodies ever written, and the New London Consort do them full justice with an array of instrumentalists and singers who are, however, used with discretion. Similarly the moving Cantigas de Amigo of Martin Codax are beautifully sung with a restraint that pays expressive dividends.

The polyphonic music from the Las Huelgas and Calixtinus manuscripts completes, with a flourish, the survey tied together by the Santiago label. If there is early polyphony that sounds fresher than the four-part Belial vocatur, for example, it has yet to be recorded. In addition to polyphonic works of various genres, Pickett has also chosen to record the four planctus settings from the Las Huelgas Codex: moving in themselves, they are valuable pieces also for their historical associations.

Orlando Consort

Rare 15th Century English Church Music
Anonymous Ave regina caelorum. Gaude virgo mater Christi. O pulcherrima mulierum. O sanctissime presul. Sanctus. Stella caeli. Audivi vocem Benet Gloria. Credo Dunstable Salva scema sanctitatis Forest Tota pulcra es Frye Ave regina celorum Lambe Stella caeli Mowere Beata Dei genitrix Plummer Anna mater matris Christi. Tota pulchra es Pyamour Quam pulchra es Trouluffe Nesciens mater
Orlando Consort (Robert Harre-Jones counterten Angus Smith, Charles Daniels tens Donald Greig bar)
Harmonia Mundi HMU90 7297 (71 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included. Recorded c2002 ◉

The Orlando appear to improve with each recording. They have honed their distinctive, richly plummy sound to near-perfection, and their interpretative intelligence shows no sign of letting up. Be it one of the period's best-known pieces (like Frye's Ave regina celorum) or an otherwise unheard work (like the striking, anonymous Stella caeli that opens the disc), their ability to communicate something of a sense of discovery in each piece is remarkable.

And what glorious music it is! With the help of Gareth Curtis, one of the foremost specialists of this period, the Orlando have assembled a remarkably varied programme. Anthologies of 15th-century English sacred music often focus on one or other of two surviving sources, the Old Hall manuscript from the beginning of the century (represented here by Forest and John Pyamour), and the Eton Choirbook near the end (here, Walter Lambe's intricate Stella caeli). Between these poles there lie fragments, shards of a wonderful history. The great strength of this disc is its account of this contingent repertory. Every piece is involving in some vital way; so often one wonders, 'How come I've not heard that before?' Acknowledged 'masterpieces' like Frye's Ave regina or Dunstable's isorhythmic motet Salve scema rub shoulders with works by near-complete unknowns such as Richard Mowere and John Trouluffe.

But whatever the name (or indeed the absence of one), invention is sustained at a high level. Even connoisseurs of this 'rare' repertory have surprises in store for them here. This is simply one of the finest recordings of this repertoire.

Food, Wine and Song 🅿
Adam de la Halle Prenés l'abre/Hé resveille toi Robin Anonymous Montpellier Codex – Chançonette/Ainc voir/A la cheminee/
Par verité. Apparuerunt apostolis. Si quis amat. Canto de' cardoni. Canto di donne maestre di far cacio. La plus grant chière. Cancionero musical de Palacio – La Tricotea. Quem tem farelos. Trinkt und singt Binchois Je ne vis onques Compère Sile fragor Dufay Adieu ces bons vins de Lannoys Encina Oy comamos y bebamos Greiter Von Eyren Isaac Donna di dentro/Dammene un pocho/Fortuna d'un gran tempo Ponce Ave color vini clari Machaut Nes que on porroit Senfl Von edler Art Smert Nowell, Nowell: The boarës head Zachara da Teramo Cacciando per gustar
The Orlando Consort (Robert Harre-Jones counterten Charles Daniels, Angus Smith tens Donald Grieg bar)
Harmonia Mundi HMU90 7314 Ⓕ
(74 minutes: DDD). Texts and translations included. Recorded 2001 ◉

Many music lovers are also foodies; and this is aimed mainly at them. It is not so much a CD as an elegantly designed, hard-cover 120-page booklet with a CD slipped into the back. There is a large selection of recipes from Clarissa Dickson Wright, Ruth Rogers and Rose Gray, and other luminaries of the food world. Most are based on medieval sources, but adapted so that the ingredients are those available from any supermarket. But the music is wonderfully presented, too. First, it is an anthology from the 12th century to the 16th, all of works that mention (or at least imply) food. Alongside a small number of favourites, there is a large number of extremely rare and wonderful pieces. They add up to a highly attractive and instructive sweep through music of the Middle Ages.

The Orlando Consort are on their very best form. Indeed, it may be their best CD yet, which is high praise indeed. A foolproof Christmas present – for any lover of medieval music with even a slight interest in food, for any lover of unusual food with even a slight interest in medieval music, for anyone who loves good singing, and probably for anyone with an interest in the unusual or the beautiful.

Passion

Compère Crux triumphans Dufay Victimae paschali laudes. Vexilla regis prodeunt
Josquin Desprez Victimae paschali laudes
Isaac Easter Mass Proper Obrecht Salve cru Tinctoris Lamentationes Jeremiex
Orlando Consort (Robert Harre-Jones counterten Charles Daniels, Angus Smith tens Donald Greig, Robert Macdonald basses)
Metronome METCD1015 (62 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included. Recorded 1996

This is an attractive programme of Holy Week and Easter pieces, some by unlikely composers such as Tinctoris, the 15th-century musical theorist. It is centred around Isaac's four-part Easter Mass, with its polytextual structure. Isaac sets all the pieces of the Proper, with the exception of the Offertory, and he interweaves three popular Easter tunes. The end product is a wonderfully joyful and festive Mass, the nearest modern equivalent that comes to mind being Honegger's Christmas cantata with its carol sequence. Isaac's Mass is flanked by Tinctoris's moving Lamentation, two settings of the Victimae paschali laudes, and three fine pieces honouring the Cross.

The Orlando Consort do full justice to this splendid programme. The singing is superb, the individual parts easily identifiable yet marvellously blended. Listeners may be slightly foxed by the pronunciation of the Latin, particularly by the nasal French vowels. Much care has gone into this search for authenticity.

The Saracen and the Dove – Music from the Courts of Padua and Pavia around 1400

Anonymous O Maria, virgo davitica
Anthonello de Caserta Del glorioso titolo
Bartolino da Padova Imperial sedendo. La douce chiere Ciconia Doctorum principem. Per quella strada. O felix templum jubila. O Padua sidus praeclarum. Con lagreme bagnandome. Gloria, 'Spiritus et alme'. Sus une fontayne. Le ray au soleyl. Una panthera Zachara da Teramo Un fior gentil. Sumite, karissimi. Dime, Fortuna. Gloria, 'Ad ogni vento'
Orlando Consort (Robert Harre-Jones counterten Charles Daniels, Angus Smith tens Donald Greig bar)
Archiv Produktion 459 620-2AH (74 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included. Recorded 1998 ◉

This recording is really about Johannes Ciconia, that delicious and innovative composer who is now believed to have spent the late 1390s in the Visconti court at Pavia before moving to the different cultural centre of Padua in the next decade. But it ingeniously puts Ciconia into a wider musical context, most particularly that of Antonio Zachara da Teramo, who has in recent years begun to seem even more distinctive and almost as great. The juxtaposition of works here shows the deft hand of Margaret Bent, who also contributes an informative note.

The Orlando Consort does the music proud. Never before have the two most intricate works in the repertory – Ciconia's Sus une fontayne and Zachara's Sumite, karissimi – sounded so clear, so elegant and so easy. The hard edges in florid pieces such as Per quella strada and Anthonello's Del glorioso titolo positively glitter. And the grand motets, performed here with voices alone for the first time, make a stunningly powerful impression. Given that some recent recordings of Ciconia's music have been resolutely idiosyncratic, the very seriousness of these performances is to be saluted.

Even so, certain pieces fail to jump to the ear quite so readily as in some earlier performances: the sudden changes of mood and texture in Una panthera or O felix templum go past almost unnoticed, the words are rarely allowed to help the musical flow, and forms occasionally get flabby. Moreover there is a tendency to favour an unvarying forte in the motets: they are indeed grand pieces, but such resistance to delicacy seems at variance with the Ars Subtilior that Ciconia favoured in several of his works. But all said it's a major achievement.

Worcester Fragments

English Sacred Music of the Late Middle Ages
Orlando Consort (Robert Harre-Jones counterten Charles Daniels, Angus Smith tens Donald Grieg bar)
Amon Ra CD-SAR59 (58 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included. Recorded 1992

In this recording the Orlando Consort provides the listener with the chance to gain an overall impression of how music developed in England during the 13th and early 14th centuries – a development distinguished by its intriguing variety, creativity and undoubted beauty, its peculiar sweetness being marked by the constant harmonic use of the interval of a third. The Orlando Consort manage to achieve a balance between the type of buzzing vocal timbre, believed to have been that of the Middle Ages with its roughness of approach, and their own good solid modern standards of professional musicianship. The Consort also attempt to reproduce what scholars now believe to have been the way in which ecclesiastical Latin was pronounced in medieval England.

Piffaro

A Flemish Feast – Flemish Renaissance Wind Music
Agricola Crions Noel Agricola/Ghiselin Duo Alamire T'andernaken Anonymous Flemish melodies. De tous biens playne. Wij sheyt edel vrouwe. Die winter is verganghen Brassart Fortis cum quevis actio Clemens non Papa O Crux benedicta. Ave mundi spes Maria Ghiselin Je loe amours Lapicida T'andernaken La Rue Ave regina caelorum. Pourquoy non Obrecht J'ay pris amours. Laet u ghenoughen, liever Johan Pullois Les larmes Susato Passe et medio. Gaillardes. La Morisque. Entre du fol. Mon désir. La dona. Allemaigne. Bransles. Bergerette Tyling T'andernaken al op den Rijn
Piffaro / Joan Kimball, Robert Wiemken
Archiv Produktion 457 609-2AH (65 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1999

Over the last 20 years the growing acceptance of all-vocal performance of medieval and early Renaissance song has narrowed the repertory of latter-day instrumentalists. Whether or not one accepts the premises behind the shift, the result is an undeniable marginalisation of instruments on record. This seriously distorts one's perception of what must have been, for if voices and instruments were kept separate to some extent at least, plainly instruments were everywhere and played a crucial part in society. More recordings like this one are needed to redress the balance. Piffaro is not alone in presenting all-instrumental programmes – the Dufay Consort springs to mind – but one could hardly imagine a more attractive introduction to the medium. Piffaro gives an elegant, spirited recital, varied and fast-paced, which reflects instruments' many functions, from the private entertainment of the rich to those of the populace. Most are either straight transcriptions or arrangements of pre-existing pieces, though some were probably intended specifically for instrumental performances. But the bulk of such performances consisted in improvisations, by their very nature irrecoverable. One selection arranged by Grant Herreid takes a freer approach to the musical text, suggesting which embellishments might have been made to one of the best-known tunes of all, J'ay pris amours. More interpretative licence of this kind is surely the way forward for ensembles like Piffaro. There is a real breadth of musicianship here (the performers each play several instruments) and, in addition to polished performances and intelligent programming, listeners will find informative booklet-notes by the distinguished organologist Keith Polk and black-and-white photographs of the instruments concerned, making clear their division into families.

Pomerium

Carolus Maximus - Music in the life of Charles V
Crecquillon Carolus magnus erat. Quis te victorem Josquin Desprez Mille regretz Gombert Missa a la Incoronation, 'Sur tous regrets' – Kyrie; Gloria. Mille regretz. Qui colis Ausoniam Lassus Heroum soboles. Si qua tibi obtulerint Morales Missa, 'L'homme armé' – Credo. Jubilate Deo omnis terra. Missa, 'Mille regretz' – Sanctus. Missa pro defunctis – Agnus Dei. Circumdederunt me Narváez La canción el Emperador, 'Mille regres'[a]. Fantasia del octavo tono[a]
[a]Dolores Costoyas vihuela Pomerium / Alexander Blachly
Glissando 779008-2 (73 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included. Recorded 1999

This recording by Pomerium marks an auspicious start for a new label – Glissando – created by Peter Czornyj, formerly of DG Archiv. 'Music in the life of Charles V', produced to accompany a major exhibition on the 500th anniversary of his birth, brings together some of the many pieces dedicated to or closely associated with the Emperor. Charles was a great musical enthusiast, gaining his first music lessons at the age of seven, and, almost 50 years later, after his retreat to the Jeronymite monastery at Yuste, priding himself on his musical discernment when presented with a Mass by Guerrero.

His European profile is reflected in the selection of works offered here by French, Flemish and Spanish composers: only the northern composers served in his celebrated Flemish chapel, though the vihuelist Luys de Narváez was master of the choirboys in the chapel of his son Philip. Morales, the leading Spanish composer of his time, never found favour at the royal court even though he dedicated several works to Charles. An interesting programme, then, from favourites such as Josquin's chanson Mille regretz (known as the 'Song of the Emperor' and also presented in Narváez's version for vihuela) to less familiar repertory by Gombert and Crecquillon.

Gombert's Missa 'Sur tous regrets' is characteristically dense, but it nevertheless recreates something of the highly developed ceremonial of Charles's chapel. The motets by Crecquillon – an underrated composer – are very fine. Pomerium's performances, recorded in the resonant acoustic of the Ascension Roman Catholic Church in New York, are measured and generally well balanced, allowing the closely woven polyphonic textures to speak for themselves. Flow is mostly good, although parts of the Credo from Morales's Missa 'L'homme armé' sound rushed, as does Crecquillon's motet Quis te victorem.

While Alexander Blachly's direction is not insensitive to phrasing, more attention could be given to overall shaping and, especially in the motets, the musical rhetoric. For all the vocal energy behind these interpretations, they occasionally come across as bland. That said, the disc affords a fascinating insight into the repertory of Charles's chapel and, to a lesser extent, chamber: well worth adding to any self-respecting CD collection of Renaissance polyphony.

La Reverdie

Legenda Aurea
Anonymous Facciam laude a tuc'ti i sancti. Sia laudato San Francesco. San Domenico beato. Ciascun ke fede sente. Santa Agnese da Dio amata. Novel canto/Sia laudato San Vito. Laudiam 'li gioriosi martiri. Pastor principe beato. Magdalena degna da laudare. Spiritu Sancto dolçe amore. Benedicti e llaudati
La Reverdie
Arcana A304 (70 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included. Recorded 1999 ●

La Reverdie has focused on laude in the past, specifically of the Marian variety. Here they concentrate on the praise of other saints. Some of them are well known such as Sia laudato San Francesco, but others are less so. This ensemble has always mixed voices and instruments in highly imaged and striking ways. In the case of the laude repertory, recent research by the American scholar Blake Wilson into the Laudesi societies that abounded in Italy (perhaps most obviously in Tuscany, from where the two manuscripts represented here originate) confirms a richly documented variety of approaches to performance of this intrinsically popular genre, ranging from voices alone to an array of hired instrumentalists of all sorts. In the longer pieces comprising many stanzas, La Reverdie improvises added counterpoints, both vocal and instrumental, and individual singers step into the limelight, sometimes declaiming the text without the benefit of music.

Regarding the relationship of text to music, La Reverdie advocates a metrical interpretation of the notation's unmeasured neumes. This makes intuitive sense, given the formal markers of a genre destined for a congregation singing in the vernacular. Just as the variety of performance options must have been welcome to congregations of the time, so it is on this CD: there is something to suit every taste. La Reverdie's core quartet of female vocalists have a pleasing quality, and are matched by an equal number of equally striking male singers. The unspecified soloist on the opening track, Facciam laude a tuc'ti i sancti, rings the changes most compellingly.

There is now a considerable number of laude recordings in the discography. This is one of the finest, and also the most satisfying La Reverdie recording.

La Romanesca

Al alva venid – Spanish secular music of the 15th and 16th centuries 🄿
Anonymous Al alva venid. L'amor, dona, ch'io te porto. Rodrigo Martines. A los maitines era. Nina y vina Encina Más vale trocar. Si abrá en este baldrés! Qu'es de ti, desconsolado? Hoy comamos y bevamos Mudarra Tres libros de musica – Si me llaman a mi; Ysabel, perdiste la tu faxa; Guárdame las vacas Narváez Paseavase el rey moro. Lós Seys libros del delphin – Diferencias de Guardame las vacas D Ortiz Trattado de glosas – Recercarda segunda sobre el passamezzo moderno; Recercada tercera para viola de gamba sola; Recercada quarta sobre la folia; Recercada quinta sobre el passamezzo antiguo; Recercada settima sobre la Romanesca Pisador Libro de música – En la fuente del rosel; La manana de Sant Juan Vásquez Orphenica lyra – De los álamos vengo; Con qué la lavaré; Glosa sobre Tan que vivray; De Antequera sale el moro
La Romanesca (Marta Almajano sop Paolo Pandolfo va da gamba Juan Carlos de Mulder vihuela/gtr Pedro Estevan perc) / José Miguel Moreno vihuela
Glossa GCD920203 (60 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included. Recorded 1995 ●●

Many of these pieces – songs and vihuela music from 16th-century Spain – have been recorded at least once, if not dozens of times before, but this CD takes pride of place in this repertory. La Romanesca performs with true fantasía but without any of the mannerisms – the excesses and the understatements – of many of its predecessors and rivals: it seem to hit it just right. It has mostly selected songs with a strong popular flavour – precisely those songs that have attracted most attention because they are simply so attractive – but their realisations are restrained in terms of instrumental accompaniment (plucked strings, viol and a smattering of percussion), but full of musical vitality – in other words, the emphasis is, justly, on the music and not the 'orchestrated' arrangement of it. The players, led by José Miguel Moreno, are brilliant, and the singer, Marta Almajano shines in this repertory. She brings out perfectly the lyricism inherent in the popular-inspired court song tradition – take, for example, Vásquez's lovely De los álamos vengo: these songs demand an elusive blend of sophistication and simplicity.

Take this disc with you wherever you go, and especially to that desert island.

Sequentia

Edda – Myths from medieval Iceland
Baldur's Dreams. The End of the Gods. Havamal – Odin's Rune-verses. In Memory of Baldur. The Song of Fire and Ice. The Song of the Mill. The Tale of Thrym. Völuspa I-III, 'The Prophecy of the Sybil'
Sequentia (Barbara Thornton, Lena Susanne Norin vocs Elizabeth Gaver vn Benjamin Bagby voc/lyre)
Deutsche Harmonia Mundi 05472 77381-2 Ⓕ
(77 minutes: DDD). Recorded 1996 ●

Sequentia has amazed and delighted even native Icelanders with the curiosity, imagination and dedication with which it has been bringing to life some of the island's earliest music. The Cologne-based Sequentia, specialists in the northern European oral song tradition, have worked painstakingly on Iceland's great store of rímur – the medieval sung poetry, possibly related to the early chanson de geste, and whose strains can still be detected in children's playground songs in Reykjavík today. Sequentia has applied its research into the performance of rímur to re-creating sung texts from the Elder or Poetic Edda. Of course we have no way of knowing how this music really did sound; but listening to Benjamin Bagby and his colleagues, you will find yourself compelled by the vigour, eloquence and integrity of their own re-created authenticity. Isolation has at least ensured that living Icelandic offers pretty good indications for the pronunciation of Old Norse – and Bagby has listened with a keen ear. The late Barbara Thornton's copper-bright soprano is heard alone and with her colleagues in three 'panels' from the apocalyptic Prophecy of the Sybil, 'Völuspá'. They form the real set-pieces of this recital. In between, spirited fiddle pieces are played by Elizabeth Gaver; Bagby gives a virtuoso performance of The Tale of Thrym; and the voices entwine in the haunting In Memory of Baldur. It's a wonderful disc.

The Scholars of London

French Chansons
Arcadelt En ce mois délicieux; Margot, labourez les vignes; De temps que j'estois amoureux; Sa grand beauté Bertrand De nuit, le bien
Clemens Non Papa Prière devant le repas; Action des Graces Costeley Arrête un peu mon coeur
Gombert Aime qui vouldra; Quand je suis aupres
Janequin Le chant des oiseaux. Or vien ça, vien, m'amye Josquin Desprez Faulte d'argent. Mille regretz Lassus Beau le cristal. Bon jour mon coeur. Un jeune moine. La nuict froide et sombre. Si je suis brun Le Jeune Ce n'est que fiel. Passereau Il est bel et bon Sandrin Je ne le croy Sermisy Tant que vivray en eage florissant. Venez, regrets. La, la Maistre Pierre Tabourot Belle qui tiens ma vie
Vassal Vray Dieu
The Scholars of London
Naxos 8 550880 (60 minutes: DDD) Ⓢ
Texts and translations included. Recorded 1993

Listening to this carefully crafted selection, one is struck by the flexibility of a style that accommodates so many distinctive temperaments – the verve of Janequin, the suavity of Sermisy, the gravity of Gombert. It is a democratic genre in the truest sense, appealing to the great (Josquin and Lassus) while permitting lesser figures to shine as well. The term 'democratic' also describes the chanson's appeal, then as now: here are some of the most beguiling tunes of any period. To call these performances unobtrusive is to do them no injustice. The Scholars of London capture the wistful elegance of the courtlier pieces – for example, Le Jeune's Ce n'est que fiel. In some of the more scurrilous songs there is a Gallic rambunctiousness but at times the tempos are a shade too brisk for comfort, and the choice of pitch-standard in Janequin's famous Chant des oiseaux (sung here in its through-composed version) sets a strain on the singers' accustomed agility. But such details merely affect the odd piece. This is a disc that gives great pleasure: like ephemera trapped in amber, the music in this collection bears modest yet touching testimony to a period that produced much 'great' music. Its smaller creations are no less admirable.

Sinfonye

The Courts of Love 🅿
– Music from the time of Eleanor of Aquitaine
Anonymous 12th Century L'on qui dit q'amors est dolce chose Bernart de Ventadorn Ara'm conseillatz seignor. Conartz, ara sai au be. Quan vei la lauzeta mover Cadenet S'anc fuy belha ni prezada (vocal and instrumental versions) Gace Brulé Quant je voi la noif remise. Quant voi le tens bel et cler. Quant flours et glais et verdues s'esloigne. Quant li tens reverdoie Giraut de Bornelh S'ie'us queir conseil, bel' amig' Alamanda Gui d'Ussel Si be'm partetz, mala domna, de vos Raimbaut de Vaqeiras Calenda maya (vocal and instrumental versions)
Sinfonye (Mara Kiek voc Andrew Lawrence-King medieval hp Jim Denley perc) / Stevie Wishart
Hyperion CDA66367 (64 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included ●

This recital consists of songs and instrumental pieces dating from the end of the 12th century and derived from the 'courts of love' of Aquitaine, Champagne, Flanders and elsewhere. These courts, created around aristocratic figures such as Marie of Champagne and Eleanor of Aquitaine, were essentially a charade of the medieval law courts, to which lovers could bring their complaints. Thus the texts of the songs are concerned with the dilemmas of infidelity, betrayal and unrequited love. All that survives of this music is melodies for singing: these have been sensitively arranged by Stevie Wishart for a small selection of medieval instruments, including the symphony, a sort of hurdy-gurdy, medieval fiddles, lutes and percussion.

All the players of Sinfonye are both expert and relaxed, projecting the music with great character. Six of the pieces are sung by Mara Kiek with considerable feeling: her unusual voice production and tone help to give a sense of 'distance' to the performances, and strike a suitably plaintive note.

Hyperion's recording catches all the vocal and instrumental inflexions with great fidelity and a natural balance. All in all, a fascinating glimpse of music and manners from a remote if influential corner of medieval civilisation.

Red Iris – Instrumental music from 14th-century Italy P
Istampite – Trotto; Tre Fontane; Principio di virtu; La manfredina and la rotta; Chominciamento di gioa; Palamento; Two Salterellos; Belicha
Sinfonye (Jim Denley, Pedro Estevan perc) / Stevie Wishart medieval fiddle/hurdy-gurdy/dir
Glossa GCD920701 (53 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Interactive CD. Recorded 1996 ●

Many people have recorded the 14th-century instrumental dances that appear only in a single manuscript now in London. Apart from some pieces apparently for keyboard, they are almost the only known early works for a solo melody instrument. The nine pieces (out of a total of 15) presented here offer no repertorial novelty. What is new is the way Stevie Wishart plays them. She views the shorter pieces as dances, to be performed with percussion accompaniment.

This is common enough, though they are done extremely well, with Jim Denley and Pedro Estevan producing a stunning range of sounds from their various percussion instruments. But the longer ones are treated as elaborate and weaving instrumental solos, without any accompaniment. Stevie Wishart plays them on the vielle and, in one case, on the hurdy-gurdy, never rushing, never tempted to gloss over the many unexpected details in the lines. This kind of approach seems extremely productive: it stresses the sheer quality and inventiveness of the melodies, and it perhaps aligns them with their true historical context, the repertory of long monophonic lais from the 14th century.

That in its turn somehow makes the pieces far more than virtuoso showpieces. But it says much for the power of Stevie Wishart's playing that she keeps the music constantly interesting (one of the pieces lasts over 10 minutes) and is invariably persuasive. The disc comes with a CD-ROM track that portrays, among other things, frescoes of the time, the instruments and the manuscript. But even without that this is a superbly convincing performance, recorded with a nice full sound and giving relatively familiar music an added intellectual depth.

Trio Medieval

Soir, dit elle
Anonymous Alma mater / Ante thorum. Ave donna santissima. Benedicta es. De spineto nata rosa. Gloria in excelsis. Lauda Novella. Mater Christi nobilis. Messe de Tournai. O ceteris preambulis. Oi me lasso. Stella maris. Salve mater misericordie. Salve virgo virginum. Venite a laudare I Moody Words of the Angel
Trio Mediaeval (Anna Maria Friman, Linn Andrea Fuglseth, Torunn Østrem Ossum sngrs)
ECM New Series 461 782-2 (66 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 2001 ●

Trio Mediaeval's voices are clear, firm and highly attractive. The three women can sing so alike that in the rondellus passages of Salve mater misericordie it is almost impossible to tell which voice is on top, so magically do they match colour and the slightest details of articulation. But they can also sound quite different from one another in the Messe de Tournai, where the three voices have clearly different structural functions. Their intonation is also astonishingly pure. Refreshingly candid, they are quite explicit that the music on this disc was almost certainly intended for men's voices. 'The Trio's answer is to sing the music as though it is music of the present', writes John Potter in his liner-notes. This they certainly do, with notable skill and with an uncanny way of characterising each piece. Ivan Moody's Words of the Angel, written specially for Trio Mediaeval and making superb use of their voices, adds a nice touch of something slightly different before the end.

A mesmeric disc.

HIGH RENAISSANCE-BAROQUE

Al Ayre Español

Spanish Baroque, Volume 1 🅿
Anonymous Canción a dos tiples. Two Pasacalles
C Galán Al espejo que retrata. Humano ardor
F de Iribarren Quién nos dira de una flor. Viendo que Jil, hizo raya Literes Ah del rustico pastor
J de Torres Más no puedo ser. Al clamor
F Valls En un noble, sagrado firmamento
Al Ayre Español / Eduardo López Banzo
Deutsche Harmonia Mundi 05472 77325-2 Ⓕ
(70 minutes: DDD). Texts and translations included.
Recorded 1994 ●

López Banzo could well be set to achieve for the Spanish Baroque what William Christie and Les Arts Florissants have done for French music of the 17th and 18th centuries. There are many parallels between English and Spanish musical cultures in the Baroque: French and Italian stylistic and structural elements are incorporated into a musical language that is nevertheless as clearly Spanish as the Purcell idiom is English.

The melodiousness characteristic of the Spanish repertory and its rhythmic patterns are immediately apparent. The villancicos and cantadas by Torres, Literes, Iribarren and Valls are all sectional works that alternate recitative and arias in the manner of the Italian cantata, but they also introduce minuets, elegant slow movements, lively refrains and even Spanish dances of popular origin such as the jácara. Indeed, the disc ends with one of those foot-tapping pieces (performed in cathedrals and chapels on such joyous feasts as Christmas) by Iribarren who was chapelmaster at Malaga Cathedral.

The performances are very fine. The instrumentalists seem to be completely at home with the style and point up the idiomatic syncopations with just the right degree of emphasis. Under the secure direction of López Banzo, they generally serve the music extremely well. The singers are Spanish, which is probably essential, at least at this stage in our knowledge of the repertory. They, too, are excellent. The soprano Marta Almajano's voice is agile and well focused with a hint of that dark, enriching quality – like velvet-clad steel – that seems to characterise the Spanish voice (think of Victoria de los Angeles or even Plácido Domingo). She is, as the music demands, expressive or virtuoso, lyrical or brilliant, and always has a superb sense of line.

Anonymous Canción a dos tiples. Dos pasacalles Durón Veneno es de amor la envidia – Ondas riscos, pezes, mares. El impossible mayor en amor le venze Amor – Donde vas; Danae, cuya belleza; Oye, escucha, aguarda, espera Galán Al espejo que retrata. Humano ardor Iribarrén Quién nos dira de una flor. Viendo que Jil, hizo raya.Literes Ah del rústico pastor. Azis y Galatea – Seguidillas; Confiado gilguerillo; Monstruo, en quien ha sobrado; Pues del culto mi piedad; Coplas. Los elementos – Deydades que en el monte; Ay amor; Mas si fuese la planta fugitiva. El estrago en la fineza, o Jupiter y Semele – Pues soy abejuela; Yo he de enmudecer; Ven dulcissimo bien. Martín y Coll (arr anon) Flores de música – Ruede la Vola; Canción franzesa; Diferencias sobre la gayta San Juan Una noche que los reyes Torres Más no puedo ser. Al clamor. Arpón que glorioso. Valls En un noble, sagrado firmamento
Marta Almajano sop Al Ayre Español / Eduardo López Banzo hpd/org
RCA Red Seal ② 74321 84586-2 (142 minutes: DDD).
Recorded 1994-99 Ⓜ

You don't have to be a Spanish specialist to take pleasure in these wonderful recordings. Credit for this goes primarily to the performances, directed with unstinting commitment and energy by Eduardo López Banzo. The irresistible rhythmic vitality which he brings to this music is the first thing you notice, but he also finds a more reflective quality when it is needed, and the music-making is never less than highly polished. All these qualities come together, too, in the set's star performer, soprano Marta Almajano, a singer once described to me as 'the Spanish Emma Kirkby' – which is not to say that she sounds similar (on the contrary, she has a distinctive Spanish darkness to her voice) but that she is an artist of great interpretative intelligence and technique, and most early-music groups in Spain want her to sing with them. Why she has not become better known internationally is a mystery.

As for the music, composers such as Durón, Literes and Torres may not be household names either, but their music gives enormous enjoyment. Immediate favourites from this well-made selection of predominantly vocal music for chamber and stage include Durón's haunting Ondas riscos, pezes, mares, Torres' wistful Al clamor, and Iribarrén's foot-inspiring Viendo que Jil, hizo raya. Only the careless omission of the original issues' excellent documentation spoils the enjoyment of seeing these infectious recordings reappear at mid-price.

Bell' Arte Antiqua

The Italian Connection 🅿
Corelli Trio Sonata in A minor, Op 3 No 12[ab]
Geminiani Sonatas for 2 Violins and Continuo[ab] – in D 'Bush aboon Traquair'; in F 'The last time I came o'er the moor'. Sonata for Violin and Continuo in D minor, Op 1 No 2[ab] Lonati Sonata for Violin and Continuo in G minor[a] Matteis Divisions on a Ground in D minor[a] Veracini Sonata in A, Op 2 No 9[a] Vivaldi Trio Sonata for 2 Violins and Continuo in D minor, RV64[ab]
Bell' Arte Antiqua ([a]Lucy van Dael, [b]Jacqueline Ross vns William Hunt va da gamba Terence Charlston hpd)

ASV Gaudeamus CDGAU199 (60 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1998 ●

If the Bell' Arte Antiqua isn't yet a household name with Baroque music lovers, it soon could be. Lucy van Dael and William Hunt, already members of more than one high-profile early music ensemble, join forces here with Jacqueline Ross and Terence Charlston to breathe fresh life into the Italian duo and trio sonata repertory.

Corelli is represented by a Roman sonata da chiesa of great vitality and breadth that demonstrates the high level of technical and musical rapport already established between van Dael and Ross. Van Dael performs a sonata by Corelli's lesser-known Neapolitan contemporary, Lonati, with equal amounts of verve and sensitivity, bringing to it a superb command of period ornamentation. She infuses Matteis's virtuoso variations on La Folia with the immediacy of an unfolding drama that will encourage listeners to make comparisons with Corelli's set. Elements of the personal styles of Corelli and Lonati come together in the trio sonatas of their student, Geminiani, in the idiomatic ornamentation of the Andante of the D major Sonata, the seemingly demure opening Grave of the D minor Sonata (deftly characterised by van Dael and Ross with musical gestures akin to raised eyebrows and fluttering eyelashes) and the compelling dialogue between the violins and the bass viol in the Grave of the F major Sonata.

The D minor Trio Sonata of Vivaldi is nicely understated. The members of Bell' Arte Antiqua draw attention to the thematic links between the rhythmically contrasting Preludio and Corrente; then, in the succeeding Grave, stretch and sustain their individual lines while inviting listeners to luxuriate in the glorious suspensions that result.

Veracini's Sonata completes the picture. Like with his fellow expatriate, Geminiani, he used British folksongs as inspiration for instrumental pieces: Veracini's Aria scozzese con variazione would impress even the best Scottish folk fiddler and it may come as a happy surprise that the opening Andante of Geminiani's F major Sonata was inspired by The last time I came o'er the moor.

These are stylish performances. There are no gimmicks, just good music, beautifully played.

Robin Blaze counterten

English Lute Songs

Anonymous The Last of the Queenes Maskes Banister The Tempest[a] – Come unto these yellow sands; Where the bee sucks; Dry those eyes; Full fathom five. Give me my lute[a] Blow Lovely Selina, innocent and free[a] Campion Faire if you expect admiring[a] Danyel Can doleful notes[a] Dowland In darknesse let mee dwell[a]. The Third and Last Book of Songs or Aires[a] – Time stands still; Behold a wonder heere R Johnson II The Tempest[a] – Full fathom five; Where the bee sucks; Fantasia W Lawes Why soe pall and wan, fond lover[a]. He that will not love[a]. To the Sycamore[a]. Gather ye rosebuds while you may[a] Locke Psyche – The delights of the bottle[a] Purcell The Second Part of Musick's Handmaid – Rigadoon in C, Z653; Song Tune in C, Z T694; A New Irish Tune in G, Z646; Sefauchi's Farewell in D minor, Z656. St Cecilia's Day Ode, Z328 – Tis Nature's voice[a]. Welcome Song, Z324 – Be welcome then, great Sir[a]. The History of Dioclesian – Still I'm wishing[a]. Birthday Ode, Z332 – By beauteous softness[a] Reggio Arise, ye subterranean winds[a]

[a]Robin Blaze counterten Elizabeth Kenny lte
Hyperion CDA67126 (71 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts included. Recorded 1999 ●●

Seventy minutes of countertenor may not be everyone's idea of fun, but Robin Blaze has the special ingredients to transcend any latent prejudice, especially in a recital as wide-ranging and intelligently programmed as this. Opening with Johnson's Tempest Songs, Blaze and his fine accompanist, Elizabeth Kenny, mellifluously shift from the melancholic Dowland to the less ubiquitous theatre songs of William Lawes, as they move inexorably to the great Orpheus, Henry Purcell – via several by-waters of English 17th-century song. Blaze has always had a natural and unforced instrument, but its hovering sweetness, which he employs to pretty effect throughout, can now ripen on cue, as in In darknesse let mee dwell. This is perhaps the most elusive quality in a countertenor and Blaze has the means to colour his texts, not just with superior diction, but timbral variation to keep the listener hearing each song afresh. In a recital of two halves – 15 so-called lute songs and 15 Restoration pieces – there are too many highlights to list. One is Danyel's Can doleful notes, a superb Jacobean example of pleasuring in a particular conceit (in this case, whether art can truly express grief). Blaze moves from embedded cynicism to tender faith in music's power. There is an impressive and buoyant security in the Banister songs and around some exquisite solo lute numbers Blaze appears as ever the natural heir to James Bowman in Be welcome then, great Sir. It is wonderfully gauged, as is John Blow's delectable Lovely Selina, even if some may find him occasionally sitting a little high on the note. Another fine achievement from two of Britain's brightest and best.

Cambridge Taverner Choir

Music from Renaissance Portugal

Anonymous Si pie Domine Carreira Stabat mater P de Cristo Magnificat. Ave Maria. Sanctissimi quinque mar tires. De profundis. Lachrimans sitivit anima mea. Ave Regina caelorum A Fernandez Libera me Domine. Alma redemptoris mater D Lôbo Missa pro defunctis

Cambridge Taverner Choir / Owen Rees
Herald HAVPCD155 (69 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included
Recorded 1992 ●●

This is one of those rare examples of scholarship and musicianship combining to result in performances that are both impressive and immediately attractive to the listener in excellent music. There is a wonderful glow about this recording that reflects the skilful engineering on the part of Herald as well as the imagination of the sonority on Rees's part. The striking feature of his approach is the emphasis on the meaning of the words. This choir sings of the Day of Judgement or the rejoicing due to the Virgin as if it really means it: Rees is not afraid to shape phrases, to use dynamics, to vary the intensity of the sound in the service of the words which, though even more familiar to the monks and chapel singers who originally performed these pieces at the monastery of Santa Cruz in Colmbra, would have had an immediacy and a reality for them that it is hard to recapture today. How graphic those texts, in fact, are, and how well this choir brings them to life.

Cappella de'Turchini

Vespers at the Oratorio dei Girolamini
Anonymous Plainchant Antiphons and Responses
Caresana Vanitas vanitatum. Iste confessor
Giamberti Similabo eum viro sapienti
Provenzale Dixit Dominus. Confitebor. Beatus vir. Exulta, jubila. Laudate pueri. Magnus secundum nomen suum. Magnificat. Lauda Jerusalem
F Rossi Sinfonia a 5 Tricarico Accipite jucunditatem
Emanuela Galli, Roberta Andalò, Roberta Invernizzi sops Daniela del Monaco contr
Giuseppe de Vittorio, Rosario Totaro tens
Giuseppe Naviglio bar Coro Mysterium Vocis; Cappella de'Turchini / Antonio Florio
Opus 111 OPS30 210 (75 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included. Recorded 1998

Those who have collected any of the other volumes (this one is the fifth) of this enterprising series of Neapolitan Baroque music will relish the unabashed and inimitable vocabulary of these forgotten composers; declamatory vocal concerto, operatic theatricality, as well as earthy allusions to vernacular dance and other distilled and aurally transmitted traditions – cocking a snook at the forbidding gaze of Vesuvius – leaven them-selves with purely sacred traditions with delectable ease. Antonio Florio's exotic-sounding group, Cappella de'Turchini (Turchini means turquoise, which was the colour of the tunics of one of Naples's leading conservatories at the time) are just the fillip for those who need constantly reminding that the musical world revolved more around 17th-century Naples than it did the majority of centres that patronised the great composers. Neapolitans may not have enjoyed being lorded over by the Spanish but musically it often makes for a fascinating musical cocktail, and judging by Francesco Provenzale's Vespers, such a historical juxtaposition of styles contributes directly to the resourceful realisation of strong texts and responsive musical imagery.

This is a speculative reconstruction of a Vespers service for the Order of Girolamo, *c*1670, and much of the music displays impressive and inventive craftsmanship. With the majority of the music by Provenzale, Naples's most celebrated composer of the period, there is still an equally invigorating and spontaneous colouring of text. In the case of the Beatus vir, a solo soprano conveys this distinctly fulsome text with chromatic melodic inflexions as if they were still wet on the page. Such movements give us the most penetrating view of the composer's expressive powers, as Provenzale is forced to plan for over a quarter-of-an-hour, a long time in the stop-start, fashion-conscious mid-Baroque. Here, and in the refined Dixit Dominus and Confitebor, the Cappella de'Turchini is more concerned with conveying originality and characterisation than the finer points of ensemble and intonation. If that sounds a little backhanded, there are enough reasons to feel that declaiming text, by the glorious exploitation of open-throated Latin larynxes, is justifiably the ultimate priority. Even if some of the voices don't bear the closest scrutiny, this is musicianship that communicates where it matters.

Capriccio Stravagante

Anonymous Amarilli mijn schone. Ay, luna que reluzes. En Belén están mis amores. Gagliarda gamba e le forze d'Hercole. Pass'e mezo antico primo e secondo. Pastorçico, non te aduermas Arcadelt Il primo libro de Madrigali – O felici occhi miei Azzaiolo Il primo libro de villotte – Tanto sai fare Caccini Le nuove musiche – Amarilli mia bella Encina Ay triste, que vengo Frescobaldi Arie musicali per cantarsi, primo libro – Così me disprezzate; Dunque dovrò; Se l'aura spira Lambardi Aria di Cupido Malvezzi Sinfonia Marini Sonate, symphonie...e retornelli – Sonata terza, Variata Ortiz Recercadas – II; IV Philips Amarilli di Giulio Romano Sanz Instrucción de música sobre la guitarra española, Book 1 – Canarios Scandello Vorria che tu cantass' Vecchi Gitene, Ninfe P
Guillemette Laurens mez
Capriccio Stravagante / Skip Sempé hpd
Astrée Naïve E8870 (64 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded in 1996. Notes, texts and translations included ●

The real aim of this disc is to conjure the flavour of the Mediterranean region with music – more specifically the music of 16th- and 17th-century Italy and Spain. It contains a thoroughly attractive mixture of short vocal and instrumental pieces, ranging from Italian arias and Spanish villancicos to a violin sonata by Marini to pieces for viol consort and solos for harpsichord, harp and lute. The voice is the common link, however, for almost all the instrumental pieces have vocal origins: a recorder will play the voice part in a villancico, for instance, or a viol consort will play an arrangement of Caccini's Amarilli mia bella which leads to Peter Philips's florid keyboard elaboration of the same piece. It is the kind of clever sequencing that Skip Sempé is especially good at, and it results here in a programme which maintains its interest from beginning to end. The performances themselves are no less imaginative. Keen and alert, they strike a well-judged balance between tonal beauty and expressive vigour, so that while contrasts in tempo and dynamic can be strong they are never overdone. All you have to do is put this disc on and enjoy it.

The Consort of Musicke

Earth, Water, Air and Fire – A new look at John Dowland and friends P

Dowland The First Book of Songs or Ayres – Sleepe wayward thoughts; Would my conceit; Come againe, sweet loue doth now enuite. The Second Booke of Songs or Ayres – Sorrow sorrow stay; Wofull heart with griefe opressed; Toss not my soule. A Pilgrimes Solace – Goe nightly cares the enemy to rest; From silent night; Thou mighty God. In darknesse let mee dwell. Shall I strive Locke Psyche – Break, distracted heart Morley Canzonets, or Little Short Songs to Three Voyces – Deep lamenting, grief betraying. The First Booke of Canzonets to Two Voyces – Leave now, mine eyes lamenting Sermisy Las, je m'y plains Tomkins O let me live for true love Weelkes Madrigals to Three, Four, Five and Six Voyces – Cease sorrowes now

The Consort of Musicke (Evelyn Tubb sop Lucy Ballard contr Andrew King ten Simon Grant bass) / Anthony Rooley lte

ASV Gaudeamus CDGAU187 (71 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ

Texts included. Recorded 1998

This is a fascinating recording, not least because one may very well be inclined to take against it from the start. Its eye-catching title is not helpful: either too superficially or too profoundly relevant, and if the latter then requiring a more convincing justification than is given in Anthony Rooley's short introductory note. And then the first sounds of the first track: Dowland's Come againe has its first phrase sung in a low octave in a two-part arrangement till the other voices enter. They slow down and speed up, ending with a further accelerando ('by sighs and tears more hot than are thy shafts') and a defiant isolation of the last word ('while she for triumph – laughs!'). There is always something irritating about performances which draw attention to themselves as performances, and a lot of that may be found in this recital. The isolated 'laughs' makes its point (the monstrosity of it, the comic indignity, that after all this palaver – 'I sit, I weep, I faint, I die' – what does she do? 'Laughs'!). Then into more serious matters, as in Would my conceit; and this carefully studied text, so deliberately punctuated and insistently inflected, does yield rewards, while in Tomkins's O let me live the play of languishingly poignant harmonies against the light movement of the 'fa la's goes well beyond what one might have thought of as merely the conventions of madrigal. In Shall I strive, there is a thoughtful working-through of a dilemma. In the final item, Thou mighty God, a first reaction, noting the difference in timing (7'44" to this group's previous recording's 3'50"), may be to think 'Well, they've surely overdone it this time'. But just you listen.

Alfred Deller counterten

Songs and Airs H

Anonymous, Bedyngham, Campion, Ciconia, Dowland, R Joynson, Morley, Purcell, Rosseter and J Wilson

Alfred Deller counterten with various artists

EMI Références mono 565501-2 Ⓜ

(77 minutes: ADD). Recorded 1949-54 ●

All but two of the pieces here are by English composers of the late 16th- and 17th-centuries; the odd ones out are Johannes Ciconia's O rosa bella and John Bedyngham's setting of the same text, which belong to the 14th and 15th centuries, respectively. Curiously, some of these recordings reveal Deller on rather less than top form. Dowland's Slow my tears, for instance, is marred by a persistent huskiness while certain others display a marked expressive restraint. But, almost needless to say, there is also plenty of vintage Deller here, in which category Morley's Shakespeare settings, It was a lover and a lass and O Mistress mine, certainly belong. Comparably affecting are Robert Johnson's Full fathom five and the celebrated anonymous setting of Desdemona's Sing, willow, willow, willow. Most touching of all, though, is the anonymous Caleno custure me! from Henry V, which Deller sings with exquisite sensibility. That and the popular Greensleeves would be quite sufficient on their own to make you go at once in search of this disc. Sadly, the Purcell songs seem rather dated, not so much for Deller's singing of them as for the archaic sound of the harpsichord, the tuning, and the playing of them, sometimes technically insecure and often with quaintly realised continuo lines.

Notwithstanding these reservations, the anthology is a precious one, with moments of real magic. The transfers have been remastered skilfully too.

I Fagiolini

All the King's Horses

Anonymous Basses danses: Par fin despit; La volunté. Bransle gay: Mari je songerois. Der Hundt. Saltarello el francosin Arcadelt O felic'occhi miei Cara Mentre io vo per questi boschi Certon La, la, la, je ne l'ose dire Finck In Gottes Namen faren wir Isaac J'ay pris amours Janequin Frère Thibault. Le chant des oyseaulx Othmayr Der Winter kalt. Ich weiss mir ein Maidlein Patavino Dillà da l'aqua Rore Or che'l ciel e la terra Ruffo La gamba.

El travagliato Sandrin Puisque vivre en servitude. La volunté Senfl Ach Elslein. Sich hat ein' neue Sach' aufdraht. Ich weiss nit. Wiewohl viel Herter Orden sind Sermisy Au pres de vous
I Fagiolini; Concordia / Mark Levy viol
Metronome METCD1013 (67 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included

We travel here to France, Germany and Italy, and the results are most appealing: these spirited performances articulate both text and music in a clear and attractive manner. In the French repertory I Fagiolini successfully takes up the challenge of emulating the Ensemble Clément Janequin's masterful approach to text-projection, and its softer sound and slightly more relaxed approach (try Frère Thibault) will please those who find the French ensemble too rough. Even in such a well-known piece as Le chant des oyseaulx it finds new, delightful inflexions. The German selections are rather less well known (or at any rate less often recorded) than the French, but just as convincingly dispatched: the pieces by Senfl, Othmayr and Isaac are well worth discovering. Isaac's arrangement of J'ay pris amours (performed here by Concordia) reminds us just how much of a virtuoso contrapuntalist he was. The disc aims to represent the sheer diversity of early 16th-century secular music: diversity of mood and content, and of possible relations between voices and instruments. This anthological ambition is the set's most conspicuous success, and carries the disc forward even when individual items or details appear to miss the mark (the concluding madrigal by Rore is too slow, and more generally the Italian selection is the least satisfying of the three). The sound-recording, immediate and close, is well up to Metronome's usual standard, and the booklet is well laid-out and presented.

Florilegium

In the Name of Bach
G C Bach Siehe, wie fein und lieblich (Geburtstagkantate)[a] J E Bach Violin Sonata in F minor. Sammlung auserlesener Fabeln I – Die ungleichen Freunde[b]; Die Unzufriedenheit[b]; Der Affe und die Schäferin[b]; Der Hund[b]
W F Bach Adagio and Fugue in D minor, F65. Duetto for Two Flutes in E minor, F54
J C Bach Sonata for Keyboard, Violin and Cello in G, T313/1 (Op 2 No 2) J B Bach Overture in D – Passepieds Nos 1 and 2; La Joye
[b]Catherine Bott sop [a]Julian Podger, [a]Robert Evans tens [a]Michael McCarthy bass Florilegium
Channel Classics CCS9096 (75 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Notes and texts included. Recorded 1995

Here is a Bach family anthology featuring three members of the clan whose music seldom finds its way into record catalogues. The earliest representative is Georg Christoph, one of Sebastian Bach's uncles. He was, for a time, town Kantor at Schweinfurt in Franconia where in 1684 he received a visit on his birthday from his two brothers. Georg Christoph was so delighted that, shortly afterwards, he wrote a cantata to record the event, Siehe, wie fein und lieblich ('Behold, how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity'). Tenors Julian Podger and Robert Evans, with bass Michael McCarthy, provide a well-focused and evenly balanced ensemble seemingly to savour the spirit in which the piece was written. Next in the family chronology comes Johann Bernhard Bach, a cousin of J.S.B. Not a great deal of his music survives, but among that which does are four orchestral suites which may well have resulted from his exposure to those of Telemann who was already a fluent master of the form. It is a pity that Florilegium saw fit to include only three short dances from the Fourth Suite in D major. The music is well worth performing without omission. The highly gifted but emotionally complex Wilhelm Friedemann is represented by the long-admired, poignant and oft-recorded Adagio and Fugue in D minor for two flutes and strings, and by one of his several Duettos for two flutes, this one in E minor. Florilegium, corporately and individually, plays the music with heartfelt expression and a sensibility that mirrors the stylistic idiom.

It is the music of J S Bach's nephew and pupil, Johann Ernst, which occupies the greater part of the programme. This member of the family seems wholeheartedly to have embraced the early classical idiom, further demonstrating, both in the Violin Sonata in F minor and in the four songs selected from his Sammlung auserlesener Fabeln, that he was a composer with a distinctive and affecting musical vocabulary at his disposal. Catherine Bott gives warmly expressive performances, savouring the considerable lyrical content of a little-known area of Bach family industry. The prodigious talent of this dynasty again reaches a peak in Florilegium's programme with a Quartet in G major by Johann Christian, the 'London Bach'. Musically speaking, the expansive opening movement is especially engaging but the entire work is played with elegance and charm by these artists. In summary, this is varied and enjoyable entertainment, well off the beaten track. Although the absence of any translation from the German of the texts of the four songs is regrettable, it does not prevent a warm recommendation.

Jean-Paul Fouchécourt ten

Air(s) de cour – French songs from the 16th to 18th centuries
Anonymous Ma belle si ton ame[a] Attaingnant Chansons et danses[a] – Tant que vivrai Bataille Airs de différents autheurs, mis en tablature de luth[a] – Un satire cornu; Ma bergère non légère Brassens Marquise[c] Chabanceau de la Barre Si c'est un bien que l'esperance[b] Couperin Doux liens de mon coeur[d]. Qu'on ne me dise[d]. Zéphire[b] Du Buisson

Plainte sur la mort de M Lambert[e] M Lambert Airs de cour[b] – Trouver sur l'herbette; Par mes chants tristes et touchants; Ma bergère est tendre et fidelle; Pour jouir d'un bonheur; Vous ne sçauriez mes yeux; Vos mespris Lully Récit de la beauté[b] Moulinié Paisible et ténébreuse nuit[a]. Puisque Doris[a]. Amis enivrons nous[a] Richard Ruisseau qui cours apres toy-mesme
Jean-Paul Fouchécourt ten Eric Bellocq [a]lte/[b]theo/[c]gtr [b]Nicolas Mazzoleni, Simon Heyerick vns [bd]Christine Plubeau va da gamba Olivier Baumont [e]org/[bd]hpd
Glissando 779 013-2 (69 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Notes, texts and translations included
Recorded 2000 ●●

This anthology traverses 150 years of the air de cour repertory, from its beginnings in the 'Parisian' chanson to the time of François Couperin. So it is probably the most comprehensive survey of the genre, and it certainly bids fair to be one of the finest. Fouchécourt chooses wisely and well: the earlier repertory has been fairly well served, but much of what he offers will be new to most. His light tenor is well known from the opera repertoire, but he manages just fine on his own. The opening 'Tant que vivray' seems rather low-pitched for his voice, but the following pieces allow him to stretch his vocal chords languorously, wittily or eloquently in turns.

His lyricism speaks for itself, but the drinking song Amis environs nous is robust and suitably breathless, and his portrayal of the hapless protagonist in 'Un satire cornu' has irony tinged with compassion. Is it that Fouchécourt is French? No disrespect intended to Nigel Rogers, Charles Daniels and other fine practitioners of the genre, but the Gallic ease with which Fouchécourt characterises these different situations is quite distinctive. And it could only occur to a Frenchman to connect this genre to the modern song-writer Georges Brassens, whose (slightly revised) setting of a text by Corneille nicely divides the programme into two halves. The later period is, if anything, more limited and conventionalised in its expressive scope, but Fouchécourt's sense of line and ornamentation keep things moving along.

Fretwork

Celestiall Witchcraft – The Private Music of Henry and Charles, Princes of Wales 🅿
Coprario Chi può miravi. When pale famine. Fortune and Glory Gibbons Fantasias a 3 'for the great double bass' – No 2; No 3. Fantasias a 6 – No 5; No 6 A Ferrabosco II So beauty on the waters stood. Pavan. In Nomine a 6. So breake off this last lamenting kisse W Lawes Consort Sett a 5 in A minor. Pavin and Almain. Fantazia and Serabrand Mico Parte Seconda Monteverdi Madrigals, Book 3 – O come è gran martire (arr Lawes). Là tra'l sangue (arr Mico)
Fretwork with Mark Padmore ten Paul Nicholson org Nigel North lte William Carter theorbo
Virgin Classics Veritas 545346-2 Ⓕ
(72 minutes: DDD). Texts included. Recorded 1998 ●

The title of this recording comes, appropriately, from Thomas Campion's Elegie upon the untimely death of Prince Henry: 'his carriage was full of celestiall witchcraft, winning all to admiration and love personall.' Henry's musical taste was equally so, and listeners to this CD are implicitly asked to consider whether, had he lived to become king instead of Charles, the course of English musical history (not to say non-musical history) might have been quite different. Coprario's two airs – one mourning the death of Henry, the other comforting Charles – must have provided the initial inspiration for the CD. Happily, Henry's music tutor, Alfonso Ferrabosco II, figures prominently here: two airs from his 1609 collection, sublimely sung and accompanied on the lute; a wistful pavan in three parts, delicately played with cadences that end with a whisper; and an In Nomine 'through all parts' of great subtlety. Thomas Lupo's polished six-part fantasia that opens the recording – offering a further example of the sort of music Henry is known to have enjoyed – Fretwork's performance doesn't disappoint: it captures the rhetoric of the beginning, bringing crystal clarity to the syncopations of the middle section while articulating the musical architecture. William Lawes is the composer most closely associated with the young Charles I, and his music is represented on this disc by a fantasia, three dances (a mournful Pavin followed by a wittily played Almain and a danceable Saraband), an affecting transcription he made of a Monteverdi madrigal, and one of the Royal Consorts in the richer, six-part version calling for two theorbos. The two Gibbons Fantasias for the great double bass allow William Hunt to shine on his wonderfully resonant larger viol. Fretwork produces polished, sophisticated performances complemented by those of Padmore and North, offering delightfully bewitching entertainment fit for a king.

Gabrieli Consort

Awards 1993

Venetian Vespers 🅿
Gabrieli (ed Roberts) Intonazione[a]. 🏅
Versicle and response: Deus in adiutorium; Domine ad adiuvandum Rigatti Dixit Dominus Grandi O intemerata. Antiphon: Beata es Maria Monteverdi Laudate pueri Banchieri Suonata prima[a]. Antiphon: Beatam me dicent Monteverdi Laetatus sum Finetti O Maria, quae rapis corda hominum. Antiphon: Haec est quae nescavit Rigatti Nisi Dominus Banchieri Dialogo secondo[a]. Antiphon: Ante thronum Cavalli Lauda Jerusalem Grandi O quam tu pulchra es Anonymous Praeambulum[a]. Chapter: Ecce virgo Monteverdi Deus qui mundum crimine iacentem. Versicle and response. Ave Maria; Dominus tecum. Antiphon. Spiritus Sanctus

Rigatti Magnificat Marini Sonata con tre violini in eco. Collect: Dominus vobiscum – Deus, qui de beatae Mariae. Dismissal: Dominus vobiscum – Benedicamus Domino Monteverdi Laudate Dominum Fasolo (ed Roberts) Intonazione – excerpts[a] Rigatti Salve regina
Gabrieli Consort and Players / Paul McCreesh with [a]Timothy Roberts org
Archiv Produktion ② 459 457-2ATA2 Ⓑ
(96 minutes: DDD). Texts and translations included
Recorded 1990 ●●●

Paul McCreesh's sense of adventure made quite an impact with his reconstruction of Doge Grimani's Coronation in 1595. This follow-up recording takes as its starting point a Vespers service 'as it might have been celebrated in St Mark's, Venice 1643', and it is no less striking a speculation. McCreesh is wisely not attempting to re-create a historical event but to provide a rejuvenating context for some more wonderful Venetian church music. There can be little doubt that listening to psalm settings within a liturgical framework illuminates the theatricality and significance of the works in a unique way, barely possible in an ordinary format where one work simply follows another. Yet the quality of the music is what really counts, and this is where McCreesh deserves the greatest praise. He has skilfully blended a range of diverse concerted works with equally innovative and expressive solo motets, each one offset by ornate organ interludes and homespun plainchant.

Monteverdi is well represented, as one would expect, but by introducing resident composers (who were regularly employed by the great basilica) a strong Venetian sensibility prevails in all these works despite the many contrasting styles of the new Baroque age. The little-known Rigatti is arguably the sensation of this release with his highly dramatic and richly extravagant sonorities. The settings of Dixit Dominus and Magnificat are almost operatic at times though they maintain the spatial elements inspired by St Mark's.

The Gabrieli Consort and Players is a group with an extraordinary homogeneity of sound and focused energy: Monteverdi's Laetatus sum is one of the many examples where it reaches new heights in early 17th-century performance. The solo performances are deliciously executed too, particularly those involving the falsettists. This two-disc set is an achievement of the highest order.

Cabezón Beati omnes. Confitebor tibi. Magnificat a 12. Tiento para arpa. Tiento para órgano Gombert Mon seul a 7 Guerrero Beatus es et bene tibi. Lauda Jerusalem. Nobis datus a 4. Verbum caro Lobo O quam suavis est, Domine. Ego flos campi a 4 Rogier Credidi. Regina caeli laetare/Resurrexi. Cancion a 5 Romero Dixit Dominus a 16 Urrede Tiento para órgano. Panga lingua a 5 Victoria Magnificat a 12. Salve Regina a 8. Tu es Petrus a 6. Plus additional anonymous liturgical works
Gabrieli Consort and Players / Paul McCreesh
Archiv ② 471 694-2AH2 (112 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included. Recorded c2002 ●●

Francisco Gómez de Sandoval y Rojas, Duke of Lerma, was the powerful favourite, or valido, of Philip III of Spain, who dominated Spanish politics at the beginning of the 17th century and, many believe, singlehandedly brought about the beginning of that country's decline as a major European and colonial power. His credentials as a patron of the arts, however, cannot be disputed. To this day the small town of Lerma is dominated by the collegiate church built by the Duke and it was there that the Gabrieli Consort and Players recorded these two impressive CDs of music that can be closely associated with the liturgical ceremonies held there during the Duke's lifetime.

The first disc recreates a vespers service as it might have been celebrated during a royal visit such as that in October 1617; the second focuses on the music for the 'Salve' service, a well-established tradition in all the major cathedrals and churches of Spain which was generally solemnified by polyphonic or concerted music.

The selection of pieces and the manner of their performance will take some listeners by surprise. The importance of the role of purely instrumental music in Spanish churches is becoming ever clearer through recent research, but it is not, perhaps, until you hear the documentary and source evidence realised in sound that this aspect of the late Renaissance soundworld is recreated for our ears.

Paul McCreesh and Kirk present the sequence of antiphons and psalms that comprise the vespers service with plainchant alternating with different instrumental combinations. There is some evidence for this from Guerrero's instructions to the instrumentalists of Seville Cathedral, though at that time he does not mention stringed instruments – which clearly did form part of the Lerma capilla – and it is less clear that there would have been verses played on solo harp, for example. The Gabrieli Consort are thus given the opportunity to show their considerable skills to the full, and the playing is of the highest standards enhanced by the excellent sound quality.

After this extended alternation of chant and instrumental verses, the large-scale vocal pieces make a tremendous impact: Victoria's 12-voice Magnificat makes a dramatic intervention and is performed with compelling conviction, and the same can be said for his eight-voice setting of the Salve Regina on the second disc, the voices here being doubled by instruments.

This CD offers an experience anyone interested in or attracted by Renaissance music will want to share.

The Harp Consort

Spanish Gypsies – Celtic and Spanish Music in Shakespeare's England Ⓟ
Anonymous Rowallan Manuscript – The Gypsy Lilt;

Gregory Walker: Quadran Pavan; Buffins; Hay de Gie. Irish Ho-Hoane. Trenchmore. Rownde Scottishe tune. Lady Louthians Lilt Byrd Gypsy's Round, BK80 Farnaby Spagnioletta. Mal Sims Holborne Muy linda Hume Captaine Humes Poeticall Musicke – A Spanish Humour R Johnson II Gypies Metamorphosed – The Gypsies Song Playford The English Dancing Master – Part 1: The Wherligig; The Spanish Jeepsie; Pakington's Pound; Part 2: The Punks Delight; Lulle me beyond thee; Scotch Cap; Appendix: A new Scotch Jig. Musick's Hande-Maide – An Ayre called Corke; Sarabande to Corke
Harp Consort / Andrew Lawrence-King hp
Deutsche Harmonia Mundi 05472 77516-2 Ⓕ
(71 minutes: DDD). Recorded 1999 ●●

The subtitle of this album says more about its content than does the main one. There is much titular reference to Spain and to gypsies, but only in 'The Spanish Jeepsies' do the two come together. It seems that in Shakespeare's time Spanish popular tunes were perceived as being of gypsy origin. More to the point, the programme is skilfully devoted to showing the influence of Celtic and Spanish idioms on English popular music.

Charles I's Consorte opened the way for courtly instruments to 'fraternise' with humbler ones, creating a variety of new sounds, and the Harp Consort take full advantage of this 'social' freedom. The eight players form a kaleidoscope of broken consorts drawn from the 18 instruments (plucked, bowed, blown and percussed) at their disposal, producing a remarkable spectrum of sound from the ethereal ('Lady Louthians Lilt') to the downright boisterous ('The Wherligig'). Only five of the 23 items last for more than four minutes but one never has the impression of a trayful of canapés deputising for a good meal.

When it comes to putting together a coherent and well-researched programme of assorted small-scale items, only Peter Holman springs to mind as Andrew Lawrence-King's peer. Excellent recording is the icing on this delectable cake, one that takes 71 minutes to enjoy.

Henry's Eight

The Virgin and Christ Child
Anonymous Alma redemptoris mater. Alleluia – Now well may we mirthes make. Ave Maria. Gregorian Chant for Advent – Ave Maria Arcadelt Missa Noe, Noe Isaac Virgo prudentissima Mouton Nesciens mater virgo virum. Noe, Noe Traditional There is no rose of such virtue Henry's Eight (Declan Costello, William Towers countertens Duncan Byrne, Nicholas Todd, Toby Watkin tens Robert-Jan Temmink, Giles Underwood basses) / Jonathan Brown bass
Etcetera KTC1213 (64 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included ●

The most substantial work is the Mass by Arcadelt based on a motet by Jean Mouton. Henry's Eight have often championed neglected composers in the past, and Arcadelt is better known for his madrigals than for his sacred music. One is struck by the music's sheer quality, for which Henry's Eight are once again persuasive advocates. At times, the subtly varying degrees of vibrato between singers tend to draw too much attention to this aspect of their technique, but there will be those who welcome a more relaxed approach. The disc is rounded off with English carols, and two Marian motets by Isaac and Mouton. Isaac's Virgo prudentissima, composed for the coronation of Isaac's patron Maximilian as Holy Roman Emperor, is festal in scoring and design. In relation to rival recordings (from David Munrow and Paul Hillier for Mouton, and from The Tallis Scholars for Isaac) Henry's Eight do more than hold their own (barring the odd fluffed entry, as at the start of the second half of Virgo prudentissima). Yet more might have been made of certain special moments: the rich suspensions of the eight-voice Nesciens mater, or the thrilling climax of Virgo prudentissima. Against the broad canvas provided by these expansive works, the English carols seem out of place, especially with the modern English pronunciation adopted here. That aside, this is first-rate music in performances of real commitment.

Hespèrion XX / XXI

Ostinato 🅿
Anonymous Greensleeve to a Ground
Correa de Arauxo Tres Glosas sobre 'Todo el mundo en general' Ortiz Quinta pars IX. Ricercadas – II; V; VII Falconieri Ciaccona. Il Primo libro di canzone – Passacalle Marini Passacaglia Merula Ciaccona. Ruggiero Pachelbel Canon and Gigue Purcell Fantasia upon a Ground, Z731. Sonatas in Four Parts, Z802-11 – No 5 in G minor Rossi Sonata sopra l'Aria di Ruggiero Traditional Canarios Valente Gaillarda Napolitana
Hespèrion XXI / Jordi Savall va da gamba Ⓕ
Alia Vox AV9820 (73 minutes: DDD) ●

Here the group recreate the improvisatory world of instrumental music of the 16th and 17th centuries. Repeated bass or harmonic patterns – the basso ostinato – are the linking factor while each composer from Ortiz to Purcell displays amazing skill at combining the restriction of harmonic repetition with freedom of inventiveness, discipline stimulating creativity with brilliant result. The players' disciplined virtuosity brings out the improvisatory background of much of this music in a dazzling display that enthralls the listener.

Despite the constant of the ostinato, the variety in texture and instrumental colour is such that there is never a dull moment: Jordi Savall on viols ranging from bass to treble is completely at one with the music of Diego Ortiz – never has it been more convincingly performed. The continuo team, mostly plucked strings in the earlier repertory and keyboard (harpsichord or organ) with theorbo in the later works, is superb: inventive and as virtuoso as the soloists they accompany.

These elaborated versions of improvisatory techniques are in many ways parallel to the best recordings of jazz, capturing for posterity an inspiration of the moment.

Battaglie & Lamenti 1600-1660
Anonymous Sarabande italienne[g] Chilese Canzon in Echo[gi] Falconiero Battaglia de Barbaso, yerno de Satanás[g] Fontei Pianto d'Erinna[afhi] G Gabrieli Canzon III a 6[g] Guami Canzon sopra la Battaglia[g] Monteverdi Lamento d'Arianna[abdefj] Peri Uccidimi, dolore[afi] Rossi Fantasia, 'Les pleurs d'Orphée'[g] Scheidt Pavane[g]. Galliard Battaglia[g] Strozzi Sul Rodano severo[acfhi]
[a]Montserrat Figueras sop [b]Rolf Lislevand, [c]Robert Clancy theorbos [d]Paolo Pandolfo viol [e]Lorenz Duftschmid violone [f]Ton Koopman hpd [g]Hespèrion XXI / Jordi Savall va da gamba/ [h]viol
Alia Vox AV9815 (76 minutes: [i]ADD/DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included
Recorded 1981, 1989, 1999 ●

This release brings together laments and battle pieces from the 17th century. This might at first glance seem an odd thematic coupling, but it makes for a good sense of contrast (all battles, or all laments would be too much), and the two are in some ways linked: both were set pieces of the early Baroque, genres with a clearly defined frame of reference for composer and listener alike.

The laments here were originally recorded for the most part in 1981, while the instrumental battle pieces and canzonas date from much more recently. It is good to have the chance to appreciate the singing of Montserrat Figueras from 20 years ago, when her voice was probably at its finest: still fresh, yet with the added depth of maturity and experience. Indeed, comparing the laments by Peri, Fontei and Strozzi she recorded in 1981 and the version of Monteverdi's famous Lamento d'Arianna which she made in 1989 is interesting. The Monteverdi is interpreted in a powerfully expressive way, of course, and the plangent quality inherent in her voice makes it in many ways ideally suited. Yet, for example, the Peri, a lament by Iole for Hercules, was more moving, largely because the voice has the bloom of a singer at the height of her powers: there is more warmth, more flexibility, and thus the intensity of the complaint is maintained with greater ease.

Not all the instrumental items are battle pieces; in fact, one of the most striking and original works is the Fantasia on 'Les pleurs d'Orphée' by Luigi Rossi. This is a shortish piece, but so full of chromaticism and dense string writing that it makes an immediate impact. Savall and his team play it beautifully, the performance as crafted and intimate as that of a great string quartet; you get the sense (quite rare on disc) that the players are all listening intently to each other, and this helps to draw the listener in too. The battle pieces, by Scheidt, Guami and Falconiero, offer all the virtuosity you could hope to hear from strings and wind alike. Strongly recommended.

Elizabethan Consort Music
Alberti Pavin of Albarti. Gallyard Anonymous In Nomine a 5. Desperada. Gallyard I-III. Allemande. Ronda. La represa I and II. Allemana d'amor. Dance I and II. Pavana I and II. Brandeberges Daman Di sei soprani W Mundy O mater mundi Parsons In Nomines a 7 – IV; V. The Songe called Trumpetts Strogers In Nomines – III a 5; IV a 6 Taverner Quemadmodum. R White In Nomine V Woodcock Browning my dere. In Nomines a 5 – II; III
Hespèrion XX / Jordi Savall va da gamba
Alia Vox AV9804 (66 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1997

It is unusual to commit the contents of a rare manuscript collection to CD. This is what Jordi Savall and Hespèrion XX have done in this recording of Elizabethan consort music. The manuscript, from the 1570s and 1580s, containing dances, transcriptions of chansons and motets and fantasies, was intended for performance at court by the Queen's musicians, we are reliably informed by Peter Holman; it now resides in the British Library. These performances are highly sonorous and imaginatively realised. Savall orchestrates the repeats of the dances and chansons, usually beginning with a drum, a solo treble viol or lute and then building up the layers of sound with each restatement. Here, more than in any of their previous recordings, the tambour and tambourines are used to great effect, not merely to mark the beat, but, as in the anonymous Allemande in track 7 or the Brandeberges, to presage the mood of the piece. The manuscript contains a fascinating array of pieces: numerous In Nomines which climax in the astonishingly rich seven-part settings by Robert Parsons contrast with transcriptions of bawdy chansons, the evergreen Browning my dere, an ethereal fantasy by William Daman for six treble viols (surely a collectors' item), William Mundy's eponymous O mater mundi and the sublimity of John Taverner's Quemadmodum. And, as listeners will discover, there is more. This is music fit for a courtly Sunday Elizabethan banquet, with a bit of dancing thrown in, should you wish to entertain in that style.

The recording does offer a wonderful glimpse of the variety of music enjoyed at the court of Elizabeth I; it is a one-off and should be treasured as such.

Maria Cristina Kiehr sop

Canta la Maddelena
Agneletti Gloria[ab] Bernabei Heu me miseram et infelicem[ab] Ferrari Queste pungenti spine[ab] Frescobaldi Arie musicali per cantarsi[ab] – primo libro: A pie della gran croce; secondo libro: Dove, dove sparir. Toccata[c]. Canzona[c] Gratiani Dominus illuminatio mea[ab] Kapsberger Toccata arpeggiata[c]

Mazzocchi Dialoghi, e sonetti[ab] – Lagrime amare; Dunque ove tu Signor; Homai le luci erranti
L Rossi Pender non prima vide sopra vil tronco[ab]
M Rossi Toccata settima[c]
[a]Maria Cristina Kiehr sop
[b]Concerto Soave (Matthias Spaeter archlte/cittarrone Sylvie Moquet bass viol Mara Galassi hp) / Jean-Marc Aymes org/[c]hpd
Harmonia Mundi HMC90 1698 (72 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included. Recorded 1999 ●●

Much skill has gone into this programme celebrating the popular 17th-century emblem of Mary Magdalene's lamentation and deploration at the foot of the Cross. Framed by two exquisite and largely unknown works, one by Agneletti and a fine cantata by Ferrari, Maria Cristina Kiehr spins a shapely, instinctive line, nuanced rather than overwhelmed by expressive ardour. (How often vapid over-indulgence by under-nourished voices rips the heart out of this music.) Kiehr shows admirable judgement in how she sustains the intensity of the most sectional work, Rossi's Pender non prima (taking as its model Monteverdi's Lamento d'Arianna). A noble and graciously covered mezzo register is the conduit for Kiehr's profound sensuality, heard delightfully in the Gratiani work, where her gleaming and accurate upper register shuns the piping angel and portrays a 'faithful grieving Lover' in a state of extreme emotion. The high tessitura is not the prettiest nor the most controlled, and it underlines her limited tonal range in works such as Bernabei's Heu me miseram where excitement results in some shrillness. She often makes up for this in the subtlety of her accentuation and inflexion. The Frescobaldi works fit her like a glove – paragraphed declamatory songs, beautifully formed and succinctly expressed. In 'A pie della gran croce', she shows a feeling for the text which lifts superficial narrative into heart-felt supplication.

With some evocative and breezy instrumental contributions, the disc which tackles this music with distinction. These are mature readings of works whose performance too often misses the mark. Thumbs up, nearly all round.

The King's Consort

Lo Sposalizio – The Wedding of Venice to the Sea
Anonymous Fanfares – Rotta; Imperiale prima; Imperiale seconda. Sursum corda. Variazoni sopra 'La Ciaccona' A Gabrieli Vieni, vieni Himeneo. Cantiam de Dio Canzona La Battaglia. Intonationi – Primo tono; Settimo tono. Gloria a 16 G Gabrieli Lieto godea sedendo. Udite, chiari et generosi figli. Kyrie a 12. Sanctus a 12. Sonata XX Guami Canzona XXIV Gussago Canzon XIX, 'La Leona'
Kapsberger Kapsberger Massaino Canzon per otto tromboni Monteverdi Christe, adoramus te Piccinini Variazoni sopra 'La Folia' Viadana Canzona, 'La Veneziana'
The King's Consort Choir; The King's Consort / Robert King
Hyperion ② CDA67048 (89 minutes: DDD) Ⓜ
Texts and translations included. Recorded 1998 ●

This mouth-watering celebration of Venice is devised with considerable expertise in ritual, contextual aspects and the imaginative allocation of music to, in this particular instance, the processions and journey across the lagoon and the subsequent solemn Mass held in San Nicolò. Robert King explains in the note, with his inimitable enthusiasm and clarity, how, from the 11th century, mariners congregated annually to ask for St Nicholas's protection. The festival became, over the centuries, an important social event in the calendar as the symbolic 'fertility rite': the marriage between Venice and her blessed Adriatic, prayerfully celebrated on Ascension Day. The central act was when the Doge would toss a gold ring into the sea from his resplendently ornate galley (rowed by 400 hapless slaves). He would them move amongst the flotilla, with glorious music wafting over the calm ripples of the lagoon, his progress punctuated by various stop-offs for blessings and further ceremonial. The musical journey across to the Lido is principally a secular exercise and we are treated to some delectable madrigals by both Gabrielis. Although some listeners may find the ensemble a touch undernourished in the first madrigal, Vieni, vieni Himeneo, it soon transpires that sweetness and balance are the essential ingredients for King; the result in the exquisite instrumental numbers is a sensitivity to matching timbre which is an unusual delight both in the Guami Canzona XXIV a 8 and the imploring counterpoint that acts as a foil to the fencing in Andrea Gabrieli's Battaglia.

Indeed, what shines through with great dignity is the sense of an unfolding procession with a seemingly effortless choreography, the musical highlight of which is Giovanni Gabrieli's eight-part madrigal Lieto godea sedendo, set here with two falsettists and strings, portraying 'the disturbance of spring' in all its poignant and fleeting glory. The intimate and affectionate duetting of James Bowman and Robin Blaze, so beautifully rendered on this disc, is something of a landmark as the inimitable mentor shares the reins with the pick of the younger generation of countertenors.

The depth of quality and the control within individual voices of the vocal consort is a match for anyone in the magisterial 16-part Gabrieli piece Udite, chiari et generosi, though the acoustic of St Jude's, Hampstead – and the pragmatic recording techniques required for such an undertaking – demand that tutti work is clearly defined and that a strong interpretative angle is projected. This is where the Gabrieli Mass movements for San Nicolò, which constitute the second disc, are far more successfully realised than in Cantiam de Dio: this is the only multi-voiced work where the performance appears prosaic compared with the poised elegance that informs the vocal and instrumental dialogue of the Kyrie and Sanctus a 12. This is a small gripe in an otherwise exceptional recording. Running through the veins of nearly all the pieces are the ingredients of commitment, immediacy and spontaneous musicianship which allow one to view this ravishing music on its own terms, rather than losing sight of it with endless speculative reconstruction for its own sake. A very fine achievement all round.

The King's Noyse

Pavaniglia – Dances and Madrigals from 17th-Century Italy Ⓟ
Douglass Tarantella^{b} Corbetta Follia^{c}. Ciaccona^{c} Farina Pavana Terza^{b} Gesualdo Tall' or sano desio^{b}. Moro, lasso, al mio duolo^{b}
Monteverdi Voglio di vita uscir^{ab}. Ohimè ch'io cado^{ab}. Pesenti Quanto t'inganni Amor^{ab} Rossi Orfeo – Lasciate Averno, o pene, e me seguite!^{ab}. Passacaille del seigneur Luigi^{b} (arr Douglass). Prima Canzon 'Scipione Stella'^{d} Sances Lagrimosa beltà^{b}
Zanetti Il scolaro^{b} – Intrata e Baletto del Marchese di Caravazzo con la sua Gagliarda; Pas è mezzo sù Chiave Maestro; Saltarello della pas è mezzo; Saltarello detto il Genovesino; Pavaniglia; La Sartorella; Il Gabonano; La Balloria; La Montagnura; Saltarello della Battagli
The King's Noyse (^{a}Ellen Hargis sop ^{b}David Douglass, ^{b}Robert Mealy vns ^{b}Scott Metcalfe, ^{b}Margriet Tindemans vas ^{b}Emily Walhout vc) ^{c}Paul O'Dette gtr/chit ^{d}Andrew Lawrence-King hp
Harmonia Mundi HMU90 7246 (74 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included. Recorded 1999

This is a very engaging and well-constructed programme, containing some better-known pieces, but concentrating for the most part on Italian dance music: a pavan, a tarantella, a chaconne, a follia, to name only four. Some of the most refreshing selections are to be found among the 12 minutes' worth of dances from Zanetti's Il scolaro: the sound of two violins playing the top line in a string consort is extraordinarily evocative, and on this recording one readily understands why such string bands caught on so rapidly. The ensemble conveys such spontaneity that even the arranged pieces – such as Sances's Lagrimosa beltà – sound as though they were written specially for it. Only the Gesualdo madrigals – performed, again, with just strings – seem to not quite fit the medium, despite the superb polish of the performances. The individual contributions are impressive as well: Andrew Lawrence-King and Paul O'Dette each boast very effective solos, and Ellen Hargis is persuasive as always, especially in the livelier pieces, where her richness and her flexibility of tone are most impressively combined.

The King's Noyse set great store by the improvisatory, spontaneous character of the early Italian Baroque, and by the flexibility with which music could be adapted to suit given ensembles. This disc bears out such notions, and also feeds the hope that they might push them further still in future. Many would argue that the word 'authenticity' is now best left alone; but if one wishes to define it – one of many possible definitions – as facilitating the suspension of disbelief (the illusion of actually 'being there'), then the King's Noyse succeed brilliantly.

Barthold Kuijken fl

Bach Partita in A minor, BWV1013
CPE Bach Solo Flute Sonata, H562 Wq132
Hotteterre Brunette, 'L'autre jour ma Cloris'. Air de Mr Lambert, 'Je suis aimé de celle que j'adore'. Air de Mr Bousset, 'Vous qui faites votre modèle de la constante tourterelle'
Vivaldi 'Le Printemps', RV269 (arr Rousseau)
Weiss French Suite in G
Barthold Kuijken fl
Accent ACC20144 (75 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded c2001

An entire disc of 18th-century solo flute may look like a bit of a daunting prospect, but then not everyone plays the instrument like Barthold Kuijken. Throughout his recital this experienced Baroque musician caresses our ears with playing of supreme ease and natural fluidity, producing not a single shrill or rasping note and displaying at all times an exquisite and gentle musicianship. The music includes the Baroque period's two greatest solo flute works, the Partita by JS Bach and the Sonata by his son CPE, alongside some of Hotteterre's poignant arrangements and elaborations of French airs de cours. Kuijken's style is not to shock or surprise, but simply to play as beautifully and tastefully as he can. The results here are utterly beguiling, above all in the slow music of the Hotteterre pieces, with their haunting, plaintive urgency, and the sarabandes of Bach and Weiss, both executed with faultless poise and grace. Elsewhere, he shows sure-footed virtuosity and balance, not only making light of the leaps, runs and arpeggios but doing so with sufficient control to drop in some fleet dynamic contrasts, as in the first-movement bird-calls of the Vivaldi. Principally a disc for flute fans, but lovers of good Baroque music-making should find plenty to admire, too.

Andrew Lawrence-King hp

His Majesty's Harper
Anonymous Scott's Lament Byrd Alman in G. La coranto. Fantasia. A gigg. Praeludium to Ye Fancie Fantasia. Rowland (arr Dowland) Dowland Awake, sweet lôue, thou art return'd. Can she excuse. A fancy. Farwell. Fine knacks for Ladies. Frogg galliard. Go cristall teares. Mrs Winter's Jump. My dear Adieu, my sweet love farewell. My Lady Hunsdons Puffe. My thoughts are wingd with hopes. Pavana lacrima. Robin. Semper Dowland semper dolens. Suzanna Galliard. Tarleton's Jigge. Tarletones Riserrectione le Flelle The Queens Maske
Macdermott Allmane. Cormacke. Mr Cormake

Allman. Schocatorum Cormacke
Andrew Lawrence-King hp
Deutsche Harmonia Mundi 05472 77504-2 Ⓕ
(65 minutes: DDD). Recorded 1998 ●

Andrew Lawrence-King's resourceful plundering of the harpsichord and lute books in search of an elusive early harp repertoire takes him here to music from 16th-century England. With some of the best instrumental music of the time on offer, much of it displaying that irresistible folk-like charm and melancholy peculiar to English melody, he cannot go far wrong. Here, making delightful appearances, are Dowland's Pavana lacrima and Semper Dowland semper dolens, some of his shorter catchy dance-songs, and more dances and contrapuntal pieces by Byrd. All transfer to the harp superbly in Lawrence-King's hands, which once again manage to find in his instrument the subtleties of the lute together with the power and agility of the harpsichord. More importantly, it is hard to imagine this music being played with a greater or more honest expressiveness. Most of the pieces here are played on a gut-string Italian triple harp – gentle and mellow of tone but powerful and macho when it needs to be – but there are also some intriguing contributions from the brass-strung Irish cláirseach, which Lawrence-King uses in the anonymous Scott's Lament and four pieces by Cormack Macdermott, harpist at the court of James I. It is an instrument which, if you have not come across it before, is almost certain to confound your expectations with its rippling, metallic sound. This is a thoroughly enjoyable disc, the kind which touches you with its sound alone; the music seems as if it could have been intended for the harp all along, a simple effectiveness which makes it all the more strange that so little real harp music from this time survives.

Gérard Lesne counterten

Dans un bois solitaire
Bernier Aminte et Lucrine Clérambault Pirame et Tisbé Courbois L'Amant timide Du Buisson Plainte sur la mort de Monsieur Lambert Stuck Les Festes bolonnoises
Gérard Lesne counterten Il Seminario Musicale
Virgin Classics Veritas 545303-2 Ⓕ
(63 minutes: DDD). Texts and translation included
Recorded 1997 ●

A fascinating and still largely untapped corner of the repertoire, the cantate française was a popular form of home music-making in the early years of the 18th century, offering amateurs a chance, as the lexicographer Brossard put it, 'to soften the sorrows of solitude, without all the trouble expense and paraphernalia of an opera.' The reference to opera is significant, because these pieces – usually about a quarter-of-an-hour in length – really are like miniaturised operatic episodes, serving up a variety of moods and, in the best cases, capable of conveying considerable emotional power. The best works in this selection are Aminte et Lucrine by the French cantata's most prolific exponent, Nicolas Bernier, and Pirame et Tisbé by perhaps its most skilled master, Louis-Nicolas Clérambault. Hearing the impressively sonorous pronouncements of the Oracle of Diana in the former, or the roaring of the (continuo) lion in the latter, you begin to wonder why these two did not compose any operas themselves, unless it be that they were justifiably quite happy with what they had already achieved here. All the works on the disc, however, have something to offer both dramatically and lyrically, and the lack of familiarity of the composers' names should not be allowed to put anyone off. Gérard Lesne's singing is a constant pleasure. His distinctively rich and manly alto voice is a reliable and even-toned instrument, while his musical intelligence and excellent projection of words is insurance against the slightest hint of blandness. His continuo group is a little heavy-handed in places, though it is good to hear them being unafraid to enter into the dramatic spirit.

Musica Antiqua of London

The Triumph of Maximilian – Songs and Instrumental Music from 16th-Century Germany
Anonymous Elslein Aich Ein frolyk wesen. Elslein à 3. Der Hundt Barbireau Ein frolyk wesen Busnois Fortuna disperata Dietrich Elslein à 3 Finck Ich stünd an einem Morgen Ghiselin Ein frolyk wesen Isaac Fortuna disperata. Der Hundt. Ich stünd an einem Morgen Josquin Desprez Fortuna à 3. Missa pange lingua – Pleni sunt coeli (Quis seperabit) Othmayr Entlaubet ist der Walde Rhau Elslein à 2. Ich stünd an einem Morgen Senfl Es taget vor dem Walde. Es taget à 4. Es taget: Elslein à 4. Exemplum. Es taget. Entlaubet ist der Walde à 4. Entlaubet ist der Walde. Ich stünd an einem Morgen à 3. Ich stünd an einem Morgen à 5. Ich stünd an einem Morgen à 4. Ich stünd an einem Morgen ... Es taget ... Kein Adler. Pacientia muss ich han. Quattour. Will niemand singen Senfl/Gerle Elslein à 4 Stolzer Entlaubet ist der Waldea
Musica Antiqua of London / Philip Thorby with John Potter ten
Signum Records SIGCD004 (69 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1993

Ludwig Senfl has not yet received the recognition that he deserves; and as this issue demonstrates, he is one of the most fascinating composers of the early 16th century. He combines an astonishing contrapuntal skill with a range of moods and formal control that make his German song settings among the finest of their century. One reason why he is little heard is that the music is hard to sing: for most of it you need a tenor with an extreme lightness of touch. But in John Potter they seem to have the perfect singer, perhaps the best ever heard in this repertory. He floats the lines with effortless grace and with an uncannily sensitive projection of the texts. Just listen to his control in the longest and most serious song on the disc, Senfl's Pacientia muss ich han. But he is also superbly supported by the viols and recorders of Musica Antiqua of London. Its playing, too, is apparently effortless. Some listeners may feel that the recorders are occasionally allowed to run too fast, giving less than full measure to the real substance of the music; but the playing is undeniably wonderful, and superbly recorded. For the viol playing, no praise is too high: they do everything with a pleasingly light touch and always with a real sensitivity to the music. There is another reason why we hear less Senfl than we should: that his best work needs to be understood within the broader context of the German Tenorlied repertory. To cope with this, the disc puts Senfl alongside settings of the same material by other composers of the time. This works nicely enough here, but it would have been so good to hear more of Senfl's own work, given the quality of these performances.

The Newberry Consort

A Candle in the Dark
Anonymous Doctor Faustus[a] Byrd Praeludium and Ground. Come woeful Orpheus[a]. An Aged Dame[b] Campion Move now with measured sound[ab] (arr Rosseter). Thrice tosse these oaken ashes in the ayre[b] Dowland In darknesse let mee dwell[a]. His golden locks time hath to silver turnd[b]. Sorrow, stay![b] Ferrabosco I So beautie on the waters stood[b] Johnson Johnson's Grounde W Mundy In nomine Picforth In nomine Traditional Devil's Dream Tye Trust. Passamezzo Pavan. Sit fast R White Fantasia II [a]Ellen Hargis sop [b]Drew Minter counterten Newberry Consort (David Douglass vn/va da gamba John Mark Rozendaal, Margriet Tindemans, Craig Trompeter va da gambas Jacob Heringman lte) / Mary Springfels va da gamba
Harmonia Mundi HMU90 7140 (66 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1998

The subtitle of the booklet's accompanying essay, 'The Musical World of John Dee', gives a truer description of this programme's aims than does the rather equivocal title. John Dee was the Elizabethan age's foremost proponent of the occult, a magus whose connections extended into the same circles that patronised many of the musicians whose works are heard here. Accordingly, a bizarre streak runs through either the texts of the vocal pieces (famously Dowland's In darknesse or Byrd's An Aged Dame, and most explicitly Campion's Thrice tosse these oaken ashes in the ayre) or the instrumental pieces. The two pieces by Tye have already a certain notoriety in this respect, but the In nomine by the virtually unknown Picforth has a rather discombobulated eloquence which, no doubt, would look completely inarticulate on paper. The centrepiece of the recital is perhaps the contemporary ballad Doctor Faustus, a 16th-century version of the tale in 16 stanzas. At 10 minutes, it is the most extended track here. The banality of the music is notably at odds with the subject matter; that would be of little consequence, but for the explicit contrivance of so much of the rest of the music here. That aside, the programme is admirably constructed: a fitting observation considering that the alchemist's art is an apt metaphor for that of devising good programmes.

The programme's strength is sufficient to recommend the disc, and to withstand the occasional solecism. The consort-playing, though fine, is not quite on a par with that of other exponents of this repertory. For example, the faster divisions in the Byrd Praeludium and Ground seem to stretch the top part, and there is a certain unevenness in intonation and tone production. Of the instrumentalists, Jacob Heringman acquits himself best, his duets with either of the two singers providing some of the disc's finest moments (Ferrabosco's So beautie on the waters stood has an elegiac quality, reminiscent of the best airs de cour). Nor do the singers quite sparkle in the way they frequently have done elsewhere; having said which, Drew Minter shows off his low countertenor register to great effect in the Ferrabosco just mentioned, and his 'native' bass voice in the final duet with Hargis on the final track, Campion's Move now with measured sound. But the level of musicianship more than compensates for any reservations: lovers of this period need not hesitate, and less seasoned listeners will be similarly rewarded.

Nigel North lte

A Varietie of Lute Lessons
Anonymous Fantasie No 2. Volt Ballard Coranto No 1. Volt No 2 Bacheler Monsieur's Almaine. Pavan No 4 Cato Fantasie No 1 Dowland Sir John Smith's Almain, P47. The King of Denmark's Galliard, P40. The Earl of Essex's Galliard, P42a. My Ladie Riches Galyerd, P43a. The Right Hon Ferdinando Earle of Darby's Galliard, P44. Lady Clifton's Spirit. Queen Elizabeth's Galliard. Sir Henry Guilforde's Almaine A Ferrabosco II Fantasia No 5. Pavan No 6 Huwet Fantasie No 6 Holborne Pavan No 2. Laurencini di Roma Fantasie No 4 Moritz Pavan Morley Pavan No 3 Perrichon Coranto No 2 Saman Coranto No 4
Nigel North lte
Linn Records CKD097 (78 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ

A Varietie of Lute Lessons, compiled by Robert Dowland, was the last book of lute tablature to be published (1610) in England, and it is important both for the internationality and high quality of the music it contains. Six genres are represented, each by seven pieces: fantasies, pavans, galliards, almaines, corantos and voltes. Several items lack attribution in the original book, but the authors of Sir John Smith's Almain and Volt No 2 have been identified, and the named composer of Fantasie No 4, 'The Knight of the Lute', is revealed as Laurencini di Roma. Those naive enough to believe that early manuscripts were fault-free would be sorely mistaken in this instance. The first note and last chord in the first item, Fantasie No 1, by Diomedes Cato, are wrong; North has, of course, corrected them but has not corrected what is widely recognised as an error in Sir John Smith's Almain (track 12, 07'27"). The few others elsewhere are duly amended. In making his selection North has wisely passed over some of the 'pops' in favour of less well-known pieces, including: the magnificent Pavan No 1 dedicated to John Dowland and quoting from Lachrymae; the beautiful Fantasie No 4 of Laurencini with its joyous chain of suspensions at the climax; and Bacheler's unusually structured variations on Monsieur's Almaine – long, but worth every minute.

North's performances are full of warmth, unfailingly musical and stylish, and are recorded with clarity.

Paul O'Dette lute

Alla Venetiana
Anonymous Laudate Dio Capirola Spagna seconda. Non ti spiaqua l'ascoltar. Padoana belissima. Ricercare I, II, V and XIII. Tientalora. La Villanella Cara O mia cieca de dura sorte Dalza Calata ala Spagnola. Pavana alla ferrarese. Pavana alla venetiana. Piva I-III. Recercar. Recercar dietro. Saltarello Ghizeghem De tous bien playne (arr O'Dette). De tu biens plaene (arr Capirola) Josquin Desprez Adieu mes amours. Et in terra pax. Qui tolis pechata mondi Martini Malor mi bat Pesenti Che farala, che dirala Spinacino Recercare I and II
Paul O'Dette lte
Harmonia Mundi HMU90 7215 (73 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1997 ●

When lutenists began to use the fingers of their right hands to pluck the strings, the instrument made a quantum leap forward. Three- and four-part counterpoint was suddenly on the agenda and the expanded range of the repertory made the lute popular even in Italian court circles. O'Dette focuses on two of the earliest printed books of tablature by Spinacino (1507), Dalza (1508), and the handwritten book of music by Capirola (*c*1520). Whoever it was who wrote the last of these, his student 'Vidal' or Capriola himself, touchingly showed his human fallibility; in a book written with much tender loving care and lavishly adorned with paintings, he had to insert the missing 'a' in 'Pado(a)na' with a caret! The selected items cover the basic genres of tastar de corde, recercare, dances and intabulations of vocal music by non-lutenist composers. In the last of these a lutenist demonstrated his skill in adapting and embellishing the original, as O'Dette does in his own intabulation of van Ghizegem's De tous bien playne. What comes through clearly is the joyous freshness of this music and the quickly acquired ingenuity in bringing more complex counterpoint to the fingerboard, as though the right-hand fingers had uncorked a bottle and released an inspirational genie. O'Dette has many talents, and an unusual ability to bring this music to life is one of them. A disc to lift the spirits and first-class recording too.

Orchestra of the Renaissance

The Marriage of England and Spain
Anonymous Introit: Benedicta sit Sancta Trinitas[a]. Gradual: Benedicta es[a]. Sequence: Alma chorus Domini[a]. Communion: Benedicamus Deum caeli[a]. Preface: Per Omnia saecula saeculorum[ae]. Postcommunion: Dominus vobiscum[a] Bendinelli Fanfare, 'Levet'[g] Cabezón Diferencias sobre 'La dama le demanda'[b] Gombert Jouissance vous donnerai[g] Morales Jubilate Deo omnis terra[g]. O sacrum convivium[cdef]. Pater noster[dg] Rhys Missa in die Sanctae Trinitas[ab] – Kyrie Sermisy Tant que vivray[b] Taverner Missa Gloria tibi Trinitas[cdefg]
[a]Josep Cabré bar [b]Silas Standage org [c]Carys Lane sop [d]William Missin counterten [e]Simon Berridge, [e]Tom Phillips tens [f]Jonathan Arnold, [f]Charles Gibbs basses [g]Orchestra of the Renaissance / Richard Cheetham sackbut
Glossa GCD921401 (78 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included. Recorded 1998

Richard Cheetham's musical reconstruction of the marriage of Mary Tudor and Philip of Spain in 1554 is an imaginative attempt to re-create the meeting of the Castilian and English royal chapels on that auspicious occasion in Winchester Cathedral. The event was, according to contemporary descriptions, truly magnificent. Philip travelled to England with 21 singers, two organists (including Antonio de Cabezón) and 11 minstrels as well as the usual corps of trumpets and drums; these musicians joined forces with those of the Chapel Royal and the cathedral. Unfortunately, although the music is mentioned in the accounts of the wedding, no specific pieces are identified, and the choices made for this recording, however logical, must remain hypothetical. The selection of Taverner's Missa Gloria tibi Trinitas makes sense in the light of the English tradition to celebrate royal weddings with a Mass for the Holy Trinity, and the pieces by Morales, Cabezón and Gombert reflect the repertory of the Spanish chapel. Most of the decisions as to performing forces and scorings, though also hypothetical, are convincing. The addition of shawms and sackbuts to parts of Taverner's Mass, for example, works well in the more sustained passages (as at the opening of the Credo) but perhaps less so where the writing is more florid or intricate (although many of these sections are taken by voices or voices and organ alone). The shawms and sackbuts undoubtedly participated in the proceedings, but did they really accompany the Mass? Aside from this historical reservation, this is a thoroughly enjoyable mix of Sarum chant (superbly sung by Josep Cabré), English and Spanish polyphony (especially beguiling is the account of Morales's Pater noster arranged for solo voice and minstrels) and mid-16th-century organ music and trumpet fanfares, which add an appropriately ceremonial touch. The performances are of the high standard typical of the Orchestra of the Renaissance, and the recorded sound is excellent. The organ (the instrument is unspecified) makes a fine noise, too.

Oxford Camerata

Let Voices Resound
Anonymous Songs from Piae Cantiones (1582) – Cedit hiems eminus. Aetas Carmen. Jesu dulcis memoria. Puer natus in Bethlehem. Ave maris stella. Tempus adest floridum. Parce Christus spes reorum. Resonet in laudibus. Personent hodie. Psallat fidelis concio. In dulci jubilo. Florens juventus virginis. Jeremiae prophetae
Women's voices of Oxford Camerata / Jeremy Summerly
Naxos 8 553578 (60 minutes: DDD) Ⓢ
Texts and translations included. Recorded 1995

This is the second collection from Naxos to focus on the Piae Cantiones of 1582. In contrast to the Retrover Ensemble's offering for mixed voices and instruments, Jeremy Summerly's survey has only voices, and only four female ones at that. This is a sensible decision, in that much of the collection's contents would have been sung by choirboys. (Obviously, a recording with choirboys would be even more 'authentic', and the quality of these two discs ought to convince an enterprising choral director to take up the challenge.) It is a fascinating, indeed unique collection, since much of the music is monophonic and may be traced back to the beginning of the millennium. In Summerly's selection, polyphony plays a greater role (though it is still in the minority), but this is hardly a problem: the opening Aetas Carmen sets a confident, almost brash tone, quite a contrast to the devotional Jesu dulcis memoria, one of only two four-voice pieces in the collection. Another outstanding piece is the simply but subtly constructed two-voice Parce Christus spes reorum. The tunes Resonet in laudibus, In dulci jubilo and Tempus adest floridum add a definite Christmassy feel, and give this super-budget-price issue a real stocking-stuffer potential. The singers (Carys-Anne Lane, Rebecca Outram, Helen Groves and Caroline Trevor) are deserving of individual mention for a fine achievement.

Palladian Ensemble

A Choice Collection
Anonymous Old Simon the King Baltzar John come kiss me now J Banister Divisions on a Ground Blow Ground in G minor Butler Variations on Callino Casturame Locke Broken Consorts – D; C Matteis Setts of Ayres – Book 2: No 10, Preludio in ostinatione; No 12, Andamento malincolico; Book 3: No 7, Preludio-Prestissimo; No 8, Sarabanda-Adagio; No 9, Gavotta con divisioni; Book 4: No 27, Bizzararrie sopra un basso malinconico; No 28, Aria amorosa-Adagio Weldon Sett of Ayres in D
Palladian Ensemble (Pamela Thorby rec Rachel Podger vn Susanne Heinrich va da gamba William Carter gtr/theorbo)
Linn Records CKD041 (66 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1995 ◉

The 'choice collection' of 'music of Purcell's London' is of items such as might have been heard at the concerts of then contemporary music held on the premises of Thomas Britton, the 'small coal man', surely one of the most unlikely patrons in the history of music. It is in effect complementary to the Palladian Ensemble's earlier disc ('An Excess of Pleasure', also on Linn Records, CKD010), with another liberal helping of Matteis's various and sometimes agreeably bizarre Ayres and two more of Locke's Broken Consorts, which we find absorbing rather than confusing – as Charles II did.

With this release John Weldon and Henry Butler are newcomers to the catalogue, the former with what amounts to an irregularly ordered suite, and the latter with splendid variations on Callino Casturame in which Susanne Heinrich plays most expressively – and proves that chords played on the viola da gamba do not have to sound like teeth being pulled. Old Simon the King could not have been heard in Purcell's own time in this anonymous setting from The division flute of 1706, but the tune was printed as early as 1652. If you are not already aware of the high quality of the instrumental playing, stylish musicality and imaginative approach of the Palladian Ensemble, then this disc provides a good opportunity to find out what you have been missing.

Held by the Ears
Anonymous Straloch Lute Book – Canaries; A Scots Tune; Gallus Tom; Whip my Toudie; Hench Me Mallie Gray. Rowallan manuscript – Gypsies Lilt. Divisions on a Ground in G. Roger of Coverly Divisions in D minor Matteis Sett of Ayres. Sett of Ayres in D. Sett of Ayres in D minor. Sett of Ayres in G. Sett of Ayres for the Guitar. Aria ad Imitatione della Trombetta Traditional The lass of Peatie's Mill. Dumbarton's Drums. Bonny Christie. When she came Ben she bobed. Gilliam Callum. A new Tune
Palladian Ensemble (Pamela Thorby rec Rachel Podger vn Susanne Heinrich va da gamba William Carter gtr/lte/theorbo)
Linn Records CKD126 (73 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1999-2000 ◉

A bit of an oddity. The Palladian Ensemble's very first recording featured a number of pieces by Nicola Matteis – the Italian violinist and guitarist who walked to London in the 1670s and caused a stir with his playing – and for a while they used one of them almost as a signature tune. Now they have drawn more items from his huge ragbag of short pieces for two melody instruments and continuo – Ayres with a whole range of titles, from 'Adagio' and 'Jigg' to 'Aria Burlesca con molto bizzarie' and 'Giga Al Genio Turcheschо' – and made them the main subject of their latest disc, borrowing its title from Roger North's description of Matteis's playing: 'flaming as I have seen him, in a good humour he hath held the company by the ears ... for more than an hour together'.

Acknowledging, however, that Matteis's inspiration is a little hit-and-miss for a whole disc, they have mixed them with a few anonymous instrumental solos of the time and, most intriguingly, their own arrangements of Scottish folk tunes. In his insert-note, Palladian lutenist William Carter admits that the connection between Matteis and musical matters Caledonian is 'indefinable', but the ear picks it up all right, and the combination works well.

Not the least enjoyable feature is the convincingly folkish accent with which the Scottish tunes are performed; Pamela Thorby's soulful bends and grace notes are like an echo of the glens, while Rachel Podger's violin playing is as lithe as a fly-fisher's rod. As for Matteis, well, he is no genius, but his music can be fun, and besides, it does not seem to take much to get these players' imaginations going. After all, the Palladian Ensemble are a group whose quick-witted inventiveness and almost supernatural internal rapport never fail to delight, whatever the music.

Paolo Pandolfo viol/va da gamba

A Solo
Abel Arpeggiata. Adagio. Allegro Anonymous Aria della Monicha (arr Pandolfo) Bach Solo Cello Suite No 4 in E flat BWV1010 Corkine The Punckes delight. Come live with me Hume Captaine Humes Musicall Humors – A Pavane Machy Prélude Marais Pièces de viole – Les voix humaines; Le badinage Ortiz Trattado de glosas – Pass'emezzo antico; Pass'emezzo moderno Pandolfo A Solo Sainte-Colombe le fils Aire en rondeau Sumarte Daphne. Whoope doe me no harm
Paolo Pandolfo viol/va da gamba
Glossa GCD920403 (77 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1997 ●●

Seventy-seven minutes of music for unaccompanied viola da gamba? Well yes, and every second of it is a pleasure in the company of one of the most brilliant of the instrument's current exponents. Using three different instruments Paolo Pandolfo takes us on a well-planned journey through gamba-playing Europe, starting with Italy and proceeding through early 17th-century England, mid-Baroque France, 18th-century Germany and the brink of the classical style, and finally back to Italy for a composition of his own. Throughout, not a single accompanying instrument is heard, a feat Pandolfo makes light of by the simple expedient of dispensing with continuo parts where they exist and by exploiting to the full the gamba's ability to play chords. Surely few listeners will be prepared, however, for the variety of rich sonorities and colourings to be encountered in this recital, or for Pandolfo's expressive versatility; the Italian pieces are virtuosic and vigorous, the French ones refined and deeply personal, and the bold transcription of Bach's Fourth Solo Cello Suite, though it loses out in cleanness to cello performances, full of strength and energy. Most striking of all, however, is the English group: the soldier-musician, Tobias Hume has never sounded so touching as in the spread pizzicatos which open his Pavan, while Richard Sumarte's Daphne has a hauntingly wistful folk quality which comes as an almost eerie surprise. Pandolfo has put a lot of himself into this recording, not least in his own piece, which carries a touching personal dedication. The result is a beautiful and moving recital.

Parley of Instruments

A High-Priz'd Noise – 🅿
Violin Music for Charles I
A Ferrabosco II Pavan and Alman R Johnson II The Prince's Alman and Coranto. Air in G minor. The Temporiser a 4. The Witty Wanton. Fantasia in G minor W Lawes Alman in D 'for the Violins of Two Trebles'. Airs for consort Nau Suite in F. Ballet in F. Pavan and Galliard in D minor Notari Variations on the 'Ruggiero' Webster Four Consort pieces
Parley of Instruments Renaissance Violin Band / Peter Holman
Hyperion CDA66806 (67 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1995 ●

This recording is less concerned with musical monuments, such as Lawes's large consorts, than in rejuvenating a repertoire which might have accompanied the King's recreation, or been the actual means for it. Most of the works are written in dance forms, though we can be reasonably certain that the majority would not have been conceived for accompanying dance. The violin's specific association with active dance music – except of a more base and popular kind – goes only so far, as the 17th century progresses. Of the courtly violin bands it is the more expansive one in the Presence Chamber (performing for public rather than private space at court) which has the most instantly appealing repertory – the opening set of works by Robert Johnson and the wonderful Pavan and Alman by Alphonso Ferrabosco II; the latter composition, although timeless in its exquisite part-writing, is given new life with a period violin band. Both pieces gleam with an engaging transparency, a compelling sound for those who have yet to hear this ensemble. The Pavan is magically forthcoming in its gracious lines with just a hint of melancholy, a poignant fragility which gives way to the noble rapture of the Alman. The Parley's 14-strong group of four violins, six violas and four bass violins is marshalled with a degree of characterisation that gleefully extricates this music from dusty library shelves.

Hille Perl va da gamba

Doulce Memoire – Glosas, Passeggiati and Diminutions around 1600 🅿
Bonnizzi Jouissance Dalla Casa Doulce memoire Monteverdi Sinfonia Notari Ben qui si mostra il ciel Ortiz Passamezzo antico. Recercada de canto llano. Recercada sobre tenore. Recercada quarta sobre Doulce memoire. Doulce memoire Rogniono Susanne ung jour. Anchor che c'ol partire Rore Ben qui si mostra il ciel Selma Vestiva hi colli Terzi Jouissance Trabaci Ancidetemi pur Willaert Jouissance vous donneray
Hille Perl va da gamba with Robert Sagasser, Martina Rothbauer, Paulina van Laarhoven va da gambas Matthias Müller va da gamba/violone Andrew Lawrence-King double hp Lee Santana lte/gtr/chittarone
Deutsche Harmonia Mundi 05472 77502-2 Ⓕ
(63 minutes: DDD). Recorded 1998 ●

Viol watchers will know what to expect from a disc with this subtitle. In particular, they will be anticipating a selection of Diego Ortiz's recercadas from his Trattado de glosas, in which he demonstrated the many and various ways in which an instrumental player can improvise on existing dance tunes and contrapuntal vocal compositions. Less predictable is the rest of this beautifully planned and executed CD, on which Hille Perl and her friends from two of the groups in which she plays – The Harp Consort and Sirius Viols – play instrumental arrangements and derivations from works by some of the great names of late Renaissance vocal music. The practices employed range from simply playing a madrigal on viols (as in Rore's Ben qui si mostra) to one viol playing an elaborate, newly composed part while a lute plays the rest straight (Selma's version of Palestrina's Vestiva hi colli), to the 'alla bastarda' method in which the viol plays florid decorations on as many parts as it can as it leaps from one to the other (Notari's version of the Rore).

If this sounds like it might be a vehicle for empty instrumental virtuosity, think again. Perl and co perform all these pieces from the heart, feeling every note and never losing touch with the music's origins. Helped by a warm and lovingly nurtured tone, Perl's playing is wonderfully expressive without ever losing its poise or subtlety, while her accompanists are impeccably sensitive and supportive. For good measure, Andrew Lawrence-King's solo, a Trabaci madrigal arrangement, is a perfect demonstration of the unique eloquence of the Baroque harp. As is her wont, Perl provides her own quirky booklet-notes which, while not terrifically informative, are guaranteed to raise a smile and add to the disc's glow of amity. A richly civilising release – exquisitely played, handsomely recorded and elegantly presented – but then that is no more than you would expect from someone who shares her family home with music, cats and chickens, now is it?

Patricia Petibon sop

M-A Charpentier David et Jonathas, H490 🅿
– At-on jamais souffert une plus rude peine? Grandval Rien du tout Lully Armide, LWV71 – Prélude; Enfin il est en ma puissance; Le perfide Renaud me fuit Rameau Les indes galantes – Viens, hymen; Régnez, plaisirs et jeux; Chaconne. Platée – Soleil, fuis de ces lieux; Formons les plus brillants concerts; Aux langueurs d'Apollon. Les fêtes de l'Hymen et de l'Amour – Volez, plaisirs, célébrez ce beau jour; Entrée des Égyptiens; L'amant que j'adore; Amour, lance tes traits
Patricia Petibon sop Les Folies Françoises / Patrick Cohën-Akenine
Virgin Veritas VC5 45481-2 (64 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 2001 ●

Recital discs of French Baroque opera arias are rare – this CD proves a wonderful way to sample them. Patricia Petibon, a product of Les Arts Florissants' soprano factory, appears on the front and back cover looking like a wood nymph and it is fair to say that her singing does reveal a playful personality. Nowhere is this more evident, or more appropriate, than in 'Formons les plus brillants concerts', Folly's air from Rameau's Platée, mocking the trials of love in somewhat unhinged laughter and insouciant little squeals. Elsewhere Petibon shows a winsome side in some of those sweet little airs which stop the show in Rameau's comédie-ballets, numbers such as the disc's irresistible opener, 'Soleil, fuis de ces lieux'. In these her voice is pretty, agile and beguiling, just as it should be, but when it comes to real drama she hits the spot no less unerringly. Despite a close recorded sound, it is Petibon's imaginative approach to text and characterisation that makes this unusual disc a triumph.

Renaissance Camerata of Carcas

Baroque Music of Latin America
Anonymous El día de corpus. Esta noche yo baila Araujo Recordad jilguerillos. A recoger pasiones inhumanas Bocanegra Hanapachap cussicuinin Cascante Villancico al nascimiento Castellanos Ausente del alma mía. Si de rosa el nombre Araujo Ceruti A cantar un villancico Fernandes Tleycantimo choquilya. Dame albricia Mano Anton. Mano Fasiquiyo J Herrera A la fuente de bienes J Mathias Quien sale aqueste día disfraçado De la Mota Dios y Josef apuestan Torrejón y Velasco Cuando el bien que adoro. A este sol peregrino. Desvelado dueño mío Velásquez Niño mío

The Renaissance Camerata of Caracas / Isabel Palacios
Dorian DOR93199 (65 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included. Recorded 1992

This disc is a reissue of a recording made in 1992, but previously only available on a very limited basis: Dorian has performed a sterling service in making it available to a wider public. Most of the music recorded is barely known, even among specialists, and it certainly cannot be described as over-recorded. The Camerata is a group which reinforces the stereotypical idea that Latin American musicians are more successful when working with lively, rhythmical music, and less so when they are required to sing sustained melodic lines. A number of the pieces recorded here come across as somewhat bland because of this limitation, as one may hear in the somewhat under-characterised Ausente del alma by Rafael Antonio Castellanos, but in general the group has the measure of the style. Mathias's sarabande-like Quien sale aqueste and Castellanos's Si de rosa el nombre prove this amply, and the performance of Torrejón y Velasco's justly renowned A este sol peregrino is quite lovely.

The rather oddly Baroque performance of the Quechua hymn Hanapachap cussicuinin heralds a change in a section balanced in favour of earlier repertoire, specifically villancicos by Gaspar Fernandes, an extraordinarily original composer of Portuguese origin who worked in Guatemala and Mexico. The Camerata give us three works by him, all done utterly idiomatically (especially the slinky rendition of Mano Fasiquiyo), though Dame albricia Mano Anton really is just a little too fast, however expert the singers are in getting their tongues round the text at that speed. The programme finishes with a brilliant rendition of the anonymous Esta noche yo baila, which reminds one of nothing so much as mambo. Recommended, but don't forget your dancing shoes.

Jordi Savall va da gamba/viol

La Folia, 1490-1701
Anonymous Folia: Rodrigo Martínez Cabezón Folia: Para quien crié cabellos Corelli Violin Sonata in D minor, Op 5 No 12, 'La folia' Enzina Folia: Hoy comamos y bebamos Marais Deuxième Livre de Pièces de viole – Couplets de folies
Martín y Coll Diferencias sobre las folias
Ortiz Ricercadas sobre la Folia – IV; VIII
Jordi Savall va da gamba/viol Rolf Lislevand gtr/theorbo/vilhuela Michael Behringer org/hpd Arianna Savall triple hp Bruno Cocset vc Pedro Estevan perc Adela Gonzalez-Campa castanets
Alia Vox AV9805 (55 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1998

This release charts two centuries of musical madness in the shape of the folia (which can mean anything from 'wild amusement' to 'insanity'). The earliest references to the folia are to a Portuguese dance of popular origin that by the end of the 15th century had become still more popular in court circles. Its distinctively minimalist harmonic patterns, but on only four different chords, make it a perfect vehicle for instrumental jam sessions in the Renaissance and it is this improvisatory tradition that is explored by Savall and his team. Virtuosity is a sine qua non in the folia business and Savall, of course, is an established virtuoso. Allied to this, is his ability to make the music seem as spontaneous and full of fantasy as the improvisatory practice from which the endless chameleon-like variations by Corelli and Marais sprang.

These works are well known to all aficionados of Baroque music; less familiar is the set of diferencias by the Spanish composer Antonio Martín y Coll, although he is almost equally inventive. Here Savall chooses to emphasise the Iberian origin of the folia with an accompaniment of triple harp, Baroque guitar and castanets which he describes as being 'in keeping with the characteristic Iberian sound of the period.' Such a sound world may well have more to do with late 20th-century preconceptions than historical fact and the castanets seem lost and uncertain in these elaborate, sophisticated variations.

Savall's re-creations of the early folia are much freer still; and, his version of Rodrigo Martínez, a dance-song from the Cancionero Musical de Palacio, is almost outrageously exuberant in its percussionisation. Still, Savall's attempt to trace an important improvisatory tradition is fascinating and it is a tribute to his musical imagination that the ear never tires of those four chords in almost an hour's music. Recommended – despite Savall's improvised humming!

Andreas Scholl counterten

English Folksongs and Lute Songs
Anonymous King Henry. Kemp's jig. Go from my window Campion I care not for these ladies. My love hath vow'd. My sweetest Lesbia Dowland The First Booke of Songs or Ayres – Can she excuse my wrongs?; All ye, whom love or fortune.
The Second Booke of Songs or Ayres – I saw my Lady weepe; Flow my teares fall from your springs; Sorrow sorrow stay, lend true repentant tears.
The Third and Last Booke of Songs or Ayres – Behold a wonder heere; Me, me and none but me; Say, loue, if euer thou did'st find. The Lady Russell's pavan. Go from my window Traditional The three ravens. O waly, waly. I will give my love an apple. Barbara Allen. Lord Rendall
Andreas Scholl counterten Andreas Martin lte
Harmonia Mundi HMC90 1603 (69 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts included. Recorded 1996

'Interval' is not a word that has ever been inserted into a song recital on CD, but it would be quite a good idea if it were. In this instance the stopping-point hardly needs to be marked, as it is so natural and obvious; and that is one of the many attractions of this well-designed programme. A group of songs by Dowland, followed by a piece for lute, makes a substantial first section; then come two folk-songs, another couple by 'Anon.' and a lively, well-contrasted selection of songs by Campion. The second half starts with more Dowland, a satisfyingly representative sequence constituting the heart of the programme, with more folk-songs to conclude. The mixture is a charming one and delightfully well ordered.

The performances are equally pleasing. Perhaps it is inevitable that an English listener should still think of Alfred Deller in this repertoire, but here the name comes to mind also because of a distinct similarity of timbre. At the resonant centre of Scholl's voice is a passage of lower middle notes where the vibrancy is strong and rich in a way very comparable to Deller's. Stylistically, on the other hand, Scholl has developed an art that is quite independent of his great original: his manner is more forthright, less responsive to the spiritual intensity of Sorrow sorrow stay, though still capable of introducing that 'poisoned' intonation which Deller and his successors would bring to All ye, whom love or fortune hath betrayed. As regards balance, the lute is placed as the accompanying instrument rather than as one of an equal, intimate partnership; still, all is clear, and the lute solos are played with fine technical skill.

Christopher Stembridge hpd/org

Consonanze stravaganti 🅿
Neapolitan music for organ, harpsichord and chromatic harpsichord
Christopher Stembridge hpd/org
Ars Musici AM1207-2 (68 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1987 ●●

This magnificent recital charts a relatively unexplored corner of Italian music, played on rare Italian instruments (including exotic plucked keyboards with 'split' chromatic keys). The opening Capriccio by Giovanni de Macque is alone worth the price of admission. Christopher Stembridge draws more than other interpreters from this wonderful repertory.

Tafelmusik

Bach Cantata No 42, Am Abend aber desselbigen Sabbats – Sinfonia in D Handel Solomon, HWV67 – Sinfonia, 'Arrival of the Queen of Sheba'. Harp Concerto in B flat major, Op 4 No 6[d] Locatelli Concerto grosso in F minor, 'Christmas Concerto', Op 1 No 8 A Marcello Oboe Concerto in D minor[a] Purcell Abdelazer, Z570 – Suite Vivaldi Concerto grosso in A minor, RV522[b]. Double Concerto for Two Cellos and Strings, RV531[c]
[a]John Abberger ob [b]Geneviève Gilardeau vn [c]Christina Mahler, [c]Allen Whear vcs [d]Maxine Eilander hp
Tafelmusik / [b]Jeanne Lamon vn
Analekta AN29811 (78 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded c2001 ●

Tafelmusik are everything that a good Baroque band should be, stylistically, in unanimity of ensemble and in instrumental skill. Two items are arguably alone worth the price of the disc, even if you have other versions. John Abberger's account of Marcello's Oboe Concerto is one of the best there is, and the famous Adagio is beautifully embellished. Pride of place must, however, go to the final work on the disc, Vivaldi's Concerto for two cellos. The Larghetto e spiritoso is among the most beautiful of Vivaldi's slow movements. Christina Mahler and Allen Whear embellish it beguilingly. While Anner Bylsma and Anthony Pleeth on L'Oiseau Lyre add sighing appoggiaturas and enhancing vibrato, Mahler and Whear focus rather on graceful diminutions. These are both performances 'to die for' – but first 'to live with'. If this CD were an LP it would be worn out by now! It's up to you to decide how badly you want to acquire a disc that is high-quality throughout and with some sublime performances.

Taverner Consort

Una Stravaganza dei Medici – The 1589 Florentine Intermedii
Intermedio I – The Harmony of the Spheres (music by Archilei or de'Cavalieri, Malvezzi). Intermedio II – The Singing Contest between the Pierides and the Muses (Marenzio). Intermedio III – Apollo Slays the Monster at Delphi (Marenzio). Intermedio IV – The Golden Age is Foretold (Caccini, Malvezzi, de'Bardi). Intermedio V – Arion and the Dolphins (Malvezzi, Fantini, Peri). Intermedio VI – Jove's Gift to Mortals of Rhythm and Harmony (Malvezzi, de'Cavalieri)
Tessa Bonner, Emily van Evera, Emma Kirkby sops Nigel Rogers ten Taverner Consort; Taverner Choir; Taverner Players / Andrew Parrott 🏅
HMV Classics HMV5 73863-2 (70 minutes: DDD) Ⓑ
Recorded 1988 ●●

These Intermedii of 1589 are the only complete examples of this genre of courtly entertainment to have found their way into print. They are not opera, and are closer in some ways to the modern-day musical: this staged music was designed for performance between the acts of a play, and to be at best incidental to its action. Of the three recordings made in the last 20 years, this one (first issued in 1988 and deleted shortly after) is the best. Compared with the Huelgas Ensemble's version a couple of years ago, Parrott scores higher on just about every count. More so than van Nevel, he captures the sense of festivity that is the music's raison d'être (it was part of a lavish wedding celebration). The word 'lavish' well describes his instrumental ensemble, by far the richer and more powerful of the two. Van Nevel's trademark shuffling of voices and instruments hardly succeeds in redressing the balance. And to a more conspicuous degree than van Nevel's, Parrott's cast of singers seems to relish the vocal pyrotechnics demanded of it by composer-singers such as Caccini and Peri.

There is another reason to prefer this reissue, which may have been prompted by the appearance of the Sony set: for value-for-money, it wins hands down. The only drawback is the loss of the hugely informative insert-notes included in the original issue, but that is a small price to pay. This is one of the Taverner Consort's most memorable recordings.

Les Voix Humaines

The Spirite of Musicke
Coprario Songs of Mourning – 'Tis now dead night; To the World A Ferrabosco II Like hermit poore. So Beautie on the waters stood (all arr Little/Napper) Hume Captaine Humes Poeticall Musicke – What greater grief; Sweet ayre; Cease leaden slumber. The First Part of Ayres – Touch me sweetly; The Spirite of Musicke Jenkins Suite in A minor
C Simpson Divisions on a Ground – F; G
Suzie Le Blanc sop Les Voix Humaines
(Susie Napper, Margaret Little vas da gamba)
ATMA ACD22136 (63 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts included. Recorded 1997

Over the years they have been playing together as Les Voix Humaines, the bass viol players Susie Napper and Margaret Little have developed a command of their repertory and a rapport that few other ensembles have approached. They express themselves clearly as individuals but play together with perfect precision. In Tobias Hume's flirtatious Touch me sweetly they banter playfully, their control of articulation and dynamics superb; so too in Hume's evocation of a bandora by two bass viols in The Spirite of Musicke. To Simpson's divisions for two bass viols they bring a depth of expression not often heard, but they seem especially in their element in John Jenkins's sublimely crafted Suite in A minor. Not content with the existing music for their instruments, they have taken inspiration from Hume, who composed the deeply affecting Cease leaden slumber and What greater grief for voice and two bass viols, and arranged the lute accompaniment of songs by the Jacobean violists Giovanni Coprario and Alfonso Ferrabosco II for two viols. The result is most often ravishing, although the melancholic simplicity of the vocal line of Coprario's 'Tis now dead night is overpowered by busy viols. Elsewhere, in Coprario's To the World and Ferrabosco's So Beautie on the waters stood, their arrangements are more successful. They are joined on this recording by Suzie Le Blanc whose clear, bell-like upper register suits the music ideally. She seems completely at one with the texts and their settings, investing just the right emotional weight. The viol players rely perhaps too much for this repertory on a swelled bow stroke which can add too much colour to a delicate accompaniment or unsteady a dance. All in all, though, this is an appealing recording which you will want to listen to again and again.

Westminster Cathedral Choir

Exultate Deo – Masterpieces of Sacred Polyphony
Allegri Miserere mei[a] Byrd Ave verum corpus. Civitas sancti tui. Haec dies G Gabrieli Jubilate Deo I[b] Lotti Crucifixus[b] Monteverdi Cantate Domino[b] Palestrina Exsultate Deo. Sicut cervus desiderat Parsons Ave Maria Philips Ascendit Deus. Ave verum corpus Christi Tallis Salvator mundi, salva nos I. O nata lux de lumine. In manus tuas Tye Omnes gentes, plaudite Viadana Exultate justi[b] Victoria O quam gloriosum [a]Alexander Semprini, [a]Francis Faux, [a]Raymond Winterflood trebs [a]Adrian Peacock bass Westminster Cathedral Choir / James O'Donnell with [b]Joseph Cullen org
Hyperion CDA66850 (72 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Texts and translations included. Recorded 1995

This anthology lives up to its billing: even those with only a nodding acquaintance with Renaissance polyphony will probably have heard a fair proportion of these pieces. Most of them are mainstays, not just of the Catholic liturgical repertory, but of most major Anglican choral establishments. The selection of pieces here is wide-ranging and varied. More importantly, where pieces are especially famous, the standard of performance gives the competition a fair run for its money. There is the thrill in Allegri's Miserere of a boy treble (here, Alexander Semprini) hitting that high C – and no quibbles about the phrasing of the adjoining notes, either. The choir sound very well focused, and the unanimity of the trebles is admirable (though at times a slightly more veiled tone might have better suited the text). Where required, it sounds very bright and forward, despite a recording that could have been a bit withdrawn with a more timid choir.

Sophie Yates hpd

Romanesca – Italian Harpsichord Works 🅿
Frescobaldi Partite – XIV, sopra l'aria della Romanesca; VI, sopra l'aria di Follia; Cento Partite, sopra Passacagli. Toccata in A minor
Gesualdo Canzon francese del Principe
Macque Seconde stravaganze Merulo Susanne un jour Picchi Toccata. Intavolatura di Balli d'Arpicordo – Ballo ongaro; Ballo alla polacha; Todesca; Ballo ditto il Picchi Rossi Toccata settima Valente Tenore del passo e mezzo con sei mutanze
Sophie Yates hpd
Chandos Chaconne CHAN0601 (64 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded 1996

Fleetness of finger, on which these early Italians set much store, is a requisite for performing this repertoire; and in this Sophie Yates is eminently accomplished. Another requisite is to convey a sense that the music is being improvised on the spur of the moment. This is especially so in toccatas but it also applies in the outwardly stricter form of partitas or variations, the commonest structural basis for keyboard music of the time. Yates provides a firm framework for Frescobaldi's variations on the Folia ground bass, but while neatly pointing its rhythmic quirks allows herself greater freedom in the set on the Romanesca; and she clearly relishes the harmonic twists in the variations on passacaglias. Valente's variations on the Passamezzo antico are different in kind, more overtly dance-like and lively, with a strongly marked rhythmic accompaniment. There are two canzonas – keyboard versions of songs – here: a highly elaborate working by Merulo of Lasso's famous Susanne un jour, and an extraordinary piece by Gesualdo which contains some weird and wonderful chromatic trills.

Not the least of the pleasures here is Yates's vigorous playing of four tuneful dances by Frescobaldi's contemporary, Picchi: how this dazzling Toccata of his found its way into the Fitzwilliam Virginal Book is a minor mystery.

DVD & Video

Classical GOOD
CD
GUIDE
2004

ORCHESTRAL

Mendelssohn

Symphony No 3 in A minor, 'Scottish', Op 56. Violin Concerto in E minor, Op 64[a]. A Midsummer Night's Dream – Overture; Wedding March
[a]Frank-Michael Erben vn Leipzig Gewandhaus Orchestra / Kurt Masur
Video director Bob Coles
Arthaus Musik DVD 100 030 Ⓕ
(82 minutes: Region 0). Recorded live in 1998

This concert's visual interest rests squarely on the players and conductor – its setting is the anodyne modern Gewandhaus auditorium. Fortunately, the director does not resort to Karajanesque gimmickry to compensate.

Masur is a pleasure to watch as he shapes his interpretations, underpinned by the orchestra's clear, airy textures, which come over with proper clarity in the Dolby Digital Stereo soundtrack. His Dream Overture has plenty of fleet-footed magic, and needs only more of a smile. Erben, the orchestra's leader, is a fluent, committed but unspectacular soloist in the concerto, and is none the worse for that; it's refreshing to hear Mendelssohn speaking for himself.

The Scottish Symphony is a fine performance, capturing the first movement's melancholy with great grace, and there's plenty of energy in the Scherzo and final movement. Only the concluding Wedding March seems rather short of vitality. Visually natural if not especially exciting, it is an engaging programme, and represents a decent body of music for the money.

Sir Thomas Beecham cond

Beecham in Chicago 1
Haydn Symphony No 102 in B flat Mozart Symphony No 38 in D, 'Prague', K504
Chicago Symphony Orchestra / Sir Thomas Beecham
NVC Arts 📼 8573-84095-3 (49 minutes: ADD) Ⓕ
Recorded live in 1960 ●

Beecham in Chicago 2
Delius Florida Suite – By the River Handel Love in Bath – Suite Mendelssohn The Hebrides, Op 26 Saint-Saëns Le rouet d'Omphale, Op 31
Chicago Symphony Orchestra / Sir Thomas Beecham
NVC Arts 📼 8573-84096-3 (48 minutes: ADD) Ⓕ
Recorded live in 1960 ●

Here is a rare quarry of film footage which can hardly fail to delight anyone who is interested in Beecham, the Chicago Symphony, or even the music itself. The concerts were specially staged for television in the Grand Ballroom of the Sheraton Towers in Chicago in March 1960. It was Beecham's last visit to the United States (he died the following March). He was in his 80th year, not in the best of health but seemingly in fine fettle. He conducts without a score, mostly standing, though after an electrifying performance of the first movement of Mozart's Prague Symphony, he draws up a chair from where he presides as only he could preside over an exquisite account of the slow movement. The videos are billed as being the only extant footage of Beecham 'in colour'. This seems a sceptical selling-point until you see the videos. The fact is, black-and-white is fine for film, but TV concerts aren't films, they're reportage; and black-and-white reportage has a nasty habit of making relatively recent events seem strangely distant in time. This colour footage makes Beecham seem like our contemporary.

The actual picture quality is no more than fair. The original two-inch Kinescope tapes disappeared after someone dubbed them on to one-inch analogue tape in the 1980s. But it is perfectly watchable; expertly re-engineered, with good colour rendition and excellent sound. The non-concert hall staging also means that we have some tolerably enterprising camera-work, with Beecham himself, the Chicago strings, and two of the principal wind players, oboist Ray Still and flautist Donald Peck, getting the lion's share of the director's attention.

What a phenomenal ensemble the Chicago Symphony was in 1960! It is fascinating to watch the players at work here, connoisseurs of their craft in the presence of a Connoisseur-in-Chief. As the first violins bow their repeated Ds at the start of the Prague Symphony's Allegro, the camera catches a Humphrey Bogart look-alike on the second desk eyeing Beecham and gazing across the assembled banks of fiddles with a look that says 'Hey guys, listen to us!'. Later, as the coda kicks in with a typically Beechamesque blend of elegance and drive, the same player shoots a huge grin across to his neighbour.

Fritz Reiner was Chicago's principal conductor at the time, he of the bull-frog gaze and minuscule beat. Beecham has a rather larger beat, unerringly precise, almost never legato, and with a habit of galvanising the rhythm with a movement of the stick which is often a

Region, Picture format & Sound coding

DVDs are encoded so that certain discs will play only on players in specific areas. Regions: 1=USA; 2=Europe, Japan; 3=South East Asia; 4=Latin America, Australia, New Zealand; 5=Russia, the rest of Asia (excluding China), Africa; Region 0=discs will play in any region. Most Region 2 players can be modified to play Region 1 discs, and multi-region machines are available. Most can translate the US NTSC signal for European PAL TV sets. A few cannot, only playing on common multi-standard TVs. Picture format: usually either 4:3 (standard TV screen ratio) or 16:9 (widescreen 'letterbox' format). Sound: 2.0=stereo sound; 5.1=surround (five-channel) sound. Readers are advised to check with their dealers and instruction manuals. For more information visit www.dvdbuyingguide.com millisecond quicker than expected. The left hand is sparingly used, though the left fist, raised and briefly brandished, is always impressive. Even in his 80th year, Beecham's stance is erect, almost bandmasterish, his hands and body moving in a way that is delicate and exact. His other principal weapon is his eyes: dark eyes emitting a gaze that is sometimes roguish, occasionally Mephistophelean, always penetrating and intent.

Both programmes are more or less equally enjoyable. The 'fun' programme is just that. The readings will be familiar to seasoned collectors of 78s and LPs but the performances are new-minted: the Hebrides Overture clear, alert and full of fantasy, the Saint-Saëns incisive and exquisitely polished, Love in Bath, as always, outrageously enjoyable. (What leading conductor nowadays would dare conduct Le rouet d'Omphale in public or draw up his own arrangement of the music of some much-revered baroque master?) Merely to watch Beecham's eyes while listening to his unfolding of music from Delius's Florida Suite is to understand why (and in what ways) this music was so precious to him.

Beecham usually travelled with his own meticulously annotated orchestral parts. Love in Bath would certainly have been played from his parts. And by the look of pleasure on the wind players' faces during these superlative performances of Haydn's Symphony No 102 and Mozart's Prague, these might have been, too.

A joyous discovery, then, which goes some way beyond the 'unique concerts in colour' tag. It is doubtful if there are better images anywhere of the old sorcerer at work than the ones here.

Mstislav Rostropovich vc

Mussorgsky Songs and Dances of Death[a]
Prokofiev Symphony-Concerto in E minor, Op 125[b]
Shostakovich Cello Concerto No 1 in E flat, Op 107[c]
Mstislav Rostropovich [bc]vc/[a]pf [a]Galina Vishnevskaya sop [c]London Symphony Orchestra / Charles Groves; [b]Monte Carlo National Opera Orchestra / Okko Kamu Video directors [a]Gérard Herzog, [b]Denise Billon, [c]Walter Todds
EMI/IMG Artists DVD 490120-9 (85 minutes: Ⓕ
Picture format 4:3 [c]black-and-white, Sound 1.0, Region 0). Recorded in [a]1970, [b]1970, [c]1961

When he came to know Shostakovich personally in the 1950s Rostopovich wanted to ask him for a cello concerto. Fortunately he never did: the composer's wife later told him that only if he did not ask or mention his wish might Shostakovich produce something out of the musical hat. She was right and in 1959 the great cellist's restraint was rewarded. Here, from two years later, is a performance which Rostropovich gave of the First Concerto in London. The Prokofiev Symphony-Concerto, which reputedly inspired Shostakovich's Concerto, is an altogether mellower lyrical work but has an extraordinary Scherzo which Rostropovich plays with such staggering virtuosity that the audience here breaks into applause at the end of the movement. Throughout both works the camera frequently focuses closely on the solo cello, which makes Rostropovich's playing enormously involving, intensely so in the Prokofiev where the live communication is even more marked. It is good to have colour here, which always seems to add an extra degree of vividness. For a bonus, Galina Vishnevskaya joins her husband (at the piano) in a splendidly characterised performance of Mussorgsky's dark song cycle. But it is for the sheer presence of this remarkable cello playing that this DVD is indispensable.

Sir Georg Solti cond

The Making of a Maestro
Video director Peter Maniura
ArtHaus Musik DVD 100 238 (93 minutes: Ⓕ
Picture format 16:9, Sound 2.0, Region 2 & 5)
Filmed 1997

Peter Maniura's beautifully photographed Omnibus documentary, completed only days before Solti's death in 1997, makes no attempt at critical assessment, but nor is it mere hagiography. Wisely, Maniura charts Solti's remarkable story, often allowing him literally to speak for himself; and the result is all the more impressive. There is little actual performance footage, but many rehearsal sequences from his postwar Munich days to his last concerts, with the occasional tantalising glimpse of his heavily marked scores; his recordings permeate the soundtrack. What comes through most clearly is that the dynamism which, for better or worse, drove both his career and his interpretations – 'like playing for Mephisto,' as one Chicago player admiringly puts it – stemmed not from mere showmanship but from an extraordinarily passionate love and knowledge of music. His initial unpopularity at Covent Garden is not glossed over (although the anti-semitism which sometimes fuelled it is); but his achievement in raising the house to genuinely international standards is properly acknowledged. So, alongside his starry profile-raising for the Chicago Symphony, are both his daunting perfectionism and the kindness and humanity, especially towards young artists, it often concealed. Documentaries are often hard to recommend for repeated viewing. Not this one.

Frederick Delius

Song of Summer
Max Adrian Frederick Delius; Maureen Pryor Jelka Delius; Christopher Gable Eric Fenby; David Collings Percy Grainger; Geraldine Sherman Girl next door; Elizabeth Ercy Maid; Roger Worrod Bruder Film director Ken Russell

BFI DVD BFIVD518 Ⓕ
(72 minutes: Picture format 4:3, Sound 1.0, Region 0). Includes director's commentary and on-screen biography. Made for the BBC in 1968

Ken Russell's extraordinarily compelling and intensely moving Song of Summer remains, quite simply, a joy from start to finish, arguably the controversial director's finest achievement to date and a landmark in the history of British television. Based on Eric Fenby's 1936 memoir Delius as I knew him (Faber & Faber: 1981), Song of Summer tells of Delius's syphilis-wracked final years and the remarkable relationship that develops between the blind, crippled composer and his gifted, tirelessly devoted amanuensis. The screenplay (by Russell and Fenby) fairly teems with intelligent observation, darkly mischievous humour and compassionate warmth. Indeed, the film's chief fascination lies in its subtle exploration of the profoundly contradictory nature of Delius's life and art ('I can't reconcile such hardness with such lovely music,' says Fenby, just after Delius's wife, Jelka, has filled him in on her unfaithful husband's wanton sexual exploits from years past).

Memorable characterisations abound. As the by turns irascible yet vulnerable composer, Max Adrian gives a performance of towering eloquence. Christopher Gable, too, is totally believable in the role of Fenby, while Maureen Pryor makes a touching Jelka. There's also a boisterous cameo from David Collings as Percy Grainger. Dick Best's luminous black-and-white photography comes up with pristine freshness, and Russell himself provides a typically candid and personable commentary. All told, a real treat.

Edward Elgar

'Elgar' – A film by Ken Russell (1962)
Peter Brett Mr Elgar Rowena Gregory Mrs Elgar
George McGrath Sir Edward Elgar
Ken Russell Himself
British Film Institute DVD BFIVD524 Ⓕ
(71 minutes: Black & White, Picture format 4:3, Sound 1.0, Region 2). Includes commentary by Ken Russell and Michael Kennedy, historical footage and photo gallery ●●●

Originally screened in November 1962 as the 100th programme within the BBC's groundbreaking Monitor series, Ken Russell's 'Elgar' has lost none of its power to entrance, stimulate and provoke. If you never caught the film on television, prepare to be bowled over by the perfect marriage of music and pictures, especially during the scenes shot on and around Elgar's beloved Malvern Hills (against which the purposeful stride of the Introduction and Allegro for strings acts as a marvellously apt backdrop). Any minor factual anomalies along the way pale into insignificance when set against film-making of such poetry, wit and imagination. Pioneering, too, in as much as it was made at a time when Elgar's reputation was at a comparatively low ebb. Indelible images come thick and fast: Elgar's burgeoning love for Alice is exquisitely conveyed by the delicate interplay of four hands on the keyboard performing the piano-duet arrangement of Salut d'amour; the jaw-dropping transformation of Worcestershire Beacon into the cross-topped hill at Calvary (to the strains of 'Sanctus fortis' from Gerontius); or the composer on his bicycle rushing through the dappled woodland and heather. The result is an undisputed classic of British television.

Extras include rare home-film footage of the Three Choirs Festivals of 1929, 1930 and 1932 (during which we also see Elgar relaxing at home), as well as a November 1931 Pathétone movie-reel of the 74-year-old composer conducting the LSO in Land of Hope and Glory. Not to be missed.

Sir William Walton

At the Haunted End of the Day
– A Film by Tony Palmer
Film director Tony Palmer
Includes performances by Julian Bream, Iona Brown, Yvonne Kenny, Ralph Kirshbaum, Yehudi Menuhin, Simon Preston, Simon Rattle, John Shirley-Quirk
Decca DVD 074 150-9DH Ⓕ
(99 minutes: NTSC, Picture format: 4:3, Sound 2.0, Region 0). Originally broadcast in 1981 ●

This extended television profile of William Walton is among the most moving ever made of a composer and makes a very welcome commercial appearance on DVD. The approach is both direct and evocative, starting with Walton himself nearing 80 and plainly rather frail musing at the keyboard of the piano in his work room. That brings several of the wrily humorous obiter dicta from him with which the film is delightfully dotted, prompting also an immediate and heartfelt tribute to both the man and his music from Laurence Olivier, for whom he wrote his finest film music.

The story of his career, with its extraordinary sequence of lucky breaks, is then told for the most part chronologically. We get evocative shots of his home town Oldham and the house where he was born, Oxford, and later London and Amalfi in Italy. The impact of Belshazzar's Feast is fully brought out, not least thanks to Simon Rattle's conducting of excerpts in his first major television contribution, though Walton himself dismisses the very first performance in Leeds in 1931 as 'pretty bloody'.

The film was made within a couple of years of Walton's death in 1983, and reflects in places his melancholy thoughts on death and how little he felt he had achieved. Even so, the impact of the film is anything but depressing, with the effervescent personality of Susana taking over towards the end who, as she says, 'was produced specially to take care of William'. A unique career, vividly re-created.

Last Night of the Proms

Arne Rule, Britannia! (arr Sargent)[a]
Bach Fantasia and fugue in C minor, BWV537 (arr Elgar). Violin Sonata No 1 in G minor, BWV1001[c]
Delius The Walk to the Paradise Garden Elgar Pomp and Circumstance March No 1 in D, Op 39 Grainger Tribute to Foster[b] Mozart Violin Concerto No 4 in D, K218[a] Parry Jerusalem (arr Elgar)
Shostakovich Jazz Suite No 2 (arr McBurney)
R Strauss Salome – Dance of the Seven Veils; Final Scene[a] Wood Fantasia on British Sea-Songs
[a]Jane Eaglen, [b]Janice Watson sops [b]Ann Murray mez [b]Toby Spence, [b]Robert Tear tens [b]Neal Davies bass [c]Hilary Hahn vn
BBC Symphony Chorus and Orchestra / Sir Andrew Davis
BBC DVD WMDVD8001-9 (167 minutes: Ⓕ
Picture format 4:3, Sound 5.1, Region 0).
Recorded live in 2000. Includes interviews with Sir Andrew Davis, Jane Eaglen and Hilary Hahn

Watching an old Last Night of the Proms programme on DVD might seem like eating half-warmed-up soup, but the year 2000 had some special claims – not just marking the Millennium but in saying goodbye to Sir Andrew Davis as chief conductor of the BBC Symphony Orchestra. Jane Eaglen is the soprano, producing the most opulent tone in the final scene from Salome, a commanding figure in every way. Needless to say, she also rises magnificently to the challenge of Rule Britannia in the final junketing, resplendent in a gown of royal blue and crimson with tiara to match, studded – as the camera reveals – with a diamanté Union Jack.

If that is far less showy than the gowns worn by some of her predecessors, or even Bryn Terfel's rugby jersey, the point follows that the patriotic flag-waving and the final items are less a demonstration of jingoism than plain exuberance over music-making as represented in this greatest of the world's music festivals.

Special facilities on the DVD consist of options on subtitles and an ability to limit the playing to music only, without introductions.

New Year's Concerts

New Year's Concert in Vienna, 1989
J Strauss I Radetzky March, Op 228
J Strauss II Accelerationen, Op 234. An der schönen, blauen Donau, Op 314. Bauern-Polka, Op 276. Bei uns z'Haus, Op 361. Eljen a Magyar!, Op 332. Die Fledermaus – Overture. Frühlingsstimmen, Op 410. Im Krapfenwaldl, Op 336. Künstlerleben, Op 316. Ritter Pasman, Op 441 Josef Strauss Jokey, Op 278. Die Libelle, Op 204. Moulinet, Op 57. Plappermäulchen, Op 245
J Strauss II/Josef Strauss Pizzicato Polka
Vienna Philharmonic Orchestra / Carlos Kleiber
Video director Brian Large
DG DVD 073 024-9GH (95 minutes: Ⓕ
Picture format 4:3, Sound 2.0, Region 0)
Recorded live in 1989

The New Year's concert that stands out head and shoulders above the rest for its glorious musicality is Carlos Kleiber's 1989 concert. What a joy, therefore, to have it available on DVD. With that unusually expressive left hand (and mouth!), Kleiber proved himself the master of those slight inflections which, when as perfectly judged as here, make all the difference to Strauss family interpretations. The result is quite the finest performances of the waltzes Accelerationen, Künstlerleben and, not least, Bei uns z'Haus you could expect to hear. The last named is perhaps best suited of all to Kleiber's graceful style. As always, Brian Large's intimate knowledge of the scores enables him to provide close-ups of individual instrumental solos and, in this instance, such fun aspects as the orchestra's vocal contributions.

Not least of the glories of this DVD issue is the omission of the dancing that is an intrusive feature of the television transmissions. If you want to experience the very finest in Johann Strauss interpretation then this is it.

New Year's Concert, 2002
Hellmesberger II Danse diabolique
J Strauss Beliebte Annen-Polka, Op 137. Radetzky March, Op 228 J Strauss II Zivio!, Op 456. Carnevalsbotschafter, Op 270. Künsterleben, Op 316. Die Fledermaus – Overture. Perpetuum mobile, Op 257. Elisen-Polka, Op 151. Wiener Blut, Op 354. Tik-Tak Polka, Op 365. An der schönen blauen Donau, Op 314 Josef Strauss Die Schwätzerin, Op 144. Vorwärts!, Op 127. Arm in Arm, Op 215. Aquarellen-Polka, Op 258. Die Libelle, Op 204. Plappermäulchen, Op 245. Im Fluge, Op 230
Vienna Philharmonic Orchestra / Seiji Ozawa
Video director Brian Large
TDK Mediactive DVD DV-WPNK02 Ⓕ
(141 minutes: Picture format 16:9, Sound 2.0, 5.0 and DTS 5.0, Region 0). Recorded live in 2002

What an advantage DVD provides in comparison with the Philips CD of this concert. Quite apart from the bonus of visual presentation, the DVD offers five numbers omitted from the CD – two of them by Josef Strauss celebrating his 175th anniversary, the polkas Arm in Arm and Im Pfluge and three Johann Strauss numbers, the Carnevalsbotschafter waltz, the Beliebte Annen polka and Perpetuum mobile.

Ozawa is at his most relaxed, naturally idiomatic in his often extreme use of idiomatic pauses and of warm rubato, reflected in his decision not to use a baton, relying instead on the inborn expressiveness of the Viennese players to mould in perfect time. In the Fledermaus Overture, for example, the switches of tempo and rhythm and the affectionate phrasing are immaculately achieved with a mere flutter of the fingers from the conductor.

Even by the standards of this celebratory occasion this was an unusually warm and happy event thanks to Ozawa. And more than anyone since Karajan in his one New Year concert, Ozawa controls the clapping of the audience, limiting it to the proper passages in the final Radetzky March. The direction can't be faulted.

Various Artists

The Art of Conducting – Great Conductors of the Past
Sir John Barbirolli, Sir Thomas Beecham, Leonard Bernstein, Fritz Busch, Wilhelm Furtwängler, Herbert von Karajan, Otto Klemperer, Serge Koussevitzky, Arthur Nikisch, Fritz Reiner, Leopold Stokowski, Richard Strauss, George Szell, Arturo Toscanini, Bruno Walter, Felix Weingartner in rehearsal and performance
Teldec/Warner Music Vision Ⓕ DVD
0927-42667-2 (164 minutes: Picture format 4:3, Sound 2.0, Region 2, 3, 4, 5 and 6) ●●

When the first instalment of 'The Art of Conducting', based on a BBC television series, originally appeared on VHS and LaserDisc it was rightly acclaimed as a revelation. Not surprisingly, it won many prizes, including the 1995 Gramophone Award for Video. It may not have solved the mystery of exactly how great conductors communicate to players, often despite flawed techniques, but seeing the differences between Klemperer, Furtwängler, Toscanini, Stokowski and Koussevitzky in quick succession made for a thrilling experience. On DVD the experience is even more intense, and quite apart from being more convenient to access, it offers added material.

In addition to the illuminating commentaries from a wide range of artists, there are now more extended interviews with four artists, offered as a supplement to the main menu: Elisabeth Schwarzkopf, Hugh Bean, Suvi Raj Grubb (EMI recording producer for Klemperer and others) and Isaac Stern.

The very opening launches into the sequence with a fascinating kaleidoscope of brief clips of four conductors tackling the first movement of Beethoven's Fifth Symphony – Toscanini, Karajan, Klemperer and Szell, with instant commentary from John Eliot Gardiner, Isaac Stern and Jack Brymer. After that the clips tend to be a little more extended. The oldest is from 1913, a silent film of Arthur Nikisch conducting unidentified music, with Oliver Knussen noting how he holds his arms high so that the players have to see his eyes. Longer excerpts are very much the exception, notably Felix Weingartner in Paris in 1932 conducting Weber's Die Freischütz overture and Fritz Busch in the same year in Dresden conducting the second half of Wagner's Tannhäuser overture.

Those are both fascinating, with the economy of Weingartner's technique matching his refreshing directness as an interpreter, but inevitably it is frustrating when the camera switches to the players for extended periods instead of concentrating on the conductor.

A really compelling issue.

The Art of Violin
A film by Bruno Monsaingeon
Includes excerpts from performances by Ivry Gitlis, Mischa Elman, Zino Francescatti, George Enescu, Boris Goldstein, Ida Haendel, Josef Hassid, Jascha Heifetz, Fritz Kreisler, Leonid Kogan, Laurent Korcia, Alexander Markov, Yehudi Menuhin, Nathan Milstein, Ginette Neveu, David Oistrakh, Michael Rabin, Ruggiero Ricci, Isaac Stern, Henryk Szeryng, Joseph Szigeti, Jacques Thibaud, and Eugène Ysaÿe
NVC DVD 8573-85801-2 (113 minutes: Region 0) Ⓕ
[●●] 8573-85801-3 (PAL) ●●

The best of Bruno Monsaingeon's video productions marry a film maker's technical expertise with a musician's instinct, and in the context of The Art of Violin both qualities register more or less from the start. Within minutes, Itzhak Perlman is telling us that most of the 'old-world' violinists 'sounded different' from each other. No sooner has he spoken than Monsaingeon provides the evidence. He splices us from a 1958 David Oistrakh film of Mendelssohn's Concerto to Isaac Stern in 1957, Christian Ferras in 1963, Fritz Kreisler in 1927 (a charming shot of silent film with the 1935 commercial recording as its soundtrack) and Nathan Milstein in 1966. Then there's Yehudi Menuhin in 1979 and 1947 (under Dorati), Arthur Grumiaux in 1961, Jascha Heifetz in 1959 (the RCA recording with overlaid film footage) and, perhaps most interesting of all, Mischa Elman in London in 1962. And yes, they do all sound different – very different.

But what is the technical mechanism that turns these interpretative differences into sound? The interview evidence is as detailed as one could wish given the breadth of Monsaingeon's targeted audience. The principal commentators are Perlman, Ivry Gitlis, Ida Haendel, Menuhin and Hilary Hahn, all of them inspired to frequent eloquence and unflagging enthusiasm.

There are in effect two films. The first, 'The Devil's Instrument', contains some of the most interesting archive footage; the second, 'Transcending the Violin', veers more in the direction of specific instruments and overall musicianship. Menuhin stresses the self-destructive properties of soulless virtuosity and it's appropriate that the closing footage should give us the last section of Bach's Chaconne as played by Menuhin at Gstaad in 1972 – quite marvellously too. Earlier on, he offers an extraordinarily beautiful account of 'Erbarme dich' from Bach's St Matthew Passion, recorded in Hollywood in 1947.

Prior to Menuhin's Bach, we experience the piercing gaze and musical intensity of Ginette Neveu as she burns the closing pages of Chausson's Poème onto our memories. We see Szigeti dispatch Schubert's The Bee framed by apposite commentary from Haendel, Perlman and Gitlis. Elman's preoccupation with sound for sound's sake comes in for some stick, though the evidence is ravishing and his own claims that the new generation owes a certain debt to the old, is both honest and justified.

A brief prodigy section gives us the 12-year-old Ruggiero Ricci playing part of Vieuxtemps' Fifth Concerto – amazing stuff – and the long-forgotten Boris Goldstein performing Kreisler.

We see rare silent film of Ysaÿe and valuable sound film of Jacques Thibaud, Leonid Kogan and Henryk Szeryng. And there are the surprises. For example, Perlman's attitude to Szeryng (and to a lesser extent Hilary Hahn's), which is guardedly negative. Both view Szeryng as a beautiful player who's lacking in character. Perlman puts it on the line. 'He sounds like everybody,' he says. 'If I'm listening, and I don't know who it is...I think, oh, it must be Szeryng'. Still, it's doubtful there's a better stereo version of Schumann's Violin Concerto than Szeryng's.

Nathan Milstein is seen and heard, cool as ever, in Bach and Paganini. Gitlis challenges the myth of Heifetz's coldness by asking us to close our eyes as we listen, while Perlman compares Heifetz's beautiful sound in concert with his more aggressive, close-up recordings. We also see snippets of a 'staged' Heifetz recital, which has long circulated in private hands and where a bunch of college kids race through the campus shouting 'Hey guys, Heifetz is giving a free concert!'

Violin lovers will be in seventh heaven, but what's perhaps more important is that non-specialists should enjoy the experience just as much. The Art of Violin is utterly unmissable.

INSTRUMENTAL

Alfred Brendel pf

Haydn Piano Sonata in E flat, HobXVI/49
Mozart Piano Sonata No 14 in C minor, K457
Schubert Impromptu in G flat, D899 No 3
Alfred Brendel pf
Opus Arte/BBC ② DVD OA0811D Ⓕ
(155 minutes: Picture format 16:9, Sound 2.0, Region 0). DVD2 includes the documentary 'Man and Mask', rehearsal conversations with Sir Simon Rattle and poetry readings ●

The main element in this double-disc tribute is the 70-minute portrait, 'Man and Mask', directed for television by Mark Kidel. This takes the great pianist to many of the haunts of his early life, as well as showing him relaxing at home in Hampstead. His first recital came in Graz in 1948, and received glowing notices, when he concentrated on works with fugues, including the Brahms Handel Variations and a sonata of his own which boasted a double-fugue at the end. In Vienna he recalls making his first recording for Vox, a coupling of Balakirev's Islamey, Mussorgsky's Pictures at an Exhibition and Stravinsky's Petrushka suite. Later, on the day after his début at Queen Elizabeth Hall, he had offers of recording contracts from three major companies. All this is amplified by clips from archive performances and a separate half-hour conversation with Sir Simon Rattle in rehearsal for Beethoven's Piano Concertos Nos 2 and 4, offering fascinating revelations from both pianist and conductor.

On the second disc comes a recital recorded at The Maltings, Snape, crowning this revealing issue with masterly performances of three of Brendel's favourite works.

Leonid Kogan vn

Bach Partita No 2 in D minor – Sarabande[a] Beethoven Violin Concerto in D, Op 61[b] Brahms Hungarian Dance No 17 in F sharp minor (arr Heifetz)[c] Debussy Beau soir (arr Heifetz)[d] Falla Suite populaire espagnole (arr Kochánski)[e] Handel Violin Sonata No 9 in E, HWV373[f] Leclair Sonata No 3 for 2 Violins in C, Op 3[g] Paganini Cantabile (arr Kinsky/ Rothschild)[h] Shostakovich Preludes, Op 34 (arr Tsiganov)[i] – No 10 in C sharp minor; No 15 in D flat; No 16 in B flat minor; No 24 in D minor
Leonid Kogan, [g]Elizaveta Gilels-Kogan vns [dfi]Andrei Mytnik, [ceh]Naum Walter pfs [b]ORTF National Orchestra / Louis Froment
EMI/IMG Artists DVD 492834-9 (96 minutes: Ⓕ Picture format 4:3, Sound mono, Black and White, Region 0). Recorded live in [dfi]1962, [abi]1966, [ceh]1968 and [g]1963 ●

EMI's Classic Archive series offers vivid portraits of great musicians of the 20th century thanks to archive films patiently collected from a variety of sources, mainly BBC Television in London and ORTF in Paris.

The Kogan DVD impresses for having as its centrepiece his superb, concentrated reading of the Beethoven Violin Concerto, matching in intensity the readings we already know on CD, even though the mono sound from ORTF is on the dry side. The tender simplicity of the coda in the first movement leads to one of the most dedicated readings of the slow movement this reviewer can remember, with the lovely third theme bringing a breathtaking pianissimo, and with the finale light and dancing.

The other shorter items all demonstrate the flawless intonation and tonal control which always marked Kogan's playing. Specially valuable is the Sonata for two violins by Leclair, with Kogan's wife, Elisaveta, a perfectly matched partner. Even though Kogan's grim look of thunder as he plays is not always reassuring, this makes a fine visual reminder of an artist overshadowed to an unfair degree by his 16-years-older Soviet colleague, David Oistrakh.

Sviatoslav Richter pf

Richter – The Enigma
A documentary film by Bruno Monsaingeon
Warner Music Vision/NVC Arts DVD 3984-23029-2 Ⓕ
(154 minutes: Regions 2-6) ●●

Is Richter really an enigma? This epic documentary was originally titled 'Richter l'insoumis', meaning anything from 'irrepressible' to 'indomitable'. Constructed around interviews with Richter, his wife, and fellow luminaries such as Glenn Gould and Rubinstein, it reveals him as both – the precocious genius who never practised scales and chords, but instead launched into Chopin Etudes, and who lists his three masters as his father, his mentor Neuhaus and Wagner. And in his last years Monsaingeon's camera captures, not the grim scowl and prognathous jaw, but an urbane egotist whose deceptively naive charm must have helped him sail through life under the Soviet regime he despised, surviving to shed gentle vitriol on contemporaries. Prokofiev patronised him as 'fit for Rachmaninov'; Richter played at his funeral – 'Rachmaninov!' he adds, with a lethal twinkle. Among other victims are Oistrakh and Karajan.

Against this anecdotal ambience, though, are set some 50 performance extracts which capture the electrifying reality of Richter's playing – his vast repertoire, including Berg's Kammer-konzert, and the penetrating, expressive intensity which offsets his virtuoso eloquence and massive dynamics. It is not too fanciful to see him possessed and shaped by the score, especially in his native repertoire. Even those who are not primarily piano aficionados can hardly fail to respond. We even glimpse him happily playing Liszt – man and music – in a cameo film role.

Unlike videotape, DVD allows each excerpt to be accessed swiftly via its 'chapter', and its image quality enhances even elderly material. The worst flaw of this fascinating montage is that, though skilfully edited, it leaves one desperate to hear every single piece complete.

Mstislav Rostropovich vc

Beethoven Cello Sonatas[a]
Mendelssohn Variations sérieuses, Op 54[b]
[a]Mstislav Rostropovich vc
[ab]Sviatoslav Richter pf
EMI / IMG Artists DVD 492848-9 (129 minutes: Ⓕ
Picture format 4:3, Sound 5.1, Black and White,
Region 0). Recorded in [a]1964 and [b]1966 ●

Even duos as celebrated as Casals and Horszowski or Piatigorsky and Solomon, hardly achieved such flawless unanimity as Rostropovich and Richter do in both the letter and spirit of Beethoven's Cello Sonatas.

Rostropovich and Richter play, quite simply, as one, taking us and their lucky audience on a journey that is a marvel of sustained mastery and eloquence. Hear their hushed magic at the start of the First Sonata's development (truly dolce and piano) or their knockabout sense of fun in the final Rondo and you will be made aware that nothing can quell their joy in recreation, in every aspect of Beethoven's sensitivity and exuberance. Throughout, textures are kept meticulously clean, rhythms as spine-tingling as they are buoyant, and this despite often precipitate tempi that could so easily throw lesser players.

The two last sonatas where Beethoven, always the intrepid visionary and explorer, steps into the unknown, are given with a matchless sense of their verve and sobriety and never more so than in the closing fugue (a near relative of the fugue from the Hammerklavier piano sonata) of Op 102. As a substantial bonus, EMI adds a 1966 Moscow performance of Mendelssohn's Variations sérieuses where Richter's thunder and serenity would surely have taken the composer's urbane nature by surprise.

The recital is well recorded. Highly recommended as a vital reminder of two great artists.

Titans of the Keyboard

Beethoven Piano Sonata No 3 in C minor, Op 2 No 3[a] Brahms Intermezzo in E minor, Op 116 No 5[b]
Prokofiev Piano Sonata No 2 in D minor, Op 14[b]
Ravel Jeux d'eau[b]. Miroirs – Alborada del gracioso[b]
[a]Arturo Benedetti Michelangeli,
[b]Sviatoslav Richter pfs
Video Artists International DVD VAIDVD4213 Ⓕ
(65 minutes: Picture format 4:3, Sound 1.0, Region 0).
Recorded for television by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation in [a]1970, [b]1964

Heaven for piano-buffs. Here is Michelangeli on top form in one of Beethoven's grandest early sonatas, his magnificent technique displayed in breathtaking close-up. What marvellous preparation and address for each phrase; what fabulous transfer of weight through the knuckles and wrists; what amazingly economical body language, and yet what stunning effect when the noble bearing occasionally allows itself a fraction more freedom.

Richter is altogether more uptight. Hunched over the keyboard and prone to lurching from the left shoulder or jutting his jaw, he is nevertheless just as able to channel the essence of the music through his mind to his fingers. His Brahms is gravely austere, his Prokofiev grimly determined. His rattle through Jeux d'eau may be hard to warm to, but his razor-sharp 'Alborada' is harder to resist. The slow movement of Richter's Prokofiev is shot initially from floor-level, memorably capturing his facial intensity.

Only five-and-a-half years separate these two Canadian telecasts. Yet there is a world of difference between the black-and-white picture and blistery sound-quality for Richter and the rich colour and bell-like tonal clarity accorded to Michelangeli. There is even an apparently unrepairable 10-second electronic glitch in the first movement of the Prokofiev, to which the DVD insert candidly alerts us.

Although it is certainly not true that this is 'the only extant visual document of Michelangeli playing Beethoven', that does not make this DVD any less inspiring. Pure heaven.

VOCAL

JS Bach

St John Passion, BWV245
Gerd Türk ten Evangelist Stephen MacLeod bass Christus Midori Suzuki sop Robin Blaze counterten Chiyuki Urano bass-bar;
Bach Collegium Japan / Masaaki Suzuki
Video director Shokichi Amano
TDK DVD DV-BAJPN (120 minutes: Picture format 16:9, Sound 2.0, Region 0) Ⓕ
Recorded in 2000

With his outstanding series of choral recordings for BIS, Masaaki Suzuki has rightly established a high reputation for stylish interpretations of Bach. As he explains in a brief interview which comes as a supplement on this DVD, he had intensive training in period performance in Holland. Certainly, his vigour and sensitivity in Bach defies any idea that Japanese culture has in any way been a barrier in authentically interpreting Bach. Suzuki recorded the St John Passion for BIS back in 1998. This DVD version marks a special event, a performance recorded on the very anniversary – July 28, 2000 – of Bach's birth 250 years earlier. In essence the interpretation remains the same, with fresh, light textures and generally brisk speeds which yet allow for depth of feeling, and the sense of occasion is irresistible.

Gerd Türk gives an achingly beautiful performance, with his profound involvement all the more evident when seen as well as heard. Türk also sings the tenor arias, and the other soloists also have double roles, singing in the 16-strong choir before stepping forward when needed as soloists: Stephen MacLeod singing Christus as well as the bass arias, Chiyuki Urano singing Pilate and other incidental solos, Robin Blaze a superb alto soloist and the ravishing Midori Suzuki in the two soprano arias.

First-rate sound too. The leaflet offers minimal information and no text, though one can plumb into subtitles, either the original German or the English translation, but not both together.

Berlioz

Awards 2001

La damnation de Faust, Op 24
Vesselina Kasarova mez Paul Groves ten Willard White bass Andreas Macco bass San Sebastian People's Choral Society; Tölz Boys' Choir; Staatskapelle Berlin / Sylvain Cambreling
Stage directors Alex Olle, Carlos Pedrissa
Video director Alexandre Tarta
ArtHaus Musik DVD 100 003 (146 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded live in 1999 ●●●

This production was the sensation of the 1999 Salzburg Festival, and this riveting DVD captures most of the excitement that must have been felt at the time in the evocative Felsenreitschule. The staging is a joint venture. The spectacular scenic realisation of Berlioz's 'Légende dramatique' originated with the Spanish theatre troupe La Fura dels Baus; the staging itself is the work of Olle and Pedrissa. The sets and costumes were conceived by the Spanish sculptor Jaume Piensa.

The results were described in the press as 'extreme theatre' – and one can see why when viewing the virtuoso treatment of the vast stage area. It is dominated by a transparent cylinder which serves all sorts of purposes, depicting in particular the soul-searching struggles of Faust and Méphistophélès; while the complex choral movements and an elaborate lighting plot are all carried out without a hint of a hitch.

The producer certainly managed to inspire all the participants to heights of interpretative skill. Cambreling and the Berlin Staatskapelle perform with discipline and fire, wanting only that extra dedicated vision evinced by Colin Davis and the LSO on CD. Kasarova and Willard White, stage beings to their fingertips, sing and act with total conviction. Kasarova is the vulnerable, insecure, beautiful Marguerite to the life, every gesture and facial expression supporting her intense reading of the glorious music Berlioz wrote for her. Her vision of the great Romance is idiosyncratic to say the least, but a triumph of erotic communication on its own account, a cross between Callas and Ewing at their most individual. White is commanding throughout – at once demonic, cynical, relaxed and satirical, his huge voice absolutely in command of the role. Groves is not quite on his colleagues' level of accomplishment, but acts and sings with the awe and sense of identity-seeking which this production requires of its Faust. The sound, as on most DVDs, is exemplary. Highly recommended.

Haydn

Die Schöpfung, HobXXI/2
Edith Mathis sop Christoph Prégardien ten René Pape bass Lucerne Festival Chorus; Scottish Chamber Orchestra / Peter Schreier
Video Director Elisabeth Birke-Malzer
ArtHaus Musik DVD 100 040 (109 minutes: Region 0).
Recorded live in 1992 Ⓕ

This enjoyable performance of Haydn's supreme choral masterpiece was recorded at the Lucerne Festival of 1992. It takes place in the appropriate setting of an evocative baroque church, which is not identified either on screen or in the (inadequate) supporting booklet. The small choir sings with attentive enthusiasm, and is weak only in the tenor department. The Scottish Chamber Orchestra players cover themselves in glory both as an ensemble and individually, and they are adept at imposing period practice on modern instruments.

Schreier's direction is relaxed and benevolent, yet his keen ear for rhythmic precision and flexibility in phrasing is constantly felt.

The soloists are all Swiss. The veteran Mathis remains a paragon of classical style, phrasing her arias and contributions to the ensembles with firm tone and finely honed phrasing. Prégardien's liquid, silvery tenor and sensitive way with words is just what the tenor part calls for. The young Pape's sonorous bass and confident delivery are ideal; he and Mathis make an appealing Adam and Eve in Part 3.

The video direction is discreet, and prompt in homing in on the right performer at the right time. The sound picture is as spacious and well defined as one expects from the new medium, which – of course – allows us to hear the whole, long work without a break.

Schubert

Winterreise, D911
Ian Bostridge ten Julius Drake pf
Stage director David Alden
Video director Peter West
NVC Arts DVD 8573-83780-2 Ⓕ
(124 minutes: Regions 2-6); 📼 8573-83780-3 (124 minutes: PAL). Includes documentary on the making of the film. Recorded 1997 ●

Winterreise lives on its own without any staging. The initially dubious Bostridge and Drake make that point at the start of the feature, their faces filling with dismay as Alden describes his seemingly hare-brained ideas to turn it into a melodrama about a crazed protagonist. It is implied in what follows that singer and pianist gained confidence in what Alden had in mind, while the director came to respect Bostridge's intelligence and dramatic gifts. Indeed, the project would have collapsed had not the tenor the ability to sear the soul as much visually as aurally. His piercing eyes, striking looks and age make him an ideal candidate for such an experiment.

Inspired by a disused mental asylum in north London, Alden and his designer create a huge, empty space, as desolate as the abandoned asylum itself, in which the beginning and end of the cycle are enacted. In-between, Bostridge is projected on to a white background, arrestingly so in the case of 'Die Krähe', where the singer is viewed from above by the crow with Bostridge spread-eagled on the floor below, an astonishing image, mirroring the bird's menace. Among the unforgettable shots are the picture of the forlorn shattered figure in 'Die Nebensonnen', which Alden and Bostridge agree has a mystic, religious aura to it, the lone protagonist seen at a distance in 'Das Wirtshaus', the singer seated back to back with the pianist in 'Mut'. Doubts arise only with the introduction during two songs of the unfaithful girl and her family, disturbing the vision of the lonely sufferer.

At the heart of the video lies Bostridge's silvery tone, special, highly individual intensity of utterance and identification with the man's desperate plight. Drake supports him with playing of equal insight. The sound, fairly closely miked, is excellent; the camerawork highly imaginative.

Schumann

Schumann Dichterliebe, Op 48[a]
Schoenberg Pierrot lunaire, Op 21[b]
Christine Schäfer sop [a]Natascha Osterkorn pf
[b]Ensemble InterContemporain, Paris / Pierre Boulez
Film director Oliver Herrmann
ArtHaus Musik DVD 100 330 (126 minutes: Ⓕ
Picture format 16:9, Sound 2.0, Region 0) ●

Schäfer's virtuosity as a singing actress is exploited to the full in this highly imaginative double-bill. In the Schumann, work and artists are placed in a new and controversial context, with the production of the film intermingled with the performance of the cycle. In an intimate, sparsely lit nightclub in Berlin-Mitte, re-creating the salon atmosphere of a performance in the composer's time, the cycle is sung by the soprano in a tight-fitting black outfit while moving around the room in sympathy with evocations of each song's mood. The idea is to make the emotions of the work part of everyday life. Schäfer's reading of the songs is at once simple and intense, devoid entirely of sentimentality. She is supported in the performance and rehearsal by the equally fascinating personality of the pianist Natascha Osterkorn.

As far as one can tell, the singer is not dubbed here. But in the 'staging' of Pierrot lunaire, she is undoubtedly miming to her own Sprechgesang. With clown-like make-up, Schäfer wanders Kafka-like, through a kaleidoscopic range of situations and venues – including an abattoir, railway station and a medical lecture theatre – vaguely appropriate to the texts. In this, one of the soprano's best-known roles, she excels in declaiming the text with meaning, assisted by that past master of the genre, Pierre Boulez.

As a bonus, there is a 45-minute interview with the singer. This whole issue extends the boundaries of interpreting vocal works on DVD. A riveting experience.

Tavener

Fall and Resurrection
Patricia Rozario sop Michael Chance counterten
Martyn Hill ten Stephen Richardson bass BBC Singers; St Paul's Cathedral Choir; City of London Sinfonia / Richard Hickox
Video Director David Kremer
Etcetera DVD KTCD102 (96 minutes: Region 0, Ⓕ in PAL and NTSC versions). Recorded live in 2000 ●

This could be called Tavener's Creation, an oratorio-like account of the Biblical tale beginning with a representation of primordial Chaos. It takes the story much further than Haydn, through Adam's fall to the Incarnation, ending in a 'Cosmic Dance of the Resurrection'. But, like Haydn's, this too is a warmly mature work, epitomising its composer's style and personality.

The première at St Paul's Cathedral in January 2000, recorded here, was broadcast on TV and radio and released on CD by Chandos soon after. The disc was hailed in Gramophone as 'a wonderful document of an extraordinary evening of music'. There is little cause to disagree. Tavener's richly exotic textures, all founded on variations of an austere Byzantine chant and leavened with arcane instruments such as the shofar, or ram's horn, Tibetan temple bowls and Arabic kaval flutes, are beautifully evoked by Hickox and his forces, especially the vocal soloists.

The main question is whether DVD adds anything; and we believe it does. Visually, St Paul's, with its muted Byzantine influences, makes a splendid backdrop for this piece, which is infused with dramatic instrumental conflicts and clashes. Director David Kremer exploits the cathedral's spectacular aspects and perspectives, with discreet chiaroscuro lighting to underline these, and the Dolby 5.1 surround soundtrack accordingly strengthens the sense of spaciousness without seeming unduly unnatural. If you like Tavener, you need not hesitate.

Verdi

Requiem
Leontyne Price sop Fiorenza Cossotto mez
Luciano Pavarotti ten Nicolai Ghiaurov bass
La Scala, Milan Chorus and Orchestra / Herbert von Karajan
Film director Henri-Georges Clouzot
DG DVD 073 022-9GH (85 minutes: Ⓟ
Picture format 4:3, Sound 2.0, Region 0, NTSC)
Filmed in 1967 ●

This performance, though originally filmed by Clouzot at La Scala in 1967, first appeared on Laserdisc over a decade ago. Its transfer to DVD is very welcome, though in terms of picture quality (a bit hazy) and sound (restricted in range) it is beginning to show its age. The interpretation itself remains electrifying, easily Karajan's most successful reading in any medium. That is largely because he had here Italian, rather than Austro-German forces, and because he conducts the work more tautly, closer to Verdi's metronome markings than on any of his audio versions.

From start to finish the work moves in a single arc of musical cohesion and emotional tension, with the Italian chorus and orchestra singing and playing their hearts out for their distinguished conductor. The former's timbre has an Italian depth and bite only native singers seem able to provide and the strings truly sing their music. Leontyne Price, then at the peak of her powers, sings with a confidence tempered by feeling that is truly amazing, rising to histrionic heights in 'Libera me'; and Cossotto is only a mite behind her in both respects, her chest register and high notes astonishingly rich.

The slightly reticent, youthful Pavarotti is hardly recognisable as his later, effusive incarnation. He sings with the fidelity of line and tone, an ease of projection that marked all his early work. Ghiaurov is a bass soloist to die for, both in terms of his Rolls-Royce of a voice and the tremendous authority and emotional force he gives his part.

Clouzot's role in the proceedings now seems a trifle arbitrary, especially his over-concentration on Karajan: often when we want to the singers the cameras are focused on the conductor and the restless camera-work sometimes leaves one sorry that there wasn't an audience present to restrict the movement. Then there is a horribly abrupt end to the whole film. Still, as a historic document this is invaluable, quite apart from its musical virtues.

Requiem
Angela Gheorghiu sop Daniela Barcellona mez
Roberto Alagna ten Julian Konstantinov bass
Swedish Radio Chorus; Berlin Philharmonic Orchestra / Claudio Abbado
Video director Bob Coles
EMI DVD DVB4 92693-9 (89 minutes: Ⓟ
Picture format 16:9, Sound 2.0, 5.1 and DTS 5.1, Region 0). Recorded live at the Philharmonie, Berlin on January 25 and 27, 2001 ●

Seeing makes a deal of difference here. Though the CD issue of this performance was hugely enjoyable, this DVD enables one actually to see how the recently sick Abbado conducts the work as if it might be the last thing he does (happily not the case). He looks gaunt and tense: that translates into a heaven-seeking, searing account of the work, one to which everyone taking part readily responds. All the singers and players perform as though their lives depended on the outcome, and the results are simply electrifying.

Praise cannot be too high for the two professional choirs or for the Berlin Philharmonic who, technically and emotionally, give their all. The soloists also seem on a devotional high, singing with appropriately spiritual fervour so that incidental criticisms seem of no importance. Bob Coles's video direction is always in the right place at the right time, and the sound perspective is as excellent as on the CD.

Cecilia Bartoli

Mozart Al desio di chi t'adora, K577[a]. Bella mia fiamma...Resta, o cara, K528[a]. Vado, ma dove? oh Dei!, K583[a]. Voi avete un cor fedele, K217[a].
Le nozze di Figaro – Un moto di gioia, K579[a]
[a]Cecilia Bartoli mez
Vienna Concentus Musicus / Nikolaus Harnoncourt
Video director Brian Large
BBC/Opus Arte Ⓟ DVD OA0820D
(112 minutes: Picture format 16:9, Sound 2.0, 5.1 and DTS 5.1, Region 0)
Recorded live in 2001

No doubt this concert, recorded at Graz's elegant Stefaniensaal, is aimed primarily at Bartoli-philes, who will not be disappointed; it's predictably impressive, if a shade short. Mozart's so-called concert arias are formidable pieces, some actually alternatives for his own and other operas, but others, in particular Bella mia fiamma, created to challenge ambitious singers such as Josepha Duschek. Bartoli copes with characteristic aplomb, tossing off bravura trills and alarming roulades just effortfully enough not to be infuriating. The advantage of video, though, is that we can actually see the feeling with which she infuses even the most conventional sentiments, as vivid as her stage interpretations – though with her characteristically earthy twinkle never far off.

What's more, though, this is one of the best-recorded concerts, not just in its excellent picture and first-rate surround-sound, but in its video direction. Shooting in a lower, mellower light than usual, Brian Large captures the platform drama in vividly immediate close-up, without Karajan-style excesses. Thoroughly recommended.

Cecilia Bartoli Live in Italy

Bellini Vaga luna che inargenti. Malinconia, ninfa gentile. Ma rendi pur contento Berlioz Zaïde, Op 19 No 1 Bizet Carmen – Près des remparts de Séville Caccini Nuove musiche e nuova maniera de scriverle – Tu ch'hai le penne; Al fonte, al prato. Amarilli mia bella Donizetti La conocchia. Amore e morte. Me voglio fa'na casa G Giordani Caro mio ben Handel Il trionfo del Tempo e del Disinganno – Lascia la spina Montsalvatge Canciones negras – Canto negro Mozart Oiseaux, si tous les ans, K307/K284d. Un moto di gioia, K579. Le nozze di Figaro – Voi che sapete Rossini Mi lagnerò tacendo, Book 1 – No 2 in D; No 3 in D minor, 'Sorzico'; No 4 in E, 'Il risentimento'. Péchés de vieillesse, Book 1, 'Album per canto italiano' – Tirana alla spagnola rossinizatta; Book 2, 'Album français' – L'orpheline du Tyrol. Zelmira – Riedi al soglio. Canzonetta spagnuola Schubert Canzonen, D688 – Da quel sembiante appresi; Mio ben ricordati. La pastorella al Prato, D528 Viardot Havanaisea. Hai lulia Vivaldi Griselda – Agitata da due venti

Cecilia Bartoli mez Jean-Yves Thibaudet pf
Sonatori de la Gioiosa Marca
Video director Brian Large
Decca DVD 074 104-9DH (110 minutes: Ⓕ
Picture format 16:9, Sound 5.1, Regions 1-6)
Texts and translations included
Recorded live in 1998 ●

The concert was given in June 1998 and a CD followed promptly (Decca). An immediate question is whether those who already have the disc can be recommended to add the DVD to their collection. Certainly there are attractions: five more songs for a start (two of Schubert, one each of Mozart, Donizetti and Rossini), none of them exhibiting any particular reason for their original exclusion. The enchanting singer is a pleasure to watch (when she is not making peculiar movements of the neck and jaw), and it is wonderful to see how the energy she invests in every item seems to grow just as ordinary mortals begin to wilt.

The visual proximity of the singer on DVD highlights Bartoli's characteristic breathy tone when charm or pathos are sought. For some this is part of her attraction; others may find it tiresome. A better lesson lies in the ability she has to persuade us that her songs are not written down but are in the process of creation as she sings. There's a touch of genius in that.

Viva Vivaldi

Di due rai languir costante[a]. L'Olimpiade – Tra la follie…Siam navi all'onde algenti[a]. Tito Manlio – Non ti lusinghi la crudeltade[ab]. Ottone in Villa – Gelosia, tu già rendi l'alma mia[a]. Concerto for Sopranino Recorder and Strings in C, RV443[e]. Gloria in D, RV589 – Domine Deus, Agnus Dei[ac]. Juditha Triumphans, RV645 – Armatae face[a]. Zeffiretti, che sussurrate[acd]. Concerto for Lute and Two Violins, RV93[cde]. Farnace – Gelido in ogni vena[a]. Bajazet – Anch'il mar par che sommerga[a]. La fida ninfa – Dite, oimè[ae]. Griselda – Agitata da due venti[a]. Il giustino – Sventurata Navicella[a]

[a]Cecilia Bartoli mez with [b]Maria Grazia d'Alessio ob [c]Enrico Onofri, [d]Marco Bianchi vns
[e]Luca Pianca lte Il Giardino Armonico /
Giovanni Antonini rec
Video director Brian Large
Arthaus Musik DVD 100 228 (106 minutes: Picture Ⓕ
Format 16:9, Sound 2.0, Region 0) ●

This recital is typical of Bartoli's present form: the voice, in prime condition, can do just about anything its owner requires, both in terms of emotional projection and vocal pyrotechnics. As her present mission seems to be to convince us that Vivaldi was a great composer of operas, she here sings a very wide range of his arias with consummate ease of execution. Whether languishing in a piece from Tito Manlio, finding the tragic depths of the eponymous hero's big scena from Farnace, delighting in the fireworks of a jealous outburst from Ottone in Villa or – perhaps best of all – singing with lyrical beauty in the 'Domine Deus' from the composer's Gloria, Bartoli involves herself entirely with the mood in hand. Occasionally, the extent of her dynamic range seems exaggerated, as does her penchant for going into overdrive when executing fast divisions evinced in aspiration. You somtimes feel that a little less would mean so much more. But that is perhaps a downside to be borne for the sheer exciting exuberance of such an upfront performer.

The widescreen picture is perfect, the sound perspective excellent.

Teresa Berganza mez

Arias and songs by Donizetti, Falla, Guridi, Montsalvatge, Mozart, Obradors, Rossini, Schubert, J Strauss II, R Strauss and Wolf
Teresa Berganza mez Christa Ludwig mez Julius Patzak ten Dietrich Fischer-Dieskau bar Hans

Hotter bass-bar Felix Lavilla, Gerald Moore pfs
ORTF National Orchestra / Eugen Jochum; ORTF Philharmonic Orchestra / Serge Baudo
EMI/IMG Artists DVD 490118-9 (82 minutes: Picture format 4:3 black-and-white, Sound 1.0, Region 0). Texts included. Recorded 1959-67 Ⓕ ●●

What television channel today would dare to put out a regular live programme in which singer and accompanist give an unadorned Lieder recital? Yet in the late 1950s and early '60s that was just what Gerald Moore did for the BBC. This DVD, although mostly devoted to Teresa Berganza, has as a bonus Moore accompanying Dietrich Fischer-Dieskau, Hans Hotter, Julius Patzak and Christa Ludwig. The programme opens with Berganza in 1960, aged 25, singing Falla's Siete canciones populares españolas. She nearly always included at least some of these in her recitals. Here, and throughout, she is in pristine voice.

At the Aix Festival a few years later, Berganza has grown up. In a white silk strapless evening gown, she has become a confident diva. Although she was always classified as a mezzo, in the first of the Montsalvatge songs, her voice is poised in the soprano register. The quality of the film here is fuzzy and the camerawork less accomplished. However, this is Berganza very much as one remembers her. Berganza had a subtle sense of comedy and pathos. She is in magnificent form in this Aix concert: the security of line, tone and her use of restrained gestures are admirable throughout.

Sadly, the picture quality of the first Paris orchestral concert is variable, hazy in long-shot, not so bad in close up. The simplicity and sweetness of her expression in the first part of Cenerentola's big scene is lovely, then the final rondo brings a triumphant grin. It really is an advantage to see and hear Berganza: she lives each part, each poem.

Maria Callas

Maria Callas: A Documentary by John Ardoin
Franco Zefirelli narr
Bel Canto ▣ BCS0194 (117 minutes: ADD) Ⓜ
Recorded 1978. Includes bonus documentary, featuring Ardoin, Gobbi, Rescigno and Scotto, also recorded 1978 ●

The film begins with a newsreel of Callas's funeral in Paris, and it is not immediately apparent that it is to be more than an anthology of pious platitudes, oral and visual, assembled and marketed in the emotional floodtide following her then-recent death. Zefirelli is stationed in the auditorium of La Scala, where he can look toward the stage which 'still seems to reverberate with the sound of her voice'. Then we see Callas herself – but not herself, for this is her persona as gracious and glamorous purveyor of artistic truth. Then the witnesses arrive, starting with Menotti, who recalls an association with fear and, in her voice, 'something bitter'. This is more interesting, but instead of pursuing it the film moves on. From Rescigno comes 'a supremely dedicated performer', from Caballé 'Thank you, Maria, for coming to us,' and from Zefirelli 'She literally changed the face of opera.'

Yet in spite of the patchwork method and flaccid generalisations, the film does succeed in what were presumably its primary aims – to show the fascination of the woman and the artist, the interaction of the one with the other, and, in doing so, to move its audience with the strange mixture of glorious public achievement and deep personal unfulfilment. Stranger still, perhaps, is the stirring of so many conflicting reactions. In the midst of such insistent testimony, the film-footage of Callas 'in action' inevitably tests the claims. Does it truly support them? Is that filmed 'Vissi d'arte', for instance, really the work of a great operatic actress? Often it rather strengthens the view that with Callas, as with all great opera singers, most of the acting is done with the voice. And yet at the end we are left with her singing 'Ah, non credea mirarti' from La sonnambula, where the voice becomes frail and unsteady while the face is transfigured, infinitely touching. No: it's not a film to be missed, and the bonus footage sheds interesting light on its making, especially from the late John Ardoin, clearly one of its prime movers.

Bizet Carmen[a] – Prelude; L'amour est un oiseau rebelle (Habanera); Séguedille; Act 3, Entr'acte
Puccini Tosca[b] – Act 2
Verdi Don Carlo – Tu che le vanità[a]
Maria Callas sop with [b]Renato Cioni, [b]Robert Bowman tens [b]Tito Gobbi bar [b]Dennis Wicks bass
Royal Opera House Orchestra, Covent Garden / [a]Georges Prêtre, [b]Carlo Felice Cillario
EMI DVD DVA4 92851-9 Ⓕ
(70 minutes: Picture format 4:3, Sound 1.0, Region 0) Notes included. Recorded live at the Royal Opera House, Covent Garden on [a]November 4, 1962, [b]February 9, 1964 ●●

Because of her transcendent reputation as a singing actress, everything that survives of Callas's stage performances on film is precious, even though the sound recordings, along with the most vivid of contemporary reviews, tell what really needs to be known.

The two televised Golden Hour programmes seen here are justly famous, the special feature of their present reissue being the finer quality of sound reproduction as heard on DVD. The concert came at a time of acknowledged vocal difficulties: Callas's appearances were becoming rare and she had not sung in public for five months. She is in trouble with high notes in the Don Carlo aria but much in that is impressive, and her voice is happily placed in the Carmen.

Tosca's Act 2 is something of a rough-house at the best of times, and the climax of 'Vissi d'arte' is clearly under strain. Her partnership with Gobbi is exciting none the less, though he, too, is somewhat past his vocal prime. But he is superb – he is clearly acting not for the camera but the audience. Cioni is good, too. And all the subsidiary and silent others – that creepy old official hobbling on his stick towards the torture-chamber, the baleful bruiser, and the bespectacled Spoletta looking like an Alan Bennett character who has strayed into a world of horrors.

Régine Crespin sop

Arias and songs by Berlioz, Brahms, Duparc, Fauré, Poulenc, Ravel, Roussel, Schubert and Schumann
Régine Crespin, Denise Duval sops Christian Ivaldi, Francis Poulenc, Janine Reiss pfs ORTF Philharmonic Orchestra / ᵃJean-Claude Hartemann
EMI/IMG Artists DVD 492846-9 (68 minutes: Picture format 4:3 Black and White, Sound 1.0, Region 0). Recorded live in 1965, 1964, 1972, 1961 and 1959 Ⓕ ●●●

Lucky French television viewers in the 1960s, who were treated to concerts such as those featured on this DVD. Régine Crespin was an actress of great subtlety, and clearly understood exactly how to use face, eyes and hands for the camera. The photography is pretty basic. In the opening three Berlioz items, with the ORTF Philharmonie under Jean-Claude Hartemann, there are only two angles: first a wide-shot from above, showing the orchestra with Crespin at the conductor's left, then a close-up of her face.

Crespin recorded 'D'amour l'ardente flamme' from La damnation de Faust several times, but it's wonderful to be able to watch her negotiate this aria, the tessitura of which exactly suited her voice. Then, in Dido's 'Adieu, fière cité', we have a souvenir of Crespin in a role that she made very much her own, but which, alas, she never recorded complete.

Crespin had a wonderful sense of fun, which can be seen in Roussel's 'Coeur en péril' and in 'Les gars qui vont à la fête' from Poulenc's Chansons villageoises. Poulenc nicknamed her 'Crespinette', and she remained his ideal Mme Lidoine in Dialogues des Carmélites. Poulenc's female interpreter par excellence, though, was Denise Duval, and the DVD offers as a 'Bonus' a wonderful chance to see Poulenc accompanying her in extracts from the three operas of his she created. First comes a passage from Carmélites, 'Oh! Mon père, cessons ce jeu, par pitié!' – the last moments of the first scene, in which Blanche decides to take the veil. This is followed by a much longer extract from La voix humaine, which had been given its première just three months before this Salle Gaveau concert. It is the third item, though, that makes this a must for any admirer of Poulenc. Duval sings the scene from Act 1 of Les mamelles de Tirésias, and Poulenc accompanies her, while singing the role of Le Mari himself. This is sheer joy to watch, and confirms what a great artist Duval was, an actress and singer in the greatest tradition of the Paris theatre. The quality of the film is so-so, but the sound is excellent; the personalities of the performers are incomparable.

Angela Gheorghiu sop

Live from Covent Garden
Bellini Norma – Casta Diva…Ah! bello a me ritorna Brediceanu Le seceris – Câte flori pe deal în sus Charpentier Louise – Depuis le jour Cilea Adriana Lecouvreur – Ecco: respiro appena; Io son l'umile ancella Handel Rinaldo, HWV7*a* – Lascia ch'io pianga Loewe My Fair Lady – I could have danced all night Massenet Manon – Allons! Il le faut pour lui-même…Adieu, notre petite table Mozart Le nozze di Figaro, K492 – Porgi, amor Puccini Gianni Schicchi – O mio babbino caro. Madama Butterfly – Un bel dì vedremo. Turandot – Tu, che di gel sei cinta
Angela Gheorghiu sop Royal Opera House Orchestra, Covent Garden / Ion Marin
Video director Dominic Best
EMI DVD DVB4 92695-9 Ⓕ
(72 minutes: Picture format 16:9, Sound 2.0, 5.0 and DTS 5.0, Region 0). Includes interview with Angela Gheorghiu and photo gallery. Notes, texts and translations included. Recorded live at the Royal Opera House, Covent Garden in 2001
Soundtrack from CDC5 57264-2 (5/02)

Here is proof, if proof were still needed, that Gheorghiu is – visually and aurally – the most accomplished and involving soprano of the day. In a wide-ranging programme she deploys her glorious voice with the utmost care for stylistic veracity, emotional commitment and communication with her audience by means of facial expression and gesture, so that each character is brought vividly before us without the need for any stage trappings.

The Handel and Mozart will not be for purists who would prefer smaller voices and quicker tempi, but the diva's singing of both arias is heartfelt and poised at speeds that, for her, are perfectly judged.

Manon's Farewell is even more poignantly sung than in Georghiu's complete recording of the role on CD. If 'Depuis le jour' is not quite as effortless as it should be, one is consoled by the breadth of phrase. The recital proper finds its appropriate climax in a 'Casta diva' to equal versions by the great sopranos of the past: the expression in the aria is inward and intimate, as it should be, the cabaletta determined in accent, and words, as with Callas, are given their full due.

A main feature lasting 56 minutes may seem like short measure but in this case quality is all. This is a wonderful adumbration of an artist at the height of her powers.

Marilyn Horne

'A Portrait'
Video director Nigel Wattis
ArtHaus Musik DVD 100 218 (52 minutes: Picture format 4:3, Sound 2.0, Regions 2, 5) Ⓕ

This DVD comprises a South Bank Show feature on the celebrated singer, shown in 1994, year of her 60th birthday, though some reference books give her date of birth as 1929, which would have made her 65 at the time of the programme. However that may be, this is a model of what a portrait of a famous singer should be. Done with the full co-operation of Horne herself, it relates her life story in just enough detail from her fascinating start, making bootleg recordings of popular songs, through her leap to fame when she dubbed for Dorothy Dandridge in Carmen Jones, through to her triumphs on stage in Handel, Rossini and so much else. There are tantalisingly short snatches of Horne in several of her major successes, to convey something of the singer's genius to those who never heard her on stage. Her own evidence is supported by that of, among others, Sutherland, her former husband and mentor, the conductor Henry Lewis (the difficulties she faced back in 1960 in marrying a black man are not shirked), Samuel Ramey and several others. There are many touching moments such as, for example, Horne and her two sisters reunited in singing a close-harmony song; she and Sutherland, seated, intoning Chatanooga Choo-Choo. But the most important aspect of the film is the impression of an utterly sincere, warm-hearted and compelling artist recalling her exploits with disarming frankness and a sense of humour. The only pity is that the feature is not longer.

Kiri Te Kanawa

A Portrait
Edited and narrated by Melvyn Bragg
Film director Nigel Wattis
ArtHaus Musik DVD 100 226 (157 minutes: Picture format: 4:3, Sound: 2.0, Regions: 2, 5). Includes highlights from three concert performances Ⓕ

The heart of this portrait, and of Te Kanawa's professional work, is in the exacting, detailed rehearsals of Capriccio with her coach and the Four Last Songs with Sir Georg Solti. Above all, the film involves a fresh realisation of the importance of a well-taught basic technique. Sister Mary Leo, who so remorselessly kept the exercises going, working at the centre of the voice and the evenness of its production from note to note, is seen only briefly but the effect of her teaching is felt throughout. So too, incidentally, is the other teacher, to whom the film is dedicated: Vera Rozsa. The fidgety TV style in which a 40-second span of anything, aural or visual, is reckoned to be enough, is compensated for later in continuous filming of concerts in Wellington and Greenwich, and in scenes from Arabella and Capriccio. It is all, like Dame Kiri's persistence with Mozart and Strauss, very worthwhile.

King's College, Cambridge

Bainton And I saw a new heaven W Davies God be in my head Gardiner Evening Hymn W Harris Bring us, O Lord God. Faire is the Heaven Howells Like as the hart Ireland Greater love hath no man Naylor Vox dicentis: clama Parry I was glad Stanford Beati quorum via, Op 38 No 3. Gloria in excelsis, Op 10 Vaughan Williams Five Mystical Songs – Antiphon C Wood Hail, gladdening light
King's College Choir, Cambridge / Stephen Cleobury with Daniel Hyde and Ashley Grote org
Video director David Kremer
BBC Opus Arte DVD OA0834D (92 minutes: Picture format 16:9, Sound 2.0 and DTS 5.1, Region 0). Includes notes, texts and documentary 'The King's Choristers' Ⓕ

They're all here, these Sunday-best anthems of the Stanford-to-Howells era – the years of plenty we may think of them as far as English church music is concerned if nothing else. The sequence of Hail, gladdening light, Greater love hath no man and I was glad is rich fare for a start. Some surprises on the way include EW Naylor's Vox dicentis, an impressively resourceful, well sustained piece for unaccompanied choir written for King's when the composer was organist at Emmanuel. That is followed by William Harris's Faire is the heaven (lovely example of quiet expertise and restrained opulence), with Vaughan Williams' antiphon 'Let all the world' to finish. This is not the period and style of music most associated with the famous choir, but they command nowadays an ample body of tone and supplement this with the refinement which comes with their long tradition in the mastery of Tudor polyphony.

It might be questioned, of course, whether there is a film to be made out of this; but yes, the visual element is a genuine enrichment, and the beauty of the candlelit chapel is a presence that accompanies the music. The video direction is wonderfully precise and plays its own set of intricate variations on the themes of choir and chapel. For those who want more, there's a 30-minute documentary which looks at a chorister's life at King's.

Carols from King's

Anonymous Gloria in excelsis Deo Bach Christmas Oratorio, BWV248 – Und es waren Hirten Berlioz L'enfance du Christ, Op 25 – The Shepherds' Farewell Gruber Silent Night. Traditional The Angel and the Shepherds. Angels from the realms of glory. Coventry Shepherd's Carol. God rest ye merry gentlemen. Hail, Blessed Virgin Mary!. Hark! the herald angels sing. I wonder as I wander. In dulci jubiloa. In the bleak mid-winter. The Three Kings. O come, all ye faithful. O little town of Bethlehem. Once in Royal David's City. Quem pastores laudavere. Quittez, pasteurs. Riu, riu, chiu. Sing lullaby. Small wonder the star. The Sussex Carol. Up! good Christen folk. A virgin most pure. While shepherds watched their flocks by night
King's College Choir, Cambridge / Boris Ord, Stephen Cleobury
BBC Opus Arte Media DVD OA0815D Ⓕ

(146 minutes: Picture formats 4:3 and 16:9, Sound 2.0, Region 0). Live recordings from carol services in 1954 and 2000. Notes and texts included ●

Central to the whole formulation of this DVD is the awareness of tradition. First you watch the service in its present-day form, but, whereas on radio you had to confine your attentions to words and music, here on film the chapel itself is a presence. Stephen Cleobury, present director of Kings, is filmed in company with his predecessors, Sir David Willcocks and Sir Philip Ledger, both of whom refer back a further generation to Boris Ord. And he is seen, in the second part, conducting (with a finger and two formidable eyes) the first televised service, in 1954, stored in the BBC's archives and never released until now, a little crackly in its mono sound and a little fuzzy in its black-and-white but specific in atmosphere and rich in its store of time and place.

The service, filmed in 2000, shows very well how traditions survive – they move with the times just enough. So: the choir is still composed of trebles and male choral scholars, but at least half of the lessons are read by women. Once in Royal David's City still opens the service, but several of the once-regular carols have gone to make room for new ones such as the cheerfully syncopated Spanish carol. The Lessons have proved mutable too: the Bible is still allowed, but so are poems. The Bidding Prayer survives but in curtailed and rather sanitised form. There is no chanted prayer from the altar. As for the musical standards, they are surely as high as ever.

Elisabeth Schwarzkopf sop

'A Self-Portrait'
Dame Elisabeth Schwarzkopf sop/narr
with various artists
Video director Gérald Caillat
EMI DVD 492852-9 (57 minutes: Ⓕ
Picture format 4:3, Sound 1.0, Region 0)
Filmed 1995 ●

This documentary, made for television in 1995, is subtitled 'A Self-Portrait', so one assumes that Schwarzkopf herself had at least some say in which items were chosen. Towards the end of the sequence, she explains that now she prefers to be heard and not seen, so although there are many clips from films and television programmes from the late 1930s through to the '80s, the 'present' is evoked by her voice on the soundtrack, and some discreet shots of flowers in her garden. 'Addio del passato' from La traviata is the first thing one hears, the mood is established, nostalgia mixed with the characteristic Schwarzkopf no-nonsense professionalism.

Even now film-makers have yet to find a really convincing way of showing singers in action that doesn't sometimes render them overwhelming on the screen. Since she made only one film of a complete opera (the famous Salzburg Der Rosenkavalier), it's interesting to see some early television extracts, showing her as the Countess in Figaro, Donna Elvira in Don Giovanni and the Marschallin. One is conscious of the attempt to match the lips to the soundtrack, and of Schwarzkopf's attempts to scale down her facial gestures for the close-ups. She wasn't a film star, though, but a real creature of the theatre. About 20 minutes into the film there came a moment that made me sit up and brought a thrill of recognition: 'Yes – that's what she was like.' She is accompanied by Gerald Moore in a black and white live broadcast from, I would guess, around 1960, singing one of her folksong encores about the girl who has three loves. There is the communication, the charm, the beauty – the mixture of reticence and individuality that made every Schwarzkopf recital an extraordinary event.

Schwarzkopf's last concerts were over 23 years ago, so those born later may catch a glimpse here of what made her so unique.

Bryn Terfel bass-bar

Bernstein Candide – Overture Gwynn Williams My little Welsh home Leigh Man of La Mancha – The Impossible Dream Loewe Camelot – How to handle a woman Mozart Le nozze di Figaro – Overture; Non più andrai. Die Zauberflöte – Der Vogelfänger bin ich ja Rodgers State Fair – It might as well be spring C-M Schönberg Les Misérables – There out in the darkness Traditional Suo Gan Verdi Falstaff – Ehi! Paggio!...L'onore! Ladri! Wagner Tannhäuser – Wie Todesahnung Dämmrung deckt die Lande... O du mein holder Abendstern. Die Walküre – Leb wohl; Ride of the Valkyries
Bryn Terfel bass-bar Netherlands Radio Philharmonic Orchestra / Edo de Waart
Video director Rob van den Berg
DG DVD 073 047-9GH (140 minutes: NTSC Ⓕ
Picture format 16:9, Sound 2.0, 5.1 and DTS 5.1, Region 0). Includes interviews, documentary and promotional videos. Recorded live at the Concertgebouw, Amsterdam in 2002

There is a devil-may-care bonhomie here that could only mean one singer. This concert makes a fine memento of Terfel's recent celebrity appearances and his larger-than-life personality in general. The first half of the concert concentrated on Wagner. In Wolfram's 'O du mein holder Abendstern' it is good to hear Terfel risking as wide a range of colours live as he has in the recording studio. Wotan's Farewell from Die Walküre is also nicely varied, sung with a well-studied sense of line and breadth, but not really inside the character. Having looked unexpectedly formal in the first half, Terfel relaxes after the interval for his comic arias by Mozart and Verdi, followed by a winning selection of songs from the shows.

Nobody can touch him today for inspirational entertainment value, whether he is pretending to play Papageno's flute across his fingers or getting the words of Man of La Mancha to send a tingle down one's back. His last encore, a lullaby, is breathtakingly beautiful.

OPERA

Adams

Awards 2002

El Niño
Dawn Upshaw sop Lorraine Hunt Lieberson mez Willard White bar Maîtrise de Paris Children's Choir; London Voices; Theatre of Voices; Deutsches Symphony Orchestra, Berlin / Kent Nagano
Stage director Peter Sellars
Video director Peter Maniura
ArtHaus DVD 100 220 (147 minutes: Picture format 16:9, Sound 2.0, Region 0). Recorded live in 2001. Includes 'Making Of' documentary. Notes included Ⓕ ●

'An opera by John Adams' says the packaging. Not quite. This is the composer's multicultural, post-feminist, quasi-minimalist take on Handel's Messiah, drawing on sources ranging from the pre-Christian prophets to 20th-century Hispanic women writers. While designed to allow fully staged productions, the concept and its musical realisation bring us closer to oratorio. Adams's musical language is predictably inclusive. There's a prominent role for three Brittenish countertenors, Broadway and popular idioms are more or less willingly embraced, and the use of repetition is sometimes reminiscent of Philip Glass in his heyday. El Niño's sound world is delicate and lustrous even by Adams's standards, and, although Part 1 can seem a mite static with a surfeit of vocal recitative, there are fewer longueurs in Part 2. If not perhaps the unqualified masterpiece acclaimed by some critics, this is an effective and often truly affecting score, derivative to be sure yet obstinately fresh.

The performance as such is pretty much beyond criticism. The main protagonists, mostly old friends as well as professional colleagues, are on top form, combining absolute vocal assurance with dramatic flair – and none more so than Lorraine Hunt Lieberson. The crisp DVD images certainly help explain the sensational impact of the European première, a multimedia extravaganza from Peter Sellars' top drawer in which dance and film interact quirkily with the exertions of chorus and soloists. If you've not yet acquired a player, the remarkable success of El Niño is as good a reason as any to take the plunge. Strongly recommended.

Beethoven

Fidelio
Gabriela Beňačková sop Leonore; Josef Protschka ten Florestan; Monte Pederson bar Don Pizarro; Robert Lloyd bass Rocco; Marie McLaughlin sop Marzelline; Neill Archer ten Jaquino; Hans Tschammer bass-bar Don Fernando; Lynton Atkinson ten First Prisoner; Mark Beesley bar Second Prisoner; Royal Opera House Chorus and Orchestra, Covent Garden / Christoph von Dohnányi
Video director Derek Bailey
Stage director Adolf Dresen
ArtHaus Musik DVD 100 074 (129 minutes: Regions 2 and 5). Ⓕ ●

'Triumph! Triumph! Triumph!' as nasty Pizarro exultantly cries. He, of course, is in for a disappointment. Not so the listener and viewer of this performance, which is caught in fine sound and skilfully filmed. Pizarro will, for instance, have no place in the great festival of light that is the finale. Here the rejoicing is so powerful that we switch off the DVD player and go to bed with the surge and sequence of inspired creation fully in possession, con-vinced that in the whole of opera there is nothing to match it. That is the sign of a great Fidelio, and it means that, throughout, the proportions, structure and balance of the work have been rendered with clarity and conviction. That in turn means that the opening scene – the Marzelline-Jaquino duet and the solos which might seem to be from some other opera – has been integrated, so that the work is a journey from light into the blackest tunnel and out again into an infinitely greater light.

A prime contribution to the success of this process here is made by the portrayal of Rocco, the gaoler. Instead of the bumbling, coarse-grained character of convention, Robert Lloyd presents a full human being, a man with a rueful-realistic twinkle, and above all a loving father. This of itself guards against the alien introduction of comic opera, and helps to fashion the role so that even here our concern is with real humanity. Leonore is the radiant Beňačková, and she presents a problem. The camera reveals unsparingly a disguise which just possibly might pass in the theatre. It says much for her singing, and for something in the spirit of her performance, that the willing suspension of disbelief can prevail as well as it does. In all other respects (except perhaps in the pointless speculation as to why the date of these events should have been advanced by about a century) the visual element satisfies well; and musically, under Dohnányi's direction, this is a memorable and moving Fidelio.

Bellini

Norma
Montserrat Caballé sop Norma; Josephine Veasey sop Adalgisa; Jon Vickers ten Pollione; Agostino Ferrin bass Oroveso; Gino Sinimberghi ten Flavio; Marisa Zotti mez Clotilde; Teatro Regio di Torino Chorus and Orchestra / Giuseppe Patanè
Stage director Sandro Sequi
Video director Pierre Jourdan
Hardy Classic Video DVD HCD4003 (161 minutes: Picture format 4:3, Sound 1.0, Region 0). Recorded live in 1974 Ⓕ ●●●

Here in Orange, France, on a wind-swept, genius-driven night in 1974, they had greatness itself. Pierre Jourdan's film of the event is a priceless document, first of all, in the history of the opera. Stage-settings of Norma are usually hopeless: an offence to the eye, a chafing confutation of the spirit by gross matter. The ancient Roman amphitheatre is at any rate worthy and appropriate, and the mistral which threatened to close down the whole show and turn away an audience (inside and out) estimated at 10,000 adds a fine reminder of the power of Nature as it sets the druidical robes billowing and attacks the microphones.

The vastness of the stage provides a further challenge to the man in charge, and although conductor Giuseppe Patanè's star is somewhat eclipsed in the general view of things, he deserves all congratulation for two contrary achievements – holding the ensemble together and giving the soloists freedom.

But of course it is their night, and particularly Caballé's. She herself has named it 'the greatest single performance of her career', and it is indeed astonishing. In certain passages and phrases it is hard to think of any voice we have known, whether on stage or through records, that could sound more lovely; but, more than that, the great role is sung and acted with such well-founded assurance that for once it fulfils its own legend, the embodiment of musical-dramatic sublimity in 19th-century opera. Of the others in the cast it must for now suffice to say that they are worthy partners.

Berg

Wozzeck
Franz Grundheber bar Wozzeck; Hildegard Behrens sop Marie; Walter Raffeiner ten Drum Major; Philip Langridge ten Andres; Heinz Zednik ten Captain; Aage Haugland bass Doctor; Anna Gonda contr Margret; Alfred Sramek bass Apprentice I; Alexander Maly bar Apprentice II; Peter Jelosits ten Madman; Vienna State Opera Chorus and Orchestra / Claudio Abbado
Video director Brian Large
Stage director Adolf Dresen
ArtHaus Musik DVD 100 256 (97 minutes: Ⓕ
Picture format 4:3, Sound 2.0, Regions 2 and 5)

Coarse conducting and highly approximate singing have been so readily excused in 'difficult' idioms such as Wozzeck's that they became almost expected, obscuring the music's beauty and emotional intensity. Not so, in this welcome DVD appearance of an appropriately Viennese production long unavailable except on laserdisc. Abbado recognises the late Romantic lyricism that unifies the score, but emphasises translucent textures rather than Teutonic density, while still unleashing Berg's nascent Expressionist snarls with vividly theatrical force. The singers, too, treat the vocal line with greater respect than was once the norm, especially Grundheber's memorable Wozzeck. Behrens sings Marie's anguished, tender lines with intense beauty and keen characterisation, suggesting a sluttishness almost sanctified by her capacity for love. Zednik's steely-toned, neurotic Captain becomes unusually sinister, a sort of hellish Laurel to the late Aage Haugland's Hardy. Adolf Dresen, sometimes a dull producer, here creates a quite effective world whose derelict interiors and expansively desolate marshlands reflect its alienation of human feeling. Sliding sets keep the short scenes moving crisply, but lowering the curtain during interludes leaves Brian Large's excellent visual direction with only conductor and orchestra, to the detriment of tension. Striking and involving none the less, with no competition on DVD.

Bernstein

West Side Story – The Making of the Recording
Kiri Te Kanawa sop Tatiana Troyanos mez José Carreras ten Kurt Ollman bar orchestra and chorus / Leonard Bernstein
Film director Christopher Swann
DG DVD 073 017-9GH (89 minutes: NTSC, Ⓕ
Picture format 4:3, Sound 2.0, Region 0)
Filmed during the recording sessions in 1984 ●

This is the famous – or notorious – documentary about the 'operatic' recording of Bernstein's best-loved work, a considerable popular and critical success that overrode the rather silly crossover controversy it aroused. Seeing it again in this excellent DVD transfer, though, does underline the weaknesses as well as the strengths of Bernstein's approach. Unquestionably the music is fine enough to stand the weight of the operatic treatment, paradoxically more so in the original light orchestration, and it is a pleasure to watch Bernstein rejuvenated by rediscovering his own score. However, the visual element underlines that, despite his denials, even the youngest and freshest trained voices do add an extra layer of artificiality. Kurt Ollmann and the other Jets sound altogether too mannered, for all the heavy accents, and the chattering teeny-boppers more like housewives.

Te Kanawa, with her popular background, is at least at home in the idiom, and her songs benefit from the richer colour and legato; but Troyanos, for all her authentically comic West-Sidese, sounds inescapably middle-aged and blowsy for a girlish role. And Carreras is ludicrously condemned to play the all-American boy. This miscasting causes him painful struggles with diction and tempo, especially in the fiendishly difficult 'Something's Coming!' number, and Bernstein's refusal to allow for this clearly provokes the ugly scenes in which the composer petulantly humiliates him – not Bernstein's finest moment. But Carreras and the others obviously love the music so much that, while they cannot obscure these handicaps, they largely transcend them; and that also is evident. A fascinating record of a great composer/conductor.

Bizet

Carmen
Maria Ewing mez Carmen; Jacques Trussell ten Don José; Miriam Gauci sop Micaëla; Rosemary Ashe sop Frasquita; Ludmilla Andrew sop Mercédès; Alain Fondary bar Escamillo; Emile Belcourt ten Remendado; David Hamilton bar Dancaïre; Rodney McCann bass-bar Zuniga; Christopher Blades bass Moralès; Ambrosian Opera Chorus; National Philharmonic Orchestra / Jacques Delacôte
Stage director Steven Pimlott
Video director Gavin Taylor
Stax Entertainment DVD MAWA131 Ⓕ
(165 minutes: Picture format 4:3, Sound 5.1, Region 0). Recorded live in 1989 ○○

This DVD derives from a television relay from Earl's Court in June 1989, a more-than-welcome souvenir of an uncommonly and unexpectedly successful staging in the barn-like venue. The triumph of the event was almost entirely due to Steven Pimlott's highly imaginative use of the huge space, presenting the work in the round on a huge raised dais with a kind of moving platform surrounding it.

Maria Ewing's Carmen, as on her other two video interpretations of the role (Glyndebourne and Covent Garden, neither yet on DVD), is an earthily mesmeric, wholly sensual and elemental gypsy, conceived perfectly for her own character yet marching with Bizet's concept. She is also in wonderful voice, with many subtle emphases of word and tone to bring all her solos to life. Trussell offers a good foil to this Carmen, at once fiery, vulnerable, tetchy – their final confrontation is frightening indeed – and he sings with a combination of plangency and power. Fondary delivers his native French and the character of Escamillo with unerringly economic strength as to the manner born. Gauci is a limpid, lyrical, properly ingenuous Micaëla.

Delacôte is a near-ideal conductor of this score , an elegant, sensitive, vibrant reading that hits all the right spots. The work is played superbly by the National Philharmonic, who are heard to far better effect here than in the original venue. The sound-enhancement occasionally produces odd effects, but they hardly detract from enjoyment of the riveting performance. Subtitles are provided, but in the last two acts they are out of synch with the action. With neither the Rosi film nor the Glyndebourne/Peter Hall production (using a full rendering of the dialogue version) apparently yet available on DVD, this has the field to itself among recommendable versions.

Britten

The Turn of the Screw
Helen Field sop Governess; Menai Davies mez Mrs Grose; Richard Greager ten Peter Quint / Prologue; Phyllis Cannan sop Miss Jessel; Machiko Obata sop Flora; Samuel Linay treb Miles; Stuttgart Radio Symphony Orchestra / Steuart Bedford
Stage director Michael Hampe
Video director Claus Viller
ArtHaus Musik DVD 100 198 (114 minutes: Picture format 4:3, Sound 2.0, Regions 2-8) Ⓕ
Recorded live in 1990

Michael Hampe clearly places the audience in the expected quandary as to whether the ghosts are 'real' or a product of the Governess's vivid imagination. The concept is underlined by Helen Field, who makes the role very much her own by her intelligent acting and fine singing of it. The young Samuel Linay could hardly be bettered as Miles, suggesting the boy's innocence and his devilment while singing purely and accurately. Menai Davies brings out all Mrs Grose's generous character and her slight befuddlement at events beyond her ken. Phyllis Cannan is at once a menacing and unearthly Miss Jessel. Richard Greager sings splendidly as Quint but rather misses out on the character's menace. The Flora, as so often with this part, looks too mature.

The instrumental playing is superb. The sound balance and video direction faultless. With the only potential rival version – Petr Weigl's dubbed film, filmed outdoors or on location – not yet on DVD, this excellent issue has the field to itself.

Debussy

Pelléas et Mélisande
Neill Archer bar Pelléas; Alison Hagley sop Mélisande; Donald Maxwell bar Golaud; Kenneth Cox bass Arkel; Penelope Walker contr Geneviève; Samuel Burkey treb Yniold; Peter Massocchi bar Doctor; Shepherd; Welsh National Opera Chorus and Orchestra / Pierre Boulez
Stage and Video director Peter Stein
DG ② DVD 073 030-9GH2 (158 minutes: NTSC Ⓕ Picture format 4:3, Sound 2.0, 5.1 and DTS 5.1, Region 0). Includes picture gallery, 'Pelléas at Welsh National Opera'. Notes included. Recorded live at the New Theatre, Cardiff in 1992 ○○○

This is, in every respect, a model of what a DVD ought to be, a perfect realisation in picture and sound of Debussy's sole and inspired opera. Peter Stein staged the work for Welsh National Opera in 1992 and won universal praise, as did Pierre Boulez for his conducting.

Within austere, wholly appropriate sets, beautifully lit by Jean Kalman, Stein catches the very essence of this singular and elusive piece. Each of the 15 scenes is given its own distinctive décor in which the action is played out on several levels – high for the tower scenes, low for the eerie, subterranean grottoes, for instance. A masterstroke is the subtle evolution from one scene to another in view of the audience, offering a visual counterpoint to the interludes.

Stein sees that Debussy's instructions are scrupulously observed. In fact, as a whole, this is an object-lesson in modern staging. Stein and his collaborators reflect the ebb and flow of crude realism and fragile dream-life that permeate the score, which Boulez has identified as lying at its heart. Director and conductor worked closely with each other over a six-week rehearsal period, something unlikely to occur today, so Boulez's interpretation is in complete accord with the staging, his musical direction at once direct and luminous, timbres finely balanced one with the other.

The cast also benefited from the long gestation. Alison Hagley catches ideally the paradox that is Mélisande, candour married to duplicity, and sings the enigmatic character with an acute ear for French syllables. Neill Archer, though not quite as responsive to the French language, is a poetic, youthfully ardent Pelléas. Donald Maxwell's Golaud rightly stands at the centre of the production, conveying guilt, jealousy and self-torment in tellingly intense tones. Kenneth Cox is a grave, world-weary Arkel, Penelope Walker a properly dignified, compassionate Geneviève. The treble singing Yniold is remarkably assured.

The picture and sound are even better than on their VHS and Laserdisc counterparts. This is a riveting experience.

Additional recommendation

Pelléas et Mélisande

Le Roux Pelléas Alliot-Lugaz Mélisande Van Dam Golaud; Chorus and Orchestra of the Lyon Opera / Gardiner

Stage director Pierre Strosser

Video director Jean-François Jung

ArtHaus Musik DVD 100 100 (147 minutes: Regions Ⓕ 2/5: recorded 1987) OO

On DVD, with superb lighting and camera work, the results are even more convincing than they were in the theatre. Gardiner conducts a translucent, firmly shaped account. His interpretation brings the piece even more clearly into a post-Wagnerian world of sound, and the Lyon Orchestra play up to the hilt. The entirely French cast is one of the best assembled for recording the work, challenging the hegemony of the audio-only versions conducted by Desormière (EMI) and the earlier Ansermet set (Decca).

Donizetti

L'elisir d'amore

Angela Gheorghiu sop Adina; Roberto Alagna ten Nemorino; Roberto Scaltriti bar Belcore; Simone Alaimo bass Dulcamara; Elena Dan sop Giannetta; Lyon National Opera Chorus and Orchestra / Evelino Pidò

Stage director Frank Dunlop

Video director Brian Large

Decca DVD 074 103-9DH (177 minutes: Ⓕ Picture format 16:9, Sound 2.0 and 5.1, Region 0). Includes documentary 'Love Potion', a behind-the-scenes look at the making of the production. Recorded in 1997

Frank Dunlop's witty, unvarnished view of Donizetti's country comedy, updated to the 1930s, is delightful to see, wondrous to hear. Gheorghiu and Alagna make an ideal partnership as capricious girl and shy bumpkin. They both act and sing their roles to near perfection in a staging that exposes the heart and heartlessness as much as the fun of this work.

Singing with every care for tone and nuance, Gheorghiu presents Adina as by turns, haughty, flighty, concerned, annoyed when the other girls paw him, and finally tender when love at last triumphs, and she finds the vocal equivalent for each mood. Not so versatile vocally, but always tidy and responsive to the text, Alagna makes an attractively naive, emotionally vulnerable Nemorino. Scaltriti's Belcore is made deliberately unsympathetic by Dunlop and at times he seems to be overblowing his basically attractive voice. There need be no reservations about Alaimo's witty yet genial Dulcamara: all the buffo elements of the part are there but never exaggerated. Evelino Pidò conducts a trim account of the score, his often fast speeds justified by the way his singers enjoy them in terms of athletic delivery. Brian Large's video direction is predictably exemplary. The sound and widescreen picture make us feel present at an obviously enjoyable night at the opera.

Giordano

Andrea Chénier

Franco Corelli ten Andrea Chénier; Celestina Casapietra sop Maddalena; Piero Cappuccilli bar Carlo Gérard; Ermanno Lorenzi ten Incredibile; Gabriella Carturan mez Contessa de Coigny; Giovanna di Rocco mez Bersi; Luigi Roni bass Roucher; Leonardo Monreale bass Pietro Fléville; Mario Chiappi bass Fouquier Tinville; Renzo Gonzales bass Schmidt; Florindo Andreolli ten Abate; Cristina Anghelakova mez Madelon; Giorgio Giorgetti bar Mathieu; Milan RAI Chorus and Orchestra / Bruno Bartoletti

Stage director Vaclav Kaslik

Hardy Classic Video DVD HCD4008 Ⓕ (110 minutes: NTSC, Picture format 4:3, Sound 1.0, Region 0). Recorded at RAI-TV Studios, Milan in 1973

This is something of a find – a production produced in Milan's television studios in 1973 that does more than justice to Giordano's verismo work about personal conflicts at the time of the French Revolution. It is directed, with considerable imagination, by the Czech Vaclav Kaslik, at the top of his profession in the '70s. In realistic period sets he unerringly creates the milieu of a degenerate aristocracy in Act 1 and of the raw mob-rule of the Revolution in the succeeding acts. The only drawback is the poor lip-synch.

Conductor Bruno Bartoletti makes certain we are unaware of the score's weaker moments and releases all the romantic passion in Giordano's highly charged writing for his principals. Chénier was one of Corelli's most notable roles so it is good that his splendid portrayal has been preserved for posterity. He does not disappoint with his excitingly trumpet-like tones and finely moulded phrasing of the composer's grateful writing for his tenor hero; and – although already 52 – he still looks the part of the glamorous, challenging poet.

Cappuccilli was famous for his Gérard and here – at the height of his powers – he projects all the man's conflicting feelings with enormous conviction on a stream of burnished tone. Celestina Casapietra, a generally underrated soprano from Genoa, is just what Maddalena should be, and sings with a nice combination of tenderness and intense feeling. She and Corelli do full justice to their duets. The RAI orchestra plays well, but unfortunately it is too backwardly placed as regards the singers.

Gounod

Roméo et Juliette

Roberto Alagna ten Roméo; Angela Gheorghiu sop Juliette; Frantisek Zahradnicek bass Frère Laurent; Vratislav Kríz bar Mercutio; Ales Hendrych bass Capulet; Zdenek Harvánek bar Paris; Kühn Mixed Choir; Czech Philharmonic Chamber Orchestra / Anton Guadagno

Film director Barbara Willis Sweete

ArtHaus Musik DVD 100 706 (90 minutes: Picture format 16:9, Sound 2.0, 5.1 and DTS 5.1, Region 0). Filmed on location in Zvikov Castle, Czech Republic, 2002 Ⓕ

Gounod's opera has been described as a love duet with interruptions; here the interruptions are much reduced. Other characters do indeed appear and sing a phrase or two from time to time, but Mercutio has no Queen Mab, Capulet no 'jeunes gens', the Friar none of those solos one calls less easily to mind, and Stephano the page is eliminated altogether.

Events are similarly compressed. Important news items such as Romeo's banishment and Juliet's impending marriage are relegated. Adjustments are made to such of the interruptions as remain (for instance, Romeo does not take part in the mourning, 'O jour de deuil', for Mercutio, but is seen walking away with Juliet who has watched the unfortunate events from her balcony and quite understands).

Indeed, there is a great deal of walking in this production. Juliet walks home after her first love duet and Romeo sings an abbreviated aria while walking towards the second. He walks up a staircase to the balcony, in fact a nice long gallery good for a gentle stroll. 'Ah, ne fuis pas encore' is also sung on the move and when we meet Romeo again, at dawn, he is still walking. The motif persists right up to the ambulatory death scene.

On the other hand, the countryside, the river, the castle and the weather are all so beautiful that it would be a sin to stay indoors, and as long as one takes this film for what it is (which is not Gounod's five-act opera) there is much pleasure to be gained. Gheorghiu sings feelingly and with tone to match the natural beauties of earth and sky around her. Alagna, but for his habit of 'lifting' to notes, gives a stylish, sensitive performance and is in good voice. The love duets can rarely have been better sung, and that is what it is really all about.

Handel

Ariodante

Ann Murray mez Ariodante; Joan Rodgers sop Ginevra; Lesley Garrett sop Dalinda; Christopher Robson counterten Polinesso; Paul Nilon ten Lurcanio; Gwynne Howell bass King of Scotland; Mark Le Brocq ten Odoardo; English National Opera Chorus and Orchestra / Ivor Bolton

Stage director David Alden. Video director Kriss Rusmanis

Arthaus Musik DVD 100 064 (178 minutes: Regions 2, 3, 5). Recorded live in 1996 Ⓕ ●

David Alden's staging of Ariodante was generally praised when it was first staged by WNO, a joint venture with ENO. This DVD is a recording of the much-admired revival at the ENO in 1996. Its appearance confirms the extraordinary perspicacity of Alden's production, which explains, from an almost Freudian viewpoint, the loves, hates, fears and fantasies of the principal characters so unerringly and deeply delineated in Handel's masterly score, in which aria after aria exposes new layers of emotional thrust and instability. Ann Murray gives a committed performance as the unhinged Ariodante and displays a physical and vocal virtuosity only occasionally vitiated by a harsh tone. The great arias, 'Scherza infida' and 'Dopo notte' are just the climactic moments they should be. Joan Rodgers as Ginevra is hardly less impressive in her portrayal of the myriad feelings suggested by Handel and Alden.

Christopher Robson, as the villain Polinesso, is the very incarnation of evil lasciviousness, for which his edgy countertenor is not inappropriate. Lesley Garrett gives Dalinda just the right touch of vulnerability as she submits to Polinesso's wiles while being sexually captivated by him. Gwynne Howell is the upright King to the life. Ivor Bolton conducts a vital, well-played account of the score with modern strings sounding very much like their period counterparts. Almost three hours of gripping music-drama pass in a trice, helped by the unbroken sequence of DVD. The sound is commendable, the picture superb.

Giulio Cesare (sung in English)

Janet Baker mez Giulio Cesare; Valerie Masterson sop Cleopatra; Sarah Walker mez Cornelia; Della Jones mez Sextus; James Bowman counterten Ptolemy; John Tomlinson bass Achilles; Brian Casey sngr Pothinus; John Kitchiner bar Curio; Tom Emlyn Williams counterten Nirenus; English National Opera Chorus and Orchestra / Sir Charles Mackerras

Stage director John Copley

Video director John Michael Phillips

ArtHaus Musik DVD 100 308 (180 minutes: Ⓕ

Picture format 4:3, Sound 2.0, Region 2 and 5)
Notes included. Recorded in 1984 ●

This is a 1984 studio recreation, with the original cast, of John Copley's ENO production. Mackerras' performing edition is by no means literally 'authentic'; arias are removed, including much of Sextus's role, recitatives are trimmed, and much of Caesar's role is transposed – inevitably, since it was written for the exceptionally low contralto castrato Senesino. The result is no travesty, however: it's fast-moving and dramatically satisfying, and conducted by Mackerras in the same spirit.

Copley also strives to avoid tedium, for instance backing da capo passages with stage activity – sometimes rather obviously. However, his staging, combining John Pascoe's warm-hued, vaguely 18th-century designs with more naturalistic acting, translates quite well to the screen – not least because the singers are so committed. Janet Baker displays great Handelian affinity. She not only delivers these difficult, florid arias with fiery élan and appropriate ornament, but infuses them with a real emotional intensity that sweeps one over the credibility gap.

Sarah Walker makes the lachrymose Cornelia almost as intense, and Valerie Masterson carries off Cleopatra's gorgeous music with admirable if slightly self-conscious virtuosity and a kittenish seductiveness which recalls Vivien Leigh. Della Jones is a splendid Sextus, and John Tomlinson a thunderously melodramatic Achilles. James Bowman's hooting tone is rather obtrusive, but he plays Ptolemy as a petulantly Farouk-ish villain to fine comic effect.

The main video alternative, Decca's Dresden recording is more complete musically but an inferior performance, marred by a fidgety modern production; so this is definitely the one to enjoy.

Tamerlano, HWV18
Monica Bacelli mez Tamerlano;
Thomas Randle ten Bajazet; Elizabeth Norberg-Schulz sop Asteria; Graham Pushee counterten Andronicus; Anna Bonitatibus sop Irene; Antonio Abete bass Leone;
The English Concert / Trevor Pinnock
Stage director Jonathan Miller Video director Helga Dubnyicsek
ArtHaus Musik ② DVD 100 702 (323 minutes: Ⓕ Picture format 16:9, Sound 2.0 and 5.1, Region 0)
Includes documentaries and interviews. Notes included. Recorded live during the 50th Handel Festival, Halle in 2001

This is an uncommonly interesting examination of how a great Handel opera may be performed without insisting that only Baroque specialists need apply. Some of the singers here are not obvious Handelians: Elizabeth Norberg-Schulz has something of the attack and occasionally the cutting edge of a lyric-dramatic soprano, while Thomas Randle quite often puts his voice under pressure in response to the extreme demands of Handel's first and most intensely dramatic major tenor role. And yet one hardly ever wishes for more 'authentic' voices. Both singers are very musical, well aware of the requirements of Handel's style; both, especially Randle, are highly accomplished actors – it is a minor but significant point that when either of them was on screen I neither watched nor needed the subtitles. Both, not wholly irrelevantly, are strikingly handsome.

That they are able to be so effective is in large part due to Jonathan Miller's very plain but highly intelligent production, to Trevor Pinnock's alert and sympathetic direction and to the wonderfully intimate theatre at Bad Lauchstadt where the opera was filmed. The set is basic – a few mottled gold panels – the costumes are sumptuous, but in a theatre this size everyone in the audience can see facial expressions and the slightest gestures, and Miller has concentrated his direction on this. The result, at such a moment as when Bajazet and his daughter Asteria resolve on suicide rather than further humiliation by Tamerlano is intensely moving, as is the exquisite duet in which Asteria and her lover Andronico vow that their love will even survive her death.

Handelian voices or no, it is in short an utterly Handelian performance. The orchestra is splendid and Pinnock's pacing of the drama ideal.

Henze

Der Prinz von Homburg
William Cochran ten Elector of Brandenburg; Helga Dernesch sop Electress of Brandenburg; MariAnne Häggander sop Princess Natalie; François Le Roux bar Prince Friedrich von Homburg; Claes-Håkan Ahnsjö ten Count Hohenzollern; Hans Günter Nöcker bass-bar Field Marshal Dörfling; Bavarian State Orchestra / Wolfgang Sawallisch
Stage director Nikolaus Lehnhoff
Video director Eckhart Schmidt
ArtHaus Musik DVD 100 164 (105 minutes: Ⓕ
Picture format 16:9, Sound 2.0, Region 2 and 5)
Recorded live in 1994 ●●

Der Prinz von Homburg (1958-60) was composed at a time of burgeoning acclaim for Henze. The librettist, Ingeborg Bachmann, fashioned a splendid reduction of Kleist's famous drama of the dreamy aristocrat who, distracted by love into disobeying orders in battle, is given the choice of escaping condemnation if he feels the verdict unjust. Only when he accepts the inevitability of his sentence, and walks out to face execution, is he pardoned.

Henze's crisp and vital music is a remarkable, natural-sounding fusion (controversially for the time) of the influences of Schoenberg and Stravinsky. And Eckhart Schmidt's film is a most faithful record of Lehnhoff's 1994 production. Le Roux is almost ideal as the lovestruck dreamer Prince, alternately distracted and impetuous. His chemistry with MariAnne Häggander – who sings beautifully – is tangible, essential for a successful production, though it is William Cochran, rich-voiced and expressively stern as the severe but not unbending Elector, who steals the show. Sawallisch directs the Bavarian State Orchestra impeccably, the sound spacious and clear. Der Prinz von Homburg may not be as spectacular as König Hirsch or The Bassarids, or as directly popular as Der junge Lord, but it remains one of Henze's most completely achieved and important operas. Its appearance on DVD (there is no CD equivalent) is unequivocal cause for celebration.

Janáček

The Cunning Little Vixen
Eva Jenis sop Vixen; Thomas Allen bar Forester; Hana Minutillo contr Fox; Libuše Márová mez Forester's Wife; Owl; Josef Hajna ten Schoolmaster; Mosquito; Richard Novák bass Parson; Badger; Ivan Kusnjer bar Harašta; Jean-Philippe Marlière bass Innkeeper; Dog; Sarah Connolly mez Innkeeper's Wife; Cock; Jay; Florence Bonnafous sop Hen; François Martinaud sop Woodpecker; Châtelet Choir; Hautes-de-Seine Maîtrise; Orchestre de Paris / Sir Charles Mackerras
Stage director Nicholas Hytner
Video director Brian Large
ArtHaus Musik DVD 100 240 (98 minutes: Ⓕ
Picture format 16:9, Sound 2.0, Region 2 and 5)
Recorded live in June 1995 ●

Mackerras conducts with all the vibrancy of his landmark CD recording (Decca), plus the immediacy of live performance, and if the Orchestre de Paris has leaner strings and less secure brass than the VPO, it still responds well. Hytner's production was an instant hit at the time, with good reason. The forest scenes rely heavily on dance, as Janáček's notes suggest, so the set is a ballet-style level stage with hanging flats; but within those constraints it comes alive with clever imagery and gaudy colour.

Eva Jenis is a vivacious, characterful Vixen, though not as creamy as Popp on the CD. Janáček's vocal casting is not consistently observed; Hana Minutillo makes a fine contralto Fox, but there is a case for giving the role to a male voice, as the Dog is here. Richard Novák and Josef Hajna, in the important animal/human roles, and Ivan Kusnjer's roughneck Poacher, provide firmly idiomatic support, but Allen's grizzled Forester remains the lynchpin. If his voice is slightly less rich than when he first sang the role at Glyndebourne in the 1970s, its expression has deepened, and he sounds quite at ease in Czech. His final paean to the renewing force of Nature, with Mackerras in full lyrical flow, is magical, confirming a strong recommendation.

Jenůfa
Roberta Alexander sop Jenůfa; Anja Silja sop Kostelnička; Philip Langridge ten Laca; Mark Baker ten Števa; Menai Davies contr Grandmother Buryja; Robert Poulton bar Foreman of the Mill; Gordon Sandison bar Mayor; Linda Ormiston mez Mayor's Wife; Alison Hagley sop Karolka; Sarah Pring sop Barena; Lynne Davies sop Jano
Glyndebourne Festival Chorus; London Philharmonic Orchestra / Sir Andrew Davis
Stage director Nikolaus Lehnhoff
Video director Derek Bailey
ArtHaus Musik DVD 100 208 (118 minutes: Picture format 4:3, Sound 2.0, Regions 2 and 5) Ⓕ
Recorded live in 1989 ●

Nikolaus Lehnhoff's justly acclaimed 1989 Glyndebourne production makes a welcome appearance on DVD, the picture a touch grainy but still a dramatic improvement over the videotape, the sound still more so. Andrew Davis's conducting emphasises the score's lyricism without diminishing its rhythmic vigour and folk resonances, and the staging, in Czech despite its Anglophone cast, is just as idiomatic. If Act 1's mill looks somewhat cramped on Glyndebourne's old stage, the indoor scenes gain a natural, sometimes claustrophobic, intimacy, well captured in Derek Bailey's direction.

The performers display the same naturalness – notably Roberta Alexander's heroine, sung with a warmth and fervour which exactly captures Jenůfa's open and loving nature. The camera makes Langridge a rather mature Laca, but his sinewy tenor and twisted, hungry demeanour render the character's distorting jealousy and inner decency equally credible and sympathetic.

Lehnhoff and Silja play the Kostelnička as the traditional black-clad puritan rather than the less sophisticated old peddler woman, pious and desperate, whom Janáček drew from the original play. But her steely tones and incisive diction movingly illuminate the fiercely proud and loving nature, warped (as a restored solo reveals) by marital abuse, which makes her so fanatically protective of Jenůfa; her murderous Act 2 soliloquy and conscience-stricken terror are harrowing. Davies' Grandmother and Scottish Opera stalwarts Sandison and Ormiston head a fine supporting cast.

Káťa Kabanová
Nancy Gustafson sop Káťa Kabanová; Barry McCauley ten Boris; Felicity Palmer mez Kabanicha; Donald Adams bass Dikoj; Ryland Davies ten Tichon; John Graham-Hall ten Kudrjáš; Louise Winter mez Varvara; Robert Poulton bar Kuligin; Christine Bunning mez Glaša; Linda Ormiston mez Fekluša; Rachael Hallawell mez Woman; Christopher Ventris ten Bystander
Stage director Nikolaus Lehnhoff. Video director Derek Bailey
Glyndebourne Festival Chorus and Orchestra / Sir Andrew Davis
ArtHaus Musik DVD 100 158 Ⓕ
(99 minutes: Regions 2 and 5). Recorded live in 1988

This is a transfer to DVD of a 1988 Virgin VHS. It houses an entirely recommendable staging by Lehnhoff for Glyndebourne with sets by Tobias Hoheisel derived from Russian art from the period of the story's genesis.

Lehnhoff directs his excellent cast with an astonishing ability to delineate their inner feelings, receiving the most positive response from Nancy Gustafson in the title-role. She presents, from her initial entry, an overwrought, highly impressionable girl frustrated beyond endurance by the casual attentions of her husband Tichon and longing for the erotic charge offered by the attractive Boris. When she finally capitulates to his advances, she mirrors the sense of release tinged with guilt evinced in the music. Her singing is firm, soaring, vibrant.

Palmer is the very picture of buttoned-up severity as Kabanicha. Her command over Káta and Tichon is terrible to behold. Davies suggests Tichon's lack of backbone. McCauley's Boris conveys the man's ability to infatuate the repressed Káta. His tenor is keen, though under strain in the upper register. The supporting roles are all faithfully taken. Andrew Davis brings out all the passion and anguish in the wonderful score. Picture and sound are an improvement on the VHS counterpart.

Meyerbeer

L'Africaine
Shirley Verrett mez Sélika; Plácido Domingo ten Vasco da Gama; Ruth Ann Swenson sop Inès; Justino Diaz bass Nélusko; Michael Devlin bass-bar Don Pédro; Philip Skinner bass Don Diégo; Joseph Rouleau bass Grand Inquisitor; Kevin Anderson ten Don Alvar; Patricia Spence mez Anna; Mark Delavan bar High Priest of Brahma; San Francisco Opera Ballet, Chorus and Orch / Maurizio Arena
Stage director Lotfi Mansouri
Video director Brian Large
ArtHaus Musik ② DVD 100 216 (194 minutes: Picture format 4:3, Sound 2.0, Regions 2 & 5) Ⓕ
Recorded live in 1988

Handsomely staged and sumptuously costumed, this famous production, first seen in 1972, makes good viewing; and on DVD the sound is a distinct improvement on that of the original video issued on Pioneer. The singers benefit as much as the orchestra; Shirley Verrett in particular is heard to better advantage, her high notes shining out with remarkable ease and purity, while Justino Diaz has body and warmth of tone as well as the command and panache for his exhilarating role. Domingo's voice is caught with the metal revealed rather at the expense (sometimes) of its characteristic richness, but there is a glorious thrust and passion in his singing, as in his acting. The voice which sounds equally well in video and DVD is that of the young Ruth Ann Swenson, whose freshness and refinement are a memorable and touching feature of the performance.

Meyerbeer's last opera exhibits the mastery of a lifetime in high places. It has the required ingredients in due proportion, with a moving individuality in its quiet ending, where Verrett's imaginative portrayal makes a strong contribution. The conductor, Maurizio Arena, treats the score appreciatively, with care and precision. As ever, Brian Large's directing hand is in effective control of the filming.

Monteverdi

Il Ritorno d'Ulisse in Patria
Dietrich Henschel bar Ulisse; Humana fragilità; Vesselina Kasarova sop Penelope; Jonas Kaufmann ten Telemaco; Boguslaw Bidzinski ten Eurimaco; Anton Scharinger ten Giove; Reinhard Mayr bass Antinoo; Martin Zysset ten Pisandro; Martin Oro counterten Anfinomo; Isabel Rey sop Minerva; Amore; Thomas Mohr ten Eumete; Pavel Daniluk bass Nettuno; Giuseppe Scorsin bass Time; Martina Janková sop Fortune; Giunone Cornelia Kallisch mez Ericléa; Malin Hartelius sop Melanto; Rudolf Schasching ten Iro; La Scintilla Orchestra, Zurich / Nikolaus Harnoncourt
Stage director Klaus-Michael Grüber
Video director Felix Breisach
ArtHaus Musik DVD 100 352 (155 minutes: Ⓕ Picture format 16:9, Sound 2.0 and 5.1, Region 0)
Notes included. Recorded live at the Opernhaus, Zurich in 2002

The renowned collaborations between Zurich Opera and Nikolaus Harnoncourt in the 1970s and early '80s were crucial milestones in projecting historically aware performance away from historicism-for-its-own-sake, towards vitally conceived productions for contemporary audiences. Il Ritorno enjoyed great success in 1977, in Jean-Pierre Ponnelle's imaginative staging, in which Harnoncourt's opulent instrumental palette lifted the hearts of many, though only the eyebrows of the purists. In this musical 'revival' to celebrate 25 years of the swashbuckling original, Harnoncourt allows the nobility of the score to roll unimpeded by the driven intensity of the older recorded account on Teldec from 1971.

The vocal contributions are also more eloquent than ever with outstanding contributions from the two protagonists, Vesselina Kasarova and Dietrich Henschel; can Monteverdi have ever heard this, his first opera for Venice's Teatro San Cassiano in 1640, sung with such an extraordinary range of vocal beauty and immediacy of expression? This extends to all the characters.

Of the two caveats here, the durability of Harnoncourt's big-band score with its bold instrumental canvas is likely to be a source of debate. Monteverdi left only a shell of his musical genius and, as convention dictated, the performers filled in the rest. For the modern performer, the logic of using the greatest array of coloration to suit the context of characterisation and emotional states is highly plausible for all those who value music drama – and Monteverdi, more to the point – in pastels rather than charcoal. Yet, there are moments when the spirit of realisation enters into the realms of transcription, especially in the richly endowed brass ensembles used for divine intervention. A later Baroque soundworld occasionally prevails and the luminosity of the moment is lost, and yet, equally, the warm glow of assured fidelity in 'Hor di parlar e tempo' – where Ulysses's accompagnato recitative lends remarkable authenticity to the composer's primal communicative instincts – is ravishing and persuasive. The DVD production is flawed only by some poor dubbing in Act 2.

Mozart

La clemenza di Tito
Philip Langridge ten Tito; Ashley Putnam sop Vitellia; Diana Montague mez Sesto;
Martine Mahé mez Annio; Elzbieta Szmytka sop Servilia; Peter Rose bass Publio; Glyndebourne Festival Chorus; London Philharmonic Orchestra / Sir Andrew Davis Stage director Nicholas Hytner
Video director Robin Lough
ArtHaus Musik DVD 100 406 (143 minutes: Ⓕ
Picture format 4:3, Sound 2.0, Region 2 and 5)
Recorded live at Glyndebourne in 1991 ●

This performance shows Glyndebourne at its absolute peak in terms of preparatory work and ensemble playing. Add Andrew Davis's superbly taut and perceptive conducting and it's no wonder that here you feel Tito to be very near the top of the Mozartian operatic canon, a very different opinion from that which was current for so many years.

At the heart of the performance on stage are Philip Langridge as the clement yet tormented Emperor of the title, acting – especially with his eyes – and singing with extreme eloquence, and Diana Montague's equally committed account of Sesto's part, a character so obviously torn, almost fatally, between his erotic love for Vitellia and his deep friendship for Tito. Montague also acts movingly with her eyes, and her singing is noble, warm and technically flawless. As the scheming Vitellia, Ashley Putnam somehow manages to enact both the character's classical origins while suggesting a soap-opera villainess. Vocally she is always willing, but sometimes the flesh is weak, particularly in the higher reaches.

Martine Mahé keeps up the high standard with her urgently sung and acted Annio. So does Peter Rose as the upright and concerned Publio. Only Elzbieta Szmytka, as Servilia, seems to be operating on a more conventional level of operatic expression. The LPO is on its best form. Robin Lough's video direction is spot on. The sound balance is faultless. Even so, main credit for this arresting event goes to Hytner.

Così fan tutte
Amanda Roocroft sop Fiordiligi; Rosa Mannion sop Dorabella; Eirian James mez Despina; Rainer Trost ten Ferrando; Rodney Gilfry ten Guglielmo; Claudio Nicolai bass Don Alfonso; Monteverdi Choir; English Baroque Soloists / Sir John Eliot Gardiner
Stage director Sir John Eliot Gardiner
Video director Peter Mumford
Archiv ② DVD 073 026-9AH2 (193 minutes: Picture Ⓕ format 16:9, Sound 5.1, Region 0). Recorded live at the Théâtre du Châtelet, Paris in 1992 ●

When this staging was presented in 1992, in various theatres, Gardiner decided to be his own director because he didn't trust any available alternative to be faithful to Da Ponte's and Mozart's original. In the circumstances his was a sensible decision because his deeply discerning stage interpretation perfectly seconds his own musically perceptive reading. His keen understanding of what this endlessly fascinating work is about is made plain in his absorbing essay in the booklet.

The first advantage of this film of the opera is Carlo Tommasi's ravishing décor that accords with what the libretto predicates, conjuring before our eyes 18th-century Naples overlooked by Vesuvius. Then Gardiner's direction makes all-too-clear the emotional turmoil engineered by Don Alfonso's cynical plans to test the ladies' constancy. At all times it is responsive to the music, except when members of the cast march through the stalls and when certain scenes are more sexually explicit than would have been contemplated in Mozart's age.

Amanda Roocroft's Fiordiligi is intrepidly sung, her tone always firm and gleaming, and she acts expressively. She is partnered, as originally intended, by a soprano Dorabella. Rosa Mannion proves an apt foil for her sister, and is deliciously flighty when falling for her 'Albanian' lover. Rainer Trost is the young, fluent, eager Ferrando who makes the most of his taxing music, although his second aria, 'Ah! lo veggio', is here excluded. His vulnerable portrayal is a nice contrast to Rodney Gilfry's macho Guglielmo. The four voices blend well in the many ensembles.

In the pit, Gardiner's direct, big-scale yet sensitive conducting is the engine-room of the performance, superbly sustained by his period-instrument band. Peter Mumford's video direction is faultless; so is the sound picture. All in all, it would be amazing if any successor surpasses this DVD's achievements on all sides. Recommended without reservation.

Don Giovanni
Cesare Siepi bar Don Giovanni; Elisabeth Grümmer sop Donna Anna; Lisa Della Casa sop Donna Elvira; Erna Berger sop Zerlina;
Anton Dermota ten Don Ottavio; Otto Edelmann bass Leporello; Walter Berry bass Masetto; Deszö Ernster bass Commendatore; Vienna State Opera Chorus; Vienna Philharmonic Orchestra / Wilhelm Furtwängler
Stage director Herbert Graf
Film director Paul Czinner
DG DVD 073 019-9GH (177 minutes: Ⓕ
Picture format 4:3, Sound 1.0, Region 0, NTSC)
Recorded in 1954

Paul Czinner's ground-breaking film of Herbert Graf's much-praised Salzburg production of the day, intelligently using the vast spaces of the Felsenreitschule, was not made live but filmed, often at night. It is an invaluable souvenir of a style now out of fashion – huge, elaborate sets, period costume, little directorial interference, missing out, for instance, any sense of fate catching up with Giovanni. It houses Furtwängler's equally unfashionable reading, romantic and big-boned, taking its time to unfold the drama.

Siepi, though rather debonair and bland by comparison with, say, Sir Thomas Allen's Giovanni (reviewed below), sings with vigour and elegance. Della Casa's convincingly sung and acted Elvira is a model of Mozartian style: she would be welcome in any production today, when such security and conviction is at a premium. Grümmer, always such a sincere artist, dispenses Anna's music in gloriously firm tone and acts credibly. She is partnered by Dermota's smoothly sung Ottavio, unfortunately deprived of 'Dalla sua pace', which he sings so fluently elsewhere. Edelmann is too Germanic in voice and mien for Leporello. Berger looks much too old for Zerlina and acts coyly, though she sings sweetly. Berry, looking like her son, is a charming though inexperienced Masetto, Ernster a middling Commendatore.

The camera-work is fairly rudimentary, but the picture quality is amazingly clear given the film's age. The sound is more than adequate, except when Della Casa's tone becomes distorted at her most forthright moments. As an interpretation of the piece this is no match for the Allen version, but it has its place in the history of filming opera and is welcome on DVD.

Don Giovanni
Sir Thomas Allen bar Don Giovanni; Carolyn James sop Donna Anna; Carol Vaness sop Donna Elvira; Kjell Magnus Sandve ten Don Ottavio; Ferruccio Furlanetto bass Leporello; Andrea Rost sop Zerlina; Reinhard Dorn bass Masetto; Matthias Hölle bass Commendatore; Cologne Opera Chorus; Cologne Gürzenich Orch / James Conlon
Stage director José Montes-Bequer
Video director José Montes-Bequer
ArtHaus Musik DVD 100 020 (173 minutes: Region 0). Recorded live in 1991 Ⓕ ●

For all those tired of and/or irritated by modern, psychological stagings of Don Giovanni, this traditional yet highly intelligent Cologne production will come as a blessed relief. In Michael Hampe's own dark-hued, spare and consistent sets, the drama moves swiftly to its appointed end, and the only disappointment is his failure to make Giovanni's descent into Hell at all threatening. Hampe is adept at giving his characters just enough to do, in terms of Personenregie, without taking them beyond the bounds of the feasible in terms of acting while singing. In the title-role, Allen probably needed no coaching at all, as by 1991 he was acknowledged as the leading Giovanni of his day, perhaps any day. He confirms that reputation here in an interpretation that blends magnetism, single-minded purpose (seduction) and cruelty in about equal measures. His murderous intents towards the Commendatore and in Act 2 towards Masetto, and his beating and threatening of Leporello all exhibit the idea of the Don as near-psychopath. Allen sings the role with total command of every nuance in aria, ensemble and recitative. It is an absolutely riveting performance, finely seconded by Furlanetto's Leporello, also alive to every aspect of his part's text and movement.

Nobody else in the cast achieves quite that level of distinction, although Carol Vaness, hitherto an Anna, sings Elvira with spirit and acts convincingly within a given convention. Her warm, firm soprano is equal to all the demands Mozart places on it. Carolyn James is a properly distraught Anna and sings with some flair, but her largish voice hardens uncomfortably under pressure. The Ottavio is adequate, no more, as is true of the Masetto and Commendatore, but Rost's youthful, appealing Zerlina is worth watching and hearing, especially in her encounter with Giovanni, where she exactly evinces the girl's uncertain, vulnerable reactions.

Conlon conducts a direct, unfussy reading at sensible speeds, very much in agreement with the action taking place above him, and his orchestra plays with grace and drive as required. The picture and sound are exemplary.

Die Entführung aus dem Serail
Eva Mei sop Konstanze; Patrizia Ciofi sop Blonde; Rainer Trost ten Belmonte; Mehrzad Montazeri ten Pedrillo; Kurt Rydl bass Osmin; Markus John spkr Pasha Selim; Chorus and Orchestra of Maggio Musicale Fiorentino / Zubin Mehta
Stage director Eike Gramss
Video director George Blume
TDK Mediactive DVD DV-OPEADS Ⓕ
(136 minutes: Picture format 16:9, Sound 2.0, 5.1 and DTS 5.1, Region 0). Recorded live in 2002 ●

What a pleasure it is to come upon this Seraglio, freshly recorded in Florence's beautiful Teatro della Pergola. It's straightforward without being staid, a crisp, witty, fast-moving production – and in Christoph Wagenknecht's colourful set, a seascape fronted with swiftly sliding panels in Turkish patterns, visually delightful as well.

Musically, too, it holds its end up. Zubin Mehta is not an ideal Mozartian, but he conducts with affectionate warmth and theatrical verve, and he has a first-rate cast. Eva Mei, a passionate (if disconcertingly Turkish-looking) Konstanze, sings with a fiery virtuosity which makes 'Marten aller Arten' genuinely expressive and no mere showpiece. Rainer Trost, technically adept if occasionally reedy, copes elegantly even with the fiendish 'Ich baue ganz', but plays Belmonte as rather a ninny, leaving the real heroism to Mehrzad Montazeri's livewire, fresh-voiced Pedrillo. Patrizia Ciofi's Blonde is a truly terrifying little spitfire with a penetrating, glassy voice that unfortunately splinters around high E, but she strikes comic sparks off Kurt Rydl's magnificent Osmin. He sings with irresistible gusto, lacking only that last ounce of buffo richness, and thankfully plays not some proto-Ayatollah, but the baffled, vulnerable bully the music depicts. Young viewers may appreciate his pet watch-crocodile.

This performance is very satisfying – and entirely recommendable.

The Magic Flute
Ulrike Sonntag sop Pamina; Deon van der Walt ten Tamino; Cornelius Hauptmann bass Sarastro; Andrea Frei sop Queen of Night; Thomas Mohr bar Papageno; Patricia Rozario sop Papagena; Sebastian Holecek bass-bar Speaker; Kevin Connors ten Monostatos; Elizabeth Whitehouse sop First Lady; Helene Schneiderman mez Second Lady; Renée Morloc mez Third Lady; Ludwigsburg Festival Choir and Orch / Wolfgang Gönnenwein
Stage director Axel Manthey
Video director Ruth Kärch
ArtHaus Musik DVD 100 188 (147 minutes: Ⓕ
Picture format 4:3, Sound 2:0, Region 0)
Recorded live in 1992 ●

This is one of the most wondrous and simple stagings of Mozart's elevated Singspiel yet. As its musical attributes are almost as excellent, it is an experience no one with DVD should miss. The action is choreographed in a manner precisely fitting the mood of the moment, serious or comic. Details, such as the dragon, animals responding to Tamino's flute, the arrival of the three Boys, the evocation of fire and water and several others, often invitations to director's bêtises, all march here with the thought-through and pleasing-to-look-at concept. How happy that it should be preserved on video, though a pity it's in 4:3 rather than in widescreen format.

Gönnenwein conducts a reading that fits perfectly with what is happening on stage in terms of unaffected, rhythmically firm and keenly articulated playing from his fine orchestra. Deon van der Walt's Tamino is a well-known quantity but he surpasses himself here in strong tone and finely moulded phrasing. He has a fit partner in Ulrike Sonntag's pure-voiced, moving Pamina. Thomas Mohr, though unflatteringly attired, is a nicely unfussy and gently amusing Papageno. Good and evil, at bottom and top of the range, are not so happily done. Hauptmann's visually impressive Sarastro lacks vocal presence and tends to unsteadiness. Similarly Frei's formidable figure as Queen of Night produces an edgy, uncontrolled sound. Ladies and Boys are all admirable.

The video direction is sensitive; the sound, for the most part clear and well balanced, suffers from occasional moments of distortion. But that shouldn't detract from your enjoyment of this life-enhancing experience.

Mussorgsky

Boris Godunov (complete version, 1872)
Robert Lloyd bass Boris Godunov; Alexei Steblianko ten Grigory; Olga Borodina mez Marina; Alexander Morosov bass Pimen; Vladimir Ognovenko bass Varlaam; Yevgeny Boitsov ten Shuisky; Igor Yan ten Missail; Sergei Leiferkus bass Rangoni; Larissa Dyadkova mez Feodor; Olga Kondina sop Xenia; Yevgenia Perlassova mez Nurse; Ludmila Filatova mez Hostess; Vladimir Solodovnikov ten Simpleton; Mikhail Kit bar Shchelkalov; Yevgeny Fedotov bass Nikitich; Grigory Karasyov bass Mityukha; Kirov Opera Chorus and Orchestra / Valery Gergiev
Stage directors Andrei Tarkovsky/ Stephen Lawless Video director Humphrey Burton
Philips ② DVD 075 089-9PH2 (221 minutes: Ⓕ
NTSC, Picture format 4:3, Sound 2.0, DTS 5.1, Region 0). Recorded live at the Mariinsky Theatre, St Petersburg in 1990

Film director Andrei Tarkovsky, famous for science-fiction classics Solaris and Stalker and the historical epic Andrei Rublev, was a master of symbolic effect – the gigantic pendulum, the grotesquely faceless Idiot, living statuary, the angelic murdered child amid falling snow. But against such stylisation the action, vividly captured by video director Humphrey Burton, comes correspondingly alive, no stiff Bolshoi pageant; chorus and soloists act their hearts out.

Borodina is an ideal Marina, beautiful and burnished of tone but chillingly self-absorbed; perhaps rightly, she strikes more sparks with Leiferkus's vampiric, honey-toned Rangoni than with Steblianko's stolid but lyrical Pretender. Ognovenko's Varlaam is somewhat young and baritonal, but foreshadows stardom, as does Dyadkova's superbly touching, plangent Feodor. Boitsov's Shuisky, Morosov's noble Pimen and Solodovnikov's Idiot are less outstanding but still excellent. The only outsider is at the centre. Robert Lloyd's Boris first appears (reflecting contemporary portraits) moustached but beardless; the customary hedge appears in later acts, neatly marking the passing years. His finely shaded basso cantante has been criticised for being too light, but such doubts fade before his idiomatic-sounding Russian and magnificent characterisation, culminating in a truly harrowing death scene.

Gergiev's reading is less brilliant than his recent dual recording, often rather soft-centred; but he still brings out the sheer anguished beauty of the score. The excellent stereo soundtrack has also been remastered into DTS surround-sound, and very airy and ambient this sounds, from the opening wave of applause sweeping across the auditorium. However, many systems – some of today's surround-sound televisions, for example – cannot decode DTS so it's advisable to check.

Offenbach

La belle Hélène P
Dame Felicity Lott sop Hélène; Yann Beuron ten Paris; Michel Sénéchal ten Ménélas; Laurent Naouri bar Agamemnon; François Le Roux bar Calchas; Marie-Ange Torodovitch mez Oreste; Eric Huchet bar Achille; Alain Gabriel ten Ajax I; Laurent Alvaro

bar Ajax II; Hjördis Thébault sop Bacchis; Stéphanie d'Oustrac sop Leoena; Magali Léger sop Parthoenis; Choeur des Musiciens du Louvre; Les Musiciens du Louvre / Marc Minkowski
Stage director Laurent Pelly
Video director Ross MacGibbon
TDK DVD DV-OPLBH (153 minutes: Picture format 16:9; Sound 2.0, 5.0 and DTS 5.0; Region 2). Recorded live in 2000. Includes documentary, 'Behind The Scenes'. Ⓕ ●

Minkowski triumphs here – this is the most idiomatic Offenbach conducting since René Leibowitz. DVD also reveals how deftly he propels Pelly's splendidly loopy production. The alarmingly tinny opening bars come from a bedside TV, before which a frustrated housewife dozes. As the music proper starts, her dreams become the production, full of glamorous magazine imagery – royalty, travel, sun-kissed Greek beaches – without ever quite leaving the bedroom. It's properly surreal, satirical and sexy. Dame Felicity fits this perfectly, a soprano Helen as opposed to Harnoncourt's mezzo Vesselina Kasarova (on ArtHaus Musik, reviewed below), slightly more mature but no less alluring and displaying greater comic talent. She wafts dizzily through the action in a hilarious haze of newly liberated lubricity, her delightful Franglais enhancing the comedy. Beuron sings Paris with uncommonly melting tone, even in his fiendish yodelling song, and radiates fresh-faced toyboy charm. Menelaus is the veteran Sénéchal, beaming with complacent idiocy; with Le Roux's manic Calchas and Naouri's stiff-necked Agamemnon their Patriotic Trio is a gem. Todorovitch's Orestes is delightful, as are 'his' floozies Leoena and Parthoenis, and the lesser kings. There isn't a weak link, the fresh-voiced chorus and dancers mingling roles and costumes with manic energy. One of the best DVDs yet.

La belle Hélène
Vesselina Kasarova mez Hélène; Steve Davislim ten Achille; Deon van der Walt ten Paris; Oliver Widmer bar Agamemnon; Ruben Amoretti ten Ajax I; Cheyne Davidson bar Ajax II; Ruth Rohner sop Bacchis; Carlos Chausson bar Calchas; Volker Vogel ten Ménélas; Liliana Nichiteanu mez Oreste; Jakob Baumann bar Slave; Zurich Opera House Chorus and Orchestra / Nikolaus Harnoncourt
Stage director Helmut Lohner
Video director Hartmut Schottler
Arthaus Musik DVD 100 086 (124 minutes: Region 0) Recorded live in 1997 Ⓕ ●

This Zurich production from 1997 fully enters into the spirit of Offenbach's satirical romp, hardly ever stepping over into farce. Everything is at once disciplined, contained and at the same time appropriately zany under the observant stage direction of Helmut Lohner.

In the pit is Harnoncourt to ensure that the musical values are as exemplary as the visual ones. His Zurich band is of a suitably small enough size to allow for all the instrumental detail to be clearly delineated. Strings use little vibrato. The composer's innate wit is to the fore. In sum, the score sounds fresh-minted.

The polyglot cast, speaking and singing excellent French, enjoys its collective self, headed by Kasarova's languidly erotic Helen. She sings her music in a suitably suggestive manner, flaunting her vocal as much as her physical attributes. Deon van der Walt, a lively Paris, sings with the sweetness and sensitivity of the best French tenors of the past in this genre. The comic roles are all enthusiastically taken, but among the lesser parts Liliana Nichiteanu steals the honours with her cheeky Oreste, sung in a firmly projected, attractive mezzo and with a glint in her eye – surely a star in the making.

Add perceptive video direction by Hartmut Schottler and superb sound and you have what amounts to an outright winner.

Poulenc

Les dialogues des Carmélites
Didier Henry bar Marquis de la Force; Anne Sophie Schmidt sop Blanche de la Force; Laurence Dale ten Chevalier de la Force; Léonard Pezzino ten L'Aumônier; Christophe Fel bass Le geôlier; Nadine Denize mez Madame de Croissy; Valérie Millot sop Madame Lidoine; Hedwig Fassbender mez Mère Marie; Patricia Petibon sop Soeur Constance; Michèle Besse contr Mère Jeanne; Allison Elaine Cook mez Soeur Mathilde; Ivan Ludlow ten L'Officier; Vincent de Rooster ten First Commissaire; Merih Kazbek bass Second Commissaire; Yves Ernst bar Thierry; Jenz Kiertzner bar Javelinot; Rhine National Opera Chorus; Strasbourg Philharmonic Orchestra / Jan Latham-König
Stage director Marthe Keller
Video director Don Kent
ArtHaus Musik DVD 100 004 (149 minutes: Region 0). Recorded live in 1999 Ⓕ ●

Marthe Keller's staging of Poulenc's austere, deeply eloquent opera about the martyrdom of a group of nuns during the French Revolution was produced at the Opéra du Rhin early in 1999. Keller's simple ideas march precisely with the intentions of the original, the plain sets and economy of movement mirroring the direct simplicity of Poulenc's beautiful score.

Every artist here performs in a wholly dedicated fashion as part of a well-tutored ensemble, no one more so than Anne Sophie Schmidt in depicting the psychological struggle and vulnerability of the central character, Blanche de la Force. With her greatly expressive features and her refined voice, Schmidt's portrayal is starkly moving. In complete contrast is the bright, radiant, perfectly sung Constance of Petibon. Among the older members of the Convent community, Nadine Denize plays her two scenes as the Old Prioress with the authority and concentration they call for, going to her death as she loses her faith in an agonising bout of self-understanding. Hedwig Fassbender is all stern authority as Mother Marie, although one senses sympathy behind the harsh exterior, which is how it should be in this part. Valérie Millot is outwardly more sympathetic and warm as the new Prioress, Madame Lidoine, who instils courage in her charges when it comes to the crunch and, one by one, they go to the guillotine.

Video direction, sound and picture quality are admirable. This is one of the most worthwhile opera performances yet to appear on DVD.

Previn

A Streetcar Named Desire
Renée Fleming sop Blanche Dubois; Elizabeth Futral sop Stella Kowalski; Rodney Gilfry bar Stanley Kowalski; Anthony Dean Griffey ten Mitch; Judith Forst mez Eunice Hubbell; San Francisco Opera Orchestra / André Previn
Stage director Colin Graham
Video director Kirk Browning
ArtHaus Musik DVD 100 138 Ⓕ
(167 minutes: Picture Format 16:9, Sound 2.0, Regions 2, 5). Recorded live in 1998

The success of André Previn's first opera has been remarkable. The importance of a composer and subject that are so widely known is clear, but Previn also demonstrates the value of a musical language that can be appreciated by the ordinary music-loving public.

Perhaps the most convincing portrayal is that of Rodney Gilfrey as the rough worker Stanley, perpetually chewing, smoking or drinking, periodically exploding into violence, but with beefy baritone always beautifully produced. Anthony Dean Griffey is almost equally good as the naive, mother-loving Mitch, so cruelly deceived by Blanche; while Elizabeth Futral does quite wonderfully well as the tender Stella. For all the beauty of her arias and her high notes throughout, perhaps the least convincing is Renée Fleming herself. Partly, this is because Previn too often pushes the voice into its higher reaches irrespective of natural speech patterns. It's almost as though he was determined to emphasise that this is opera, not musical theatre. In addition, though, Fleming's starry presence requires some suspension of belief to accept the full extent of Blanche's mental deterioration. But overall the work makes gripping listening and viewing, and the DVD is a marvellous memento of what was surely a significant landmark in operatic history.

Prokofiev

The Love for Three Oranges (sung in French)
Gabriel Bacquier bar King of Clubs; Jean-Luc Viala ten Prince; Hélène Perraguin mez Princess Clarissa; Vincent le Texier bass-bar Leandro; Georges Gautier ten Truffaldino; Didier Henry bar Pantaloon; Farfarello; Gregory Reinhart bass Tchelio; Michèle Lagrange sop Fata Morgana; Consuelo Caroli mez Linetta; Brigitte Fournier sop Nicoletta; Catherine Dubosc sop Ninetta; Jules Bastin bass Cook; Béatrice Uria-Monzon mez Smeraldina; Lyon Opera Orchestra and Chorus / Kent Nagano
Stage director Louis Erlo
Video director Jean-François Jung
ArtHaus Musik DVD 100 404 (106 minutes: Ⓕ
Picture format 16:9, Sound 2.0, Region 2 and 5)
Recorded live in 1989 ●

Yet another classic opera video reappears refreshed on DVD and is all the more valuable since the Gramophone Award-winning CD set is currently deleted. The DVD, though, metaphorically flicks a light-switch to reveal that the fresh, fluent conducting and singing are only elements in a splendidly lively, witty and thoroughly integrated production.

As the production's pace demands, the singers are mostly young, although old stagers Jules Bastin and Gabriel Bacquier provide resonant ballast. Jean-Luc Viala's chubby, light-toned Prince, Georges Gautier's amiable wide-boy Truffaldino, Vincent le Texier's reptilian Leandro, Michèle Lagrange's Wagnerian Fata Morgana, Catherine Dubosc's delicate Ninetta – they are all excellent, but the real star is the ensemble, with no weak links and the benefit of natural French. Whether or not this is the 'original' language, Prokofiev approved it; more viewers will understand it; and to my ear it fits the vocal line at least as well as the Russian. The DVD transfer refreshes the original recording but also reveals its limitations: slightly thin sound and some grain in the picture. But you'll enjoy yourself too much to care.

Puccini

La bohème
Mirella Freni sop Mimì; Gianni Raimondi ten Rodolfo; Adriana Martino sop Musetta; Rolando Panerai bar Marcello; Gianni Maffeo bar Schaunard; Ivo Vinco bass Colline; Carlo Badioli bass Benoit; Carlo Badioli bass Alcindoro; Franco Ricciardi ten Parpignol; Giuseppe Morresi bass Sergeant; Carlo Forti bass Customs Official; Chorus and Orchestra of La Scala, Milan / Herbert von Karajan
Stage director Franco Zeffirelli
Video director Wilhelm Semmelroth
DG DVD 073 027-9GH (111 minutes: Ⓕ
Picture format 4:3, Sound 2.0, Region 0)
Recorded 1965 ●●

Dating from 1965, this is a thoroughly old-fashioned opera film. As was often Karajan's practice, the singers mime to their own prerecording, not always in perfect synchronisation, and to see an ample fortissimo phrase launched with apparently no effort at all is disconcerting. Zeffirelli's La Scala sets have been reproduced but amplified for the purpose of filming, and the joins between 'real' and painted fence in the Barrière d'Enfer scene, for example, are very obvious. The lighting is often most unconvincing when the action is so would-be naturalistic: a single candle can fill the stage with light, and the proverbial blind man with half an eye would have no difficulty in finding Mimì's dropped key.

And yet it is also as near an ideal Bohème as you could hope to find. Firstly because there are no 'guest artists' – this is La Scala's Bohème cast of the period; all of them are at home in this production and with each other – and all are believably young or youngish Bohemians. Mirella Freni was near the beginning of her international career, her voice at its freshest, and her acting is all the more affecting for its restraint: a downcast glance, a shy smile. Gianni Raimondi partners her very well and sings with elegance and ardour. Rolando Panerai is an immensely likeable and finely sung Marcello, Gianni Maffeo hardly his inferior as Schaunard and Ivo Vinco is a tow-haired, cheroot-smoking young philosopher. Adriana Martino's Musetta is, if you like, conventionally tarty in her vivid scarlet décolleté gown, but she sings charmingly. Karajan sounds as though he is enjoying himself thoroughly, never pressing the music or his singers too hard, quite often indulging both with a rubato that encourages long and eloquent line. The recorded balance is at times peculiar: Rodolfo's friends are evidently in the street below when they urge him to hurry, but they must have climbed the fire escape to comment ironically that he has 'found his poetry' in Mimì. The lovers sound properly off-stage at the end of Act 1 (of course Raimondi takes the unwritten high C) but they are quite visibly on it, in the doorway. But even these little flaws are oddly endearing; this is definitely a Bohème to live with.

La bohème
Mirella Freni sop Mimì; Luciano Pavarotti ten Rodolfo; Sandra Pacetti sop Musetta; Gino Quilico bar Marcello; Nicolai Ghiaurov bass Colline; Stephen Dickson bar Schaunard; Italo Tajo bass Benoit; Alcindoro; Chorus and Orchestra of the San Francisco Opera / Tiziano Severini
Stage Director Francesca Zambello. Video Director Brian Large
ArtHaus Musik DVD 100 046 (116 minutes: Region 0). Recorded live in 1988 Ⓕ ●

This recording received a complimentary review from John Steane when it appeared in LaserDisc format back in May 1993. One can share his enthusiasm for the restraint and experience of Freni and Pavarotti, who (even in 1988, when the performance took place) didn't look like the young lovers predicated by the libretto, but who made up for it with the 'rich humanity' (JBS's words) of their portrayals, although both evinced the occasional moment of strain that confirms they were no longer in the full flush of vocal youth. Ghiaurov, at 59, remains a tower of strength as Colline, although his voice sounds a shade rusty. These veterans tend to show up the relatively casual, upfront performances of the remaining singers. The conductor is sympathetic to the needs of singers and score.

The staging is traditional in the best sense, even if it cannot rival the great Zeffirelli/La Scala production, also with Freni (reviewed above). Brian Large has his cameras in the right place at the right time, with a fine balance of distant and close-up shots. The sound has plenty of atmosphere, but, as with many LaserDiscs and DVDs, the voices aren't given enough prominence.

Madama Butterfly
Raina Kabaivanska sop Madama Butterfly; Nazzareno Antinori ten Pinkerton; Lorenzo Saccomani bar Sharpless; Eleonora Jankovic mez Suzuki; Mario Ferrara ten Goro; Giuseppe Zecchillo bass Prince Yamadori; Gianni Brunelli bass The Bonze; Bruno Grella bar Yakuside; Carlo Meliciani bar Imperial Commissioner; Bruno Tessari bass Registrar; Lina Rossi mez Madama Butterfly's Mother; Annalia Bazzani sop The Aunt; Sandra Zamuner sop The Cousin; Verona Arena Chorus and Orchestra / Maurizio Arena
Stage director Brian Large
Warner Music Vision/NVC Arts DVD Ⓕ
4509 99220-2 (144 minutes: Picture format PAL 4:3, Sound 2.0, Regions 2-6)
Recorded live in 1983

If you want to know the difference between a star and a mere talent look no further. In this 1983 film Raina Kabaivanska has every disadvantage stacked against her: she's tall, obviously not 15 years old, and she's singing in the Arena at Verona, whose sheer vastness calls for ample gestures. A good deal of mopping and mowing is required of her by the stage director, and sweeping movements of the arms to show off her floor-length sleeves. Like nature, Verona abhors a vacuum, so Butterfly cannot merely sit still watching for the dawn during the humming chorus: she must walk pensively through her garden and stand in vigil at the uppermost point of it. And yet Kabaivanska surmounts all this (and a tenor who shows no trace of emotion on his flabby features until Sharpless scolds him in the final scene) by sheer ample glamour of voice and the sort of acting that you will never see anywhere except on the operatic stage, and rarely enough there. A great and moving performance. The Pinkerton sings well enough, the Sharpless and Suzuki are fine, but this is Kabaivanska's Butterfly.

Rossini

Il barbiere di Siviglia
Manuel Lanza bar Figaro; Vesselina Kasarova mez Rosina; Reinaldo Macias ten Count Almaviva; Elizabeth Magnuson mez Berta; Carlos Chausson bar Doctor Bartolo; Valery Murga bar Officer; Nicolai Ghiaurov bass Don Basilio; Kenneth Roberson bass Ambrogio; Zurich Opera House Chorus and Orchestra / Nello Santi
Stage director Grischa Asagaroff
Video director Felix Breisach
TDK Euro Arts ② DVD DV-OPBDS Ⓕ
(161 minutes: Picture format 16:9,

Sound DTS 5.1 and 2.0, Region 0)
Recorded live in April 2001

This set offers a novel but never outlandish view of an over-familiar work. It is most distinguished by Luigi Perego's utterly delightful décor, which places the work in the art-deco period. The first scene rather overplays the gimmick of Almaviva arriving on a motor-cycle with a sidecar and Figaro appearing on a bicycle, but once indoors Asagaroff's direction proves quite witty, eschewing slapstick, making the characters larger than life, as perhaps they should be, but never to the point of exaggeration. He is helped by a youthful cast. Although rather young-looking, Carlos Chausson's fine observation of Bartolo's quirks are in the best tradition of performing the role and his singing of his virtuoso aria is masterly. Manuel Lanza's slightly too laid-back and modern Figaro and Reinaldo Macias's subtly acted, adequately sung Almaviva form part of a true ensemble. At its centre is Vesselina Kasarova's Rosina. She gives a typically individual performance, full in tone, clean in fioriture, but a bit too calculated dramatically speaking. Nicolai Ghiaurov, though his voice is a shadow of its former self, makes a genial Basilio. One of the delights here is veteran conductor Nello Santi's clean-cut reading of the score, never drawing attention to itself, always aware of Rossini's irresistible orchestration. A thoroughly enjoyable performance.

Il barbiere di Siviglia
Hermann Prey bar Figaro; Teresa Berganza mez Rosina; Luigi Alva ten Almaviva; Enzo Dara bar Doctor Bartolo; Paolo Montarsolo bass Don Basilio; Stefania Malagù mez Berta; Renato Cesari bass Fiorello; Luigi Roni bar Officer; Hans Kraemmer bass Ambrogio;
Milan La Scala Orchestra and Chorus / Claudio Abbado
Stage director Jean-Pierre Ponnelle
Video director Ernst Wild
DG DVD 073 021-9GH (142 minutes: Picture format 4:3, Sound 2.0, Region 0) Ⓕ

Claudio Abbado's youthful Beatle-cut marks the age of this film, still one of the better screen Barbieres if not absolutely the best. Jean-Pierre Ponnelle based it on his Scala stagings, but filmed it, as he always preferred, in studio and in lip-sync – more successfully than most. As a result, it looks and sounds very much fresher on DVD than contemporary videotapes.

The cast reproduces that of Abbado's 1972 CD recording, but with La Scala forces; and a very strong cast it is. Teresa Berganza, often rather unexciting in sound alone, reveals a charming presence here, only a shade mature for a role she had sung since the 1950s. In the manner of that era (which thought Callas too strident) her Rosina is coquette rather than minx, but with her slightly resinous tone and sensuous delivery 'Contro il cor' is irresistible. One would never guess Luigi Alva had been singing Almaviva for just as long, still youthful-looking, honeyed and elegant, even if his heavily aspirated ornament – the 'ha-ha' effect – would not be acceptable today. Hermann Prey has everything a good Figaro needs, but despite his warmly incisive baritone and cheerfully egocentric, athletic characterisation he simply isn't idiomatic enough. Enzo Dara's pompous, foppish little Bartolo is amusingly observed and richly sung, but he suffers unduly from the film's major drawback, the direction.

Ponnelle feels obliged to reinforce the comedy with a barrage of ingenious but spurious 'business', such as Basilio's alchemical explosions, and choppy editing. The overall effect is enjoyable but overdone, and is no substitute for the confidence in Rossini evident in John Cox's Glyndebourne production – with the sparkling Maria Ewing and John Rawnsley's oily rogue of a Figaro – now overdue for a DVD appearance.

L'italiana in Algeri
Nuccia Focile sop Elvira; Rudolf Hartmann bass Haly; Doris Soffel mez Isabella; Robert Gambill ten Lindoro; Günter von Kannen bass Mustafà; Enric Serra bar Taddeo; Susan McLean mez Zulma; Bulgarian Male Chorus, Sofia; Stuttgart Radio Symphony Orchestra / Ralf Weikert
Stage director Michael Hampe. Video director Claus Viller
Arthaus Musik DVD 100 120 (117 minutes: Region 0). Recorded live in 1987 Ⓕ ●

Bravi tutti! For a start, the house and stage: just the right size. And then, comprehensively, the whole team, with every aspect of the production delightfully cared for. Ralf Weikert conducts with zestful elegance, and the excellent players respond. The chorus is alert and precise, the camera catching never a lifeless face and several very funny ones. Each of the soloists fits the part, working both as individuals and as an ensemble. The comic roles are played amusingly without clowning. Doris Soffel as Isabella has charm and dignity. The range and runs are well managed, though she is probably best in the lyrical phrases of the cavatina 'Per lui che adoro' and the aristocracy of her bearing in 'Pensa alla patria'. The Mustafà, Günter von Kannen, specialises in comic roles but probably not in rapid passagework, of which there is much here; nevertheless, his sonorous voice establishes character, and his expressive mouth and eyes do the rest.

But for once the producer deserves top billing: he does his rightful job extremely well and doesn't exceed it. All the staging is effective, graceful and confident. With sets and costumes that are a distinct pleasure to look at, Michael Hampe's production is never short of good ideas and never imposes 'concepts'.

Tancredi
Bernadette Manca di Nissa contr Tancredi; María Bayo sop Amenaide; Raúl Giménez ten Argirio; Ildebrando D'Arcangelo bass Orbazzano; Katarzyna Bak mez Isaura; Maria Pia Piscitelli sop Roggiero; Richard Baker hpd South German Radio

Chorus; Stuttgart Radio Symphony Orchestra / Gianluigi Gelmetti
Stage director Pier Luigi Pizzi
Video director Claus Viller
ArtHaus Musik DVD 100 206 (166 minutes: Ⓕ
Picture format 4:3, Sound 2.0, Regions 2-8)
Recorded live in 1992

Today, although there are a few decent CD recordings, stagings of Tancredi are rare, so it is good to have this crisply recorded DVD from the 1992 Schwetzingen Festival.

Visually, Pizzi's vaguely 18th-century, neo-classical pastiche staging is sumptuous. If the action is rather static, the opera's conventional structure is largely to blame; the individual performances are spirited enough. Musically, too, this can stand comparison with its CD rivals. Gelmetti's conducting is lively and serviceable, supporting some excellent singing, not least from Giménez as Argirio. Bayo, as his slandered daughter, is equally impressive, pure of voice yet intensely expressive and committed. As her jiltee and false accuser, D'Arcangelo combines a well-focused basso cantante with a youthfully malevolent presence. Singing-contest winners Bak and Piscitelli are excellent comprimarii.

Only the title-role is a problem. Even by operatic standards Manca di Nissa doesn't remotely resemble Tasso's tragic knight – more like Mistress Quickly en travesti. Vocally, though, she is splendidly rich-toned and heroic. This is especially welcome when, after the tragic finale true to Tasso and Voltaire she is resurrected for the more popular happy ending Rossini later provided, a welcome coda to a enjoyable and valuable performance.

Shostakovich

Lady Macbeth of the Mtsensk district
Galina Vishnevskaya sop Katerina Izmailova; Nicolai Gedda ten Sergei; Dimiter Petkov bass Boris Izmailov; Werner Krenn ten Zinovi Izmailov; Robert Tear ten Shabby Peasant; Taru Valjakka sop Aksinya; Martyn Hill ten Teacher; Leonard Andrzej Mróz bass Priest; Aage Haugland bass Police Sergeant; Birgit Finnilä mez Sonyetka; Alexander Malta bass Old Convict; Leslie Fyson ten Millhand; Officer; Scott Emerson ten Porter; John Noble bar Steward; Colin Appleton ten Coachman; Foreman I; Alan Byers ten Foreman II; James Lewington ten Foreman III; Oliver Broome bass Policeman; Edgar Fleet ten Drunken Guest; David Beavan bass Sentry; Linda Richardson mez Woman Convict; Ambrosian Opera Chorus; London Philharmonic Orchestra / Mstislav Rostropovich
Film director Petr Weigl
Carlton Entertainment DVD ID5655CLDVD Ⓕ
(100 minutes: Region 1). ◉

Petr Weigl returns to form with this remarkable realisation of Shostakovich's scarifying drama. Filming in his native Czech Republic, as usual with actors lip-synching singers, he nevertheless brings its nasty and brutish setting to vivid life. Only the Siberian trek looks a little milder than traditional depictions, but it is accurate enough. The atmospheric photography of the Izmailov farm's barren, lamplit rooms and bathhouse adds a verismo dimension to the music's quasi-expressionist force. You really feel a place like this would breed adultery and impulsive murder. The soundtrack is the classic Rostropovich recording, generally preferable to Myung-Whun Chung's more recent version with Maria Ewing (DG).

Its splendid pace and vivid playing suit the film, as do its lively effects, though it is substantially cut. The generally excellent actors do their best with the limitations of lip-synch, no doubt assisted by Czech's kinship with Russian. The Katerina is youngish, nervy and intense, tragically ripe pickings for Sergei's – and indeed her own – passion, but Vishnevskaya's maturely resonant dramatic soprano sits uneasily on her. The Sergei melds better with Gedda's bright tones to suggest the ruthless predator beneath the boyish charm, and Aksinya, old Izmailov and the Old Convict are splendidly portrayed. The studio acoustic is too evident, especially with the clarity of DVD mastering, to make the outdoor scenes convincing. But they achieve their effect through the music none the less. Highly recommended.

J Strauss II

Die Fledermaus
Pamela Coburn sop Rosalinde; Janet Perry sop Adele; Eberhard Waechter bar Eisenstein; Josef Hopferwieser ten Alfred; Wolfgang Brendel bar Doctor Falke; Brigitte Fassbaender mez Prince Orlofsky; Benno Kusche bar Frank; Ferry Gruber ten Doctor Blind; Irene Steinbeisser sop Ida; Franz Muxeneder spkr Frosch; Ivan Unger spkr Ivan
Bavarian State Orchestra and Opera Chorus / Carlos Kleiber
Stage director Otto Schenk
Video director Brian Large
DG DVD 073 007-9GH (155 minutes: Ⓕ
Picture format 4:3: Sound 2.0: Region 0)
Recorded live in 1987 ◉◉

Carlos Kleiber is for many the outstanding Johann Strauss conductor of our time, finding grace and subtlety in the music that evades all others. His audio recording of Die Fledermaus (DG) is acknowledged as nigh perfect, spoilt only by its bizarre casting of Ivan Rebroff as Orlofsky. Happily there's no such drawback here, and indeed there could scarcely be anyone better than Brigitte Fassbaender to portray the youthful Russian prince. The only real concern is with veteran baritone Eberhard Waechter as Eisenstein, giving the suggestion of an elderly roué rather than more youthful high spirits. Reviewing the LaserDisc issue (DG), reservations were expressed about the two leading ladies; but here it is hard not to be won over by both their singing and their looks.

Otto Schenk's staging is quite superb, with every movement apt to both music and situation. The riotous ballet sequence (Strauss's Unter Donner und Blitz) justly stops the show. Brian Large's film direction is perfectly judged, and the Act 2 finale, with Kleiber joyfully sharing the expressions of fraternity, is a particular moment to cherish. In Act 3, Franz Muxeneder's comic Frosch completes the feeling of Viennese Gemütlichkeit. One really cannot imagine a more winning performance.

Die Fledermaus[a].
Bishop Home, sweet home[b]. Cilea L'arlesiana[c] – E la solita storia. Rossini Semiramide[d] – Serbami ognor sì fido. Saint-Saëns Samson et Dalila[e] – Mon coeur s'ouvre à ta voix Verdi La traviata[f] – Parigi, o cara [a]Nancy Gustafson sop Rosalinde; [a]Judith Howarth sop Adele; [a]Louis Otey bar Eisenstein; [a]Bonaventura Bottone ten Alfred; [a]Anthony Michaels-Moore bar Doctor Falke; [a]Jochen Kowalski counterten Prince Orlofsky; [a]Eric Garrett bar Frank; [a]John Dobson ten Doctor Blind; [a]Glenys Groves sop Ida; [a]John Sessions spkr Frosch; [a]Peter Archer spkr Ivan; [bdf]Dame Joan Sutherland sop [cf]Luciano Pavarotti ten [de]Marilyn Horne mez
Royal Opera House Chorus and Orchestra, Covent Garden / Richard Bonynge
Stage director John Cox
Video director Humphrey Burton
ArtHaus Musik ② DVD 100 134 (197 minutes: Region 2 and 5). Recorded live in 1990 Ⓕ ●

'Oh, what a night!' sings everybody on stage as Prince Orlofsky's ballroom takes leave of its earthly confines and sails for the happy isles borne on a tide of waltzes and a sea of champagne. It's always a good moment in Die Fledermaus, and this particular night was special. Most of those present at Covent Garden had seen a few New Year's Eves in their time, but never a one like this on December 31, 1990. And never, surely, has a prima donna been treated to such a stage party for her farewell. Dame Joan Sutherland sang that night for the last time in the house where she had made her début in 1952. Somebody had a brainwave when they thought of this as the occasion for what might otherwise have been a rather tearful event: Joan and two of her most illustrious partners of many performances would themselves be guests at Orlofsky's party in Act 2. Husband Richard Bonynge would conduct, so the party would therefore be complete. The guests slot in nicely at the moment when the revels are at their height. And there was New Year's Eve to celebrate. If the plan had a drawback it was one that concerned the opera itself. Act 3 of Fledermaus is always something of an anticlimax, and, with a celebrity recital thrown in, the middle act could seem to end with chords that cried 'Follow that!'. Happily, the production has a good move in store when, for the Finale, the backdrop for the prison scene goes up to reveal Orlofsky's ballroom aglow and once more ready to receive its guests. As for Act 1, it is extremely probable that the audiences at home will spend at least a part of it marvelling at the quality of sound and sight offered by the new medium of DVD.

Without in the least dominating, the orchestra here are present with a quite remarkable immediacy and naturalness. The outstanding voices among the cast were (in respect of pure tone) those of Judith Howarth and Anthony Michaels-Moore. Among the three celebrities, gallantly as both ladies sang, it was (and is on the film) Pavarotti whose voice had retained its quality. There is also plenty to watch, and with enjoyment. All on stage, including the chorus, act well. Humphrey Burton has supervised the filming so that the home viewer has the most privileged seat of all.

R Strauss

Elektra
Eva Marton sop Elektra; Brigitte Fassbaender mez Klytemnestra; Cheryl Studer sop Chrysothemis; Franz Grundheber bar Orestes; James King ten Aegisthus; Goran Simic bass Tutor; Waltraud Winsauer mez Confidante; Noriko Sasaki sop Trainbearer; Wilfried Gahmlich ten Young Servant; Claudio Otelli bass-bar Old Servant; Gabriele Lechner sop Overseer; Margarita Lilowa, Gabriele Sima, Margareta Hintermeier, Brigitte Poschner-Klebel, Joanna Borowska Maidservants
Vienna State Opera Chorus and Orchestra / Claudio Abbado
Stage director Harry Kupfer
Video director Brian Large
ArtHaus Musik DVD 100 048 (109 minutes: DDD) Ⓕ
Recorded live in 1989 ●●

This is an enjoyable performance, if that is the right word for Elektra's gruesome drama, of Strauss's opera (taken from the first night of a new production at the Vienna State Opera in 1989), still one of the most sensational scores of the last century. Harry Kupfer may have conceived the work in even more lurid terms than its creators Hofmannsthal and Strauss intended, but the principals' psychotic behaviour is so convincingly enacted that we are carried into the soul of all their personal tortures of the mind. Elektra herself is a determined, raddled, single-minded harridan, lording it over sister and mother, a portrayal Eva Marton carries out with a deal of conviction, once one accepts the judder in her voice. Chrysothemis becomes a writhing, overwrought, frustrated figure, at one stage seeming to fake an orgasm, all of which Studer conveys with much emphasis on physical contact with her sister. She sings the taxing role with opulent tone and soaring phraseology.

Physicality is also of the essence in Fassbaender's study of guilt and inner disintegration as a Klytemnestra of intriguing complexity, yet she still somehow manages to suggest the character's feminine attraction.

This portrayal alone makes this DVD essential viewing. Grundheber is the avenging Orestes to the life, with savagely piercing eyes and implacable tone. King is a properly futile paramour. In the activity of the extras, and such episodes as the butchering of Aegisthus and Chrysothemis wallowing in his blood-stained cloak, very little is left to the imagination. This is an enclosed world where licence and human sacrifices, unbridled in their ferocity, have taken over from order and humanity, and that was surely Kupfer's intention, so that Orestes' arrival has even more of a cleansing effect than usual.

In the pit, Abbado conducts with a single-minded intensity, constantly aware of the score's brutal and tragic aspects, and he procures playing of tremendous concentration from the Vienna Philharmonic. Although the staging takes place in Stygian gloom, you can discern more of its detail in this reincarnation on DVD, which has the added advantage of containing the whole opera on a single disc.

This is a version to buy for its absorbing, fully integrated view of Strauss's masterpiece.

Der Rosenkavalier
Dame Felicity Lott sop Die Feldmarschallin; Anne Sofie von Otter mez Octavian; Kurt Moll bass Baron Ochs; Barbara Bonney sop Sophie; Gottfried Hornik bar Faninal; Anna Gonda mez Annina; Heinz Zednik ten Valzacchi; Olivera Miljakovic sop Leitmetzerin; Wolfgang Bankl bass Notary; Peter Wimberger bass-bar Police Commissioner; Waldemar Kmentt ten Marschallin's Majordomo; Franz Kasemann ten Faninal's Majordomo; Keith Ikaia-Purdy ten Singer; Vienna State Opera Chorus and Orchestra / Carlos Kleiber
Stage director Otto Schenk
Film director Horant H Hohlfield
DG ② DVD 073 008-9GH2 Ⓕ
(193 minutes: Region 0). ●

That unpredictable spark of brilliance, Kleiber, rarely records, but he has made two video Rosenkavaliers, both excellent. If this is marginally less successful than his earlier, Munich version (DG), it still has much in its favour, in particular two of the three pivotal roles. Felicity Lott does not have the refulgent vocal power of Gwyneth Jones in Munich, but she commands the Straussian style, 'float' and all, and is much the finer actress. She creates a livelier, more humorous but also more convincingly vulnerable Marschallin, her fears and final renunciation deeply felt. Despite his mellow characterisation Manfred Jungwirth's raspingly inadequate voice handicaps the Munich set. Moll is cavernously secure from high F to low E and every bit as idiomatic, an aristocratic ox whose boorishness springs more from sublime narcissism than rustic ill-breeding. Von Otter is a convincingly boyish Octavian, valiant but gawky, and a hilariously toothy Mariandel. Her Mozartian voice is fresher than Munich's Brigitte Fassbaender, but she lacks the power to deliver the Rose with quite the right soaring beauty. Bonney's pretty young Sophie displays the finest voice on stage.

Kleiber's conducting is the most constant element: lively, swift, careful in dynamics, incisive in detail. Otto Schenk handles both stagings well, although this Marschallin's bedchamber looks rather drab. The video direction is less sure, especially in cutting away distractingly to highlight Kleiber's freeform conducting. As well as visual clarity and optional subtitles, DVD greatly improves the originally disappointing sound. Strongly recommended.

Tchaikovsky

Queen of Spades
Yuri Marusin ten Herman; Nancy Gustafson sop Lisa; Felicity Palmer mez Countess; Sergei Leiferkus bar Count Tomsky; Dimitri Kharitonov bar Prince Yeletsky; Marie-Ange Todorovitch contr Pauline; Graeme Matheson-Bruce ten Chekalinsky; Andrew Slater bass Surin; Robert Burt ten Chaplitsky; Geoffrey Pogson ten Major-Domo; Christopher Thornton-Holmes bass Narumov; Enid Hartle mez Governess; Rachel Tovey sop Masha; Glyndebourne Festival Chorus; London Philharmonic Orchestra / Sir Andrew Davis
Stage director Graham Vick
Film director Peter Maniura
ArtHaus Musik DVD 100 272 (170 minutes: Ⓕ
Picture format 4:3, Sound 2.0, Region 0)
Recorded live in 1992

Graham Vick's 1992 staging is worthy of this extraordinary score. He reflects exactly the highly charged emotions and sense of brooding menace pervading the composer's re-enactment of Pushkin's story, thus creating a compelling psychodrama that compels both eye and ear. Davis catches most, if not all, of the score's romantic sweep and inner, dislocating turbulence, although the impassioned undercurrents are better achieved in the Kirov video, conducted by Gergiev, not yet on DVD. Yuri Marusin is the crazed Herman incarnate. Whether or not you can accept his often off-pitch singing is a personal matter. As his Lisa, Nancy Gustafson, offers a portrayal of an impressionable girl driven to distraction and suicide by the unhinged behaviour of her lover. She sings the part in warm, passionate tones.

Peter Maniura's video direction catches every facial expression of both characters and of Felicity Palmer's electrifying Countess. Sergei Leiferkus is elegant and commanding as the free-loving Tomsky. Dimitri Kharitonov is the soul of rectitude as Yeletsky and brings a bronzed tone to his lovely aria. Marie-Ange Todorovitch is an attractively palpitating Pauline. Picture and sound are exemplary.

Additional recommendation
Queen of Spades
Gegam Grigorian ten Hermann; Maria Guleghina sop Lisa; Ludmila Filatova mez Countess; Sergei

Leiferkus bar Count Tomsky; Alexander Gergalov bar Prince Yeletsky; Olga Borodina contr Pauline; Kirov Opera Chorus and Orchestra / Valery Gergiev Stage director Yuri Temirkanov Video director Brian Large
Philips DVD 070 434-9PH Ⓕ ●
(179 minutes: NTSC Picture format 16:9, Sound 2.0 and DTS 5.1, Region 0). Recorded live at the Mariinsky Theatre, St Petersburg in 1992

In this production, contemporaneous with the Glyndebourne production reviewed above, we have a much more conventional but equally valid approach. The staging is always apt to the piece, and in terms of cast, the Kirov holds the edge over its rival. The young Guleghina is the intense, vibrant Lisa to the life. Brian Large's video direction is exemplary, though the sound leaves something to be desired; there's a deal of distortion at the vocal climaxes.

Verdi

Aida
Adina Aaron sop Aida; Kate Aldrich mez Amneris; Scott Piper ten Radames; Giuseppe Garra bar Amonasro; Enrico Giuseppe Iori bass Ramfis; Paolo Pecchioli bass King; Stefano Pisani ten Messenger; Micaela Patriarca sop Priestess; Arturo Toscanini Foundation Chorus and Orchestra / Massimiliano Stefanelli
Stage and video director Franco Zeffirelli
TDK ② DVD DV-AIDDB (188 minutes: Picture format 4:3, Sound 2.0 and 5.1, Region 0) Ⓕ
Recorded live in 2001. Includes documentary, 'The Making of Aida' ●

Who would have imagined that this performance, which took place at Verdi's birthplace, Busseto, in January 2001 to mark the centenary of the composer's death, would carry such an emotional charge and evince such dramatic truthfulness? The performers are young singers gathered together under the auspices of the Toscanini Foundation and under the artistic direction of tenor Carlo Bergonzi, and of Franco Zeffirelli who directs the performance. It took place in the small gem of a 19th-century theatre at Busseto, not the most likely venue for such a grand opera, yet the very confinement of the surroundings forces everyone to re-think the work on a more intimate scale and in doing so they manage to go to the heart of the matter.

Adina Aaron is already a complete Aida. Every gesture, every movement, every note seems to come from the very soul of her being and her naturally shaped singing and sheer beauty of tone bespeak an auspicious future. As moving an Aida in fact since the young Leontyne Price.

Kate Aldrich as Amneris is very nearly as impressive. Possessor of a strikingly beautiful mezzo and the wherewithal to project it, she conveys every facet of the tormented Princess's predicament with total conviction. As Amonasro, Giuseppe Garra discloses a strong, vibrant baritone in the best traditions of his kind and he, like everyone else, acts with complete conviction. If the Radames, Scott Piper, another singer keen to obey Verdi's markings – witness a pp high B flat at the end of 'Celeste Aida' – was slightly less impressive it is only because his voice is at present one size too small for the role. The orchestra plays with every fibre of its collective being for its committed conductor. Zeffirelli directs stage and film alike with all the experience at his command. The sound is a shade boxy, surely due to the small size of the venue. But that shouldn't be enough to stop anyone enjoying this riveting occasion.

Don Carlos
Roberto Alagna ten Don Carlos; Karita Mattila sop Elisabeth de Valois; Waltraud Meier mez Eboli; Thomas Hampson bar Rodrigue; José van Dam bass-bar Philippe II; Eric Halfvarson bass-bar Grand Inquisitor; Csaba Airizer bass Monk; Anat Efraty sop Thibault; Scot Weir ten Comte de Lerme; Herald; Donna Brown sop Voice from Heaven; Chorus of the Théâtre du Châtelet, Paris; Orchestre de Paris / Antonio Pappano
Stage director Luc Bondy
Video director Yves André Hubert
NVC Arts DVD 0630-16318-2 (211 minutes: Regions 2-6). Recorded live in 1996 Ⓕ ●●

This performance appeared on VHS back in March 1997. On a new, wide-screen television, it makes a far more arresting effect (on VHS the top and bottom of the picture were cut off because of the wide-screen format). The action seems to be happening in the room with you. That is due not only to the format but also to director Luc Bondy's wish to portray the personal relationships, the characters' trials and tribulations in the most intimate manner. In contrast to most stagings of Verdi's epic, this one turns all but the outdoor scenes, mainly the Inquisition, into almost a domestic drama.

For better or worse, the principals seem very modern. José van Dam, a magnificent and moving Philippe II, does sometimes remind one of an out-of-sorts bank manager rather than a ruler of an empire, with his troubled wife, in the attractive person and voice of Mattila, as workaday Queen. Charisma is excluded by this interpretation. The relationship of Carlos and Rodrigue, obviously a very close one, is a touchy-feely affair, one that Alagna, in a sincere, beautifully sung assumption, and a palpitating Thomas Hampson, execute with flair.

As ever, Meier is not content with conventional acting: her Eboli is a scheming and seductive presence, consoling us with the intensity of her singing with a voice a shade light for her part. Indeed, on re-appraising the musical side of the performance, which was recorded live at the Châtelet in Paris, it strikes you that all the voices are a degree lighter than we are used to in the piece, but that suits the French text, giving an ease and fluidity to the vocal line that is, in truth, its own justification.

Even more impressive on re-hearing is Pappano's conducting, alive to every nuance of the long work yet aware of its overall structure.

In the new medium the clarity and immediacy of the picture is arresting. The sound, though a shade soft in focus, is a great improvement on its 'ordinary' video counterpart. Owners of DVD players who want to add this unforgettable work to their collection need not hesitate – provided they can see it on a wide screen.

Falstaff

Ambrogio Maestri bass-bar Falstaff; Roberto Frontali bar Ford; Barbara Frittoli sop Alice Ford; Inva Mula sop Nannetta; Juan Diego Flórez ten Fenton; Bernadette Manca di Nissa contr Mistress Quickly; Anna Caterina Antonacci mez Meg Page; Ernesto Gavazzi ten Doctor Caius; Paolo Barbacini ten Bardolph; Luigi Roni bass Pistol; Chorus and Orchestra of La Scala, Milan / Riccardo Muti

Stage director Ruggero Cappuccio

Video director Pierre Cavasillas

TDK Mediactive DVD DV-OPFAL (118 minutes: Ⓕ Picture format 16:9, Sound 2.0 and 5.1, Region 0). Notes included. Recorded live at the Teatro Verdi, Busseto in 2001 OO

This performance derives from a special production of Falstaff at Verdi's birthplace to mark the centenary of his death. It is a replica of staging given in the same theatre, the Teatro Verdi, under Toscanini, in 1913, using facsimiles of the original sets. So everything conspires to make this the rewarding event it turns out to be.

Some may find the small stage and traditional sets simply old-fashioned, but given a superb cast perceptively directed by Ruggero Cappuccio, what we see and hear is Verdi's masterpiece presented in the most natural, unforced way, with everyone on stage enjoying themselves. The result is a warm-hearted, unforced reading that makes the rival Graham Vick production at Covent Garden look, by its side, forced and contrived, not to mention the inadequacies of the anti-Verdian Aix production also on DVD. Muti's masterly traversal of the score – at once prompt yet relaxed – adds to the pleasure.

The cast is headed by Ambrogio Maestri, 31 at the time, in the title part who in vocal and physical size is Italy's answer to Bryn Terfel, Haitink's Falstaff, and as with Terfel is a youngish man playing the ageing Knight; but Maestri is very much a member of an ensemble, not a star giving his interpretation. He portrays the Fat Knight as still youthful in his outlook and quite nimble afoot. He performs it entirely without Terfel's (or Vick's) attempts at vulgar exaggeration: everything emerges from the text and music, and the singing itself is finely modulated and easy on the ear.

He is surrounded by a group of Merry Wives as ebullient and resourceful as any on audio or video versions. Barbara Frittoli's scheming Alice is nicely set of against Anna Caterina Antonacci's witty Meg, while Bernadette Manca di Nissa sings and acts Quickly truly, without the traditional guying of the part. Roberto Frontali's Ford is much more in character than on the rival version and he parleys perfectly with Maestri's Falstaff. Juan Diego Flórez and Inva Mula as sweet-voiced and handsome-looking lovers and excellent comprimarios are all part of this highly recommendable DVD. Video direction and sound picture are exemplary. Don't miss its many delights.

La forza del destino

Renata Tebaldi sop Leonora; Franco Corelli ten Don Alvaro; Ettore Bastianini bar Don Carlo; Boris Christoff bass Padre Guardiano; Oralia Dominguez mez Preziosilla; Renato Capecchi bar Fra Melitone; Jorge Algorta bass Marquis of Calatrava; Mariano Caruso ten Trabuco; Anna di Stasio mez Curra; Giuseppe Forgione bass Mayor; Gianni Bardi bass Surgeon; Naples San Carlo Opera Chorus and Orchestra / Francesco Molinari-Pradelli

Hardy Classic Video DVD HCD4002 Ⓕ (160 minutes: NTSC, Picture format 4:3, Sound 1.0, Region 0). Includes interview with Renata Tebaldi. Recorded live at the San Carlo Theatre, Naples in 1958

Why is it that this performance in low-fi and indifferent black-and-white picture, and in a distinctly old-fashioned staging, has become a legend among collectors of opera on video to the extent of becoming a VHS best-seller? The answer lies in the quality of execution of a once-in-a-lifetime cast, supported by idiomatic conducting and playing at the San Carlo in Naples back in 1958.

Tebaldi had already proved at the Maggio Musicale at Florence in 1953 under Mitropoulos that Leonora was to be among her most successful roles, and here she confirms the fact in spades with her lustrous, effortlessly shaped and eloquent traversal of the role.

By her side she has the incomparable Corelli, singing his first Don Alvaro, and revealing that his brilliant, exciting yet plangent tone is precisely the right instrument to project Alvaro's loves and sorrows. At this stage of his career his thrilling upper register and incisive delivery of the text were at their most potent, as he makes abundantly clear in aria and duet. As his antagonist, Bastianini sings with the kind of Verdian élan seemingly now extinct among his breed. He may not be the most subtle of Verdian baritones, but here his macho approach ideally suits Don Carlo's vengeful imprecations.

If that were not enough vocal splendour for one occasion, there is Christoff – yet another member of the cast at the peak of his career – intoning Padre Guardiano's dignified utterances in that unique if not always entirely Italianate manner of his. Renato Capecchi for long made the part of Melitone his own: one can see and hear why here in his amusing yet never-overstated sense of the role's comic possibilities. The voices are caught with very little distortion in goodish sound. The original film has suffered some deterioration over the years, but its recent restoration yields far better results than was once the case on dim VHS copies: this DVD derives from RAI's original master copy. Pleasure is completed by the bonus of a recent interview with Tebaldi.

Macbeth

Thomas Hampson bar Macbeth; Paoletta Marrocu sop Lady Macbeth; Roberto Scandiuzzi bass Banquo; Luis Lima ten Macduff; Miroslav Christoff ten Malcolm; Mihály Kálmándi bass Doctor; Liuba Chuchrova mez Lady-in-Waiting; Zurich Opera House Chorus and Orchestra / Franz Welser-Möst

Stage director David Pountney

Video director Thomas Grimm

TDK Mediactive DVD DV-OPMAC (186 minutes: Ⓕ Picture format 16:9, Sound 2.0, 5.1 and DTS 5.1, Region 2). Includes special feature, 'Macbeth – An Introduction'. Recorded live at the Opera House, Zurich, in 2001 ●●

Here is yet another challenging and well-executed staging from the Zurich Opera, this one dating from 2001. David Pountney, in at least his third attempt at the work, presents the Shakespearian drama in predictably unorthodox manner, irritating in its overuse of distracting symbols, extras and props, but revelatory in its pointed treatment of the principal pair of characters. The production is at its most bizarre in the Witches' scenes, where a pack of maddened women disport themselves in an orgy of man-hating, but even when the effects are at their most outrageous a sense of a guiding hand is there to lend some sort of dramatic cohesion to the whole.

Pountney bases his concept on the erotic relationship, vividly delineated, between Macbeth and his spouse; their sex-dominated marriage is obviously the spur to their overweening ambition, with she – as ever – leading the way. Paoletta Marrocu, a Sardinian soprano with a growing reputation, throws caution to the winds in her energetic, purposeful, fierce attack on Lady Macbeth. From first to last it is a truly stunning performance both histrionically and vocally. Few sopranos, Callas undoubtedly is one, have sung the part so confidently and incisively in a powerful, lean yet strong voice unflinchingly projected. By her side Hampson's haunted Macbeth is a striking portrait of a man pushed to the limits in the cause of getting to the top. His voice may not be truly Italianate in timbre, but he uses it here with such intelligence and force that one can overlook the want of a certain bite in his tone.

Welser-Möst presides over everything with an acute ear for the work's tinta and judges his speeds to a nicety, with admirable support from his own house's chorus and orchestra. The 1987 Berlin version on ArtHaus Musik, finely conducted by Sinopoli, seems tame beside this one.

Otello

Mario Del Monaco ten Otello; Rosanna Carteri sop Desdemona; Renato Capecchi bar Iago; Gino Mattera ten Cassio; Athos Cesarini ten Roderigo; Luisella Ciaffi mez Emilia; Plinio Clabassi bass Lodovico; Nestore Catalani bass Montano; Bruno Cioni bass Herald; Chorus and Orchestra of RAI, Milan / Tullio Serafin

Film director Franco Enriquez

Hardy Classic Video Ⓕ DVD HCD4004 (136 minutes: NTSC, Picture format 4:3 – black-and-white, Sound 1.0, Region 0) Recorded 1958. Notes included

This film of Otello is not to be overlooked, in spite of its age, because of the quality of the performance. It formed part of Italian television's pioneering series of productions employing the top rank of native singers when such a group still existed. On this occasion a well-known opera director, Franco Enriquez, was employed to achieve as much as was possible in terms of dramatic fluidity within the technical restrictions then applicable in the studio. The acting of minor characters may be a bit stilted, but the principals, who come under face-to-face scrutiny, stand up well to Enriquez's methods.

So here we have preserved a native account of Verdi's masterpiece that would be hard to equal today. Mario Del Monaco was then at the height of his powers, the reigning Otello of the time, and one of the role's most powerful exponents ever. His portrayal had developed by the late 1950s into a psychological study of some depth and intensity, released on a stream of taut, exciting tone. Even Domingo never quite achieved such a sense of a being at the end of his tether. By his side, Renato Capecchi sings a strongly voiced, highly articulate, intelligently shaped and believable Iago, quite fit to be compared with Tito Gobbi in the same role. But perhaps the most compelling performance of all is Rosanna Carteri's Desdemona. Love, fidelity and sincerity are conveyed in her eyes, indeed her whole being, and in her faultless vocal traversal of the role, more affecting than Renata Tebaldi's because her tone is sweeter. Over all presides Serafin, conducting an unobtrusively correct and vital performance of a score he knew so well.

There are downsides. The lip-synch, especially in the case of Capecchi, leaves much to be desired. The sound is confined and occasionally wayward, and the film is obviously a shade worn, but all that is easily forgotten when you are caught up in such a convincing performance on all sides.

Rigoletto

Paolo Gavanelli bar Rigoletto; Christine Schäfer sop Gilda; Marcelo Álvarez ten Duke; Eric Halfvarson bass Sparafucile; Graciela Araya contr Maddalena; Giovanni Battista Parodi bass Monterone; Elizabeth Sikora sop Giovanna; Peter Auty ten Borsa; Quentin Hayes bar Marullo; Dervla Ramsay mez Countess Ceprano; Graeme Broadbent bass Count Ceprano; Andrea Hazell mez Page; Nigel Cliffe bass Usher; Royal Opera House Orchestra and Chorus, Covent Garden / Edward Downes

Stage director David McVicar

Film director Sue Judd

BBC/Opus Arte Media DVD OA0829D Ⓕ (169 minutes: Picture format 16:9, Sound 5.1, Region 0) ●

David McVicar's engrossing 2001 production of Rigoletto at Covent Garden caused something of a stir because of the frank licentiousness of the opening scene, including sex of all varieties. It is a bold and sensational beginning to the staging, depicting the Duke of Mantua as a libidinous and strident ruler of his ill-disciplined domain. Given that picture of the court, the contrast of Rigoletto's almost obsessive love for his daughter is all the more poignant.

That is the background to a performance of thrilling commitment on all sides, at whose centre is the arresting portrayal of Rigoletto from Paolo Gavanelli, probably the best acted and most sensitively sung, in terms of variety and colouring of tone, since Tito Gobbi essayed the role in the same house 35 years ago (even if he has an occasional tendency to lose pitch).

By comparison, Christine Schäfer's Gilda is a trifle cool to start with but once ravished she comes to emotional life and is particularly moving in the final act. Throughout, her singing, though not Italianate in colour, is musically shaped and technically flawless. Marcelo Álvarez is the very epitome of a selfish, macho ruler and Eric Halfvarson a suitably sinister Sparafucile. Downes conducts a well-nigh faultless account. The only reservation concerns the sound. Too frequently the voices are too backwardly placed in relation to the orchestra, but that should not deter you from being part of a very special occasion.

Tosca

Maria Guleghina sop Tosca; Salvatore Licitra ten Cavaradossi; Leo Nucci bar Scarpia; Giovanni Battista Parodi bass Angelotti; Ernesto Gavazzi ten Spoletta; Alfredo Mariotti bass Sacristan; Silvestro Sammaritano bass Sciarrone; Ernesto Panariello bass Gaoler; Virginia Barchi treb Shepherd Boy; Chorus and Orchestra of La Scala, Milan / Riccardo Muti Stage director Luca Ronconi Video director Pierre Cavasillas

TDK Mediactive DVD DV-OPTOS (121 minutes: Picture format 16:9 Sound 2.0, 5.1 and DTS 5.1, Region 0). Notes included. Recorded live at the Teatro alla Scala, Milan in 2000. Ⓕ

In March 2000 Riccardo Muti conducted a staged performance of Tosca for the first time, only the second Puccini opera he had conducted at La Scala. As this live-recorded DVD powerfully reveals, he emerged as the hero of a great occasion. The high-voltage electricity is unflagging, with the drama timed to perfection, the whole magnetically compelling from first to last. It makes one regret that he has so rarely turned to Puccini. Even so, having been the music director at La Scala since 1986, he knows unerringly how to pace his singers, letting them phrase expansively where needed, yet holding the structure firmly together.

Maria Guleghina makes a formidable Tosca, very believable in her jealousy, using a rich tonal range, with just a touch of vinegar at the top. She is at her finest in the great scene with Scarpia in Act 2, leading up to a radiant account of 'Vissi d'arte' and a chilling murder, even though the very ordinary dinner-knife she uses looks an unlikely weapon. The veteran Leo Nucci, tall, thin and mean, is most compelling as the police chief, at times a smiling villain, though the voice has its occasional roughness. As Cavaradossi, Salvatore Licitra may be an unromantic figure, and he is heavy-handed at the start in 'Recondita armonia', but he develops from there, and in Act 3 he sings superbly with fine shading of tone for 'E lucevan le stelle' and the duet with Tosca.

Luca Ronconi's production, well-directed for television by Pierre Cavasillas, consistently heightens the dramatic conflicts. The sets of Margherita Palli, as redesigned by Lorenza Cantini, bring a surreal contradiction between realism and fantasy, looking like conventional sets that have been hit by an earthquake, with uprights at all angles. Sections of scenery are retained from act to act, with an increasing pile of debris left behind. That makes the battlements of the Castel Sant'Angelo look like a bomb-site, which Tosca has to climb before flinging herself to her death. The idea, presumably, is to reflect the distorted mind of Scarpia, though in this verismo opera pure realism might be said to work best of all.

Tosca

Renata Tebaldi sop Tosca; Eugene Tobin ten Cavaradossi; George London bar Scarpia; Gustav Grefe bass Angelotti; Hubert Buchta ten Spoletta; Heinz Cramer bass Sacristan; Siegfried Fischer-Sandt bass Sciarrone; Wilhelm Baur bass Gaoler; Claudia Hellmann treb Shepherd Boy; Stuttgart State Opera Chorus and Orchestra / Franco Patanè Stage and Film directors Uncredited

Video Artists International DVD VAIDVD4217 Ⓕ
(126 minutes: Black & White, Picture format 4:3, Sound 1.0, Region 0). Recorded live in the Stuttgart Staatsoper in 1961

Coming to this historic video recording after Muti's La Scala version (also reviewed here) is to register a quite different operatic world. Recorded in black and white at a performance in the Stuttgart Staatsoper in June 1961, it offers a sound, conventional production with in-period costumes and realistic if symmetrical sets by Max Fritzsche.

What this DVD is specially valuable for is, of course, the assumption of the title role by Renata Tebaldi. So dominant in our memories has Maria Callas's characterisation become, that we tend to forget that the role of Tosca was just as central in the repertory of her great rival of the time, Tebaldi. The latter's firm, creamy tones, perfectly controlled, could hardly be more sharply contrasted with the thrillingly individual, if at times flawed, singing of Callas. Tebaldi seemed to represent the very essence of the prima donna, grand in a traditional way, and who better to play the part of an operatic prima donna in Tosca?

There is ample evidence here of that commanding security in the role, with Tebaldi in 1961 still at her peak. Yet as recorded in limited mono sound, with voices well forward of the orchestra, there is at times an untypical edge on the creamy tone at the top. True to form, Tebaldi rises magnificently to the challenge of 'Vissi d'arte' in Act 2, with fine shading of tone and flawless legato in that moment of repose. That said, one has to note that in her acting this Tosca is not so much passionate as stately.

The film direction, like that of the stage director, is highly conventional. Eugene Tobin as Cavaradossi, like many tenors, starts lustily, and then gets more expressive as he goes along, never betraying signs of strain. George London makes a handsome Scarpia, imperious and vehement both in his acting and in his singing. Yet as so often in recordings, his pitching is often vague. Franco Patanè as conductor is at times over-emphatic, again presenting a conventional view, and rarely conveying the sort of magnetism that makes the Muti performance so gripping.

Worth buying to hear Tebaldi in her prime.

La traviata

Angela Gheorghiu sop Violetta; Frank Lopardo ten Alfredo; Leo Nucci bar Germont; Leah-Marian Jones mez Flora; Gillian Knight mez Annina; Robin Leggate ten Gastone; Richard Van Allan bass Baron; Roderick Earle bass Marquis; Mark Beesley bar Doctor; Neil Griffiths ten Giuseppe; Bryan Secombe bass Messenger; Rodney Gibson ten Servant; Chorus and Orchestra of the Royal Opera House, Covent Garden / Sir Georg Solti

Stage director Richard Eyre

Video directors Humphrey Burton, Peter Maniura

Decca DVD 071 431-9DH (135 minutes: Region O) Ⓕ

Recorded live in 1994 ●

This is the classic performance that cleared TV schedules and launched Gheorghiu to superstardom. Now the glamour of the occasion has receded a little, the performance can be assessed as a whole. It still stands up extremely well. The 29-year-old remains a gripping heroine, remarkably beautiful personally and vocally, characterised with an appropriately febrile, nervy intensity. The other star is Solti, underpinning her passion with his own, combining tautly propulsive rhythmic control with a clarity and melting tenderness, brought out in excellent orchestral playing.

Other performers don't quite reach this level. Alfredo in these pre-Alagna days is Frank Lopardo, also a handsome presence with a fine but rather nasal tone and stiff delivery, his manner occasionally a touch arrogant. Nucci is a vocally unsteady and rather lacklustre Germont, but the lesser roles could use his Italianate authority. The chorus is in good voice. The superb DVD picture captures the shadowy richness of Richard Eyre's straightforward production but can't disguise the functional stage set. The surround soundtrack is disappointingly boomy; the stereo track much crisper.

This knocks spots off its only DVD rival, the tacky La Fenice staging under Carlo Rizzi with Edita Gruberová's uncharismatic Violetta. The Glyndebourne video (Universal) not yet on DVD, offers a deeper production, but it still can't match this for excitement.

Additional recommendation

La traviata

Bonfadelli Violetta; Piper Alfredo; Bruson Germont; Arturo Toscanini Foundation Chorus and Orchestra / Domingo

Stage director Franco Zeffirelli

TDK Mediactive ② DVD DV-OPLTR Ⓕ

(205 minutes: Picture format 16:9, Sound 2.0, 5.1 and DTS 5.1, Region 0). Includes documentary, 'Making of La traviata' and interviews. Notes included

Recorded live in 2002.

Lovingly directed and designed by the then 78-year-old Zeffirelli. Bonfadelli makes a very fine Violetta – it's a reading that demands to be seen and heard. Sound quality is beyond reproach, and though it may not surpass the Solti DVD (reviewed above) it deserves to stand alongside it as a recommendation.

Il trovatore

Kenneth Collins ten Manrico; Dame Joan Sutherland sop Leonora; Jonathan Summers bar Count di Luna; Lauris Elms mez Azucena; Donald Shanks bass Ferrando; Cynthia Johnston sop Ines; Robin Donald ten Ruiz; John Durham bass Old Gypsy; Australian Opera Chorus; Elizabethan Sydney Orchestra / Richard Bonynge

Stage director Elijah Moshinsky

Video director Riccardo Pellizzeri

ArtHaus Musik DVD 100 276 (142 minutes: Ⓕ

Picture format 4:3, Sound 2.0, Region 2 and 5)

Notes included. Recorded live at the Opera House, Sydney, in 1983

This performance of Sutherland finds her on something like her best form, not always the case in the Australian performances recorded late in her career. With large evocative gauzes by Sidney Nolan, used as backcloths, appealing 19th-century costumes by Lucian Arrighi, and Moshinsky's animated, effectively spotlit tableaux, the eye is well-served. In this milieu Moshinsky directs his principals with his usual discernment.

He could not, of course, attempt anything unconventional with his prima donna, but Sutherland does convention uncommonly well, expressing emotion through minimal gestures and expressive eyes. She could have had a worthy career devoting herself to Verdi, but chose otherwise. It is good to hear her realising the music Verdi wrote for his heroine with full tone, grand phrasing and, where called for, much of her well-known skill as regards technique and coloratura – her last-act aria gives the best evidence of that. If the diva's lower voice was by her late fifties rather threadbare, the top here rings firmly and truly.

As her troubadour she has that sterling English tenor Kenneth Collins, singing with the innate strength and honesty that were always his hallmarks in early and mid-Verdi. Nothing in Manrico's role is shirked, everything is idiomatically phrased. His stage presence leaves something to be desired but that can be overlooked given the true spinto sound of his voice.

The more convincing pair are, however, Jonathan Summers as Luna and Lauris Elms as Azucena, both at different times much admired in this country. Bonynge is in energetic form in the pit, and always aware of how to give his singers room to phrase with feeling. The sound leaves something to be desired: it is fuzzy from time to time. The video direction is also a bit hit-and-miss. Neither reservation lessens the strength of this recommendation.

Wagner

Die Meistersinger von Nürnberg
Wolfgang Brendel bass-bar Hans Sachs; Gösta Winbergh ten Walther; Eva Johansson sop Eva; Victor von Halem bass Pogner; Elke Wilm Schulte bar Beckmesser; Uwe Peper ten David; Ute Walther mez Magdalene; Lenus Carlson bass Kothner; David Griffith ten Vogelgesang; Barry McDaniel bar Nachtigall; Volker Horn ten Zorn; Peter Maus ten Eisslinger; Otto Heuer ten Moser; Ivan Sardi bass Schwarz; Friedrich Molsberger bass Foltz; Peter Edelmann bass Nightwatchman; Berlin Opera Orchestra and Chorus / Rafael Frühbeck de Burgos
Stage director Götz Friedrich
Video director Brian Large
Arthaus Musik ② DVD 100 152 (266 minutes: Region 0). Recorded live in 1995 Ⓕ ●●

This has to be one of the most engrossing and satisfactory performances of Die Meistersinger in memory. Pleasure derives as much as anything from the sense of a complete intregration of music and action in a staging that has been scrupulously rehearsed on all sides. This is a 1995 revival with the same cast as the 1993 original, and it is clear how keen the response of the singers to each other is. The credit for one's profound enjoyment undoubtably goes to the late, lamented Götz Friedrich. Renowned for his handling of characters and their interaction on stage, his skills in that sphere have seldom if ever been more fruitfully displayed. The action and reaction of the masters in their Act 1 disputations, the subtle relationship between Sachs and Eva, the ebb and flow of the arguments between Sachs and Beckmesser, and the friendly interplay between Walther and Sachs, the disciple eagerly learning from the teacher in Act 1 scene 3, are all revelatory. In these and other scenes, more of the characters' humanity is expressed than has ever been shown before. This is operatic acting on the highest level of achievement.

Frühbeck de Burgos enhances the director's approach with his chamber-like treatment of the orchestra, allowing the singers' clear enunciation to be heard at all times. He is also to be commended for the discerning ebb and flow of his reading as a whole, which is at once lively and unforced. Wolfgang Brendel presents an affectionate, sympathetic, somewhat laid-back, ruminative Sachs, his voice lacking in warmth only at the bottom of his register, the sound more baritone than bass-orientated. As we know from Covent Garden, Winbergh is a well-nigh ideal Walther, singing his role with unwonted ease and lyrical breadth, responsive always to the text's meaning. Johansson is a knowing, flirtatious Eva, forthcoming in voice and mien; her earthbound start of the Quintet comes as a disappointment after her gloriously outgoing 'O Sachs, mein Freund'. Schulte sings and acts Beckmesser to perfection, never resorting to caricature in depicting the self-important, didactic town clerk and giving the role a wealth of nuance, always keeping to the notes. Peper is a well-routined, likeable David, Von Halem an imposing, properly fatherly Pogner.

As a whole, this is a performance to treasure. It has admirably balanced sound and perceptive video direction by the ultra-experienced Brian Large. Highly recommended.

Der Ring des Nibelungen
Chorus and Orchestra of the Metropolitan Opera, New York / James Levine
Stage director Otto Schenk
Video director Brian Large
DG Ⓕ ⑦ DVD 073 043-9GH7
(941 minutes: Picture format 4:3, Sound 2.0 and 5.1*, Region 0) *Dolby digital & dts
Recorded live at the Metropolitan Opera House in 1989 and 1990. Notes included
Also available separately as below

Das Rheingold
James Morris bass Wotan; Christa Ludwig mez Fricka; Siegfried Jerusalem ten Loge; Heinz Zednik ten Mime; Ekkehard Wlaschiha bass Alberich; Mari Anne Häggander sop Freia; Mark Baker ten Froh; Alan Held bar Donner; Birgitta Svendén mez Erda; Jan-Hendrik Rootering bass Fasolt; Matti Salminen bass Fafner; Kaaren Erickson sop Woglinde; Diane Kesling mez Wellgunde; Meredith Parsons contr Flosshilde
DG DVD 073 036-9GH (163 minutes) Ⓕ

Die Walküre
Gary Lakes ten Siegmund; Jessye Norman sop Sieglinde; Hildegard Behrens sop Brünnhilde; James Morris bass Wotan; Christa Ludwig mez Fricka; Kurt Moll bass Hunding; Pyramid Sellers sop Gerhilde; Katarina Ikonomu sop Helmwige; Martha Thigpen sop Ortlinde; Joyce Castle mez Waltraute; Jacalyn Bower mez Rossweise; Diane Kesling mez Siegrune; Wendy Hillhouse mez Grimgerde; Sondra Kelly contr Schwertleite
DG ② DVD 073 049-9GH2 (241 minutes) Ⓕ

Siegfried
Siegfried Jerusalem ten Siegfried; James Morris bass Wanderer; Hildegard Behrens sop Brünnhilde; Heinz Zednik ten Mime; Ekkehard Wlaschiha bass Alberich; Birgitta Svendén mez Erda; Fritz Hübner bass Fafner; Dawn Upshaw sop Woodbird
DG ② DVD 073 037-9GH2 (253 minutes) Ⓕ

Götterdämmerung

Hildegard Behrens sop Brünnhilde; Siegfried Jerusalem ten Siegfried; Matti Salminen bass Hagen; Ekkehard Wlaschiha bass Alberich; Anthony Raffell bass Gunther; Hanna Lisowska sop Gutrune; Christa Ludwig mez Waltraute; Kaaren Erickson sop Woglinde; Diane Kesling mez Wellgunde; Meredith Parsons contr Flosshilde; Gweneth Bean contr First Norn; Joyce Castle mez Second Norn; Andrea Gruber sop Third Norn

DG ② DVD 073 040-9GH2 (281 minutes) Ⓕ ●●

None of the four video-recorded versions can be called ideal; but this Met cycle has plenty of strong points. It's the only one Wagner would have recognised – no small consideration. It's frequently assumed these days that he chose myth primarily to convey political allegory, but this is misleading. Myth inspired Wagner as directly as it did, say, Sibelius; and producers who ignore or mock this, like Patrice Chéreau on Pierre Boulez's rival set, miss a vital dimension. Here, Otto Schenk and designer Gunther Schneider-Siemssen preserve the Romantic imagery, often beautifully, as Brian Large's cameras reveal; but also unimaginatively, with too many tired compromises. Some, such as the Rhinemaidens' non-swimming contortions and the feeble dragon, are embarrassing, and the costumes often look poor on screen. Individual performances, too, sometimes don't fit into a satisfactory ensemble.

This set can also claim musical superiority; but again, not conclusively. Boulez mistakes speed for energy, drying out the richness of the score; Levine, with the magnificent Met orchestra, tends to wallow in it, especially in a disappointing Rheingold. Matters improve from Walküre onward, but he is prone to sudden wheelspinning accelerations, sometimes wrongfooting his singers. Boulez remains invisible at Bayreuth; Levine is too much with us, to the detriment of atmosphere. Nevertheless, his monumental approach does bring out The Ring's sheer beauty and grandeur, where Boulez simply seems glib.

Levine's cast is superior, too, although the pivotal roles are the closest. Both Brünnhildes are splendid, spirited and deeply moving, but Boulez's Gwyneth Jones has the fuller voice; Hildegard Behrens, lithe and nervy, must force an essentially lyric instrument – quite successfully, but the effort shows. James Morris, aspiring to be a bel canto Wotan, has a richer voice than Boulez's Donald MacIntyre, but his diction and his acting are less incisive – partly the producer's fault in Rheingold; he improves thereafter. Siegfried Jerusalem, though, eclipses Boulez's inadequate Manfred Jung. More lyrical and vocally more heroic, he is a finer musician, less liable to strain and distort the line, and an impressive stage figure.

Jerusalem's surprisingly characterful Loge, despite his galia melon headgear, is probably the best thing in Rheingold. It's rewarding to hear the 'Narration' in this kind of voice. Otherwise this is lacklustre. A superb Rhinemaiden trio is left earthbound, writhing unconvincingly round Ekkehard Wlaschiha's buffoonish Alberich, short on menace until the final curse. Christa Ludwig's once definitive Fricka looks and sounds tired. Levine's tempi in Rheingold rival those of Reginald Goodall, but without his structure and pacing; the Giants' entrance is marked molto pesante, not funereal. They, the Rhinemaidens and the lesser gods – especially Birgitta Svendén's keen-voiced Erda – outclass their betters.

Levine handles Walküre more successfully. Act 1, though, is not a success. Gary Lakes' massive but rather lean-toned Siegmund is ill-matched with Jessye Norman, whose vocally searing Sieglinde is subverted by her grande dame manner, robbing the love scenes of any real involvement. Behrens, however, injects Act 2 with life, and though Ludwig's Fricka still sounds tired, Morris begins to make an impact, singing rather than declaiming the Narration. With a ringingly athletic Valkyrie band, Levine rushes the Ride, but brings the act to a moving Farewell.

Siegfried is visually and musically the best, with Levine at his liveliest, and a Romantic forest out of Altdorfer or von Schwind. Jerusalem's ardent hero may lack Heldentenor heft, and suffer some constraint at the top, but he carries off the forging and lyrical scenes with credit. The Wanderer often suits basses' range and personae, and Morris's commanding, world-weary god dominates Zednik's veteran Mime (mercifully not Chéreau's cute victim), Wlaschiha's now mordant Alberich; and Svendén's eerie Erda. Levine's protracted 'Awakening' stretches Behrens, but she and Jerusalem infuse the love duet with appealing life.

Levine's expansiveness suits Götterdämmerung, which opens with a powerful trio of Norns and a radiant Dawn duet. Chez Gibichung, though, the temperature drops, with Anthony Raffell (a fine Wotan) a miscast, bumbling Gunther, and Gutrune sadly unseductive. Matti Salminen's brutish Hagen, though richly sung, lacks the essential supernatural undertones. Ludwig is much better as Waltraute, but Jerusalem and especially Behrens carry the performance with involving intensity. The Immolation strains her voice, but remains satisfyingly cathartic, aided by appropriate stage spectacle, though Valhalla's downfall is disappointing.

All told, while this set may be less stimulating than the Boulez, it is also less distracting – without, as an eminent colleague once remarked, someone forever shouting in your ear. As well as the original digital stereo, remixed surround-sound tracks quite convincingly evoke extra ambiance and detail. The image also remasters well, although you may want to turn up the colour. Until Barenboim's set reaches DVD, this remains the best; and many may still prefer it.

The Golden Ring – documentary

Wagner Der Ring des Nibelungen – BBC documentary on the making of Sir Georg Solti's recording. Filmed during the recording of Götterdämmerung in 1964

Sir Georg Solti with various artists including Dietrich Fischer-Dieskau, Gottlob Frick, Birgit Nilsson, Claire Watson and Wolfgang Windgassen
Film director/Narrator Humphrey Burton
Decca DVD Black & White. 071 153-9DH Ⓕ
(157 minutes: NTSC Picture format 4:3, Sound 1.0, Region 0). Includes bonus selection of audio highlights from the complete studio recording in 5.1 surround sound
Notes, text and translation included ●

One of the classic music documentaries comes to DVD – classic, both in itself and in its subject.

Alec Robertson in Gramophone hailed Decca's 1964 Götterdämmerung recording as 'the greatest achievement in gramophone history yet', a judgement the years have largely endorsed. Producer John Culshaw set out to make it a historic event with 'the kind of dream cast... unlikely to be encountered in the theatre', and we can only be grateful that the BBC then had the vision to capture its creation so effectively.

The programme's fascination lies not only in seeing so many now-legendary performers, but in the way director Humphrey Burton conveys the 'rough magic' of the recording process. Bravely, given the intrusive cameras and lighting of the time, Culshaw and Burton agreed that nothing should be specially staged, and only one or two 'now what are you chaps doing?' sequences seem less than natural. Burton had immense problems cutting more than 20 hours of material, especially because of Solti's then unfashionable preference for long takes. What remains brilliantly captures the white heat of this immense collaboration – almost literally so, as Solti dominates the floor of Vienna's Sofiensaal with crackling energy and edgy perfectionism. It contrasts tellingly with the determined calm of Culshaw and engineers Gordon Parry and James Brown in the control room.

The ultimate fascination, though, is seeing Solti directing the glorious Vienna players, and the era's greatest Wagnerian voices, Nilsson, Windgassen, Frick, and Fischer-Dieskau, shuffling their music stands around Decca's famous chequerboard stage.

The monochrome and monaural original is well remastered. Decca wisely insisted only their music tracks be used, and they come up splendidly (as does a deafening jet engine).

Weill

Aufstieg und Fall der Stadt Mahagonny
Dame Gwyneth Jones sop Leokadja Begbick; Roy Cornelius Smith ten Fatty; Wilbur Pauley bass Trinity Moses; Catherine Malfitano sop Jenny Smith; Jerry Hadley ten Jimmy Mahoney; Udo Holdorf ten Jake Schmidt; Dale Duesing bar Pennybank Bill; Harry Peeters bass Alaska Wolf Joe; Toby Spence ten Tobby Higgins; Vienna State Opera Chorus; Vienna Radio Symphony Orchestra / Dennis Russell Davies
Stage director Peter Zadek
Video director Brian Large
ArtHaus Musik DVD 100 092 (160 minutes: Picture format 16:9, Sound 2.0, Regions 2, 5) Ⓕ
Recorded live in 1998

Peter Zadek's production of Weill, and Brecht's largest-scale opera, was much criticised in 1998. It is possible to see in this DVD version that the Salzburg stage is really too big for the work, and that there is rather a lot of unnecessary action, much coming and going, walking about, and movement of furniture. However, Brian Large's filmed production makes such good use of close-ups that much of this is bypassed.

What makes this unmissable is Jerry Hadley's performance as Jim. From every point of view, dramatic, vocal and emotional, he encompasses the part in such a complete way that one is totally gripped. The tension in his pose, his burning eyes, the physical daring of the interpretation command attention at every turn. At the end of Act 2, when Jenny sings 'Denn wie man sich bettet', Catherine Malfitano declaims the first verse as she is carried on Hadley's shoulders. Although the camera and the microphone are both harsh where Malfitano is concerned, she too gives such an involved and committed reading of the part that one has to forgive everything.

At no moment in her career would Gwyneth Jones's voice have been suitable for the role of the Widow Begbick, but she too is fascinating to watch, under-playing most of the time, so that when the trial scene arrives, the extra cruel edge she gives to gesture and song tells all the more. The other tremendous performance comes from Wilbur Pauley as a totally repellent Trinity Moses – his pose, Christ-like, after he has killed Joe in the boxing scene is horrific.

Dennis Russell Davies conducts a searing account of the score from the pit. The balance between voices and orchestra is sometimes very echoey, but this is inevitable on a stage as cavernous as Salzburg's.

Street Scene
Ashley Putnam sop Anna Maurrant; Marc Embree bar Frank Maurrant; Teri Hansen sop Rose Maurrant; Kip Wilborn ten Sam Kaplan; Claudia Ashley sop Nursemaid 1; Muriel Costa-Greenspon mez Nursemaid 2; Yvette Bonner sop Jennie Hildebrand; David Rae Smith ten Abraham Kaplan; Janice Felty mez Emma Jones; Heidi Eisenberg mez Olga Olsen; Anthony Mee ten Lippo Fiorentino Ludwigshafen Theatre Chorus; Rhineland Palatinate State Philharmonic Orchestra / James Holmes
Stage director Francesca Zambello
Film director José Montes-Baquer
ArtHaus Musik DVD 100 098 (143 minutes: Picture format 16:9, Sound 2.0, Regions 2 and 5) Ⓕ
Recorded 1994

Street Scene was the most ambitious product of Weill's American years and a kind of Porgy and Bess transferred to the slum tenements of New York during the Depression. Like Gershwin's opera, it mixes genuine operatic writing with unashamedly popular numbers. It's essentially a team opera, with a vast number of roles, portraying the ups and downs of urban life including childbirth and death.

Ashley Putnam is visually too young for the role of Anna, perhaps, but vocally outstanding in her solo numbers. Teri Hansen initially sounds a shade constricted as her daughter Rose, but she is tender enough in her duet with Kip Wilborn as her lover Sam. Marc Embree is suitably menacing as husband Frank, Janice Felty a strong Emma, and Anthony Mee a delightful roly-poly Neapolitan. An undoubted star of the production is designer Adrienne Lobel, against whose magnificently solid and realistic set the action unfolds. Another is James Holmes, who brings out the score's darker, dramatic moments as much as its unashamed romanticism and jazz-inflected numbers.

Seeing the opera afresh in this production impresses again what a wonderful work it is – convincing both for its extended operatic writing and also for its marvellous tunes. Why it remains so much less well known than Porgy and Bess is not always easy to fathom.

B A Zimmermann

Die Soldaten
Mark Munkittrick bass Wesener; Nancy Shade sop Marie; Milagro Vargas contr Charlotte; Grace Hoffman mez Wesener's Mother; Michael Ebbecke bar Stolzius; Elsie Maurer contr Stolzius' Mother; Alois Treml bass Obrist; William Cochran ten Desportes; Guy Renard ten Pirzel; Karl-Friedrich Dürr bar Eisenhardt; Klaus Hirte bar Haudy; Raymond Wolansky bar Major Mary; Johannes Eidloth, Helmut Holzapfel, Robert Wörle tens Young Officers; Ursula Koszut sop Countess de la Roche; Jerrold van der Schaaf sngr Young Count Stuttgart State Opera Chorus and Orchestra / Bernhard Kontarsky Stage director Harry Kupfer Video director Hans Hulscher
ArtHaus Musik DVD 100 270 (111 minutes: Picture format 4:3, Sound 2.0, Region 2 and 5) Ⓕ
Recorded live at the State Opera House, Stuttgart in 1989

Bernhard Kontarsky's shaping of the alternately coruscating and black dramatic score is splendid and there are no weak links in the cast. In the central role of Marie, Nancy Shade is sweetly flighty in the first two acts, showing off her vocal mettle in the agitated solo at the end of Act 1. After romping with Desportes – a nicely turned characterisation of the strutting womaniser by William Cochran – her descent into the gutter reduces her role almost to that of a prop as her erstwhile fiancé, Stolzius, and others take over as the main protagonists.

All the characters, major and minor, are finely drawn although necessarily some seem more like caricatures: Mark Munkittrick's Wesener, Marie's father, whose ambiguous attitude towards her suitors Desportes and Stolzius sets up the tragedy; Michael Ebbecke as the simpering, lovelorn Stolzius, who turns into the suicidal avenger of Marie's ruin; Klaus Hirte as the grotesque Haudy; and Ursula Koszut as the Countess, who vainly offers Marie a chance of escape – and the opera's only truly lyrical episode – in a radiant trio with Marie and her sister Charlotte (the excellent Milagro Vargas) at the close of Act 3.

On the visual side, the Stuttgart production is extremely well shot, Kupfer's fast moving, split-stage realisation brilliantly captured by Hans Hulscher's film. Kupfer's lighting of this dark tale was a crucial element, and the more nightmarish scenes take place in semi-darkness which does not always translate well on-screen. Die Soldaten cries out for cinematic reproduction visually, but this film is a tremendous record of a stunning, if deeply disturbing, theatrical experience.

THE INDEXES

Classical GOOD
CD
GUIDE
2004

INDEX TO COUPLINGS

Abel, Carl Friedrich
Adagio-allegro moderato ... 1313
Arpeggiata (Prélude) ... 1313
6 String Quartets, 'Quartettos' – Op 8 (excs) ... 1178
Aborn, Lora
Make me an instrument of Thy peace ... 1249
Shall I compare thee to a Summer's day ... 1249
Tis Winter now ... 1249
Adam, Adolphe
(Le) chalet ... 1255
Si j'étais roi, 'If I were King' (excs) ... 1166
(Le) Toréador (excs) ... 1245
Adams, John
El Dorado ... 3
Lollapalooza ... 1173
Addinsell, Richard
Festival ... 417
Warsaw Concerto ... 6, 1162
Agricola, Alexander
De tous biens plaine I ... 1281
De tous biens plaine II ... 1281
De tous biens playne ... 1283
Fortuna desparata ... 1281
Se congié prens ... 522
Si dedero ... 1283
Tandernaken ... 1283
Alain, Jehan
O Salutaris ... 334
Prière pour nous autres charnels ... 337
Albéniz, Isaac
Cantos de España – Op 232 (excs) ... 10, 1188
España – Op 165 (excs) ... 536
Iberia (excs) ... 9, 10, 238, 419, 1180, 1187
Mallorca – Op 202 ... 10, 1188
Navarra ... 10, 419, 1180
Pavana capricho – Op 12 ... 1180
Rapsodia española – Op 70 ... 369
Suite española No 1 – Op 47 ... 10, 1180, 1188
Albert, Stephen
Concerto for Cello and Orchestra ... 83
Albinoni, Tomaso Giovanni
Adagio in G minor ... 1216
(12) Concerti a cinque – Op 7 (excs) ... 1162, 7432
Albrici, Vincenzo
Sinfonia in D minor ... 1175
Sonata a 5 ... 1175
Alford, Kenneth
Colonel Bogey ... 23
Alfvén, Hugo
So take my heart (Saa tag mit hjerte) ... 1231
7 Songs – Op 28 (excs) ... 1231, 1255
Alkan, Valentin
48 Esquisses – Op 63 (excs) ... 1193
3 Études – Op 76 ... 14
Transcription de Concert pour piano seul avec cade . 14
Allegri, Gregorio
Miserere mei ... 15, 16, 1216, 1218, 1317
Andrews, Herbert
Evening Service in G ... 1219
Anglebert, Jean-Henri
Pièces de Clavecin (excs) ... 1210
Antheil, George
A Jazz Symphony ... 1173
Arcadelt, Jacques
Chansons ... 1296
Missa Noe, Noe ... 1305
Primo libro de Madrigali, Il (excs) ... 1300
Arensky, Anton Stepanovich
Dream on the Volga – Op 16 ... 1223
Raphael – Op 37 ... 1223
Argento, Dominik
6 Elizabethan Songs ... 1230
Arne, Michael
The Lass with the Delicate Air ... 1266
Arne, Thomas
Artaxerxes (excs) ... 1267
Care flies from the lad that is merry ... 1242
Judgment of Paris, The (excs) ... 1224
Love's Labours Lost (excs) ... 1264
Rule Britannia ... 1324
Tempest, The (excs) ... 1224, 1225, 1266
Arnold, Malcolm
Bridge on the River Kwai, The ... 23
Concerto for Clarinet and Orchestra – Op 115 ... 21
Concerto for Clarinet and Strings No 1 – Op 20 ... 21
Concerto for Guitar and Chamber Orchestra – Op 67 . 21
Hobson's Choice ... 23
Inn of the Sixth Happiness ... 23
Popular Birthday ... 1135
Roots of Heaven, The (excs) ... 1165
Sonata – Op 121 ... 191
Sound Barrier, The – Op 38 ... 23
Whistle down the Wind ... 23
You know what sailors are (excs) ... 21
Atkins, Ivor
Abide with me ... 1220
If ye then be risen with Christ ... 1220
There is none that can resist thy voice ... 1220
Auber, Daniel-François-Esprit
Bronze Horse, The (excs) ... 1166
Domino noir, Le (excs) ... 1232
Fra Diavolo (excs) ... 1223, 1267
Manon Lescaut ... 1237
Azzaiolo, Filippo
Primo libro de villotte, Il (excs) ... 1280, 1300
Secondo libro de villotte, Il (excs) ... 1280
Bach, Carl Philipp Emanuel
Cello Concerto in A minor – H432 (Wq170) ... 26
Cello Concerto in B flat – H436 (Wq171) ... 26
Cello Concerto in A – H439 (Wq172) ... 26
Fantasia in E flat major – H339 ... 1356
Oboe Concerto in E flat – H468 (Wq165) ... 34
Oboe Concerto in B flat – H466 (Wq164) ... 34
4 Sinfonias – H663–6 (Wq183) ... 27
Sonata for Flute Solo in A minor – H562 (Wq132) 1308
Bach, Georg Christoph
Siehe, wie fein und lieblich ist ... 1302
Bach, Heinrich
Sonatas Nos 1 & 2 ... 1229
Bach, Johann Bernhard
Overture in D (excs) ... 1302
Bach, Johann Christian
6 Sonatas for Keyboard, Violin/Flute and Cello – T313/1 (Op 2) (excs) ... 1302
Bach, Johann Christoph
Ach, das ich Wassers g'nug hätte ... 1229, 1262
Bach, Johann Ernst
Sammlung auserlesener Fabeln I (excs) ... 1302
Sonata for Violin and Keyboard in F minor ... 1302
Bach, Johann Sebastian
Cantata No 4, 'Christ lag in Todesbanden', BWV41148
Cantata No 22, 'Jesus nahm zu sich die Zwölfe', BWV22 (excs) ... 181
Cantata No 42, 'Am Abend aber desselbigen Sabbats', BWV42 (excs) ... 1316
Cantata No 51, 'Jauchzet Gott in allen Landen!', BWV51 ... 1264
Cantata No 53, 'Schlage doch, gewünschte Stunde', BWV53 ... 1229
Cantata No 60, 'O Ewigkeit, du Donnerwort', BWV60 (excs) ... 1169
Cantata No 68, 'Also hat Gott die Welt geliebt', BWV68 (excs) ... 1266
Cantata No 80, 'Ein feste Burg ist unser Gott', BWV80 (excs) ... 1172
Cantata No 136, 'Erforsche mich, Gott, und erfahr', BWV136 (excs) ... 181
Cantata No 140, 'Wachet auf, ruft uns die Stimme', BWV140 (excs) ... 1172, 1199
Cantata No 147, 'Herz und Mund und Tat und Leben', BWV147 (excs) ... 181, 1195, 1198, 1199, 1216

- Cantata No 156, 'Ich steh mit einem Fuss im Grabe', BWV156 (excs) . . . 34, 1179
- Cantata No 163, 'Nur jedem das Seine' (excs) . . . 181
- Cantata No 167, 'Ihr Menschen, rühmet Gottes', BWV167 (excs) . . . 181
- Cantata No 208, 'Was mir behagt, ist nur die munt', BWV208 (excs) . . . 1172
- Cantata No 211, 'Schweigt stille, plaudert nicht', BWV211 (excs) . . . 1230
- Capriccio sopra la lontananza del suo fratello dil in B flat, BWV992 . . . 31
- Chorale Preludes, BWV714-40 (excs) . . . 1195
- 18 Chorales, 'Leipzig Chorales' (excs) . . . 1199
- Christmas Oratorio (excs) . . . 1167, 1259, 1334
- Chromatic Fantasia and Fugue, BWV903 . . 1187, 1195, 1198, 1356
- Concerto for 2 Violins and Strings in D minor (excs) . . . 1169
- Concerto for Oboe d'amore and Strings in D, BWV1053a . . . 34
- 6 Concertos, BWV592-7 (excs) . . . 1193
- Easter Oratorio (excs) . . . 1177
- Instrumentalsatz in F, BWV1040 . . . 34
- Italian Concerto in F, BWV971 . . . 1206
- Die Kunst der Fuge, BWV1080 (excs) . . . 38
- Magnificat in D, BWV243 . . . 67, 68
- Mass in B minor (excs) . . . 1229
- 6 Motets, BWV225-30 (excs) . . . 1214
- Musikalisches Opfer, 'Musical Offering' (excs) . . . 1147, 1148
- 4 Orchestral Suites, BWV1066-9 (excs) . . . 181
- Orgel-Büchlein, BWV599-644 (excs) . . . 181
- Partita in A minor, BWV1013 . . . 1308
- 6 Partitas, BWV825-30 (excs) . . . 1201
- Pastorale in F, BWV590 . . . 1192
- Prelude and Fugue in C minor, BWV537 . . . 1324
- 6 Schübler Chorales, BWV645-50 (excs) . . . 181, 1193
- Sonata in A minor, BWV967 . . . 31
- 3 Sonatas and 3 Partitas, BWV1001-06 (excs) . . 43, 535, . . . 774, 905, 1162, 1169, 1202, 1203, 1207, 1324, 1356
- St John Passion (excs) . . . 1229
- St Matthew Passion (excs) . . . 181, 1229, 1259
- Suite in A, BWV832 . . . 31
- 6 Suites (Sonatas) for Cello, BWV1007-12 (excs) . 1161, 1313, 1356
- Toccata and Fugue in D minor, BWV565 . 1172, 1208, 1325
- 7 Toccatas, BWV910-16 (excs) . . . 31
- 6 Trio Sonatas, BWV525-30 (excs) . . . 1209

Bach, Wilhelm Friedemann
- Adagio and Fugue in D minor, F65 . . . 1302
- 6 Duets, F54–59 (excs) . . . 1302
- Sinfonia in F . . . 27

Baermann, Heinrich
- Quintet (Septet) in E flat – Op 23 (excs) . . . 302

Bairstow, Sir Edward
- Evening Service in D . . . 1219
- Evening Service in G . . . 1214
- I sat down under his shadow . . . 1211
- Oak and the Ash, The . . . 1212
- Psalm 107 . . . 1218

Baj, Tommaso
- Miserere . . . 16

Bakfark, Valentin
- Fantasia No 9 . . . 1288
- (Un) Gay Bergier . . . 1288
- Non accedat ad te malum, secunda pars . . . 1288
- Si grand è la pietá . . . 1288

Balakirev, Mily Alexeyevich
- Islamey . . . 805, 1187, 1197, 1203

Baldassare, Pietro
- Sonata for Cornett, Strings and Continuo in F . . . 1162

Balfe, Michael William
- (The) Bohemian Girl (excs) . . . 1266
- Killarney . . . 1251

Banister, John
- Give me my lute . . . 1299
- Songs from The Tempest (excs) . . . 1299

Bantock, Granville
- Song to the seals . . . 1197

Barab, Seymour
- One Perfect Rose . . . 1250

Barbarino, Bartolomeo
- Ardens est cor meum . . . 386
- Audi, dulcis amica mea . . . 386

Barber, Samuel
- Adagio for Strings – Op 11 . . . 79, 1163, 1194
- Agnus Dei – Op 11 . . . 81, 163, 1216
- Concerto for Cello and Orchestra . . . 79
- Concerto for Violin and Orchestra . . . 78, 79, 532
- God's Grandeur . . . 81
- Heaven-Haven . . . 81
- 10 Hermit Songs – Op 29 . . . 81, 1230
- Knoxville: Summer of 1915 – Op 24 . . . 81
- Let down the bars, O Death – Op 8/2 . . . 81
- (The) Monk and his cat . . . 81
- Reincarnation – Op 16 . . . 81
- 3 Songs – Op 10 (excs) . . . 1249
- 3 Songs – Op 2 (excs) . . . 1249
- 4 Songs – Op 13 (excs) . . . 1241, 1249
- String Quartet – Op 11 . . . 515
- Sure on this shining night . . . 81
- To be sung on the water – Op 42/2 . . . 81
- Twelfth Night – Op 42/1 . . . 81
- Vanessa – Op 32 (excs) . . . 1236
- (The) Virgin Martyrs – Op 8/1 . . . 81

Barbirolli, John
- (An) Elizabethan Suite . . . 358

Bargiel, Woldemar
- Adagio in G – Op 38 . . . 894

Barker, George A.
- (The) Irish emigrant . . . 1251

Barrera, Tomás
- Adiós, Granada . . . 1222

Barrios Mangoré, Agustín
- Julia Florida . . . 1183, 1208
- Waltzes – Op 8 (excs) . . . 1183, 1208

Bartók, Béla
- Allegro barbaro – Sz49 . . . 90
- 3 Burlesques – Sz47 (excs) . . . 90
- Concerto for Piano and Orchestra No 1 . . . 1186
- Concerto for Piano and Orchestra No 2 . . . 1186
- Concerto for Piano and Orchestra No 3 . 83, 740, 1186
- Concerto for Viola and Orchestra . . . 83
- Concerto for Violin and Orchestra No 2 . . . 83
- 44 Duos – Sz98 . . . 88
- 10 Easy Pieces – Sz39 (excs) . . . 90
- Hungarian Folktunes – Sz66 . . . 90
- 15 Hungarian Peasant Songs – Sz71 (excs) . . . 90, 1190
- Hungarian Sketches – Sz97 . . . 1172
- 8 Improvisations on Hungarian Peasant Songs (excs) 90
- 9 Little Pieces – Sz82 (excs) . . . 90
- Mikrokosmos – Sz108 (excs) . . . 90
- Mikrokosmos, Book 5 – Sz107 (excs) . . . 90
- Mikrokosmos, Book 6 – Sz107 (excs) . . . 90
- (The) Miraculous Mandarin – Sz73 (Op 19) . . . 86
- Petite Suite – Sz105 (excs) . . .
- 2 Portraits – Sz37 (Op 5) . . . 86
- Romanian Folkdances – Sz68 . . . 1172
- 6 Romanian Folkdances – Sz56 . . 979, 1195, 1200, 1202
- Sonata for Violin and Piano No 2 – Sz76 . . . 1181
- Suite – Sz62 (Op 14) . . . 90

Bath, Hubert
- Cornish Rhapsody . . . 6

Bax, Arnold
- (The) Garden of Fand . . . 358
- Nonet . . . 96
- Sonata for Clarinet and Piano . . . 1182
- Tintagel . . . 1064

Bazin, Francois
- Maître Pathelin (excs) . . . 1221

Bazzini, Antonio
- (La) Ronde des lutins – Op 25 . . . 1179, 1183

Beach, Amy Marcy
- Let this mind be in you – Op 105 . . . 1220
- Romance – Op 23 . . . 1150

Beaver, Jack
- Portrait of Isla . . . 6

Becker, Dietrich
- Sonata a 5 in F major . . . 1175

Beethoven, Ludwig van
Adelaide – Op 46 . . . 1243, 1254
Als die Geliebte sich trennen wollte . . . 1254
An die ferne Geliebte – Op 98 . . . 1243
An die Geliebte – WoO140 . . . 1254
Andante favori in F – WoO57 . . . 124
4 Ariettas and a Duet – Op 82 (excs) . . . 1228, 1254
26 Bagatelles (excs) . . . 1189
Cello Sonata No 3 in A – Op 69 . . . 1161
Cello Sonata No 5 in D – Op 102/2 . . . 1161
Concerto for Piano and Orchestra No 4 in G . . . 896
Concerto for Piano and Orchestra No 5, 'Emperor' . . . 1198
Concerto for Violin and Orchestra in D . . . 105, 106, 239, 646, 1169
Concerto for Violin, Cello, Piano and Orchestra in C – Op 56 . . . 107
Coriolan – Op 62 . . . 201
Egmont – Op 84 (excs) . . . 1325
Fantasia in G minor/B flat – Op 77 . . . 1189
Grosse Fuge in B flat – Op 133 . . . 864
Horn Sonata in F – Op 17 . . . 115, 1182
In questa tomba oscura – WoO133 . . . 1228, 1232, 1254, 1256
(Der) Kuss – Op 128 . . . 1254
Leonore – Op 72 (excs) . . . 201, 348
2 Lieder – WoO118 (excs) . . . 1254
3 Lieder – Op 83 (excs) . . . 1225
8 Lieder – Op 52 (excs) . . . 1225, 1254
'Missa solemnis' – Op 123 . . . 134
(La) Partenza – WoO124 . . . 1228
Piano Sonata No 3 in C – Op 2/3 . . . 1206, 1327
Piano Sonata No 4 in E flat – Op 7 . . . 1202
Piano Sonata No 8, 'Pathétique' – Op 13 . . . 129
Piano Sonata No 10 in G – Op 14/2 . . . 556
Piano Sonata No 11 in B flat – Op 22 . . . 777
Piano Sonata No 14, 'Moonlight' – Op 27/2 (excs) . . . 1172, 1206
Piano Sonata No 17, 'Tempest' – Op 31/2 . . 437, 1189
Piano Sonata No 19 in G minor – Op 49/1 . . . 556
Piano Sonata No 20 in G – Op 49/2 . . . 556
Piano Sonata No 22 in F – Op 54 . . . 1198
Piano Sonata No 23, 'Appassionata' – Op 57 . 129, 1185
Piano Sonata No 26, 'Les adieux' – Op 81a . 1189, 1204
Piano Sonata No 27 in E minor – Op 90 . . . 1199
Piano Sonata No 30 in E – Op 109 . . . 1189
Piano Sonata No 31 in A flat – Op 110 . . . 129
Piano Sonata No 32 in C minor – Op 111 . . . 1203
Quartet for Piano and Strings – Op 16 . . . 116
Quintet for Piano and Wind in E flat – Op 16 . . . 115, 1176, 1189
Rondo a capriccio, 'Rage over a lost penny' . . . 43, 905
Rondo in B flat – WoO6 . . . 1189
2 Rondos – Op 51 (excs) . . . 43, 905, 1189
12 Scottish Songs – WoO156 (excs) . . . 1225
25 Scottish Songs – Op 108 (excs) . . . 1225
Sehnsucht – WoO146 . . . 1254
Septet in E flat – Op 20 . . . 115
String Quartet No 11, 'Serioso' – Op 95 . . . 119
Symphony No 2 in D – Op 36 . . . 205
Symphony No 5 in C minor – Op 67 . . . 1170, 1325
Symphony No 6, 'Pastoral' in F – Op 68 . . . 113
Symphony No 7 in A – Op 92 . . . 134, 1325
Symphony No 9, 'Choral' in D minor . . . 1325
15 Variations and a Fugue on an original theme – Op 35 . . . 126, 777, 1189
7 Variations in F on 'Kind, willst du ruhig' . . . 1189
6 Variations on an Original Theme, 'Die Ruinen von Athen' – Op 76 . . . 126
32 Variations on an Original Theme in C minor – WoO80 . . . 1195
6 Variations on an Original Theme in F – Op 34 . . 126
7 Variations on Mozart's 'Bei Männern, welche' – WoO46 . . . 1161
12 Variations on Mozart's 'Ein Mädchen oder Weibchen' – Op 66 . . . 1161
Variations on 'See the conqu'ring hero comes' from – WoO45 . . . 1161
Violin Sonata No 5, 'Spring' – Op 24 . . . 1202
Violin Sonata No 9, 'Kreutzer' in A – Op 47 . . . 1202
Wellingtons Sieg – Op 91 . . . 1024
Zärtliche Liebe, 'Ich liebe dich' – WoO123 . 1225, 1249

Bellini, Vincenzo
(L') Abbandono . . . 1227
6 Ariette da camera (excs) . . . 1245
Beatrice di Tenda (excs) . . . 1266
Bella Nice, che d'amore . . . 1256
Bianca e Fernando . . . 1254
(I) Capuleti e i Montecchi (excs) . . . 1237, 1246
Concerto for Oboe and Orchestra in E flat . . . 815
Dolente imagine di figlia mia . . . 1227, 1256
(La) Farfalleta . . . 1227
(Il) Fervido desiderio . . . 1227
Ma rendi pur contento . . . 1228, 1256, 1331
Malinconia, ninfa gentile . . . 1227, 1228, 1256, 1331
Norma (excs). 727, 1223, 1232, 1234, 1238, 1253, 1258, 1266, 1267, 1333
Per pietà, bell'idol mio . . . 1227, 1245
(I) Puritani (excs) . . 1237, 1238, 1245, 1255, 1266, 1267
(La) Sonnambula (excs) . 1223, 1232, 1234, 1237, 1238, 1240, 1245, 1253, 1255, 1261, 1267, 1269
Torna, vezzosa fillide . . . 1227
Vaga luna che inargenti . . . 1227, 1331
Vanne, o rosa fortunata . . . 1227, 1256

Bemberg, Herman
Chant hindou . . . 1223

Bendinelli, Cesare
Fanfare, 'Levet' . . . 1311
Fanfare, 'Sarasinetta' . . . 385
Sonata 333 . . . 385

Benedict, Julius
(La) Capinera . . . 1237, 1245
(The) Gypsy and the Bird . . . 1245
Variations de concert sur le Carnaval de Venise . . 1269

Benet, John
Credo . . . 1292
Gloria . . . 1292

Bennet, John
All creatures now . . . 1216

Bennett, Richard Rodney
(A) Garland for Marjory Fleming . . . 1233
Little Suite . . . 1165
Murder on the Orient Express (excs) . . . 6

Berg, Alban (Maria Johannes)
7 Early Songs . . . 144, 1230
Lyric Suite . . . 1156
5 Orchesterlieder nach Ansichtskartentexten . . . 1156
Piano Sonata – Op 1 . . . 143, 850, 1185
Violin Concerto . . . 142, 618

Berio, Luciano
11 Folk Songs . . . 147
Recital I for Cathy . . . 147

Berkeley, Lennox
Nocturne . . . 828
Sonatina for Recorder/Flute and Piano – Op 13 . . . 191

Berlin, Irving
For Your Country and My Country . . . 390
White Christmas (excs) . . . 1268

Berlioz, Hector
Béatrice et Bénédict (excs) . . . 159
Benvenuto Cellini (excs) . . . 159, 1169
(Le) carnaval romain – Op 9 . . . 1167
(Le) Corsaire – Op 21 . . . 1167
(La) Damnation de Faust – Op 24 (excs)159, 1221, 1253
(L') Enfance du Christ – Op 25 (excs) . . . 159, 1334
Grande messe des morts (Requiem) . . . 154
King Lear – Op 4 . . . 1167
Lélio, ou Le retour à la vie – Op 14b (excs) . . . 159
Messe solennelle (excs) . . . 154
(Les) Nuits d'été . . . 155, 156, 606, 1222, 1234, 1269
Roméo et Juliette – Op 17 (excs) . . . 159
Symphonie fantastique . . . 151
Tantum ergo . . . 154
Tristia – Op 18 (excs) . . . 1227
(Les) Troyens, 'The Trojans' (excs) . . . 159, 1239
Veni creator . . . 154
Zaïde – Op 19/1 . . . 1227, 1228, 1331

Bernardi, Steffano
Sinfonia Prima a 6 . . . 1280
Sinfonia Prima a 8 . . . 1280

Sinfonia Seconda a 8 . . . 1280
Berners, Lord
Red Roses and Red Noses . . . 1250
Bernstein, Leonard
Candide (excs) . . . 1245, 1270, 1335
Candide (opera house version) (excs) . . . 1236, 1245
Chichester Psalms . . . 163
Madwoman of Central Park West (excs) . . . 1270
Prelude, Fugue and Riffs . . . 1173
Serenade . . . 79, 105
Symphony No 2, 'The Age of Anxiety' . . . 162
West Side Story (excs) . . . 1239, 1270
Bertali, Antonio
Chiaconna . . . 845
Lamento della Regina d'Inghilterra . . . 1255
Sonata a 13 . . . 169
Sonata Sancti Placidi . . . 169
Bertalot, John
Psalm 141 . . . 1218
Biber, Heinrich Ignaz Franz von
Battalia a 10 in D . . . 167
Harmonia artificioso_ariosa: deversimodè accorda (excs) 167
Litaniae de Sancto Josepho . . . 169
Mystery ('Rosary') Sonatas and Passacaglia (excs) . . 844
Passacaglia for Lute . . . 167
Sonata Sancti Polycarpi . . . 169
Sonata violino solo representativa in A . . . 167
12 Sonatas, 'Fidicinium sacro–profanum' (excs) . . . 169
Binchois, Gilles
Adieu, jusques je vous revoye . . . 1276
Adieu mon amoureuse joye . . . 1285
Amoureux suy et me vient toute joye . . . 1285
Ay douloureux disant helas . . . 1276, 1285
Je ne vis onques la pareille . . . 1292
Magnificat secundi toni . . . 1285
Qui veut mesdire si mesdie . . . 1285
Se la belle n'a le voloir . . . 1285
Bingham, Judith
Epiphany . . . 1217
Bishop, Henry
Home, sweet home . . . 1237, 1255, 1258, 1266, 1352
Lo, here the gentle lark . . . 1237, 1240, 1244, 1245
Bizet, Georges
Adieux de l'hôtesse arabe . . . 1227
Agnus Dei . . . 1216, 1251
(L')Arlésienne (excs) . . . 774
Cantique de Noël . . . 1251
Carmen (excs) . . . 1223, 1228, 1232, 1233, 1235, 1240, 1251, 1253, 1254, 1255, 1256, 1258, 1259, 1267, 1269, 1331, 1332
Chant d'amour . . . 1227
(La) Coccinelle . . . 1227
Jeux d'enfants, 'Children's Games' (excs) . . . 557, 950
(La) Jolie fille de Perth (excs) . . . 1254
Pastorale . . . 1258, 1263
The Pearl Fishers (excs) . . . 1221, 1223, 1224, 1239, 1246, 1251
Tarantelle . . . 1227
Bliss, Arthur
Checkmate – T57 (excs) . . . 176
2 Nursery Rhymes – T20 . . . 1182
Pastoral . . . 1182
Blitzstein, Marc
Juno . . . 1270
No for an Answer . . . 1270
Reuben, Reuben . . . 1270
Bloch, Ernest
Baal Shem . . . 78, 1183
Schelomo . . . 83, 355
Blow, John
Fugue in G minor . . . 179
Grounds in C and G minor . . . 179, 1312
I was glad when they said unto me . . . 179
Let my prayer come up . . . 1217
(The) Lord God is a sun and a shield . . . 1217
Lovely Selina, innocent and free . . . 1299
Magnificat and Nunc Dimittis in G . . . 1214
Mark how the lark and linnet sing . . . 179
Sappho to the Goddess of Beauty . . . 1247
Sappho to the Goddess of Love . . . 1247
Sonata in A . . . 179
Suite No 10 in G . . . 179
Blumenfeld, Felix
Etude for the left hand in A flat – Op 36 . . . 1193
Boccherini, Luigi
Cello Concerto No 5 in D – G478 . . . 181
Cello Concerto No 7 in G – G480 . . . 181
Cello Concerto No 9 in B flat – G482 . . . 1161
Guitar Quintets – G445–453 (excs) . . . 1206
Stabat Mater . . . 183
6 String Quintets – G271–276 (Op 11) (excs) . . . 1172
Böhm, Georg
Capriccio in D . . . 31
Chorales – WK ii (excs) . . . 1192
11 Suites (excs) . . . 31
Boïeldieu, Adrien
(La) Dame blanche (excs) . . . 1166
Boito, Arrigo
Mefistofele (excs) . . . 1223, 1234, 1239, 1252, 1253, 1254, 1258, 1268
Bolcom, William
Black Max (as told by de Kooning Boys) . . . 1241
Concerto for Piano and Orchestra . . . 162
Fur (Murray the Furrier) . . . 1241
Graceful Ghost . . . 1179
Over the piano . . . 1241
Bononcini, Giovanni
Griselda (excs) . . . 1256
Borodin, Alexander Porfir'yevich
In the Steppes of Central Asia . . . 805
Prince Igor (excs) . . . 1221, 1223, 1244, 1269
String Quartet No 2 in D . . . 185
Bortnyansky, Dmitry
Adoremus . . . 154
Pater Noster . . . 154
Boughton, Rutland
(The) Immortal Hour (excs) . . . 1246
Boulanger, Lili
3 Pieces (excs) . . . 1180
Boulez, Pierre
Sonata for Piano No 2 . . . 1205
Bowen, York
Rêverie d'Amour – Op 20/2 . . . 1197
3 Serious Dances – Op 51 (excs) . . . 1197
Sonata for Flute and Piano – Op 120 . . . 191
(The) Way to Polden . . . 1197
Boyce, William
Come, Holy Ghost . . . 1217
(The) King shall rejoice . . . 1217
Lord, thou hast been our refuge . . . 179
Matelotte . . . 1177
Orpheus and Euridice . . . 1247
Praise the Lord, O Jerusalem . . . 1217
Song of Momus to Mars . . . 1242
Tell me lovely shepherd . . . 1225
Braga, Ernani
Folk Songs of Brazil . . . 1259
Braga, Gaetano
7 Melodies (excs) . . . 1253, 1258
Brahms, Johannes
Academic Festival Overture – Op 80 . . . 1325
4 Balladen und Romanzen – Op 75 (excs) . . . 1179
4 Ballades – Op 10 . . . 1199, 1202
Clarinet Quintet in B minor – Op 115 . . . 207
26 Deutsche Volkslieder (excs) . . . 1263
49 Deutsche Volkslieder – WoO33 (excs) . . . 1224, 1249, 1265
Ein Deutsches Requiem – Op 45 (excs) . . . 1218
Double Concerto in A minor – Op 102 . . . 107, 196
4 Duets – Op 28 . . . 1226
4 Ernste Gesänge – Op 121 . . . 1226
Geistliches Lied – Op 30 . . . 1216
10 Hungarian Dances . . . 1197
21 Hungarian Dances (excs) . . . 201, 1023, 1174, 1202
18 Liebeslieder – Op 52 . . . 214
2 Lieder – Op 91 . . . 1226
4 Lieder – Op 43 (excs) . . . 1223
4 Lieder – Op 96 (excs) . . . 1249
4 Lieder – Op 43 (excs) . . . 1260, 1263

- 5 Lieder – Op 94 ... 214
- 5 Lieder – Op 72 ... 214
- 5 Lieder – Op 105 (excs) ... 1179
- 5 Lieder – Op 107 (excs) ... 1249
- 5 Lieder – Op 47 (excs) ... 1249
- 5 Lieder – Op 106 (excs) ... 1260
- 5 Lieder – Op 47 (excs) ... 1260
- 5 Lieder – Op 49 (excs) ... 1263, 1264
- 6 Lieder – Op 97 (excs) ... 1222
- 6 Lieder – Op 3 (excs) ... 1224
- 6 Lieder – Op 86 (excs) ... 1249
- 9 Lieder – Op 32 ... 214
- 9 Lieder – Op 63 (excs) ... 1222, 1249
- 5 Lieder und Romanzen – Op 84 (excs) ... 1259, 1269
- 2 Motets – Op 29 (excs) ... 1214
- Piano Concerto No 1 in D minor . 197, 198, 320, 1187
- Piano Sonata No 1 in C – Op 1 ... 904
- Piano Sonata No 2 in F sharp minor – Op 2 ... 904
- Piano Sonata No 3 in F minor – Op 5 . 213, 1190, 1197
- Piano Quintet in F minor – Op 34 ... 207, 490
- 5 Piano Studies (excs) ... 1207
- 3 Pieces – Op 117 (excs) ... 1186, 1195, 1199
- 4 Pieces – Op 119 (excs) ... 904, 1195, 1199
- 6 Pieces – Op 118 (excs) ... 904, 1199, 1206
- 7 Pieces – Op 116 (excs) .. 904, 1195, 1199, 1206, 1327
- 8 Pieces – Op 76 (excs) ... 904, 1195, 1199
- 2 Rhapsodies – Op 79 ... 559, 1186, 1206
- Serenade No 1 in D – Op 11 ... 199
- Symphony No 1 in C minor ... 201, 202
- Symphony No 2 in D ... 201, 205, 1325
- Symphony No 3 in F ... 201
- Symphony No 4 in E minor ... 201, 1169, 1325
- Tragic Overture – Op 81 ... 1167
- Trio for Clarinet/Viola, Cello and Piano – Op 114. 209
- Trio for Horn/Viola, Violin and Piano in E flat 40 ... 1176
- Variations on a Theme by Haydn, 'St Antoni Chorale' – Op 56a ... 201
- 28 Variations on a Theme by Paganini – Op 35 ... 904, 1187, 1202
- Variations on an original theme in D – Op 21/1 .. 1197
- Violin Concerto in D – Op 77 ... 106, 194, 195, 657, 1162, 1169
- 14 Volks–Kinderlieder (excs) ... 1256, 1263

Brewer, Herbert
- Evening Service in E flat ... 1219
- Marche héroïque ... 1189

Bridge, Frank
- Berceuse – H8 ... 220
- Cello Sonata in D minor – H125 ... 220, 307
- Cradle song – H96 ... 220
- (The) Dew Fairy ... 1197
- Elegy – H47 ... 220
- Enter Spring – H174 ... 219
- 3 Lyrics – H161 (excs) ... 1197
- Meditation – H103a ... 220
- Mélodie – H99 ... 220
- 3 Pieces – H63 (excs) ... 1189, 1193, 1194
- Scherzo – H19a ... 220
- (The) Sea – H100 ... 219
- Serenade – H23 ... 220
- 4 Short Pieces – H104 (excs) ... 307
- Spring Song – H157 ... 220
- String Sextet in E flat – H107 ... 220

Britten, Benjamin
- (The) Building of the House – Op 79 ... 219
- 4 Cabaret songs ... 229
- Cello Sonata – Op 65 ... 220, 307
- Corpus Christi carol ... 1226
- Festival Te Deum – Op 32 ... 1218
- 5 Flower Songs – Op 47 ... 1212
- Folk Song Arrangements (excs) ... 228, 1138, 1231
- (A) Hymn of St Columba ... 1217
- Hymn to St Cecilia – Op 27 ... 1212
- 2 Insect Pieces ... 731
- Johnson over Jordan ... 229
- 6 Metamorphoses after Ovid – Op 49 ... 731
- Movement for Clarinet and Orchestra ... 21
- On the Frontier (excs) ... 229
- On this Island – Op 11 (excs) ... 229
- Passacaglia – Op 33b ... 225
- Paul Bunyan – Op 17 ... 229
- Peter Grimes – Op 33 (excs) ... 1236
- Phantasy – Op 2 ... 731
- Russian Funeral ... 928
- 4 Sea Interludes – Op 33a ... 225
- Serenade – Op 31 ... 228, 1138
- Sinfonia da Requiem – Op 20 ... 225, 231
- Suite No 3 – Op 87 ... 1017
- Symphony for Cello and Orchestra – Op 68 ... 79, 223
- Temporal Variations ... 731
- This way to the Tomb ... 229
- Violin Concerto in D minor – Op 15 ... 222, 826
- When you're feeling like expressing your affection . 229
- (The) Young Person's Guide to the Orchestra ... 225

Brouwer, Leo
- Canción de cuna, 'Berceuse' ... 1183
- From Yesterday to Penny Lane ... 238
- Guitar Concerto No 5 ... 238

Brown, Christopher
- Fanfare to welcome Sir Michael Tippett ... 1049

Bruch, Max
- Ave Maria on a theme from cantata 'Das Feuerkreuz' – Op 61 ... 1168
- Clarinet and Viola Concerto in E minor – Op 88 . 1135
- Kanzone in B – Op 55 ... 1171
- Kol Nidrei – Op 47 ... 340, 356, 1135, 1161
- Romance – Op 85 ... 1135
- Scottish Fantasy – Op 46 ... 1162
- Violin Concerto No 1 in G minor . 239, 617, 618, 1169
- Violin Concerto No 2 in D minor ... 239

Bruckner, Anton
- Christus factus est ... 1216
- Os justi ... 1214
- Symphony No 3 ... 244
- Symphony No 6 ... 246, 460
- Symphony No 7 ... 1325
- Te Deum ... 251
- Virga Jesse floruit ... 1217

Bullock, Ernest
- Magnificat and Nunc Dimittis in D ... 1214

Bush, Geoffrey
- Divertimento ... 1165

Busnois, Antoine
- Anima liquefacta est/Stirps Jesse ... 255, 1282
- Fortuna disperata ... 1281, 1309
- Gaude coelestis Domina ... 255, 701
- In hydraulis ... 701
- Je ne puis vivre ainsi ... 1282
- Missa L'homme armé ... 255
- Regina coeli (first setting) ... 1277
- Regina coeli (second setting) ... 1277
- (Le) Serviteur ... 1283
- Vostre beauté ... 1291

Busoni, Ferruccio
- Berceuse élégiaque – K252 (Op 42) ... 3
- Fantasia after J. S. Bach – K253 ... 1193
- Sonatina No 3, 'ad usum infantis' – K268 ... 1185
- Sonatina No 6, 'Fantasia da camera sur Carmen' ... 14

Butler, Henry
- Variations on Callino Casturame ... 1312

Butterworth, George
- (The) Banks of Green Willow ... 1063
- Bredon Hill and other songs from 'A Shropshire Lad' . 1069
- Love Blows as the Wind Blows ... 1069
- (A) Shropshire Lad ... 358, 1069, 1242

Buxtehude, Dietrich
- Aperite mihi portas justitiae – BuxWV7 ... 1260
- Fried- und Freudenreiche Hinfarth (excs) ... 1262
- Jesu, meine Freud und Lust – BuxWV59 ... 1229
- Jubilate Domino, omnis terra – BuxWV64 . 1229, 1262
- Praeludium in D minor – BuxWV140 ... 1193
- Prelude, Fugue and Chaconne in C – BuxWV137 1192, 1193
- Was mich auf dieser Welt betrübt – BuxWV105 .. 1259

Buzzi-Peccia, Arturo
- Baciami! ... 1253
- Colombetta ... 1253
- Little birdies ... 1237

Mal d'amore . . . 1254, 1261
(La) Niña querida . . . 1261

Byrd, William
Alman in G – BK11 . . . 1309
An aged dame . . . 1310
Ave verum corpus . . . 264, 1216, 1317
Browning a 5 – BE17/10 . . . 261
(The) Carman's Whistle – BK36 . . . 418
Civitas sancti tui . . . 1317
Come woeful Orpheus . . . 1310
(La) Coranto in C . . . 1309
Fantasia . . . 1309
Fantasia a 5 – BE17/8 . . . 261
Fantasia a 6, G minor No 2 – BE17/13 . . . 261
Fantasia a 6 No 3 . . . 261
(A) Gigg . . . 1309
Gradualia, Vol 1/ii: Corpus Christi (excs) . . . 264
Gradualia, Vol 2: Votive Mass of the Blessed Sacra (excs) . . . 264
Gypsy's Round – BK80 . . . 1305
5 In Nomines a 5 – BE17/18–22 (excs) . . . 261
Iustorum animae . . . 1213
Laetentur coeli . . . 1021, 1217
Mass for five voices . . . 264
O lux, beata Trinitas . . . 1213
Praeludium and Ground . . . 1310
Praeludium to Ye Fancie Fantasia . . . 1309
Praise our Lord all ye Gentiles . . . 1217
Rowland, or Lord Willoughby's welcome home . . 1309
Senex puerem portabat . . . 1217
Tristitia et anxietas . . . 1021

Cabezón, Antonio de
Beata viscera Mariae Virginis . . . 644
Beati omnes . . . 1304
Confitebor Tibi . . . 1304
Diferencias sobre 'La dama le demanda' . . . 1288, 1311
Diferencias sobre la Pavana Italiana . . . 1288
Differencias sombre canto del Cavallero . . . 1288
Farbordones del sexto tono . . . 1288
Himno XIX Pange lingua IV . . . 1288
Je fille quant dieu me donne de qouy . . . 1288
Para quien crié cabellos . . . 1288, 1315
Pavana con su glosa . . . 1288
Quien llamo al partir, partir? . . . 1288
Tiento de 5 tono . . . 643
Tiento del cuarto tono . . . 643
Tiento del octavo tono . . . 643
Tiento I . . . 1304
Tiento sobre el hymno, 'Ave Maris stella' . . . 644
Tientos II/III . . . 1288
Tientos IX (quinto tono) . . . 643, 1288, 1304
Tientos VII (cuarto tono) . . . 1288
Tientos VIII/XIII . . . 1288
Tres glosas sobre la Alta . . . 1288
Un Gay Bergier . . . 1288

Caccini, Giulio
Amarilli mia bella . . . 1228, 1331
Io che dal Ciel cader . . . 1316
Nuove musiche e nuova maniera de scriverle (excs) 1227, 1228, 1331
(Le) nuove musiche (excs) . . . 1227, 1300

Cadman, Charles
Moonlight Song – Op 42/2 . . . 1258

Caldara, Antonio
Alma del core . . . 1245
Sebben crudele me fai languir . . . 1227
Selve amiche . . . 1227

Calleja, Rafael
Emigrantes . . . 1261

Camidge, Matthew
Psalm 140 . . . 1218

Campion, Thomas
21 Ayres (excs) . . . 1299, 1301, 1315
First Booke of Ayres (excs) . . . 1216
Fourth Booke of Ayres (excs) . . . 1225
Move now with measured sound . . . 1310
Third Booke of Ayres (excs) . . . 1225, 1310

Cannio, Enrico
'O surdato 'nnammurato . . . 1239

Cano, José Maria
Luna (excs) . . . 1235

Canteloube, Joseph
Chants d'Auvergne (excs) . . . 267, 1235, 1265

Capel, John Mais
Love, could I only tell thee . . . 1271

Capirola, Vincenzo
Capirola Lutebook (excs) . . . 1311
Non ti spiaqua l'ascoltar . . . 1311
Padoana belissima . . . 1311
Tientalora . . . 1311

Caplet, André
5 Ballades françaises (excs) . . . 1265
Légende pour orchestre . . . 268
Marche triomphale et pompière . . . 268
Rêverie et Petite Valse (excs) . . . 1180
Suite Persane (excs) . . . 268
(Le) Vieux coffret (excs) . . . 1265
(A) Spring Morning . . . 1266

Carissimi, Giacomo
Vittoria, mio core! . . . 1227

Carmichael, Hoagy
Prayer and Cathedral Vision . . . 1163
Skylark . . . 1211

Caron, Firminus
Helas que pourra devenir . . . 1283

Carpenter, John
Sea Drift . . . 1163

Carreira, António
Stabat mater . . . 1299

Carter, Andrew
Toccata on Veni Emmanuel . . . 1217

Castelnuovo-Tedesco, Mario
Guitar Concerto No 1 in D – Op 99 . . . 809
Sea murmurs – Op 24a . . . 1179

Catalani, Alfredo
Loreley . . . 1254
(La) Wally (excs) . . 1232, 1237, 1246, 1253, 1254, 1268

Cato, Diomedes
Fantasie No 1 . . . 1310

Cavalieri, Emilio de
Dalle più alte sfere . . . 1316
Godi, turba mortal . . . 1316
O che nuovo miracolo . . . 1316

Cavalli, Francesco
Giasone (excs) . . . 1227
Lauda Jerusalem . . . 1304

Chabrier, Emmanuel
Bourrée fantasque . . . 271
España . . . 271
(L') Étoile (excs) . . . 1237
Gwendoline (excs) . . . 271
Habanera . . . 1166
Joyeuse marche . . . 271, 1166, 1167
Lied . . . 1250
5 Pièces posthumes (excs) . . . 1170
(Le) Roi malgré lui . . . 271
Suite pastorale . . . 271
Toutes les fleurs . . . 1250

Chadwick, George
Symphonic Sketches (excs) . . . 1163

Chaminade, Cécile
6 Pièces humoristiques – Op 87 (excs) . . . 1197
Pierrette – Op 41 . . . 1197

Chaplin, Charles
Eternally . . . 1248
Modern Times (excs) . . . 1178

Chapman, Edward
(The) Three Ravens . . . 1212

Charles, Ernest
When I have sung my songs . . . 1256

Charpentier, Gustave
Louise (excs) . . . 1232, 1235, 1239, 1240, 1253, 1333

Charpentier, Marc-Antoine
Ave maris stella – H60 . . . 275
Beatus vir – H221 . . . 275
David et Jonathas – H490 (excs) . . . 1314
Laetatus sum – H216 . . . 275
Lauda Jerusalem – H210 . . . 275
Laudate pueri – H149 . . . 275

Magnificat – H72 ... 275
Psalmus 126us, 'Nisi Dominus' – H160 ... 275
Salve regina – H24 ... 275
Tenebare Ritornelles pour Iere leçon du mercredi ... 273
3 Tenebrae Lessons – H138-140 (excs) ... 273
Tenebrae Lessons du vendredi saint (excs) ... 273
9 Tenebrae Responsories – H126-134 (excs) ... 273

Chausson, Ernest
Poème de l'amour et de la mer ... 156, 1226, 1250

Cherry, John
Dear little shamrock ... 1251

Cherubini, Luigi
(Les) Abencérages (excs) ... 1221
Anacréon (excs) ... 134, 862
2 Sonatas (excs) ... 815

Child, William
Magnificat ... 1214
Nunc dimittis ... 1214

Chopin, Fryderyk
Andante spianato and Grande Polonaise ... 557, 1204
Aspiration ... 1254
4 Ballades (excs) ... 291, 836, 1191, 1197, 1203, 1205
Barcarolle in F sharp – Op 60 ... 124, 291, 1186
Berceuse in D flat – Op 57 ... 291, 1198
Cello Sonata in G minor – Op 65 ... 1161, 1179
27 Etudes – Opp. 10, 25 and posth (excs) ... 291, 688, 1195, 1196, 1205
Fantaisie-impromptu in C sharp minor ... 1196, 1198
Fantasie in F minor – Op 49 ... 291, 1197, 1203, 1206
3 Impromptus (excs) ... 291, 1191
Introduction and Polonaise brillant in C – Op 3 ... 1171
Mazurkas (excs) ... 1191, 1195, 1196, 1198, 1202, 1205
Nocturnes (excs) ... 291, 777, 836, 1191, 1196, 1206, 1210, 1244
Piano Concerto No 1 in E minor (excs) ... 14, 557
Piano Concerto No 2 in F minor ... 291
Piano Sonata No 2, 'Funeral March' ... 291, 1195
Piano Sonata No 3 in B minor – Op 58 ... 291, 29219
Polish songs – Op 74 (excs) ... 291
16 Polonaises (excs) ... 291, 292
26 Preludes (excs) ... 289, 291, 1172
4 Scherzos (excs) ... 124, 1186, 1195, 1203, 1205, 1206

Tarantelle in A flat – Op 43 ... 291
Waltzes (excs) ... 124, 291, 836, 1186, 1201, 1203, 1207, 1237

Ciconia, Johannes
Con lagreme bagnandome ... 1293
Doctorum principem/ Melodia suavissima ... 1293
Gloria ... 1293
Ligiarda donna ... 1291
O felix templum jubila ... 1293
O Padua sidus praeclarum ... 1293
O rosa bella ... 1291, 1301
Per quella strada ... 1293
(Le) Ray au soleyl ... 1293
Sus un' fontayne ... 1293
Una panthera ... 1293

Cilea, Francesco
Adriana Lecouvreur (excs) ... 1229, 1232, 1237, 1253, 1254, 1266, 1268, 1271, 1333
(L')Arlesiana (excs). 1224, 1253, 1256, 1261, 1265, 1352

Clarke, Jeremiah
Praise the Lord, O Jerusalem ... 1217

Clemens Non Papa, Jacobus
Chansons ... 1296
Ego flos campi ... 1288
Pater peccavi ... 1288
Priere devant le repas, O souverain Pasteur ... 1281

Coates, Eric
Music Everywhere ... 1165

Cocker, Norman
Tuba Tune ... 1194

Codax, Martin
Aj deus se sab'ora meu amigo ... 1290, 1292
Aj ondas que eu vin veer ... 1290, 1292
Atlas undas que venez sur la mar ... 1292
Eno sagrado en vigo ... 1290, 1292
Esperanza de totz ferms esperans ... 1292
Mia jrmana fremosa treides comigo ... 1290, 1292
Mundad' ei comigo ... 1290, 1292
Ondas do mar de vigo ... 1290, 1292
Postlude ... 1290
Prelude ... 1290
Quantas sabedes amar amigo ... 1290, 1292

Commette, Edouard
Scherzo ... 1192

Conrad, Con
Singin' the Blues ('till My Daddy Comes Home) ... 390

Constant, Marius
Alleluias ... 1181

Cooke, Arnold
Quintet for Clarinet and Strings ... 507

Cooke, John
Gloria ... 1284

Copland, Aaron
Appalachian Spring ... 79
Concerto for Clarinet and String Orchestra ... 21
In the Beginning ... 163
4 Motets ... 163
Old American Songs, Set 1 ... 81, 1241
Old American Songs, Set 2 ... 81, 1241, 1249
12 Poems of Emily Dickinson ... 1230
Symphony No 3 ... 297

Coprario, John
Fortune and Glory ... 1303
Send home my long strayde eies to mee ... 328
Songs of Mourning (excs) ... 1317
When pale famine ... 1303

Corelli, Arcangelo
Sonata for Trumpet and Strings in D ... 1162, 7432
12 Sonatas for Violin/Recorder and Continuo – Op 5 (excs) ... 387, 1016, 1315
12 Trio Sonatas – Op 4 (excs) ... 841
12 Trio Sonatas – Op 3 (excs) ... 841, 1299

Cornago, Johannes
Donde estas que non te veo ... 1288
Gentil dama, non se gana ... 1222
Que's mi vida preguntáys ... 1222, 1288

Cornazano, Antonio
Figlie Guiliemin ... 1288

Cornelius, Peter
(The) Barber of Baghdad (excs) ...
Trauer und Trost – Op 3 ... 1257
6 Weihnachtslieder – Op 8 (excs) ... 1217

Cortot, Alfred
Adagio ... 1207

Costa, Pasquale
Napulitanata ... 1261

Costeley, Guillaume
ArrÍte un peu mon coeur ... 1296

Couperin, François
(L') Art de toucher le clavecin (excs) ... 1210
Doux liens de mon coeur ... 1303
Livres de clavecin, Book 1 (excs) ... 1210
Messe à l'usage ordinaire des paroisses ... 1193
Qu'on ne me dise ... 1303
Zéphire ... 1303

Courbois, Philippe
(L') Amant timide ... 1309

Coward, Noel
Bitter Sweet (excs) ... 1237
Operette (excs) ... 1266

Cowen, Frederic
(The) Swallows ... 1269

Crecquillon, Thomas
Andreas Christi famulus ... 643
Carol, magnus erat ... 1294
Diferencias sobre 'Las vacas' ... 1288
Pour ung plaisir ... 1288
Quis te victorem ... 1294

Croft, William
(The) Lord is a sun and shield ... 1217
O God, our help ... 1212

Crouch, Frederick
Kathleen Mavourneen ... 1251

Cruft, Adrian ...
Collegium Regale ... 1214

Crumb, George
Black Angels: 13 Images from the Dark Lands ... 1177

Crusell, Bernhard
Clarinet Concerto No 2 in F minor – Op 5 302
Cui, César
Aeolian harps 1223
Angelo 1223
Bolero, 'O my dear, charming one' 1223
(A) feast in time of plague 1223
I remember the evening 1223
Oh, if Mother Volga 1223
(A) Prisoner in the Caucasus 1223
Dale, Benjamin
Come away, death 1242
Dallier, Henri
5 Invocations 1192
Daman, William
Di sei soprani 1306
Damase, Jean-Michel
Berceuse – Op 19 1182
Pavane variée 1182
3 Prières sans paroles 1181
Danyel, John
Rosa 1299
Songs for the Lute, Viol and Voice (excs) 1299
Dargomïzhsky, Alexander
Rusalka (excs) 1223
Darke, Harold
Evening Service in F 1219
David, Félicien
(La) Perle du Brésil (excs) 1223, 1232, 1237, 1269
Davidov, A.D
Leave me! 1223
Night, love and the moon 1223
What happiness! 1223
Davies, Walford
God be in my head 1334
O little town of Bethlehem 1220
Psalm 121, 'I will lift up mine eyes' 1213
Day, Edgar
Psalm 139 1218
Turn back O Man 1220
When I survey the wondrous cross 1220
De Curtis, Ernesto
'A canzone 'e Napule 1239
Lucia luci 1239
Torna a Surriento 1251
De Koven, Reginald
Rhapsody 1269
Robin Hood (excs) 1251
De la Mota, Antonio Durán
Dios y Josef apuestan 1315
De Lara, Isidore
Rondel de l'adieu 1232
Dearnley, Christopher
(The) growing limbs of God the Son 1217
Debussy, Claude
2 Arabesques 1200
3 Ballades de François Villon (excs) 1269
Beau soir 1179, 1253
Cello Sonata in D minor 307, 372
Chansons de Bilitis 155, 1184, 1234, 1269
3 Chansons de Charles d'Orléans (excs) 1212
Children's Corner 268, 1196
(La) Damoiselle élue 606
D'un cahier d'esquisses (Equisse) 1200
(L') Enfant prodigue (excs) 1259
3 Estampes 124, 268, 415, 747, 1200
12 Etudes (excs) 1185, 1195, 1196
Fantaisie 1200
Fêtes galantes, Sets 1 & 2 1269
(Le) Fille aux cheveux de lin 1169
6 Images (excs) 1185, 1203
(L') Isle joyeuse 1200
(La) Mer 305, 836, 1325
(La) Plus que lente 1184
5 Poèmes de Charles Baudelaire (excs) 1269
Prélude à l'après-midi d'un faune 305
24 Préludes (excs) 421, 747, 1150, 1172, 1205
Premier trio in G 306
Printemps 1167
(Le) Promenoir des deux amants 1269
Proses lyriques (excs) 1259, 1269
Rêverie 340
Sonata for Flute, Viola and Harp 382
String Quartet in G minor – Op 10 .... 306, 791
Suite bergamasque 124, 268, 1172
Syrinx 1184
Violin Sonata in G minor 307, 382
Delibes, Léo
Bonjour, Suzon! 1222, 1253
(Les) Filles de Cadix 1227, 1237, 1238, 1253
Lakmé (excs) 1223, 1237, 1245, 1251, 1253, 1261, 1266, 1267, 1269
Sylvia 312
Delius, Frederick
Air and Dance 418
Cello Concerto 1161
(A) Dance Rhapsody No 1 417
Florida (excs) 1321
Hassan (excs) 1179
Piano Concerto in C minor 1067
7 Songs from the Norwegian (excs) 1231
(The) Splendour falls on castle walls 1212
Summer Evening 1167
To be sung of a summer night on the water 1212
(A) Village Romeo and Juliet (excs) 1324
Violin Concerto 357
Violin Sonata No 3 96
Dell' Acqua, Eva
Villanelle 1237
Dexter, Harry
Siciliano 1165
Di Capua, Eduardo
O sole mio 1261
Dietrich, Sixt
Elslein à 3 1309
Dimitriev, Nikolai
In the wild north 1223
Night 1223
Dirksen, Richard
3 Songs of Isaiah (excs) 1220
Dohnányi, Ernö
Cello Sonata in B flat minor – Op 8 307
4 Rhapsodies – Op 11 (excs) 1190
String Quartet No 2 in D flat – Op 15 321
String Quartet No 3 in A minor – Op 33 321
Variations on a Nursery Theme – Op 25 .... 320, 1200
Donaudy, Stefano
O del mio amato ben 1245, 1253
Spirate pur 1253
Vaghissima sembianza 1245
Donizetti, Gaetano
Ah, rammenta, o bella Irene 1227
Amore e morte 1227, 1331
Anna Bolena (excs) 1232, 1238, 1239, 1246
(Il) Barcaiolo 1227
(La) Conocchia 1227, 1228, 1331
Don Pasquale (excs) 1233, 1237, 1239, 1244, 1261, 1269
(L')Elisir d'amore (excs) 1224, 1230, 1251, 1256, 1261, 1265
(La) Favorita (excs) 1224, 1233, 1239, 1246, 1253, 1255, 1261
(La) Fille du régiment (excs) 1251, 1266
Linda di Chamounix (excs) 1246, 1266, 1269
Lucia di Lammermoor (excs) .. 1232, 1237, 1238, 1244, 1245, 1251, 1255, 1261, 1266, 1269
Lucrezia Borgia (excs) 727, 1255
Me voglio fa'na casa 1227, 1228, 1256, 1331
Ne ornerà la bruna chioma 1332
String Quartet in D 815
Dowland, John
Almains – P47-54 (excs) 1309, 1310
Can she excuse – P89 1309
Captayne Pipers Galliard – P88 327
(A) Fancy 1309
Fantasies and Other Contrapuntal Pieces (excs) ... 327, 1309
Farre from triumphing court 1263
First Book of Songs or Ayres (excs) ... 418, 1225, 1230, 1301, 1309, 1310, 1315
Frogg galliard – P90 1309

Galliards – P19-46 (excs) ... 327, 1263, 1310
Hasellwoods Galliard – P84 ... 327
In darknesse let mee dwell ... 1263, 1299, 1301, 1310
Jigs, Corantos, Toys, etc – P55-59 (excs) ... 327
Lachrimae, or Seaven Teares (excs) ... 327
Lady Clifton's Spirit ... 1310
Lady if you so spight me ... 1263
Mrs Winter's Jump ... 1309
My dear Adieu, my sweet love farewll ... 1309
Pavana Doulandi Angli ... 327
Pavana lacrima ... 1309
Pavans – P8-18 (excs) ... 1309, 1315
(A) Pilgrimes Solace (excs) ... 328, 1301
Preludium – P98 ... 328
Queen Elizabeth's Galliard ... 1310
Robin ... 1309
Second Booke of Songs or Ayres (excs) ... 328, 1259, 1301, 1309, 1315
Settings of Ballads and Other Popular Tunes (excs) 1315
Shall I strive ... 1301
Sir Henry Guilforde's Almaine ... 1310
Sorrow, come! ... 1310
Squires Galliard ... 327
Suzanna Galliard ... 1309
Tarletones Riserrectione ... 1309
Tarleton's Jigge ... 1309
Third and Last Book of Songs or Aires (excs) 1299, 1315

Dowland, Robert
Almande ... 327
(A) Musicall Banquet, 1610 ... 1263
Sir Thomas Monson, his Galliard ... 327
Sir Thomas Monson, his Pavin ... 327

Draeseke, Felix
Psalm 93 – Op 56 ... 1214

Dubois, Théodore
In paradisum ... 1194

Duda, Jörg
Friede über Israel – Op 25 ... 1214

Dufay, Guillaume
Adieu ces bons vins de Lannoys ... 1292
Ave maris stella ... 1289
Gloria ... 1183
J'ay mis mon cuer ... 1276
Je vous pri/Ma tres douce amie/Tant que mon argent ... 1276
Vexilla Regis prodeunt ... 1293
Victimae paschali laudes ... 1293

Dukas, Paul
(L')Apprenti sorcier ... 330
Piano Sonata in E flat minor ... 331
Villanelle ... 1176

Duke, John
Heart! we will forget him! ... 1249
In the fields ... 1249
Twentieth century ... 1249

Dun, Mai
Symphonic Rhapsody ... 358

Duncan, Trevor
Girl from Corsica ... 1165

Dunhill, Thomas Frederick
(The) Cloths of Heaven – Op 30/3 ... 1231
Three Short Pieces – Op 81 (excs) ... 1177

Dunstable, John
Beata mater ... 1286
Salva scema sanctitatis ... 1292

Duparc, Henri
Au pays où se fait la guerre ... 1226
Chanson triste ... 1259
(L')Invitation au voyage ... 1226, 1269
(Le) Manoir de Rosemonde ... 1226
Phidylé ... 1226, 1269
(La) Vie antérieure ... 1226

Dupré, Marcel
Evocation – Op 37 (excs) ... 1201
(La) France au Calvaire – Op 49 ... 334
Symphony No 2 in C sharp minor – Op 26 ... 1201

Durante, Francesco
8 Concerti per quartetto (excs) ... 1176
Danza, danza, fanciulla ... 1265

Duruflé, Maurice
4 Motets sur des thèmes grégoriens – Op 10 ... 335
Prélude et Fugue sur le nom d'Alain – Op 7 ... 335
Requiem – Op 9 ... 335, 336

Dutilleux, Henri
Ainsi la Nuit... ... 306, 791
Concerto for Violin and Orchestra ... 337
Métaboles ... 151
Sonata for Piano ... 331
Sonatine ... 1182
2 Sonnets de Jean Cassou ... 337
Timbres, espace, mouvement ... 337

Dvořák, Antonín
American Suite in A – B190 ... 347
Cello Concerto in B minor – B191 ... 339, 340, 356, 1161, 1171
7 Gipsy Melodies, 'Zigeunerlieder' – B104 (excs) . 1179, 1235, 1238
(The) Golden Spinning-Wheel – B197 ... 1167
8 Humoresques – B187 (excs) ... 535, 1256
In Folk Tone – B146 ... 352
8 Love Songs – B160 ... 352
Mass in D – B153 ... 352
Mazurek – B90 ... 340
Piano Concerto in G minor – B63 ... 341
Piano Quintet in A – B155 ... 1178
Rusalka – B203 (excs) ... 1236
Silent woods – B182 ... 1161, 1168
16 Slavonic Dances – B78 & B145 (excs) ... 536
16 Slavonic Dances – B83 & B147 (excs) ... 1169
16 Slavonic Dances – B78 & B145 (excs) ... 1189, 1202
4 Songs – B124 ... 352
String Quartet No 12, 'American' in F ... 1178
String Sextet in A – B80 ... 1034
Symphony No 6 in D ... 345
Symphony No 9, 'From the New World' ... 347, 348, 1202
Violin Concerto in A minor ... 340, 341, 539

Dyson, George
3 Rhapsodies ... 507

Eben, Petr
Homage to Dietrich Buxtehude ... 1192
Prague Te Deum ... 352

Eccard, Johannes
When to the temple Mary went ... 1217

Eccles, John
Corinna now you'r young and gay ... 1247

Eckert, Carl
(L') Eco ... 1269

Eden, Robert
What's in the air ... 1256

Eftestøl, Sverre
(7) Allegorical Pictures ... 1195

Elgar, Edward
As torrents in summer ... 1216
3 Bavarian Dances – Op 27 (excs) ... 358
Chanson de nuit – Op 15/1 ... 1150
Cockaigne, 'In London Town' – Op 40 ... 1066
Cello Concerto in E minor ... 340, 355, 356, 1161
Dream of Gerontius ... 365, 1224, 1271
Great is the Lord – Op 67 ... 1220
In Smyrna ... 1197
Introduction and Allegro – Op 47 ... 1066
(The) Light of Life, 'Lux Christi' (excs) ... 1220
My love dwelt in a northern land ... 1212, 1216
O hearken thou – Op 64 ... 1220
Oh, soft was the song – Op 59/3 ... 1069
4 Partsongs – Op 53 (excs) ... 1212
Pleading – Op 48/1 ... 1069
Pomp and Circumstance – Op 39 (excs) ... 1324
(The) River – Op 60/2 ... 1069
Romance – Op 62 ... 1003
Romance for Bassoon and Piano – Op 62 ... 1179
Scenes from the Bavarian Highlands – Op 27 ... 963
Serenade in E minor – Op 20 ... 1066
Soliloquy ... 1177
Sonata for Organ No 1 in G ... 1194
They are at rest ... 1211
(The) Torch – Op 60/1 ... 1069
Twilight – Op 59/6 ... 1069

Variations on an Original Theme, 'Enigma' . . 358, 502, 1216
11 Vesper Voluntaries – Op 14 1194
Violin Concerto in B minor 356, 357, 1169
Violin Sonata in E minor – Op 82 . . . . 341, 363
Was it some Golden Star? – Op 59/5 1069
Emmanuel, Maurice
Chansons bourguignonnes du Pays de Beaune. 267
Encina, Juan del
Antonilla es desposada 1279
Ay triste, que vengo 1222, 1300
Cucú, cucú, cucú 1279, 1289
Hoy comamos y bebamos 1289
Los sospiros no sosiegan 1287
Mas vale trocar. 1289, 1295
Mi libertad en sosiego 1279, 1287
Oy comamos y bebamos 1292
Qu'es de ti, desconsolado? 1295
Si abrá en este baldres!. 1295
Tan buen ganadico 1279
Triste España sin ventura! 1279, 1289
Enescu, George
Impressions d'enfance – Op 28 1181
Enrique,
Mi querer tanto vos quiere 1222, 1287
Eötvös, Peter
Replica. 83
Erkel, Ferenc
Hunyadi László 1255
Erlebach, Philipp
Wer sich dem Himmel übergeben. 1262
Ernst, Heinrich Wilhelm
(Le) Roi des aulnes (after Schubert's Erlkönig) 869
Evans, David
For the beauty of the earth 1220
Evans, Tolchard
Lady of Spain. 1165
Fabricius, Jacob
Gigue belle in C minor 31
Fain, Sammy
Love is a many splendoured thing 1248
Falla, Manuel de
(El) Amor Brujo (excs) 369, 1180
7 Canciones populares españolas 1222, 1223, 1238, 1261, 1332
Homenaje, 'Le tombeau de Claude Debussy' 1188
Noches en los jardines de España 369
(La) Vida breve (excs) 535, 536, 1180, 1181, 1222
Farnon, Robert
Portrait of a Flirt 1165
Farquhar, David
6 Songs of Women 1233
Faure, Jean-Baptiste
Crucifix 1258
Fauré, Gabriel
Ave verum – Op 65/1. 1216
Ballade in F sharp – Op 19. . . . . 370, 371
Berceuse – Op 16. 340
Cantique de Jean Racine – Op 11 . . . . 335, 1216
Cello Sonatas Nos 1 and 2. 372
Elégie – Op 24 . . . . 340, 372, 1161
Fantaisie – Op 79. 1180
5 Mélodies – Op 58 (excs) 1226, 1250
Messe basse 335
13 Nocturnes (excs) 1198
Piano Trio in D minor – Op 120. 306
Pièce 1180
Requiem – Op 48 . . . . 335, 336, 375, 1216
(Le) Réveil 1181
Sicilienne – Op 78 . . . . 1168, 1180
Songs – Opp 1, 4, 18, 23, 46, 83 (excs) 1226
3 Songs – Op 7 (excs). 1168, 1180
3 Songs – Op 7 (excs). 1269
4 Songs – Op 39 (excs) 1226, 1250
Violin Sonatas Nos 1 and 2 373
Feinberg, Samuel
Berceuse – Op 19*a* 1193
Feldman, Morton
Palais de Mari, 'for Francesco Clemente'. 376
Ferguson, Howard
Octet – Op 4 96
Piano Sonata in F minor – Op 8 1195
Ferguson, William
From the Eastern mountains 1220
Ferrabosco, Alfonso I
(De) lamentatione Ieremiae prophetae. 1014
So beautie on the waters stood. 1310
Ferrabosco, Alfonso II
Fantasia No 5. 1310
In Nomine a 6 1303
Like Hermit Poore 1317
Pavan 1303
Pavan and Alman 1313
Pavan No 6 1310
So beauty on the waters stood 1247, 1303, 1317
So breake off this last lamenting kisse 328, 1303
Ferrer, José
Adagio in G minor. 1206
Andantino in G minor 1206
Févin, Antoine de
Faulte d'argent. 522, 1291
Il fait bon aimer l'oyselet 1291
Soubz les branches. 1291
Finzi, Gerald
Cello Concerto in A minor 378
Clarinet Concerto in C minor 379
Eclogue – Op 10 1067
Elegy in F – Op 22 363
Interlude in A minor – Op 21 1177
Let us garlands bring – Op 18 1069
Oh fair to see – Op 13 (excs) 1231
(A) Young Man's Exhortation – Op 14 (excs). 1231
Flotow, Friedrich von
Martha (excs) 1223, 1233, 1235, 1237, 1255, 1261, 1267
Floyd, Carlisle
Susannah (excs) 1236
Fontaine, Pierre
J'ayme bien celui 1285
Pastourelle en un vergier 1276
Fontei, Nicolò
Pianoto d'Erinna 1306
Foote, Arthur
Suite in E – Op 63 (excs) 1163
Ford, Donald
(The) Prayer to Our Lady 1266
Forest, ?John
Tota pulcra es 1292
Forqueray, Antoine
Pièces de viole (excs) 1210
Foss, Lukas
3 American Pieces 79
Foster, Stephen Collins
Camptown Races, 'Gwine to run all night' 1212
Jeanie with the light brown hair. 1178, 1212
Old folks at home. 1178, 1232
Foulds, John
Dynamic Triptych – Op 88 . . . . 1061, 1067
Franceschini, Petronio
Sonata for Two Trumpets, Strings and Continuo in D 1162, 7432
Franchetti, Alberto
Germania (excs) 1233
Franck, César
(Le) Mariage des roses 1250
Panis angelicus. 1172
Prélude, choral et fugue. 1197
Quintet for Piano and Strings in F minor 381
Symphonic Variations 197, 370, 834
Symphony in D minor 375, 381, 824
Violin Sonata in A 307, 373, 382, 1161
Frankel, Benjamin
Quintet for Clarinet and Strings – Op 28 507
Franz, Robert
6 Lieder – Op 10 (excs) 1249
12 Lieder – Op 5 (excs) 1249
Frescobaldi, Girolamo
Arie musicali per cantarsi, primo libro (excs) 1300, 1307
Arie musicali per cantarsi, secondo libro (excs) . . . 1307

Canzona 1307
(Il) Primo libro di Toccate, Partite, Correnti (excs) 1317
Toccata 1307
Toccata in A minor 1317

Frühling, Carl
Trio for Clarinet, Cello and Piano in A minor 209

Furchheim, Johann
Sonata in D major 1176
Sonata in E flat 1176
Sonatella in A major 1176

Furst, Joe
Showpan Boogie 1207

Fux, Johann Joseph
Rondeau a 7 1176

Gabriel, Virginia
Non so yo quien la descubre 1222

Gabrieli, Giovanni
Canzon III a 6 1306
Canzoni et Sonate (excs) 386
Domine Deus meus 386
Intonationi (excs) 385, 386, 1304
Jubilate Deo I 1317
Magnificat 386
Sacrae symphoniae (excs) 385
Symphoniae sacrae (excs) 16, 385
Symphoniae sacrae (1615) (excs) 386
Timor et tremor 386
Toccata prima a 4 386

Gace Brulé,
A la douçor de la bele seson 1290
A la douçour de la bele seson 1284
Cil qui d'amours 1285
De bien amer grant joie atent 1285
Desconfortez, plains de dolor 1285
(Les) oxelés de mon païx 1290
Quant define fueille et flor 1285
Quant flours et glais (When flower and ice) 1296
Quant je voi la noif remise (When I see the white 1296 Quant voi le tens bel et cler (When I see the seas 1296
Quant voi renverdir 1296

Gagliano, Marco Da
Messe à double choeur 1280

Galán, Cristóbal
Al espejo que retrata 1298
Humano ardor 1298

Gall, Jan Karol
(The) enchanted princess 1223
Hidden love 1223
I love men 1223

Gallès, José
Keyboard Sonatas (excs) 1206

Garbarek, Jan
Loiterando 1183
Strophe and Counter–Strophe 1183

Garcìa Lorca, Federico
13 Canciones españolas antiguas 1222

Gardiner, Henry Balfour
Evening Hymn, 'Te lucis ante terminum' 1334

Geminiani, Francesco
12 Concerti Grossi 387
3 Sonatas for 2 Violins and Continuo (excs) 1299
6 Sonatas for Cello and Continuo – Op 5 (excs) 387
12 Sonatas for Violin and Continuo – Op 1 (excs) 1299

German, Edward
Charming Chloë 1266
Orpheus with his lute 1231

Gershwin, George
(An) American in Paris 390
Girl Crazy (excs) 417
Goldwyn Follies (excs) 1212
La La Lucille (excs) 390
Lullaby 1163
Porgy and Bess (excs) 1178, 1236
3 Preludes 1162, 1178
Rhapsody in Blue 6, 79, 390, 1171, 1173
Rialto Ripples 390
Short Story 1178

Gesualdo, Carlo
Asciugate i begli occhi 392
Beltà, poi che t'assenti 392
Canzon francese a 4 1317
Canzone del Principe 392
Gagliarda 1316
Gioite voi col canto 392
Languisce al fin chi de la vita 392
Mercè grido piangendo 392
Moro, lasso, al mio duolo 392, 1308
Responsoria et alia ad Officum Hebdonadae Sanctae (excs) 16
Se la mia morte brami 392
Se vi duol il mio duolo 392
S'io non miro non moro 392
Tall' or sano desio 1308
Tu m'ucchidi, o crudele 392

Giamberti, Giuseppe
Similabo eum viro sapienti 1300

Gibbons, Orlando
Drop, drop slow tears 1212, 1215, 1220
15 Fantasias a 3 'for the great double bass' (excs) 1303
4 Fantasias a 6 (excs) 1303
This is the record of John 1217

Gigout, Eugène
10 Pièces (excs) 1191

Ginastera, Alberto
5 Canciones populares argentinas – Op 10 (excs) 1265
Harp Concerto – Op 25 402

Giordani, Tommaso
Caro mio ben 1227, 1228, 1237

Giordano, Umberto
Andrea Chénier (excs) 1232, 1233, 1250, 1253, 1254, 1258, 1265, 1268
Canzone guerresca 1253
Fedora 396, 1239, 1250
Madame Sans-Gêne (excs) 1253, 1254

Giovane da Mola, Giovanni Domenico del
Cingari siamo venit'a giocare 1288
O Dio se vede chiaro 1288

Giuliani, Mauro
Guitar Concerto No 1 in A – Op 30 397

Glazunov, Alexander
Chant du ménéstrel – Op 71 1168, 1171
Mazurka-Oberek in D 1171
Meditation – Op 32 1171
(The) Seasons – Op 67 401, 1193
Spanish Serenade – Op 20/2 535
Symphony No 6 in C minor 1169
Violin Concerto 341, 400, 741, 742, 939, 1162

Glière, Reinhold
Concerto for Coloratura Soprano and Orchestra 402, 1266
Harp Concerto – Op 74 402

Glinka, Mikhail
Doubt 1223
Elegy, 'When my soul' 1223
(The) Fire of longing burns in my heart 1223
(A) Life for the Tsar, 'Ivan Susanin' (excs) 1223
(The) Night Review 1223
Ruslan and Lyudmila (excs) 1223

Gluck, Christoph Willibald
Alceste (excs) 404, 1256, 1271
Einem Bach der fliesst 1225
Iphigénie en Aulide 1234
Iphigénie en Tauride (excs) 1221, 1241
Orfeo ed Euridice (excs) 404, 1179, 1224, 1234, 1246, 1253, 1262
Orphée et Eurydice (excs) 1232, 1241, 1271
Paride ed Elena (excs) 404, 1241, 1245, 1254
(La) Rencontre imprévue 1255
Se parentro alla nera foresta 1234
Telemaco, or L'isola di Circe (excs) 1262

Godowsky, Leopold
Moment Musical No 3 in F minor 1197
Toccata in G flat – Op 13 1193
Triakontameron (excs) 1193, 1197
Waltz in D flat 1207

Goldmark, Károly
Violin Concerto No 1 in A minor 239

Gombert, Nicolas
Chansons 1296
(La) chasse au lievre 1281

Dezilde al caballero . . . 1288
Ego sum qui sum . . . 811
Jouissance vous donnerai . . . 1311
Mille regretz. . . . 643, 1294
Missa a la Incoronation, 'Sur tous regrets' (excs) . . 1294
Mon seul . . . 1304
Qui colis Ausoniam . . . 1294

Gomes, Carlos
(Il) Guarany (excs) . . . 1255
Salvator Rosa (excs) . . . 1254

Goossens, Eugene
Concertino – Op 47. . . . 220
Phantasy Sextet – Op 37 . . . 220

Górecki, Henryk
Amen – Op 34 . . . 411
3 Pieces in Old Style . . . 1009
Totus tuus – Op 60 . . . 411, 1216, 1219

Goss, John
Praise my soul, the King of Heaven. . . . 1215
These are they which follow the Lamb . . . 1211

Gottschalk, Louis Moreau
Grande fantaisie triumphal sur l'hymne national – RO108 (Op 69) . . . 6, 1162

Gounod, Charles
(L')Arithmétique . . . 413
Au printemps . . . 413, 1258
Ave Maria. . . . 1251, 1264
(Le) Banc de Pierre . . . 413
Barcarola . . . 1232
Donne-moi cette fleur . . . 413
D'un coeur qui t'aime . . . 413
Faust (excs). . . . 1223, 1224, 1232, 1233, 1235, 1239, 1251, 1253, 1259, 1267, 1269, 1271, 1325
Fleur de bois . . . 413
Marche funèbre d'une marionette . . . 1166
6 Mélodies (excs) . . . 413
Mignon . . . 413
Mireille (excs) . . . 1221, 1223, 1232
Où voulez-vous aller? . . . 1223
Par une belle nuit. . . . 413
Philémon et Baucis (excs). . . . 1232
(La) Reine de Saba . . . 1224, 1233
Roméo et Juliette (excs) . . . 1223, 1232, 1235, 1237, 1259, 1267, 1269
Sérénade. . . . 413, 1223, 1232
(La) Siesta . . . 413
(Le) Soir. . . . 1255
(Les) Vacances . . . 413
Vierge d'Athénes . . . 1249

Gowers, Patrick
(An) Occasional Trumpet Voluntary . . . 1195

Grainger, Percy
Beautiful fresh flower. . . . 418
Bold William Taylor . . . 1231
Brigg Fair. . . . 1212, 1231
Colonial Song – S1 . . . 417
Country gardens . . . 415, 417
Crew of the Long Dragon . . . 417
Fantasy on George Gershwin's 'Porgy and Bess' . . . 417
Free Settings of Favourite Melodies (excs). . . . 417, 418
3 Gershwin Transcriptions (excs). . . . 418
Handel in the Strand . . . 417
Harvest Hymn . . . 417
(The) Hunter in his career. . . . 417
In a Nutshell . . . 415
In a Nutshell Suite (excs) . . . 417
In Dahomey. . . . 417
Irish Tune from County Derry . . . 417
Jutish Medley on Danish folksongs 8. . . . 417
Lincolnshire Posy . . . 415
Lullaby. . . . 418
(The) Merry King8 . . . 417
Mock Morris . . . 417
Molly on the shore. . . . 417
Paraphrase on the Waltz of the Flowers . . . 418
Rondo . . . 417
Scotch Strathspey and Reel . . . 417
Shepherd's Hey . . . 417
Spoon River. . . . 417
Tiger-Tiger . . . 417
Train Music. . . . 415
Tribute to Foster . . . 1324
Walking Tune . . . 417
(The) Warriors . . . 415
Ye banks and braes o' Bonnie Doon . . . 417

Granados, Enrique
Allegro de concierto. . . . 419
7 Canciones amatorias (excs) . . . 1222
Cuentos de la juventud – Op 1 (excs). . . . 10, 1188
Danza lenta . . . 419
12 Danzas españolas (excs) . . . 10, 419, 536, 1188, 1202
Goyescas . . . 10, 419
15)Tonadillas al estilo antiguo (excs). . . 10, 1188, 1222, 1223
Valses poéticos . . . 9, 10, 419, 1188

Grandi, Alessandro
18 Motets (excs). . . . 1304
O quam tu pulchra es. . . . 1304

Grandval, Nicholas Racot de
Rien du tout. . . . 1314

Grant, David
Psalm 23, 'The Lord's my Shepherd'. . . . 1216

Grechaninov, Alexandr
Dobrinya Nikitich – Op 22 . . . 1223
I wish I were with you . . . 1223
Lullaby – Op 1/5 . . . 1223
My native land . . . 1249
(The) Seven Days of the Passion – Op 58 (excs) . . 1213
She was yours. . . . 1223

Greene, Maurice
Magnificat and Nunc Dimittis in C. . . . 1214
O God of my righteousness . . . 1224
Orpheus with his lute. . . . 1247
Praise the Lord, O my soul . . . 1224

Grieg, Edvard
Holberg Suite – Op 40 . . . 422
Lyric Pieces, Book 3 – Op 43 (excs) . . 1179, 1186, 1200
Lyric Pieces, Book 8 – Op 65 (excs). . . . 1186
Lyric Pieces, Book 10 – Op 71 (excs). . . . 1179
Melodies of the Heart – Op 5 (excs) . 1231, 1258, 1260, 1265
Norway – Op 58 (excs) . . . 1265
17 Norwegian peasant dances – Op 72 (excs). 417, 1185
Peer Gynt – Opp 46 & 55 . . . 422
Peer Gynt (excs) . . 1230, 1231, 1237, 1238, 1258, 1269
Piano Concerto in A minor . . . 421, 422, 1186
(The) Princess . . . 1231
5 Songs – Op 26 (excs). . . . 1224
6 Songs – Opp 25, 39, 48 (excs). . . . 1231
6 Songs – Op 25 . . . 1248
6 Songs – Op 49 (excs). . . . 1260
9 Songs – Op 18 (excs). . . . 1260
12 Songs – Op 33 (excs) . . . 1231, 1260
4 Songs and Ballads – Op 9 (excs) . . . 1260
String Quartets Nos 1 and 2 . . . 423

Griffes, Charles
Auf geheimen Waldespfade . . . 1258
(The) White Peacock. . . . 1163

Grofé, Ferde
Grand Canyon Suite . . . 390

Gruber, Ludwig
Mei Muaterl war a Weanerin. . . . 1248

Gruenberg, Louis
Jazz Masks – Op 30a . . . 1207

Guami, Gioseffo
Canzon sopra la Battaglia. . . . 1306
Offertoire. . . . 1280

Guerrero, Francisco
Ave Maria . . . 644
Ave virgo sanctissima . . . 1289
Beatus es et bene tibi . . . 1304
Canción, 'Subiendo amor' . . . 643
Canción, 'Todos aman' . . . 643
Canción (untitled) . . . 643
Dexó la venda, el arco . . . 1222
Dulcissima Maria . . . 644
Huyd, huyd . . . 1279
Lauda, Jerusalem . . . 1304
Maria Magdalene. . . . 566
Niño Dios, d'amor herido . . . 1279

O Doctor optime 643
Pange lingua 1304
Prado verde y florido 1279
Si tus penas no pruevo 1279
Todo quanto pudo dar 1279
Guerrero, Jacinto
(El) Huésped del Sevillano (excs) 1248
Guest, Douglas
For the Fallen 1220
Guilmant, Alexandre
Marche funèbre et chant séraphique – Op 17/3 1192
Sonata No 7 in F – Op 89 (excs) 1194
Guridi, Jes´s
6 Canciones castellanas (excs) 1222, 1223, 1332
(El) CaserÌo (excs) 1248
La meiga (excs) 1248
Triptico del Buen Pastor 1192
Gurney, Ivor
(The) Fields are full 1226
I will go with my father a-ploughing 1231
Sleep 1231
Gwynn Williams, W. S.
My little Welsh home 1268, 1335
Hahn, Reynaldo
Brummell (excs) 1240
Chansons grises (excs) 1240
Ciboulette (excs) 1240
Dernier voeu 1232
D'une prison 1249
(L') Heure exquise 1232
Mozart (excs) 1240
O mon bel inconnu! (excs) 1240
Si mes vers avaient des ailes 1259
Hakim, Naji
Sonata for Trumpet and Organ 1181
Vexilla Regis prodeunt 1201
Halévy, Fromental
(La) Juive (excs) 1221, 1223
Halffter, Cristóbal
Panxoliña 1222
Halffter, Ernesto
Dos Canciones 1222
Halvorsen, Johan
Passacaglia 1180
Hancock, Gerre
Earthquake, Wind and Fire 1220
Handel, George Frideric
Acis and Galatea – HWV49b (excs) 1259, 1266, 1271
Alcina – HWV34 (excs) 1224, 1266
Alessandro – HWV21 (excs) 1224
(L')Allegro, il penseroso ed il moderato (excs) 1244
Atalanta – HWV35 (excs) 1240
Chaconne in G – HWV435 436
Concerto for Harp and Strings – Op 4 No 6 1316
3 Concertos for Oboe and Strings (excs) 1161
Coronation Anthems – HWV258-61 (excs) 1217
German Arias – HWV202-10 (excs) 440
Giulio Cesare – HWV17 (excs) 1229, 1245, 1262
(The) Great Elopement (excs) 1167
Hercules – HWV60 (excs) 1229
Joshua – HWV64 (excs) 1223, 1246
Judas Maccabaeus – HWV63 (excs) 1222, 1271
3 Lessons (excs) 129
Love in Bath 1321
Messiah – HWV56 (excs) 1259, 1266, 1271
Ode for St Cecilia's Day – HWV76 (excs) 1193
Ottone, re di Germania – HWV15 (excs) 1224
Partenope – HWV27 1234
(Il) Pastor Fido – HWV8 (excs) 1193
Rinaldo – HWV7a (excs) 1245, 1246, 1254, 1333
Rodelinda – HWV19 (excs) 1262
Samson – HWV57 (excs) 1266, 1267
Saul – HWV53 (excs) 1262
Semele – HWV58 (excs) 1229, 1262, 1266
Serse – HWV40 (excs) 1229, 1258, 1262
Solomon – HWV67 (excs) 1259, 1316
Sosarme, Re di Media – HWV30 (excs) 1258
8 Suites for Keyboard, Set I 129, 436
7 Suites for Keyboard, Set II (excs) 437
Te Deum and Jubilate, 'Utrecht' – HWV278–79 .. 179
Theodora – HWV68 (excs) 1240
Thine be the glory, risen, conquering Son 1215
Tolomeo, re di Egitto – HWV25 (excs) 1234
(Il) Trionfo del Tempo e del Disinganno (excs) .. 1228, 1331
Water Music (excs) 418
Handl, Jacob
Ecce concipes 1217
Omnes de Saba venient 1217
Hanforth, Thomas William
Psalm 145 1218
Hanson, Howard
Symphony No 2, 'Romantic' – Op 30 297
Harbison, John H.
6 Mirabai Songs 81
Harris, Cuthbert
Caprice 1189
Harris, Roy
Symphony No 3 1170
Harris, William
Bring us, O Lord God 1211, 1213, 1334
Faire is the Heaven 1213, 1334
O what their joy and their glory must be 1215
Hartmann, Johan
Little Christine, 'Liden Kirsten' – Op 44 (excs) 1260
Tell me, star of night – Op 63 1260
Hartmann, Karl Amadeus
Symphony No 6 460
Hasse, Johann
Artaserse (excs) 1262
Hasse, Nicolaus
Suite in D minor 1175
Haydn, Joseph
Arianna a Naxos – HobXXVIb/2 .... 1225, 1228
(The) birks of Abergeldie 1225
(The) brisk young lad 1225
Cello Concerto No 1 in C – HobVIIb/1 1161
Cello Concerto No 2 in D – HobVIIb/2 (excs) 1161
Content – HobXXVIa/36 1243
(The) Creation – HobXXI/2 (excs) 1266, 1271
Cumbernauld House 1225
Du zu späte Ankunft der Mutter 1243
Duncan Gray 1225
(La) Fedeltà premiata – HobXXVIII/10 (excs) 404
Fidelity – HobXXVIa/30 1243
(The) Flower of Edinburgh 1225
Gegenlied – HobXXVIa/16 1243
Green grow the rashes 1225
I'm o'er young to marry yet – HobXXXIa/30 1225
Jamie come try me 1225
John Anderson 1225
12 Lieder für das Clavier, Books 1 and II (excs) 1225
Lob der Faulheit – HobXXVIa/22 1243
Love will find out the way 1225
(Il) Mondo della luna – HobXXVIII/7 (excs) 404
My ain kind-dearie 1225
My boy Tammy 1225
O bonny lass 1225
O can ye sew cushions – HobXXXIa/48 1225
O tuneful voice – HobXXVIa/42 1243
6 Original Canzonettas, Book 2 – HobXXVIa/31-36 (excs) 1225
Orlando Paladino – HobXXVIII/11 (excs) 404
Piano Concerto in D – HobXVIII/11 .... 1186, 1189
Piano Sonata No 37 in E – HobXVI/22 777
Piano Sonata No 45 in A – HobXVI/30 480
Piano Sonata No 47 in B minor – HobXVI/32 1186
Piano Sonata No 59 in E flat – HobXVI/49. 1196, 1326
Piano Sonata No 60 in C – HobXVI/50 1205
Piano Sonata No 62 in E flat – HobXVI/52 . 480, 1195
Piercing Eyes – HobXXVIa/35 1243
Sailor's Song – HobXXVIa/31 1243
(Die) Schöpfung – HobXXI/2 (excs) 1259
Seven Last Words – Op 51/HobIII/50–56 477
She never told her love – HobXXVIa/34 1243
Shepherds, I have lost my love 1225
Sleepy Bodie – HobXXXIa/31 1225
Sonata (un piccolo divertimento: Variations) in F minor – HobXVII/6 1190
(The) Spirit's Song – HobXXVIa/41 1243

- String Quartet in D – Op 42:HobIII/43 . . . 473
- 6 String Quartets – Opp 33 and 50 (excs) . . . 471
- 3 String Quartets, 'Apponyi I and II' – Opp 71 and 74 (excs) . . . 471
- 6 String Quartets (Divertimentos) – Opp 1 and 20 (excs) . . . 471
- 2 String Quartets, 'Lobkowitz' – Op 77 (excs) . . . 471
- 3 String Quartets, 'Tost II' – Opp 55 and 64 (excs). 471
- Sympathy – HobXXVIa/33 . . . 1243
- Symphony No 40 in F . . . 1167
- Symphony No 83, 'La poule' in G minor . . . 1166
- Symphony No 94, 'Surprise' in G (excs) . . . 1193
- Symphony No 102 in B flat . . . 1167, 1321
- Trost unglücklicher Liebe – HobXXVIa/9 . . . 1243
- Up in the morning early – HobXXXIa/28 . . . 1225
- (The) White Cockade – HobXXXIa/22 . . . 1225

Heggie, Jake
- Barb'ry Allen . . . 1249
- He's gone away . . . 1249
- (The) Leather-winged bat . . . 1249
- To say before going to sleep . . . 1249
- White in the moon . . . 1249

Hellmesberger, Joseph II
- Danse diabolique . . . 969, 1174, 1324

Heming, Michael
- Threnody for a Soldier killed in Action . . . 826

Henschel, George
- Shepherd's Lament . . . 1177

Henze, Hans Werner
- Piano Quintet . . . 490

Herbert, Victor August
- Cello Concerto No 2 in E minor – Op 30 . . . 339
- Naughty Marietta (excs) . . . 1245, 1251
- Orange Blossoms (excs) . . . 1254

Hérold, Ferdinand
- (Le) Pré aux Clercs (excs) . . . 1232
- Zampa (excs) . . . 1166

Herrmann, Bernard
- Hangover Square (excs) . . . 6
- Wuthering Heights (excs) . . . 1236

Hesse, Adolf Friedrich
- Variations on an original theme – Op 34 . . . 1193

Hessenberg, Kurt
- O Herr, mache mich zum Werkzeug deines Friedens – Op37 No 1 . . . 1214

Heuberger, Richard
- (Der) Opernball (excs) . . . 535, 1175, 1237, 1251

Heymann, Werner Richard
- Kennst du das kleine Haus am Michigansee . . . 1267

Hildach, Eugen
- (Der) Lenz . . . 1251
- (Der) Spielmann – Op 15/1 . . . 1258

Hildegard of Bingen, Abbess
- O choruscans stellarum . . . 1213
- O felix anima . . . 1213
- O ignis Spiritus Paracliti . . . 1183

Hill, Jackson
- Voices of Autumn . . . 1212

Hindemith, Paul
- Clarinet Concerto . . . 21
- Horn Concerto . . . 975
- Horn Sonata . . . 1182
- Konzertmusik – Op 50 . . . 975
- Rag Time (well-tempered) . . . 1173
- 3 Sonatas for Organ (excs) . . . 1209
- String Quartet No 4 – Op 22 . . . 494, 892
- Violin Sonata in E flat – Op 11/1 . . . 1162

Hoffstetter, Roman
- 6 String Quartets – Op 3 (excs) . . . 471

Hofmann, Josef
- Kaleidoskop – Op 40 . . . 1193
- Nocturne, 'Complaint' . . . 1193

Hoiby, Lee
- (The) Lamb . . . 1241
- (A) Letter . . . 1249
- (The) Lord is King . . . 1220
- Winter Song . . . 1249

Holborne, Antony
- Galliard, 'The Fairie-round' . . . 1288
- Heres paternus . . . 1288
- (A) Horn pype . . . 1288
- Muy linda . . . 1305
- Pavan No 2 . . . 1310
- Responce . . . 1288

Holbrooke, Joseph
- (The) Children of Don – Op 56 (excs) . . . 1271
- Dylan – Op 53 (excs) . . . 1271
- Eilen Shona . . . 507
- Piano Concerto No 1, 'The Song – Op 52 . . . 497
- Quintet for Clarinet and Strings No 1 in G . . . 209

Hollins, Alfred
- Concert Overture No 3 in F minor . . . 1193
- (A) Trumpet Minuet . . . 1194

Holloway, Robin
- Fantasy-Pieces on the Heine 'Liederkreis' . . . 498
- Serenade in C – Op 41 . . . 498

Holst, Gustav
- Brook Green Suite – H190 . . . 502
- Egdon Heath – H172 . . . 219, 502
- (The) Evening watch – H159 . . . 1213
- (A) Fugal Concerto – H152) . . . 219
- Lyric Movement – H191 . . . 502, 8573
- Nunc dimittis – H127 . . . 1213, 1217
- The Planets – H125 . . . 231, 415, 502, 8573
- (A) Somerset Rhapsody – H87 . . . 502
- 12 Welsh Folk Songs – H183 (excs) . . . 1212

Honegger, Arthur
- (Les) aventures du roi Pausole (excs) . . . 1240
- Symphony No 2 in D . . . 505
- Symphony No 3, 'Liturgique' . . . 505

Horowitz, Vladimir
- Variations on a theme from Bizet's 'Carmen' . . . 1209

Hotteterre, Jacques
- Airs et Brunettes (excs) . . . 1308

Hough, Stephen
- Etude de Concert . . . 1197
- Musical Jewellery Box . . . 1197
- (2) Valses énigmatiques . . . 1197

Hovhaness, Alan
- (4) Bagatelles – Op 30 . . . 506
- String Quartet No 1, 'Jupiter' – Op 8 . . . 506
- String Quartet No 2 – Op 147 (excs) . . . 506
  - String Quartet No 3, 'Reflections on my Childhood – Op 208/1 . . . 506
- String Quartet No 4, 'The Ancient Tree' – Op 208/2. . 506
- Symphony No 2, 'Mysterious mountain' – Op 132 1163

Høvland, Egil
- Toccata – Now thank we all our God . . . 1193

Howells, Herbert
- All my hope on God is founded . . . 1215
- Evening Service in E . . . 1219
- Evening Service in B minor . . . 1219
- Here is the little door . . . 1217
- Like as the hart . . . 1334
- Nunc dimittis . . . 1211
- Prelude . . . 828
- Requiem . . . 508, 1068
- Rhapsodic Quintet – Op 31 . . . 507
- 3 Rhapsodies – Op 17 (excs) . . . 1191
- Siciliano for a High Ceremony . . . 1194
- String Quartet, 'In Gloucestershire' . . . 507
- Take him, earth, for cherishing . . . 508, 1068

Hughes, Herbert
- (The) Bard of Armagh . . . 1177
- Down by the Salley Gardens . . . 831
- She moved through the fair . . . 831
- (The) Stuttering Lovers . . . 1265

Hughes, John
- Guide me, O Thou Great Jehovah . . . 1268
- I do not seek a life of luxury (Calon lán) . . . 1268

Hume, Tobias
- Captaine Humes Musicall Humors (excs) . . . 1313
- Captaine Humes Poeticall Musicke (excs) . . 1305, 1317
- (The) First Part of Ayres, French, Pollish and others (excs) . . . 1317

Humperdinck, Engelbert
- Hänsel und Gretel (excs) . . . 1193, 1240

Hundley, Richard
- (The) Astronomers . . . 1249

Hurford, Peter
Psalm 108 ... 1218
Hüttenbrenner, Anselm
Der Hügel ... 882
Frühlingsliedchen ... 882
Lerchenlied ... 882
(Die) Seefahrt ... 882
Seegras ... 882
Spinnerlied ... 882
(Die) Sterne ... 882
Ibert, Jacques
Aria ... 1182
Divertissement ... 633
Escales ... 836
Jeux ... 1182
3 Pièces ... 1192
Indy, Vincent d'
Symphonie sur un chant montagnard français ... 370
Infante, Manuel
3 Danses Andalouses ... 1180
Ippolitov-Ivanov, Mikhail
In the long grey twilight ... 1223
Ireland, John
(The) Bells of San Marie ... 1069
Fantasy–Sonata in E flat ... 1182
(The) Forgotten Rite ... 358
Greater love hath no man ... 1334
Mai-Dun ... 358
My song is love unknown ... 1215
Sea Fever ... 1069, 1242
Songs Sacred and Profane (excs) ... 1226
These Things Shall Be ... 358
(The) Vagabond ... 1069
Isaac, Heinrich
Agnus Dei (excs) ... 522
Donna di dentro dalla tua casa ... 1281
Donna di dentro/Dammene un pocho/Fortuna d'un gran tempo ... 1292
Fortuna disperata ... 1309
(Der) Hundt ... 1309
Ich stünd an einem Morgen ... 1309
J'ay pris amours ... 1283
La morra ... 1283
Maudit soyt ... 1277
Missa 'La bassadanza' ... 1281
Missa paschalis ... 1293
Tartara ... 1283
Virgo prudentissima ... 1305
Ivanov, Mikhail
Zabava Putyatishna ... 1223
Ives, Grayston
Gracious Spirit, Holy Ghost ... 1220
Ives, Charles
General William Booth Enters into Heaven ... 1241
Memories ... 1249
My native land ... 1249
Orchestral Set No 1, 'Three Places in New England' ... 1163
(A) Set of Three Short Pieces (excs) ... 515
Slugging a vampire ... 1241
String Quartet No 1, 'From the Salvation Army' ... 515
String Quartet No 2 ... 515
They are there! ... 1177
(The) Things our fathers loved ... 1249
Two little flowers ... 1241
Variations on 'America' ... 893
Jacobs, William
Psalm 112 ... 1218
Jacquet de Mantua
Aspice Domine ... 636
James, James
Land of my fathers, 'Hen Wlad fy Nhadau' ... 1268
Janáček, Leos
(The) Cunning Little Vixen ... 517
From a Fairy Tale ... 518
Glagolitic Mass ... 519
Intimate Sketches (excs) ... 1185
Jenufa (excs) ... 1251
Mass in E flat ... 531
Moravian folk poetry in songs (excs) ... 352
Our Father ... 352
Sinfonietta ... 86, 345
Sonata 1.X.1905 in E flat minor ... 1186
String Quartet No 1, 'The Kreutzer Sonata' ... 1178
Taras Bulba ... 517
Janequin, Clément
(Le) Chant des oyseaux ... 1296
Or vien ça, vien, m'amye ... 1296
Jansen, Pierre
Processional ... 1181
Jenkins, John
Suite in A minor ... 1317
Jensen, Adolf
Lehn deine Wang' an meine Wang' ... 1249
Murmelndes Lüftchen – Op 21/4 ... 1258
Jimenez, Joseph
Corazón, corazón ... 1248
John IV, King of Portugal
Crux fidelis ... 16
Johnson, John
Johnson's grounde ... 1310
Passamezzo Pavan ... 1310
Johnson, Robert II
Air in G minor ... 1313
Fantasia ... 1299
Fantasia in G minor for three trebles ... 1313
Full fathom five ... 1299, 1301
Gypies Metamorphosed (excs) ... 1305
Have you seen the bright lily grow? ... 1240
(The) Prince's Alman and Coranto ... 1313
(The) Temporiser a 4 ... 1313
Where the bee sucks ... 1299, 1301
(The) Witty Wanton ... 1313
Jolivet, Andre
Arioso barocco ... 1181
Chant de Linos ... 1182
Jones, Mai
We'll Keep A Welcome ... 1268
Jongen, Joseph
Sonata heroïca – Op 94 ... 1209
Joplin, Scott
(The) Easy winners ... 1178
(The) Ragtime dance ... 1178
José de Torres,
Al clamor ... 1298
Más no puede ser ... 1298
Joseffy, Rafael
2 Concert Studies after Chopin ... 1207
Josquin Desprez,
Adieu mes amours ... 522, 1281, 1283, 1288, 1311
Allégez moy, doulce plaisant brunette ... 1281
Ave Maria ... 1288
Baisez moy, ma doulce amye ... 1283
Benedicta es, caelorum regina ... 1281, 1288
Bergerette savoyenne ... 522
(La) Bernardina ... 1283
Christe Fili Dei/J'ay pris amours ... 1288
Comment peult haver joye ... 522
Credo, 'De tous biens playne' ... 1281
De profundis clamavi a 5 ... 1281
De tous biens playne (excs) ... 522, 1283
Dido (excs) ... 522
Et in terra pax ... 1311
Faulte d'argent ... 522, 1296
Fortuna d'un gran tempo ... 1309
(El) grillo è buon cantore ... 522, 1281
Guillaume se va chauffeur ... 1281
Illibata Dei Virgo nutrix ... 701
Inviolata, integra et casta es, Maria ... 1281
Je me complains ... 522
Memor esto verbi tui ... 702
Mille regretz ... 522, 1296
Nunc dimittis ... 1213
Nymphes des bois/Requiem ... 701
Pauper sum ego (à 3) ... 522
Petite camusette ... 522
Plaine de dueil ... 522, 1277
Proch dolor ... 1277
Qui tollis peccata mundi ... 1311
Quis Seperabit ... 1309

Scaramella va alla guerra 1281
Se congié prens (excs) 522
Se j'ay perdu mon amy.................... 522
Si j'avoys Marion 522
Victimae paschali laudes.................... 1293
(Le) villain 522
Joubert, John
(The) Turning Wheel – Op 95 1233
Joyce, Archibald
Songe d'Automne.................... 1165
Kabalevsky, Dmitry Borisovich
Cello Concerto No 2 in G.................... 355, 524, 1172
Piano Sonata No 2 in E flat – Op 45 1196
24 Preludes – Op 38 (excs).................... 1196
Kálmán, Imre
(Die) Csárdásfürstin (excs) 1242
Gräfin Mariza (excs).................... 1242
Was weiss ein nie geküsster Rosenmund 1197
Kapustin, Nikolai
Toccatina.................... 1193
Karg-Elert, Sigfrid
3 Pastels – Op 92 (excs) 1191
Kern, Jerome
Music in the Air (excs) 1251
Zip Goes a Millon (excs) 390
Ketèlbey, Albert
In a Persian Market 1165
Khachaturian, Aram Il'yich
Cello Concerto 524
Gayaneh (excs).................... 528
(The) Valencian Widow 528
Khachaturian, Karen
Violin Sonata – Op 1 746
Kienzl, Wilhelm
(Der) Evangelimann – Op 45 (excs) 1267
(Der) Kuhreigen – Op 85.................... 1267
Kilpinen, Yryö
Songs of the fells – Opp. 52–54 (excs) 1265
Kim, Lyun Joon
Elegy 1168
I shall live in the Blue Mountains 1245
Kirchoff, Andreas
Sonata in B flat major 1175
Koch, Sigurd von
Exotic Songs (excs).................... 1255
(The) Wild Swans (excs) 1255
Kodály, Zoltán
Cello Sonata – Op 4 518
Duo – Op 7 1180
Háry János – Op 15 1172
Intermezzo.................... 321
Laudes organi 531
Missa Brevis.................... 531
Psalmus Hungaricus – Op 13.................... 519
Koechlin, Charles
Si tu le veux – Op 5/5 1259
Sonata for Horn and Piano – Op 70 1182
Korngold, Erich Wolfgang
Abschiedslieder – Op 14 (excs).................... 144
Caprice fantastique 1179
6 Einfache Lieder – Op 9 (excs).................... 144
3 Lieder – Op 18 144
5 Lieder – Op 38 (excs) 144
Much Ado About Nothing (excs) 78, 532
Sonett für Wien – Op 41 144
(Die) Tote Stadt – Op 12 (excs) 1235, 1267
Violin Concerto – Op 35 .... 78, 532
Krebs, Johann Ludwig
O König, dessen Majestät 1193
Krein, Michael
Serenade for Oboe and Two Harps 1177
Kreisler, Fritz
Aucassin and Nicolette, 'Canzonetta medievale' 536
Berceuse romantique – Op 9 536
Caprice viennois – Op 2 .... 535, 536, 1183, 1202
Chanson Louis XIII and Pavane 535
(La) Gitana 535, 536, 1150
Liebesfreud.................... 535, 536, 774, 1244
Liebesleid 535, 536, 774, 775
Londonderry Air 1169
(The) Old Refrain 1171, 1256
Polichinelle 535, 536
Praeludium and Allegro in the style of Pugnani... 1169
Précieuse in the style of Couperin.................... 535
Recitative and scherzo–caprice – Op 6 ..... 1207, 1210
Rondino on a Theme by Beethoven 535
Scherzo in the style of Dittersdorf.................... 535
Schön Rosmarin 535, 1171, 1183
Slavonic Fantasie 536
Tambourin chinois – Op 3 .... 535, 536, 1183
Viennese Rhapsodic Fantasietta.................... 536
Zigeuner capriccio 536
Kuhnau, Johann
Magnificat in C 67, 68
Kurtág, György
(Les) Adieux in Janáceks Manier 1185
Egy igaz ember emlékére.................... 1185
Hommage à Csajkovszkij 1185
Hommage à Nancy Sinatra 1185
Keringó 1185
Ligatura – Op 31b 88
(The) Mad Girl with the Flaxen Hair 1185
Movement for Viola and Orchestra.................... 83
Preludium e Korál 1185
Tears 1185
Kvandal, Johann
3 Sacred Folktunes – Op 23b.................... 696
Wind Quintet – Op 34 696
La Rue, Pierre de
Autant en Emporte le Vent 1277
Ave sanctissima Maria 1281
Fors seulement.................... 702
Jam sauche 1277
Mijn hert altyt heeft verlanghen.................... 1277
Missa 'Ave sanctissima Maria' 1281
Missa cum iucunditate 1288
O salutaris hostia 1289
Soubz ce tumbel.................... 1277
Lalo, Edouard
Aubade.................... 413
Concerto for Cello and Orchestra in D minor 538
Dansons! 413
Puisqu, ici bas 413
(Le) Roi d'Ys (excs) 1221
Symphonie espagnole – Op 21.................... 539
Lambert, Constant
Horoscope (excs) 176
Salome.................... 1138
Lambert, Michel
60 Airs de cour (excs).................... 1303
Landi, Stefano
(La) Morte d'Orfeo (excs) 1271
Landini, Francesco
(La) bionda treçça 1291
Dolcie signiore.................... 1291
(El) gran disio 1291
Lange-Müller, Peter
Once upon a time, 'Der var engang' (excs)....... 1260
Langford, Alan
4 Pieces 1165
Two Worlds 1165
Langlais, Jean
Festival Alleluia 334
3 Paraphrases grégoriennes – Op 5 1195
Langley, James
(The) Coloured Counties.................... 1165
Lanner, Joseph)
Marien – Op 143 971
(Die) Schönbrunner – Op 200 1175
Steyrische-Tänze – Op 165 971
Tourbillon-Galopp – Op 142/1.................... 1175
(Die) Werber – Op 103 971
Lassen, Edward
Es war ein Traum 1258
Lassus, Orlande de
Beau le cristal.................... 1296
Bonjour mon coeur 1296
(La) Cortesia voi donne predicate 1280
Four Language Printing (excs).................... 1296
Heroum soboles.................... 1294

Madonna mia pietà 1280
Magnificat quarto toni 1219
(La) Nuit froide et sombre 1296
Si qua tibi obtulerint 1294
Tu sai, madonna mia, ch'io t'amo e voglio 1280
Lauridsen, Morten
O Magnum Mysterium 1219
Lawes, Henry
Ayres and Dialogues (excs) 1247
Orpheus's Hymn 1247
Lawes, William
4 Airs for consort 1313
Alman in D 'for the Violins of Two Trebles' 1313
Consort Sett a 5 in A minor 1303
8 Fantasia–Suites (excs) 1184
Fantazia and Serabrand 1303
Gather ye rosebuds while you may 1299
He that will not love (Not to love) 1299
Pavin and Almain 1303
To the sycamore, 'I'm sick of love' 1299
Why soe pall and wan, fond lover 1299
Le Roy, Adrian
Alemande du pied de cheval 1281
Bransle de Champaigne 1281
Bransles de Poictou 1281
Tordion 522
Leclair, Jean-Marie
12 Violin Sonatas, Second livre (excs) 1179
12 Violin Sonatas, Troisième livre (excs) 1179
Lecuona, Ernesto
Malagueña 1180
Lefanu, Nicola
I am Bread 1233
(A) Penny for a Song 1233
Legrant, Johannes
Entre vous, nouviaux mariés 1276
Se liesse 1285
Legrenzi, Giovanni
(Il) ballo del Gran Duca – Op 16 1255
Lehár, Franz
Ballsirenen 1175
Friederike (excs) 1237, 1267
Gold und Silber – Op 79 1166, 1175
(Das) Land des Lächelns (excs) 1242, 1251
(Die) Lustige Witwe (excs) 1235, 1237, 1251, 1256, 1268
Paganini (excs) 1242
(Der) Zarewitsch (excs) 1242
Ziguenerliebe (excs) 1237
Leigh, Walter
Concertino for piano/harpsichord and strings 371
Leighton, Kenneth
Cello Concerto – Op 31 378
Prelude, Scherzo and Passacaglia – Op 41 1193
6 Studies (Study-Variations) – Op 56 1197
Lekeu, Guillaume
Cello Sonata 382
Lemare, Edwin
Concert-Piece in the form of a Polonaise 1194
Leoncavallo, Ruggiero
(La) Bohème (excs) 1233
Mattinata, 'L'aurora di bianco vestita' 1238, 1251
Pagliacci (excs) 1223, 1229, 1233, 1250, 1251, 1253, 1254, 1261
Zazà 1250, 1254
Liadov, Anatole
(The) Enchanted Lake – Op 62 551
(A) Musical snuffbox – Op 32 1189
Lieurance, Thurlow
By the Waters of Minnetonka (Moon Deer) 1232
Ligeti, Gyorgy
Ballade and Dance 88
Etudes, Books 1 and 2 (excs) 1185
Lux aeterna 1213
Sonata for Viola 1182
Lilburn, Douglas
3 Songs 1233
Lishin, Grigory
She laughed 1223
Liszt, Franz
Années de pèlerinage, année 3 – S163 (excs) 90, 1187, 1200
Années de pèlerinage, année 1: Suisse – S160 (excs) 213, 1198, 1199
Années de pèlerinage, année 2: Italie – S161 (excs) 1189, 1190, 1198, 1199
Berceuse – S174 1190
6 Chants polonais (Chopin) – S480 (excs) 291
3 Concert Studies – S144 (excs) 213, 1190, 1200
Der du von dem Himmel bist – S279 1257
Elegie No 1 – S130 518
Elegie No 2 – S131 518
2 Episodes from Lenau's Faust – S110 (excs) 1170, 1172
Es muss ein Wunderbares sein – S314 214
12 Etudes d'exécution transcendante (excs) 688, 1187, 1205
6 Etudes d'exécution transcendante d'après Paganini – S140 (excs) 1189
Evocation à la Chapelle Sixtine – S658 1194
Fantasia on Hungarian Folk Themes – S123 6, 557
Festklänge – S101 1169
Freudvoll und leidvoll – S280 1257
4 Geistliche Lieder (Schubert) – S562 (excs) 1209
Grandes études de Paganini – S141 (excs) 1190
Harmonies poétiques et réligieuses – S173 (excs) 1187, 1189, 1195
Héroïde funèbre – S102 1169
Hungarian Rhapsodies – S359 (excs) 1172
19 Hungarian Rhapsodies – S244 (excs) 213, 559, 1186, 1189, 1191, 1197, 1209
Impromptu in F sharp – S191 747
2 Légendes – S175 (excs) 1185, 1199
3 Liebesträume – S541 (excs) 1189, 1261
(Die) Loreley – S273 214
(La) lugubre gondola – S134 518
2 Lugubre gondole – S200 (excs) 3
Mazeppa – S100 1169
Mephisto Waltz No 1 – S514 747, 1186, 1189
(A) Midsummer Night's Dream – S410 1209
Mignons Lied – S275 1257
6 Müllerlieder – S565 (excs) 870
O lieb, so lang du lieben kannst – S298 214
Oberon Overture – S574 1189
Oh! quand je dors – S282 1238, 1265
Orpheus – S98 1167, 1169, 1192
Piano Concerto No 1 in E flat – S124 556, 557, 1189
Piano Concerto No 2 in A – S125 556, 557
Prometheus – S99 1169
Piano Sonata in B minor – S178 559, 1186, 1190, 1195
Rapsodie espagnole – S254 1187
Réminiscences de Don Juan – S418 1189
Schwanengesang (Schubert) – S560 (excs) 1209
3 Sonetti di Petrarca – S270 214
Tristan und Isolde (Wagner), Liebestod – S447 1189, 1196
(Il) Trovatore (Verdi), Miserere – S433 1189
Über allen Gipfeln ist Ruh – S306 1257
4 Valses oubliées – S215 (excs) 688, 1190, 1205
Venezia e Napoli (rev version) – S162 (excs) 1198, 1199
Weinen, Klagen, Sorgen, Zagen (Prelude after Bach) – S179 1196
Literes, Antonio
Ah del rustico pastor 1298
Confiado jiguerillo 1222
Litolff, Henry
Concerto symphonique No 4 (excs) 6, 197, 1162
Lloyd Webber, Andrew
Requiem (excs) 1230
Lobo, Alonso
Antiphona ad Magnificat: O quam suavis est 1304
Ave Maria 566
Ave Regina caelorum 566
Credo quod Redemptor 566
Ego flos campi 1304
Missa Maria Magdalene 566
O quam suavis est, Domine 566, 1289
Quam pulchri sunt 566
Versa est in luctum 566
Vivo ego, dicit Dominus 566

Locatelli, Pietro Antonio
12 Concerti grossi – Op 1 (excs) 1316
Locke, Matthew
Broken Consort in D 1312
(The) Broken Consort, Part I: 6 Suites (excs) 1184
Canon 4 in 2 167
Psyche (excs) 1299, 1301
(The) Tempest (excs) 167
Lockhart, Charles
In the Luxembourg Gardens 1256
Loewe, Carl
Canzonette 1258
War schöner als der schönste Tag 1240
Loewe, Frederick
Brigadoon (excs) 1268
Camelot (excs) 1268, 1335
My Fair Lady (excs) 1268, 1333
Paint your Wagon (excs) 1268
The Little Prince (excs) 1268
Lonati, Carlo Ambrogio
12 Sonatas for Violin and Continuo (excs) 1299
Long, Zhou
Song of the Ch'in 506
Lope de Vega, Félix
En esta larga ausencia 1222
López, Félix Máximo
Variaciones del Fandango español 1206
Lortzing, Albert
(Der) Waffenschmied (excs) 1248
(Der) Wildschütz (excs) 1248, 1257
Zar und Zimmermann (excs) 1248, 1257
Lotti, Antonio
Arminio (excs) 1227
Crucifixus a 6 16
Crucifixus a 8 16, 1216, 1317
Crucifixus a 10 16
Luetkeman, Paul
Choralfantasie a 5, 'Innsbruck, ich muss dich' 1175
Fantasia 1175
Lully, Jean-Baptiste
Amadis – LWV63 (excs) 1232
Armide – LWV71 (excs) 1314
Chaconne 31
Récit de la beauté 1303
Lumsdaine, David
(A) Norfolk Songbook 1233
Luther, Martin
(A) mighty fortress is our God 1212, 1215
Lutosławski, Witold
Concerto for Cello and Orchestra 356
Dance Preludes 693
Luzzaschi, Luzzasco
Madrigals, Book 5 (excs) 392
Lyon, David
Intermezzo 1165
Joie de Vivre 1165
MacCunn, Hamish
(The) Ash Tree 1266
Macdermott, Cormack
Allmane 1309
Cormacke 1309
Mr Cormake Allman 1309
Schoc. a. torum Cormacke 1309
Macfarlane, Will
Open our eyes 1220
Machaut, Guillaume de
Ay mi! dame de valour 1284
Dame, je sui cilz/Fins cuer doulz 1286
Donnez, signeurs 1283
Il m'est avis qu'il n'est 1285
Nes que on porroit 1292
Pas de tor en thies païs 1283
Quand je ne voy ma dame 1283
Riches d'amour et mendians 1283
Se mesdisans en acort 1286
Trop plus est bele/Biaute paree/Je ne sui mie 1286
Machy, 'Sieur' de
Prélude 1313
Mackenzie, Alexander
Scottish Concerto – Op 55 574
Maclagan, William Dalrymple
Palms of glory, raiment bright 1220
MacMurrough, Dermot
Macushla, your sweet voice is calling 1251
Maconchy, Elizabeth
Concertino Nos 1 and 2 21
Quintet for Clarinet and Strings 507
3 Songs 1233
Sun, Moon and Stars 1233
Macpherson, Charles
Fantasy–Prelude 1189
Macque, Giovanni de
Capriccietto 1316
Capriccio sopra Re Fa Mi Sol 1316
Gagliarda prima 1316
Gagliarda seconda 1316
Prima stravaganza 1316
Ricercar Decimo Tono 1316
Seconde stravaganze 1316, 1317
Toccata a modo di trombetta 1316
Mahler, Gustav
Lieder eines fahrenden Gesellen 1556
Lieder und Gesänge (excs) 595
5 Rückert-Lieder (excs) 595, 1556
Symphony No 4 in G 1325
Symphony No 9 in D 591
Malvezzi, Cristofano
A voi, reali Amanti 1316
Coppia gentil 1316
Dal vago e bel sereno 1316
Dolcissime sirene 1316
E noi, con questa bella diva 1316
Io, che l'onde raffreno 1316
Lieti solcando il mare 1316
Noi, che cantando 1316
O fortunato giorno 1316
O quale, o qual risplende 1316
Or che le due grand'Alme 1316
Sinfonia 1300
Sinfonia a 6 1316
Sinfonia II a 6 1316
Sinfonia III a 6 1316
Mancini, Francesco
Sonata for Recorder, Two Violins and Continuo in D minor 1176
Marais, Marin
(Le) Basque 1176
Pièces de viole, Livre 2 – Part 1 (excs) 1313, 1315
Pièces de viole, Livre 4 – Parts 2 and 3 (excs) 1313
Marcello, Alessandro
Concerto for Oboe and Strings in D minor 1162, 1316, 7432
Qual fiamma che m'accende 1227
Marenzio, Luca
Belle ne fe' Natura 1316
Chi dal defino 1316
Jubilate Deo (excs) 598
Madrigals, Books 1, 2, 4-7, 9 (excs) 598
Nè fero sdegno mai donna mi mosse 598
O figlie di Piero 1316
O mille volte mille 1316
O valoroso Dio 1316
Qui di carne si sfama 1316
Satiati Amor ch'a a più doglioso amante 598
Se nelle voci nostre 1316
Sinfonia a 5 1316
Tribus miraculis 1217
Marini, Biagio
Eco a tre violini 1304
Passacaglia a 4 1305
Sonata 1300
Sonate, symphonie ... e retornelli – Op 8 (excs) 1300
Marsh, John
Quartetto in B flat 1178
Marta, Istvan
Doom 1177
(A) Sigh 1177
Martin, Frank
Mass 600, 1216
Passacaglia 600

Martín, Antonio
Diferencias sobre las Folias 1315
Martinů, Bohuslav
Mélodies pour une amie de mon pays 352
New Miniatures 352
New Slovak Songs (excs) 352
2 Songs on Negro Poetry (excs) 352
7 Songs on one page 352
Martucci, Giuseppe
(La) Canzone dei ricordi 603, 1173
Nocturne in G flat – Op 70/1 603
Marx, Joseph
Italienisches Liederbuch (excs) 595
Lieder und Gesänge (excs) 595
Maienblüten 595
Selige Nacht 1249
Und gestern hat er mir Rosen gebracht 595
Wofür 595
Mascagni, Pietro
(L')amico Fritz (excs) 1239, 1254, 1265
Cavalleria rusticana (excs) 1223, 1229, 1232, 1233, 1239, 1250, 1253, 1256, 1258, 1259, 1265, 1271
Iris (excs) 1239
Lodoletta (excs) 1239
Massenet, Jules
(Le) Cid (excs) 605, 1221, 1232
(La) Crépuscule 1237
Élégie 1223, 1258, 1265
Enchantement 1232
(Les) Erinnyes (excs) 1166, 1240
Esclarmonde (excs) 1266
Fantaisie 538
Hérodiade (excs) 1254, 1255
Manon 606, 1223, 1232, 1235, 1239, 1253, 1255, 1259, 1261, 1265, 1333
Sapho (excs) 1232
Sérénade de Zanetto 1232
Thaïs (excs) 1166, 1169, 1171, 1235
Valse folle 1193
(La) Vierge (excs) 1166, 1167
Werther (excs) 1223, 1224, 1261
Matteis, Nicola
Aria ad Imitatione della Trombetta 1312
Ayres for the Violin, Books 2 and 3 (excs) 1312
Divisions on a Ground in D minor 1299
Sett of Ayres for the Guitar 1312
Sett of Ayres 1312
Setts of Ayres in D, D minor and G 1312
Matthews, Colin
Pluto – the Renewer 502, 8573
Matthews, David
Duet Variations – Op 30 191
Maw, Nicholas
Sonatina 191
Mayerl, Billy
Canaries' Serenade 610
Carminetta 610
Chopsticks 610
Crystal Clear 610
Fascinating Ditty 610
Funny Peculiar 610
Jasmine – Op 84 610
Mignonette 610
Minuet for Pamela 610
Orange Blossom 610
Oriental – Op 21 610
Pastorale Exotique 610
Penny Whistle 610
Piano Exaggerations 610
Piano Transcriptions (excs) 610
Puppets Suite – Op 77 610
Scallywag 610
Shy Ballerina 610
Studies in Syncopation – Op 55 (excs) 610
Wistaria 610
Mayone, Ascanio
'Ancidetemi pur' Madrigale Arcadelt, passaggiato . 1316
Toccata Quarta per il Cimbalo Cromatico 1316
Mazzocchi, Domenico
Dialoghi, e sonetti (excs) 1307
McCabe, John
Maze Dances 796
Star Preludes 796
Medtner, Nikolay
Forgotten Melodies, Set I – Op 38 (excs) 14
3 Morceaux – Op 31 (excs) 1193
Sonata for Violin and Piano No 3, 'Epica' 613
Méhul, Nicholas
(Les) deux aveugles de Tolède (excs) 1167
Joseph (excs) 1221
Melachrino, George
Woodland Revel 1165
Mena, Gabriel
(La) Bella malmaridada 1287
Yo creo que n'os dió Dios 1287
Mendelssohn, Felix
Andante and rondo capriccioso – Op 14 1197
Andante cantabile and Presto agitato in B 1204
Athalie – Op 74 (excs) 1189
Christus – Op 97 (excs) 1217
6 Duets – Op 63 (excs) 1224
Hear my prayer 1216, 1218
(The) Hebrides, 'Fingal's Cave' – Op 26 1321
6 Lieder – Opp 19a, 71 (excs) 1241
6 Lieder – Op 34 (excs) 1241, 1258, 1259, 1266
6 Lieder – Op 47 (excs) 1265
12 Lieder – Op 8 (excs) 615, 1179
12 Lieder – Op 9 (excs) 1241
Meeresstille und glückliche Fahrt – Op 27 1169
(A) Midsummer Night's Dream (excs) .. 289, 774, 1169
Octet for strings in E flat – Op 20 .... 115, 1167
Piano Trio No 1 in D minor – Op 49 901
6 Preludes and Fugues – Op 35 (excs) 1197
Psalm 100, Jauchzet dem Herrn alle Welt 1214
Rondo capriccioso in E – Op 14 1204
(Die) Schöne Melusine – Op 32 .... 899, 1167
Sonatas for Organ – Op 65 (excs) 1193
48 Songs without Words (excs) 1191
String Quartet No 2 in A minor – Op 13 423
Symphony No 4, 'Italian' in A – Op 90 861
Symphony No 5, 'Reformation' in D – Op 107 381
Violin Concerto in E minor 26, 106, 239, 617, 618, 924, 1169
Mendelssohn-Hensel, Fanny
Dämmrung senkte sich von oben 615
Ich wandelte unter den Baümen 615
Lieder – Opp 1, 7, 9, 10 615
Nach Süden 615
(Die) Schiffende 615
Suleika 615
Traum 615
Menotti, Gian Carlo
(The) Medium (excs) 1236
(The) Old Maid and the Thief 81
Messager, André
(L')amour masqué (excs) 1240
Coups de Roulis (excs) 1240
(Les) Dragons de l'Impératrice (excs) 1240
Fortunio (excs) 1240
Passionément (excs) 1240
(La) Petite fonctionnaire (excs) 1240
(Les) P'tites Michu (excs) 1240
Messiaen, Olivier
(Le) Merle noir 1182
O sacrum convivium! 334
Quartet for the End of Time 1179, 1201
Thème et variations 1183
Turangalîla Symphony 627
Vingt Regards sur l'enfant Jésus (excs) 1185
Meyer, Edgar
Violin Concerto 78
Meyerbeer, Giacomo
(L')Africaine (excs). 1221, 1223, 1233, 1254, 1258, 1259
Coronation March 1166
Dinorah (excs) 1232, 1237, 1245, 1269
(La) Fille de l'air 1254
Hirtenlied 1254
(Les) Huguenots (excs) 1223, 1233, 1244, 1267
Komm! di schönes Fischermädchen 1254
Ma barque légère 1254

Prière d'enfants 1254
(Le) Prophète (excs) 1223, 1255
Robert le Diable (excs) 1223
Sicilienne 1254
Temptation 1223
Viens, Mina viens 1254
(Le) voeu pendant 1254
Michalowski, Aleksander
Etude d'après l'Impromptu in A flat by Chopin 1193
Paraphrase on a Chopin Waltz 1207
Mico, Richard
Four-part Consorts (excs) 261
Parte Seconda 1303
Milhaud, Darius
(Le) Boeuf sur le toit 633
(La) Création du monde 633, 1173
Sonatina for Flute and Piano 1182
Miller, Edward
When I survey the wondrous cross 1212, 1215
Millöcker, Carl
(Der) Bettelstudent (excs) 1242
Moeran, E
Phyllida and Corydon 1143
(The) Sailor and Young Nancy 1212
Songs of Springtime 1143
String Trio in G 96
Mompou, Federico
Cançons i danses (excs) 1202, 1203
El Combat del somni (excs) 1222
Monckton, Lionel
Soldiers in the Park 1165
Mondéjar, Alonso de
Ave rex noster 1289
Moniuszko, Stanislaw
Halka (excs) 1223
O mother 1223
Old age 1223
Phantoms 1223
(The) Quack's prophecy 1223
Rokiczana (excs) 1223
Sail! young raftsmen 1223
Straszny dwór (The haunted manor) 1223
Verbum nobile (Word of Honour) 1223
Monk, Edwin George
Psalms 144 and 146 1218
Monk, William Henry
All things bright and beautiful 1212
Christ the Lord is risen today 1212
Monn, Matthias Georg
Concerto for Cello and Orchestra in G minor 1161
Monro, George
My lovely Celia 1225
Monte, Philippus de
Clamavi de tribulatione mea 636
Di mie dogliose note 392
Factum est silentium 636
Miserere mei Domine 636
Missa Aspice Domine 636
O suavitis et dulcedo 636
Pie Jesu, virtus mea 636
Monteverdi, Claudio
Adoramus te, Christe 16
Cantate Domino 1317
Là tra 'l sangue 1303
Lamento d'Arianna 1255, 1306
Madrigals, Book 3 (excs) 1303
Madrigals, Book 7 (excs) 1255
Messa et salmi, concertati, e parte da capella (excs) 1304
Selva morale e spirituale (excs) 1216, 1304
Vespro della Beata Vergine, 'Vespers' 638
Voglio di vita uscir 1308
Montsalvatge, Xavier
5 Canciones negras (excs) 1222, 1228, 1238, 1331, 1332
Divagación 419
Sobre un tema popular 1222
Sonatine pour Yvette 419
Moody, Ivan
Words of the Angel 1297
Moore, Douglas
(The) Ballad of Baby Doe (excs) 1236
Moore, Thomas
Irish Melodies (excs) 1269
Morales, Cristóbal de
Ave regina caelorum 644
Circumdederunt me 1294
Emendemus in melius 643
Exaltata est sancta Dei genitrix 644
Jubilate Deo omnis terra 1294, 1311
Magnificat 1289
Missa Benedicta est regina caelorum (excs) 644
Missa, 'L'homme armé' 1294
Missa, 'Mille regretz' 643, 1294
Missa pro defunctis 1294
Missa Si bona suscepimus 643
O sacrum convivium 1311
Parce mihi domine 1289
Pater noster 1289, 1311
Si n'os huviera mirado 1222, 1278
Morata, Ginés
Aquì me declaró su pensamiento 1222
Moreno Torroba, Federico
Burgalesa 1188
Luisa Fernanda (excs) 1248
Prelude in E 1188
Sonatina in A 1188
Morley, Thomas
Canzonets, or Little Short Songs to Three Voyces (excs) 1301
First Booke of Ayres or Little Short Songs (excs) 328, 1266, 1301
First Booke of Balletts to Five Voyces (excs) 1216
First Booke of Canzonets to Two Voyces (excs) 1301
It was a lover and his lass 1264
Nolo mortem peccatoris 1211
Pavan No 3 1310
Morton, Robert
(Le) Souvenir de vous me tue 1282
Moszkowski, Moritz
8 Characteristic Pieces – Op 36 (excs) 1196, 1197
Etudes de virtuosité – Op 72 (excs) 1193, 1196, 1203
Waltz after Chopin 1207
Moulinié, Etienne
Amis enivrons nous 1303
Paisible et ténébreuse nuit 1303
Puisque Doris 1303
Moulu, Pierre
Mater floreat 1277
Mouton, Jean
Celeste beneficium 1277
Nesciens mater virgo virum 1281, 1305
Noe, Noe 1305
Mowere, Richard
Beata Dei genitrix 1292
Mozart, Leopold
Cassation, 'Toy Symphony' in G 660
Mozart, Wolfgang Amadeus
Abendempfindung – K523 1264
Adagio and Fugue in C minor – K546 660
Alma grande e nobil core – K578 1332
Als Luise die Briefe – K520 1225, 1264
(Die) Alte – K517 1225
An Chloe – K524 1243, 1249, 1264
Ascanio in Alba – K111 (excs) 1234, 1262
Ave verum corpus in D – K618 1216
(Die) Betrogene Welt – K474 1243
Chi sà, chi sà, Qual sia – K582 1264
Ch'io mi scordi di te...Non temer, amato bene 676
Clarinet Concerto in A – K622 646
Clarinet Quintet in A – K581 207, 381
(La) Clemenza di Tito (excs) 404, 1241, 1332
Concerto for Two Pianos and Orchestra in E flat – K365/K316a 656
Così fan tutte (excs) 1224, 1254, 1259, 1269
Dans un bois solitaire – K308/K295b 1225, 1264
Don Giovanni (excs) 404, 1167, 1224, 1234, 1246, 1248, 1254, 1255, 1256, 1258, 1259, 1261, 1267, 1269
(Die) Entführung aus dem Serail (excs) 1259, 1267, 1271
Exsultate, jubilate – K165/K158a 676, 1230, 1264
(La) finta giardiniera – K196 (excs) 404
Fugue in G minor – K401/375e 38

5 Fugues – K405 38
Horn Quintet in E flat – K407/K386c 1176
Idomeneo, re di Creta (excs) 1241, 1246
Im Frühlingsanfang – K597 1225
(Das) Kinderspiel – K598 .... 1225, 1264
(Eine) Kleine deutsche Kantate – K619 1243
(Das) Kleine Spinnerin – K531 1264
Litaniae Lauretanae – K195/186d (excs) 1266
Lucio Silla (excs) 404, 1241
Mia speranza adorata ... – K416 676
Mitridate, re di Ponto (excs) 1234, 1262
(Un) Moto di gioia – K579 .... 1263, 1331
Nehmt meinen Dank, ihr holden Gönner 676, 1246
(Le) nozze di Figaro (excs) 404, 1167, 1224, 1228, 1230, 1232, 1236, 1237, 1241, 1246, 1248, 1255, 1258, 1259, 1269, 1331, 1332, 1333, 1335
Oboe Concerto in C – K314/K271k 649
Oiseaux, si tous les ans – K307/K284d 1225, 1228, 1331
Ombra felice!...Io ti lascio – K255 1234
Per pietà, non ricercate – K420 1260
Piano Concerto No 15 in B flat – K450 371
Piano Concerto No 21 in C – K467 .... 1186, 1198
Piano Concerto No 23 in A – K488 .... 198, 1199
Piano Concerto No 24 in C minor – K491 371
Piano Concerto No 27 in B flat – K595 .... 656, 1189
Piano Quartet in G minor – K478 863
Piano Sonata No 5 in G – K283/K189h 746
Piano Sonata No 8 in A minor – K310/K300d 1201
Piano Sonata No 14 in C minor – K457 1326
Quintet for Keyboard, Oboe, Clarinet, Horn and Bass in E flat – K452 115
(Il) re pastore – K208 (excs) 1259
Ridente la calma – K152/K210a 1228, 1245, 1258, 1264
Rondo for Keyboard and Orchestra in D 1189
Sehnsucht nach dem Frühling – K596 .... 1225, 1264
Sei du mein Trost, 'An die Einsamkeit' – K391/K340b. 1225
Serenade No 13, 'Eine kleine Nachtmusik' 660
Sinfonia concertante in E flat 115
Symphony No 33 in B flat – K319 930
Symphony No 35, 'Haffner' in D – K385 134
Symphony No 36, 'Linz' in C – K425 976
Symphony No 38, 'Prague' in D – K504 1321
Symphony No 40 in G minor – K550 1325
(Das) Traumbild – K530 .... 1243, 1264
Vado, ma dove? oh Dei! – K583 1264
(Das) Veilchen – K476 .... 1225, 1243, 1264, 1270
(Der) Verschweigung – K518 .... 1225, 1249
Vesperae solennes de confessore – K339 (excs) 1230
Violin Concerto No 3 in G – K216 657
Violin Concerto No 4 in D – K218 1324
Vorrei spiegarvi, oh Dio – K418 .... 676, 1245
Warnung – K433a 1263, 1264
Wie unglücklich bin ich nit – K147/K125g 1225
Zaïde (excs) 676, 1264
(Der) Zauberer – K472 .... 1225, 1264
(Die) Zauberflöte (excs) . 1167, 1224, 1230, 1245, 1248, 1258, 1259, 1264, 1266, 1267, 1269, 1271, 1335
(Die) Zufriedenheit – K473 1225
(Die) Zufriedenheit – K349 1264

Mudarra, Alonso
Fantasia del quinto tono 1288
Tres libros de musica en Cifras para vihuela (excs) 1288, 1295
Tres libros de musica en cifras y canto (excs) 1222, 1295

Mundy, William
In nomine 1310
O mater mundi 1306

Mussorgsky, Modest
Boris Godunov (excs) 551, 1221, 1223, 1243
Darling Savishna 1265
(The) Fair at Sorochintsï (excs) 774, 1223
Khovanshchina (excs) 805, 1167, 1271
(A) Night on the Bare Mountain 687, 805
Pictures at an Exhibition 687, 688, 805, 1205
Songs and Dances of Death 931, 1223, 1244, 1322

Musto, John
Recuerdo (excs) 1241
(The) Rose Family 1250
Triolet 1250

Myaskovsky, Nikolay
Cello Concerto in C minor – Op 66 632
Violin Concerto in D minor – Op 44 691

Nancarrow, Conlon
3 Canons for Ursula 1185

Nápravník, Eduard
Dubrovsky – Op 58 1223
Harold – Op 45 1223

Nardini, Pietro
Sonata for Violin and Piano 1016

Narváez, Luys de
Fantasia del octavo tono 1294
La cancion del Emperados, 'Mille regres' (Josquin) 1294
Paseávase el rey moro 1222, 1287, 1295
(Los) Seys libros del Delphin (excs) 1287, 1295

Nasco, Giovanni
(Il) Primo Libro di Canzone villanesche (excs) 1280

Nau, Stephen
Ballet in F 1313
Pavane and Galliard in D minor 1313
Suite in F 1313

Nicolai, Otto
The Merry Wives of Windsor (excs) 1224, 1244

Niedermeyer, Louis
Pietà, Signore 1239

Nielsen, Carl
Clarinet Concerto – FS129 693
6 Humoresque Bagatelles – FS22 1186
Pan and Syrinx – FS87 948
6 Songs – FS18 1248
Symphony No 4, 'The inextinguishable' 948
Violin Concerto – FS61 .... 693, 939
Wind Quintet – FS100 696

Niles, John Jacob
Black is the color of my true love's hair 1249
Fee Simple 1249
(The) Lass from the Low Countree 1241

Nin, Joaquín
Cantos populares españolas (excs) 1222, 1223, 1265

Nin-Culmell, Joaquín
48 Tonadas (excs) 1222

Nivers, Guillaume Gabriel
Antiphonarium Monasticum (excs) 275
Dominus illuminatio mea 273
Miserere mei 273

Novácek, Ottokar
(8) Concert caprices – Op 5 (excs) 1202

Novák, Vítezslav
Slovak Suite – Op 32 517

Novello, Ivor
(The) Dancing Years (excs) 1237
Perchance to dream (excs) 1237

Obradors, Fernando
Canciones clásicas españolas (excs) 1332
Chiquitita la novia 1222

Obrecht, Jacob
Ein fröhlich wesen 1281
Fors seulement 1283
Haec Deum caeli 1281
Humilium decus 701
Jay pris amours 1283
Laudemus nunc Dominum 1281
Salve crux 1293
Salve regina 701
Si sumpsero 1283

Ockeghem, Johannes
Alma redemptoris mater 702
Ave Maria 701, 702, 1288
Fors seulement l'attente 702
Intemerata Dei mater 701, 1281
Ma bouche rit 1281
Missa 'Ecce ancilla Domini' 701
Missa Fors seulement 702
Missa 'L'homme armé' 702
Missa prolationum 701
Prenez sur moi vostre exemple 1281
Quant de vous seul 1282
Requiem 702

Offenbach, Jacques
(La) Belle Hélène (excs) 1166, 1237, 1239

Concert Paraphrase of 'The Song of the Soldiers of the Sea' . . . 1193
(Les) Contes d'Hoffmann (excs) . . . 1166, 1232, 1235, 1245, 1253, 1254, 1266, 1269
Orphée aux enfers (excs) . . . 1166, 1237
(La) Périchole (excs) . . . 1232, 1253

Orff, Carl
Carmina Burana (excs) . . . 1230, 1235

Orr, Robin
Short Service . . . 1214

Ortiz, Diego
Fantasia I – Fantasia II 'Salve Regina' . . . 1288
Folía VIII . . . 1315
Quinta pars IX . . . 1305
Recercada II sobre camto llano . . . 1300
Ricercada II . . . 1305
Ricercada IV . . . 1300, 1315
Ricercada V . . . 1305
Ricercada VII . . . 1305
Trattado de glosas (excs) . . . 1295, 1313

Ouseley, Frederick Arthur Gore
From the rising of the sun . . . 1217
Psalm 105 . . . 1218

Pabst, Paul
Paraphrase on 'Sleeping Beauty' (Tchaikovsky) . . . 1197

Pachelbel, Johann
Alle Menschen müssen sterben . . . 1193
Canon and Gigue in D . . . 1305, 660

Paderewski, Ignacy
Miscellanea – Op 16 (excs) . . . 1197

Padilla, José
Princesita . . . 1261
(La) Violetera . . . 1256

Padilla, Juan Guitiérrez de
Transfige, dulcissime Domine . . . 1289
Versa est in luctum . . . 1212

Paganini, Nicolò
24 Caprices – MS25 (Op 1) (excs) . . . 1179, 1181
Moto perpetuo, 'Perpetual Motion' in C . . . 1181
(I) palpiti – Introduction and Variations . . . 1183
Violin Concerto No 1 in E flat . . . 710

Paisiello, Giovanni
(L')Amor contrastato, 'La Molinara' (excs) . . 1227, 1245
Nina, o sia La pazza per amore (excs) . . . 1167, 1227
(Il) Zingari in fiera (excs) . . . 1227

Palestrina, Giovanni Pierluigi da
Assumpta est Maria . . . 714
Christe, qui lux es et dies . . . 1213
Exsultate Deo . . . 1317
Hodie beata virgo . . . 15
Lamentations for Holy Saturday . . . 1014
Litaniae de Beata Virgine Maria . . . 15
Lucis Creator optime . . . 1213
Magnificat . . . 15
Matins Responsory . . . 1217
Missa Assumpta est Maria . . . 714
Missa Papae Marcelli (excs) . . . 1216
Missa Sicut lilium inter spinas . . . 714
Senex puerum portabat . . . 15
Sicut cervus desiderat . . . 1317
Sicut lilium inter spinas I . . . 714
Stabat mater . . . 15
Vesper Responsory . . . 1217

Palmgren, Selim
Finnish rhythms – Op 31 (excs) . . . 422
Refrain de Berceau . . . 422

Palomino, José
El canapé . . . 1222

Pandolfo, Paolo
(A) Solo (Tombeau) . . . 1313

Parelli, Attilio
(L')alba nascente . . . 1251

Parisotti, Alessandro
Se tu m'ami . . . 1227, 1238, 1253, 1254, 1263

Parker, Clifton
(The) Glass Slipper (excs) . . . 1165

Parker, Horatio William
Jam sol recedit igneus (Now sinks the sun) . . . 1220

Parkin, Eric
Mayerl Shots, Set 1 . . . 610
Mayerl Shots, Sets 2 and 3 . . . 610

Parry, Hubert
3 Choral Fantasies . . . 715, 1191
7 Chorale Preludes, Set 1 . . . 715
7 Chorale Preludes, Set 2 . . . 715, 1189
Dear Lord and Father of Mankind . . . 1215
Elégie . . . 715
Elegy in A flat . . . 715
English Lyrics, Set 2 . . . 716, 1226, 1231
English Lyrics, Set 4 . . . 716
English Lyrics, Set 5 (excs) . . . 716, 1226
English Lyrics, Sets 6-10 (excs) . . . 716
Fantasia and Fugue in G . . . 715
I was glad . . . 365, 1334
Jerusalem . . . 1324
Ode at a Solemn Music, 'Blest Pair of Sirens' . . . 365
6 Songs of Farewell (excs) . . . 1213
Toccata and Fugue in G (Wanderer) . . . 715

Parry, Joseph
Myfanwy . . . 1268

Parsons, Robert I
Ave Maria . . . 1217, 1317
In Nomines a 7 (excs) . . . 1306
(The) Songe called Trumpetts . . . 1306

Pärt, Arvo
(The) Beatitudes . . . 411
Cantus in memory of Benjamin Britten . . . 1201
Magnificat . . . 411

Peerson, Martin
Blow out the trumpet . . . 1217

Peñalosa, Francisco de
Magnificat quarti toni . . . 1289
Motets (excs) . . . 1287, 1289
Por las sierras de Madrid . . . 1287

Pergolesi, Giovanni Battista
Stabat Mater . . . 722, 1230
Tre giorni son che Nina . . . 1269

Peri, Jacopo
Dunque fra turbido onde . . . 1316
Uccidimi, dolore . . . 1306

Pérotin
Alleluia, Nativitas . . . 723
Alleluia, Posui adiutorium . . . 723
Beata viscera . . . 723, 1289
Dum sigillum summi patris . . . 723
Presul nostri temporis . . . 1284
Sederunt principes V. Adiuva . . . 723
Viderunt omnes V. Notum fecit . . . 723

Peterson-Berger, Wilhelm
Aspakers Polka . . . 1255
Böljeby Waltz . . . 1255
Eterkomst, 'Return' . . . 1255
3 Marit's Songs (Marits visor) – Op 12 (excs) . . . 1255
Nothing is like the time of waiting . . . 1255
4 Swedish folk ballads – Op 5 (excs) . . . 1255

Petrovics, Emil
Rhapsody No 1 . . . 1207

Pfitzner, Hans
(Das) Herz – Op 39 (excs) . . . 724
(Das) Käthchen von Heilbronn – Op 17 (excs) . . . 724
5 Lieder – Op 11 (excs) . . . 1249
Palestrina (excs) . . . 724

Philips, Peter
Amarilli . . . 1300
Ascendit Deus . . . 1317
Ave verum corpus Christi . . . 1317
O beatum et sacrosanctum diem . . . 1211
Tirsi, Freno and Cosi moriro . . . 598

Piazzolla, Astor
Fugata . . . 725
(Le) Grand Tango . . . 725
Histoire du Tango (excs) . . . 725, 1180
Libertango . . . 725
Milonga del ángel . . . 725
3 Minutos con realidad . . . 725
Mumuki . . . 725
Sur: Regreso al amor . . . 725
Tango Suite (excs) . . . 725

Picchi, Giovanni
Intavolatura di Balli d'Arpicordo (excs) . . . 1317

Toccata . . . 1317
Piccinini, Alessandro
Chiaccone . . . 1255
Picforth,
In Nomine a 5 . . . 1310
Pisador, Diego
Libro de música de vihuela (excs) . . . 1295
(La) Mañana de San Juan . . . 1295
No me llames segalaherba . . . 1222
Porqué es, dama, tanto quereros . . . 1222
Piston, Walter
(The) Incredible Flutist . . . 1163
Pitfield, Thomas
Rondo lirico . . . 1177
Pizzetti, Ildebrando
De profundis . . . 600
Messa di requiem . . . 600
Plakidis, Peteris
(2) Grasshopper Dances . . . 1181
Playford, John I
(The) Division Violin (excs) . . . 1312
(The) English Dancing Master, Appendix (excs) . . 1305
(The) English Dancing Master, Parts 1 and 2 (excs)1305
Musick's Hande-Maide (excs) . . . 1305
Plummer, John
Anna mater matris Christi . . . 1292
Tota pulchra es . . . 1292
Poldini, Ede
7 Marionnettes (excs) . . . 535, 1150
Ponce, Manuel
A la orilla de un palmar . . . 1261
Estrellita . . . 1178, 1210, 1256
Ponchielli, Amilcare
(La) Gioconda . . . 727, 1223, 1229, 1233, 1239, 1251, 1253, 1258, 1268
Porter, Cole
Born to Dance (excs) . . . 1251
Fifty Million Frenchmen (excs) . . . 1248
Gay Divorce (excs) . . . 229
Kiss Me, Kate (excs) . . . 1246
Leave it to Me (excs) . . . 229
Miss Otis Regrets . . . 229
Nymph Errant (excs) . . . 229
Paris (excs) . . . 229
Poulenc, Francis
(les) animaux modèles . . . 730
Aubade . . . 730
Banalités (excs) . . . 155, 1234
(Les) Biches . . . 633, 730
Chansons françaises . . . 1212
Chansons villageoises (excs) . . . 155, 1234
(Les) Chemins de l'amour . . . 1238
Concert champêtre . . . 627
Concerto for Organ, Strings and Timpani . . . 627, 836
(La) Courte paille (excs) . . . 155, 1234
Exultate Deo . . . 335
3 Intermezzi (excs) . . . 1193
Litanies à la vierge noire . . . 335
(Les) Mariés de la tour Eiffel (excs) . . . 730
Mass in G . . . 335
Matelote provençale . . . 730
4 Motets pour le temps de Noïl (excs) . . . 1219
Pastourelle . . . 730, 1195
3 Pièces (excs) . . . 1195
2 Poèmes . . . 155, 1234
Salve Regina . . . 335
Sonata for Flute and Piano . . . 1182
Sonata for Oboe and Piano . . . 731
Trio for Oboe, Bassoon and Piano . . . 731
Valse . . . 730
Power, Leonel
Gloria . . . 1285
Praetorius, Michael
(A) Great and mighty wonder . . . 1211
Previn, André
Sallie Chisum remembers Billy the Kid . . . 1230
(A) Streetcar Named Desire (excs) . . . 1236
Vocalise . . . 1230
Prichard, Rowland Hugh
Hyrfrydol . . . 1268
Love divine, all love excelling . . . 1212
Proch, Heinrich
Deh! torna mio bene (Air and Variations) . . 1237, 1269
Prokofiev, Sergey
Alexander Nevsky – Op 78 . . . 777
Flute Sonata in D – Op 94 . . . 693, 1184
Ivan the Terrible – Op 116 . . . 777
(The) Love for Three Oranges . . . 348
Piano Concerto No 1 in D flat – Op 10 . . . 83, 740
Piano Concerto No 3 in C – Op 26 . . . 83, 740
Piano Concerto No 5 in G minor – Op 55 . . 741, 1189
Piano Sonata No 2 in D minor – Op 14 . . . 1327
Piano Sonata No 4 in C minor – Op 29 . . . 746, 935
Piano Sonata No 6 in A – Op 82 . . . 688, 935, 1200, 1205, 1207
Piano Sonata No 7 in B flat – Op 83 . . . 688, 747, 1205
Piano Sonata No 8 in B flat – Op 84 . . . 688, 747
4 Pieces – Op 4 (excs) . . . 289
4 Pieces – Op 32 (excs) . . . 935
10 Pieces – Op 12 (excs) . . . 935
3 Pieces from Cinderella (excs) . . 935, 1196, 1205, 1209
6 Pieces from Cinderella – Op 102 (excs) . . . 935, 1209
10 Pieces from Cinderella – Op 97 (excs) . . . 935, 1209
10 Pieces from Romeo and Juliet – Op 75 (excs) . . . 747
Romeo and Juliet – Op 64 (excs) . . . 1182
String Quartet No 2 in F – Op 92 . . . 494
Symphony No 5 in B flat – Op 100 . . . 745
Symphony-Concerto in E minor – Op 125 . . 632, 1172, 1322
(The) Tales of an old grandmother – Op 31 (excs) 1150
Toccata in D minor – Op 11 . . . 1186, 1195
Violin Concerto No 1 in D . . . 400, 742
Violin Concerto No 2 in G minor . . 400, 741, 742, 923
Violin Sonata No 2 in D – Op 94a . . . 746
Visions fugitives – Op 22 (excs) . . . 747, 935, 1205
Provenzale, Francesco
Beatus vir . . . 1300
Confitebor . . . 1300
Dixit Dominus . . . 1300
Exulta, jubila . . . 1300
Lauda Jerusalem . . . 1300
Laudate pueri . . . 1300
Magnificat . . . 1300
Magnus secundum nomen suum . . . 1300
Puccini, Giacomo
(La) Bohème (excs) . . . 1223, 1224, 1229, 1232, 1233, 1237, 1239, 1240, 1250, 1251, 1253, 1254, 1258, 1261, 1264, 1265, 1267, 1268
(La) Fanciulla del West (excs) . . . 1265
Gianni Schicchi (excs) . . 1224, 1232, 1237, 1246, 1253, 1265, 1268, 1333
Madama Butterfly (excs) . 1223, 1229, 1232, 1233, 1237, 1253, 1258, 1259, 1267, 1333
Manon Lescaut (excs) . . . 1229, 1232, 1237, 1251, 1252, 1253, 1268
(La) Rondine (excs) . . . 1235
Suor Angelica (excs) . . . 1237, 1253, 1268
(Il) Tabarro (excs) . . . 1268
Tosca (excs) . . . 1223, 1224, 1229, 1232, 1233, 1239, 1250, 1251, 1253, 1256, 1258, 1265, 1267, 1268, 1332
Turandot (excs) . . . 1232, 1265, 1266, 1268, 1333
Pujol, Emilio
Guajira . . . 1188
Tango español . . . 1188
Pujol, Maximo Diego
5 Preludios (excs) . . . 1208
Pullois, Jean
Flos de spina . . . 255, 701
Purcell, Henry
Abdelazer – Z570 . . . 1316
Bess of Bedlam, 'From silent shades' . . . 1049
Birthday Ode, 'Come ye sons of art away' (excs) . . 1224
Birthday Ode, 'Love's goddess sure was blind' – Z331 . 179
Birthday Ode, 'Now does the glorious day appear' (excs) . . . 1299
Chaconne for Strings in G minor – Z730 . . . 225
Christ is made the sure foundation . . . 1212
Dido and Aeneas (excs) . . . 1230, 1266, 1325

Dioclesian, or The Prophetess – Z627 (excs) . . . 1299
(The) Fairy Queen – Z629 (excs) . . . 1049, 1266, 1301
Fantasia upon a Ground – Z731 . . . 1184, 1305
9 Fantasias – Z735–43 (excs) . . . 1049
(The) Fatal hour comes on apace – Z421 . . . 1049
Hear my prayer, O Lord – Z15 . . . 1216
Here let my life . . . 179
(The) History of King Richard II – Z581 (excs) . . . 1301
I saw that you were grown so high – Z387 . . . 1224
I was glad when they said unto me . . . 1217
If music be the food of love – Z379/2 . . . 1049
If music be the food of love – Z379/1 . . . 1301
(The) Indian Queen – Z630 (excs) . . . 1224, 1246
King Arthur – Z628 (excs) . . . 1224, 1246
(The) Libertine – Z600 (excs) . . . 1266
Lord, what is man? – Z192 . . . 1225
My heart is inditing – Z30 . . . 1217
O Solitude! my sweetest choice – Z406 . . . 1255
Oedipus – Z583 (excs) . . . 179, 1242, 1301
(The) Old Bachelor – Z607 (excs) . . . 1301
Pausanias – Z585 (excs) . . . 1049, 1301
Pavan in G minor – Z752 . . . 1184
(4) Pavans – Z748–51 (excs) . . . 1184
(The) Queen's Epicedium, 'Incassum, Lesbia, rogas' – Z383 . . . 1255
Remember not, Lord, our offences – Z50 . . . 1211
(The) Second Part of Musick's Hand-maid (excs) . 1299
Sleep, Adam, sleep and take thy rest – Z195 . . . 1225
(10) Sonatas in Four Parts – Z802–11 (excs) . . . 1305
St Cecilia's Day Ode, 'Hail, bright Cecilia' – Z328 (excs) . . . 179, 1299
Stript of their green our groves appear – Z444 . . . 1224
Suite . . . 358
Welcome Song, 'Fly, bold rebellion' – Z324 (excs) 1299
Welcome Song, 'What, what shall be done in behalf – Z341 (excs) . . . 1271

Quilter, Roger
3 Shakespeare Songs – Op 6 (excs) . . . 1231
3 Songs – Op 3 (excs) . . . 1226, 1231

Rachmaninov, Sergey
Aleko (excs) . . . 1221, 1244
(The) Bells – Op 35 . . . 777
Cello Sonata in G minor – Op 19 . . . 1171
Daisies . . . 774
Etude-tableau – Op posth (excs) . . . 1209
Etudes-tableaux – Op 39 (excs) . . . 746
Etudes-tableaux – Op 33 . . . 774
Etudes-tableaux – Op 39 . . . 774, 775
Etudes-tableaux – Op 33 (excs) . . . 1186, 1193
Etudes-tableaux – Op 39 (excs) . . . 1200, 1203, 1204
Etudes-tableaux – Op 33 (excs) . . . 1204
Etudes-tableaux – Op 39 (excs) . . . 1209
Fragments in A flat . . . 774, 1209
Fughetta in F . . . 774
(The) Isle of the dead – Op 29 . . . 1170
Lilacs . . . 289, 774, 1200
6 Moments musicaux – Op 16 (excs) . . . 289, 774, 1193
Morceau de fantaisie in G minor . . . 774
5 Morceaux de fantaisie – Op 3 (excs) . . . 774, 1197
7 Morceaux de salon – Op 10 . . . 774, 1197
3 Nocturnes . . . 774
Oriental Sketch in B flat . . . 774
Piano Concerto No 2 in C minor – Op 18 . . . 741, 1162
Piano Concerto No 3 in D minor – Op 30 . . . 772, 834
Piano Concerto No 4 in G minor – Op 40 . . . 772, 1200
Piano Sonata No 1 in D minor – Op 28 . . . 774
Piano Sonata No 2 in B flat minor – Op 36 . . . 774, 775
Pièce in D minor . . . 774
4 Pièces . . . 774
Polka de W. R. . . . 774, 1193
Prelude in D minor . . . 774
Prelude in F . . . 774
24 Preludes (excs) . . . 289, 688, 774, 777, 1172, 1195, 1200, 1205
Romance in F minor . . . 1179
Song without words in D minor . . . 774
6 Songs – Op 4 (excs) . . . 1209
6 Songs – Op 8 (excs) . . . 1223
12 Songs – Op 21 (excs) . . . 1209, 1223
14 Songs – Op 34 (excs) . . . 524, 1168, 1200, 1235
15 Songs – Op 26 (excs) . . . 1223
Trio élégiaque in G minor . . . 1035
Variations on a theme of Chopin – Op 22 . . . 774
Variations on a theme of Corelli – Op 42 . . . 774, 1204
Vespers, 'All–Night Vigil' – Op 37 (excs) . . 1213, 1216, 1219
Vocalise – Op 34/14 . . . 774, 1171
Vocalise – Op 34/14 . . . 1210

Rameau, Jean-Philippe
(Les) fêtes de l'Hymen et de l'Amour (Les Dieux (excs) 1314
Hippolyte et Aricie (excs) . . . 1240
(Les) Indes galantes (excs) . . . 1314
Pièces de clavecin (excs) . . . 1210, 1255
Platée (Junon jalouse) (excs) . . . 1314

Rangström, Ture
(The) Dark Flower (excs) . . . 1255
(The) Girl under the New Moon . . . 1248
Old Swedish . . . 1255
(The) Only Moment . . . 1248
Pan . . . 1248, 1255
5 Poems by Bo Bergman (excs) . . . 1248, 1255
Prayer to the night . . . 1248
Wordplay and Trifles (excs) . . . 1248

Rautavaara, Einojuhani
Vigilia . . . 1213

Ravanello, Oreste
Theme and Variations in B minor . . . 1192

Ravel, Maurice
Berceuse sur le nom de Gabriel Fauré . . . 307
Boléro . . . 305
3 Chansons . . . 1212
3 Chansons madécasses . . . 1184
Chants populaires (excs) . . . 1227
Daphnis et Chloé (excs) . . . 305, 557, 950
(L')Enfant et les sortilèges (excs) . . . 1259
Gaspard de la nuit . . . 792
Introduction and Allegro for flute, clarinet, harp . . . 382
Jeux d'eau . . . 1186, 1205, 1327
2 Mélodies hébraïques . . . 1227
Miroirs (excs) . . . 415, 1205, 1327
Pavane pour une infante défunte . . . 1180
Piano Concerto in G . . . 772
Piano Concerto (Left–Hand) . . . 834
Piano Trio in A minor . . . 306
Pièce en forme de habanera . . . 307, 340, 1202
Shéhérazade . . . 155, 1226, 1234
Sonatine for Piano . . . 792
String Quartet in F . . . 306, 791
Tripatos . . . 1227
Tzigane . . . 142, 307
Valses nobles et sentimentales . . . 687
Violin and Cello Sonata . . . 1180
Violin Sonata in G . . . 613
Vocalise en forme de habanera . . . 1222, 1227

Rawsthorne, Alan
4 Bagatelles . . . 1197
Theme and Variations . . . 796
Violin Sonata . . . 796

Rawsthorne, Noel
Dance Suite (excs) . . . 1195

Refice, Licinio
Ave Maria . . . 1253
Ombra di Nube . . . 1253

Reger, Max
5 Easy Preludes and Fugues – Op 56 (excs) . . . 1192
8 Geistliche Gesänge – Op 138 (excs) . . . 1214
60 Schlichte Weisen – Op 76 (excs) . . . 1253, 1256
5 Special Studies after Chopin . . . 1207

Respighi, Ottorino
Adagio con variazioni . . . 1168
E se un giorno tornasse . . . 1223
Nebbie . . . 1238
Pini di Roma, 'Pines of Rome' . . . 1325
Stornellatrice . . . 1223, 1265
(Il) Tramonto . . . 603

Reubke, Julius
Sonata on the 94th Psalm in C minor . . . 1191, 1209

Reynolds, Stephen
2 Poems in Homage to Delius . . . 1197

2 Poems in Homage to Fauré . . . 1197
Rigatti, Giovanni Antonio
Messa e salmi ariosi (excs) . . . 1304
Messa e salmi parte concertati (excs) . . . 1304
Rihm, Wolfgang
Gesungene Zeit . . . 142
Riisager, Knudaage
Mother Denmark . . . 1260
Rimsky-Korsakov, Nikolai
By the sea – Op 46 (excs) . . . 1223
Capriccio espagnol – Op 34 . . . 805
Fantasia on Two Russian Themes in B minor . . . 1171
(The) Golden Cockerel (excs) . . . 1223
In spring – Op 43 (excs) . . . 1223
Kashchey the Immortal (excs) . . . 1244
May Night (excs) . . . 1223
Mozart and Salieri (excs) . . . 1221
Sadko (excs) . . . 535, 1221, 1223, 1240, 1244
Scheherazade . . . 805
Snow Maiden (second version) (excs) . 1223, 1240, 1244
Songs – Opp 2 and 8 (excs) . . . 1223
(The) Tale of Tsar Saltan (excs) . . . 774, 1195, 1209
(The) Tsar's Bride (excs) . . . 1221, 1223, 1240, 1244
Ritter, Christian
Suite in C minor . . . 31
Roberton, Hugh S
All in the April evening . . . 1216
Rodgers, Richard
Allegro (excs) . . . 1268
(The) Boys from Syracuse (excs) . . . 1266
Carousel (excs) . . . 1197, 1268
(The) King and I (excs) . . . 1197, 1268
Oklahoma! (excs) . . . 1268
(The) Sound of Music (excs) . . . 1268
South Pacific (excs) . . . 1268
State Fair (excs) . . . 1335
Rodrigo, Joaquín
Concierto de Aranjuez . . . 21, 369, 809
Invocación y danza . . . 9
Madrigales amatorios (excs) . . . 1222
Pequeñas piezas (excs) . . . 1222
Piezas españolas . . . 10
Por los campos de España (excs) . . . 9
Roger-Ducasse, Jean
Pastorale in F . . . 1201
Rogier, Philippe
Canción a 6 (untitled) . . . 643, 1304
Canción 'Ecce sacerdos magnus' . . . 643, 1304
Canción (untitled) . . . 643, 1304
Credidi . . . 1304
Dominus regit me . . . 811
Heu mihi Domine . . . 811
Laboravi in gemitu meo . . . 811
Missa Ego sum qui sum . . . 811
Peccavi quid faciam tibi . . . 811
Taedet animam meam . . . 811
Romero, Mateo
A quién contaré mis quejas . . . 1279
Como suele el blanco zisne . . . 1279
En Belén están mis amores . . . 1279
Las voces del fuego . . . 1279
Psalmus I : Dixit Dominus a 16 . . . 1304
Soberana María . . . 1279
Ronell, Ann
Willow Weep for Me . . . 1212
Rorem, Ned
Early in the morning . . . 1241
Exaltabo te, Domine . . . 1220
(The) Lordly Hudson . . . 1241
Sonata for Piano No 2 . . . 1197
Rosa, Salvatore
Quand on aime . . . 1232
Star vicino . . . 1245
Rose, Barry
Psalm 121 . . . 1218
Rose, Bernard
Evening Service in C minor . . . 1214
Feast Song for St. Cecilia . . . 1218
Rosenmüller, Johann
Christum ducem, qui per crucem . . . 1229
(12) Sonate a 2, 3, 4 e 5 stromenti da arco e altr (excs) . 1229
Rosenthal, Moritz
Study after Chopin . . . 1207
Roslavets, Nikolay
Sonata for Viola and Piano No 1 . . . 1182
Rosseter, Philip
What then is love but mourning . . . 1301
Rossi, Francesco
Sinfonia a 5 . . . 1300
Rossi, Luigi
Fantasia, 'Les pleurs d'Orphée' . . . 1306
Orfeo (excs) . . . 1308
Passacaille del seigneur Luigi . . . 1308
Pender non prima vide sopra vil tronco . . . 1307
Prima Canzon 'Scipione Stella' . . . 1308
Rossini, Gioachino
(Il) Barbiere di Siviglia (excs) . . 1223, 1224, 1232, 1237, 1238, 1243, 1244, 1245, 1246, 1251, 1254, 1255, 1261, 1267, 1269
Canzonetta spagnuola . . . 1228, 1331
(La) Cenerentola, or La bontà in trionfo (excs) . . . 1246, 1269, 1332
(Le) Comte Ory (excs) . . . 1253
(La) Gazza ladra (excs) . . . 1252
Guillaume Tell (excs) . . . 727, 1166, 1238, 1246, 1252, 1253
Introduction, Theme and Variations in B flat . . . 302
L'Italiana in Algeri (excs) . . . 1246
Mi lagnerí tacendo I (excs) . . . 1227, 1228, 1331
Mosè in Egitto (excs) . . . 1252
(La) Passeggiata . . . 1227
Péchés de Vieillesse, Book 1 (excs) . . . 1331
Péchés de Vieillesse, Book 2 (excs) . . . 1228, 1331
Péchés de Vieillesse, Book 3 (excs) . . . 1227
Péchés de vieillesse, Book 11 (excs) . . . 1227
(La) regata veneziana . . . 1268
(La) Scala di seta (excs) . . . 1167
Semiramide (excs) . . . 1246, 1266, 1267, 1271, 1352
(La) Separazione . . . 1254
(Le) Siège de Corinthe (excs) . . . 1238
Soirées musicales (excs) . . . 214, 1227, 1245, 1251
6 Sonate a quattro . . . 815
Stabat mater (excs) . . . 1239
Zelmira (excs) . . . 1228, 1331
Rota, Nino
(The) Legend of the Glass Mountain . . . 6
Rouse, Christopher
Concert de Gaudi . . . 1014
Roussel, Albert
2 Mélodies – Op 50 (excs) . . . 1265
Suite in F – Op 33 . . . 271
Symphony No 3 in G minor – Op 42 . . . 824
Rózsa, Miklós
Concerto for Violin and Orchestra – Op 24 . . . 532
Spellbound Concerto . . . 6
Tema con variazioni – Op 29a . . . 532
Rubbra, Edmund
Discourse – Op 127 . . . 828
Fukagawa (Deep River) . . . 828
(A) Hymn to the Virgin – Op 13 . . . 828
Improvisation – Op 124 . . . 828
Improvisations on Virginal Pieces by Giles Farnaby – Op 50 (excs) . . . 826
(The) Jade Mountain – Op 116 . . . 828
Orpheus with his Lute – Op 8 . . . 828
Pezzo ostinato – Op 102 . . . 828
Rosa Mundi – Op 2 . . . 828
Songs – Op 4 (excs) . . . 828
Symphony No 5 in B flat – Op 63 . . . 826
Transformations – Op 141 . . . 828
Rubinstein, Anton
(Der) Asra – Op 32/6 . . . 1223
(The) Demon (excs) . . . 1223, 1244
(The) Donkey and the Nightingale . . . 1223
Du bist wie eine Blume – Op 32/5 . . . 1258
Kalashnikov the Merchant . . . 1223
(Die) Nacht . . . 1223
Nero . . . 1223, 1233, 1244
Persian Songs – Op 34 (excs) . . . 1223

(The) Voyevode 1223
We three 1223
Rudel, Jaufre
Belhs m'es l'estius el temps floritz 1290
Dansa 1290
Lanquan li jorn son lonc en may 1290
No sap chantar qui so non di 1290
Pro ai del chan essenhadors 1290
Quan lo rius de la fontana 1290
Quan lo rossinhols el follos 1290
Rutter, John
Be thou my vision 1215
Birthday Madrigals 1211
External God 1212
Feel the Spirit 1211
(The) Heavenly Aeroplane 1211
Hymn to the Creator of Light 1213, 1217
Loving Shepherd of Thy Sheep 1211
5 Traditional Songs 831
Saeverud, Harald
Peer Gynt Suite No 1 – Op 28 422
Peer Gynt Suite No 2 – Op 28 422
Tunes and Dances from Siljustøl: Suite No 2 – Op 22 (excs) 1186
Saint-Saëns, Camille
Allegro appassionato in B minor – Op 43 605
Caprice brillant 836
Carnival of the Animals (excs) 340, 605, 1168, 1181, 1189
Cello Concerto No 1 in A minor 340, 538, 1161
Clair de lune 413
Dans les coins bleus 413
Danse macabre in G minor – Op 40 836, 1179
(El) Desdichado 413
Etudes – Op 52 (excs) 834
Fantaisie – Op 124 836
Fantaisie in D flat – Op 101 1191, 1192
Fantaisie in E flat 1193
Fantasie after Weber's 'Oberon' 836
Havanaise in E – Op 83 710
Henry VIII (excs) 312
Introduction and Rondo capriccioso – Op 28 710, 1171
L'air de la pendule 836
Marche héroïque in E flat – Op 34 1166
Pastorale 413
Piano Concerto No 2 in G minor – Op 22 834
Piano Concerto No 4 in C minor – Op 44 834
Rêverie 413
Romance in D flat – Op 37 1180
(Le) Rossignol 413
(Le) Rouet d'Omphale in A 836, 1167, 1321
Samson et Dalila (excs) 1221, 1224, 1232, 1253, 1256, 1271, 1352
(Le) Soir descend sur la colline 413
Suite algérienne in C – Op 60 (excs) 1166
Symphony No 3, 'Organ' in C minor – Op 78 330, 836
(Le) Timbre d'argent (excs) 1240
Viens! 413
Wedding Cake in A flat – Op 76 605
Sammartini, Giuseppe
Concerto for Recorder and Strings in F 1103
Samuels, Homer
When Chloris sleeps 1237
Sancan, Pierre
Sonatine 1182
Sanderson, Wilfred
Until 1253
Sarasate, Pablo
Caprice basque – Op 24 1183
Concert Fantasy on Carmen – Op 25 340
Concert fantasy on 'Faust' (Gounod) 1179
Danzas españolas – Opp 21, 22, 23 and 26 (excs) 1202, 1210
Introduction and Tarantella – Op 43 1171
Zigeunerweisen – Op 20 340, 1171, 1181
Sargent, Malcolm
Impression of a Windy Day – Op 9 1165
Sarri, Domenico
Concerto for Recorder, Two Violins, Viola and Continuo in A minor 1176
Sarti, Giuseppe
Giulio Sabino (excs) 1245
Satie, Erik
Fête donnée par les Chevaliers Normands 730
Gnossiennes (excs) 730, 1174
Gymnopédies (excs) 1169, 1174
Je te veux 1238
Préludes du Nazaréen (excs) 730
(La) statue retrouvée 1181
Sauguet, Henri
Non morietur in aeternum 1181
Saunders, Max
(A) Cotswold Pastoral 1177
Sawhney, Nitin
Neural Circuits 1201
Urban Prophecies 1201
Scandello, Antonio
Vorria che tu cantass' 1300
Scarlatti, Domenico
Qual farfalletta amante 1245
Sonatas for Keyboard Nos 1–555 (excs) 436, 1176, 1195, 1203
Scarlatti, Alessandro
(La) Donna ancora è fedele (excs) 1227
Gia il sole al Gange 1256
L'Honestà negli amore (excs) 1227
Humanità e Lucifero 841
(Il) Pompeo (excs) 1227
Se Florindo è fedele 1245
Sonata for Recorder, Two Violins and Continuo in A minor 1176
Spesso vibra per suo gioco 1227
Stabat mater 722
(Le) Violette 1222
Schaefer,
The Cuckoo Clock 1256
Scheer, Gene
American Anthem 1241
At Howard Hanks' House 1241
Holding each other 1241
Lean Away 1241
Scheidt, Samuel
Galliard Battaglia a 4 1306
Pavane 1306
Schein, Johann Hermann
Psalm 116 1214
Schipa, Tito
A Cuba 1261
Ave Maria 1261
Schmelzer, Johann Heinrich
Sonata for Violin and Continuo 844
Sonatae unarum fidium (excs) 844, 845
Schmidt, Franz
Chaconne in C sharp minor 1192
Schnittke, Alfred
Concerto for Piano and Strings 1201
Concerto Grosso No 6 846
Piano Quintet 846
Piano Trio 935
Sonata for Violin and Chamber Orchestra 846
Sonata for Violin and Piano No 2 1162
Schoeck, Othmar
Das holde Bescheiden – Op 62 (excs) 1241
Lieder – Opp 10, 20, 30, 51 (excs) 1241
Schoenberg, Arnold
Gurrelieder (excs) 156
Klavierstück – Opp 33a/33b 143
Klavierstücke – Op 11 143, 850
Klavierstücke – Op 23 143
Klavierstücke – Op 19 143, 850
Piano Concerto – Op 42 850, 1189
Pierrot lunaire – Op 21 1329
Suite – Op 25 143
(A) Survivor from Warsaw – Op 46 1147
Verklärte Nacht – Op 4 850, 851, 865
Scholefield, Clement Cotterill
(The) Day thou gavest, Lord, is ended 1212, 1215
Schubert, Franz
Abendstern, 'Evening Star' – D806 1226
Am Grabe Anselmos – D504 1226

An den Mond – D296 ... 1270
An die Leier – D737 ... 1228
An die Musik – D547 ... 1224
An Silvia – D891 ... 1251
Atys – D585 ... 882
Auf dem Wasser zu singen – D774 ... 1264
Auflösung – D807 ... 1226
Ave Maria, 'Ellens Gesang III' – D839 ... 1258
(Der) Blinde Knabe – D833 ... 1225
Canzonen – D688 ... 1228, 1331
Claudine von Villa Bella – D239 (excs) ... 1225, 1263
Concertstück in D – D345 ... 869
Deutsche Tänze – D820 ... 1147, 1148
Didone abbandonata – D510 ... 1228
Du bist die Ruh – D776 ... 1263, 1264
Einsamkeit – D620 ... 882
(Der) Entfernten – D331 ... 1219
Erlkönig – D328 ... 1223, 1256
Fantasie in F minor – D940 ... 656
Fantasie in C – D934 ... 869
Fantasy, 'Wandererfantasie' in C – D760 ... 569, 1189
(Der) Fluss – D693 ... 882
(Die) Forelle – D550 ... 1263
Ganymed – D544 ... 1270
(Die) Gebüsche – D646 ... 882
Geheimes – D719 ... 1225, 1332
Gondelfahrer – D808 ... 1226
(Die) Götter Griechenlands – D677 ... 882, 1226
Gretchen am Spinnrade – D118 ... 1249, 1264, 1270
Heidenröslein – D257 ... 1225, 1264, 1266
Im Abendrot – D799 ... 1249
Im Freien – D880 ... 882
Im Haine – D738 ... 1228
Impromptus (excs) ... 688, 1171, 1190, 1198, 1201, 1205, 1326
(Der) Jüngling an der Quelle – D300 ... 1263
3 Klavierstücke – D946 ... 1189, 1198
Lachen und Weinen – D777 ... 1263
3 Marches Militaires – D733 (excs) ... 480
Mass No 6 in E flat – D950 ... 1074
5 Minuets and Trios – D89 ... 869
6 Moments musicaux – D780 (excs) ... 688, 1205
(Der) Musensohn – D764 ... 1264
Nacht und Träume – D827 ... 1264
Nähe des Geliebten – D162 ... 1225
Nur wer die Sehnsucht kennt (fourth version) – D877/4 1270
Octet in F – D803 ... 869
(La) Pastorella al Prato – D528 ... 1228, 1331
Pensa, che questo istante – D76 ... 1228
Piano Sonata No 1 in E – D157 ... 870
Piano Sonata No 12 in F minor – D625 ... 1198
Piano Sonata No 14 in A minor – D784 ... 480
Piano Sonata No 16 in A minor – D845 ... 1199
Piano Sonata No 18 in G – D894 ... 870
Polonaise in B flat – D580 ... 869
Psalm 23 – D706 ... 1216
Rastlose Liebe – D138 ... 1270
Rondo brillant in B minor – D895 ... 869
Rondo in A – D438 ... 617
Rosamunde, Fürstin von Zypern (excs) ... 535, 1169
(Die) schöne Müllerin (excs) ... 774, 1222, 1249, 1260
Schwanengesang (excs) ... 1238, 1239, 1258
Sehnsucht – D516 ... 882
Seligkeit – D433 ... 1225
Sonata for Arpeggione and Piano in A minor ... 397
Ständchen, 'Horch! Horch! die Lerch' ... 1244, 1266
String Quartet No 14, 'Death and the Maiden' ... 851
String Quartet No 15 in G – D887 ... 119
String Quintet in C – D956 ... 850, 864, 865
Suleika I – D720 ... 1270
Symphony No 4, 'Tragic' in C minor ... 899
Symphony No 5 in B flat ... 113
Symphony No 8, 'Unfinished' in B minor ... 557, 861, 950, 1325
Symphony No 9, 'Great' in C ... 861, 862
(Der) Tod und das Mädchen – D531 ... 1332
Totengräberweise – D869 ... 1225
'Trout' Piano Quintet – D667 ... 207, 863
13 Variations on 'Trockne Blumen' ... 869
Versunken – D715 ... 1270
Violin Sonata in A – D574 ... 869
Violin Sonata (Sonatina) in A minor – D385 ... 869
Violin Sonata (Sonatina) in D – D384 ... 869
Violin Sonata (Sonatina) in G minor – D408 ... 869
(Die) Vögel – D691 ... 1226, 1263
Wandrers Nachtlied II – D768 ... 1270
Wiegenlied – D498 ... 1249, 1258, 1263, 1264
Willkommen und Abschied – D767 ... 1228
Winterreise – D911 (excs) ... 1244, 1249, 1332

Schulhoff, Ervín
Sonata for Violin and Piano No 2 ... 1181
String Quartet No 1 ... 892

Schulz, Johann Abraham Peter
We plough the fields and scatter ... 1212, 1220

Schuman, William
Concerto for Violin and Orchestra ... 893
Mail Order Madrigals ... 81
New England Triptych ... 893, 1163
Perceptions ... 81

Schumann, Clara
Liebeszauber ... 910
Lieder – Op 12 (excs) ... 910
Lieder – Op 13 (excs) ... 909, 910
Lieder aus Jucunde – Op 23 (excs) ... 910, 911
Loreley ... 909
Piano Concerto in A minor ... 893
Volkslied ... 909

Schumann, Robert
Adagio and Allegro in A flat – Op 70 ... 894, 1182
Album für die Jugend – Op 68 (excs) ... 1202
Arabeske in C – Op 18 ... 1195, 1199
Belsatzar – Op 57 ... 909
Blumenstück in D flat – Op 19 ... 904
Bunte Blätter – Op 99 ... 1209
Carnaval – Op 9 ... 213, 1195, 1202, 1203
Cello Concerto in A minor ... 196, 339, 538, 894, 1161, 1171
Concert Studies on Caprices by Paganini (excs) ... 904
Dichterliebe – Op 48 ... 909, 1223, 1260, 1329
4 Doppelchörige Gesänge – Op 141 ... 1212
4 Duette – Op 78 (excs) ... 1249
4 Duette – Op 34 (excs) ... 1249
Etudes symphoniques – Op 13 ... 126, 777
Fantasie in C – Op 17 ... 569, 904, 1186
3 Fantasiestücke – Op 73 ... 894
8 Fantasiestücke – Op 12 ... 792, 1195
Faschingsschwank aus Wien – Op 26 ... 1203
Frauenliebe und -leben – Op 42 ... 1225, 1226, 1241
3 Gedichte – Op 30 (excs) ... 1225
12 Gedichte – Op 35 ... 910, 1249, 1250
12 Gedichte aus 'Liebesfrühling' (excs) ... 910, 1249
6 Gedichte und Requiem – Op 90 (excs) ... 1225
3 Gesänge – Op 31 (excs) ... 1249
3 Gesänge – Op 83 (excs) ... 1250
4 Gesänge – Op 142 (excs) ... 909
6 Gesänge – Op 107 (excs) ... 1250
10 Impromptus on a theme of Clara Wieck (excs) . 1171
Kinderszenen – Op 15 (excs) ... 209, 289, 292, 1171
Kreisleriana – Op 16 ... 43, 905, 1199
5 Lieder – Op 40 ... 911
6 Lieder – Op 33 (excs) ... 909
5 Lieder und Gesänge – Op 127 (excs) ... 909
Lieder und Gesänge aus Wilhelm Meister (excs) .. 1270
Lieder und Gesänge I – Op 27 (excs) ... 1250
Lieder und Gesänge II – Op 51 (excs) ... 1250, 1270
Lieder und Gesänge III – Op 77 (excs) ... 1250
Lieder und Gesänge IV – Op 96 (excs) ... 1270
Liederkreis – Op 24 ... 498
Liederkreis – Op 39 (excs) ... 1230, 1249
Märchenerzählungen – Op 132 ... 209
4 Marches – Op 76 (excs) ... 904
Mass in C minor – Op 147 ... 894
Myrthen – Op 25 (excs) ... 909, 910, 1222, 1223, 1238, 1249, 1258, 1263
4 Nachtstücke – Op 23 ... 904
8 Novelletten – Op 21 (excs) ... 904
Papillons – Op 2 ... 292
Piano Concerto in A minor ... 341, 421, 422, 893, 896
Piano Quartet in E flat – Op 47 ... 116

- Piano Sonata No 2 in G minor – Op 22 . . . 559
- Piano Trio No 1 in D minor – Op 63 . . . 901
- Presto passionato in G minor . . . 1195
- 3 Romanzen – Op 28 (excs) . . . 422
- Romanzen und Balladen II – Op 49 (excs) . . 909, 1223, 1332
- Romanzen und Balladen III/IV – Opp 53/64 (excs) . 909
- Spanische Liebeslieder – Op 138 . . . 911
- Spanisches Liederspiel – Op 74 . . . 911
- String Quartet No 1 in A minor – Op 41/1 . . . 423
- String Quartet No 3 in A – Op 41/3 . . . 473
- 5 Stücke im Volkston – Op 102 . . . 307, 894, 1179
- 6 Studies – Op 56 (excs) . . . 1194
- Symphony No 1, 'Spring' in B flat – Op 38 . . . 202
- Symphony No 2 in C – Op 61 . . . 1173
- Symphony No 4 in D minor – Op 120 . . . 899
- Toccata in C – Op 7 . . . 1195
- Violin Concerto in D minor . . . 194, 895, 1162
- Waldszenen – Op 82 (excs) . . . 422

Schütz, Heinrich
- Erbarm dich mein, O Herre Gott – SWV447 . . . 1229
- Geistliche Chormusik – SWV369-97 (excs) . . . 1214
- Kleiner geistlichen Concerten, Anderer Theil – SWV306-337 (excs) . . . 1262
- Selig sind die Toten . . . 1213
- Symphoniae sacrae – SWV341-367 (excs) . . . 1262

Scott, John Douglas
- Think on me . . . 1224

Scott, Cyril
- Handelian Rhapsody . . . 418
- 2 Pieces – Op 47 (excs) . . . 535, 536
- 3 Symphonic Dances . . . 417

Scott, John Gavin
- Easter Anthem . . . 1218

Scriabin, Alexander
- 2 Danses – Op 73 . . . 935
- 8 Etudes – Op 42 (excs) . . . 1200
- 12 Etudes – Op 8 (excs) . . . 1179
- Fantasie in B minor – Op 28 . . . 935
- 9 Mazurkas – Op 25 (excs) . . . 1200
- Piano Concerto in F sharp minor . . . 916
- Piano Sonata No 5 in F sharp – Op 53 . . . 747, 1207
- Piano Sonata No 9, 'Black Mass' in F – Op 68 . . . 746
- Piano Sonata No 10 in C – Op 70 . . . 1209
- 2 Pieces – Op 59 (excs) . . . 918
- 2 Pieces – Op 57 (excs) . . . 1209
- 3 Pieces – Opp 45 and 49 (excs) . . . 918
- 3 Pieces – Opp 2 and 52 (excs) . . . 1209
- 4 Pieces – Opp 51 and 56 (excs) . . . 918
- (Le) Poème de l'extase – Op 54 . . . 997
- Poème tragique in B flat – Op 34 . . . 1193
- Poème-nocturne – Op 61 . . . 935
- 2 Poèmes – Op 71 . . . 1193
- 2 Poèmes – Op 32 (excs) . . . 1203
- 2 Preludes – Opp 27 and 67 . . . 918
- 3 Preludes – Op 35 . . . 918
- 4 Preludes – Opp 22, 31, 33, 37, 39, 48 . . . 918
- 5 Preludes – Op 74 . . . 918
- Prometheus, 'Le poeme du feu' – Op 60 . . . 917
- Vers la flamme – Op 72 . . . 935

Scriabin, Julian
- Preludes – Opp 2, 3/1 3/2 . . . 918
- Prelude in D flat . . . 918

Senfl, Ludwig
- Elslein à 4 . . . 1309
- Entlaubet ist der Walde . . .
- Es taget: Eielein à 4 . . . 1309
- Es taget vor dem walde . . . 1309
- Exemplum . . . 1309
- Ich stuend an einem Morgen I . . . 1309
- Ich stünd am Morgen...Es taget...Kein Adler . . . 1309
- Pacientia muss ich han . . . 1309
- Quattour . . . 1309
- Von edler Art spieb ich in Bart . . . 1292
- Will niemand singen . . . 1309

Sermisy, Claudin de
- Aupres de vous à 2 voix, à 4 voix . . . 1281
- Hau, hau, hau le boys! . . . 1281
- La, la Maistre Pierre . . . 1296
- Las, je m'y plains, mauldicte soit fortune . . . 1301
- Tant que vivray en eage florissant . . . 1296, 1311
- Venez, regrets . . . 1296

Serov, Alexander
- Judith . . . 1223

Serrano, José
- (La) Alegría del batallón (excs) . . . 1248
- Alma de Dios (excs) . . . 1248
- (La) Dolorosa (excs) . . . 1248

Sfakianakis, A
- Dourou-dourou . . . 1265

Shaw, Martin
- Hills of the North, rejoice . . . 1220

Shchedrin, Rodion
- Balalaika . . . 1208
- Echo Sonata . . . 1208

Shearing, George
- Songs and Sonnets from Shakespeare . . . 1211

Shephard, Richard
- Salisbury Service . . . 1219

Sheppard, John
- Audivi vocem de caelo . . . 1213
- In manus tuas I . . . 1211

Shield, William
- 6 String Quartets – Op 3 (excs) . . . 1178

Shostakovich, Dmitry
- Cello Concerto No 1 in E flat – Op 107 . . . 1322
- Concerto for Piano, Trumpet and Strings in C minor – Op 35 . . . 931, 1186
- Jazz Suite No 2 . . . 1324
- Lady Macbeth of the Mtsensk District . . . 1192
- Piano Trios Nos 1 and 2 . . . 935
- 24 Preludes and Fugues – Op 87 (excs) . . . 834, 935
- String Quartet No 3 in F – Op 73 . . . 473
- String Quartet No 8 in C minor – Op 110 . . 185, 1177
- String Quartet No 15 in E flat minor – Op 144 . . . 846
- Symphony No 1 in F minor . . . 931
- Symphony No 4 in C minor . . . 928
- Symphony No 5 in D minor . . . 1325
- Symphony No 8 in C minor . . . 930
- Symphony No 10 in E minor . . . 931
- Violin Concerto No 1 in A minor – Op 77 . . . 923, 924

Sibelius, Jean
- Finlandia – Op 26 . . . 422
- Legends, 'Lemminkäinen Suite' – Op 22 (excs) . . . 422
- 5 Songs – Op 37 (excs) . . . 1230, 1231
- 6 Songs – Opp 17, 36 (excs) . . . 1231
- 6 Songs – Op 36 . . . 1248
- Symphony No 5 in E flat . . . 948
- Symphony No 7 in C . . . 557, 950, 1170
- Tapiola – Op 112 . . . 1167
- Valse triste – Op 44/1 . . . 422
- Violin Concerto in D minor . . . 693, 939, 940, 1023, 1162, 1169

Sibella, Gabriele
- (La) Farfalletta . . . 1261
- (La) Girometta . . . 1261

Simon, Anton
- Song of love triumphant – Op 46 . . . 1223

Simons, Moisés
- Toi c'est moi (excs) . . . 1240

Simpson, Christopher
- Divisions on a Ground in F and G . . . 1317
- Divisions on a Ground/Prelude . . . 1184

Sjöberg, Carl
- Tonerna (Visions) . . . 1231, 1249

Sjögren, Emil
- 6 Lieder from Wolff's 'Tannhäuser' (excs) . . . 1255

Smert, Richard
- Jesu fili Dei . . . 1286
- Nowell, Nowell: The boaris head . . . 1292

Smetana, Bedrich
- (The) Bartered Bride (excs) . . . 1167, 1224, 1258, 1267
- (The) Kiss – T115 (excs) . . . 1240
- Má vlast (excs) . . . 347

Sodero, Cesare
- Crisantemi . . . 1254

Sokolovsky, Marek
- By the blue sea . . . 1223

Soler, Antonio
- Fandango . . . 1206

Somers-Cocks, J P
3 Sketches (excs) 1177
Somervell, Arthur
Shepherd's cradle song 1266
To Lucasta, on going to the Wars 1231
Sondheim, Stephen
Anyone Can Whistle (excs) 1270
Evening Primrose (excs) 1270
(The) Girls of Summer (excs) 1270
Merrily We Roll Along (excs) 1270
Saturday Night (excs) 1270
Sor, Fernando
Fantasia No 2 – Op 7 1188
6 Short Pieces – Op 5 (excs) 1188
Sonata for Guitar in C, 'Grand Sonata I' (excs) 1188
24 Studies, 'Leçons progressives' – Op 31 (excs) 1188
Sorabji, Kaikhosru
Pasticcio capriccioso sopra l'Op 64 1207
Pastiche on Hindu Song from 'Sadko' 1193
3 Pastiches (excs) 1207
Sowerby, Leo
I was glad 1220
Spicer, Paul
Kiwi Fireworks – Variations on 'God defend New Zealand' 1194
Spinacino, Francesco
Adieu mes amours 522
Recercare 1311
Spohr, Louis
Clarinet Concerto No 1 in C minor – Op 26 646
6 Lieder – Op 154 1254
Spontini, Gaspare
(La) Vestale (excs) 1232
Spross, Charles Gilbert
Will-o-the-Wisp 1256
Stainer, John
Lord Jesus think on me 1220
Stanchinsky, Alexey
Canon a 4 voci 1185
Sonata No 2 in G 1185
Stanford, Charles Villiers
(La) Belle Dame sans merci 1226, 1231
(The) Bluebird 1212
Clarinet Concerto in A minor – Op 80 379
Clarinet Sonata – Op 129 1182
Fantasia and Toccata in D minor – Op 57 1192
For all the Saints 1220
From the red rose 1250
4 Irish Dances – Op 89 (excs) 417, 418
(An) Irish Idyll in six miniatures (excs) 1242, 1266
3 Motets – Op 38 (excs) 1211, 1334
Organ Sonata No 3, 'Britannica' – Op 152 1189
8 Partsongs – Op 119 (excs) 1216
Psalms 147, 149 and 150 1218
Quick! we have but a second 1212
Services in G – Op 81 (excs) 1218
Services in C – Op 115 (excs) 1219
Services in B flat – Op 10 (excs) 1334
(A) Sheaf of Songs from Leinster – Op 140 (excs) 1242
Songs of a roving Celt – Op 157 1242
50 Songs of Old Ireland (excs) 1231
Symphony No 3, 'Irish' in F minor – Op 28 963
Stanley & Allen
Cabbages, Cabeans and Carrots 1250
Statham, Heathcote
Lament 1191
Stella, Scipione
Seconda breve Canzon 1316
Stenhammar, Wilhelm
(The) Girl came home from her tryst – Op 4b/1 1231
I skogen 1231
Serenade in F – Op 31 199
(4) Songs (excs) 1255
Songs and Moods – Op 26 (excs) 1255
(5) Songs of Bo Bergman – Op 20 (excs) 1231
Sverige 1231
(4) Swedish Songs – Op 16 (excs) 1231
Stewart, Charles Hylton
Psalm 106 1218
Psalm 142 1218
Stewart, Haldane Campbell
On this day earth shall ring 1211
Stockhem, Johannes
Je suis d'Alemagne 1291
Stokem, Johannes de
Brunette 1283
Stolz, Robert
Auf der Heide blüh'n die letzten Rosen, 'On the 1242
Mein Herz ruft nach dir 1242
Trauminsel (excs) 1242
Wien wird schön erst bei Nacht – Op 216 1242
Stolzer, Thomas
Entlaubet ist der Walde 1309
Stone, Robert
(The) Lord's Prayer 1211
Storace, Stephen
(The) Pretty creature 1271
Stornello,
Capelli d'oro 1258
Strachey, Jack
In a Party Mood 1165
Theatreland 1165
Straus, Oscar
(Der) Tapfere Soldat (excs) 1256
Strauss, Eduard
Ohne Aufenthalt – Op 112 969
Strauss, Franz Joseph
Nocturno – Op 7 1182
Strauss, Johann I
Beliebte Annen – Op 137 971, 1324
Chinese Galop – Op 20 969, 1174
Eisele und Beisele Sprünge – Op 202 971
Radetzky March – Op 228 969, 1174, 1324
Wiener Gemüths – Op 116 971
Strauss, Johann II
Accelerationen, 'Accelerations' – Op 234 1324
Albion–Polka – Op 102 969
An der schönen, blauen Donau, 'Blue Danube' – Op 314 969, 1174, 1244, 1256, 1324
Bauern-Polka, 'Peasants' Polka' – Op 276 1174, 1324
Bei uns z'Haus, 'With us, at home' – Op 361 1324
Carnevals-Botschafter, 'Carnival's ambassador' 1324
Casanova (excs) 1237, 1266
Csardas 969
Egyptischer Marsch – Op 335 969
Elisen – Op 151 969, 1174, 1324
Eljen a Magyar! – Op 332 969, 1324
(Die) Fledermaus (excs) 969, 1166, 1174, 1235, 1244, 1245, 1254, 1259, 1324, 1352
Freikugeln, 'Magic bullets' – Op 326 969
Frühlingsstimmen – Op 410 1244, 1324
Furioso – Op 260 1174
Geisselhiebe, 'Whiplashes' – Op 60 969
Gruss an Prag 969
G'schichten aus dem Wienerwald – Op 325 1244
Hellenen – Op 203 969, 1174
Im Krapfenwald'l – Op 336 1324
Jubelfest–Marsch – Op 396 969
Kaiser – Op 437 1251
Kaiser, 'Emperor' – Op 437 969, 971, 1166, 1174
Kaiser Franz Joseph-Jubiläums–Marsch 1174
Klipp Klapp – Op 466 969
Krönungslieder – Op 184 1174
Künstler-Quadrille – Op 71 969
Kunstlergruss 969
Künstlerleben – Op 316 969, 1174, 1324
Lagunen–Walzer – Op 411 969
Leichtes Blut – Op 319 1174
Liebeslieder – Op 114 969
Lob der Frauen – Op 315 1174
(Der) Lustige Krieg 1248, 1332
Marienklange 969
Mit Extrapost 969
(Eine) Nacht in Venedig (excs) 1242, 1248
Niko-Polka – Op 228 1174
Perpetuum mobile – Op 257 969, 1166, 1324
Persischer Marsch – Op 289 969
Pizzicato Polka 1324
Process – Op 294 969
Ritter Pasman – Op 441 1324

Schatz – Op 418 ... 971, 1174
Scherz-Polka – Op 72 ... 1174
Sekunden, 'Seconds' – Op 258 ... 1174
Tik–Tak (on motives from 'Die Fledermaus') ... 969, 1174, 1324
Tritsch-Tratsch – Op 214 ... 969, 1166
Vom Donaustrande – Op 356 ... 969
Wein, Weib und Gesang – Op 333 ... 969, 971
Wiener Blut – Op 354 ... 969, 1174, 1324
(Der) Zigeunerbaron (excs) ... 1242, 1248, 1258, 1259
Zivio! – Op 456 ... 969, 1174, 1324
Strauss, Josef
Aquarellen-Walzer – Op 258 ... 969, 1174, 1324
Arm in Arm – Op 215 ... 1324
Delirien – Op 212 ... 1174
Im Fluge – Op 230 ... 1324
Jokey – Op 278 ... 969, 1324
(Die) Libelle – Op 204 ... 969, 1174, 1324
Moulinet – Op 57 ... 1324
Pêle-mêle – Op 161 ... 1174
Plappermäulchen – Op 245 ... 969, 1174, 1324
(Die) Schwätzerin – Op 144 ... 969, 1174, 1324
Sphären-Klänge – Op 235 ... 969
Vorwärts! – Op 127 ... 969, 1174, 1324
Strauss, Richard
Arabella – Op 79 (excs) ... 981
Ariadne auf Naxos – Op 60 (excs) ... 981, 1245
Begegnung – AV72 ... 595
Capriccio – Op 85 (excs) ... 381, 724
Horn Concerto No 1 in E flat – Op 11 ... 975
Horn Concerto No 2 in E flat – AV132 ... 975
Concerto for Oboe and Orchestra in D – AV144 ... 649
Daphne – Op 82 (excs) ... 1236
Don Juan – Op 20 ... 977
Don Quixote – Op 35 ... 355
Elektra – Op 58 (excs) ... 1251
Feuersnot – Op 50 (excs) ... 724
Four Last Songs ... 980, 981
Guntram – Op 25 (excs) ... 724
(Ein) Heldenleben – Op 40 ... 976, 977
5 Kleine Lieder – Op 69 (excs) ... 1264, 1332
3 Lieder – Op 29 (excs) ... 595
3 Lieder – Op 88 (excs) ... 676
3 Lieder – Op 29 (excs) ... 1267
4 Lieder – Op 36 (excs) ... 144
4 Lieder – Op 27 (excs) ... 595
4 Lieder – Op 36 (excs) ... 676
4 Lieder – Op 27 (excs) ... 676, 1225, 1226, 1230, 1235, 1263
4 Lieder – Op 36 (excs) ... 1264
4 Lieder – Op 27 (excs) ... 1267, 1332
5 Lieder – Opp 32, 39 and 46 (excs) ... 144
5 Lieder – Opp 32 and 41 (excs) ... 676
5 Lieder – Op 39 (excs) ... 1225, 1226
5 Lieder – Op 48 (excs) ... 1258
5 Lieder – Op 41 (excs) ... 1263
6 Lieder – Op 37 (excs) ... 144, 595
6 Lieder – Op 17 (excs) ... 1255, 1258, 1267
8 Lieder aus Letzte Blätter – Op 10 (excs) ... 595, 1238, 1263, 1332
6 Lieder aus Lotusblättern – Op 19 (excs) ... 144, 595
Metamorphosen – AV142 ... 591
Der Rosenkavalier – Av112 ... 1166
Der Rosenkavalier – Op 59 (excs) ... 1230, 1267
Salome – Op 54 (excs) ... 1324
(Die) schweigsame Frau – Op 80 (excs) ... 1243, 1257
Till Eulenspiegels lustige Streiche – Op 28 ... 1325
Violin Sonata in E flat – Op 18 ... 979
Stravinsky, Igor
Agon ... 992
Canon on a Russian Popular Tune ... 992
Circus Polka ... 992
Concertino ... 992
Concerto for Violin and Orchestra in D ... 83, 142
Concerto in D ... 505
Divertimento ... 979
Ebony Concerto ... 1173
4 Etudes – Op 7 (excs) ... 289
(The) Firebird ... 917
Greeting Prelude 'Happy Birthday to you' ... 992
(Les) Noces ... 998
Ode ... 992
Pastorale ... 1222
Petrushka ... 1189, 1195, 1205, 1207
Piano–Rag Music ... 1185
(The) Rake's Progress ... 81, 1236, 1246
(The) Rite of Spring ... 687, 745, 997
Scènes de ballet ... 992
Scherzo à la Russe ... 992
Souvenir d'une marche boche ... 1185
Summer Moon ... 1251
Valse pour les enfants ... 1185
Variations 'Aldous Huxley in memoriam' ... 992
Strogers, Nicholas
In Nomines a 5 (excs) ... 1306
In Nomines a 6 (excs) ... 1306
Strozzi, Barbara
Sul Rodano severo ... 1306
Strozzi, Gregorio
Toccata per l'Elevazione ... 1316
Stuck, Jean-Baptiste
(Les) Festes bolonnoises ... 1309
Stucky, Steven
Whispers ... 1212
Sturgeon, ?Nicholas
Salve mater domini/Salve templum domini ... 1283
Suk, Josef
Fantasy in G minor – Op 24 ... 341
Sullivan, Arthur
Cello Concerto in D ... 1003
(The) Contrabandista (or The Law of the Ladrones) (excs) ... 1237
(The) Long day closes ... 1216
(The) Lost chord ... 1239
(The) Mikado (excs) ... 1246
Overture di ballo ... 1003
Symphony in E, 'Irish' ... 1003
Suppé, Franz von
Boccaccio (excs) ... 1259
(Ein) Morgen, ein Mittag, ein Abend in Wien, 'Morn (excs) ... 969, 1170, 1175
Pique Dame (excs) ... 1170
Surplice, Alwyn
Brightest and best of the sons of the morning ... 1217
Sweelinck, Jan Pieterszoon
Ballo del granduca – Sw3/1 ... 1193
Szymanowski, Karol
Demeter – Op 37b ... 1009
Litany to the Virgin Mary – Op 59 ... 1009
Mandragora – Op 43 ... 1009
Stabat Mater – Op 53 ... 1009
Violin Concerto Nos 1and 2 ... 1009
Violin Sonata in D minor – Op 9 ... 746
Takemitsu, Toru
(A) Bird came down the Walk ... 1182
Nostalghia ... 846
To the Edge of Dream ... 21
Talbot, George
Psalm 150 ... 1218
Tallis, Thomas
Glory to Thee, my God ... 1212
If ye love me ... 1219
In manus tuas ... 1317
Lamentations of Jeremiah ... 1014
(A) New commandment ... 1219
O Lord, in thee is all my trust ... 1183
O nata lux de lumine ... 1211, 1213, 1317
Salvator mundi, salva nos I ... 1317
Spem in alium ... 1177
Te lucis ante terminum I ... 1213
Tan Dun
YI2 ... 1014
Tarragó, Graciano
Parado de Valldemosa ... 1222
Tartini, Giuseppe
Violin Sonata, 'Devil's Trill' ... 1016, 1179, 1202
Tauber, Richard
(Der) Singende Traum (excs) ... 1242
Taubert, Carl
Es steht ein Baum in jenem Tal ... 1258

- Tavener, John
  - (The) Bridegroom . . . 1276
  - Come and do Your will in me . . . 1276
  - Funeral Ikos . . . 411, 1213
  - Hymn for the Dormition of the Mother of God . . . 1211
  - (2) Hymns to the Mother of God . . . 1211
  - I will lift up mine eyes . . . 1218
  - (The) Lamb, 'Little Lamb, who made thee?' . . . 1216
  - (The) Lord's Prayer . . . 1276
  - Magnificat . . . 411
  - Nunc dimittis . . . 411
  - (As) One who has slept . . . 1276
  - (The) Protecting Veil . . . 1017
  - Thrinos . . . 1017
- Taverner, John
  - Audivi vocem . . . 1021
  - Christe Jesu, pastor bone . . . 1211
  - Missa Corona spinea . . . 1021
  - Missa Gloria tibi Trinitas . . . 1311
  - Quemadmodum . . . 1306
- Taylor, Cyril V.
  - Glorious things of Thee are spoken . . . 1215
- Tchaikovsky, Pyotr Il'yich
  - Andante cantabile – Op 11 . . . 355, 1171, 1172
  - Capriccio Italien – Op 45 . . . 551, 1024, 1169
  - Cherevichki – Op 4 . . . 1223
  - 6 Duets – Op 46 (excs) . . . 214
  - Dumka – Op 59 . . . 1197
  - (The) Enchantress (excs) . . . 1036, 1223
  - Eugene Onegin (excs) . . . 551, 1036, 1221, 1223, 1233, 1236, 1254, 1259, 1265, 1267
  - Iolanta (excs) . . . 1223
  - (The) Maid of Orleans (excs) . . . 1224, 1271
  - Marche slave – Op 31 . . . 551
  - Mazeppa (excs) . . . 1221
  - 2 Morceaux – Op 10 (excs) . . . 1197
  - Nocturne in D minor – Op 19/4 . . . 355, 1168
  - (The) Nutcracker – Op 71 . . . 401
  - (The) Nutcracker – Op 71a . . . 1207
  - Oprichnik . . . 1036, 1223
  - Overture, 1812 – Op 49 . . . 1024, 1169
  - Pezzo capriccioso in B minor – Op 62 . . . 339, 355
  - Piano Concerto No 1 in B flat minor – Op 23 . 772, 916
  - Piano Trio in A minor – Op 50 . . . 1035
  - (The) Queen of Spades (excs) . . . 1036, 1223, 1251
  - 9 Sacred Pieces (excs) . . . 1213
  - (The) Seasons – Op 37b (excs) . . . 746
  - Sérénade mélancolique in B minor – Op 26 . . . 742
  - 6 Songs – Op 16 (excs) . . . 774
  - 6 Songs – Op 38 (excs) . . . 1172
  - 6 Songs – Opp 38 and 63 (excs) . . . 1223
  - 6 Songs – Op 6 (excs) . . . 1223, 1256, 1258
  - 7 Songs – Op 47 (excs) . . . 1242
  - 12 Songs – Op 60 (excs) . . . 1223
  - Souvenir de Florence – Op 70 . . . 1034
  - Souvenir d'un lieu cher – Op 42 (excs) . 741, 1171, 1183
  - String Quartet No 1 in D – Op 11 . . . 185, 535
  - Swan Lake – Op 20 . . . 1197
  - Symphony No 5 in E minor . . . 1169, 1170, 1325
  - Symphony No 6, 'Pathétique' in B minor (excs) . . . 1209
  - Valse-scherzo in C – Op 34 . . . 1181
  - Variations on a Rococo Theme . . . 339, 340, 355, 1171
  - Vesper Service – Op 52 . . . 1213
  - Violin Concerto in D . . 106, 195, 691, 939, 940, 1023, . . . 1162, 1169, 1325
- Telemann, Georg Philipp
  - Musique de table, 'Tafelmusik' (excs) . . . 440
  - Suite in A minor – TWV55: a 2 . . . 1103
- Tessier, Guillaume
  - In a grove most rich of shade . . . 328
- Thiago de Mello, Gaudencio
  - Cavaleiro sem Armadura . . . 1183
  - Chants for the Chief (excs) . . . 1183
  - (A) Hug for Pixingha . . . 1183
  - (A) Hug for Tiberio . . . 1183
  - Lago de Janaucá . . . 1183
- Thibault de Champagne,
  - Aussi come unicorne sui . . . 1290
  - Chançon ferai, que talenz m'en est pris . . . 1290
  - Dieus est ensi conme est li pelicans . . . 1290
- Thieme, Clemens
  - Sonata in E minor . . . 1176
  - Sonata in D minor . . . 1176
- Thomas, Ambroise
  - Hamlet (excs) . . . 1232, 1255, 1267
  - Mignon (excs) . . . 1166, 1221, 1223, 1232, 1235, 1237, 1253, 1261, 1265, 1267, 1269
- Thomas, Arthur Goring
  - Esmeralda (excs) . . . 1224
  - Ma voisine . . . 1232
- Thomsen, Magnus
  - Toccata I . . . 385
- Thomson, Virgil
  - Capital Capitals . . . 81
  - Stabat Mater . . . 81
- Thrupp, Joseph Francis
  - Brightest and best of the sons of the morning . . . 1220
- Tippett, Michael
  - Boyhood's End . . . 1049
  - (The) Heart's Assurance . . . 1049
  - Music . . . 1049
  - Songs for Achilles . . . 1049
  - Songs for Ariel . . . 1049
  - String Quartet No 5 . . . 1049
- Tjeknavorian, Loris
  - Ballet fantastique – Op 2 . . . 528
- Toldrá, Eduardo
  - 6 Canciones (excs) . . . 1223
  - 4 Cançons (excs) . . . 1222
- Tomasi, Henri
  - Semaine Sainte à Cuzco . . . 1181
- Tomkins, Thomas
  - O let me live for true love . . . 1301
  - O sing unto the Lord a new song . . . 1220
  - Voluntary . . . 1193
  - When David heard . . . 1211, 1220
- Torelli, Giuseppe
  - Sonata a 5 con tromba – G7 . . . 1162, 7432
- Tormis, Veljo
  - Estonian Lullaby: I sing for my child . . . 1183
- Torrejón y Velasco, Tomás de
  - A este sol peregrino . . . 1315
  - Cuando el bien que adoro . . . 1315
  - Desvelado dueño mio . . . 1315
- Tosti, Paolo
  - 'A Vucchella . . . 1256
  - Addio . . . 1233, 1239
  - (L')alba separa dalla luce l'ombra . . . 1256
  - Chanson de l'adieu . . . 1256
  - Dopo . . . 1255
  - Goodbye . . . 1256
  - Luna d'estate . . . 1256
  - Malià . . . 1256
  - Marechiare . . . 1256
  - Non t'amo più! . . . 1245, 1256
  - Penso . . . 1223
  - (Il) segreto . . . 1223
  - (La) serenata . . . 1223, 1240, 1256
  - Si tu le voulais . . . 1223
  - L'ultima canzone . . . 1256
- Tournemire, Charles
  - Suite évocatrice – Op 74 . . . 1054
- Tovey, Donald Francis
  - Piano Concerto in A – Op 15 . . . 574
- Trabaci, Giovanni Maria
  - Canzone francese . . . 1316
  - Consonanze stravaganti . . . 1316
  - (2) Galliards a 5 (excs) . . . 1316
- Trouluffe, John
  - Nesciens mater . . . 1292
- Troyte, A H D
  - Sunset Poem (Eli Jenkins' Prayer) . . . 1268
- Tsintsadze, Sulkhan Fyodorovich
  - 5 Pieces on Folk Themes . . . 1172
- Turina, Joaquín
  - Fandanguillo – Op 36 . . . 1188
  - Hommage à Tárrega – Op 69 . . . 1188
  - Poema en forma de canciones – Op 19 (excs) . . . 1223
  - 3 Poemas – Op 81 (excs) . . . 1222
  - Ráfaga – Op 53 . . . 1188

  - Rapsodia sinfónica – Op 66 369
  - Saeta en forme de Salve a la Virgen de la Esperanz – Op 60 1223
  - Tríptico – Op 45 (excs) 1223
- Turle, James
  - Psalm 109 1218
  - Psalm 110 1218
- Tveitt, Geirr
  - 50 Folk–tunes from Hardanger – Op 150 (excs) . . 1186
- Tye, Christopher
  - In Nomines (excs) 1310
  - Omnes gentes, plaudite 1317
  - Sit fast 1310
- Urreda, Johannes
  - Nunca fué pena major 1289
  - Pange lingua 1304
  - Tiento para órgano 1304
- Valderrábano, Enríquez de
  - De dónde venís, amore? 1222
  - Señora, si te olvidare 1222
- Valente, Antonio
  - Intavolatura di Cimbalo (excs) 1280, 1288, 1305
  - Tenore del passo e mezzo con sei mutanze 1317
- Valverde, Joaquín
  - Clavelitos 1222, 1223, 1232, 1237, 1256
- Vann, Stanley
  - Psalm 113 1218
- Vasquez, Juan
  - A, hermosa, abrime cara de rosa 1279
  - Buscad buen amor 1279
  - Con qué la lavaré 1279
  - De los álamos vengo 1279
  - En la fuente del rosel 1279
  - Morenica, dame un beso 1222
  - O dulce contemplación 1279
  - Si no os uviera mirado 1279
  - Soledad tengo de tí 1279
  - Torna, Mingo, a namorarte 1279
- Vaughan Williams, Ralph
  - Ca' the Yowes 1216
  - 5 English Folksongs 831
  - (The) English Hymnal (excs) 1215
  - Fantasia on a Theme by Thomas Tallis 358
  - Fantasia on 'Greensleeves' 358, 1066
  - (The) House of Life (excs) 1231, 1242
  - In the Fen Country 502
  - It is a thing most wonderful 1220
  - Job 1141
  - (The) Lark ascending 356, 1169
  - Linden Lea 716, 1226, 1231
  - Mass in G minor 508, 1068
  - 5 Mystical Songs (excs) 1334
  - Norfolk Rhapsody No 1 502
  - O vos omnes 1211
  - Oboe Concerto in A minor 1066
  - On Wenlock Edge 1069
  - Orpheus with his lute 1242
  - Piano Concerto in C 1061, 1067
  - 3 Shakespeare Songs 1212, 1216
  - Songs of Travel 716, 1069
  - 6 Studies in English folk song 1182
  - Symphony No 2, 'A London Symphony' 1063
  - Symphony No 5 in D 1064
  - Symphony No 7, 'Sinfonia antartica' 1066
  - Te Deum in G 508, 1068
  - Tuba Concerto in F minor 1066
  - (The) Turtle Dove 1216
  - 5 Variants of 'Dives and Lazarus' 502, 1066
  - 3 Vocalises 1182
  - (The) Wasps (excs) 1066
- Venzano, Luigi
  - O che assorta in dolce incanto, 'Grande Valse' . . . 1269
- Veracini, Francesco Maria
  - Rosalinda (excs) 1269
  - 12 Sonatas, 'Sonate accademiche' – Op 2 (excs) . . . 1299
- Verdi, Giuseppe
  - Aida (excs) . . 1036, 1223, 1229, 1233, 1250, 1253, 1258, 1259, 1265, 1267, 1268
  - Attila (excs) 1259, 1266
  - (Un) ballo in maschera (excs) . . 1224, 1229, 1253, 1259, 1265, 1268, 1269
  - Don Carlo (excs) . . 1223, 1224, 1229, 1234, 1243, 1268, 1271, 1332
  - Don Carlos (excs) 1255
  - Ernani (excs) 727, 1223, 1234, 1253, 1255, 1258
  - Falstaff (excs) 1224, 1255, 1269, 1335
  - La forza del destino (excs) 727, 1036, 1234, 1250, 1253, 1254, 1258, 1265, 1267, 1268, 1269, 1325
  - I Lombardi alla prima crociata (excs) . . 727, 1254, 1259
  - Luisa Miller (excs) 1261
  - Macbeth (excs) 1233, 1269, 1271
  - Messa da Requiem 251, 1074
  - Nabucco (excs) 1234, 1252
  - Otello (excs) 1036, 1229, 1232, 1236, 1237, 1253, 1255, 1258, 1259, 1267, 1268
  - Quattro pezzi sacri (excs) 1252
  - Rigoletto (excs) . . . 1223, 1224, 1229, 1232, 1233, 1237, 1245, 1250, 1251, 1254, 1256, 1261, 1266, 1267, 1269
  - 6 Romanze (excs) 1245
  - Simon Boccanegra (excs) 1224, 1234, 1237, 1251
  - (La) traviata (excs). 1223, 1229, 1232, 1237, 1244, 1251, 1253, 1254, 1261, 1264, 1266, 1267, 1268, 1269, 1325, 1352
  - (Il) trovatore (excs) 1036, 1223, 1229, 1232, 1233, 1250, 1253, 1254, 1258, 1267, 1268, 1269, 1271
  - (I) Vespri siciliani (excs) 1074, 1223, 1234, 1252, 1253, 1254, 1258, 1269
- Verstovsky, Alexey Nikolayevich
  - Askold's Grave 1223
- Viardot-Garcia, Pauline
  - (Les) Filles de Cadix 1227
  - Hai luli! 1227, 1228, 1331
  - Havanaise 1227, 1228, 1331
- Victoria, Tomás Luis de
  - Magnificat sexti toni 1304
  - Nunc dimittis 1219
  - O magnum mysterium 1219
  - O quam gloriosum 1213, 1317
  - O vos omnes, qui transitis per viam 1219
  - Salve regina 1304
  - Tu es Petrus 1304
- Vierdanck, Johann
  - Capriccio in D minor 1175
  - Capriccio mit 2 cornettinen oder violinen 1175
- Vierne, Louis
  - Symphony No 3 in F sharp minor 1054
- Vieuxtemps, Henry
  - Violin Concerto No 5 in A minor – Op 37 539
  - Souvenir d'Amérique on 'Yankee Doodle' 1178
- Vilboa, Konstantin Petrovich
  - (The) Seafarers 1223
- Villa-Lobos, Heitor
  - Bachianas brasileiras No 5 . . . . 267, 1180, 1259
  - O Canto do capadócio 1179
  - Concerto for Guitar and Orchestra 809
  - Modinha 1180
  - 5 Preludes 1188
  - 14 Serestas (excs) 1265
- Vitali, Tomaso Antonio
  - Ciacona in G minor 1016
- Vivaldi, Antonio
  - Cessate, omai cessate – RV684 1255
  - 12 Concerti for Violin and Strings, 'Il cimento dell'armonia e dell'inventione (excs) 1169, 1308
  - 12 Concerti grossi, 'L'estro armonico' (excs) 1316
  - Concerto for Flute/Recorder and Strings in C minor – RV441 1103
  - Concerto for Piccolo and Strings in C – RV444 . . 1103
  - Concerto for Sopranino Recorder and Strings in C – RV443 1103
  - Double Concerto for 2 Cellos and Strings in G minor – RV531 1316
  - Double Concerto for 2 Trumpets and Strings in C – RV537 . . . . 1162, 7432
  - Gloria in D – RV589 68
  - Griselda – RV718 (excs) 1228, 1331
  - Ostro picta – RV642 68
  - Sposa son disprezzata 1227
  - 12 Trio Sonatas for 2 Violins and Continuo – Op 1 (excs) 1299

12 Violin Sonatas – Op 2 (excs) 1179

Vives, Amadeo
Canciones epigramáticas (excs) 1222, 1223
Doña Francisquita (excs) 1248
(La) Presumida 1222

Viviani, Giovanni Buonaventura
Capricci armonici da chiesa e da camera (excs) 1162

Volodos, Arcadi
Concert Paraphrase on Mozart's 'Turkish March'. 1209

Vrangel, V G
In my soul winter reigns 1223

Vuillermoz, Émile
Bourée de Chapdes–Beaufort 1265
(Une) perdriole 1265

Wagenaar, Johann
Cyrano de Bergerac – Op 23 977

Wagner, Richard
A Faust Overture 1167, 1173
Der Fliegende Holländer (excs) 981, 1223, 1243, 1259, 1269
Lohengrin (excs) 244, 981, 1223, 1251, 1255, 1258, 1259
Die Meistersinger von Nürnberg (excs) 1194, 1243, 1255, 1259, 1325
Die Walküre (excs) 981, 1223, 1251, 1267, 1335
Siegfried (excs) 202, 1223
Siegfried Idyll 202, 861
Tannhäuser (excs) 981, 1257, 1258, 1259, 1269, 1325, 1335
Tristan und Isolde (excs) 980, 981, 1266
Wesendonk Lieder 246, 980, 981, 1169, 1257, 1263

Waissel, Matthäus
12 Polish Dances (excs) 1288

Waldteufel, Emile
Estudiantina – Op 191 1170
(Les) Patineurs, 'The Skaters Waltz' – (Op 183) 1170
Pomone – (Op 155) 1170
Sur la plage, 'On the beach' – (Op 234) 1170

Walond, William
Voluntary in D 1193

Walton, William
Belshazzar's Feast 1141
Cello Concerto 223
Façade (excs) 176, 228, 1135, 1138, 1170
Façade 2 1138
Façade 3 (excs) 1138
(A) Litany, 'Drop, drop slow tears' 1211
Portsmouth Point 1135
Siesta 1135
Sinfonia Concertante 1135
Sonata for Violin and Piano 363
String Quartet in A minor 494
Viola Concerto in A minor 222, 1135
Violin Concerto in B minor 78

Warlock, Peter
All the flowers of the Spring 1143
As dew in Aprylle 1143
Captain Stratton's Fancy 1242
(A) Cornish Carol (Kanow Kernow) 1143
Corpus Christi 1143, 1216
Cradle Song 1231
Fair and True 1242
(The) full heart 1143
I saw a fair maiden 1143
Jillian of Berry 1231
Lillygay (excs) 1266
Milkmaids 1242
My little sweet darling 1266
My Own Country 1242
Passing by 1242
Piggesnie 1242
Pretty Ring Time 1226, 1242
Rest, sweet nymphs 1231
(The) rich cavalcade 1143
Sigh no more, ladies 1242
Spring 1266

Waxman, Franz
Carmen Fantasia 532, 1181

Webbe II, Samuel
Variations in A on 'Adeste Fideles' 1178

Weber, Carl Maria von
Clarinet Concerto No 2 in E flat – J118 (Op 74) 646
Concertino for Clarinet and Orchestra 209, 302
Euryanthe – J291 (excs) 1257
(Der) Freischütz – J277 (excs) 1167, 1258, 1325
Grand duo concertant – J204 (Op 48) 1162
Invitation to the Dance, 'Aufforderung zum Tanze' 1174
Oberon – J306 (excs) 1167
Sonata for Piano No 1 in C (excs) 289
6 Sonatas – J99–104 535

Webern, Anton
(Das) Augenlicht – Op 26 1147
6 Bagatelles – Op 9 1147
5 Canons on Latin texts – Op 16 1147
Cantatas Nos 1 and 2 – Opp 29 and 31 1147
Concerto for Nine Instruments – Op 24 1147
Entflieht auf leichten Kähnen I – Op 2 1147
5 geistliche Lieder – Op 15 1147
Im Sommerwind 1148
Lieder – Opp 4, 8, 12, 13, 14, 18, 19, 25 1147
5 Lieder aus 'Der siebente Ring' – Op 3 1147
3 Lieder aus 'Viae inviae' 1147
3 Little Pieces – Op 11 1147
5 Movements – Op 5 1147
Passacaglia – Op 1 1147, 1148
Pieces – Opp 5, 7 and 10 1147
5 Pieces – Op 5 1148
6 Pieces – Op 6 1147, 1148
Quartet – Op 22 1147
String Quartet – Op 28 1147, 1148
String Trio – Op 20 1147
Symphony – Op 21 1147
3 Traditional Rhymes – Op 17 1147
Variations – Op 27 143, 850, 1147
Variations – Op 30 1147
Variations – Op 27 1205

Webster, Maurice
4 Consort pieces 1313

Weelkes, Thomas
Evening Service for Trebles (excs) 1219
Hosanna to the Son of David 1217
Madrigals to Three, Four, Five and Six Voyces (excs) 1301

Weill, Kurt
Concerto for Violin and Wind Orchestra 846
(Der) Dreigroschenoper (excs) 147
Happy End (excs) 147
Lady in the Dark (excs) 1270
Lost in the Stars (excs) 1270
Love Life (excs) 1268
Marie Galante (excs) 147
One Touch of Venus (excs) 1270
String Quartet – Op 8 892

Weiner, Leó
Prinz Csonger und die Kobolde – Op 10b (excs) 1172

Weiss, Silvius Leopold
French Suite in G 1308

Weldon, John
Sett of Ayres in D 1312
Stop, O ye waves 1247

Wendling, Pete
Buzzin' the Bee 390

Wesley, Samuel
12 Short Pieces with a Voluntary added (excs) 1194
String Quartet in E flat 1178

Wesley, Samuel Sebastian
Ascribe unto the Lord 1217
3 Pieces for a Chamber Organ, Set 1 (excs) 1191

Weyse, Christoph Ernst Friedrich
Angel of Light, go in splendour 1260
In distant steeples 1260
(The) Sleeping-draught, 'Sovedrikken' (excs) 1260

White, Robert
6 Fantasias a 4 (excs) 1310
In Nomine V 1306
Lamentations (6vv) 1014

Whitehead, Gillian
Awa Herea 1233

Whitlock, Percy
4 Extemporizations (excs) 1191

- Whyte, Robert
  - Christe, qui lux es et dies ... 1213
- Widor, Charles-Marie
  - Symphony No 5 in F minor (excs) ... 1195
  - Symphony No 6 in C minor ... 1201
  - Symphony No 9, 'Gothic' in C minor ... 1054
- Wieniawski, Henryk
  - 8 Etudes–Caprices – Op 18 (excs) ... 536
  - Légende – Op 17 ... 895, 1171, 1183
  - Polonaise No 1 in D – Op 4 ... 1183, 1210
  - Scherzo-tarantelle in G minor – Op 16 ... 1202
  - Variations on an Original Theme – Op 15 ... 1210
  - Violin Concerto No 1 in F sharp minor – Op 14 ... 1150
  - Violin Concerto No 2 in D minor – Op 22 ... 895
- Wilby, Philip
  - Echo Carol ... 1217
- Willaert, Adrian
  - Madonna mia fa ... 1280
  - Missa super Benedicta es ... 1277
  - O bene mio ... 1280
  - O crux splendidior ... 1288
  - Vecchie letrose non valete niente ... 1280, 1288
- Willan, Healey
  - Introduction, Passacaglia and Fugue – B149 ... 1209
- Willcocks, David
  - My heart is fixed, O God ... 1220
  - Psalm 148 ... 1218
- Williams, Charles
  - Dream of Olwen ... 6
- Williams, John
  - Aeolian Suite ... 1174
- Williams, John
  - (The) Witches of Eastwick (excs) ... 1179
- Williams, Owen
  - Sul Y Blodau ... 1268
- Williams, Robert
  - Hail the day that sees him rise ... 1220
- Wills, Arthur
  - Magnificat and Nunc Dimittis ... 1214
- Wilson, Henry Lane
  - False Phyllis ... 1271
- Wilson, John
  - Horace's Odes (excs) ... 1247
  - Take, O take those lips away ... 1301
- Wise, Michael
  - (The) Ways of Zion do mourn ... 1218
- Wolf, Hugo
  - 6 Alte Weisen (excs) ... 1263
  - Eichendorff Lieder (excs) ... 1250, 1263
  - Goethe Lieder (excs) ... 1249, 1250, 1264, 1270, 1332
  - Italienisches Liederbuch (excs) ... 1249, 1259, 1264
  - 6 Lieder für eine Frauenstimme (excs) ... 1264
  - Mörike Lieder (excs) ... 1249, 1250, 1257, 1264
  - Spanisches Liederbuch (excs) ... 1225, 1241, 1249, 1259, 1264
- Wolf-Ferrari, Ermanno
  - I Gioielli della Madonna ... 1267
  - Il Segreto di Susanna ... 1253
- Wolstenholme, William
  - Bohemesque ... 1195
- Wood, Charles
  - Evening Service in G ... 1214
  - Hail, gladdening light ... 1211, 1213, 1334
  - String Quartet in A minor ... 1049
- Wood, Haydn
  - Concerto for Piano and Orchestra in D minor ... 497
  - Montmartre ... 1165
  - Roses of Picardy ... 1250
- Wood, Henry J
  - Fantasia on British Sea Songs ... 1324
- Woodcock, Clement
  - Browning my dere ... 1306
  - In Nomines a 5 ... 1306
- Woods, Edna Bentz
  - Valse Phantasique ... 1193
- Woodward, Richard
  - Psalm 111 ... 1218
- Worth, Amy
  - Midsummer ... 1249
- Wright, Geoffrey
  - 2 Pieces ... 1165
- Wuorinen, Charles
  - Bagatelle ... 376
  - Capriccio ... 376
  - Sonata for Piano No 3 ... 376
- Yoon, Young-Ha
  - Barley Field ... 1245
- Youmans, Vincent
  - Great Day (excs) ... 1251
- Yradier, Sebastián de
  - (La) Calasera ... 1255
  - (La) Paloma ... 1258
- Ysaÿe, Eugène
  - Caprice d'après l'Étude en forme de valse de S ... 836
  - Cello Sonata – Op 28 ... 382
  - Rêve d'enfant – Op 14 ... 382
  - 6 Sonatas for Solo Violin – Op 27 (excs) ... 1179, 1207, 1208, 1210
- Yvain, Maurice
  - Yes (excs) ... 1240
- Zachara da Teramo, Antonio
  - Cacciando per gustar ... 1292
  - Dime, Fortuna ... 1293
  - (Un) fior gentil ... 1291, 1293
  - Gloria, 'Ad ogni vento' ... 1293
  - Rosetta ... 1291
  - Sumite, karissimi ... 1293
- Zachow, Friedrich Wilhelm
  - Suite in B minor ... 31
- Zandonai, Riccardo
  - Francesca da Rimini (excs) ... 396
- Zanetti, Gasparo
  - Il Scolaro (excs) ... 1280, 1308
- Zarzycki, Aleksander
  - Sad song ... 1223
- Zelenka, Jan Dismas
  - Fanfare in D ... 167
  - Magnificat in D ... 67
  - Magnificat in C – ZWV107 ... 67
  - Magnificat in D ... 68
  - Magnificat in C – ZWV107 ... 68
- Zelenski, Wladyslaw
  - Black skirt ... 1223
- Zeller, Carl
  - Der Obersteiger (excs) ... 1242
  - Der Vogelhändler (excs) ... 1246, 1248
- Zemlinsky, Alexander von
  - 6 Gesänge – Op 13 ... 1556
  - Lyrische Symphonie – Op 18 ... 1156
- Ziani, Pietro Andrea
  - Sonata No 11 in G minor ... 1176
  - Sonata No 12 in D minor ... 1176
- Ziehrer, Carl Michael
  - Fächer – Op 525 ... 1175
  - Freiherr von Schönfeld – Op 442 ... 1175
  - Wiener Bürger – Op 419 ... 1175
- Zillner,
  - Es steht ein alter Nussbaum ... 1248
- Ziporyn, Evan
  - 4 Impersonations ... 1210
  - Partial Truths ... 1210

INDEX TO ARTISTS

A Sei Voci ... 16, 523, 524
Aalborg Symphony Orchestra ... 389, 499, 500
Aarhus Chamber Choir ... 317, 318
Aarhus Sinfonietta ... 829
Aarhus Symphony Orchestra ... 317, 318, 500
Aarhus University Choir ... 317
Abbado, Claudio cond ... 86, 100, 144, 145, 174, 195, 196, 198, 202, 203, 400, 557, 579, 587, 588, 590, 618, 619, 652, 676, 686, 690, 691, 740, 742, 743, 744, 791, 818, 858, 895, 896, 913, 1023, 1075, 1077, 1078, 1082, 1084, 1087, 1090, 1147, 1330, 1337, 1352
Abbado, Roberto cond ... 323
Abberger, John ob ... 1316
Abbey Road Ensemble ... 1171
Abdrazakov, Ildar bbar ... 814
Abel, Yves cond ... 607, 1240
Abendroth, Hermann cond ... 203
Abete, Antonio bass ... 640, 841
Abramovic, Charles pf ... 191
Academia Montis Regalis ... 182, 1116
Academy of Ancient Music .. 12, 31, 35, 67, 387, 432, 452, 454, 468, 486, 648, 650, 651, 652, 653, 672, 673, 677, 684, 721, 766, 1019, 1020, 1104, 1217, 1230
Academy of Ancient Music Chamber Ensemble ... 115
Academy of Ancient Music Chorus ... 486, 677, 766, 1019
Academy of St Martin in the Fields. 33, 223, 233, 258, 335, 362, 463, 646, 648, 657, 658, 660, 664, 674, 708, 809, 815, 816, 817, 862, 997, 1236, 5677
Academy of St Martin in the Fields Chamber Ensemble .. 96, 220, 620
Academy of St Martin in the Fields Chorus ... 674
Acantus ... 1274
Accademia I Filarmonici ... 1109
Accardo, Salvatore vn ... 239, 710, 950
Accentus Chamber Choir ... 237, 731, 1054
Ackermann, Otto cond ... 422, 546, 651, 1248
Ad Libitum Quartet ... 367
Adamec, Petr pf ... 602
Adami, Madame pf ... 1266
Adams, John cond ... 2, 3
Adams, Peter vc ... 796
Adeney, Richard fl ... 219
Adès, Thomas cond ... 6, 7
Adès, Thomas hpd/org ... 7
Adès, Thomas pf ... 6, 7, 519, 1185
Adni, Daniel pf ... 601
Adreassen, Mogens Steen ob ... 1259
Afanassiev, Valery pf ... 869
Ager, Jeannette mez ... 485
Agnew, Paul ten ... 63, 72, 132, 183, 319, 328, 442, 447, 449, 636, 638, 781, 885
Agri, Antonio vn ... 725
Ahnsjö, Claes-Håkan ten ... 242
Aimard, Pierre-Laurent pf ... 98, 140, 188, 515, 518, 551, 552, 553, 554, 627, 629, 630, 1185
Ainsley, John Mark ten .. 68, 132, 153, 154, 229, 251, 379, 380, 445, 446, 447, 623, 672, 673, 695, 764, 765, 767, 884, 885, 886, 1046, 1068, 1069, 1070, 1143, 1155
Al Ayre Español ... 692, 1298
Ala-Pöllänen, Kari cond ... 953
Alagna, Roberto ten ... 158, 159, 757, 1075, 1077, 1078, 1221, 1239, 1330
Alain, Marie-Claire org ... 158, 383, 836
Alanko, Petri fl ... 787
Alarm Will Sound ... 801
Alban Berg Quartet ... 143, 208, 476, 621, 865, 866, 971
Albert, Werner Andreas cond ... 493
Alberth, Rudolf cond ... 1243
Albrecht, Gerd cond ... 495, 849, 1157
Alcantara, Lynette mez ... 876
Alden, David dire ... 1329
Alder, Stephen bar ... 179
Aleksandrovich, Aleksandr ten ... 1223
Aler, John ten ... 152
Alessandrini, Rinaldo cond/dir 384, 392, 448, 598, 637, 639, 640, 722, 1104, 1111, 1117
Alessandrini, Rinaldo hpd ... 598, 637, 1104
Alessandrini, Rinaldo org ... 448, 722
Alexander, Carlos bar ... 580
Alexander von Schlippenbach Jazz Band ... 1158
Alexashkin, Sergei bass ... 1221
Alexeev, Dmitri pf ... 612, 776, 917, 924
Alia Musica ... 1274
Aliev, Eldar bass ... 1076
Alkan Trio ... 14
Alla Francesca ... 1275, 1275, 1276
Allegri Quartet ... 473
Allen, Mildred sop ... 991
Allen, Nancy hp ... 646
Allen, Thomas bar ... 314, 335, 707, 1068, 1069, 1070
Alley, John hpd ... 427
Allin, Norman bass ... 1070
Almajano, Marta sop ... 181, 692
Almeida, Antonio de cond ... 267, 370
Almeida Ensemble ... 7
Almila, Atso cond ... 725, 939
Alphen, Conrad van cond ... 810
Alsfeld Vocal Ensemble ... 72
Alsop, Marin cond ... 79, 80
Alta ... 1275
Altena, Marius van ten ... 260
Alter Ego ... 399
Alty, Alison ob ... 12
Alwin, Karl cond ... 1131
Alwyn, Kenneth cond ... 5
Alwyn, William cond ... 16, 17, 18
Amadeus Quartet ... 207, 208, 381
Amadinda Percussion Group ... 552
Amato, Pasquale bar ... 1235, 1269
Ambrosian Chorus ... 777
Ambrosian Light Opera Chorus ... 1266
Ambrosian Opera Chorus ... 138, 232, 325, 604, 817, 819, 821, 937, 1082, 1085, 1089, 1094, 1221, 1351, 5677
Ambrosian Singers .. 86, 174, 231, 314, 336, 351, 365, 583, 658, 916, 1072, 1266
Ameling, Elly sop ... 581, 878, 1151
American Composers Orchestra ... 265
Amherst, Nigel vion ... 435
Amoyal, Pierre vn ... 336, 518
Ampleforth Schola Cantorum ... 1211
Amsterdam Baroque Choir ... 55, 61, 63, 65, 72
Amsterdam Baroque Orchestra ... 28, 61, 63, 65, 72, 181, 1107
Amsterdam Chamber Orchestra ... 1041
Amsterdam Toonkunst Choir ... 581
Anatassov, Orlin bass ... 157
Ančerl, Karel cond ... 341, 345, 348, 618, 999
Ancona, Mario bar ... 1255
Anda, Géza pf ... 82, 1186
Andaló, Roberta sop ... 270, 1300
Andersen, Stig ten ... 541
Anderson, Mark pf ... 320
Anderson, Valdine sop ... 7, 252, 254, 1051
Anderson, Lorna sop ... 442, 482, 767, 886
Anderszewski, Piotr pf ... 125
Andrésen, Ivar bass ... 1131
Andrew, Ludmilla sop ... 615
Andrews, Julie bn ... 647, 974
Andsnes, Leif Ove pf . 425, 463, 479, 880, 904, 1010, 1186
Angas, Richard bass ... 1062, 1070
Angeles, Victoria de los sop ... 370, 606, 1222, 1223
Angeles Quartet ... 470
Angelo, Gianna d' sop ... 1229
Angelo, Louis d' bar ... 1253
Angerer, Paul cond ... 1189
Angulo, Manuel ob ... 368
Anievas, Augustin pf ... 285
Anima Eterna Orchestra ... 260
Anissimov, Alexander cond ... 774
Anonymous 4 ... 1272, 1276
Ansermet, Ernest cond ... 155, 185, 369, 1234
Antal, Mátyás cond ... 65

Anthony, Adele vn 716
Anthony, Grace sop 1250
Antonini, Giovanni cond 1104, 1107
Antonini, Giovanni dire 167, 1176, 1331
Antonini, Giovanni rec 167, 1176, 1331
Antonsen, Ole Edward tpt 499, 931
Anvik, Vebjørn pf 220
Anzellotti, Teodoro accord 147
Ara, Agustín León vn 809
Aradia Baroque Ensemble 769
Araiza, Francisco ten 674, 875
Arangi-Lombardi, Giannina sop 727
Arcadian Academy 840
Archaeus Quartet 191
Archer, Malcolm cond 1220
Archer, Neill ten 876
Archibald, Paul ptpt 140
Archibudelli 250, 481
Arden, Evelyn mez 1131
Arditti, Irvine vn 269, 320
Arditti Quartet 146, 171, 269, 320, 853
Arena, Maurizio cond 1343, 1349
Arfken, Katharina ob 66
Argall, Marsden bass 1253
Argenta, Nancy sop 63, 67, 68, 69, 442, 444, 483, 484
Argerich, Martha pf 49, 83, 102, 123, 280, 288, 292, 293, 557, 559, 740, 772, 792, 899, 901, 905, 998, 1023, 1186
Argo Band 1051
Arianna Ensemble 408
Arion 448
Arkadiev, O.I. cond 1223
Arkhipova, Irina mez 777
Armenian Philharmonic Orchestra 528
Armstrong, Richard cond 1239
Armstrong, Sheila sop 707, 777, 877, 1062, 1066, 1070
Arnhem Philharmonic Orchestra 341, 595, 852
Arnold, Jonathan bass 764, 1311
Arnold, Malcolm cond 22, 24
Arnold Schoenberg Choir 73, 108, 133, 135, 579, 631, 672, 877, 913, 972
Aronowitz, Cecil va 381, 1226
Arrau, Claudio pf 214, 560, 1187
Ars Antiqua Austria 166
Ars Laeta Choir 600
Arte dei Suonatori 1108
(L')Arte dell'Arco 1016
Artemis Quartet 553
(Les) Arts Florissants Chorus 276, 449, 450, 636, 638, 674, 685, 768, 781, 782, 783, 784
(Les) Arts Florissants Instrumental Ensemble 319, 392, 638, 767
(Les) Arts Florissants Orchestra 273, 276, 449, 450, 454, 636, 638, 674, 685, 768, 781, 782, 783, 784
(Les) Arts Florissants Vocal Ensemble 273, 392, 767
'Arturo Toscanini Foundation' Chorus 1354, 1358
'Arturo Toscanini Foundation' Orchestra 1354, 1358
Artved, Max ob 499
Ashkenazy, Vladimir cond 401, 524, 773, 785, 940, 944, 945, 1171
Ashkenazy, Vladimir pf 84, 123, 211, 286, 287, 290, 292, 524, 739, 747, 770, 771, 785, 909, 916, 936, 1230
Ashton, Caroline sop 374
Askelsson, Hördur cond 548
Asko Ensemble 19, 552, 1059
Asko/Schönberg Ensemble 552
Aspell, Simon va 299
Asperen, Bob van hpd 1007
Assad, Odair gtr 725
Assad, Sérgio gtr 725
Assenbaum, Aloysia org 167, 845
Asteriadou, Maria pf 957
Asti, Eugene pf 297, 615
Astrée Ensemble 1113
Asturias Symphony Orchestra 808, 810
Atherton, David cond 171, 520, 521
Atherton, Diane sop 519
Atkins, Mark didj 920
Atkinson, Lynton ten 1113
Atlanta Symphony Chorus 398, 494
Atlanta Symphony Orchestra 398, 494, 688, 824
Attrot, Ingrid sop 804, 964
Atzmon, Moshe cond 6, 1162
Aucante, Vincent va 429
Auger, Arleen sop 445, 583, 589, 673, 1225
Austral, Florence sop 1131
Australian Chamber Orchestra 397
Australian Opera and Ballet Orchestra 605
Australian Opera Chorus 1358
Austrian Radio Chorus 849, 1091
Austrian Radio Symphony Orchestra 849, 1091
Austro-Hungarian Haydn Orchestra 467, 468
Auvergne Orchestra 1016
Auvity, Cyril ctnr 274
Avanti Chamber Orchestra 832
Avenhaus, Silke pf 1009
Ax, Emanuel pf 116, 196, 208, 282, 349, 667
Aymes, Jean-Marc dire 1307
Aymes, Jean-Marc hpd/org 1307
Azesberger, Kurt ten 672
Azzaretti, Jaïl sop 273
Babin, Victor pf 1062
Bach Choir 224, 230, 1072, 1140
Bach Collegium Japan 26, 35, 60, 61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 70, 74, 1328
Backes, Constanze sop 1044
Backhouse, Jeremy cond 334
Backhouse, Peter org 1193
Bacquier, Gabriel bar 793
Bada, Angelo ten 1237, 1269
Badings, Vera hp 304
Badura-Skoda, Paul pf 599
Baert, Lieven vc 821
Bagby, Benjamin lyra/voc 1295
Bailey, Simon bass 816
Baillie, Alexander vc 794
Baillie, Isobel sop 446, 1062, 1063, 1070, 1224
Bakels, Kees cond 400
Baker, Martin cond 576, 713
Baker, Janet mez 69, 156, 214, 355, 364, 365, 583, 594, 595, 879, 1225, 1226
Baker, Martin org 1018, 1019
Baker, Richard hpd 1351
Balanescu Quartet 700
Balconi, Roberto alto 967
Baldin, Aldo ten 351
Baldin, Dileno hn 1110
Balding, Caroline vn 389, 1043
Baldisseri, Nerina sop 1239
Baldwin, Dalton pf 793, 878, 1265
Baldy, Colin bar 71
Balet, Bernard perc 337
Balfour, Margaret cont 1070
Ball, Andrew pf 318, 534, 1049
Baller, Adolf pf 1202
Balleys, Brigitte mez 155, 603
Balogh, Ernö pf 1249
Balogh, József cl 116
Balsa, Emmanuel vada 302
Balthasar-Neumann Choir 568
Balthasar-Neumann Ensemble 568
Baltimore Symphony Orchestra 78, 79, 83, 105, 358
Baltsa, Agnes mez 113, 594
Bamberg Symphony Orchestra 228, 600, 982, 1025, 1055, 1199
Bamert, Matthias cond 320, 321, 362, 388, 599, 1096
Banchini, Chiara cond 1116
Bancroft's School Choir 511, 986
Banfield, Volker pf 545
Banks, Barry ten 816, 1246
Bannwart, (Father) Roman cond 477
Banse, Juliane sop 144, 215, 907
Bär, Olaf bar 67, 73, 910, 1153
Barbacini, Maurizio cond 1237
Barbagallo, James pf 573
Barber, Graham org 508
Barber, Samuel pf 81, 991
Barbirolli, John cond 94, 248, 291, 346, 355, 358, 360, 362, 364, 365, 366, 580, 586, 591, 595, 755, 772, 826, 939, 976, 1064, 1066, 1131, 1161, 1166, 1226, 1239, 1266, 1325

Barbirolli, Evelyn ob 1066
Barcellona, Daniela mez 157, 815, 1075, 1330
Barcelona Ars Musica 1222, 1223
Barcelona Chamber Ensemble 1223
Bardon, Patricia mez 623
Barenboim, Daniel cond. 194, 243, 249, 257, 341, 369, 557, 571, 835, 896, 1121, 1126, 1132, 1133, 1161
Barenboim, Daniel pf 99, 107, 121, 194, 369, 557, 649, 868, 887, 896, 1124, 1161, 1226
Barili, Alfredo pf 1255
Barker, Cheryl sop 354
Barker, Edwin db 725
Barker, Joyce sop 589
Barone, Clement fl 1240
Barr, Nick va 321
Barrett, Nerine pf 412
Barritt, Paul vn 507
Barshai, Rudolf cond 930
Bartholomée, Pierre cond 1053
Bartók, Bela pf 90
Bartoletti, Bruno cond 727, 1339
Bartoli, Cecilia mez 404, 675, 815, 816, 1227, 1228, 1330, 1331
Bartolomey, Franz vc 877
Bartosz, Bogna cont 71
Bartosz, Bogna mez 61
Bash Ensemble 1201
Bashmet, Yuri va 223, 1135, 1137
Basle Consort 1262
Basses Réunies (Les) 440
Bastianini, Ettore bar 1229, 1268
Bate, Jennifer org 629, 630
Bátiz, Enrique cond 803, 806
Batten, Joseph cond 1254
Battistini, Mattia bar 1255
Battle, Kathleen sop 580, 584
Batty, Christine mez 968
Bauchau, Nicholas ten 273
Baudo, Serge cond 306, 1332
Bauer, Andrzej vc 569
Bauer, Vincent vib 189
Baumann, Hermann hn 669
Baumont, Olivier hpd 437, 1303
Baumont, Olivier org 1303
Baur, Markus treb 594
Bavarian Radio Chorus 157, 250, 278, 323, 342, 352, 495, 546, 724, 875, 1124, 1125, 1246
Bavarian Radio Symphony Orchestra 242, 250, 278, 342, 343, 345, 352, 421, 459, 495, 505, 582, 724, 741, 875, 897, 922, 978, 980, 984, 1001, 1124, 1125, 1169, 1243
Bavarian State Opera Chorus 136, 972, 982, 989, 1079, 1092, 1125, 1351
Bavarian State Opera Orchestra 972, 989, 1351
Bavarian State Orchestra. 136, 982, 1079, 1092, 1125, 1341
Bayl, Benjamin org 1215
Bayley, Clive bass 638
Bayo, María sop 439
Bayreuth Festival Chorus 114, 1123, 1126, 1128, 1133
Bayreuth Festival Orchestra 114, 1123, 1126, 1128, 1133
Bazola, François bass 636
Bazola-Minori, François bar 768
BBC Choir 414
BBC Choral Society 134, 589
BBC Chorus 314, 546, 589, 853, 1122, 1164
BBC Concert Orchestra 5, 296, 535, 539, 609, 1211
BBC National Chorus of Wales 354, 826
BBC National Orchestra of Wales 219, 354, 825, 826, 1012
BBC Northern Symphony Orchestra 594
BBC Philharmonic Orchestra 5, 18, 23, 24, 25, 92, 141, 188, 276, 320, 321, 331, 336, 337, 361, 381, 402, 416, 492, 493, 496, 526, 538, 570, 571, 572, 576, 699, 733, 796, 804, 823, 856, 964, 1003, 1074, 1166, 1246, 6371
BBC Scottish Symphony Orchestra 162, 222, 252, 497, 564, 571, 574, 577, 612, 709, 794, 833, 963
BBC Singers 77, 171, 535, 576, 733, 853, 962, 1018, 1100, 1141, 1329
BBC Symphony Chorus 1046, 1141, 1324
BBC Symphony Chorus (Women's Voices) 503
BBC Symphony Orchestra 76, 92, 94, 134, 140, 143, 150, 171, 189, 224, 254, 269, 315, 316, 348, 356, 357, 359, 361, 362, 365, 388, 421, 497, 503, 506, 555, 611, 612, 832, 853, 862, 916, 950, 1012, 1018, 1027, 1046, 1056, 1065, 1070, 1141, 1161, 1170, 1222, 1324, 1325
BBC Theatre Chorus 161
Beale, Matthew ten 71, 334
Bean, Hugh vn 1062, 1070, 1169
Beaufort, Sonia de mez 187
Beauregard, Lawrence fl 1060
Beaux Arts Trio 107, 121, 477, 510, 669, 791, 867
Becht, Hermann bar 855
Becker, Bob mari 800
Bedford, Steuart cond 231, 234, 1338
Beecham, Thomas cond 149, 150, 154, 161, 173, 205, 314, 315, 317, 414, 426, 685, 754, 859, 939, 947, 949, 1164, 1167, 1224, 1321, 1325
Beecham, Betty Humby pf 1164
Beecham, Thomas pf 1164
Beecham Choral Society 426
Beek, Arie van cond 1016
Beekman, Marcel ten 58
Begg, Heather mez 1005
Behringer, Michael hpd 1315
Behringer, Michael org 1315
Beinum, Eduard van cond 304, 371
Beke, R.O. von vc 1223
Bekova Sisters 420
Belcea Quartet 306, 791, 866
Belder, Pieter-Jan hpd 1007
Bell, Jean hp 1066
Bell, Joshua vn 78, 194, 390, 535, 609, 832
Bell, Sebastian afl 1011
Bell, Sebastian fl 140, 410
Bell, Stephen hn 647, 668
Bell' Arte Antiqua 1299
Belleau, Marc bass 153
Bellezza, Vincenzo cond 759
Bellocq, Eric gtr/lte/theo 1303
Belohlávek, Jirí cond 344, 345, 351, 601
Benacková, Marta mez 352
Benda, Christian cond 599
Benda, Sebastian pf 599
Bender, Philippe cond 893
Benelli, Ugo ten 631
Benjamin, George cond/elec 140, 460
Bennett, Alan clpf/sngr 266
Bennett, William fl 39
Benoît, Jean-Christoph bar 734
Benson, Clifford pf 206, 966
Bentzon, Johan fl 1259
Benzi, Roberto cond 595, 852
Berberian, Cathy mez 147
Berbié, Jane mez 1232, 1266
Berezovsky, Boris pf 613, 614, 746, 979
Berg, Nathan bar 674
Berganza, Teresa mez 793
Berganza, Teresa sop 369, 1332
Bergen Philharmonic Orchestra 1055, 1186
Berglund, Paavo cond 649, 946, 948, 950
Bergmann, Walter hpd 1301
Bergonzi, Carlo ten 1229, 1266, 1268
Bergset, Arve Moen hard 1057
Berio, Luciano cond 146, 147
Berkes, Kálmán cl 87
Berki, Sándor hn 116
Berlin Academy for Ancient Music 440, 816, 841, 1045
Berlin Academy of Early Music 404, 527, 1041
Berlin Baroque Soloists 35, 1040
Berlin Cathedral Choir 855
Berlin Children's Choir 706
Berlin Deutsche Oper Chorus 107, 257, 311, 485, 683, 706, 754, 1124, 1126, 1257
Berlin Deutsche Oper Orchestra . 683, 706, 724, 988, 1257
Berlin Deutsches Symphony Orchestra . 4, 856, 1120, 1336
Berlin Komische Opera Orchestra 408
Berlin Opera Chorus 1121, 1359
Berlin Opera Orchestra 1359
Berlin Philharmonic Orchestra 34, 86, 91, 100, 106, 107, 108, 110, 113, 195, 197, 198, 200, 201, 202, 203, 241, 242, 245, 246, 248, 249, 305, 311, 330, 339, 340, 343, 346, 381, 400, 422, 485, 489, 505, 557, 579, 586, 587,

588, 590, 591, 619, 627, 657, 661, 664, 676, 685, 686, 690, 740, 742, 744, 745, 750, 754, 771, 789, 854, 858, 860, 895, 896, 899, 913, 931, 947, 949, 975, 977, 979, 980, 1023, 1029, 1030, 1074, 1075, 1077, 1078, 1084, 1119, 1126, 1133, 1148, 1162, 1167, 1169, 1171, 1198, 1325, 1330
Berlin Radio Children's Choir 495
Berlin Radio Chorus 202, 489, 495, 547, 579, 690, 854, 856, 1084
Berlin Radio Ensemble 1149
Berlin Radio Men's Chorus 559
Berlin Radio Symphony Orchestra 82, 381, 495, 547, 559, 592, 753, 772, 851, 962, 980, 1186
Berlin Radio Women's Chorus 557
Berlin RIAS Chamber Choir 213, 527, 680, 733, 816, 877, 1045
Berlin RIAS Symphony Orchestra 680
Berlin Scharoun Ensemble 877
Berlin Staatskapelle 106, 257, 1121, 1124, 1132, 1267, 1328
Berlin State Opera Chorus 1131, 1132, 1133
Berlin State Opera Orchestra 1131, 1244
Berlin Symphony Orchestra 592, 594, 855, 950, 1259
Berlinsky, Ludmilla pf 847
Berman, Lazar pf 561
Bern, Jeni sop 485
Bernard, Anthony cond 1271
Bernardini, Alfredo cond 1110
Bernardini, Alfredo ob 12, 1110
Bernays, John bass 71
Berne, Harry van ten 72
Berne Camerata 34
Bernhardt, Louise cont 580
Bernold, Philippe fl 306
Bernstein, Leonard cond 79, 139, 162, 163, 164, 279, 390, 514, 557, 582, 584, 586, 587, 588, 594, 824, 860, 929, 998, 1325
Bernstein, Leonard pf 79, 390
Béroff, Michel pf 627, 628
Berridge, Simon ten 1311
Berry, Walter bar 108
Berry, Walter bbar 251, 485, 981
Bertagnolli, Gemma sop 448, 722
Bertini, Rossana sop 841
Bertotti, Lavinia sop 967
Best, Matthew cond 132, 152, 163, 251, 278, 335, 380, 508, 956, 1036, 1068, 1070, 1101
Best, Jonathan bass 508, 768, 1068
Beths, Vera vn 478
Bettendorf, Emmy sop 1267
Bevan, Stanley ten 1005
Beynon, Catherine hp 836
Beynon, Emily fl 611
Bezaly, Sharon fl 1012
Beznosiuk, Lisa fl 1105
Beznosiuk, Pavlo vn 1284
Bianchi, Luigi Alberto va 799
Bianchi, Luigi Alberto vn 799
Bianchi, Marco vn 1331
Bibl, Rudolf cond 971
Biccire, Patrizia sop 816
Bicket, Harry cond 1234, 1241
Bicket, Harry org 380
Bickley, Susan mez 73, 76, 140, 183, 430, 447, 825, 826, 999
Bihlmaier, Hans Norbert cond 981
Billy, Bertrand de cond 1221
Binchois Consort 255, 329, 1277
Binelli, Daniel band 725
Biondi, Fabio dire/cond 841, 1105, 1106, 1110, 1115
Biondi, Fabio va 1110
Biondi, Fabio vn 1105, 1106, 1110, 1115
Biret, Idil pf 190, 213
Birkeland, Øystein vc 220
Birmingham Contemporary Music Group 6, 165, 851
Biryukova, Natalia mez 936
Bisengaliev, Marat vn 362
Björling, Jussi ten 133
Bjørn-Larsen, Jens tuba 499
Blachly, Alexander cond/bar 330, 1294
Black, George gtr 418
Black, Neil ob 646
Black, Nigel hn 898
Black Diamonds Band 366
Black Mountain Choir 1268
Blackwell, Harolyn sop 216
Blake, Richard dire 140
Blake, Peter hn 898
Blake, Richard fl 140
Blankestijn, Marieke vn 464, 1103
Blasi, Angela Maria sop 672
Blaze, Robin alto 62, 63, 64, 66, 179, 409, 447, 764, 1115, 1229, 1299, 1328
Blech, Harry cond 1264
Blech, Leo cond 1131, 1244
Bloch, Thomas onde 627
Blochwitz, Hans-Peter ten 618, 913, 1152
Blomstedt, Herbert cond 249, 694, 695
Blume, Norbert vad 493
Blythe, Stephanie cont 1229
Bobby, James bar 1078
Bockelmann, Rudolf bbar 1131
Boettcher, Wilfried cond 676, 1189
Boffard, Florent pf 88, 147, 188, 189
Bogdanovich, Aleksandr ten 1223
Böhm, Karl cond 103, 113, 136, 245, 656, 661, 664, 683, 858, 980, 984, 1128, 1133
Bohuss, Irena sop 1223
Bolet, Jorge pf 6, 1187
Bollen, Ria cont 600
Bologna Teatro Comunale Chorus 324, 815, 819, 4491
Bologna Teatro Comunale Orchestra 324, 815, 819, 4491
Bolshoi Theatre Chorus 1037
Bolshoi Theatre Orchestra 1037
Bolton, Ivor cond 252, 676, 1003, 1340
Bona, Jacques bar 273
Bona, Jacques bass 374
Bond, Danny bn 466
Bond, Jonathon treb 335
Bonde-Hansen, Henriette sop 317, 318, 564
Bonell, Carlos gtr 369
Boni, Marco cond 822
Bonifacio, Tina hp 1266
Bonn Beethovenhalle Orchestra 720
Bonner, Tessa sop 68, 394, 765, 768, 1316, 7684
Bonney, Barbara sop 73, 485, 623, 695, 737, 765, 879, 913, 981, 1230, 1231
Bonynge, Richard cond 1, 138, 139, 313, 324, 545, 605, 704, 821, 1245, 1266, 1268, 1352, 1358
Booth, Juliet sop 251
Booth, Webster ten 1224, 1271
Borchers, Christel cont 242
Bordeaux opera chorus 607
Bordeaux-Aquitaine National Orchestra 327, 607
Borg, Kim bass 250, 365
Borgioli, Dino ten 1253
Bori, Lucrezia sop 1261
Bork, Hanneke van sop 581
Borodin Quartet 130, 185, 847, 1035
Borodin Trio 962
Borodina, Olga mez 157, 777
Borowski, Daniel bass 816
Borst, Danielle sop 332
Bosini, Gemma sop 1239
Boskovsky, Willi cond 971
Bostock, Douglas cond 23
Boston Baroque 36, 406
Boston Pops Orchestra 390
Boston Symphony Orchestra 79, 106, 142, 338, 371, 556, 557, 606, 790, 791, 836, 940, 947, 949, 950, 1137, 1170, 1171, 1325
Bostridge, Ian ten 74, 228, 430, 443, 490, 519, 880, 886, 888, 908, 911, 1065, 1231, 1329
Botha, Johan ten 352
Botstein, Leon cond 402, 1009
Bott, Catherine sop 435, 449, 695, 768, 968, 1051, 1302, 4609, 7684
Bottone, Bonaventura ten 188
Boughton, William cond 379, 846
Boulanger, François cond 734
Boulez, Pierre cond 84, 92, 145, 188, 189, 190, 551, 580,

593, 626, 630, 788, 789, 850, 851, 853, 855, 994, 1060, 1147, 1148, 1329, 1338
Boult, Adrian cond 22, 93, 94, 197, 356, 358, 360, 361, 364, 502, 503, 557, 825, 862, 950, 1062, 1063, 1070, 1071, 1161
Bourdon, Rosario cond 1250, 1259, 1261
Bourdon, Rosario pf 1240
Bourgue, Maurice ob 337
Bournemouth Sinfonietta 26, 252, 502, 648, 830, 833, 963, 1177
Bournemouth Symphony Chorus 316, 317, 963, 1140
Bournemouth Symphony Orchestra 24, 224, 316, 317, 362, 893, 954, 1030, 1047, 1048, 1136, 1140
Bovino, Maria sop 631
Bowen, John ten 623, 640
Bowen, Kenneth ten 1062, 1070
Bowen, Maurice bass 1268
Bowers-Broadbent, Christopher org 718, 719
Bowes, Thomas vn 847
Bowman, James alto 71, 420, 445, 446, 452, 721, 763, 765, 915, 1018, 1114
Bowman, Robin pf 232
Bowyer, Kevin org 9, 53, 56
Boyce, Bruce bar 317
Boyd, Douglas dire 33
Boyd, Douglas ob 33, 464, 649, 1103
Boyd, James va 191, 362
Boyd Neel String Orchestra 228, 371, 1138
Boysen, Thomas gtr 597
Boysen, Thomas theo 597
Brabbins, Martyn cond 76, 171, 172, 177, 252, 494, 497, 498, 535, 571, 574, 833, 963
Bradbury, Colin cl 18, 1147
Bradbury, John cl 23
Brafield, Mark org 318
Brain, Aubrey hn 206
Brain, Dennis hn 96, 115, 202, 228, 647, 975, 1138, 1176
Brain, Leonard ob 647
Braithwaite, Warwick cond 1224, 1264, 1271
Branagh, Kenneth spkr 619
Brand, Adrian ten 374
(The) Brandenburg Consort 432, 443, 449, 1117
Brandis Quartet 892
Brannigan, Owen bass 229, 1224
Bratislava Children's Choir 520
Bratislava City Choir 217
Bratislava City Chorus 1158
Bratislava Radio Symphony Orchestra 218, 528, 756, 970, 1099
Bratislava Slovak Chorus 1158
Braucher, Ernest va 1110
Brautigam, Ronald pf 493, 905, 925
Bream, Julian gtr 10, 21, 808, 1188
Breda Sacraments Choir 72
Breisach, Paul cond 1259
Bremen Baroque Orchestra 72
Brendel, Alfred pf 67, 100, 104, 124, 125, 126, 129, 479, 556, 652, 654, 669, 670, 671, 863, 872, 873, 1189, 1326
Brett, Charles alto 68
Brewer, Michael cond 1216
Brezina, Jaroslav ten 1155
Briggs, David org 1189
Briggs, Stephen ten 1268
Brindisi Qt 666
Britten, Benjamin cond 71, 219, 221, 223, 224, 228, 229, 230, 231, 232, 233, 234, 236, 339, 654, 655, 1138
Britten, Benjamin pf 214, 224, 226, 228, 232, 235, 307, 1138
Britten Quartet 507
Britten Sinfonia 228, 609, 647, 648, 974, 1201
Brno Janáček Opera Chorus 353
Brno Janáček Opera Orchestra 353
Brno Philharmonic Chorus 218
Brno State Philharmonic Orchestra 353
Broadbent, Peter cond 81, 461
Broadway Chorus 164
Broadway Orchestra 164
Bröcheler, John bass 595
Brodsky Quartet 225
Bronder, Peter ten 110
Brook, Matthew bar 1068
Brooklyn Boys' Choir 580
Brooks, Gerard org 394, 1192
Brouwer, Leo cond 808
Brown, Donna sop 154, 441, 447, 484, 486, 1076
Brown, Ian pf 96, 372, 498, 513, 730
Brown, Iona cond/dire 224, 464, 657, 664, 851
Brown, Iona vn 657, 658
Brown, Jonathan cond/dire 409, 1288
Brown, Jonathan bass 764, 1288
Brown, Nils ten 769
Brown, Rachel fl 543
Brown, Timothy cond 831, 1008, 1213
Browne, Geoffrey cora 18
Brua, Claire mez 413
Brua, Claire sop 157
Brüggen, Frans cond 37, 74, 105, 466, 647, 780, 1041
Brüggen, Frans rec 1041
Bruine, Frank de ob 12
Brummelstroete, Wilke te cont 74
Brunner, Eduard cl 669, 869
Bruns, Peter vc 178
Brunskill, Muriel cont 1070
Brunt, Andrew treb 335
Brussels National Opera Chorus 705
Brussels National Opera Orchestra 705
Brutscher, Markus ten 71
Bruun, Mogens va 1259
Brymer, Jack cl 646, 669
Bryn-Julson, Phyllis sop 554
Bucharest Philharmonic Choir 367
Bucharest Philharmonic Orchestra 367
Buchbinder, Rudolf pf 125
Büchsel, Walter fl 493
Budapest Camerata 322
Budapest Children's Choir Magnificat 530
Budapest Festival Orchestra 82, 84, 85, 340, 347, 530, 558, 1200
Budapest Symphony Orchestra 279
Budd, Jeremy treb 1218
Buet, Alain bar 274
Buet, Alain ten 237
Bukhtoyarov, Dmitri bass 1223
Bulgarian Male Chorus, Sofia 1350
Bullock, Susan sop 18, 496
Bumbry, Grace mez 1268
Buenos Aires Coral Lírico 726
Burchell, David org 1050
Burgess, Russell cond 235
Burgess, Russell ten 71
Burgess, Sally mez 317
Burnside, Iain pf 853
Burrowes, Connor treb 445
Burrowes, Edward treb 179
Burrowes, Norma sop 1062, 1070
Burrowes, Patrick treb 192
Burt, Robert ten 876
Burtt, Timothy treb 179
Busbridge, Judith va 826
Busch, Adolf vn 206
Bush, Alan pf 254
Busch, Christine vn 1103
Busch, Fritz cond 1254, 1325
Busch Quartet 206, 206, 867
Busher, Andrew ten 485, 1078
Buswell, James vn 79, 726
Butt, Yondani cond 530
Butt, Clara cont 366
Butt, John org 363
Butterfield, Peter ten 484, 485
Buwalda, Sytse alto 58, 67
Bychkov, Semyon cond 976, 1037
Bylsma, Anner vc 26, 478
Cabré, Josep bar 1311
Cachemaille, Gilles bar 108, 154, 158, 337
Callas, Maria sop 1232, 1332
Calvé, Emma sop 1232, 1255
Cambreling, Sylvain cond 705, 1328
Cambreling, Frédérique hp 147, 189, 633
Cambridge King's College Choir (Mens' Voices) 1215

Cambridge Singers 374, 831, 1211, 1212
Cambridge University Musical Society Chorus 364
Camden, Anthony ob 12
Camerata Academica 657
Camerata Nova 713
Camerata Singers 580
Cameron, John bar 153, 1062, 1063
Cámpa, Adela Gonzáles cast 1206
Campanini, Cleofonte pf 1269
Campbell, Colin bar 334, 876
Cannes Regional Orchestra 893
Canonici, Luca ten 1076
Cantamen 389
Cantate Domino Chorus 525
Cantelli, Guido cond 202, 305
Cantilena 1062
Cantus Choir 218
Cantus Cölln 169, 637, 915
Canzona (La) 179
Canzonetta 18
Capella Brugensis 821
(La) Capella Reial Instrumental Ensemble 1278
(La) Capella Reial Vocal Ensemble 1278
Capilla Flamenca 1277
Cappella Amsterdam 552
Cappella de' Turchini 270, 1300
Capriccio Stravagante 260, 439, 1300
Capricorn 1216
Capuana, Franco cond 1268
Capuçon, Gautier vc 463
Capuçon, Renaud vn 895
Carbonari, Virgilio bass 396
(The) Cardinall's Musick 262, 263, 264, 375, 376, 1097
Cardon, Stéphane cond 734
Carella, Giuliano cond 819
Carewe, Mary sop 7, 25
Cariven, Marcel cond 734
Carlsson, Roger perc 716
Carmignola, Giuliano bqvn 1110
Carmignola, Giuliano vn 41, 1106, 1109
Carmina Qt 477
Carol Case, John bar 375, 1062, 1070
Carol Case, John bass 1062
Carpenter, Nicholas cl 666
Carraro, Tiziana mez 1116
Carrington, Simon perc 427
Carter, William alte 1111
Carter, William gtr 1111
Carter, William theo 1111
Caruso, Enrico ten 1233, 1237, 1269
Caruso, Mariano ten 1268
Carwood, Andrew cond/dire 262, 263, 264, 375, 376, 1097
Carwood, Andrew ten 264, 485
Casa, Lisa della sop 674
Casadesus, Jean-Claude cond 729
Casals, Pablo cond 865
Casals, Pablo vc 43, 205, 340, 356, 865, 901, 1161
Casazza, Elvira mez 1239
Casazza, Enrico vn 1110
Cassard, Philippe pf 116
Cassedanne, Charlotte hp 493
Cassidy, Jennie mez 522
Cassinelli, Riccardo ten 1266
Cassone, Gabriele tpt 147, 1110
Cassuto, Alvaro cond 193
Castagna, Bruna mez 133, 1173
Castellani, Luisa sop 147
Castilla y León Symphony Orchestra 808, 810, 1055
Castro-Neves, Oscar gtr 725
Catalan Capella Reial 169
Catelinet, Philip tuba 1066
Catley, Gwen sop 1224
Caton, Frédéric bass 152
Caudle, Mark vada 765
Causse, Gérard va 208, 238, 306, 895
Caussé, Gérard va 150
Cavallier, Nicolas bass 781
Cavasanti, Lorenzo rec 1110
Cave, Philip cond 811, 1014
Cavina, Claudio dire 599
Cazauran, Bernard db 337
CBC Symphony Orchestra 991, 992
Cebotari, Maria sop 584
Celibidache, Sergiu cond 200, 242
Cellini, Renato cond 1265
Cello Ensemble 1259
Cerasi, Carole hpd 31, 516, 1050
Cerutti, Michel perc 189
Cesari, Renato bar 1268
Cesarini, Athos ten 396
Chachamov, Revital pf 341
Chadwell, Tracey sop 828, 1233
Chailly, Riccardo cond 6, 395, 493, 549, 592, 594, 772, 814, 815, 819, 822, 851, 855, 925, 993, 996, 1059, 1076, 1078, 1157, 1230, 4491
Chalabala, Zdenek cond 345, 354
Challan, Annie hp 370
Chamber Choir of the Royal Welsh College of Music & Drama 354
Chamber Ensemble 993, 1147
Chamber Orchestra 532
Chamber Orchestra of Europe 33, 98, 105, 107, 108, 133, 135, 355, 464, 649, 652, 743, 744, 808, 846, 858, 869, 895, 913, 1103
Champs-Elysées Orchestra, Paris 155, 375
Chance, Michael alto 67, 68, 69, 73, 443, 444, 445, 508, 764, 765, 767, 1068, 1155, 1329
Chandos Baroque Players 1155
Chang, Han-Na vc 741, 1168
Chang, Sarah vn 539, 710, 1023, 1034, 1064
Chanticleer 1212
Chapelle du Roi 1013
(La) Chapelle Royale Choir 375
Chapple, Stanley pf 1242
Charlier, Olivier vn 337, 538
Charlston, Terence hpd 39
Charnley, Milne pf 1259
Charpentier, Maryse pf 734
Chase, Roger va 96, 372
Cheetham, Richard dire 1311
Cheetham, Richard sack 1311
Chen, Hsuan-Ya pf 277
Cherkassky, Shura pf 284, 1189
Cherrier, Sophie fl 147, 188, 515
Chertock, Michael pf 996
Chetham's Chamber Choir 5
Chetham's Symphony Orchestra 1038
Chicago Lyric Opera Chorus 410
Chicago Symphony Chorus 243, 410, 1077
Chicago Symphony Orchestra 84, 85, 142, 194, 195, 196, 243, 369, 571, 579, 588, 589, 740, 835, 851, 929, 975, 978, 991, 1048, 1056, 1060, 1077, 1161, 1162, 1172, 1321, 1325
Chilcott, Robert treb 375
Chilingirian Quartet 277, 349, 1276
Chistyakova, Irina cont 748
Cho, Young-Chang vc 601
Choeur des Musiciens du Louvre 405, 443, 451, 454, 569, 703, 782, 1347
Choeurs Russes de Paris 691
Choir of Saint Thomas Church, Fifth Avenue 1220
Choir of the Age of Enlightenment 75
Chojnacka, Elisabeth hpd 410, 729
Chorus Musicus 891, 913
Chotzinoff, Samuel pf 1240
Chou, Chia pf 798
Christ, Tanjia va 1034
Christ, Wolfram va 35, 1034
Christ Church Cathedral Choir, Oxford 351, 485, 636, 921
Christiansen, Christian bass 912
Christie, James David org 1008
Christie, William cond 273, 276, 319, 392, 449, 450, 454, 636, 674, 685, 767, 768, 781, 782, 783, 784
Christie, William dire 638
Christie, William hpd/org 638
Christodoulou, Nikos cond 956
Christoff, Boris bass 689, 1234
Christophers, Harry cond 259, 734, 767, 920, 1021
Chum, Johannes ten 981
Chung, Myung-Whun cond 151, 343, 344, 626, 627,

694, 815, 837, 937, 1088
Chung, Kyung-Wha vn 84, 239, 382, 835, 939, 1023, 1024
Chung, Myung-Whun pf 1227
Ciampolini, Daniel perc 189
Cillario, Carlo Felice cond 1332
Cimara, Pietro cond 1259
Cincinnati Pops Chorale 969
Cincinnati Pops Orchestra 969
Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra 803, 932, 996, 1099
Cislowska, Tamara Anna pf 920
City of Barcelona Orchestra 1222
City of Birmingham Symphony Orchestra 3, 6, 21, 24, 82, 85, 86, 101, 231, 256, 296, 356, 359, 415, 423, 468, 489, 502, 519, 583, 585, 588, 605, 616, 626, 632, 745, 790, 834, 851, 928, 944, 948, 996, 998, 1006, 1009, 1010, 1069, 1132, 1134, 1140, 1169, 1186, 1240
City of Birmingham Symphony Orchestra Chorus 188, 256, 519, 583, 1010
City of Birmingham Symphony Youth Chorus 1010
City of London Sinfonia 17, 236, 374, 379, 402, 419, 503, 504, 512, 831, 1046, 1107, 1329
City of London Sinfonia Brass 1212
Claessens, Hubert bass 1096
Claesson, Urban cl 940
Clancy, Robert theo 1306
Clare College Choir, Cambridge 180, 831, 1008, 1213
Claret, Lluis vc 1222
Clarey, Cynthia sop 1056
Clark, Andrew hn 7, 1105
Clarkson, Gustav va 507
Clavier, Denis vn 428
(Denis) Clavier Quartet 428
Clayton, Julian cond 1038
Cleaver, Michael pf 540
Clee, Benjamin alto 273
Clement, Manfred ob 974
Clément, Edmond ten 1235
Cleobury, Nicholas cond 162, 609, 647, 648, 974
Cleobury, Nicholas org 351
Cleobury, Stephen cond 7, 411, 443, 1215, 1334
Cleobury, Stephen org 335
Clerch, Joaquín gtr 810
Clerck, Paul de va 461
(The) Clerks' Group 329, 523, 701, 702
Cleva, Fausto cond 1259, 1268
Cleveland Orchestra 6, 104, 107, 194, 342, 584, 626, 630, 743, 788, 850, 897, 916, 959, 975, 991, 993, 994, 996, 1325
Cleveland Orchestra Chorus 959, 994, 1140
Cleveland Quartet 120, 209
Cluytens, André cond 704, 734, 834, 924
Coates, Albert cond 1131
Cochran, William ten 581
Cocset, Bruno vc 1315
Cohen, Arnaldo pf 563
Cohen, Jeff pf 159, 332
Cohen, Robert vc 376
Cohïn-Akenine, Patrick dire 1314
Coin, Christophe cond/dire 181, 237, 1043
Coin, Christophe bvio 597, 1263
Coin, Christophe vada 1043
Coin, Christophe vc 157, 181, 1104
Coker, Paul pf 535
Cokorinos, Philip bass 153
Cold, Ulrik bass 519, 979
Cole, Jo vc 389
Coleman-Wright, Peter bar 316
Colitto, Lorenzo vn 1110
(The) Collegiate Singers 508
Collegium Cartusianum 71
Collegium Instrumentale 525
Collegium Instrumentale Brugense 821
Collegium Musicum 90 11, 68, 431, 432, 435, 442, 481, 482, 483, 484, 511, 543, 544, 765, 1040, 1109, 1117
Collegium Musicum 90 Chorus 68, 481, 482, 483, 484, 511, 765
Collegium Vocale 67, 260, 375, 764
Collegium Vocale Orchestra 67, 764
Collier, Frederick bass 1131
Collingwood, Lawrance cond 1131, 1224, 1266, 1271
Collins, Anthony cond 228, 946, 1138
Collins, Michael cl 3, 88, 96, 177, 209, 269, 299, 646
Collon, Nicholas org 831
Collot, Delphine sop 237
Cologne Gürzenich Orchestra 240, 1345
Cologne Musica Antiqua 37, 38, 64, 487, 1040, 1175, 1176, 1255
Cologne Radio Chorus 495, 984, 1146, 1158
Cologne Radio Symphony Orchestra 495, 976, 984, 1146
Colombara, Carlo bass 1076
(La) Colombina Ensemble 1279
Colomer, Edmon cond 368
Columbia Chamber Ensemble 991
Columbia Percussion Ensemble 991
Columbia Symphony Orchestra 204, 298, 390, 991, 992, 1259
Columbus Boychoir 754
Comberti, Sebastian vc 30, 507
Comissiona, Sergiu cond 895
Comparato, Marina mez 1116
(Il) Complesso Barocco 450, 452, 567, 641, 4557
Concentus Hungaricus 1336
Concentus Musicus 73, 1041
(Le) Concert des Nations 111, 169, 433, 568
(Le) Concert des Tuileries 820
(Le) Concert Français 32
(Le) Concert Spirituel Chorus 275
(Le) Concert Spirituel Orchestra 274, 275
(Le) Concert Spirituel Soloists 295
(Le) Concert Spirituel Vocal Ensemble 275, 567
Concertgebouw Chamber Orchestra 855
Concertgebouw Choir 926, 932
(Royal) Concertgebouw Orchestra, Amsterdam 100, 102, 103, 151, 196, 199, 204, 239, 241, 247, 304, 345, 347, 358, 371, 469, 493, 539, 549, 581, 582, 594, 770, 773, 797, 805, 855, 859, 860, 925, 926, 927, 932, 959, 976, 977, 993, 996, 1031, 1059, 1157, 1187, 1230
Concerto Amsterdam 64, 1041
Concerto Armonico 26, 27
Concerto delle Viole 1262
Concerto Italiano 384, 392, 448, 598, 598, 637, 639, 640, 722, 1104, 1111, 1117
Concerto Köln 378, 453, 617
Concerto Palatino 169, 385, 637, 915
Concerto Soave 1307
Concerto Vocale 640, 642
Concordia 1302
Conley, Eugene ten 110, 580
Conlon, James cond 240, 999, 1345
Connell, Elizabeth sop 589, 618, 1070
Connell, John bass 1010, 1070
Connolly, Sarah mez 853
Conquer, Jeanne-Marie vn 147
Consiglio, Mario cond 1265
Console, Héctor db 725
Consort of Musicke 1301
Constable, John pf 410, 1225
Constantine, Andrew cond 196
Cook, Alastair treb 179
Coombs, Stephen pf 401, 633, 919
Cooper, Gary org 536
Cooper, Imogen pf 874, 891, 909, 910, 1243
Copenhagen Boys' Choir 519, 695, 979
Copenhagen Philharmonic Orchestra 981
Copenhagen Royal Orchestra 1259, 1260
Copenhagen Trio 774
Copenhagen Youth Orchestra 1259
Copland, Aaron cond 298
Copland, Aaron pf 81, 991
Coppey, Marc vc 116, 731
Coppola, Lorenzo cl 1110
Coppola, Walter ten 352
Corboz, Michel cond 877
Cordes, Manfred cond 914
Cordier, Pierre vc 429
Corliss, Frank pf 725
Cornwell, Joseph ten 179, 192, 638, 999
Coro del Maggio Musicale Fiorentino 1345
Coro di Camera Accademia Nazionale di Santa Cecilia 1116

Corp, Ronald cond 383, 839, 1165
Corréas, Jérôme bass 157, 237
Cortese, Glen Barton cond 812
Cortese, Paul va 494, 633
Cortot, Alfred pf 291, 311, 834, 901, 902, 1269
Corydon Brass Ensemble 956
Corydon Orchestra 132, 152, 251, 278, 380, 1068, 1101
Corydon Singers 132, 152, 163, 251, 278, 335, 380, 508, 956, 1036, 1068, 1070, 1101
Coryn, Franck db 821
Cossotto, Fiorenza mez 1229, 1330
Costa, Neal Peres da hpd 28
Coste, Sharon sop 268
Costoyas, Dolores vihu 1294
Cotrubas, Ileana sop 581
Cottone, Salvatore pf 1223
Courtis, Jean-Philippe bass 720
Covey-Crump, Rogers ten 67, 179, 763, 764, 765, 768, 7684
Cox, Michael fl 176
Coxwell, Janet sop 508, 1068
Crabtree, Libby sop 443, 623, 830
Cracknell, Graham vn 30
Cracow Boys' Choir 720
Cracow Chamber Choir 564
Cracow Philharmonic Chorus 721
Cracow Polish Radio Chorus 1009
Craft, Robert cond 852, 854, 999
Craig, Charles ten 317
Cranham, Lynden vc 1042
Crawford, Joseph ten 81
Crawford-Phillips, Simon pf 1182
Crayford, Marcia vn 96, 372
Creed, Marcus cond 213, 733, 816, 877
Creese, Malcolm db 1211
Crespin, Régine sop 155, 982, 1234
Creswick, Bradley vn 379, 1070
Crimi, Giulio ten 1258
Crispi, Massimo ten 841
Critical Band 1154
Croft, Richard ten 454
Crook, Howard ten 67, 73, 445
Cropper, Peter vn 668
Cross, Joan sop 1224, 1271
Crossley, Paul pf 373, 521, 1011
Crouch, Ruth vn 575
Crouch End Festival Chorus 1237
Cullen, Joseph org 1098, 1317
Cummings, Douglas vc 865
Cummings, Laurence org 393
Cunningham, Sarah vada 39
Cura, José ten 753
Curror, Ian org 334
Curt, Emmanuel vib 626
Curtis, Alan cond 450
Curtis, Alan dire 452, 567, 641, 4557
Curtis, Alan hpd/org 452, 567, 641, 4557
Curzon, Clifford pf 197, 198, 207, 381, 654, 655, 864, 1190
Cyferstein, Serge pf 413
Czech Boys' Choir 1155
Czech Philharmonic Chamber Orchestra 1340
Czech Philharmonic Chorus 601, 960
Czech Philharmonic Orchestra 306, 340, 341, 343, 344, 345, 348, 351, 353, 356, 517, 539, 601, 618, 958, 959, 960, 999, 1002, 1169
Czech Piano Trio 534
Czech Radio Symphony Orchestra 217
Czidra, László rec 1103
Dael, Lucy van vn 466
Dallapozza, Adolf ten 875
Dallas Symphony Orchestra 297, 532, 929, 1163
Dam-Jensen, Inger sop 447
Damiens, Alain cl 147, 189
Damm, Peter hn 974
Damrosch, Walter cond 203
Daneman, Sophie sop 132, 179, 319, 449, 636, 781
Daniel, Paul cond 9, 145, 362, 623, 1134, 1136, 1137, 1268
Daniel, Nicholas cora 17
Daniel, Nicholas ob 176, 647, 648, 668
Daniels, Charles ten 70, 441, 445, 763, 764, 765, 915, 1112, 1115
Daniels, David alto 439, 443, 454, 840, 1229, 1234
Daniels, David vc 321
Danielson, Glen hn 726
Danish National Opera Chorus 318
Danish National Radio Choir 519, 541, 695, 698, 800, 912, 979
Danish National Radio Chorus 500, 501
Danish National Radio Symphony Orchestra 386, 387, 500, 501, 505, 519, 541, 693, 695, 697, 698, 912, 989
Danish Quartet 697
Danish Radio Chamber Choir 697
Danish Radio Sinfonietta 499
Dante Quartet 826, 827
Danz, Ingeborg cont 74
Danz, Ingeborg mez 672
Darlington, Stephen cond 485, 636, 921
Darman, Max Bragado cond 808, 810, 1055
Dart, Thurston hpd 767
Dausgaard, Thomas cond 541
Davidov, Aleksandr ten 1223
Davidson, Angus alto 70
Davidsson, Christian hn 166
Davies, Dennis Russell cond 265, 395, 398, 526, 1057, 1361
Davies, Meredith cond 319, 1072
Davies, Peter cond 329
Davies, Timothy cond 329
Davies, Walford cond 366
Davies, Arthur ten 364, 365, 1070
Davies, Bryan org 1268
Davies, Bryan pf 1268
Davies, Gerald ten 1224
Davies, Laurence hn 898
Davies, Maldwyn ten 442, 483, 1070
Davies, Neal bar 337, 445, 623, 1112
Davies, Neal bass 442, 447, 885, 886, 1115, 1324
Davies, Paul Edmund fl 791
Davies, Philippa fl/picc 96, 730, 837
Davies, Tudor ten 366
Davis, Andrew cond 105, 171, 199, 224, 315, 316, 336, 357, 361, 362, 503, 584, 1012, 1046, 1056, 1065, 1141, 1324, 1342, 1344, 1353
Davis, Carl cond 1149
Davis, Colin cond 149, 150, 151, 153, 157, 158, 159, 161, 197, 235, 236, 345, 346, 360, 421, 453, 469, 608, 646, 656, 678, 755, 760, 945, 947, 949, 950, 981, 1023, 1047, 1048
Davis, Agnes sop 336
Davis, Michael vn 791, 1046
Davis, Richard fl 6371
Davislim, Steve ten 109, 981
Dawson, Anne sop 1070
Dawson, Herbert org 1265
Dawson, Lynne sop 69, 188, 441, 444, 447, 454, 673, 826, 885, 886
Dawson, Peter bbar 366
De Billy, Bertrand cond 159
De Cogan, Dara vn 223
Dearden, Ian taop 171
Dearnley, Christopher org 1191
Deas, Kevin bass 1059
Debost, Michel fl 793
Debussy, Claude pf 311
Dechorgnat, Patrick pf 651
Decroos, Jean vc 669
Dedyukhin, Alexander pf 1171
Deferne, Sylviane pf 729
Defontaine, Martial ten 187
Deguy, Sylvie mez 268
Deinzer, Hans cl 626
Del Mar, Norman cond 156, 195, 235, 254, 314, 502, 825, 931, 963, 1177
Delaigue, Renaud bass 640
Delft, Menno van hpd 1007
Deliau, Vincent bar 157
Deller, Alfred alto 1271, 1301
Delmé Quartet 955, 955
Delunsch, Mireille sop 155, 1059
Demertzis, Georgios vn 956, 957
Demeyere, Ewald hpd 821

Demidenko, Nikolai pf 295, 560, 612, 776, 916
Demus, Jörg pf 566, 887, 890
Denize, Nadine mez 589
Denk, Jeremy pf 1179
Denley, Catherine mez 163, 334, 441, 445, 886, 1112, 1113, 1114
Dennis Brain Wind Ensemble 1176
Dent, Susan hn 897
Depardieu, Gérard spkr 159
Depoltová, Eva sop 602
Deppe, François vc 461
Dermota, Anton ten 674
Dervaux, Pierre cond 734
Derwinger, Love pf 951
Desborough School Choir 336
Desjardins, Christophe va 147
Desmond, Astra cont 1070
Desormière, Roger cond 311
Dessay, Natalie sop 671, 675
Dessì, Daniella sop 815, 4491
Destinn, Emmy sop 1251
Detroit Symphony Orchestra 271, 299, 1027, 1036, 1166
Deubner, Maacha sop 526
Deutsch, Helmut pf 215, 891, 910
Deutsche Kammerakademie Neuss 545
Deutsche Kammerphilharmonie, Bremen 894
Devoyon, Pascal pf 277, 372, 832, 833, 836
Diaconescu, Florin ten 367
Diaz, Raul hn 1040
Dickerson, Bernard ten 1062, 1070
Dickey, Bruce cond 385
Dickie, William bar 1232
Dickinson, Meriel cont 1062
Dickinson, Meriel mez 1070
Didur, Adam bass 1223
Dieleman, Marianne cont 581
Dieltiens, Roel dire 1103
Dieltiens, Roel vc 1103
Diener, Melanie sop 854
Dijk, Pieter van org 1007
Ding, Lucy cond 410
Dinkin, Alvin va 850, 865
Dippel, Andreas ten 1232
Dirksen, Pieter hpd 1007
Diry, Roland cl 801
Discantus 1279
Dittrich, Michael cond 970
Divertimenti 507
Dixon, Alistair cond 1013
Dixon, Peter vc 1166, 6371
Djupsjöbacka, Gustav pf 577
Dobber, Andrezej bar 409
Dobozy, Borbála hpd 1103
Dobroven, Issay cond 613, 691, 1234, 1264
Dohnányi, Christoph von cond 194, 959, 1122, 1336
Dolezal, VladimIr ten 217
Dolton, Geoffrey bar 631
Domingo, Plácido cond 369, 753, 1358
Domingo, Plácido ten 1120
Dominguez, Rosa sop 267, 392
Domus 349, 371, 372
Donath, Helen sop 623, 875
Donatis, Fiorenza de vn 1110
Donohoe, Peter pf 82, 176, 489, 564, 626, 795, 996, 1136, 1139
Donose, Ruxandra mez 352
Dorati, Antál cond 299, 312, 340, 347, 465, 487, 538, 959, 1024
Doufexis, Stella mez 911
Douglass, David dire 1013
Douglass, David vn 1013
Doulce Mémoire 1280
Doumenge, Pierre vc 827
Douse, Stephen ten 318
Dowd, Ronald ten 158, 453
Dowling, Denis bar 1005
Downer, Jane rec 435
Downes, Edward cond 361, 1074, 1265, 1356
Downside School Boys' Choir 234
Dowson, Stephen bbar 1268
D'Oyly Carte Opera Chorus 1004, 1006
D'Oyly Carte Opera Orchestra 1004, 1006
Drahos, Béla dire/fl 1102
Drake, Julius pf 490, 880, 908, 951, 1231, 1329
Dresden Kreuzchor 1214
Dresden State Opera Chorus 1127, 1129
Dreyfus, Huguette hpd 337
Driscoll, Loren ten 991
Drottningholm Court Theatre Chorus 404
Drottningholm Court Theatre Orchestra 404, 1230
Drury, David org 920
Drury Byrne, Aisling vc 572
Du Brassus Choir 704
Du Pré, Jacqueline vc 121, 355, 364, 896, 1161
Duarte, Roberto cond 1099
Dubois, Cyrille treb 237
Duchâble, François-René pf 238
(René) Duclos Choir 838, 1232
Dufour, Mathieu fl 306
Dufourcet, Marie-Bernadette org 1053
Duftschmid, Lorenz vion 1306
Dugardin, Steve alto 179
Dukel, Franciska mez 260
Dukes, Philip va 140, 141, 964, 1012, 1072
Dumay, Augustin vn 210, 211, 307, 424, 657, 669, 895
Dumbarton Oaks Chamber Orchestra 81
Dun, Tan cond 1015
Dune, Catherine sop 428
Dunn, Vivian cond 1006
Dunn, Susan sop 594, 855
Dupré, Desmond gtr/lte 1301
Duquesnoy, Jean-François hn 731
Durvesh, Aref tabl 1201
Dussek, Michael pf 77, 548, 826, 827, 828
Dussek, Rachel pf 828
Düsseldorf Musikverein Chorus 594, 855
Dutch Radio Philharmonic Orchestra 1335
Duthoit, Marie-Louise sop 273
Dutilleux, Henri pf 337
Dutoit, Charles cond 83, 153, 154, 160, 280, 311, 336, 369, 408, 502, 505, 539, 706, 710, 725, 729, 730, 732, 740, 742, 835, 836, 1024, 1028
Duval, Pierre ten 1266
Duven, Richard vc 863
Dyadkova, Larissa mez 1236
Dyball, Jeffrey hp 159
Eadie, Noel sop 1131
Eaglen, Jane sop 250, 1324
Eames, Emma sop 1255
Early Music Consort of London 1281
East, Angela vc 443
East Anglian Choirs 219
East Suffolk Children's Orchestra 235
Easton, Florence sop 1131
Easton, Robert bass 366, 1070
Ebbinge, Ku ob 466
Ebrahim, Omar bar 554
Echániz, José pf 1261
Economou, Nicholas pf 1023
Edelmann, Otto bass 114
Eder, György vc 1103
Edgar-Wilson, Richard ten 192, 297, 968
Edinburgh Festival Chorus 623, 681, 1158
Edison, Noel cond 1068
Edwards, John Owen cond 164
Edwards, Deryn mez 519
Edwards, Gavin hn 897
Edwards, Jack spkr 192
Edwards, Sian cond 1024, 1025
Egarr, Richard hpd 41, 47, 300, 387, 435, 715, 797
Egener, Minnie mez 1237
Ehlert, Sibylle sop 554
Ehrling, Sixten cond 166
Eichelberger, Freddy hpd/org 1007, 1280
Eilander, Maxine hp 1316
Eisdell, Hubert ten 366
Ejsing, Mette cont 697
El-Tour, Anna sop 1223
Elder, Mark cond 140, 256, 502, 8573
Elgar, Edward cond 357, 359

Elgar, Edward pf 359
Elkins, Margreta mez 1266
Elliott, Paul ten 266, 764
Ellis, Gregory vn 299
Ellis, Osian hp 18, 382
Elmo, Cloe mez 1076
Elms, Roderick pf 5
Elora Festival Singers 1068
Ely Cathedral Choir 1214
Elyma Ensemble 1051
Elysian Singers of London 318
Emanuel School Boys' Choir 229, 234, 589
Emerson Quartet 87, 207, 207, 348, 515, 933
Emilia Romagna 'Toscanini' Symphony Orchestra 396
Emperor Quartet 575, 1139
Endellion Quartet 7, 1072
Endo, Yoshiko pf 796
Endrödy, Sandor hn 877
Engel, Karl pf 214, 849, 890, 1152
Engel, Norman tpt 769
Engerer, Brigitte pf 893
Engeset, Bjarte cond 1058
English, Gerald ten 707
English Bach Festival Chorus 998
English Bach Festival Orchestra 998
English Bach Festival Percussion Ensemble 998
English Baroque Soloists 37, 67, 68, 69, 73, 133, 406, 441, 442, 444, 447, 450, 484, 485, 486, 642, 664, 673, 678, 679, 681, 682, 1344
English Chamber Orchestra 1, 21, 22, 71, 153, 187, 219, 221, 223, 224, 231, 234, 252, 267, 302, 335, 339, 342, 352, 510, 545, 617, 645, 649, 650, 651, 654, 655, 656, 767, 821, 924, 1019, 1034, 1070, 1161, 1169, 1235
(The) English Concert 36, 67, 192, 300, 404, 431, 433, 434, 445, 483, 1230, 1341
(The) English Concert Choir 445, 483
English National Opera Chorus 326, 453, 1003, 1092, 1130, 1149, 1340
English National Opera Orchestra 326, 453, 1003, 1092, 1130, 1149, 1340
English Northern Philharmonia 161, 175, 176, 540, 1134, 1136, 1137, 1142, 1268
English Opera Group Chorus 233, 234
English Opera Group Ensemble 228, 1138
English Opera Group Orchestra 233, 235, 236
English Sinfonia 1230
English String Orchestra 379
English String Quartet 1176
English Symphony Orchestra 846
Ensemble 415 452, 1116
Ensemble Clément Janequin 1281
Ensemble Explorations 1103
Ensemble Gilles Binchois 170
Ensemble InterContemporain, Paris 188, 189, 190, 551, 855, 1060, 1329
Ensemble Modern 801, 804, 1056
Ensemble Organum 1272
Ensemble Oriol 813
Ensemble Sonnerie 1103
Ensemble Unicorn 8
Ensemble Vocal Européen 542
Ensemble Zefiro 1155
Entremont, Philippe cond 1026
EntreQuatre Quitar Quartet 808
Eötvös, Peter cond 83, 86, 460
Equilbey, Laurence cond 731
Erb, Karl ten 1153
Erben, Frank-Michael vn 1321
Ercolani, Renato ten 1232
Erede, Alberto cond 1224, 1265, 1268
(Eric) Ericson Chamber Choir 1075, 1330
Erisman, Andreas hpd 34
Erlebach, Rudy pf 390
Erlingsson, Loftur bar 547
Ermolenko-Yuzhina, Natalia sop 1223
Ernman, Malena sop 554
Ernst Senff Chorus 203, 854
Ernst-Senff Women's Chorus 619
(The) Eroica Quartet 900
Ershov, Ivan ten 1223
Erskine, Peter druk 1056
Eschenbach, Christoph cond 832, 894, 981, 1230
Eschenbach, Christoph pf 881, 894, 906
Eschenbrenner, Isabelle sop 374
Eschenburg, Hans-Jakob vc 892
Esher, Joel treb 338
Eskin, Jules vc 371
(Nicolaus) Esterházy Sinfonia 134, 538, 1102, 1103
Estevan, Pedro perc 1315
Estonian National Symphony Orchestra 717, 1055
Estonian Philharmonic Chamber Choir 719, 1057
Europa Galante 182, 841, 1105, 1106, 1110
European Union Children's Choir 158
Eusebio, José De cond 10
Evangelatos, Daphne cont 1037
Evans, Michael vc 39
Evans, Nancy cont 1164
Evans, Peter pf 575
Evans, Peter ten 152
Evans, Rebecca sop 316
Evans, Robert bar 522
Evans, Robert bass 763, 765
Evans, Robert ten 1302
Evans, Wynford ten 69, 1062, 1070
Evreux, Pierre ten 274
Evtodieva, Victoria sop 936
Ewing, Alan bass 449, 999
Ewing, Maria sop 790
Ex Cathedra Baroque Orchestra 1115
Ex Cathedra Chamber Choir 1115
Ex Tempore 28
Fabre-Garrus, Bernard cond 16, 523, 524
Fabritiis, Oliviero De cond 756, 1268
Fagen, Arthur cond 572
Fagius, Hans org 335
Failoni Chamber Orchestra, Budapest 65, 817
Fallas, Richard bass 1078
Fanciullacci, Paolo ten 392
Fantinuoli, Antonio vc 1110
Faris, Alexander cond 1005
Farley, Carole sop 813
Farm Street Singers 1266
Farr, Stephen org 7, 965, 966
Farrall, Joy cl 647, 648, 974
Farrar, Geraldine sop 1233, 1235
Farrell, Eileen sop 110
Farrington, Ian org 508
Fasolis, Diego cond 278
Fassbaender, Brigitte mez 214, 594, 855, 875, 889
Faust, Georg vc 1034
Faust, Isabelle vn 87, 88, 459
Faux, Francis treb 1317
Favero, Mafalda sop 1252
Favres Solisten Vereinigung 685
Fear, Arthur bass 1131
Feasey, Norman pf 1264
Fedoseyev, Vladimir cond 748
Fehenberger, Lorenz ten 1243
Feinberg, Alan pf 97, 376
Feldman, Jonathan pf 1023, 1179
Félix, Thierry bass 638
Fellner, Till pf 122
Fenby, Eric cond 314
Fenby, Eric pf 316
Ferendinos, Tano ten 1224
Fergus-Thompson, Gordon pf 918
Fernandez, François vn 440, 544
Fernández, Eduardo gtr 22
Ferran, Dominique org 16
Ferrara Ensemble 1282
Ferrarini, Gianluca ten 392
Ferras, Christian vn 1029
Ferré, Eugène bqtr 1104
Ferrier, Kathleen cont 366, 580, 584, 593, 1224
Ferro, Gabriele cond 1230
(I) Fiamminghi 717
Fibonacci Sequence (The) 812
Fiedler, Arthur cond 390
Figner, Nikolai ten 1223
Figueras, Montserrat sop 1288, 1289, 1306

Filipova, Elena sop 1076
Filsell, Jeremy org 332, 333, 334, 1054
Finchley Children's Music Group 401, 620, 727
Fingerhut, Margaret pf 92, 96
Fink, Bernarda cont 73, 251, 267, 445, 485, 640, 841
Fink, Bernarda mez 907
Fink, Bernarda sop 665
Finkelstein, Evgeni gtr 1190
Finley, Gerald bar 152, 486, 886
Finley, Gerald bass 484
Finnie, Linda mez 364, 747, 804
Finnilä, Birgit mez 581
Finnis, Catherine viol 763
Finnish Brass Symphony 787
Finnish Opera Festival Chorus 953
Finnish Philharmonic Choir 784
Finnish Radio Chamber Choir 787, 832
Finnish Radio Symphony Orchestra 303, 338, 694, 696, 698, 831, 832, 953, 1098, 1144
Finzi Singers 227, 380, 503, 548, 1049, 1143
Fioravanti, Giulio bar 1268
Fiorentino, Sergio pf 560
Firkušný, Rudolf pf 518
Fischer, Adám cond 320, 467, 468
Fischer, György cond 675
Fischer, Iván cond 6, 82, 84, 85, 340, 347, 530, 558, 1200
Fischer, Annie pf 1190
Fischer, Edwin pf 47, 129, 884
Fischer, György pf 1227
Fischer-Dieskau, Dietrich cond 896, 982, 1079, 1120
Fischer-Dieskau, Dietrich bar 214, 216, 223, 230, 232, 459, 566, 580, 582, 594, 622, 706, 849, 875, 881, 887, 889, 890, 906, 926, 927, 1145, 1226, 1229, 1332
Fisher, Gillian sop 765, 767
Fisher, Roger org 1191
Fisk, Elliot gtr 147
Fistoulari, Anatole cond 312, 1189, 1234
Fitches, Thomas org 1068
Fitzwilliam Quartet 477, 933, 1177
Flagello, Ezio bass 1266
Flagstad, Kirsten sop 1361
Flanigan, Lauren sop 812
Flannery, Susan sop 519
Flechl, Elisabeth sop 877
Fleet, Edgar ten 153
Fleisher, Leon pf 104
Fleming, Renée sop 623, 737, 881, 981, 1100, 1235, 1236
Fletcher, Lyn vn 223
Flieder, Raphael vc 877
Florence Maggio Musicale Chorus 139, 325, 1083, 1232
Florence Maggio Musicale Orchestra 139, 325, 1083, 1232, 1266, 1268
Florestan Trio 121, 210, 306, 350, 867, 900
Flórez, Juan Diego ten 815, 1076
Florilegium Ensemble 1041, 1042, 1112, 1302
Florio, Antonio cond 270, 1300
Flügel, Gertrud viol 1301
Foley, Madeline vc 205
Fontaine, Robert cl 626
Fontanarosa, Renaud vc 793
Forbes, Andrew Dale bass 179, 192
Forck, Bernhard dire 404
Forck, Bernhard vn 35
Ford, Bruce ten 631, 816, 1236, 1253
Ford, Ian treb 525
Foresti, Sergio bass 392
Forrester, Maureen cont 580, 581
Forsberg, Bengt pf 144, 191, 215, 272, 426, 887, 906, 950, 951, 1255
Forster, Markus alto 1155
Forti, Carlo bass 1232, 1252
Foss, Lukas pf 991
Foster, Lawrence cond 616, 1171
Fouchécourt, Jean-Paul ten 158, 237, 1303
Fournier, Pierre vc 43, 340
Fousek, Josef perc 1002
Fowke, Philip pf 6, 314
Fowler, Bruce ten 816
Fox, Jacqueline spkr 483
Fradkin, Frederic vn 1258
Frager, Malcolm pf 974
Fraia, Stefano di ten 270
Francesch, Homero pf 998
Francis, Alun cond 379, 723
Franck, Mikko cond 942
Frank, Pamela vn 211, 282, 657
Frankfurt Radio Orchestra 1147
Frankfurt Radio Symphony Orchestra 19, 20, 493, 739
Franzetti, Elisa sop 392
Frasca, Dominic egtr 801
Frederiksen, Tim va 499
Fredman, Myer cond 93
Fredriksson, Karl-Magnus bar 13
Freiburg Baroque Orchestra 66, 451
Freire, Nelson pf 772
Frémaux, Louis cond 605
French Army Chorus 159, 413
French National Orchestra 174, 311, 336, 730, 732, 751, 824
French National Radio Orchestra 626, 1169
French National Radio Symphony Orchestra 173, 1232
French New Philharmonic Orchestra 734
French Radio Choir 173, 732, 734
French Radio Chorus 174, 751
French Radio National MaÓtrise 732
French Radio National Orchestra 173, 689, 691, 835, 924
French String Trio 370
Fretwork 38, 140, 254, 262, 565, 1021, 1283, 1303
Freund, Pia sop 787
Fricsay, Ferenc cond 82, 680, 1186
Frideswide Consort 263
Fried, Miriam vn 939
Friedman, Ignaz pf 1191
Friedman, Richard vn 1165
Friedrich, Reinhold tpt 493
Friend, Lionel cond 794
Friends of Sibelius 953
Fries, Dorothee sop 1044
Frimmer, Monika sop 60, 74, 75
Frith, Benjamin pf 362, 377, 378, 617, 622, 903
Froeliger, Philippe ten 57
Fröhlich, Christian cond 962
Fromm, Nancy Wait sop 694
Frost, John bass 153
Fröst, Martin cl 21
Frühbeck de Burgos, Rafael cond 369, 370, 421, 1222, 1359
Fry, Howard bar 1131
Fryatt, John ten 996
Fuchs, Marta sop 1153
Fugère, Lucien bar 1255
Fukacová, Michaela vc 700, 1002
Fulgoni, Sara cont 278
Fulgoni, Sara mez 623
Fullbrook, Charles bell 1019
Fuller, Andrew vc 77, 548
Fullington, Andrea voc 266
Furtwängler, Wilhelm cond 106, 112, 114, 201, 1119, 1325, 1344
Futtrup, Mikkel vn 499
Gabarain, Marina de mez 369
Gabriel, Alain ten 157
Gabrieli Consort 70, 73, 385, 386, 436, 445, 447, 643, 921, 1097, 1304
Gabrieli Players. 70, 73, 385, 386, 436, 445, 447, 643, 1304
Gabrieli Quartet 185, 206, 429, 645
Gächinger Kantorei, Stuttgart 74
Gadd, Charmian vn 601
Gadulanka, Jadwiga sop 1009
Gaetani, Jan de mez 494
Gage, Irwin pf 352, 882, 883
Gajard, Dom Joseph cond 1274
Galassi, Mara hp 392
Galbraith, Paul gtr 43
Galimir Quartet 143
Gallardo-Domâs, Cristina sop 1076, 1237
Gallén, Ricardo gtr 808, 810
Galli, Emanuela sop 967, 1300
Galli-Curci, Amelita sop 1237, 1261
Galliera, Alceo cond 1232

Gallois, Pascal bn 147
Gallois, Patrick fl 694, 784, 1012, 1102
Galloway, Jennifer ob 24
Galway, James fl 39
Gamba, Rumon cond 5, 18, 23, 24, 25, 141, 796
Gambill, Robert ten 545
Gandini, Gerardo pf 725
Gandolfi, Alfredo bar 1253
Garbarek, Jan sax 1183, 1289
Gardelli, Lamberto cond 279, 396, 1085, 1088, 1091, 1229, 1268
Garden, Mary sop 311
Gardiner, John Eliot cond 37, 67, 68, 69, 73, 108, 133, 134, 136, 150, 151, 154, 158, 216, 229, 251, 270, 355, 405, 406, 407, 415, 441, 442, 444, 447, 450, 484, 485, 486, 546, 642, 664, 673, 678, 679, 681, 682, 808, 861, 876, 897, 1000, 1076, 1175, 1339, 1344, 1556
Gardino, Jolanda mez 1252
Garmo, Tilly de sop 1131
Garrett, Lesley sop 1237
Garrido, Gabriel cond 1051
Garrison, Jon ten 1010
Gartside, Joyce sop 1224
Gasciarrino, Michel bn 877
Gasparini, Annamaria mez 396
Gastinel, Anne vc 518
Gáti, Istvan bar 65
Gatti, Enrico cond 967
Gaudier Ensemble 166, 348, 862
Gauntlett, Ambrose vada 1225
Gavazzeni, Gianandrea cond 322, 1081, 1229, 1268
Gaver, Elizabeth vn 1295
Gavin Bryars Ensemble 252, 254
Gävle Symphony Orchestra 13
Gavoty, Bernard org 835
Gavrilov, Andrei pf 49, 437, 1162
Gawriloff, Saschko vn 551, 553, 626
Gaylor, Robert pf 1254
Gedda, Nicolai ten 1232
Gellhorn, Peter cond 1005
Gelmetti, Gianluigi cond 1351
Geneva Grand Theatre Chorus 257, 820, 1080
Gens, Véronique sop 156, 302, 440, 676, 768
Genz, Christoph ten 28
Genz, Stephan bar 28, 132, 215, 375, 910, 1151
Geoffrey Mitchell Choir 145, 187, 324, 326, 414, 502, 604, 631, 708, 755, 761, 762, 816, 987, 1236, 1246
Georg, Mechthild cont 1044
George, Donald ten 623
George, Michael bar 192
George, Michael bass 335, 441, 442, 445, 446, 672, 763, 764, 765, 767, 876, 884, 885, 886, 962, 1112, 1155
George Enescu Philharmonic Orchestra 367
George Watson College Boys' Chorus 174
Georgiadis, John cond 12
Georgian, Karine vc 206, 513
Gérard, Jean-Claude fl 370, 1222
Gerecz, Arpad cond 34
Gerecz, Arpad vn 665
Gergiev, Valery cond 185, 403, 551, 687, 689, 691, 743, 747, 748, 749, 750, 805, 806, 807, 808, 917, 997, 1026, 1033, 1036, 1037, 1038, 1085, 1244, 1346
Gerhardt, Elena mez 1153
Geringas, David vc 337, 869, 1057
Gershwin, George pf 390
Gerzso, Andrew elec 189
Getchell, Robert ten 58
Getz, Gordon ten 153
Gheorghiu, Angela sop 159, 1075, 1077, 1078, 1238, 1239, 1330, 1333
Gheorghiu, Valentin pf 367
Ghiaurov, Nicolai bass 1268, 1330
Ghielmi, Vittorio bvio 597
Ghiglia, Oscar gtr 1222
Ghione, Franco cond 1092, 1232, 1258
Giacometti, Paolo pf 341
Giannini, Dusolina sop 1239
(Il) Giardino Armonico Ensemble 167, 1104, 1106, 1107, 1111, 1176, 1331
Gibbons, Jack pf 14, 391
(Orlando) Gibbons Viol Ensemble 262
Gibbs, Charles bass 1311
Gibbs, John bar 1266
Gibbs, Robert vn 5, 95
Gibson, Alexander cond 657
Gibson, Rodney ten 1077
Giebel, Agnes sop 64, 589
Gielen, Michael cond 244, 269, 1156, 1158, 1189
Giesa, Susanne pf 887
Gieseking, Walter pf 115, 308, 671, 1263
Gigli, Beniamino ten 1239, 1259
Gilardeau, Geneviève vn 1316
Gilbert, Kenneth hpd 48
Gilchrist, James ten 64, 71, 73, 417, 1020
Gilels, Elena pf 656
Gilels, Emil pf 103, 131, 197, 198, 208, 425, 656, 834
Giles, Andrew alto 351
Gilfry, Rodney bar 216, 486
Gilibert, Gabrielle mez 1233
Gill, Tim vc 828
Giménez, Raúl ten 815
Gimse, Håvard pf 1058
Ginn, Michael treb 442
Ginster, Ria sop 1153
Giordano, Laura sop 814
Girdwood, Julia ob 12
Gispert, Enrique cond 1222
Giulini, Carlo Maria cond 69, 104, 156, 230, 243, 248, 249, 282, 370, 678, 1074, 1082, 1094
Giuranna, Bruno va 669
Glasgow Orpheus Choir 366
(Philip) Glass Ensemble 399
Gledhill, Rachel vib 848
Gleizes, Mireille pf 717
Glemser, Bernd pf 282, 538, 906
Glennie, Evelyn perc 575
Glodeanu, Mira vn 440
Gluck, Alma sop 1240
Glyndebourne Festival Chorus 391, 680, 682, 818, 1005, 1006, 1342, 1344, 1353
Glyndebourne Festival Orchestra 682, 1254, 1342
Glynne, Howell bass 1224
Goebel, Reinhard cond 37, 38, 487, 1175
Goebel, Reinhard dire 64, 1040, 1176, 1255
Goebel, Reinhard vn 64, 1040, 1176, 1255
Goehr, Walter cond 209, 281, 895, 1267
Goerner, Nelson pf 294
Goff, Scott fl 726
Golan, Itamar pf 1144, 1183
Goldberg, Rebecca bn 795
Goldsbrough, Arnold cond 1271
Goldsbrough, Arnold hpd 1271
Goldsbrough Orchestra 153
Goldschmidt, Berthold cond 408
Goldsmith's Choral Union 589
Golovanov, Nikolai cond 1169
Golovschin, Igor cond 400
Goltz, Gottfried von der dire/vn 66
Golub, David cond/pf 487
Goluses, Nicholas gtr 961
Gomez, Jill sop 229
Gonley, Stephanie vn 348
Gönnenwein, Wolfgang cond 1346
Gonzalez-Campa, Adela cast 1315
Goodall, Reginald cond 1130
Goodchild, William cond 1174
Goode, David org 7, 411, 485
Goode, Richard dire 653, 655
Goode, Richard pf 46, 127, 653, 655, 1270
Gooding, Julia sop 73, 179, 192, 1019
Goodman, Roy cond/dire 21, 432, 449, 1117
Goodman, Benny cl 298
Goodman, James treb 763
Goodman, Roy hpd 432
Goodman, Roy treb 15
Goodwin, Paul cond 684, 1019, 1020
Goodwin, Paul ob 1042
Goossens, Eugene cond 366, 1239
Goossens, Léon ob 96, 1177
Goossens, Marie hp 1177

Goossens, Sidonie hp 1177
Gorchakova, Galina sop 1036
Goritzki, Johannes cond 545
Görne, Matthias bar 61, 882, 886, 909
Görne, Matthias bass 73
Gortler, Daniel pf 1210
Gothenburg Opera Chorus 779
Gothenburg Symphony Chorus 185
Gothenburg Symphony Orchestra 185, 423, 524, 694, 696, 716, 779, 940, 941, 943, 946, 1055, 1230
Gothic Voices 491, 1283, 1283, 1284, 1284, 1285, 1286, 1287
Gothoni, Mark vn 545
Gothóni, Ralf pf 222, 1098
Gough, Rupert org 1220
Gould, Chris pf 430
Gould, Glenn pf 49, 52
Gould, Stephen ten 534
Gracis, Ettore cond 772
Graeme, Peter ob 219
Graf, Hans cond 327
Graf, Uta sop 580
Graffin, Philippe vn 277, 833, 836
Graham, Susan mez 152, 153, 156, 429, 813, 913, 981, 1230, 1240, 1241
Gramm, Donald bass 991
Gran Canaria Philharmonic Orchestra 1248
Granada City Orchestra 994
Grand Canary Philharmonic Orchestra 1248
Grant, Simon bass 764
Graunke Symphony Orchestra 546
Grazzi, Alberto bn 1110
Grazzi, Paolo ob 1106, 1107, 1110
Greate Consort 543
Greenall, Matthew cond 318
Greene, Leon bass 1005
Greevy, Bernadette mez 202, 362
Gregor-Smith, Bernard vc 307, 668
Grenoble Chamber Orchestra 705
Grier, Francis org 372, 833
Griffiths, Howard cond 379, 802
Griller Qt 96
Grimal, David vn 734
Grimaud, Hélène pf 896
Grindenko, Anatoly cond 1273
Grindenko, Tatjana vn 846
Grindlay, Paul bbar 769
Gringolts, Ilya vn 711
Grinke, Frederick vn 513
Grishko, Vladimir ten 1036
Gritton, Eric pf 1242
Gritton, Susan sop 183, 419, 442, 443, 445, 446, 447, 481, 482, 511, 615, 763, 765, 1112, 1113, 1114, 1115
Grivnov, Vsevolod ten 999
Groop, Monica mez 426, 951, 953
Gross, Michael vc 798
Grossmith, James org 1008
Grotenhuis, Sepp pf 852
Groves, Charles cond 24, 219, 296, 302, 503, 1003, 1322
Groves, Paul ten 1328
Gruenberg, Erich vn 628
Gruffydd Jones, Angharad sop 485
Gruhn, Nora sop 1131
Grumiaux, Arthur vn 34, 42, 373, 656, 791
Grumiaux Trio 665, 867
Grümmer, Elisabeth sop 1241
Grund, Christoph org 1158
Gruppo Vocale Cantemus 278
Guadagno, Anton cond 1340
Guarneri Qt 490
Güden, Hilde sop 584
Gueden, Hilde sop 982
Guest, George cond 224, 335
Guglielmo, Giovanni dire/vn 1016
Gui, Vittorio cond 682, 818, 1234
Guieu, Renaud vc 429
Guittart, Henk va 852
Gulbenkian Orchestra 1014
Gulda, Friedrich pf 129
Gunn, Nathan bar 1241
Gunson, Ameral mez 519, 1140
Gunzenhauser, Stephen cond 710
Güra, Werner ten 877, 888, 908
Guschlbauer, Theodor cond 671
Gustafsson, Jan-Erik vc 786
Guszalewicz, Genia sop 1131
Guthrie, Thomas bass 168
Gutman, Natalia vc 899
Guye, François vc 978
Guyot, Romain cl 734
Haage, Pater ten 855
Haas, Frédérick hpd 843
Haberdashers' Aske's School Girls' Choir 1081
Habich, Eduard bass 1131
Hacker, Alan cl 379
Hadady, Lazlo ob 147
Hadzigeorgieva, Lyupka pf 38
Haebler, Ingrid pf 671
Haefliger, Ernst spkr 854
Haefliger, Ernst ten 250
Haendel, Ida vn 1016
Hagegård, Håkan bar 1157
Hageman, Richard cond 1240
Hagen, Clemens vc 196, 724
Hagen Quartet 119, 208, 668, 864, 934
Hagley, Alison sop 229, 447
Hague Chamber Choir 1039
(The) Hague Residentie Orchestra 556, 1039, 1096
Hahn, Detlef vn 534
Hahn, Hilary vn 78, 105, 924, 1324
Haider, Friedrich cond 1246
Haïm, Emmanuelle dire 438
Hacœm, Emanuelle hpd 1229
Haitink, Bernard cond 91, 100, 102, 103, 104, 199, 241, 244, 247, 304, 311, 362, 521, 556, 558, 559, 581, 594, 680, 770, 790, 895, 926, 927, 932, 976, 1031, 1056, 1062, 1063, 1064, 1065, 1066, 1187
Hajdu, István pf 791
Hála, Josef harm 1002
Hála, Josef pf 1002
Halász, Michael cond 134, 356, 538
Haley, Olga mez 1164
Hall, Carol sop 69
Hall, Lucy vn 899
Hall, Meredith sop 769
Hallé Choir 202, 233, 358, 365, 1066
Hallé Choir (Women's Voices) 502, 8573
Hallé Orchestra 3, 94, 202, 223, 233, 248, 316, 346, 358, 360, 362, 365, 366, 502, 595, 631, 826, 923, 1066, 1166, 1224, 1325, 8573
Haller, Salomé sop 640
Hallgrím's Church Motet Choir 547, 548
Halling, Elizabeth mez 912
Halstead, Anthony cond/dire 29, 30, 31, 181
Halstead, Anthony hn 115, 648, 1040
Halstead, Anthony hpd 29
Hamari, Júlia mez 91
Hamburg State Opera Chorus 110, 115
Hamburg State Philharmonic Orchestra 1157
Hamburger, Paul pf 1225
Hamelin, Marc-André pf 14, 15, 162, 256, 407, 417, 614, 919, 1099, 1193
Hamilton, Susan sop 764, 765
Hammarström, Kristina mez 1254
Hammer, Moshe vn 711
Hammond, Joan sop 1224
Hampson, Thomas bar 515, 587, 886, 1140, 1242
Hampstead Choral Society 589
Hancock, Gerre dire 1220
Hancock, Judith org 1220
Handley, Vernon cond 76, 92, 314, 316, 357, 361, 362, 378, 611, 825, 953, 954, 1061, 1062, 1067, 1069, 1137, 1169
Hannan, Eilene sop 1024, 1025
Hannoversche Hofkapelle 1044
Hanover Band 29, 30, 31, 192, 456
Hanover NDR Symphony Orchestra 1169
Hansen, Søren K. cond 829
Hansen, Bo Anker bar 695
Hansen, Michael W. bar 695

Hanson, Howard cond 457
Hantaï, Pierre dire 32
Hantaï, Jérôme fp 132
Hantaï, Jérôme vada 1229
Hantaï, Pierre hpd 32, 50, 51, 544, 843
Happel, Johannes-Christoph bar 67
Harasiewicz, Adam pf 212
Hardenberger, Håkan tpt 1056, 1162, 1181, 7432
Harding, Daniel cond 228, 237, 463, 571, 1056
Hardy, Rosemary sop 554
Hargan, Alison sop 1062
Hargis, Ellen sop 1310
Hargreaves, John bar 1224
Harjanne, Jouko tpt 787
Harle, John sax 252, 1020
Harms, Kirsti mez 920
Harnoncourt, Nikolaus cond 35, 73, 98, 105, 107, 108, 133, 135, 196, 200, 347, 431, 641, 672, 859, 899, 913, 972, 1041, 1174, 1330, 1343, 1347
Harnoncourt, Alice vn 1041
Harp Consort 1052, 1287, 1305
Harper, Heather sop 71, 214, 230, 581, 589, 1048, 1147
Harrell, Lynn vc 267, 336, 493, 824, 1134, 1180
Harris, Michael cl 730
Harris, Michael org 1193
Harrison, Julius cond 1223
Harrison, Beatrice vc 359
Härtelová, Lydie hp 352
Hartenstein, István bn 1103
Hartley, Jacqueline vn 1046
Hartmann, Arno org 876
Hartmann-Claverie, Valerie onde 631
Hartog, Bernhard vn 1034
Hartwig, Hildegard cont 110, 115
Harty, Hamilton cond 366
Harvey, Peter bar 70, 132
Harvey, Peter bass 69, 73, 183, 259, 447, 764, 768, 841, 7684
Harwood, Elizabeth sop 1005
Haskin, Howard ten 1149
Haslam, David cond 377, 378
Hasson, Maurice vn 202
Hatfield, Lesley vn 717
Hatt, Beryl sop 589
Haugsand, Ketil hpd 51
Hauk, Franz org 798
Haukås, Jan-Inge db 282
Hauke, Ernst cond 1267
Hauptmann, Cornelius bass 67, 73, 673
Hauts-de-Seine Maîtrise 1088
Haverinen, Margareta sop 932
Hawkes, Bill va 252
Hayes, Oliver treb 525
Hayward, Marie sop 1062, 1070
Heaton, Roger cond 252
Heger, Robert cond 1131, 1153
Hegyi, Ildikó vn 116
Heifetz, Jascha vn 106, 195, 532, 939, 1137, 1162, 1325
Heilmann, Uwe ten 672
Helbich, Wolfgang cond 72
Hellmann, Claudia mez 250
Helm, Karl bass 242
Helsingborg Symphony Orchestra 222
(East) Helsinki Music Insitute Choir 838
Helsinki Philharmonic Orchestra 784, 785, 786, 838, 939, 940, 942, 946, 948, 949, 950
Hemsley, Thomas bar 214
Henck, Herbert pf 634
Henderson, Andrew org 1008
Henderson, Roy bar 1070, 1164, 1242
Hendl, Walter cond 532, 1162
Hendricks, Barbara sop 533
Hendry, Linn pf 847
Hengelbrock, Thomas cond 568
Henke, Waldemar ten 1131
Hennis, Tim bass 1246
Henry, Didier bar 428
Henry's Eight 409, 1288, 1305
Henschel, Dietrich bass 73
Henschel Quartet 651
Henstra, Siebe hpd 1007
Herbert, Victor cond 1240
Herford, Henry bar 177
Herford, Henry bass 443
Hering, Jörg ten 481, 486, 876
Heringman, Jacob gtr 522
Heringman, Jacob lte 522, 1230, 1288
Heringman, Jacob viol 522
Hermann, Roland bar 110, 115
Hernandez, Cesar ten 1076
Herreweghe, Philippe cond 67, 155, 375, 542, 764
Herrick, Christopher org 53, 54, 56, 57, 1194, 1195
Herrmann, Anke sop 1116
Hesch, Wilhelm bass 1255
Hespèrion XX 763, 1288, 1306
Hespèrion XXI 1289, 1305, 1306
Hess, Cliff pf 390
Hess, Myra pf 205, 895, 1195
Hessian Radio Orchestra, Frankfurt 308
Het National Children's Choir 549
Heulyn, Meinir hp 1268
Heward, Leslie cond 1224, 1269
Heward, Leslie pf 1242
Hewitt, Angela pf 45, 46, 48, 50, 51, 52, 628, 792
Heyerick, Simon vn 1303
Heynis, Aafje cont 581
Hickox, Richard cond 16, 17, 23, 24, 68, 219, 224, 230, 232, 236, 316, 317, 354, 355, 363, 364, 365, 366, 379, 402, 416, 419, 481, 482, 483, 484, 503, 504, 506, 507, 511, 512, 624, 765, 804, 825, 826, 964, 1003, 1046, 1047, 1048, 1063, 1064, 1067, 1068, 1070, 1071, 1072, 1117, 1142, 1329
Hicks, Malcolm org 427, 1064
Hida, Yoshie sop 67, 70
Higginbottom, Edward cond 71, 1050, 1216, 1217
Highgate School Choir 224, 230
Hilander, Esko vn 725
Hill, David cond/dire 179, 227, 264, 965, 966, 1097
Hill, David org 965
Hill, Jenny sop 69, 71
Hill, Kate fl 647, 648
Hill, Martyn ten 230, 337, 418, 442, 509, 854, 886, 962, 999, 1049, 1070, 1329
Hill, Peter pf 143
Hilliard Ens. 1289
Hilliard Ensemble 254, 573, 723, 1148, 1183, 1289
Hillier, Paul cond/dire 266, 573, 718, 723, 800, 1013
Hillier, Paul bass/voc 266, 718, 1290
Hilton, Janet cl 665
Hindemith, Paul cond 975
Hines, Jerome bass 110
Hinz, Helle sop 912
Hiolski, Andrzej bar 1009
Hirsch, Rebecca vn 222, 717, 794, 1216
Hirvonen, Anssi ten 952
Hirzel, Franziska sop 720
His Majestys Sagbutts and Cornetts 385, 428
Hlavenková, Anna sop 1155
Hoch, Beverley sop 706
Hockings, David perc 410
Hodgson, Alfreda cont 71, 364, 594, 1062, 1070
Hoel, Lena sop 13
Hoelscher, Ulf vn 962, 974
Hoeprich, Eric bsbn 660
Hoeprich, Eric cl 660, 1254
Hoffman, Gary vc 277, 518
Hoffmann, Anke sop 913
Hoffmann, Bruno glas 669
Hoffren, Taito sngr 952
Högman, Christina sop 1254
Hogwood, Christopher cond 12, 67, 386, 387, 452, 454, 468, 486, 648, 650, 651, 652, 653, 672, 673, 677, 721, 766, 1230
Hogwood, Christopher hpd/org 1104
Hoitenga, Camilla fl 831
Holbrooke, Joseph cond 1271
Holecek, Heinz bar 982
Holl, Robert bass 108, 133, 877
Höll, Hartmut pf 1145
Hölle, Matthias bass 242

Holliger, Heinz cond 532
Holliger, Heinz ob 34, 669
Holliger Wind Ensemble 660
Holloway, John vn 167, 168, 845
Hollreiser, Heinrich cond 1127
Hollweg, Ilse sop 426
Hollweg, Werner ten 485, 594
Hollywood Quartet 494, 850, 865
Holman, Peter cond/dire/hpd 179, 192, 1313
Holmes, James cond 1237, 1361
Holmes, Ralph vn 314, 316
Holst, Imogen cond 219
Holst Singers 401, 420, 848
Holten, Bo cond 317, 318
Holton, Ruth sop 58, 71, 444
Holzmair, Wolfgang bar 735, 891, 909, 910, 1243
Holzman, Adam gtr 961
Homer, Louise cont 1233, 1240
Honda-Rosenberg, Latica vn 545
Honeyman, Ian ten 273, 274
Hong Kong Philharmonic Orchestra 256, 1015
Höngen, Elisabeth cont 114
Honma, Tamami pf 796
Honoré, Philippe vn 96
Hoog, Viola de vc 852
Hooten, Florence vc 513
Hope, Daniel vn 363, 846
Hopf, Hans ten 114
Hopkins, Louise vc 7
Hörberg, Alf bsbn 660
Hörberg, Alf cl 660
Horenstein, Jascha cond 583, 589, 594
Horne, Marilyn mez 1266, 1352
Horowitz, Vladimir pf 772, 1034, 1195, 1196
Horsley, Colin pf 647
Horst, Claar ter pf 910
Horváth, Béla ob 1103
Hosford, Richard cl 210, 730
Host, Frantisek vc 1002
Hotter, Hans bbar 114, 890, 1151, 1243, 1332, 1361
Hough, Stephen pf 209, 382, 510, 616, 635, 834, 872, 911, 978, 1197
Howard, Jason bar 188
Howard, Kathleen mez 1253
Howard, Leslie pf 561, 562, 563
Howarth, Elgar cond 22
Howarth, Judith sop 132, 364, 1068, 1182
Howe, Janet mez 1224
Howell, Gwynne bass 71, 152, 251, 365, 1070, 1140
Høyer, Per bar 541
Høyer Hansen, Helle sop 317
Hu, Nai-Yuan vn 239
Huang, Ying sop 487
Hubeau, Jean pf 372
Huberman, Bronislaw vn 106
Huddersfield Choral Society 365, 446, 1141
Hudez, Karl pf 1264
Huelgas Ensemble 709, 812
Huggett, Monica dire/vn 168
Hugh, Tim dire 496
Hugh, Tim vc 26, 175, 181, 222, 419, 496, 501, 847, 1020, 1134
Hughes, Owain Arwel cond 499, 500
Hughes, David ten 1074
Hughes, Peter sax 296
Huguet, Josefina sop 1255
Hula, Pavel vn 601
Hulse, Eileen sop 402, 852
Hulse, Gareth ob 96, 140, 730
Hulse, Gareth obd 1011
Humburg, Will cond 817, 1085
Hungarian Quintet 1189
Hungarian Radio and Television Chorus 279, 1336
Hungarian Radio Children's Choir 1336
Hungarian Radio Chorus 65, 85, 134, 817
Hungarian State Choir 558
Hungarian State Opera Chorus 1076, 1085
Hungarian State Opera Orchestra 752, 1076, 1085
Hungarian State Orchestra 91
Hungarian State Symphony Orchestra 320
Hunt Lieberson, Lorraine mez 4, 371
Hünteler, Konrad fl 28, 647
Hurford, Peter org 56, 729, 836
Hüsch, Gerhard bar 1153
Huttenlocher, Philippe bar 877, 968
Huybrechts, François cond 520
Hvorostovsky, Dmitri bar 1244
Hyde, Philippa sop 192
Hye-Knudsen, Johan cond 1259, 1260
Hynninen, Jorma bar 589, 838, 942, 953
I Fagiolini 262, 1302
I Fiamminghi 525
Iceland Symphony Orchestra 13, 547, 548, 940, 942, 946, 948, 956
Ictus 461, 800
Ijichi, Hiroyuki bass 877
Illing, Rosamund sop 605
Ilosfalvy, Róbert ten 351
Imai, Nobuko va 150, 196, 657, 899, 1070
Immer Trumpet Consort (Friedemann) 1044
Immerseel, Jos van cond 260
Imperial Bells Ensemble of China 1015
Inanga, Glen pf 498
Indianapolis Symphony Orchestra 1163
Ingham, Nick cond 398
Instrumental Ensemble 267, 1260
International Piano Quartet 999
Invernizzi, Roberta sop 270, 1300
(L')Inviti 1140
Ireland, John pf 513
Ireland, Patrick va 669
Ireland, Robin va 668
Ireland National Symphony Orchestra 24, 196, 218, 243, 370, 460, 695, 774, 964
Irish National Symphony Orchestra 25
Isaac, Eduardo gtr 725
Isbin, Sharon gtr 1014, 1183
Isepp, Martin hpd 1225, 1229
Isepp, Martin pf 879
Ishay, Roglit pf 178
Isokoski, Soile sop 907, 943, 980
Israel Philharmonic Orchestra 623, 1169
Isserlis, Rachel vn 507, 564
Isserlis, Steven vc 209, 355, 372, 464, 621, 832, 833, 894, 978, 1017
Istomin, Eugene pf 104
Italian Broadcasting Authority Chorus/Orchestra 1086
Ito, Kanako vn 96
Ivashkin, Alexander vc 427, 601, 745
Iven, Christiane cont 72
Ivic, Aleksander vn 35
Ivogün, Maria sop 1244
Ivy, Claude pf 1242
Izuha, Mari pf 1145
Jaatinen, Jussi ob 787
Jablonski, Peter pf 272
Jackson, Francis pf 1266
Jackson, Garfield va 95, 1067
Jackson, Laurence vn 176
Jackson, Richard bar 885
Jacob, Ariane cels 306
Jacob, Ariane pf 306
Jacob, Francis org 57
Jacob, Irène spkr 306
Jacobs, René cond/dire 180, 267, 452, 453, 527, 640, 642, 766, 841, 1045
Jacobs, Peter pf 271
Jacobs, René alto 69, 841
Jacoby, Josephine mez 1269
Jairo voc 726
Jakobsson, Anna-Lisa mez 941
James, Cecil bn 96, 115, 647
James, Joseph bar 81
Jandó, Jenö pf 87, 480, 531, 563, 864
Janes, Paul pf 416
Janezic, Ronald bn 270
Janowitz, Gundula sop 108, 485, 676, 706, 882, 980
Janowski, Marek cond 924, 980, 1129
Jansen, Hans Hermann ten 67
Jansen, Rudolf pf 878, 1151, 1152

Jansons, Mariss cond 344, 741, 774, 805, 929, 931, 946, 1032, 1033
Janssen, Herbert bar 1153
Jaroussky, Philippe ctnr 841
Jarred, Mary cont 1070
Järvi, Neeme cond 185, 346, 358, 423, 505, 529, 600, 696, 716, 744, 747, 779, 797, 860, 922, 927, 928, 940, 941, 943, 946, 1027, 1036, 1055, 1135, 1137, 1230
Järvi, Paavo cond 632, 717, 967, 996, 1186
Jaud, Reinhard org 1007
Jena Philharmonic Orchestra 457
Jenisová, Eva sop 217
Jenkins, Neil ten 764
Jennings, Gloria cont 1062
Jennings, Gloria mez 1070
Jennings, Graeme vn 320
Jennings, Joseph cond 1212
Jensen, Folmer pf 1260
Jensen, Gert Henning ten 979
Jerie, Marek vc 1002
Jerusalem, Siegfried ten 855
Jezierski, Stefan hn 213
Jo, Sumi sop 971, 1245
Joachim Trio 837
Jochens, Wilfried ten 75, 1044
Jochum, Eugen cond 197, 198, 242, 250, 706, 1243, 1332
Johann Strauss Orchestra of Vienna 971
Johannsen, Kay org 54, 57
John Alldis Choir 99, 150, 256, 319, 395, 761, 1086, 1147, 1266
John, Keith org 1192
Johnson, Emma cl 302, 1182
Johnson, Graham pf 228, 352, 413, 430, 732, 837, 879, 882, 884, 885, 886, 888, 907, 909, 911, 912, 1152, 1250, 1257
Johnson, James bar 1156, 1158
Johnston, James ten 446, 1224
Johnston, Rachel vc 427
Johnstone, James hpd 1050
Johnstone, James virg 1050
Joly, Simon cond 77
Jones, Gareth cond 1268
Jones, Aled treb 452
Jones, Della mez 110, 418, 503, 509, 631, 826, 1246
Jones, Geraint org 1301
Jones, Joela pf 630
Jones, Karen fl 831
Jones, Martin pf 229, 379, 1182
Jones, Max treb 1020
Jones, Parry ten 358, 1070
Jones, Philip tpt 924
(Philip) Jones Brass Ensemble 22
Joppich, (Father) Godehard cond 1273
Jordá, Enrique cond 198
Jordan, Armin cond 735, 978, 1245
Jordan, Irene sop 991
Josefowicz, Leila vn 742, 1178
Joshua, Rosemary sop 987
Josífko, Tomás db 1002
Journet, Marcel bass 1232, 1233, 1237, 1269
Joy, Geneviève pf 337
Joyful Company of Singers 81, 419, 461, 503, 504
Juan, Santiago vn 368
Juda, Iris vn 96
Judd, James cond 252, 298
Judd, Roger org 716
Juillet, Chantal vn 408, 792
Juilliard Ensemble 147
Juilliard Quartet 120, 726, 1147
Junge Deutsche Philharmonie 86
Junghänel, Konrad cond 169, 637, 915
Junghänel, Konrad theo 1184
Jurowski, Michail cond 547
Jussila, Kari org 786
Jyväskylä Sinfonia 788
Kabalevsky, Dimitry cond 1172
Kagel, Mauricio cond 525
Kaidanov, K.E. bass 1223
Kajanus, Robert cond 946
Kakhidze, Jansug cond 526
Kaler, Ilya vn 196, 710, 901
Kaljuste, Tonu cond 718, 719, 848, 1057
Kallisch, Cornelia cont 624
Kalter, Sabine cont 1267
Kaltoft, Erik pf 829
Kam, Sharon cl 879, 1144
Kamp, Harry van der cond 255
Kamp, Harry van der bass 74, 481, 486, 876, 1044
Kampen, Christopher van vc 96, 372, 955, 1201
Kamu, Okko cond 222, 838, 939, 1169, 1322
Kaneko, Yoko pf 429
Kang, Dong-Suk vn 941, 1134
Kang, Hae-Sun vn 189
Kang, Juliette vn 895
Kanga, Skaila hp 96
Kangas, Juha cond 698, 939, 1060
Kangas, Timo va 698
Kanka, Michal vc 601
Kantiléna Children's Chorus 353
Kapel van de Lage Landen 255
Kaptain, Laurence cimb 1172
Karajan, Herbert von cond 107, 108, 110, 113, 115, 202, 241, 246, 247, 249, 251, 305, 311, 339, 348, 422, 485, 505, 511, 549, 588, 590, 647, 744, 745, 750, 754, 756, 760, 931, 947, 949, 972, 975, 977, 979, 980, 983, 986, 1029, 1030, 1074, 1084, 1094, 1095, 1119, 1121, 1126, 1133, 1162, 1171, 1229, 1232, 1234, 1248, 1268, 1325, 1330
Karamazov, Edin fl/gtr/lte 1263
Karczykowski, Ryszard ten 926, 927
Karnéus, Katarina mez 595, 951, 1184
Károlyi, Katalin mez 552
Karpísek, Milan spkr 602
Karttunen, Anssi vc 554, 832
Karttunen, Petteri pf 725
Kasarova, Vesselina mez 1246, 1328
Kashkashian, Kim va 83, 493
Kaspszyk, Jacek cond 737
Kastorsky, Vladimir Ivanovich bass 1223
Kataeva, Irina pf 554
Katchen, Julius pf 212, 1197
Katims, Milton va 205, 865
Katona, Peter gtr 810
Katona, Zoltán gtr 810
Katowice Radio Symphony Orchestra 410
Katsaris, Cyprien pf 998
Kaufmann, Jonas ten 1237
Kaune, Michaela sop 490
Kavacos, Leonidas vn 712, 938
Kavakos, Leonidas vn 493, 536, 939
Kay, Brian cond 962
Kay Children's Choir (Peter) 550, 755
Kaznowski, Michal vc 176
Kecskemét Chlidren's Choir Miraculum 530
Kecskeméti, László picc 1103
Kecskeméti, László rec 1103
Kee, Piet org 55
Keeble, Jonathan spkr 995
Keenlyside, Simon bar 706, 884, 885, 886, 911
Keinonen, Heikki bar 952
Keith, Gillian sop 769
Kell, Reginald cl 206, 209
Keller, Andras vn 88
Keller Quartet 537, 846
Kelley, Frank ten 1149
Kelly, Denise hp 232, 236
Kelly, Frances hp 432
Kelly, John-Edward sax 723
Kelly, Jonathan ob 666
Kelly, Paul Austin ten 815, 1236
Kemmeter-Faltl Schrammel Ensemble 1248
Kempe, Rudolf cond 348, 974, 976, 983, 1123
Kempf, Frederick pf 775
Kempf Trio 1035
Kempff, Wilhelm pf 123, 127, 775, 902, 1198, 1199
Kempston, Anthea sop 25
Kendall, Christopher cond 610
Kendall, William ten 133, 134, 179
Kennedy, Nigel dire 34, 1169
Kennedy vn 34, 356, 357, 1169, 1180

Kennedy, Mark treb 763
Kennedy, Nigel vn 617
Kenny, Elizabeth lte 1105, 1299
Kenny, Jonathan Peter alto 260
Kenny, Yvonne sop 110, 354, 445, 507, 631, 987, 997, 1067, 1246
Kentner, Louis pf 209, 561
Kerdoncuff, François pf 1059
Kermes, Simone sop 913
Kern, Patricia mez 1005
Kerola, Paavo ten 952
Kerr, Alexander vn 925-
Kerr, Peter ten 964
Kerr, Virginia sop 964
Kersey, Eda vn 94
Kershaw, Caroline rec 435
Kertesi, Ingrid sop 65
Kertész, István cond 91, 343, 351, 654, 655
Kettel, Gary perc 163
Keulen, Isabelle van vn 601, 869
Keveházi, János hn 116
Keveházi, Jenö hn 116
Keyte, Christopher bass 335, 1062, 1070
Khaner, Jeffrey fl 191
Kiberg, Tina sop 519, 979
Kiehr, Maria Cristina sop 74, 267, 640, 1307
Kiel Philharmonic Orchestra 596
Kilanowicz, Zofia sop 409, 410, 1009
Kilbey, Reginald cond 296
Kim, Dominique onde 627, 631
Kimball, Nora sop 1149
Kimel, Frantisek ob 306
Kimstedt, Rainer Johannes va 892
Kindermann, Lydia mez 1131
King, Robert cond 183, 441, 442, 445, 446, 536, 763, 765, 1112, 1113, 1114, 1115, 1307
King, Andrew ten 764
King, James ten 594
King, Malcolm bass 519, 996
King, Peter org 1192
King, Robert hpd/org 765
King, Robert treb 335
King, Thea cl 21, 206, 379, 507, 645, 955
King's College Choir, Cambridge 7, 15, 364, 375, 411, 443, 1215, 1334
(The) King's Consort 183, 441, 442, 445, 446, 536, 763, 765, 1112, 1113, 1114, 1115, 1307
King's Consort Choir 183, 441, 442, 445, 446, 536, 763, 1112, 1113, 1307
King's Consort Choristers 446, 1113
King's Noyse 327, 1013, 1308
Kings Sngrs 554
Kipnis, Alexander bass 133, 1153
Kirchschlager, Angelika mez 619, 877
Kirkby, Emma sop 66, 67, 68, 259, 449, 452, 491, 672, 721, 764, 915, 1117, 1247, 1316
Kirkman, Andrew cond 255, 329, 1277
Kirov Opera Chorus 185, 403, 551, 689, 747, 748, 749, 750, 806, 807, 808, 917, 1026, 1036, 1037, 1038, 1085, 1346
Kirov Opera Orchestra 185, 403, 551, 689, 691, 743, 748, 749, 750, 806, 807, 808, 917, 1026, 1036, 1037, 1038, 1085, 1244, 1346
Kirov Orchestra of the Mariinsky Theatre 805
Kiss, Noémi sop 1155
Kissin, Evgeny pf 43, 102, 283, 285, 293, 480, 740, 905, 1200
Kistler, Herbert tpt 505
Kitaenko, Dmitri cond 387, 739, 1186
Kitchen, John org 1193
Kitchen, Linda sop 631, 1070
Kjekshus, Helge pf 424
Kjøller, John ten 317
Klaas, Rainer pf 14
Klánský, Ivan pf 1002
Klapprott, Bernhard hpd/virg 1050
Klas, Eri cond 368
Kleiber, Carlos cond 112, 205, 972, 1092, 1146, 1324, 1351, 1353
Kleiber, Erich cond 683, 987, 1146
Klein, Kerstin sop 623
Klemperer, Otto cond 99, 111, 114, 135, 216, 246, 583, 593, 685, 1122, 1325
Kletzki, Paul cond 281, 1169
Kliegel, Maria vc 122, 196, 282, 356, 531, 538, 833
Klien, Walter pf 1189
Klier, Manfred hn 213
Kluson, Josef va 601
Kmentt, Waldemar ten 108, 114
Knappertsbusch, Hans cond 136, 1123, 1126
Knudsen, Sato vc 1230
Knussen, Oliver cond 269, 489, 497, 529, 555, 993, 1011, 1056
Kocian Quartet 699
Kocsis, Zoltán pf 89, 90, 310, 770, 775, 1200
Kodadová, Renata hp 1002
Kodáy Quartet 475, 471, 474, 864
Köhler, Axel alto 1044
Kohnen, Robert hpd 302, 436, 1043
Kollo, René ten 589
Kondrashin, Kyrill cond 347, 556, 557, 805
König, Klaus ten 594
Koningsberger, Maarten bar 636, 885
Konstantinov, Julian bass 1075, 1330
Kontarsky, Bernhard cond 1362
Kontarsky, Aloys pf 626, 628
Kontra Quartet 500
Kooij, Peter bass 62, 64, 67
Kooistra, Foskien vn 1184
Kooistra, Taco vc 852
Koopman, Ton cond 28, 55, 65, 67, 72
Koopman, Ton dire 28, 61, 63, 181, 1107
Koopman, Ton hpd 28, 41, 61, 181, 435, 671, 1107, 1306
Koopman, Ton org 54, 55, 61, 63, 181, 435
Kooy, Peter bass 60, 61, 65, 66, 70, 72, 74
Koppel, Herman (David) pf 1260
Koppel, Julius vn 1259
Korchinska, Maria hp 96
Kord, Kazimierz cond 605
Kordt, Grete pf 1260
Korhonen, Timo gtr 238
Korn, Artur bass 495
Korniev, Nikolai cond 777, 1244
Kornilov, D.G. pf 1223
Korolev, Victor ten 1273
Korolewicz-Wayda, Janina sop 1223
Koroliov, Evgeni pf 49
Korolyov, Evgeny pf 38
Kosina, Miroslav vn 1002
Koskinen, Eeva vn 838
Kosler, Zdenek cond 602, 960
Kostelanetz, André cond 1256
Koussevitzky, Serge cond 106, 950, 1170, 1325
Kovacevich, Stephen pf 121, 125, 196, 197, 212, 421, 669, 875, 1161, 1184
Kovács, János cond 91
Kovács, Lászlo cond 322
Kovalenko, Lidia vn 936
Kovalev, Oleg bass 1273
Koves, Toni cimb 991
Kožená, Magdalena mez 73, 352, 438, 699, 1116
Kraak, Meinard ten 878
Kraemer, Manfredo dire/vn 168
Kraemer, Nicholas cond/dire 455, 1107
Kraemer, Nicholas hpd 455
Kraft, Norbert gtr 711, 809
Kraggerud, Henning vn 424
Krainev, Vladimir pf 739
Kramer, Miriam vn 178
Krasner, Louis vn 143
Kraus, Richard cond 984
Kraus, Alfredo ten 1248
Krause, Tom bar 351
Krauss, Clemens cond 203
Krebbers, Herman vn 34
Kreile, Roderich cond 1214
Kreisler, Fritz vn 535
Kreisler Quartet 535
Kreizberg, Yakov cond 408
Kremer, Gidon dire 846

Kremer, Gidon vn 2, 105, 123, 196, 223, 526, 832, 846, 868, 869, 901, 1162, 1181
Kremerata Musica 726
Kriikku, Kari cl 303, 1144
Kringelborn, Solveig sop 571, 1248
Krips, Josef cond 1264
Kristufek, Jaroslav vn 1002
Krivine, Emmanuel cond 940
Kronos Quartet 3, 801, 1177
Kubánek, Libor perc 1002
Kubelík, Rafael cond 340, 342, 343, 345, 346, 352, 459, 495, 580, 582, 724, 897, 958, 1001, 1124, 1125, 1229
Kuchar, Theodore cond/va 601, 688, 726
Kuebler, David ten 706
Kuhn, Gustav cond 912, 986
Kühn Chorus 353
Kühn Mixed Choir 353, 1340
Kuijken, Barthold cond 28
Kuijken, Barthold fl 302, 436, 1043, 1308
Kuijken, Sigiswald cond/dire 63, 67, 69, 678, 722
Kuijken, Sigiswald vn 63, 722
Kuijken, Wieland vada 436, 1043
Kulka, Konstanty Andrzej vn 493, 1009
Künne, Thomas ten 877
Kunz, Erich bar 1248
Kunzel, Erich cond 809, 969
Kuopio Symphony Orchestra 725, 939
Kupfer, Jochen bar 67, 887, 913
Kupiec, Ewa pf 87
Kurtág, György cels/pf 537
Kurtág, Márta pf 537
Kusnjer, Iván bar 601, 602, 1001
Kussmaul, Rainer dire/vn 35, 617, 1040
Kuusisto, Jaakko vn 939
Kuusisto, Pekka vn 940
Kuznetsov, Fyodor bass 936
Kuznetsova, Ludmila mez 936
Kuznetsova, Maria sop 1223
Kvapil, Radoslav pf 517, 699
Kwella, Patrizia sop 68, 69, 442
Kynaston, Nicolas org 158, 453
La Lauzeta, Children's Choir of Toulouse 173
La Scintilla Orchestra, Zurich 1343
Laar, Vincent van org 1007
Laarhoven, Paulina Van vada 1314
Labbette, Dora sop 366, 1164, 1224
Labé, Thomas pf 458
Labèque, Katia pf 6, 308, 1180
Labèque, Marielle pf 6, 308, 1180
Labinsky, Alexandre pf 689
Labinsky, Andrei ten 1223
Lacey, William cond 408
Laethem, Katelijne van sop 67
Lafon, Brigitte sop 374
Lagger, Peter bass 600
Lahti Chamber Choir 952
Lahti Opera Chorus 952
Lahti Symphony Orchestra 711, 938, 940, 941, 944, 945, 947, 948, 952
Laitinen, Heikki sngr 952
Lajarrige, Christine pf 732
Lallouette, Olivier bass 237
Lam, Basil hpd 1301
Lamaña, José María cond 1222
Lambert, Constant cond 1170
Lamminmäki, Juhani cond 939
Lamon, Jeanne dire 36, 433, 434, 1041, 1316
Lamon, Jeanne vn 36, 433, 434, 1041, 1316
Lamy, Hervé ten 237
Lancelot, James org 715
Lanchbery, John cond 491, 540
Landauer, Bernhard alto 72
Lane, Carys sop 1064, 1311
Lane, Jennifer mez 854, 999
Lane, Piers pf 316, 362, 418, 917, 918, 1067
Lang, Petra mez 816
Lang, Rosemarie mez 579
Langlamet, Marie-Pierre hp 213
Langrée, Louis cond 156, 675
Langridge, Philip ten 230, 354, 854, 885, 886, 1067, 1072
Lapinski, Zdzislaw vc 1009
Lapitino, Francis hp 1233, 1240
Laporte, Christophe alto 640
Laredo, Jaime va 116, 206, 349, 667
Laredo, Jaime vn 196, 208
Larmore, Jennifer mez 369, 1249
Larrocha, Alicia de pf 10, 369, 419, 1222
Larsson, Lisa sop 61, 65
Laske, Thomas bar 71
Latchem, Malcolm vn 614
Latham, Catherine ob 11
Latham-König, Jan cond 1135, 1347
Laubenthal, Rudolf ten 1131
Laudibus 1216
Laukka, Raimo bar 941, 952
Laurens, Guillemette mez 1300
Laurenti, Mario bar 1254
Lauri-Volpi, Giacomo ten 1259
Lausanne Chamber Orchestra 487, 603, 665, 820, 877, 896
Lausanne Choral Union 600
Lausanne Pro Arte Choir 704
Lausanne Vocal Ensemble 877
Lavender, John pf 417, 418
Lavilla, Felix pf 1332
Lavoisier, Annie hp 461
Lawrence-King, Andrew dire 1287, 1305
Lawrence-King, Andrew dbp 1286, 1314
Lawrence-King, Andrew hp 392, 1052, 1287, 1290, 1305, 1308, 1309
Lawrence-King, Andrew org 1052, 1287, 1290
Lawson, Mhairi sop 876
Lawson, Peter pf 5
Layton, Stephen cond 226, 401, 420, 430, 718, 830, 831, 848, 884, 885, 886, 911, 1141, 1231
Layton, Elizabeth vn 372
Lazarev, Alexander cond 612, 916
Lazareva, Tatyana pf 745
Lazic, Dejan pf 283
Le Blanc, Suzie sop 915, 1317
Le Brocq, Mark ten 179
(Le) Concert d'Astrée 438
Le Monnier, David ten 449
Le Roux, François bar 153, 332, 720, 837
Le Sage, Eric pf 1182
Lea, Tobias va 877
Lea-Cox, Graham cond 192
Leaper, Adrian cond 218, 528, 695, 964
Leblanc, Suzie sop 259, 448
Lebrun, Eric org 9
Lederlin, Antoine vc 429
Ledger, Philip cond 364
Ledger, Philip org 1334
Ledger, Philip pf 716
Lee, Yoon K. cond 27
Leeds Festival Chorus 496
Leeds Philharmonic Chorus 964
Leeson-Williams, Nigel bbar 964
Leeuw, Reinbert de cond 19, 171, 552
Leeuw, Reinbert de pf 839
Lefebvre, Philippe org 729
Léger, Magali sop 703
Lehmann, Lilli sop 1255
Lehmann, Lotte sop 1249, 1267
Lehner, Karl Heinz bass 877
Lehtinen, Markus cond 788
Lehtipuu, Topi ten 485, 787
Lehto, Petri ten 952
Leider, Frida sop 1131
Leiferkus, Sergei bar 778
Leighton Smith, Laurence cond 693
Leinsdorf, Erich cond 1259
Leipzig Gewandhaus Orchestra 107, 239, 249, 981, 1144, 1321
Leipzig Quartet 118, 206, 863
Leipzig Radio Chorus 623, 854, 1127, 1129, 1146
Leipzig Symphony Orchestra 1198
Leisner, Emmi cont 1131
Leister, Karl cl 206, 798
Leith Hill Festival Singers 962
Leitner, Ferdinand cond 459, 460, 1199

Leitner, Franz ten 877
Lejeune, Matthieu vc 429
Leleux, François ob 731
Lemaire, Bertrand cond 523
Lemnitz, Tiana sop 1153
Lemper, Ute sop 1149
Lenaerts, Thibaut ctnr 274
Lenárd, Ondrej cond 217
Lenehan, John pf 177, 513, 1169, 1179
Leningrad Philharmonic Orchestra 930, 1032, 1171, 1172
Leonard, Sarah sop 1059
Leonhardt, Carl cond 1230
Leonhardt, Gustav cond/dire 26, 64, 75
Leonhardt, Gustav hpd 64, 1041
Leonhardt Consort 64
Leonskaja, Elisabeth pf 670
Leopold Trio 121
Lepore, Carlo bass 967
Leppard, Raymond cond 93, 343, 656, 1163
(Les) Eléments 159, 173
(Les) Folies Françoises 1314
Lesne, Brigitte cond/dire/mez 1279
Lesne, Gérard alto 179, 262, 273, 295, 841, 968, 1115, 1309
Lester, Richard vc 182, 183, 210
Lesueur, Max va 665
Letzbor, Gunar dire/vn 166
Leusink, Pieter Jan cond 58
Leveaux, Ursula bn 730
Levi, Yoel cond 688, 824
Levin, Robert fp 115, 478, 651, 652, 653
Levin, Robert hpd 650
Levine, James cond 102, 142, 330, 395, 604, 757, 771, 1086, 1087, 1089, 1095, 1236, 1269, 1359
Levine, James pf 1227
Levine, Joanna viol 763
Levionnois, Eric vc 626
Levy, Mark dire 1302
Levy, Mark viol 1302
Lewin, Michael pf 843
Lewis, Anthony cond 767
Lewis, Keith ten 110, 115
Lewis, Richard ten 154, 365, 1074, 1271
Licette, Miriam sop 1224
Lidiard, Pamela pf 1233
Lidström, Mats vc 524
Lieberfeld, Dan pf 1258
Lieberson, Lorraine hunt mez 1336
Liebscher, Wolfgang bn 974
Liège Philharmonic Orchestra 1053
Ligeti, Andras cond 558
Light Symphony Orchestra 366
Ligorio, Daniel pf 808
Lika, Peter bass 69
Lill, John pf 776
Lima, Juan-Sebastian theo 237
Limoges Baroque Ensemble 181, 237, 1043
Lin, Cho-Liang vn 206, 693, 939
Lincoln Center Chamber Music Society 349
Lindberg, Christian tbn 499
Lindberg, Jakob theo 300, 1255
Linden, Jaap ter vada 41, 797, 1040
Linden, Jaap ter vc 435
Lindsay Quartet 117, 119, 350, 472, 473, 474, 475, 476, 665, 666, 668, 668, 865, 1048, 1049
Lines, Timothy bcl 191
Linos Ensemble 469
Lintu, Hannu cond 785, 787
Linz Bruckner Orchestra 533, 534, 680
Linz Landestheater Choir 680
Linz Mozart Choir 250
Linz Mozart Choir (Ladies) 534
Lipatti, Dinu pf 290, 1201
Lipkovskaya, Lidia sop 1223
Lipovsek, Marjana mez 133, 203, 886, 1172
Lippert, Herbert ten 877
Lipton, Martha cont 580, 584
Lira Chamber Chorus 410
Lisbon San Carlos National Theatre Chorus 1092
Lisbon San Carlos National Theatre Orchestra 1092, 1232
Lisi, Leonardo de ten 803
Lislevand, Rolf gtr 1315
Lislevand, Rolf theo 1306, 1315
Lislevand, Rolf vihu 1315
List, Emanuel bass 1131
(Franz) Liszt Academy of Music Orchestra 558
Litaize, Gaston org 835
Little, Ian cond 1211
Little, Tasmin vn 316, 379, 1065
Little Church around the Corner Boys' Choir (New York) 580
Littlewood, Joe treb 71
Litton, Andrew cond 355, 564, 929, 1030, 1136, 1140, 1163
Litvinne, Félia sop 1255
Liverpool Philharmonic Choir 110, 1001
Liverpool Philharmonic Orchestra 357, 365, 446, 1141, 1224, 1271
Ljungberg, Göta sop 1131
Llewellyn, Redvers bar 1164, 1224
Lloyd, David pf 1177
Lloyd, David ten 1224
Lloyd, Robert bass 674, 931, 997
Lloyd Webber, Julian vc 223, 252, 316, 1003, 1005, 1179
Lloyd-Jones, David cond 93, 94, 161, 162, 175, 176, 501, 540, 794, 795, 1138, 1165
Lluna, Joan Enric cl 368
Locatelli Trio 12, 564
Loges, Stephan bar 885, 886, 911
Loges, Stephan bass 73
Loibl, Edgard bass 877
Lombard, Jean-François ten 157
London, George bbar 580
London Baroque 435
London Chamber Orchestra/Singers 1271
London Classical Players 110, 111, 112, 113, 619
London King's College Choir 1021
London Mozart Players 509, 510, 651, 1264
London Musica Antiqua 522, 1309
London Opera Chorus 4, 727
London Oratory Junior Choir 67, 73
London Orchestra Nova 1072
London Philharmonic Choir 104, 317, 364, 503, 926, 1062, 1063, 1066, 1067, 1068, 1071
London Philharmonic Orchestra 16, 17, 18, 22, 84, 92, 93, 104, 140, 148, 156, 195, 196, 197, 202, 225, 239, 250, 314, 316, 317, 341, 343, 355, 357, 358, 359, 360, 361, 362, 364, 369, 391, 414, 502, 503, 520, 550, 556, 558, 559, 584, 589, 594, 599, 604, 609, 680, 710, 761, 805, 819, 825, 834, 845, 896, 916, 926, 927, 937, 939, 949, 987, 1009, 1024, 1025, 1062, 1063, 1064, 1065, 1066, 1067, 1070, 1071, 1072, 1132, 1135, 1136, 1141, 1164, 1167, 1169, 1170, 1224, 1242, 1251, 1269, 1271, 1342, 1344, 1351, 13
London Schubert Chorale 430, 882, 884, 885, 886
London Schütz Choir 110
London Select Choir 1164
London Sinfonietta 2, 3, 7, 140, 147, 171, 269, 410, 460, 489, 520, 521, 529, 555, 836, 853, 1011, 1056
London Sinfonietta Chorus 520
London Sinfonietta Voices 554
London Symphony Chorus (amateur) 151, 157, 158, 159, 163, 185, 216, 230, 232, 236, 310, 354, 363, 364, 365, 366, 453, 503, 504, 509, 618, 707, 777, 1047, 1067, 1070, 1140
London Symphony Chorus (pro) 223, 224, 229, 230, 791
London Symphony Orchestra 2, 6, 9, 16, 17, 23, 24, 78, 86, 91, 138, 146, 150, 151, 156, 157, 158, 159, 163, 174, 185, 197, 203, 216, 219, 222, 223, 224, 229, 230, 232, 234, 235, 296, 298, 310, 312, 325, 339, 340, 343, 345, 346, 351, 354, 355, 356, 357, 358, 359, 360, 363, 364, 365, 390, 400, 402, 427, 434, 453, 498, 502, 503, 507, 509, 532, 533, 538, 556, 557, 583, 589, 594, 608, 618, 619, 620, 627, 654, 655, 656, 671, 707, 721, 737, 739, 741, 742, 743, 757, 758, 770, 771, 773, 777, 788, 790, 791, 8
(The) London Virtuosi 12
London Voices 4, 165, 233, 427, 545, 757, 758, 852, 1077, 1078, 1221, 1242, 1336
London Winds 553
Long, Kathleen pf 96, 371

Long, Marguerite pf 371
Longfield, Susan sop 1062, 1070
Longo, Isabella va 1110
López, Santiago cond 1248
Lopéz Banzo, Eduardo cond/dire/hpd 692, 1298
López-Cobos, Jesús cond 603, 803, 820, 932, 1099
Lord, Roger ob 815
Lorengar, Pilar sop 351
Lorenz, Siegfried bar 495
Lorenzini, Germaine hp 306
Loriod, Jeanne onde 627, 631
Lorraine Philharmonic Orchestra 428
Lortie, Louis pf 381, 556
Los Angeles Chamber Orchestra 997
Los Angeles Festival Symphony Orchestra 991
Los Angeles Philharmonic Orchestra 3, 79, 83, 532, 942
Lott, Felicity sop 314, 364, 366, 413, 430, 483, 589, 732, 735, 793, 978, 1062, 1250
Loughran, James cond 202, 362
Loughton High School for Girls' Choir 511, 986
Lubbock, John cond 412
Lubimov, Alexei pf/fp 515, 846, 868
Lubman, Bradley cond 800, 801
Lubotsky, Mark vn 221
Luca, Giuseppe De bar 1237, 1250, 1259
Lucas, Adrian cond 1219
Lucas, Adrian org 1218, 1220
Lucas, Andrew org 718, 1217
Lucchesini, Andrea pf 146
Lucerne Festival Chorus 1328
Lucerne Festival Orchestra 1119
Lucey, Frances sop 964
Lucia, Fernando De ten 1255
Lucnica Chorus 217
Ludwig, Leopold cond 103
Ludwig, Christa mez 114, 246, 251, 588, 590, 593, 1332
Ludwigsburg Festival Choir 1346
Ludwigsburg Festival Orchestra 1346
Ludwigshafen Theatre Chorus 1361
Lugansky, Nikolai pf 223, 288
Luisi, Fabio cond 504, 1080
Lukomska, Halina sop 1147
Lukonin, Mikhail bar 936
Lumsden, Andrew org 227, 548, 831, 1049
Lund Christiansen, Toke fl 693
Lundberg, Gunnar bar 752
Lunn, Joanne sop 485
Lupu, Radu pf 212, 382, 868, 904
Lupu, Sherban vn 367
Lush, Ernest pf 340, 1161
Lutoslawski, Witold cond 570
Luxembourg Philharmonic Orchestra 187
Luxon, Benjamin bar 258, 335
Luy, André org 600
Lyon Opera Chorus 152, 159, 257, 312, 323, 609, 705, 734, 1000, 1149, 1339
Lyon Opera Orchestra 4, 152, 156, 159, 238, 257, 267, 312, 323, 405, 407, 609, 633, 671, 705, 734, 789, 1000, 1149, 1339
Lyric Quartet 253, 321, 398
Ma, Yo-Yo vc 79, 83, 107, 116, 181, 196, 206, 208, 282, 339, 349, 399, 408, 667, 725, 1015
Maag, Peter cond 619
Maazel, Lorin cond 136, 174, 381, 584, 743, 802, 916, 947, 978, 1087
Macal, Zdenek cond 401, 459
McAslan, Lorraine vn 77, 140, 496, 548
McCabe, John pf 796
McCallum, David vn 315
McCarthy, Michael bass 1302
Macco, Andreas bass 1328
McCormack, Elizabeth mez 1101
McCormack, John ten 1153, 1251
McCreesh, Paul cond 70, 73, 385, 386, 436, 445, 447, 643, 921, 1097, 1304
McCue, William bass 1074
McDaniel, Barry bar 1147
McDonald, Anna vn 30
McDonald, Hector hn 877
McDonald, Robert bass 876
McDonald, Robert pf 349, 1150
MacDougall, Jamie ten 624, 885, 886
McDuffie, Robert vn 824
McFadden, Claron sop 171, 172, 260, 441, 442, 768
McFadden, Jeffrey gtr 961
McFarlane, Claire vn 533
McGahon, Colette mez 964
McGegan, Nicholas cond/dire 433, 451, 456, 840, 1102
McGegan, Nicholas hpd 840
McGhee, Lorna fl 96
McGillivray, Alison vc 387
McGreevy, Geraldine sop 177, 911, 1152
MacGregor, Joanna cond/dire/pf 170, 1201
MacGregor, Philip bass 993
McKenna, Kennedy ten 1131
MacKenzie, Neil ten 188
Mackerras, Charles cond 110, 234, 296, 326, 348, 353, 434, 440, 441, 453, 518, 519, 520, 521, 652, 654, 663, 664, 679, 681, 806, 862, 959, 1002, 1003, 1005, 1006, 1092, 1340, 1342
Mackie, Neil ten 447, 1140
Mackintosh, Catherine va 1105
McLachlan, Murray pf 1038
McLaughlin, Marie sop 442
McLean, Hugh org 1334
MacLeod, Stephan bass 62, 260
MacLoed, Stephan bass 1328
MacMillan, James cond 575
McMillan, Kevin bar 694
McNair, Sylvia sop 310, 486, 579, 619, 673, 674
McTier, Duncan db 96, 349
Madge, Geoffrey Douglas pf 956
Madrid Complutense University Orchestra 1248
Madrid Comunidad Chorus 10
Madrid Symphony Orchestra 10
Madrid Zarzuela Theatre Chorus 1051
Madrid Zarzuela Theatre Orchestra 1051
Magalhaes, Caroline mez 57
Magee, Gary bar 816
Maggini Quartet 95, 176, 226, 634, 1067, 1139
Maggio Musicale 1229, 1230
Magiera, Leone pf 1256
Magnificat Choir 811, 1014
Magnus, Elisabeth von mez/cont 61, 63, 73, 672
Mahler, Christina vc 1316
Mahler Chamber Orchestra 237, 463
(Gustav) Mahler Jugendorchester 86
Mainz Cathedral Choir 720
Maisenberg, Oleg pf 868, 869, 1181
Maisky, Mischa vc 899, 922
Maîtrise d'Antony Children's Choir 158
Maîtrise de Caen 237
Maîtrise de Paris 159
Maîtrise de Paris Children's Choir 1336
Maîtrise des Pays de Loire 523, 524
Majer, Marianne viol 1301
Majeske, Daniel vn 1147
Mäki, Harri cl 787
Maksymiuk, Jerzy cond 612, 709, 924, 1009
Malaniuk, Ira cont 674
Malaysian Philharmonic Orchestra 400
Malcolm, George cond/hpd/pf 39, 229, 1225
Malipiero, Giovanni ten 1252
Malko, Nicolai cond 1234
Mallon, Kevin dire/vn 769
Malmivirta, Valtteri tbn 787
Malmö Symphony Orchestra 21, 166, 178, 829, 956
Maltman, Christopher bar 885, 886, 909
Malvicino, Horacio gtr 725
Manahan Thomas, Elin sop 831
Manchester Boys' Choir 233
Manchester Cathedral Choir 5
Mandeal, Cristian cond 367
Mandolesi, Giorgio bn 1110
Mangiocavallo, Luigi cond 182
Manhattan Public School No. 12 Boys' Choir 580
Manhattan School of Music Symphony 812
Maninger, Olaf vc 1034
Mann, Noel bass 1078
Mann, Zdenek vn 1002

Manning, Peter vn 717
Manning, Rita vn 140
Mannion, Rosa sop 830, 1068
Manson, Catherine vn 827
Manson, Jonathan vada 40, 780
Manson, Jonathan vc 435
Manze, Andrew vn 12, 35, 300, 387, 432, 435, 715, 797, 1017, 1019, 1043, 1107
Marangella, Joel ob 601
Marc, Alessandra sop 1157
Marcellus, Robert cl 1147
Marchi, Alessandro de cond 1116
Marchigiana Philharmonic Orchestra 986
Marcon, Andrea cond 1106, 1109, 1110
Marcon, Andrea hpd 41, 1109
Marconi, Francesco ten 1255
Marconi, Leonardo pf 725
Marconi, Nestor band 725
Margiono, Charlotte sop 108, 133, 134, 216
Margita, Stefan ten 602
Marherr-Wagner, Elfriede mez 1131
Marianovich, Sara pf 811
Marimpietri, Lydia sop 1268
Marin, Ion cond 325, 821, 1333
Marin-Degor, Sophie sop 413, 638
Marinkovic, Mateja vn 799, 847
Marinuzzi, Gino cond 1086
Markert, Annette cont 65
Markevitch, Igor cond 805, 997
Markiz, Lev cond 178, 618
Märkl, Markus hpd 1263
Markovich, Alexander pf 1181
Marks, Alan pf 412
Markson, Gerhard cond 488
Marriner, Neville cond 223, 233, 258, 362, 646, 648, 658, 660, 674, 809, 815, 817, 862, 997, 5677
Marschik, Peter cond 596
Marsh, Lynsey cl 7
Marshall, Wayne dire 389
Marshall, Conrad fl 795
Marshall, Lois sop 110
Marshall, Margaret sop 364
Marshall, Melanie mez 1211
Marshall, Wayne org 1201
Marshall, Wayne pf 389, 391, 1211
Martelli, Dominic treb 163
Martin, Frank cond 600
Martin, Ion cond 816
Martin, Andreas lte 1315
Martin, Jaime fl 368, 666
Martin, Jean pf 799
Martin, Philip pf 5, 411, 412
Martineau, Malcolm pf 813, 884, 1069, 1182, 1230, 1238, 1248
Martinelli, Giovanni ten 1235, 1250
Martini, Alberto cond 1109
Martinon, Jean cond 185, 835, 836
Martins, Marisa mez 640
Marty, Jean-Pierre pf 212
Martynov, Alexei ten 936
Marwood, Anthony va 371
Marwood, Anthony vn 7, 210, 351, 963
Marwood, Christopher vc 299
Marzana, Luca tpt 1110
Marzorati, Arnaud bass 319
Masetti, Umberto pf 1223
Maskell, Robert hn 897
Masková, Dagmar sop 352
Mason, Anne mez 631
Masseurs, Peter tpt 925
Masters, Rachel hp 17, 163, 402
Masur, Kurt cond 107, 203, 239, 339, 341, 348, 623, 981, 1144, 1321
Mata, Eduardo cond 297
Máthé, Gyözö va 116
Mathis, Edith sop 214, 250, 342, 352, 1328
Mathot, Tini fp 28
Mathot, Tini hpd 28, 671
Matousek, Bohuslav vn 602
Matter, Bert org 1007
Matters, Arnold bar 1224
Mattes, Willy cond 546
Matteuzzi, William ten 1236
Mattila, Karita sop 618, 854, 913, 1251
Mauceri, John cond 1149
Mauger, Jacques tbn 499
Maurel, Victor bar 1255
Maury, Claude hn 157
Max, Hermann cond 75, 1044
Maxwell, Donald bar 509
Maxwell, Melinda ob 827
Mayer, Albrecht ob 34, 35
Mayers, Philip pf 877
Mazzarri, Liliana sop 1117
Mazzoleni, Nicolas vn 1303
Medici, Alberto vc 1259
Medici Quartet 254, 1081
Medieval Ensemble of London 329
Medjimorec, Heinz pf 971
Mednikoff, Nikolai pf 43
Medtner, Nicolas pf 613
Meel, Nico van der ten 58, 74
Meer, Janneke van der vn 852
Meer, Richte van der vc 1103
Mees, Reinild pf 803
Mehlhart, Ulrich cl 493
Mehta, Zubin cond 142, 148, 580, 755, 761, 1080, 1094, 1345
Mei, Eva sop 133
Mei-Figner, Medea sop 1223
Mei-Loc Wu, Mary pf 95
Meier, Waltraud mez 579
Meijer, Xenia mez 692
Melba, Nellie sop 1233, 1251, 1255
Melchior, Lauritz bar 1131, 1249
Melchior, Lauritz ten 1131, 1249, 1251
Melia, Roland cond 632
Melik-Pashayev, Alexsander cond 1037
Melinek, Julia sop 624
Mellon, Agnès sop 273
Melos Ensemble 230, 382
Melos Quartet 621
Melville, Alan G. cond 187
(Members) of the Philip Glass Ensemble 399
Mendelssohn Quartet 812
Mengelberg, Willem cond 204, 977
Menges, Herbert cond 651
Mentzer, Susanne mez 153
Menuhin, Yehudi cond 658
Menuhin, Yehudi vn 106, 357, 1202, 1225
Mera, Yoshikazu alto 60, 61, 65, 70, 74
Merguillier, Cécille sop 1232
Merli, Francesco ten 1253
Merola, Gaetano cond 1253
Merrett, James Edward db 96, 207
Merrill, Robert bar 1268
Merriman, Nan mez 110
Merritt, Chris ten 631
Mertens, Klaus bar 61, 63, 1044
Mertens, Klaus bass 65, 72
Mesplé, Mady sop 734, 793
Messenger, Mark vn 796
Messthaler, Ulrich bass 267
Metropolitan Opera Chorus 1089, 1122, 1359
Metropolitan Opera Orchestra 1089, 1122, 1359
Metzmacher, Ingo cond 228, 489
Mewton-Wood, Noel pf 281
Meyer, Kerstin mez 589
Meyer, Paul cl 238, 459
Meyer, Sabine cl 408
Meyer, Wolfgang harm 1149
Meyer-Topsøe, Elisabeth sop 981
Meyerson, Mitzi hpd 597
MGM Studio Orchestra 1251
Micallef, Jennifer pf 498
Michaelian, Patricia pf 177
Michaelstein Chamber Choir 1044
Michaelstein Telemann Chamber Orchestra 1044
Michailova, Maria sop 1223
Michelangeli, Arturo Benedetti pf 104, 309, 421, 772,

1202, 1203, 1327
Michelow, Sybil mez ... 1074
Michigan University Musical Society Choral Union ... 1036
Micrologus ... 1290
Mid-German Radio Chorus ... 107
Midori vn ... 1150
Mikhailov, Maxim bass ... 999
Mikkola, Laura pf ... 785, 786
Mikulás, Peter bass ... 217, 352, 1001
Milan Chorus 'Giuseppe Verdi' ... 814
Milan Giuseppe Verdi Symphony Orchestra ... 1076, 1078
Milan La Scala Chorus ... 138, 139, 279, 322, 326, 348, 549, 550, 727, 728, 757, 761, 762, 822, 1075, 1076, 1080, 1081, 1082, 1083, 1086, 1087, 1090, 1093, 1094, 1095, 1229, 1232, 1252, 1330, 1355, 1357
Milan La Scala Orchestra ... 138, 139, 279, 322, 326, 348, 549, 550, 727, 728, 757, 761, 762, 822, 1075, 1076, 1080, 1081, 1082, 1083, 1086, 1087, 1088, 1090, 1093, 1094, 1095, 1229, 1232, 1235, 1239, 1258, 1265, 1330, 1355, 1357
Milan La Scala Philharmonic Choir ... 815
Milan La Scala Philharmonic Orchestra ... 815, 823
Milan La Scala Symphony Orchestra ... 1252
Milan RAI Chorus ... 1339
Milan RAI Orchestra ... 1339
Milan Symphony Orchestra 'Guiseppe Verdi' ... 814
Milanov, Zinka sop ... 133, 134
Miles, Alastair bass ... 133, 134, 152, 157, 447, 623, 631, 672, 816, 1076
Milhofer, Mark ten ... 763
Millan, Tony hpd ... 368
Miller, Cynthia onde ... 141
Miller, David lte/theo ... 765
Millinger, Andrew cond ... 508
Mills, Bronwen sop ... 631
Mills, Keith ten ... 1268
Milman, Misha vc ... 1035
Milne, Hamish pf ... 497, 571, 614, 1145
Milne, Lisa sop ... 446, 1113
Milner, Howard ten ... 69
Mingardo, Rafaele cond ... 1077
Mingardo, Sara cont ... 438, 448, 485, 722, 1104, 1111
Minkowski, Marc cond ... 405, 438, 443, 451, 454, 456, 569, 635, 703, 705, 782, 820, 968, 1347
Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra ... 312, 1024
Minnesota Orchestra ... 298, 355
Minter, Drew alto ... 1310
Minton, Yvonne mez ... 243, 364, 580, 589
Minty, Shirley cont ... 1062
Minty, Shirley mez ... 1070
Mintz, Shlomo vn ... 86, 740
Miricioiu, Nelly sop ... 816, 1236
Mishura-Lekhtman, Irina mez ... 1036
Missin, William alto ... 1311
Mistry, Jagdish vn ... 801
Mitchell-Velasco, Gigi mez ... 534
Mitchinson, John ten ... 519, 594, 998
Mitropoulos, Dimitri cond ... 580, 985, 1083
Mitterhofer, Alfred harm ... 971
Mitternacht-Geissendörfer, Isolde sop ... 1246
Moccia, Alessandro vn ... 132
Modeno Teatro Comunale Chorus ... 396
Moffat, Julie sop ... 999
Mogrelia, Andrew cond ... 1, 312
Moiseiwitsch, Benno pf ... 289, 422
Mokrenko, Anatoly bar ... 777
Molajoli, Lorenzo cond ... 727, 1253
Moldvay, József bass ... 1336
Molinari, Enrico bar ... 727
Molinari-Pradelli, Francesco cond ... 1266, 1267, 1268, 1355
Moll, Philip hpd ... 39
Möller, Wouter vc ... 466
Møller, Annemarie mez ... 912
Molnár, András ten ... 558
Molokina, Irina vc ... 936
Monaco, Daniela del cont ... 1300
Monaco, Mario Del ten ... 396, 1268
Mongrelia, Andrew cond ... 1026
Monks, Christopher org ... 965, 966
Monnard, Jean-François cond ... 833
Monoyios, Ann sop ... 67, 70, 73, 481, 486, 1044
Montague, Diana mez ... 631, 673, 987, 1070, 1253
Montanari, Stefano vn ... 1110
Monte Carlo National Opera Orchestra ... 396, 1266, 1268, 1322
Monte Carlo Opera Chorus ... 313, 396
Monte Carlo Opera Orchestra ... 313
Monte Carlo Philharmonic Orchestra ... 705, 734, 1245
Monteilhet, Pascal gtr/theo ... 597
Monteux, Pierre cond ... 606, 790
Monteverdi Choir ... 67, 68, 69, 73, 108, 133, 134, 136, 150, 154, 158, 216, 229, 251, 405, 406, 407, 415, 441, 442, 444, 447, 484, 485, 486, 673, 678, 679, 681, 682, 861, 876, 1000, 1076, 1344
Montgomery, David cond ... 457
Montgomery, Roger hn ... 897, 1105
Montreal Symphony Orchestra ... 83, 153, 154, 160, 280, 311, 369, 408, 502, 706, 725, 740, 742, 836, 1024, 1028
Montreal Symphony Orchestra Chorus ... 153, 154, 160, 311, 502, 706
Moody, Howard fp ... 122
Moog, Rainer va ... 601
Moon, Ick-Choo pf ... 531
Moore, Dudley pf ... 833
Moore, Gerald pf ... 340, 366, 689, 879, 881, 887, 889, 890, 1151, 1153, 1161, 1222, 1223, 1224, 1226, 1242, 1260, 1263, 1264, 1266, 1269, 1271, 1332
Moorhouse, Richard org ... 508
Moraguès, Pascal cl ... 1145
Moraguès Quintet ... 130
Moralt, Rudolf cond ... 1248
Morandi, Pier Giorgio cond ... 752, 1076
Mordkovitch, Lydia vn ... 16, 507, 513, 613, 922
Moreno, José Miguel dire ... 1295
Moreno, Emilio vn ... 183
Moreno, José Miguel vihu ... 1295
Moretti, Isabelle hp ... 306
Morey, Cynthia sop ... 1005
Morgan, Richard Lloyd bass ... 69
Morin, Christophe vc ... 429
Morison, Elsie sop ... 153
Mørk, Truls vc ... 464, 632, 792, 1184
Moroney, Davitt clav ... 261
Moroney, Davitt hpd/muse/org ... 38, 168, 261
Morris, Steve vn ... 140
Morskoi, Gavriil ten ... 1223
Mortensen, Lars Ulrik hpd ... 167, 258, 845
Mortensen, Lars Ulrik org ... 845
Morton, Richard ten ... 364
Morton, Robert bass ... 351
Mory, Anny sop ... 998
Mosaïques Quartet ... 668, 865
Moscona, Nicola bass ... 134
Moscow Imperial Opera Chorus ... 1223
Moscow Radio Symphony Orchestra ... 1169
Moscow Symphony Orchestra ... 217, 400, 613
Moser, Barbara pf ... 877
Moser, Edoardo pf ... 1265
Moser, Elsbeth baya ... 427
Moser, Thomas ten ... 152, 157, 854
Moses, Geoffrey bass ... 623
Mosley, George bar ... 1019
Mostowoy, Vladimir ten ... 777
Moxon, Alice sop ... 366
Moyle, Julian bar ... 1005
Mravinsky, Evgeny cond ... 930, 1032
Muck, Karl cond ... 1131
Muck, Conrad vn ... 892
Mudie, Michael cond ... 1224
Muff, Alfred bass ... 250
Mukk, Jósef ten ... 65, 1336
Müller, Barbara cont ... 1246
Müller, Hanns Udo pf ... 1153
Müller, Matthias vada ... 1314
Müller, Matthias viol ... 1314
Müller, Rufus ten ... 72
Müller, Thomas hn ... 1110
Müller-Brachmann, Hanno bass ... 74
Mulligan, Simon pf ... 363, 846
Mullova, Viktoria vn ... 83, 940

Munch, Charles cond ... 606, 791, 834, 836, 1137
Munich Bach Choir ... 242
Munich Chamber Orchestra ... 427, 459, 1148
Munich Philharmonic Choir ... 242
Munich Philharmonic Orchestra ... 242, 967
Munich Radio Orchestra ... 323, 1037, 1237, 1246
Munro, Matthew treb ... 623
Munrow, David cond ... 1281
Muntada, Maria Lluisa sop ... 368
Murail, Tristan onde ... 626
Muraro, Roger pf ... 626
Murphy, Kevin pf ... 1241
Murphy, William bar ... 991
Murray, Ann mez ... 188, 196, 310, 335, 413, 440, 767, 885, 1324
Murto, Seppo org ... 787
Musica Aeterna ... 1155
Musica Alta Ripa ... 1108
Musica Contexta ... 714
Musica Florea Orchestra ... 1155
Musica Florea Singers ... 1155
(I) Musici ... 1101, 1107, 1162, 7432
(Les) Musiciens du Louvre ... 405, 438, 443, 451, 454, 456, 569, 635, 703, 782, 968, 1347
Musinyan, Nina pf ... 1172
Musique Oblique Ensemble ... 268
Muskett, Doreen hurd ... 491
Muti, Riccardo cond ... 137, 138, 278, 677, 687, 777, 823, 917, 969, 997, 1075, 1079, 1080, 1081, 1083, 1093, 1095, 1162, 1355, 1357
Mutter, Anne-Sophie vn ... 142
Muzio, Claudia sop ... 1253, 1254
Muzzolini, Renaud xylr ... 626
My, Dominique cond ... 804
Myers, Michael ten ... 917
Myerscough, Nadia vn ... 796
Nachtmusique ... 660
Naddeo, Maurizio vc ... 1110
Nagano, Kent cond ... 2, 3, 4, 152, 223, 233, 238, 257, 267, 312, 609, 627, 631, 633, 734, 789, 923, 995, 1000, 1149, 1336
Nagy, Péter pf ... 536
Nakariakov, Sergei fhn ... 1171
Nakariakov, Sergei tpt ... 1171, 1181
Namur Symphonic Chorus ... 187
Naoumenko, Alexandre ten ... 778
Naouri, Laurent bar ... 438, 703
Naouri, Laurent bass ... 999
Naples Philharmonic Orchestra (Florida) ... 809
Naples San Carlo Opera Chorus ... 1355
Naples San Carlo Opera Orchestra ... 1355
Narucki, Susan sop ... 852
Nash, Heddle ten ... 365, 1070, 1224, 1254, 1271
Nash Ensemble ... 76, 171, 172, 177, 207, 498, 730, 1069, 1138
Nashville Symphony Orchestra ... 97, 514
National Academic Choir of Ukraine 'Dumka' ... 778
National Philharmonic Orchestra ... 395, 604, 605, 727, 819, 1089, 1266
National Symphony Orchestra ... 164, 198, 371, 928, 1224
National Symphony Orchestra of Ireland ... 24, 572
Natoli, Dominic ten ... 816
Natzke, Oscar bass ... 1224
Navarro, Garcia cond ... 1222
Naviglio, Giuseppe bar ... 1300
Naviglio, Guiseppe bass ... 270
NBC Symphony Orchestra ... 106, 110, 111, 133, 945, 1034, 1076, 1084, 1173, 1325
Neary, Martin cond ... 16, 1018, 1019
Neary, Alice vc ... 1019
Neate, Kenneth ten ... 589
Nédélec, Ronan bar ... 274
Nédélec, Ronan bass ... 273
Neel, Boyd cond ... 198, 371, 1224
Neeves, Helen sop ... 334
Neidich, Charles cl ... 277
Neill, Stuart ten ... 995
Neisemann, Michael ob ... 7
Nelson, John cond ... 156, 158, 159, 410, 443, 1229
Németh, Judit mez ... 65, 1336
Nes, Jard van cont ... 595, 623
Nessi, Giuseppe ten ... 1252
Netherlands Bach Collegium ... 58
Netherlands Chamber Choir ... 67, 69, 74
Netherlands Concert Choir ... 1096
Netherlands Opera Chorus ... 855
Netherlands Philharmonic Orchestra ... 281
Netherlands Radio Chamber Orchestra ... 83
Netherlands Radio Choir ... 549, 1051
Netherlands Radio Chorus ... 581
Netherlands Radio Philharmonic Orchestra 356, 460, 1051
Neu-Eröffnete Orchestre ... 1154
Neubauer, Paul va ... 1136
Neue Orchester, Das ... 891, 913
Neumann, Peter cond ... 71
Neumann, Ulrik gtr ... 1260
Neunecker, Marie Luise hn ... 228, 493, 553, 899
Nevel, Paul van cond ... 709, 812
Neves, Ana Ester sop ... 193
New Budapest Quartet ... 612
New College Choir, Oxford ... 71, 192, 441, 445, 446, 452, 763, 765, 1020, 1050, 1216, 1217
New England Conservatory Chorus ... 298, 791
New Hellenic Quartet ... 957
New Helsinki Quartet ... 1144
New Jersey Symphony Orchestra ... 401
New London Chamber Choir ... 1154
New London Children's Choir ... 235, 762
New London Consort ... 736, 1292
New London Light Opera Chorus ... 383, 1165
New London Opera Orchestra ... 1265
New London Orchestra ... 383, 839, 1165
New Music String Quartet ... 81
New Philharmonia Chorus ... 69, 230
New Philharmonia Orchestra ... 34, 69, 99, 219, 223, 230, 246, 298, 336, 362, 364, 375, 421, 502, 586, 593, 595, 656, 657, 825, 896, 1062, 1070, 1074, 1080, 1081, 1094, 1122, 1161, 1226, 1229, 1266, 1268, 1325
New Queen's Hall Orchestra ... 357, 366
New Symphony Orchestra ... 359, 1162, 1251, 1266
New World Symphony ... 376, 1100, 1173
New York Chamber Symphony Orchestra ... 457
New York Metropolitan Opera Chorus ... 458, 757, 1086, 1087, 1095, 1250
New York Metropolitan Opera Orchestra ... 458, 757, 1086, 1087, 1095, 1236, 1250, 1259, 1269
New York Philharmonic Orchestra 142, 162, 203, 339, 341, 348, 390, 514, 580, 584, 588, 687, 949, 1060, 1325
New York Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra ... 112, 580, 772, 977
New York Schola Cantorum ... 584
New York Stadium Symphony Orchestra ... 1025
New York Symphony Orchestra ... 203
New Zealand Symphony Orchestra ... 298
Newberry Consort ... 1291, 1310
Newton, Ivor pf ... 1223, 1242
Nexus ... 252
Nezhdanova, Antonina sop ... 1223
Nicholls, Alison hp ... 96
Nichols, Mary mez ... 69
Nicholson, Paul org/spin ... 432, 565
Nicolet, Aurèle fl ... 669
Nicoll, Harry ten ... 631
Niederhammer, Josef db ... 877
Nielsen, Inga sop ... 912
Nieuw Ensemble ... 320
Nieuw Sinfonietta Amsterdam ... 618
Nikitina, Galina mez ... 1223
Nikolitch, Gordan vn ... 1016
Nilon, Paul ten ... 631
Nilsson, Birgit sop ... 1361
Nimsgern, Siegmund bbar ... 336
Niquet, Hervé cond ... 274, 275, 567
Nixon, Leigh ten ... 1019
Noakes, Anna fl ... 1180
Noble, Dennis bar ... 365, 366, 1141, 1224, 1254
Noble, John bar ... 1070
Noble, John bass ... 1062
Nodaira, Ichiro pf ... 140
Nonoshita, Yukari sop ... 62, 67, 68

Noone, Michael cond 644
Noras, Arto vc 338
Nordberg, Hermann von pf 1264
Nordica, Lillian sop 1255
Nordmo-Løvberg, Aase sop 114
Nørgaard, Holger bass 1260
Norin, Susanne mez 1295
Norjanen, Hannu cond 953
Norman, Daniel ten 885, 886
Norman, Jessye sop 243, 579, 793, 981, 1121
Norrington, Roger cond 61, 110, 111, 112, 113, 439, 464, 609, 619, 1262
Norris, David Owen pf 380, 539
Norrköping Symphony Orchestra 723, 822
North, Nigel alte 565
North, Nigel lte 1042, 1303, 1310
North, Nigel theo 1042
North German Radio Chorus 110, 115, 495, 720
North German Radio Philharmonic Orchestra 545
North German Radio Symphony Orchestra 110, 115, 490, 832, 1556
North-West German Philharmonic Orchestra 488
Northern Chamber Orchestra 467, 496, 662, 663, 795, 809, 995
Northern Sinfonia 231, 366, 377, 378, 379, 496, 514, 996, 1070, 1072, 1142
Northern Sinfonia Chorus 1070, 1072
Northern Voices 233
Norwegian Chamber Orchestra 224, 463, 464, 571, 851, 1186
Norwegian Radio Orchestra 422, 943
Nott, Jonathan cond 552
Novacek, John pf 1178
Nováková, Jitka vn 1002
Novelli, Jean-Francois ten 157, 273
Numajiri, Ryusuke cond 427
Nuoranne, Timo cond 787
Nwanoku, Chi-Chi db 183
Nylund, Camilla sop 913
Nyman, Michael cond 700
Oberst, Simon sngr 447
Oborin, Lev pf 123
Ochman, Wieslaw ten 250, 342, 352
Ockenden, Rebecca sop 319
Ockert, Christian db 863
Octors, Georges-Elie cond 461
Oddone, Graciela sop 841
O'Dette, Paul chit/gtr 1308
O'Dette, Paul lte 327, 328, 1311
Odinius, Lothar ten 1079
O'Donnell, James cond 428, 600, 713, 714, 1098, 1317
O'Donnell, James org 227, 385, 600
O'Duinn, PrionnsÌas cond 6, 460, 617
O'Dwyer, Eamonn treb 763
Oelze, Christiane sop 554, 706, 1152, 1257
Offers, Maartje mez 1131
Ogawa, Noriko pf 309, 1012
Ogden, Craig gtr 730, 1049
Ogden, Robert alto 443
Ogdon, John pf 256, 331
Ogg, Jacques hpd 183
Oisly, Maurice d' ten 366
Oistrakh, David vn 107, 123, 195, 746
Oláh, Gábor bar 1336
Oleg, Raphael vn 116
Oliver, Robert bass 991
Oliveri, Dino cond 1265
Olivero, Magda sop 396
Ollila, Tuomas cond 238, 625, 943
Ollmann, Kurt bar 1051
Olmi, Paolo cond 1245
Olof, Theo vn 826
Olsen, Stanford ten 706
Olszewska, Maria mez 1131
O'Mara, Stephen ten 854
O'Neal, Christopher ob 554
Onofri, Enrico vn 1106, 1107, 1331
Oosten, Ben van org 334
Oostenrijk, Nienke sop 1096
Opera Festival Chorus 838
Opera North Chorus 1142, 1268
Opera Restor'd 192
Opéra-Comique Choir/Orchestra 606
Ophèle, Emmanuelle fl 188
Opie, Alan bar 1070
Oppens, Ursula pf 269
Oppitz, Gerhard pf 210, 895
Oramo, Sakari cond 303, 423, 834, 1098, 1144
Orchestra Barocca della Civica Scuola di Musica di Milano 967
Orchestra del Maggio Musicale Fiorentino 1232, 1345
Orchestra of the Age of Enlightenment 26, 37, 75, 180, 439, 440, 466, 623, 675, 676, 766, 876, 1105, 1230, 1234, 1241, 1262
Orchestra of the Eighteenth Century 74, 105, 466, 647, 780
Orchestra of the Golden Age 1042
Orchestra of the Renaissance 644
Orchestre de la Société des Concerts du Conservatoire 1232
Orchestre de Paris 158, 835, 1037, 1082, 1342, 1354
Orchestre de Paris Chamber Ensemble 793, 1245
Orchestre National du Capitole de Toulouse 173
Orchestre Révolutionnaire et Romantique 108, 134, 136, 150, 151, 154, 158, 216, 876, 897, 1076
Ord, Boris cond 1334
Orda, Alfred bar 589
O'Reilly, Graham cond 438
Orfeón Donostiarra 370
Orgonasova, Luba sop 108, 251, 815, 1001, 1076
Orlando Consort 332, 574, 702, 1292, 1293, 1293
Orlov, Alexander cond 1037
Orlov, Polikarp bar 1223
Ormandy, Eugene cond 104, 975
Orpheus Chamber Orchestra 646, 653, 655, 659, 661, 863, 994, 1102
Orpheus Quartet 118
Orpington Junior Singers 589
Orsanic, Vlatka sop 1156, 1158
ORTF National Orchestra 836, 1332
ORTF Philharmonic Orchestra 1332
Ortiz, Cristina pf 6, 836, 1162
Ortner, Erwin cond 877
Orton, Stephen vc 614, 648, 657
Osborne, Steven pf 574, 629
Osinska, Eva pf 282
Oslo Philharmonic Orchestra 344, 805, 924, 946, 1032, 1033
Oslo Quartet 697
Oslo Wind Quintet 696
Osostowicz, Krysia va 826
Osostowicz, Krysia vn 88, 827, 837
Ossia 801
Ossonce, Jean-Yves cond 577
Osten, Sigune von sop 720
Osterkorn, Natascha pf 1329
Östman, Arnold cond 404, 1230
Ostrobothnian Chamber Orchestra 698, 939, 1060
Oswald, Mark bar 706
Otaka, Tadaaki cond 1012
Ottensamer, Ernst cl 646, 971
Otter, Anne Sofie von mez 67, 73, 108, 144, 215, 272, 404, 426, 444, 445, 454, 579, 703, 854, 887, 906, 951, 967, 1076, 1153, 1254, 1255, 1556
Oue, Eiji cond 298
Oustrac, Stéphanie d' sop 703
Outakoski, Niiles vc 698
Outram, Martin va 176
Ovenden, Jeremy ten 640
Over, Simon pf 178
Ovrutsky, Mikhail vn 808
Owen, Charles pf 518
Owen, Thelma hp 1212
Owens, Shabda elec/voc 266
Oxford Bach Choir 609
Oxford Camerata 393, 702, 1312
Oxford Girls' Choir 491
Oxford Schola Cantorum 542
Ozawa, Seiji cond 79, 142, 338, 371, 556, 735, 940, 969, 1171, 1174, 1324

Paajanen, Mika hn 787
Paasikivi, Lilli mez 787, 941, 952
Pacini, Adolfo bar 1239
Padaut, Catherine sop 237
Padmore, Mark ten 69, 73, 295, 418, 481, 482, 483, 484, 764, 765, 768, 841, 1303
Padova Chamber Orchestra 487
Païvatalu, Guido bar 697, 912
Pagano, Caio pf 1099
Page, Christopher cond/dire 491, 1283, 1284, 1285, 1286, 1287
Page, Neil cond 1230
Page, Christopher lte 1283, 1286
Pahud, Emmanuel fl 427, 666, 1040, 1182, 1184
Palacios, Isabel dire 1315
Palladian Ens 40, 1312
Palladian Ensemble 1312
Palloc, Antoine pf 1249
Palm, Siegfried vc 552, 626
Palma, Susan afl/fl 646
Palmer, Felicity sop 364, 365, 503, 519
Palmer, Gladys cont 1131
Palomares, Joaquín vn 633
Palombi, Antonello ten 752
Palumbo, Massimo pf 822
Pancík, Josef cond 352
Pandolfo, Paolo vada 44, 1313
Pandolfo, Paolo viol 597, 1306, 1313
Panenka, Jan pf 700, 1002
Panina, Antonina mez 1223
Panocha Quartet 348
Panula, Jorma cond 368
Panzarella, Anna Maria sop 674
Pape, René bass 1328
Papi, Gennaro cond 1258
Pappano, Antonio cond 607, 608, 741, 757, 758, 759, 1082, 1120, 1354
Pappano, Antonio pf 741, 757, 1230, 1231
Papunen, Margit sop 838
Paray, Paul cond 271, 1166
Parikian, Manoug vn 254
Paris Conservatoire Orchestra 734, 834, 1222, 1266
Paris Conservatoire Soloists 734
Paris Ensemble Orchestra 1229
Paris Ensemble Orchestral 443
Paris National Opera Chorus 999
Paris National Opera Orchestra 518, 838, 999, 1232
Paris Opera Chorus 734, 1266
Paris Opera Orchestra 145, 518, 734
Paris Opéra-Bastille Chorus 837, 937, 1088
Paris Opéra-Bastille Orchestra 151, 627, 837, 937, 1088
Paris Opéra-Comique Chorus 313, 704, 734
Paris Opéra-Comique Orchestra 313, 704, 734
Paris Orchestra Chorus 158
Paris Symphony Orchestra 1325
Parker, Patricia mez 998
Parker-Smith, Jane org 519
Parkin, Eric pf 80, 420, 513, 610, 611, 1135
Parkman, Stefan cond 13, 800, 979
Parley of Instruments Baroque Orchestra, The 762
Parley of Instruments Renaissance Violin Band 1313
Parley of Instruments, The 21, 179, 762, 1229
Parrott, Andrew cond 393, 444, 764, 1316
Parry, David cond 324, 326, 414, 550, 604, 631, 708, 755, 761, 762, 816, 987, 1236, 1246, 1253
Parry, Wilfrid pf 1176
Parsons, Brian ten 1077
Parsons, Geoffrey pf 623, 879, 1016, 1153, 1225
Partridge, Ian ten 161, 767, 1062, 1070
Pasero, Tancredi bass 1252
Pashley, Anne sop 153, 1074
Pasiecznik, Olga sop 570
Pasternack, Josef cond 1237, 1240, 1250, 1261, 1269
Pászthy, Júlia sop 65
Pásztory-Bartók, Ditta pf 90
Pataky, Koloman von ten 134
Patanè, Franco cond 1357
Paton, Iain ten 768
Patras, Karel hp 306
Patti, Adelina sop 1255
Patzak, Julius ten 584, 889, 1332
Pauk, György vn 87
Paul, Reginald pf 1266
Paulik, Anton cond 1248
Pavarotti, Luciano ten 1075, 1256, 1266, 1330, 1352
Pavlovski, Nina sop 541
Pavlutskaya, Natalia vc 427
Pay, Antony bscl 1241
Payne, Joseph hpd 707
Payne, Sally Bruce mez 484, 876
Pazmany, Tibor org 533
Peacock, Adrian bass 1317
Pearce, Colman cond 964
Pearlman, Martin cond 36, 406
Pears, Peter spkr 228, 1138
Pears, Peter ten 69, 71, 153, 214, 223, 224, 228, 229, 230, 232, 1138
Pearson, Justin vc 140
Pecková, Dagmar mez 217, 352
Pedersen, Lars ten 695
Peerce, Jan ten 110
Peeters, Harry bass 913
Pehlivanian, George cond 556
Pell, Susanna vada 765
Pell, Susanna viol 763
Pellerin, Louise ob 725
Pelliccia, Arrigo va 656
Pelton, Carmen sop 610
Penderecki, Krzysztof cond 720, 721
Pendrill, Christine cora 1238
Pennetier, Jean-Claude pf 374
Penny, Andrew cond 22, 24, 25, 1004
Perahia, Murray dire 33, 649, 650, 651, 656
Perahia, Murray pf 33, 51, 100, 102, 103, 280, 283, 284, 293, 421, 436, 649, 650, 651, 656, 896
Percy, Neil perc 427
Perényi, Miklos vc 537, 867
Pérès, Marcel dire/bar 1272
Pérez, Victor Pablo cond 1248
Pergamenschikov, Boris vc 44, 336, 427
Perini, Flora mez 1237
Perl, Alfredo pf 128
Perl, Hille vada 1314
Perlman, Itzhak vn 43, 79, 104, 107, 123, 142, 211, 341, 712, 1171
Perrett, Danielle hp 828
Perry, Herbert bass 1149
Persson, Frederic pf 1258
Persson, Miah sop 66, 67, 68
Pertusi, Michele bass 151, 814, 815, 4491
Pesek, Libor cond 347, 539, 699, 1001
Peter Kay Children's Choir 761, 987
Peter-Griess-Strasse Hauptschule Children's Choir 525
Petersen Quartet 120, 423, 459, 471, 892
Petibon, Patricia sop 449, 1314
Petit, Francis mari 626
Petite Bande, La 28, 63, 67, 69, 678, 722
Petite Bande Chorus 67, 678
Petitjean, Stéphane pf 428
Petits Chanteurs de Versailles, Les 173
Petroni, Luigi ten 815
Peverini, Francesco vn 399
Peyer, Gervase de cl 381, 513, 628
Phantasm 38, 261, 543, 565, 763
Philadelphia Choral Arts Society 917
Philadelphia Orchestra 104, 493, 533, 687, 710, 917, 925, 929, 931, 975, 997, 1172
Philharmonia Baroque Orchestra 1102
Philharmonia Chorus 114, 135, 216, 325, 583, 678, 685, 986, 1074
Philharmonia Hungarica 465
Philharmonia Orchestra 18, 102, 103, 104, 105, 106, 111, 114, 115, 135, 138, 145, 201, 202, 216, 229, 231, 246, 281, 282, 305, 324, 325, 326, 336, 340, 362, 370, 379, 408, 414, 415, 422, 494, 511, 519, 520, 530, 539, 546, 554, 557, 583, 593, 613, 631, 647, 651, 678, 685, 693, 708, 729, 753, 755, 758, 761, 762, 770, 772, 777, 806, 825, 835, 854, 861, 898, 939, 940, 944, 945, 948, 950, 972, 975, 983, 984, 986, 997, 999, 1056, 1064, 1074, 1084, 1132, 1137, 1140, 1162, 1168,

1169, 1170, 1171, 1189
Philidor Ensemble 1155
Phillips, Peter cond 264, 301, 523, 566, 643, 714, 1013, 1014
Phillips, Daniel org 1230
Phillips, Leo vn 177, 730
Phillips, Margaret org 962
Phillips, Tom ten 1311
Philogene, Ruby mez 519
Pianca, Luca lte 167, 1331
Piatigorsky, Gregor vc 532, 1137, 1147
Piau, Sandrine sop 268, 295, 302, 438, 768
Pickett, Philip cond 736, 1292
Pidò, Evelino cond 323, 1238, 1339
Pidoux, Roland vc 429
Pierard, Catherine sop 765
Pierlot, Philippe vada 544
Pierre, Fabrice hp 1012
Pierson, Alan cond 801
Pieterson, George cl 304
Pietiläinen, Pauli org 952
Piffaro 1294
Pillai, Ashan va 96
Pilz, Janos vn 88
Pini, Anthony vc 96, 209
Pini-Corsi, Antonio bar 1255
Pinkas, Jiří cond 353
Pinnock, Trevor cond 36, 67, 192, 431, 433, 434, 445, 483, 1230, 1341
Pinnock, Trevor dire 36, 300, 404
Pinnock, Trevor hpd 36, 40, 46, 300, 404, 780
Pinza, Ezio bass 1250, 1259
Piolino, François ten 449, 636, 638
Piovano, Luigi vc 1104
Piqué, Alessandro ob 1110
Piquemal, Michel bar 732
Pirasti Trio 964
Pires, Maria João pf 210, 211, 281, 287, 307, 424, 652, 669, 670, 676, 870, 895
Pirinen, Pasi tpt 787
Pitt, Percy cond 1251
Pitts, Anthony cond 719
Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra 802
Pizarro, Artur pf 129, 633
Plagge, Rolf pf 488
Plançon, Pol bass 1255
Plane, Robert cl 379, 575
Plasson, Michel cond 173, 175, 313, 413, 415, 606, 607, 793
Platt, Ian bar 631
Play Ensemble 1201
Plazas, Mary sop 1253
Pleeth, William vc 381, 628
Plessis, Christian du bar 1266
Pletnev, Mikhail cond 646, 773, 1027, 1028, 1031, 1033
Pletnev, Mikhail pf 28, 124, 842, 1033, 1203, 1204
Plotkin, Rachael treb 338
Plouvier, Jean-Luc pf 461
Plubeau, Christine vada 1303
Pochon, Virginie sop 841
Podger, Julian ten 251, 1302
Podger, Rachel bqvn 42, 780
Podger, Rachel vn 28, 35, 40, 42, 1108
Poggi, Gianni ten 1268
Pogorelich, Ivo pf 290
Pöhl, Albert bass 1044
Pokrovsky Ensemble 998
Polidori, Massimo vc 34
Polish Chamber Orchestra 1009
Polish Festival Orchestra 280
Polish National Radio Symphony Orchestra 341, 409, 569, 570, 627, 710, 720, 721
Polish Radio Choir 409
Polish Radio National Symphony Orchestra 570, 1009
Polish Radio Symphony Orchestra 1009
Polish Radio Symphony Orchestra of Kraków 1009
Pollack, Christian cond 970
Pollack, Daniel pf 80
Pollet, Françoise sop 630, 732
Pollini, Maurizio pf 100, 103, 131, 198, 207, 281, 284, 287, 292, 559, 569, 902, 904, 905, 1205
Polo, Asier vc 808
Polverelli, Laura mez 1078, 1113
Polyansky, Valéry cond 186, 602, 936, 1015
Polyphony 226, 718, 830, 831, 911, 1141, 1231
Pomerium 330, 1294
Pondepeyre, Angeline pf 428
Ponder, Michael va 297
Pons, Josep cond 994
Pons, Sylvie sop 374
Ponseele, Marcel ob 35, 1107
Ponselle, Rosa sop 1256
Pöntinen, Roland pf 494, 799
Pooley, Tim va 223, 502, 8573
Popa, Péter vn 116
Popescu, Maria mez 778
Popken, Ralf alto 75
Pople, Ross vc 140, 1225
Popp, Lucia sop 336, 589, 875
Poppen, Christoph cond 427, 459, 1148
Poppen, Christoph vn 666
Portsmouth Cathedral Choir 1219
Portuguese Symphony Orchestra 193
Posch, Michael dire 8
Posch, Alois db 869, 971
Posch, Michael rec 8
Poschner-Klebel, Brigitte sop 913
Post, Andreas ten 1044
Postnikova, Victoria pf 1024
Poston, Elizabeth pf 1266
Potter, John ten 522
Pougnet, Jean vn 96, 1264
Poulet, Gérard vn 657
Poulton, Robert bar 152
Power, Lawrence va 1182
Power, Patrick ten 110
Pozas, Jorge vc 368
Prades Festival Orchestra 865
Prague Chamber Choir 352
Prague Chamber Orchestra 663, 664
Prague Children's Choir 351
Prague National Theatre Chorus 354, 960
Prague National Theatre Orchestra 354, 960
Prague Philharmonic Choir 999, 1059
Prague Philharmonic Chorus 351, 579, 686, 820
Prague Quartet 350
Prague Radio Symphony Orchestra 347, 892
Prague Symphony Orchestra 347
Prandelli, Giacinto ten 1076
Pratt, Lawrence pf 513
Prazák Quartet 1145
Preedy, Cyril pf 1176
Prégardien, Christoph ten 65, 69, 72, 73, 75, 251, 485, 674, 877, 882, 883, 885, 890, 1328
Preiss, James mari 800
Pressler, Menahem pf 107, 348
Preston, Simon cond 351
Preston, Simon hpd 627
Preston, Simon org 67, 230, 330, 627, 1181
Prêtre, Georges cond 198, 734, 838, 1232, 1332
Previn, André cond 78, 216, 281, 346, 502, 532, 533, 620, 627, 707, 737, 738, 739, 742, 743, 770, 771, 773, 777, 929, 930, 939, 1023, 1135, 1137, 1140, 1226, 1230, 1348
Previn, André pf 78, 532, 737, 1226, 1230
Prévost, Thomas fl 626
Prey, Hermann bar 581
Preyer, Stefan treb 876
Price, David org 1214
Price, Leontyne sop 81, 251, 1330
Price, Margaret sop 242, 364, 1062, 1257
Prina, Sonia mez 1076
Prince, Charles Adams cond 1261
Printemps, Yvonne sop 734
Pritchard, John cond 1229, 1266
Pro Arte Orchestra 434, 1005, 1006
Pro Arte Quartet 471
Pro Arte Singers 718
Procházka, AlÍs bass 1155
Procter, Norma cont 224, 229, 583
Prommel, Peter perc 460
Protschka, Josef ten 875

Prunyi, Ilona pf 91
Prutsman, Stephen pf 572
Pryce-Jones, John cond 1004, 1006
Pryor, Gwenneth pf 513
Pujol, Marcos voc 454
Purcell Quartet 69, 259, 300, 435, 915
Purcell Simfony, The 768, 7684
Purcell Simfony Voices, The 768, 7684
Purefoy, William alto 192
Purser, David tbn 730
Pustelak, Kazimierz ten 1009
Putilin, Nikolai bar 747
Pyatt, David hn 648, 886, 974, 1182
Quartetto Borciani 182
Quartetto Italiano 116, 207, 306, 791, 866
Quartetto Vocale Giovanna Marini 1290
Quasthoff, Thomas bar 214, 1257
Quasthoff, Thomas bass 854
Quattrocchi, Fernand cond 428
Queen's Hall Orchestra 1070
Queensland Symphony Orchestra (Brisbane) 22
Queyras, Jean-Guihen vc 189, 226, 327, 551, 666
Quinn, Iain org 956
Quint, Jean-Marie bqvc 237
Quint, Philip vn 893
Quivar, Florence cont 1010
Raabe, Peter cond 1198
Rabin, Michael vn 712
Rabinowitch, Alexander pf 899
Rácz, Ottó ob 116
Radcliffe Choral Society 606
Raderman, Lou vn 1251
Radio France Chorus 311, 626
Raekallio, Matti pf 625
Ragazzi, The Peninsula Boys' Chorus 995
Ragin, Derek Lee alto 447
Raglan Baroque Players 455
Ragon, Gilles ten 237, 703
Ragossnig, Konrad gtr 877
Rahbari, Alexander cond 756
Rahman, Sophia pf 140
Raisa, Rosa sop 1258
Raisbeck, Rosina sop 317
Raisin-Dadre, Denis cond 1280
Raisin-Dadre, Denis fl 1280
Ramey, Samuel bass 243, 1075
Ramirez, Alejandro ten 877
Ramon i Monzó, Josep-Miquel bass 295
Ramselaar, Bas bass 58
Ranallo, Philippe tpt 461
Ranc, Bruno ten 374
Rancourt, Stéphane ob 794
Randle, Thomas ten 1068
Rankl, Karl cond 1224
Rannou, Blandine hpd 295
Ranta, Ilmo pf 953
Ranzani, Stefano cond 396
Raphael Ens 620
Raphael Ensemble 205
Rappé, Jadwiga cont 1009
Rare Fruits Council 40, 168
Raschèr Saxophone Quartet 395
Rasilainen, Ari cond 422, 943
Raskin, Judith sop 584
Rattay, Howard vn 1240
Rattle, Simon cond 3, 6, 21, 82, 85, 86, 100, 101, 165, 231, 356, 359, 391, 415, 468, 489, 519, 520, 583, 585, 586, 588, 591, 626, 745, 790, 851, 854, 928, 944, 948, 996, 998, 1009, 1010, 1069, 1132, 1134, 1140, 1169
Raucheisen, Michael pf 535, 889, 1153, 1244
Rautakoski, Jorma tpt 787
Rautenberg, Kai pf 1149
Rautio, Erkki vc 698
Ravaglia, Paolo bcl 399
Ravel Quartet 374
Ravens, Simon cond 714
Rawsthorne, Noel org 1191
Raybould, Clarence cond 414, 1224, 1254, 1271
Rayner Cook, Brian bar 1067
Razumovsky Sinfonia 312
RCA Victor Chamber Orchestra 808
RCA Victor Chorus 754
RCA Victor Orchestra 754, 1265
RCA Victor Symphony Orchestra 532, 1162
Recherche Ensemble 377
Red Byrd 394
Rees, Owen cond 1299
Refice, Licinio cond 1253
Regteren, Jan Erik van va 852
Reher, Kurt vc 850, 865
Reibold, Bruno cond 1249
Reich, Steve dire/pf 801
Reichenberg, David ob 36
Reid, Andrew org 576
Reijans, Marcel ten 1096
Reimann, Aribert pf 889, 1241
Reiner, Fritz cond 85, 195, 975, 1122, 1132, 1162, 1325
Reiss, Albert ten 1131
Reményi, János cond 1336
Remmert, Birgit cont 108, 109, 250, 877
Rémy, Ludger dire 1044
Rémy, Ludger org 1044
Renaissance Camerata of Caracas 1315
Renaissance Orchestra 1311
Renaud, Maurice bar 1255
Rendall, David ten 243
Rensburg, Kobie van ten 640
Repin, Vadim vn 613, 691, 746, 923, 940, 979
Rescigno, Nicola cond 396, 1232
Reszke, Edouard de bass 1255
Rethberg, Elisabeth sop 1153, 1258, 1259, 1267
Reuter, Johan bar 318, 500, 501
Revenaugh, Daniel cond 256
Reverdie, La 1295
Reyghere, Greta de sop 67, 69
Reynish, Timothy cond 417
Reynolds, Anna mez 342, 352, 777, 1074
Rheinische Kantorei 75, 1044
Rhine Opera Chorus 1347
Rhineland Palatinate State Philharmonic Orchestra 1361
Rhineland-Pfalz State Philharmonic Orchestra 268
Rhys-Davies, Jennifer sop 987
Riazuelo, Carlos cond 1248
Richardson, Stephen bass 1329
Richter, Caspar cond 533, 534
Richter, Sviatoslav pf 107, 124, 126, 130, 131, 221, 437, 556, 557, 670, 688, 741, 746, 747, 776, 777, 871, 874, 903, 904, 935, 1029, 1035, 1205, 1327
Rickenbacher, Karl Anton cond 559
Riddell, Duncan vn 599
Ridderbusch, Karl bass 250
Riddle, Frederick va 96, 150, 1141
Riebl, Thomas va 900
Riegel, Kenneth ten 557
Riegelbauer, Peter db 863
Rieger, Fritz cond 459
Riesman, Michael cond 399
Riesman, Michael pf 398
Rieu, André cond 1041
Rigby, Jean mez 92, 132, 152, 251, 316, 354, 1070, 1115
Riley, Terry voc 266
Rilling, Helmuth cond 74, 564, 624
Rime, Noémi sop 781
Rimini, Giacomo bar 1258
Rimmer, Nicholas org 831
Rintzler, Marius bass 926, 932
Ripley, Gladys cont 365, 446, 1224
Risberg, Erik prpf 716
Risca Male Choir 1268
Ritchie, Margaret sop 1062, 1066
Ritchie, Neil treb 351
Rivenq, Nicolas bar 781
Riverside Symphony Orchestra 829
Rizzi, Carlo cond 414
Robbin, Catherine mez 133, 134, 158, 229, 672
Robert Shaw Chamber Singers 1219
Robert Shaw Chorale 110, 1084
Robert Shaw Festival Singers 1219
Roberton, Hugh cond 366
Roberts, Helen va 796

Roberts, Stephen bar 354, 364, 624, 695, 720, 826, 1070, 1072, 1140, 4609
Roberts, Timothy hpd 394
Roberts, Timothy org 385, 386, 1304
Robertson, Duncan ten 1074
Robertson, James cond 1224
Robertson, Karen sop 533
Robertson, Martin sax 1056
Robertson, Stuart bar 366
Robilliard, Louis org 374
Robinson, Christopher cond 227, 508, 716, 828, 1020
Robinson, Christopher dire 828, 965
Robinson, Christopher org 828, 965
Robinson, Dean bar 816
Robinson, Faye sop 1048
Robinson, Sharon vc 206
Robinson, Stanford cond 1224
Robles, Marisa hp 224
Robson, Anthony ob 11, 30, 1105
Robson, Christopher alto 1020
Robson, Elizabeth sop 1005
Robson, Martin bass 999
Robson, Nigel ten 316, 441, 444, 964
Rodgers, Joan sop 110, 316, 778, 1062
Rogé, Denise-Françoise pf 793
Rogé, Pascal hpd 730
Rogé, Pascal pf 729, 730, 731, 792, 793, 836, 840
Rogé, Pascal pfl 792
Rogers, Walter B. cond 1235, 1269
Rogers, Laurence hn 898
Rogers, Nigel ten 915, 1316
Rolfe Johnson, Anthony ten 67, 68, 73, 108, 133, 314, 413, 444, 452, 485, 673, 886
Rolla, János dire 659
Rolla, János vn 659
Rolland, Sophie vc 538
Romanesca 844, 1058, 1295
Rome Opera Chorus 756, 759, 1080, 1091, 1094, 1234
Rome Opera Orchestra 756, 759, 1080, 1091, 1094, 1234
Romero, Pepe gtr 809
Ronald, Landon cond 356, 834, 1161, 1251
Ronald, Landon pf 1232, 1255
Rønning, Helge ten 500, 501
Roocroft, Amanda sop 585, 1063, 1070
Rooley, Anthony lte 1247
Rootering, Jan-Hendrik bass 579, 913
Rorem, Ned pf 813
Rørholm, Marianne cont 942
Rosamunde Quartet 477
Rosand, Aaron vn 400
Röschmann, Dorothea sop 73, 440, 445, 841, 911
Roscoe, Martin pf 5, 252, 299, 321, 373, 1010
Rose, Leonard vc 104, 1259
Rose, Peter bass 1149
Rose Consort of Viols 394
Rosekrans, Charles cond 1271
Rösel, Peter pf 974
Rosen, Charles pf 1147
Rosen, Max vn 1258
Rosenberger, Carol pf 457
Rosenthal, Manuel cond 705
Roskilde Cathedral Boys' Choir & Congregation 436
Ross, Alastair hpd 443
Rössel-Majdan, Hilde mez 108
Rossi, Cristiano vn 1109
Rössl-Majdan, Hilde mez 251, 583
Rost, Andrea sop 579
Rostal, Max va 974
Rostropovich, Mstislav cond 222, 400, 427, 742, 751, 923, 928, 931, 937, 1351
Rostropovich, Mstislav dire 463, 1171
Rostropovich, Mstislav perc 427
Rostropovich, Mstislav pf 1322
Rostropovich, Mstislav vc 107, 210, 223, 226, 307, 339, 427, 463, 1029, 1171, 1322
Rosvaenge, Helge ten 1153
Roth, Detlef bar 109
Rothbauer, Martina vada 1314
Rothman, George cond 829
Rotschopf, Michael spkr 1158
Rotterdam Chamber Orchestra 810
Rotterdam Philharmonic Orchestra 747
Rouleau, Joseph bass 153
Rousset, Christoph dire/org 302
Rousset, Christophe cond 681, 780, 1054, 1230
Rousset, Christophe hpd 303, 597, 781
Rowe, Tony cond 217, 218
Rowicki, Witold cond 343, 741
Rowland-Jones, Simon va 349
Royal Aarhus Academy of Music Symphony Orchestra 23
Royal Albert Hall Orchestra 357, 359
Royal Ballet Sinfonia 5, 161, 162, 611, 1004, 1165
Royal Consort 260
Royal Danish Opera Choir 830
Royal Danish Orchestra 830
Royal Liverpool Philharmonic Choir 1001, 1062
Royal Liverpool Philharmonic Orchestra 110, 219, 296, 378, 700, 954, 1001, 1003, 1024, 1025, 1062, 1067, 1166
Royal Military School of Music Band, Kneller Hall 1080
Royal Northern College of Music Wind Orchestra 417
Royal Opera House Chorus, Covent Garden 137, 138, 161, 224, 229, 236, 314, 324, 520, 678, 755, 759, 760, 790, 1071, 1080, 1081, 1087, 1093, 1132, 1224, 1238, 1266, 1267, 1336, 1352, 1356, 1358
Royal Opera House Orchestra, Covent Garden 1, 137, 156, 159, 161, 224, 229, 236, 324, 491, 520, 521, 608, 678, 755, 759, 760, 1071, 1082, 1087, 1093, 1120, 1221, 1224, 1229, 1239, 1265, 1266, 1267, 1268, 1332, 1333, 1336, 1352, 1356, 1358
Royal Philharmonic Chorus 154
Royal Philharmonic Concert Orchestra 1237
Royal Philharmonic Orchestra 6, 76, 149, 150, 154, 161, 173, 195, 205, 256, 267, 281, 314, 315, 319, 347, 356, 401, 426, 557, 631, 803, 818, 835, 859, 862, 931, 947, 949, 950, 953, 954, 1061, 1067, 1085, 1137, 1161, 1162, 1164, 1167, 1169, 1265, 1271, 1325
Royal Scottish National Orchestra 79, 80, 93, 94, 243, 244, 247, 249, 346, 378, 501, 529, 695, 696, 744, 747, 785, 794, 922, 927, 928, 1058, 4609
Royal Stockholm Philharmonic Choir 13
Royal Stockholm Philharmonic Orchestra 199, 926, 967, 1259
Royal Swedish Opera Orchestra 146
Rozario, Patricia sop 503, 504, 885, 886, 1018, 1019, 1020, 1329
Rozhdestvensky, Gennady cond 227, 509, 541, 697, 926, 967, 1017, 1024, 1027, 1039, 1171, 1172, 1221
RTBF Symphony Orchestra 929
RTE Concert Orchestra 6
RTE Philharmonic Choir 964
RTE Sinfonietta 162, 617, 1004
Rubens, Sibylla sop 65, 72, 74
Rubinsky, Sonia pf 1100
Rubinstein, Artur pf 282, 285, 286, 287, 290, 293
Rudner, Ola cond 829
Rudy, Mikhail pf 518, 931
Ruhrseitz, Kurt pf 1259
Rumsey, Shirley lte 1286
Rundel, Peter cond 801, 1056
Rundell, Clark cond 417
Rupp, Franz pf 535
Russell, David gtr 809
Russell, Lucy vn 28
Russell, Lynda sop 599
Russian National Orchestra 646, 773, 1027, 1028, 1031, 1033
Russian Patriarchate Choir 1273
Russian State Symphonic Cappella 186, 602
Russian State Symphony Orchestra 227, 602, 936, 1015, 1028
Russill, Patrick org 263, 264
Rutherford, Christian hn 1040
Rutter, John cond 374, 831, 1211, 1212
Ruud, Ole Kristian cond 822, 1057
Ruzicka, Peter cond 490
Rydl, Kurt bass 720
Rysanek, Leonie sop 251
Ryumina, Irina pf 711
Saarbrücken Radio Symphony Orchestra 250, 723
Saarenpää, Leena pf 952

Saarikettu, Kaija vn 698
Sabajno, Carlo cond 1239
Sabata, Victor de cond 761, 1088, 1232
Sabbatini, Giuseppe ten 151, 815, 4491
Sacqueboutiers de Toulouse 638
Sadler's Wells Opera Chorus 1005, 1224, 1271
Sadler's Wells Opera Orchestra 1005, 1224
Sadler's Wells Orchestra 1224
Sado, Yutaka cond 1251
Sagasser, Robert vada 1314
Saint Paul Chamber Orchestra 78
Sainte-Cécile Academie 438
Saito Kinen Orchestra 735
Sakari, Petri cond 13, 940, 942, 946, 948
Saks, Gidon bass 454
Sakurada, Makoto ten 60, 62, 66, 67, 70
Salaman, Clare vn 259
Salisbury Cathedral Boy Choristers 921
Salisbury Cathedral Choristers 229
Salmon, Jane vc 827
Salmon, Philip ten 447, 508, 1068
Salo, Per org 519, 541
Salomaa, Petteri bar 787
Salomaa, Petteri bass 110, 768, 932
Salomon Quartet 1178
Salonen, Esa-Pekka cond 3, 83, 554, 693, 832, 939, 942, 1011
Salpeter, Max vn 1176
Salzburg Bach Choir 61
Salzburg Camerata Academica 61, 1186
Salzburg Chamber Philharmonic Orchestra 27
Salzburg Festival Chamber Choir 1095
Salzburg Mozarteum Camerata Academica 659, 660
Samaltanos, Nikolaos pf 957
Sammarco, Mario bar 1251
Sammons, Albert vn 96, 357, 513
San Francisco Girl's Chorus 515, 995
San Francisco Opera Ballet 1343
San Francisco Opera Chorus 1253, 1343, 1349
San Francisco Opera Orchestra 738, 1253, 1343, 1348, 1349
San Francisco Symphony Chorus 515, 995
San Francisco Symphony Orchestra 298, 515, 587, 694, 695, 770, 995, 1200
San Sebastian People's Choral Society 1328
Sánchez, Miguel dire/voc 1274
Sanderling, Kurt cond 103, 199, 592, 950
Sanderling, Michael vc 892
Sandmann, Marcus bass 72
Santa Cecilia Academy Chorus, Rome 184, 755, 1229, 1268
Santa Cecilia Academy Orchestra, Rome 184, 755, 1229, 1268
Santana, Lee chit/gtr/lte 1314
Santi, Nello cond 1229, 1266, 1349
Santini, Gabriele cond 759, 1091
Santley, Charles bar 1255
São Carlos National Theatre Chorus 193
Saram, Rohan de vc 269, 320
Saraste, Jukka-Pekka cond 338, 575, 694, 696, 831, 953
Sarfaty, Regina cont 991
Sargent, Malcolm cond 195, 357, 365, 446, 1005, 1006, 1161, 1162, 1224, 1271
Saroglou, Dimitris pf 428
Sartori, Egida Giordani hpd 42
Saunders, Antony pf 81
Sautereau, Nadine sop 1232
Savage, Richard bar 447
Savall, Jordi cond 169, 433, 568, 1278, 1306
Savall, Jordi dire 111, 1288, 1289, 1305, 1306
Savall, Arianna dbp 1315
Savall, Jordi vada 41, 1305, 1306, 1315
Savall, Jordi viol 1289, 1306, 1315
Savchuck, Yevhen cond 778
Savitzky, Leonid bass 1246
Sawallisch, Wolfgang cond 196, 493, 657, 710, 875, 896, 975, 982, 984, 989, 1125, 1172, 1341
Sawallisch, Wolfgang pf 214, 622
Saxon State Theatre Chorus 352
Saxon State Theatre Orchestra 352
Sayão, Bidù sop 1259
Scalchi, Gloria mez 815, 1076, 4491
Scalera, Vincenzo pf 1245
Scandiuzzi, Roberto bass 352, 815
Scano, Elisabetta sop 815, 1076
Scaramouche 1184
Scattola, Carlo bass 1239
Schade, Michael ten 73, 486, 564, 593, 624, 885, 886
Schaer, Hanna mez 877
Schäfer, Christine sop 64, 73, 190, 624, 672, 676, 855, 882, 883, 884, 885, 912, 1329
Schäfer, Markus ten 73
Schaffer, Frank vc 633
Schasching, Rudolf ten 108
Scherbakov, Konstantin pf 613, 802
Schermerhorn, Kenneth cond 97, 514
Schiff, Heinrich cond 846
Schiff, András pf 82, 348, 479, 675, 867, 869, 870, 877, 889, 890, 902, 960, 1228
Schiff, Heinrich vc 122, 210, 864, 865, 895, 922
Schiller, Allan pf 291
Schiml, Marga mez 250, 351
Schiøtz, Aksel ten 1259, 1260
Schipa, Tito gtr/ten 1261
Schipper, Emil bar 1131
Schippers, Thomas cond 1094
Schir, Bernhard spkr 1158
Schirmer, Ulf cond 695, 698
Schleiermacher, Steffen pf 265
Schlichtig, Hariolf va 666
Schlick, Barbara sop 75, 1044
Schlor, Alois bn 877
Schloter, Elmar org 875
Schmid, Benjamin vn 42, 724
Schmidt, Andreas bar 73, 215, 485, 564, 913
Schmidt, Andreas bass 594
Schmidt, Jytte Gorki gtr 1259
Schmidt, Stephan gtr 45
Schmidt, Trudeliese mez 589
Schmidt, Wilhelm pf 1264
Schmidt-Gaden, Gerhard cond 915
Schmithüsen, Ingrid sop 60, 70
Schmolck, Jan Peter vn 533
Schnabel, Artur pf 127, 130
Schneider, Peter cond 1123
Schneider, Alexander vn 205, 865
Schneider, Edwin pf 1153
Schneiderhan, Wolfgang vn 123
Schnittke, Glenn ten 993
Schoch, Knut ten 58
Schock, Rudolf ten 58
Schoenberg Quartet 852
Schofrin, Fabian alto 638
Schola Cantorum 548, 580
Schola Cantorum Basiliensis Instrumental Ensemble 267
Schola Romana Lucernensis 477
Scholars 1296
Scholl, Andreas alto 267, 447, 1116, 1230, 1262, 1263, 1315
Schönberg Ensemble 19
Schöne, Wolfgang bass 624
Schöneberg Boys' Choir 706, 754
Schønwandt, Michael cond 500, 501, 693, 830, 989
Schoonderwoerd, Arthur pf 157
Schornsheim, Christine hpd 1206
Schorr, Friedrich bbar 1131, 1153, 1259
Schouten, Karl va 669
Schreckenberger, Stephan bass 72, 75, 1044
Schreier, Peter cond 1328
Schreier, Peter ten 113, 214, 875, 889, 890, 906, 1152
Schröckmayr, Werner pf 877
Schröder, Jaap dire 64
Schröder, Kurt cond 308
Schröder, Jaap vn 64
Schröder, Wolfgang vn 798
Schubert, Claudia cont 74, 75, 913
Schubert Ensemble of London 533
Schüchter, Wilhelm cond 1234
Schulf, Otto pf 43
Schulist, Andreas ten 278, 1246

Schulte, Elke Wilm bass 251
Schulte, Rolf vn 829
Schultsz, Jan pf 888, 908
Schulz, Wolfgang fl 971
Schwabe, Uta sop 28
Schwalbé, Michel vn 1029
Schwarz, Gerard cond 177, 239, 457, 726, 727
Schwarz, Rudolf cond 1222
Schwarz, Bernhard vc 14
Schwarzberg, Dora vn 899
Schwarzkopf, Elisabeth sop 114, 216, 583, 594, 671, 884, 1153, 1263, 1264
Scimone, Claudio cond 820
Sciuto, Maurizio ten 967
Scofield, John egtr 1056
Scott, John cond 179, 1217, 1218
Scott, John org 333, 335, 374, 576, 1212, 1217
Scott, Norman bass 110
Scotti, Antonio bar 1233, 1235
Scottish Chamber Chorus 679
Scottish Chamber Orchestra 181, 433, 441, 575, 652, 654, 679, 681, 862, 1328
Scottish Chamber Orchestra Brass 575
Scottish Festival Chorus 1074
Scottish Opera Chorus 818
Scottish Orchestra Chorus (Royal) 747
Scotto, Renata sop 1229
Sears, Nicholas ten 448
Seattle Symphony Chorale 177, 457, 726
Seattle Symphony Orchestra 177, 239, 457, 726, 727
Sébastian, Georges cond 313
Sebok, György pf 373
Seefried, Irmgard sop 580, 1248, 1264
Seers, Mary sop 335, 508, 765, 1068
Segerstam, Leif cond 146, 268, 723, 784, 786, 940, 942, 949
Seibel, Klauspeter cond 545
Seidler-Winkler, Bruno cond 1223
Seiffert, Peter ten 579
Seiler, Midori vn 1041
Sejna, Karel cond 343, 344
Selby, Kathryn pf 601
Selig, Franz-Josef bass 672, 1255
Sembrich, Marcella sop 1255
Seminario Musicale, Il 273, 295, 841, 1115, 1309
Semmingsen, Tuva mez 1114
Sempé, Skip dire/hpd 260, 439
Semprini, Alexander treb 1317
Sendry, Albert org 1251
Sequentia 1295
Serafin, Tullio cond 138, 184, 325, 458, 550, 755, 757, 759, 762, 1080, 1086, 1090, 1094, 1229, 1232, 1268
Serebrier, José cond 893, 929, 1025
Serkin, Peter pf 211, 490, 1011
Serkin, Rudolf pf 206, 210
Serov, Yury pf 936
Serviarian-Kuhn, Dora pf 528
Sessions, Roger pf 991
Setti, Giulio cond 1250
Severini, Tiziano cond 1349
Shafran, Daniil vc 1172
Shaham, Gil vn 78, 84, 195, 351, 532, 716, 742, 1179
Shaham, Hagai vn 509
Shaham, Orli pf 351
Shanghai Quartet 423, 506
Shao, En cond 547, 548
Shapiro, Lois fp 122
Sharonov, Vasili bar 1223
Sharova, Tatyana sop 936
Sharp, Frederick bar 1224
Sharp, William bar 610
Shaw, Robert cond 398, 494, 1084, 1219
Sheffield Philharmonic Chorus 365
Shelley, Howard dire 509, 510, 644, 651
Shelley, Howard pf 17, 321, 492, 506, 509, 510, 570, 572, 644, 651, 657, 774, 778, 826, 1047, 1061, 1066, 1067, 1072
Shelton, Lucy sop 529, 530, 829, 993
Sheppard, Susan vc 1042
Sheppard Skaerved, Peter vn 796
Sherratt, Brindley bass 485
Shevelev, Nikolai bar 1223
Shifrin, David cl 207
Shifrin, David cond 349
Shilkret, Nathaniel cond 1261
Shilling, Eric bar 1005
Shimell, William bar 1062
Shiokawa, Yuuko va/vn 867, 869
Shiraga, Fumiko pf 282
Shirley, George ten 991
Shirley-Quirk, John bar 69, 71, 230, 342, 352, 364, 589, 777, 1047, 1070, 1140
Shkosa, Enkelejda mez 151, 816
Shore, Andrew bar 987
Short, Nigel alto 763, 765
Shostakovich, Maxim cond 922
Shostakovich, Dmitri pf 924
Shostakovich Quartet 934
Shuard, Amy sop 1074, 1265
Shui, Lan cond 21
Shumsky, Oscar vn 105
Sibiriakov, Lev bass 1223
Siebert, Dorothea sop 1243
Siebert, Renée afl 737
Siegele, Dankwart ten 1246
Siegen Bach Chorus Collegium Vocale 1044
Sieghart, Martin cond 680
Siepi, Cesare bass 251, 674, 1076, 1268
Sigfuss, Elsa cont 1260
Sigmundsson, Kristinn bass 74
Sigurdsson, Reynir vib 547
Sikora, Jozef vc 970
Silesian Philharmonic Choir 409
Sillito, Kenneth vn 614, 648, 658, 1064
Silva, Miguel da va 116, 731
Silvasti, Jorma ten 953
Silverthorne, Paul va 847
Simas, Jerome cl 1173
Simmons, Mary mez 993
Simon, Geoffrey cond 1034
Simon Joly Chorale 999
Sinaisky, Vassily cond 402, 570, 572, 856
Sinclair, Andrew ten 449
Sinclair, Cameron cond 1201
Sinclair, James cond 514
Sinclair, Monica cont 317
Sine Nomine Quartet 337
Sinfonia Chorus 1072
Sinfonia Varsovia 658, 737
Sinfonye 491, 1296, 1297
Singphoniker 1273
Sinopoli, Giuseppe cond 102, 246, 352, 687, 861, 980, 988, 1132, 1157
Sirbu, Mariana vn 1107
Sitkovetsky, Dimitry cond 162
Sivelöv, Niklas pf 368
Sixteen, The 259, 734, 767, 920, 1021
Sjöberg, Gitta-Maria sop 541
Sjøgren, Kim vn 693
Skidmore, Jeffrey cond 1115
Skrowaczewski, Stanislaw cond 250, 538
Slaars, Laurent bar 319
Slane, Philip ten 447
Slater, Joseph fl 96
Slatford, Rodney db 1081
Slatkin, Felix cond 1168
Slatkin, Leonard cond 225, 297, 1150, 1168
Slobodyanik, Alex pf 292
Slovak Folk Ensemble Chorus 84, 217
Slovak Opera Chorus 217, 218
Slovak Philharmonic Chorus 217, 218, 602, 690, 691, 756
Slovak Philharmonic Male Chorus 528
Slovak Philharmonic Orchestra 217, 602
Slovak Radio Symphony Orchestra 1, 802
Slovak State Philharmonic Orchestra, Kosice 970, 1007, 1026
Sluchin, Benny tbn 147
Slutsky, Boris pf 901
Smetana Quartet 1178

Smirnov, Dmitri ten 1223
Smirnov, Yuri hpd/pf/prpf 846
Smissen, Robert va 614, 648
Smith, Angus ten 447
Smith, Brooks pf 1162
Smith, Carol mez 606
Smith, Jennifer sop 442, 996
Smith, Kevin alto 764
Smith, William C. bass 81
Smythe, Russell bar 631
Snell, Howard cond 22
Snowden, Jonathan fl 1072
Soames, Benjamin spkr 995
Sobinov, Leonid ten 1223
Sodero, Cesare cond 1089
Söderström, Elisabeth sop 926, 927, 940, 982
Soffel, Doris cont 242
Soffel, Doris mez 242, 459
Sohn, Christine vn 796
Sokolov, Grigory pf 288
Sokolova, Liubov mez 747, 936
Sol, Tom bass 71
Sólbergsson, Björn Steinar org 547
Solesmes St Pierre Abbey Choir 1274
Solistes de Lyon-Bernard Tétu 374
Solistes Romands, Les 34
Solisti Veneti, I 820
Sollek-Avella, Kirsten alto 67
Söllscher, Göran gtr 1012
Solomon pf 128, 131, 213, 651, 1206
Solomon, Ashley fl 28, 39
Solti, Georg cond 84, 85, 185, 512, 580, 589, 684, 861, 978, 985, 986, 988, 1048, 1077, 1093, 1120, 1127, 1172, 1229, 1236, 1268, 1358, 1361
Sólyom, Janos pf 967
Sonatori de la Gioiosa Marca 1228, 1331
Sonnentheil, Jürgen cond 1154
Sonnerie 168, 667, 1111
Sonntag, Ulrike sop 495
Sordello, Enzo bar 1229
Soriano, Gonzalo pf 370, 1222
Soroka, Solomia vn 601
Sorrel Quartet 225
Sotgiù, Antonia voc 816
Sotin, Hans bass 581, 589
Souez, Ina sop 1254
Souquet, Marie-Bénénedicte sop 157
Soustrot, Marc cond 720
South German Radio Chorus 1351
South West German Chamber Orchestra 1041
South West German Radio Orchestra 200
South West German Radio Symphony Orchestra 200, 244, 269, 1156, 1158
Southern Voices 317
Souzay, Gérard bar 1265
Spadoni, Giocomo cond 1251
Spägele, Mona sop 72
Spalding, Albert vn 1253, 1254
Spang-Hanssen, Ulrik org 23
Spanish National Chorus 10
Spanish National Orchestra 370
Spanish National Youth Orchestra 368
Spanjaard, Ed cond 320
Spányi, Miklós fp 27
Spányi, Miklós hpd 26
Sparf, Nils-Erik va 215
Sparf, Nils-Erik vn 272, 950, 1254
Speculum Musicae 829
Speiser, Elisabeth sop 600
Spence, Patricia mez 631
Spence, Toby ten 74, 177, 498, 885, 1324
Spencer, Robert lte 1225
Spering, Christoph cond 891, 913
Spicer, Paul cond 227, 380, 503, 548, 1049, 1143
Spicer, Susanna sop 485
Spogis, Raimonds bass 273
Spoleto Festival Choir 624
Spoleto Festival Orchestra 624
Spoliansky, Mischa pf 1267
Spooner, Joseph vc 255
Springuel, France va 525, 717
St Anthony Singers 153, 767
St Bavo's Cathedral, Haarlem (Boys' Choir) 74
St Clement Danes School Choir 707
St George's Chapel Choir, Windsor Castle 366, 716
St John, Scott vn 711
St John's College Choir, Cambridge 224, 227, 335, 508, 828, 965, 1020
St John's Smith Square Orchestra 412
St Lawrence String Quartet 900
St Louis Symphony Orchestra 297, 1150
St Luke's Chorus 5
St Luke's Orchestra 2, 5, 81, 1245
St Paul's Cathedral Choir 152, 179, 503, 1067, 1217, 1218, 1329
St Paul's Cathedral Choir (Boys' Voices) 230
St Paul's Cathedral Orchestra 78
St Petersburg Chamber Choir 777, 1037, 1244
St Petersburg Chamber Ensemble 632
St Petersburg Kirov Orchestra 997
St Petersburg Philharmonic Orchestra 774
St Willibrord and Pius X Children's Choir 581
St Willibrord's Boys' Choir 581
Staatskapelle Dresden 149, 199, 246, 896, 974, 976, 980, 983, 1127, 1129, 1146, 1325
Stabile, Mariano bar 1252
Stabrawa, Daniel vn 34
Stade, Frederica von mez 267, 579, 584
Stader, Maria sop 250, 680
Stafford, Ashley alto 179, 441
Stahlman, Sylvia sop 1229
Staier, Andreas fp 294, 378, 617, 652, 868, 874, 883, 890
Staier, Andreas hpd 47, 1206
Staier, Andreas pf 877
Standage, Simon cond 431, 432, 442, 543, 1109
Standage, Simon dire 11, 31, 431, 435, 543, 544, 1040
Standage, Silas org 1311
Standage, Simon va 11
Standage, Simon vn 11, 31, 36, 67, 431, 435, 543, 544, 1040
Starker, János vc 340, 538
Starobin, David cond 829
Statham, Heathcote org 1191
Stavanger Symphony Orchestra 1057
Steber, Eleanor sop 81
Steele-Perkins, Crispian tpt 68
Steen, Jac van cond 356
Steen-Nøkleberg, Einar pf 424
Stefanelli, Massimiliano cond 1354
Stefano, Giuseppe di ten 1265
Stefanowicz, Artur alto 638
Steffl, Martina mez 877
Stein, Horst cond 940
Steinberg, William cond 106, 580
Stembridge, Christopher hpd 1316
Stembridge, Christopher org 1316
Stene, Randi mez 519, 979
Stenz, Markus cond 7, 410
Stepán, Pavel pf 700, 1002, 1178
Stepanovich, Dmitri bass 748
Stephen, Pamela Helen mez 419, 481, 482, 483, 484, 964
Stern, Eric cond 1270
Stern, Eric pf 1270
Stern, Isaac vn 104, 116, 196, 205, 206, 208, 349, 667, 865, 1147
Sternberg, Jonathan cond 1189
Steve Reich Ensemble 800
Stifelman, Leslie pf 1270
Stignani, Ebe mez 727
Stiles-Allen, Lilian sop 1070
Stilgoe, Richard spkr 1138
Sting spkr 743, 744
Stirling, Stephen hn 210
Stockholm Sinfonietta 860
Stokowski, Leopold cond 580, 929, 1025, 1325
Stoll, George cond/pf 1251
Stoltzman, Richard cl 693
Stolze, Gerhard ten 706
Stone, William bar 494
Storck, Helga hp 647

Storey, Martin vc 96
Storgårds, John cond 1060
Storgårds, John vn 1060
Stott, Kathryn pf 373, 700, 725, 1137, 6371
Stötzel, Ulrich cond 1044
Stoyanova, Krassimira sop 816
Straka, Peter ten 242
Strasbourg Philharmonic Orchestra 1347
Stratas, Teresa sop 1149
Strauss, Richard cond 1325
Stravinsky, Igor cond 991, 992, 993
Stravinsky, Igor spkr 992
Streit, Kurt ten 278
Strickland, William cond 81
Strijk, Marjon sop 58
Stringer, Mark cond 187
Strosser, Emmanuel pf 731, 734
Stryncl, Marek cond 1155
Stubbs, Stephen cond 448
Studer, Cheryl sop 579, 980, 1075
Studt, Richard cond 26
Sturrock, Kathron pf 177
Stuttgart Bach Collegium 74, 624
Stuttgart Chamber Orchestra 395
Stuttgart Gächinger Kantorei 564, 624
Stuttgart Philharmonic Orchestra 1325
Stuttgart Radio Chorus 1158
Stuttgart Radio Symphony Orchestra 198, 398, 532, 564, 1338, 1350, 1351
Stuttgart State Opera Chorus 1357, 1362
Stuttgart State Opera Orchestra 1357, 1362
Stutzmann, Nathalie cont 310, 674, 1114
Suart, Richard bass 767
Suddaby, Elsie sop 315, 1070, 1131, 1266
Suisse Romande Orchestra 155, 185, 369, 504, 600, 605, 704, 735, 940, 978, 1080, 1234, 1266, 1268
Suisse Romande Radio Chorus 605, 704
Suk, Josef vn 341, 618, 700, 1002
Suk Quartet 700, 1002
Suk Trio 700, 1002
Summereder, Roman org 915
Summerhayes, Adam va/vn 255
Summerhayes, Catherine pf 255
Summerly, Jeremy cond 393, 542, 702, 1312
Summers, Jonathan bar 1062, 1236
Sumsion, Herbert org 1191
Suovanen, Gabriel bar 577
Susskind, Walter cond 340, 1224, 1264
Süssman, Gunilla pf 1058
Sussmuth, Gernot vn 892
Sutcliffe, Sidney ob 115
Sutherland, Gavin cond 162, 1165
Sutherland, Joan sop 452, 1229, 1266, 1267, 1352
Sutre, Guillaume vn 731
Suwanai, Akiko vn 340
Suzuki, Azuko sop 278
Suzuki, Hidemi vc/dire 26
Suzuki, Masaaki cond/dire 35, 60, 61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 70, 74, 1328
Suzuki, Masaaki org 60, 61, 62
Suzuki, Midori sop 60, 61, 63, 65, 1328
Svanholm, Set ten 580
Svenheden, Joakim vn 805
Svensson, Peter ten 519
Svetlanov, Evgeni cond 156, 339
Svizzera Italiana Orchestra 599
Swaim, Jordan treb 338
Swedish Opera Chorus 146
Swedish Radio Choir 718, 848
Swedish Radio Chorus 887, 913, 1075, 1330
Swedish Radio Symphony Orchestra 693, 718, 939, 942, 967, 1055
Swensen, Joseph cond 575, 932
Swiss Chamber Choir 109
Swiss-Italian Radio Chorus 278
Swiss-Italian Radio Orchestra 278
Sydney Elizabethan Orchestra 1358
Sydney Symphony Orchestra 920
Sykes, Belinda cont 522
Symphony of Harmony and Invention 259, 767
Symphony Orchestra of La Monnaie 607
Synergy Vocals 800
Szabó, Peter vc 116
Szalai, Antal vn 1207
Szell, George cond 104, 106, 107, 197, 340, 342, 356, 584, 594, 671, 897, 975, 1267, 1325
Szeryng, Henryk vn 657
Szeverényi, Ilona cimb 1356
Szidon, Roberto pf 561
Szmytka, Elzbieta sop 1010
Szüts, Peter cond 26
Szüts, Péter dire/vn 27
Tachikawa, Akira alto 67, 68
Tafelmusik 36, 433, 434, 481, 486, 1041, 1316
Tagliavini, Franco ten 158, 453
Taglioni, Luigi cond 713
Takács Quartet 86, 118
Takahashi, Yuji prpf 266
Talens Lyriques, Les 302, 681, 780, 1054, 1230
Talich, Vaclav cond 517, 959
Talich, Jan va 700, 1002
Talich Quartet 119, 517, 620
Tallinn Chamber Orchestra 719, 1057
Tallis Scholars 264, 301, 523, 566, 643, 714, 1013, 1014
Talvela, Martti bass 589
Tamagno, Francesco ten 1255
Tamminga, Liuwe org 1007
Tampere Philharmonic Orchestra 238, 368, 625, 1060
Tan, Margaret Leng topf 265
Tan, Melvyn fp 621, 1254
Tan, Melvyn pf 676
Tang, Mu Hai cond 1014
Tanglewood Festival Chorus 371, 557
Tango, Egisto cond 1259
Tanski, Claudius pf 724
Tapani, Esa hn 787
Tapiola Chamber Choir 953
Tapiola Choir 953
Tapiola Sinfonietta 838, 932, 939, 943
Tappy, Eric ten 600
Tarragó, Graciano gtr 1222
Tarragó, Renata gtr 1222
Tartakov, Ioakhim bar 1223
Tarver, Kenneth ten 157, 1076
Tasmanian Symphony Orchestra 644
Tate, Jeffrey cond 267, 617, 645, 655, 656, 1169, 1235
Tateno, Izumi pf 698
Tauber, Richard ten 1258, 1267
Tausky, Vilem cond 18, 1224
Taverner Choir 393, 764, 1299, 1316
Taverner Consort 444, 764, 1316
Taverner Players 444, 764, 1316
Taylor, Daniel alto 448
Taylor, James ten 74
Taylor, Kendall pf 513
Taylor, Rose cont 554
Tbilisi Symphony Orchestra 526
Tchaikovsky Symphony Orchestra 748
Te Kanawa, Kiri sop 267, 336
Tear, Robert ten 71, 354, 716, 777, 997, 1069, 1324
Tebaldi, Renata sop 1076, 1229, 1252, 1268
Tees, Stephen va 17, 648
Tena, Lucero cast 810
Tenerife Symphony Orchestra 1248
Tennstedt, Klaus cond 239, 580, 589, 594, 1169
Terakado, Ryo vn 35
Terfel, Bryn bbar 110, 317, 441, 579, 623, 884, 913, 1067, 1069, 1140, 1141, 1157, 1268, 1269, 1335
Tessmer, Heinrich ten 1131
Tetrazzini, Luisa sop 1269
Tetu, Bernard cond 374
Tetzlaff, Christian vn 539
Teuffel, Gunter va 798
Texier, Vincent le bar 187
Teyte, Maggie sop 311, 1224, 1269
Théâtre du Châtelet Chorus, Paris 1082, 1354
Theatre of Voices 4, 266, 718, 800, 1013, 1336
Thedéen, Torleif vc 178, 838
Thiago de Mello, Gaudencio perc 1183
Thibaud, Jacques vn 901

Thibaudet, Jean-Yves pf 310, 1228, 1331
Thielemann, Christian cond 706, 724, 898, 977, 1257
Thiollier, François-Joïl pf 370
Thomas, David bass 67, 68, 444, 452, 673, 764
Thomas, Katherine hp 1268
Thomas, Marjorie cont 315, 1224
Thomas, Milton va 205
Thompson, Adrian ten 71, 911
Thompson, Michael dire/hn 648
Thomsen, Aage Juhl cond 1260
Thomsen, Niels cl 693
Thomson, Bryden cond 92, 378, 510, 695, 696, 1064, 1066, 1067, 1135, 1136, 4609
Thomson, Virgil pf 81
Thorborg, Kerstin mez 134
Thorby, Pamela rec 1103
Thorby, Philip dire 522, 1309
Thorne, David org 1219
Thornhill, Siri sop 764
Thornton, Barbara voc 1295
Thornton, Edna cont 1251
Thunemann, Klaus bn 669, 869, 1101
Thurston, Frederick cl 96
Thwaites, Penelope pf 417, 418
Thyssens-Valentin, Germaine pf 373
Tiberghien, Cédric pf 126
Tichman, Nina pf 122
Tiffin Boys' School Choir 232, 589, 758
Tiffin Children's Choir 759
Tiihonen, Kirsi sop 952
Tiilikainen, Sauli bar 952
Tilegant, Friedrich cond 1041
Tilikainen, Sauli bar 953
Tilkin, Michel tbn 341
Tilling, Camilla sop 278
Tilson Thomas, Michael cond 298, 310, 376, 498, 515, 587, 833, 922, 992, 995, 1100, 1173
Tilson Thomas, Michael pf 515, 1173
Timson, David spkr 995
Tingay, Gillian hp 1180
Tinney, Hugh pf 617
Tintner, Georg cond 243, 244, 247, 249
Tippett, Michael cond 1047
Titterton, Frank ten 1070
Titus, Graham bass 1019
Tjeknavorian, Loris cond 528
Tobin, John ten 71
Toczyska, Stefania mez 917
Toet, Charles cond 385
Tokatyan, Armand ten 1258
Tokyo Opera Singers 735
Toll, John hpd 393, 1042
Toll, John org 393
Tölz Boys' Choir 481, 486, 579, 690, 724, 913, 915, 1328
Tómasson, Tómas bass 278
Tomes, Susan pf 88, 210, 351, 372
Tomlinson, John bass 445, 987
Tommasini, Giuseppe ten 1254
Tomowa-Sintow, Anna sop 113
Tomter, Lars Anders va 224, 1134
Tonus Peregrinus 719
Toradze, Alexander pf 917
Torchinsky, Yuri vn 1166
Torikka, Johanna harm/org 953
Torke, Michael cond 1051
Toronto Festival Singers 992
Torres, Victor bar 640
Tortelier, Yan Pascal cond 188, 276, 331, 336, 337, 381, 492, 493, 496, 526, 538, 571, 633, 733, 823, 1166, 6371
Tortelier, Paul vc 346, 365, 372, 605, 865, 974
Toscanini, Arturo cond 106, 110, 111, 112, 133, 134, 201, 945, 1034, 1076, 1084, 1173, 1235, 1252, 1325
Totaro, Rosario ten 270, 1300
Tóth, István db 116, 864
Toulouse Capitole Chorus 175, 313, 413, 415, 606, 607
Toulouse Capitole Orchestra 175, 313, 413, 415, 606, 607, 734, 793
Tourel, Jennie mez 81, 584
Towarnicka, Elzbieta sop 737
Tozer, Geoffrey pf 613, 614, 615
Tracey, Ian org 1024, 1025
Tragicomedia 168
Tramonti, Tiziana mez 1078
Tree, Michael va 206
Trendell, David cond 1021
Trenton, Louise sop 1131
Trepte, Paul cond 1214
Tretyakov, Viktor vn 1135
Trianti, Alexandra sop 1153
Trinity Boys' Choir 998
Trinity Church Boys' Choir (New York) 580
Trio Mediaeval 1297
Tristan Fry Percussion Ensemble 999
Trost, Rainer ten 913
Trotter, Thomas org 163
Trpčeski, Simon pf 1207
Trullu, Maria José mez 1116
Tucker, Mark ten 419
Tuckwell, Barry hn 224, 529, 815
Tuinstra, Stef org 1007
Tunkkari, Reijo vn 698
Tureck, Rosalyn pf 47
Turin RAI Chorus 728
Turin RAI Orchestra 728
Türk, Gerd ten 60, 61, 62, 63, 65, 67, 68, 70, 74, 267, 1328
Turku Philharmonic Orchestra 368
Turner, Clyde S. ten 81
Turner, Eva sop 1070
Turner, John rec 795, 1233
Tusa, Andrew ten 765
Twentieth Century Classics Ensemble 852
Twentieth Century Consort 610
Tyson, Robin alto 264
Tzipine, Georges cond 689
Uchida, Mitsuko pf 103, 308, 655, 656, 669, 671, 850, 871, 872, 873, 875
Ukraine National Symphony Orchestra 688, 726
Ulanowsky, Paul pf 1249
Ullén, Fredrik pf 1207
Ullmann, Marcus ten 74
Ulster Orchestra 92, 162, 633, 717, 795
Underwood, Giles bass 409, 485
Unwin, Nicholas pf 1049
Uppingham School Choir 1230
Upshaw, Dawn sop 4, 81, 267, 410, 832, 853, 1270, 1336
Urano, Chiyuki bass 63, 67, 68, 70
Urano, Chiyuki bbar 1328
Urmana, Violeta mez 593, 1120
USSR State Symphony Orchestra 339, 1172
Vaillant, Ludovic tpt 924
Vajda, József bn 116
Valade, Pierre-André fl 188
Valásková, Jana sop 218
Valdes, Maximiano cond 808, 810
Válek, Vladimír cond 892
Válek, Jiří fl 1002
Välimäki, Aki tpt 787
Vallin, Marie-Claude sop 481
Valo, Jari vn 939
Van Bockstal, Piet ob 461
Van Bos, Coenraad pf 1153, 1259
Van Dam, George vn 461
Van Dam, José bbar 113, 132, 152, 793
Van der Gucht, Jan ten 314
Van Doeselaar, Leo org 493, 1007
Van Evera, Emily sop 444, 764, 1316
Van Mill, Arnold bass 589
Van Reisen, Margriet cont 1096
Vanbrugh Quartet 299, 182, 321, 612, 1018
Vancouver Festival Orchestra 1325
Vancouver Symphony Orchestra 895
Vänskä, Osmo cond 711, 838, 938, 940, 941, 944, 945, 947, 948, 952
Varady, Julia sop 753, 906, 926, 927, 982, 1037, 1079, 1120
Varcoe, Stephen bar 68, 69, 179, 374, 418, 419, 430, 441, 442, 444, 481, 482, 483, 484, 852, 885, 915, 964, 966
Varcoe, Stephen bass 443, 482
Varcol, Liviu ob 493
Varèse, Edgard elec 1059

Varga, Gilbert cond 538
Varsi, Dinorah pf 212
Varsov Chamber Choir 737
Vartolo, Sergio hpd/org 384
Varviso, Silvio cond 982
Vasari Singers 334
Vassilakis, Dimitri pf 189
Vaughan, Elizabeth mez 987
Vauquet, André va 978
Väyrynen, Mika acco 725
Végh, Sándor cond 659, 660
Végh Quartet 120
Vele, Ludek bass 351, 602
Vellard, Dominique cond 170
Vellinger Quartet 362
Venexiana, La 391, 512, 599, 639
Vengerov, Maxim vn 194, 222, 239, 341, 400, 742, 923, 1183, 1208
Venice Baroque Orchestra 1106, 1109, 1110
Venice La Fenice Chorus 816
Venice La Fenice Orchestra 816
Verbruggen, Marion fl 435
Verbruggen, Marion rec 45, 435
Verebics, Ibolya sop 1336
Vermillion, Iris mez 564, 913
Verney, Laurent va 515
Verona Arena Chorus 1349
Verona Arena Orchestra 1349
Versalle, Richard ten 589
Verzier, Alix vc 132
Vesna Children's Choir 748
Vester, Frans fl 1041
Viala, Jean-Luc ten 154
Vicari, Francesca vn 1104
Victor Orchestra 1233, 1249, 1251, 1261, 1269
Victor Symphony Orchestra 1259
Victoria State Orchestra 540, 981
Vieaux, Jason gtr 1208
Vienna Boys' Choir 73, 145, 512, 579, 684, 691, 876, 986
Vienna Chamber Orchestra 675, 1026, 1189
Vienna Chorus 876
Vienna Concentus Musicus 35, 431, 641, 672, 1330
Vienna Concert-Verein 877
Vienna Octet 115, 863, 864
Vienna Pf Trio 935
Vienna Philharmonic Orchestra 100, 103, 106, 112, 113, 136, 144, 145, 157, 201, 203, 205, 244, 245, 247, 248, 249, 251, 270, 343, 344, 347, 512, 520, 521, 546, 579, 584, 586, 587, 591, 593, 594, 646, 654, 656, 674, 677, 683, 684, 687, 737, 756, 760, 815, 861, 929, 947, 969, 977, 978, 981, 982, 985, 986, 987, 988, 1029, 1033, 1095, 1119, 1120, 1121, 1122, 1123, 1127, 1147, 1157, 1174, 1175, 1229, 1230, 1248, 1264, 1268, 1324, 1325, 1344, 1361
Vienna Philharmonic Quartet 864
Vienna Piano Trio 478
Vienna Pro Musica Orchestra 1189
Vienna Radio Symphony Orchestra 395, 398, 526, 1057, 1361
Vienna Singverein 108, 113, 251, 589
Vienna State Opera Chorus 145, 520, 521, 579, 584, 589, 677, 683, 691, 756, 760, 985, 986, 987, 988, 1088, 1095, 1123, 1127, 1147, 1337, 1344, 1352, 1353
Vienna State Opera Concert Choir 136, 674, 684, 815, 982, 1122, 1361
Vienna State Opera Orchestra 691, 1088, 1131, 1189, 1337, 1352, 1353
Vienna Symphony Orchestra 104, 243, 676, 972, 1024
Vienna Volksoper Orchestra 971, 1189, 1248
Vienna Wind Soloists 863
Vienna Youth Choir 589
Vignoles, Roger pf 132, 215, 426, 429, 595, 907, 1143, 1151
Viitasalo, Marita pf 907
Vilaprinyó, Jordi pf 494
Viljakainen, Raili sop 953
Villa-Lobos, Heitor cond 1259
Viñas, Francisco ten 1255
Viotti, Marcello cond 753
Virtanen, Otto bn 787
Virtuosi Italiani, I 822
Vishnevskaya, Galina sop 224, 230, 1322
Visse, Dominique cond 1281
Vittorio, Giuseppe de ten 270, 1300
Vivian, James org 443
Vlach Quartet 350
Vlachova, Jana vn 534
Vladar, Wolfgang hn 877
Vlatkovic, Radovan hn 869
Vogler Quartet 798
Vogt, Lars pf 101
Voigt, Deborah sop 1120, 1157
Voix Humaines, Les 1317
Volmer, Arvo cond 1055
Volodos, Arcadi pf 771, 870, 1209
Voorhees, Donald cond 532
Vorster, Len pf 161
Votto, Antonino cond 326, 728, 1081, 1265
Vronsky, Vitya pf 1062
Vybíralová, Ludmila vn 1002
Vyvyan, Jennifer sop 224, 229
Waart, Edo de cond 5, 34, 355, 770, 920, 1051, 1200, 1335
Wagemans, Michel pf 633
Waits, Tom sngr 252
Wakamatsu, Natsumi vn 35
Wakeford, Lucy hp 77, 647
Walker, Ella pf 1271
Walker, Kim bn 76
Walker, Nellie cont 1131
Walker, Norman bass 365, 446, 1271
Walker, Sarah mez 110, 314, 1070
Wallace, John tpt 730, 1056
Wallace Collection 831, 1141, 1215
Wallenstein, Alfred cond 340, 532
Wallfisch, Raphael vc 378, 382, 492, 1034
Wallin, Ulf vn 494, 799
Wallis, Delia mez 620
Walmsley-Clark, Penelope sop 140, 460
Walt, Deon van der ten 250, 672, 912
Walter, Alfred cond 970, 1007
Walter, Bruno cond 204, 580, 584, 591, 593, 654, 674, 683, 1086, 1325
Walter, Bruno dire/pf 654
Walton, William cond 1137, 1141
Walton, Bernard cl 115
Wand, Günter cond 110, 115, 245, 248, 249, 860
Wandsworth School Boys' Choir 71, 158, 161, 230, 232, 235, 453, 583, 761, 1266
Wang, Jian vc 195, 210, 669, 895
Ward, Nicholas cond 467, 496, 662, 663, 809, 995
Ward, David bass 1074
Ward, Jeremy bn 30
Warfield, William bar 81
Warren-Green, Christopher vn 530
Warsaw National Philharmonic Chorus 720
Warsaw National Philharmonic Orchestra 741
Warsaw Philharmonic Orchestra 693
Waterman, David vc 372
Waters, Stephen cl 647
Waters, Susannah sop 768
Watkin, David vc 122, 183, 387, 1105
Watkin, Toby ten 409
Watkins, Paul vc 172, 461, 730, 1046
Watkins, Richard hn 730
Watkinson, Andrew vn 1107
Watkinson, Carolyn cont 441, 483, 674
Watson, Ian org 251, 482, 964, 1064
Watson, Janice sop 132, 483, 509, 733, 1324
Watson, Jean cont 1224
Watson, Lillian sop 620
Watson, Victor db 96
Watts, Andrew alto 192
Watts, Helen cont 229, 589
Way, Anthony treb 1230
Waynflete Singers 316, 317, 1140
Weber, Ludwig bass 1153
Weber, Margrit pf 849
Webern, Anton cond 143, 1147
Weddle, Robert dire/org 237
Wedin, Eva sop 554

Weigl, François pf 627
Weikert, Ralf cond 1350
Weikl, Bernd bar 589, 891
Weil, Bruno cond 481, 486, 876
Weil, Terence vc 1271, 1301
Weingartner, Felix cond 1325
Weinhappel, Thomas alto 876
Weir, Gillian org 630, 1209
Weisbach, Hans cond 1198
Weise, Manfred cl 974
Weissmann, Frieder cond 1259
Weldon, George cond 1265
Wells, Alison sop 999
Wells Cathedral Choir 1220
Welser-Möst, Franz cond 250, 341, 533, 845, 1242, 1356
Welsh, Moray vc 507, 737
Welsh National Opera Chorus 234, 395, 414, 1005, 1006, 1338
Welsh National Opera Orchestra 1, 234, 414, 1005, 1006, 1266, 1268, 1338
Wenkel, Ortrun cont 926, 927
Wentzel, Andrew bass 153
Wenzinger, August viol 1301
Werba, Erik pf 1225
Werdenfelser Male Chorus 986
Werthen, Rudolf cond 525
Weser-Renaissance (Bremen) 914
West German Radio Chorus 720
West German Radio Symphony Orchestra 930
Westerberg, Stig cond 967
Westminster Abbey Choir 16, 1018, 1019
Westminster Abbey Consort 16
Westminster Cathedral Choir 227, 428, 531, 576, 600, 713, 714, 1097, 1098, 1317
Westminster Choir 133, 580, 917, 1076
Wexler, Elizabeth vn 96
Whear, Allen vc 1316
White, Jeremy bass 444
White, Robert bagp 491
White, Willard bar 1157, 1336
White, Willard bass 4, 1328
Whittaker, Douglas fl 1225
Wick, Tilmann vc 667
Wickham, Edward cond 329, 523, 701, 702
Widdop, Walter ten 1070, 1131
Widlund, Mats pf 967
Widmer, Oliver bar 672, 877
Widmer, Oliver bass 73, 485
Wieczorek, Maryseult sop 636, 638
Wiener Tschuschenkapelle 546
Wiens, Edith sop 110, 115, 589, 1067
Wilbrink, Hans bar 230
Wilcock, Elizabeth vn 67
Wild, Earl pf 390
Wildner, Johannes cond 970
Wilhelmshaven Vocal Ensemble 451
Wilkening, Carsten bn 493
Wilkie, Matthew bn 464
Wilkomirska, Wanda vn 721
Willcocks, David cond 15, 375, 1072, 1140, 1220
William Byrd Ensemble 438
Williams, John Towner cond 390
Williams, Camilla sop 580
Williams, Harold bar 366, 1070
Williams, Huw org 1217, 1218
Williams, John gtr 9, 397, 1011, 1147, 1174
Williams, John Towner pf 390
Williams, Louise va 117, 666
Williams, Roderick bar 354, 853
Williams, Sioned hp 227, 1215
Williamson, Thomas org 1215
Willison, David pf 258
Willoughby Quartet 209
Wills, Arthur org 1191
Wilson, John cond 296
Wilson, Christopher lte/vihu 328, 1286, 1287
Wilson, Glen hpd 1007
Wilson, Miranda vc 427
Wilson, Steuart ten 359
Wilson, Timothy alto 444, 764, 1018
Wilson-Johnson, David bar 75, 151, 216, 364, 483, 599, 1113
Wilson-Johnson, David bass 380, 854, 999
Wimmer, Hans-Georg bass 1044
Winbergh, Gösta ten 1230
Winchester Cathedral Choir 179, 264, 672, 673, 965, 966
Winchester Quiristers 672, 673
Wincor, Ilse va 877
Wind Ensemble 434
Windgassen, Wolfgang ten 1361
Windheim, Marek ten 1253
Winfield, Roger ob 1070
Wingerden, Jeanette van rec 1041
Winsemius, Bernard org 1007
Winter, Louise mez 482
Winter, Paul sax 1183
Winterflood, Raymond treb 1317
Wirth, Christian asax 147
Wishart, Stevie cond 491
Wislocki, Stanislaw cond 741
Wispelwey, Pieter vc 44, 122, 283, 356, 1112
Wistreich, Richard bass 764, 915
Wit, Antoni cond 341, 409, 410, 569, 570, 627, 1009
Witting, Evgeni ten 1223
Wixell, Ingvar bar 967
Wöldike, Mogens cond/hpd 1259
Wolff, Hugh cond 19, 20, 78, 924
Wolff, Ernst Victor pf 1153
Wong, Samuel cond 256
Wood, Haydn cond 366
Wood, Henry cond 357, 366, 1070
Wood, James cond 1154
Woodgate, Leslie cond 1266
Woolley, Robert org 764
Worcester Cathedral Choir 1220
Wordsworth, Barry cond 21, 22, 539, 611
Wörle, Robert ten 495
Worrall, Peter vc 223
Wottrich, Erich ten 913
Woytowicz, Stefania sop 230
Wrigley, Yolande pf 307
Wunderlich, Fritz ten 251, 593
Wunrow, Theresa Elder hp 726
Wustman, John pf 155, 1234
Wyn-Davies, Catrin sop 1112
Wyn-Rogers, Catherine cont 1070
Wyn-Rogers, Catherine mez 885
Wynberg, Simon gtr 711
Xuereb, Pierre-Henri va 1012
Yablonsky, Dmitry cond 1028
Yakar, Rachel sop 1060
Yampolsky, Vladimir pf 746
Yanagisawa, Aki sop 65
Yang, Sung-Wong vc 531
Yaron, Yuval vn 1179
Yates, Sophie hpd 437, 781, 1210, 1317
Yates, Sophie virg 262
Yeadon, Daniel vc 28
Yeend, Frances sop 580
Yggdrasil Quartet 282
Yip's Children's Choir 1015
York, Deborah sop 73, 448, 536, 876, 1114
York, John pf 382
Yoshida, Mika mmar 801
Young, Alexander ten 364
Young, Crawford cond/dire/lte 1282
Young, Simone cond 981
Youth Echo Choir 217, 218
Yuan, Bo db 374
Yuasa, Takuo cond 222, 717, 795
Yurlov State Capella 748
Yurov, Yuri va 1035
Yuzhin, David ten 1223
Yvonne Gouverné Choir 311
Zabela-Vrubel, Nadezhda sop 1223
Zacharias, Christian cond 665
Zacharias, Christian dire 665, 896
Zacharias, Christian pf 665, 667, 671, 863, 896
Zádor, Desider bar 1131
Zagrosek, Lothar cond 495, 856

Zajick, Dolora mez 1075
Zajick, Dolora sop 1271
Zalay, Tamás vn 1103
Zallinger, Meinhard von cond 1243
Zamboni, Maria sop 1239
Zamkochian, Berj org 836
Zampieri, Giuseppe ten 251
Zanetti, Miguel pf 1222
Zani, Dario bar 1239
Zaniboni, A. vn 1223
Zanichelli, Barbara sop 967
Zarafiants, Evgeny pf 918
Zaremba, Eléna mez 686
Zbruyeva, Evgeniya Ivanova cont 1223
Zdunikowski, Adam ten 1155
Zedda, Alberto cond 821
Zeffiri, Mario ten 640
Zefiro 1110
Zehetmair, Thomas dire 34
Zehetmair, Thomas vn 34, 105, 863, 1009
Zehetmair Quartet 899
Zeijst, Martin van der alto 67, 764
Zelles, Allison voc 266
Zenko, Julia voc 726
Zeyen, Justus pf 214
Ziegler, Benno bar 1267
Ziesak, Ruth sop 63, 109, 485, 877
Zimbalist, Efrem vn 1240
Zimerman, Krystian dire 280
Zimerman, Krystian pf 280, 309, 556, 788, 998
Zimmermann, Frank Peter vn 341, 552, 657, 667
Zimmermann, Tabea va 553, 667, 863, 869
Zinman, David cond 78, 79, 81, 83, 105, 109, 358, 410, 505, 657
Ziporyn, Evan bcl/cl 1210
Ziva, Vladimir cond 613
Znaider, Nikolaj vn 741, 1210
Zöller, Karlheinz fl 628
Zomer, Johannette sop 375
Zoon, Jacques fl 1040, 1059
Zukerman, Pinchas vn 121
Zurich Opera House Chorus 1347, 1349, 1356
Zurich Opera House Orchestra 1347, 1349, 1356
Zurich Symphony Orchestra 281
Zurich Tonhalle Orchestra 109, 505, 657
Zurria, Manuel fl 399
Zvetkova, Mariana sop 352
Zweig, Fritz cond 1259

The Bose Lifestyle® 35 is a system for those who want the performance without the room-cluttering accoutrements of conventional hi-fi.’

James Vasey, Gramophone Magazine.

very room where we watch movies or listen to music is lifferent. And every variation from room size and shape, to vindow treatments and floor coverings can affect the udio quality of even the most sophisticated surround ound and music systems. A solution from Bose®: the ifestyle 35 surround sound system featuring the DAPTiQ™ audio calibration system. A unique innovation hat analyses and adjusts for a consumer's particular oom, speaker location, even listener location - all factors hat impact the audio performance of any sound system - t really has to be heard to be believed.

he Lifestyle® 35 system represents another great advance n home entertainment from Bose®. The Lifestyle 35 brings ogether many of the technologies that the Bose® research eam have pioneered and includes new developments that nhance the sound and functionality of the system. The ompact Media Centre at the heart of the system has a leek brushed chrome finish and contains the integral VD/CD player and AM/FM RDS tuner. Thanks to the Bose® ontrol integration technology the remote handset will, in nost cases, be able to operate the main functions of any dditional hardware so you only need one handset for the ntire system. The Media Centre also has two zone utputs, this means that the Lifestyle 35 can be expanded o additional rooms in your home by simply adding Bose® owered speakers. You can watch a film in the living room while your partner listens to the radio in the kitchen or the bedroom, all from the one system. As the remote handset uses radio frequency, the signal can travel through walls and floors so you can be in control from anywhere in the house.

The DVD player can interpret the standard Dolby® digital and DTS® movie surround sound scores and has the additional Bose® Videostage® 5 technology which has the ability to convert stereo and even mono music and movie recordings into full surround sound. The cinematic surround sound experience is so realistic you'll be on the edge of your seat.

ADAPTiQ™ technology assures a level of performance unmatched by some of the most expensive and advanced room compensation technologies available today. Until now, customising an audio system was a laborious and expensive task, often requiring audio engineers and specialised equipment. The ADAPTiQ™ system simplifies the process, bringing the benefits of audio room calibration to consumers looking for a complete solution they can set up by themselves and get the quality sound performance that you only usually get in a hi-fi store.

To request a dealer list and brochure call 0800 317 942 quoting ref. CD03. Alternatively, visit our website at www.bose.co.uk

GRAMOPHONE
THE CLASSICAL MUSIC MAGAZINE

THE CLASSICAL GOOD CD GUIDE IS THE ESSENTIAL REFERENCE GUIDE TO THE BEST CLASSICAL MUSIC ON CD AND DVD. DRAWING ON REVIEWS BY THE WORLD'S FINEST CLASSICAL MUSIC CRITICS, IT OFFERS YOU BALANCED, JARGON-FREE HELP IN BUILDING A COLLECTION OF THE GREATEST MUSIC IN THE GREATEST PERFORMANCES. WHETHER YOU'RE AN EXPERT OR A BEGINNER, THE FULLY REVISED 2004 EDITION WILL HELP YOU TO CHOOSE BETWEEN CLASSIC RECORDINGS AND THE HUNDREDS OF NEW PERFORMANCES THAT HAVE APPEARED IN THE LAST YEAR. NOW YOU CAN CHOOSE WHICH BEETHOVEN SYMPHONY SET SUITS YOU, SELECT A FOUR SEASONS FROM THE DOZENS AVAILABLE, OR DECIDE HOW MUCH YOU SHOULD SPEND ON A RING CYCLE WITH INFORMED CONFIDENCE.

"...The Classical Good CD Guide is not just a highly recommended guide to classical recordings for the beginner and intermediate classical-music fan, but an essential companion, one that should save you its purchase price with just a couple of wise choices..." SOUNDSTAGE.COM

"...The authority of Gramophone's peerless list of reviewers is apparent on every page..." THE DAILY TELEGRAPH

"...this critical survey of the 'best' available recordings is indispensable..." NEW YORK OBSERVER

ISBN 0-860-24997-2
02199
780860 249979
£21.99

GG20040
7 52187 43154 1
$29.95

ISBN 0-860-24997-2
02199
9 780860 249979
A$55.00

In association with
BOSE®
Better sound through research®